Temple, were so curiously set, and also finely wrought, that they were amazing to behold. Wherefore when the Queen of Sheba, who came to prove Solomon's wisdom, saw the house which he had built, and his ascent by which he went up into the house of the Lord, she had no more spirit in her. She was by that sight quite drowned, and overcome, 1 King. 10. 4, 5.

2. These Steps, whether Cedar, Gold, or Stone, yet that which added to their adornment was, the wonderment of a Queen. And whatever they were made of, to be sure they were a shadow of those Steps, which we should take to, and in the house of God. Steps of God, Psal. 85. 13. Steps ordered by him, Psal. 37. 23. Steps ordered in his Word, Psal. 119. 133. Steps of faith, Rom. 4. 12. Steps of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 18. Steps of truth, 3 John 4. Steps washt with butter, Job 29. 6. Steps taken before, or in the presence of God. Steps butted and bounded by a Divine Rule. These are Steps indeed.

3. There are therefore no such Steps as these to be found any where in the World. A Step to Honour, a Step to Riches, a Step to worldly Glory, these are every where; but what are these to the Steps by which Men do ascend, or go up to the House of the Lord?

He then that entereth into the House of the Lord, is an ascending Man; as it is said of Moses, he went Up into the Mount of God. It is ascending, to go into the House of God. The World believe not this, they think 'tis going downward to go up to the House of God, but they are in a horrible mistake.

The Steps then by which Men went up into the Temple, are, and ought to be opposed to those which Men take to their lusts and empty glories. Hence such Steps are said, not only to decline from God, but to take hold of the path to death, and hell, Psal. 44. 18. Prov. 2. 18. chap. 55. chap. 7. 25, 26, 27.

The Steps then by which Men went up to the House of the Lord, were significative of those Steps which Men take, when they go to God, to Heaven, and Glory, for these Steps were the Way to God, to God in his holy Temple.

But how few are there, that as the Queen of the South, are taken with these goodly Steps. Do not most rather seek to push away our feet from taking hold of the Path of Life, or else lay snares for us in the Way? But all these notwithstanding, the Lord guide us in the Way of his Steps, they are goodly Steps, they are the best.

XXIII. Of the Gate of the Porch of the Temple.

1. THE Porch, at which was an ascent to the Temple, had a Gate belonging to it. This Gate, according to the Prophet Prophet Ezekiel, was six Cubits wide. The Leaves of this Gate were double, one folding this Way, the other folding that, Ezek. 40. 48.

Now here some may object, and say, Since the Way to God by these Doors were so wide, why doth Christ say, the Way and Gate is narrow?

Answer, The Straightness, the Narrowness, must not be understood of the Gate simply, but because of that Cumbr that some Men carry with them, that pretend to be going to Heaven. Six Cubits! What is sixteen Cubits to him who would enter in here with all the World on his Back? The young Man in the Gospel, who made such a Noise for Heaven, might have gone in easy enough; for in six Cubits breadth there is room; but poor Man, he was not for going in thither, unless he might carry in his Houses upon his Shoulder too, and so the Gate was strait, Mark 10. 17, to 23.

Wherefore he that will enter in at the Gate of Heaven, of which this Gate into the Temple was a Type, must go in by himself, and not with his bundles of trash on his back, and if he will go in thus, he need not fear there is room. The righteous Nation that keepeth the Truth, they shall enter in, Isa. 26. 2.

2. They that enter in at the Gate of the inner Court must be clothed in fine Linnen, how then shall they go into the Temple, that carry the clogs of the dirt of this World at their heels. Thus saith the Lord, No stranger uncircumcised in heart, or uncircumcised in flesh, shall enter into my Sanctuary; Ezek. 44. 9.

3. The wideness therefore of this Gate is for this cause here made mention of, to wit, to encourage them that would gladly enter thereat, according to the mind of God, and not to flatter them that are not for leaving of all for God.

4. Wherefore let such as would go in remember that here is room, even a Gate to enter in at, six Cubits wide. We have been all this while but on the outside of the Temple, even in the Courts of the House of the Lord, to see the beauty and glory that is there. The beauty hereof made Men cry out, and say, How amiable are thy Tabernacles, O Lord of Hosts! my Soul longeth, yea fainteth for the Courts of the Lord; and to say, A day in thy Courts is better than a thousand, Psal. 84. 1, 2, &c.

XXIV. Of the Pinacles of the Temple.

1. THERE was also several Pinacles belonging to the Temple. These Pinacles stood on the top aloft, in the Air, and were sharp, and so difficult to stand upon: what Men say of their Number and Length, I wave, and come directly to their Signification.

Vol. II.

2. I therefore take these Pinacles to be types of those lofty, airy Notions, with which some Men delight themselves, while they hover like Birds, above the solid and godly truths of Christ. Satan attempted to entertain Christ Jesus with this type, and antitype, at once, when he set him on one of the Pinacles of the Temple, and offered to thrust him upon a false confidence in God, by a false and unsound Interpretation of a Text, Matt. 4. 5, 6. Luke 4. 9, 10, 11.

3. You have some Men cannot be content to worship in the Temple, but must be aloft, no Place will serve them, but Pinacles. Pinacles; that they may be speaking in and to the Air, that they may be promoting their heady Notions, instead of solid Truth; not considering that now they are where the Devil would have them be, they strut upon their Points, their Pinacles, but let them look to it, there is difficult standing upon Pinacles, their Neck, their Soul, is in danger. We read, God is in his Temple, not upon these Pinacles, Psal. 11. 4. Hab. 2. 20.

4. 'Tis true, Christ was once upon one of these, but the Devil set him there, with intent to have dashed him in pieces by a fall, and yet even then told him, if he would venture to tumble down, he should be kept from dashing his foot against a stone. To be there, therefore, was one of Christ's Temptations, consequently one of Satan's Stratagems, nor went he thither of his own accord, for he knew that there was danger, he loved not to clamber Pinacles.

5. This should teach Christians to be low, and little in their own Eyes, and to forbear to intrude into airy and vain Speculations, and to take heed of being puffed up with a foul and empty Mind.

XXV. Of the Porters of the Temple.

1. THERE were Porters belonging to the Temple. In David's time their Number was four thousand Men: 1 Chron. 23. 5.

2. The Porters were of the Levites, and their Work was to watch at every Gate of the House of the Lord. At the Gate of the outward Court, at the Gates of the inner Court, and at the Door of the Temple of the Lord, 2 Chron. 35. 15.

3. The work of the Porters, or rather the reason of their watching, was to look that none not duly qualified, entered into the House of the Lord. He set, saith the Text, Porters at the Gates of the House of the Lord, that none which was unclean in any thing should enter in, 2 Chron. 23. 19.

4. The excellency of the Porters, lay in these three things; their Watchfulness, Diligence, and Valour, to make Resistance to those that as unfit would attempt to enter those Courts, and the House of God, 1 Chron. 26. 6. Mark 13. 34.

5. These

5. These Porters were Types of our Gospel Ministers, as they are set to be Watchmen in and over the Church, and the holy things of God. Therefore as Christ gives to every Man in the Church his work, so he commands the Porter to watch, Isa. 21. 11. Ezek. 3. 17. Chap. 33. 7. Acts 20. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31. 2 Tim. 4. 5. Revel. 3. 2, 3.

6. Sometimes every awakened Christian, is said to be a Porter, and such at Christ's first knock open unto him immediately, Luke 12. 36, 37, 38, 39.

7. The Heart of a Christian is also sometimes called the Porter, for that when the true Shepherd comes to it, to him, this Porter, openeth also, John 10. 3.

8. This last has the Body for his Watch-house, the Eyes and Ears for his Port-holes: the Tongue therewith to cry, Who comes there? as also to call for aid, when any thing unclean shall attempt with force and violence to enter in, to defile the House.

XXVI. Of the Charge of the Porters of the Temple more particularly.

1. THE charge of the Porters was to keep their Watch, in four-square, even round about the Temple of God. Thus it was ordained by David; before him by Moses, and after him by Solomon his Son, 1 Chron. 9. 24. Numb. 3. 2 Chron. 23. 19. chap. 35. 15.

2. The Porters had, some of them, the charge of the Treasure-chambers, some of them had the charge of the ministring Vessels; even to bring them in and out by tale. Also the opening and shutting of the Gates of the House of the Lord, was a part of their Calling and Office.

1. I told you the Porters were Types of our Gospel Ministers, as they were Watchmen, in, and over the House of God; and therefore in that they were thus to watch round about the Temple, What is it, but to shew, how diligent Satan is, to see if he may get in some where, by some means to defile the Church of God. He goes round and round, and round us, to see if he can find a Hog-hole for that purpose.

2. This also sheweth that the Church of it self, without its Watch-men, is a weak, feeble, and very helpless thing; What can the Lady, or Mistress do to defend herself against Thieves, and sturdy Villains, if there be none but she at home? 'Tis said when the Shepherd is smitten, the Sheep will be scattered. What could the Temple do without its Watch-men.

3. Again, in that the Porters had charge of the Treasure-Chambers (as it is, 1 Chron. 9. 26.) It is to intimate, that the Treasures of the Gospel are with the Ministers of our God; and that the Church next to Christ, should seek them at their Mouth. We have this Treasure in earthen Vessels; saith Paul, and they are Stewards of the manifold mysteries of God, 1 Cor. 4. 1. 2 Cor. 4. 7. 1 Pet. 4. 10. Ephes. 4. 11, 12, 13.

4. These are God's true Scribes, and bring out of their Treasury Things new and old: or, as he saith in another Place, At our Gates, that is, where our Porters watch, are all manner of pleasant Fruit, which I have laid up for thee, O my beloved, Mat. 13. 52. Song 7. 13.

5. Further, some of them had charge of the ministring Vessels, and they were to bring them in and out by tale, 1 Chron. 9. 18.

1. If by ministring Vessels you understand Gospel Ordinances, then you see who has the charge of them, to wit, the Watchmen and Ministers of the Word; Luke 1. 12. 2 Thess. 2. 15. 2 Tim. 2. 2.

2. If by ministring Vessels, you mean the Members of the Church, for they are also ministring Vessels, then you see who has the Care of them, to wit, the Pastors, the Gospel-Ministers. Therefore obey them that have the rule over you, for they watch for your Souls, as they that must give an account, that they may do it with joy, and not with grief, for that is unprofitable for you, Rom. 9. 23, 13, 17.

3. The opening of the Gates did also belong to the Porters, to shew that the Power of the Keys, to wit, of opening and shutting, of letting in and keeping out of the Church, doth ministerially belong to these Watchmen, Matt. 16. 19. Heb. 12. 15.

4. The Conclusion is, Then let the Churches love their Pastors, hear their Pastors, be ruled by their Pastors, and suffer themselves to be watched over, and to be exhorted, counselled, and if need be, reprov'd, and rebuked by their Pastors. And let the Ministers not sleep, but be watchful, and look to the Ordinances, to the Souls of the Saints, and the Gates of the Churches. Watchman, Watchman, watch.

XXVII. Of the Doors of the Temple.

NOW we come to the Gate of the Temple; namely to that which let out of the Porch into the holy Place.

1. These Doors or Gates were folding, and they opened by degrees. First a Quarter, then a Half, after that three Quarters, and last of all the Whole. These Doors also hanged upon Hinges of Gold, and upon Posts made of the goodly Olive-tree: 1 King. 6. 33, 34. Ezek. 41. 23, 24.

2. These Doors did represent Christ, as he is the Way to the Father, as also did the Door of the Tabernacle, at which the People were wont to stand, when they went to enquire of God. Wherefore Christ saith, I am the Door, (alluding to this) by me if any Man enter he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture, Exod. 33. 9,

10. Chap. 38. 8. Chap. 40. 12. Levit. 1. 3. 4. Chap. 8. 3, 4, 13. Chap. 15. 14. Numb. 6. 13, 18. Chap. 10. 3. Chap. 25. 6. Chap. 27. 2. 1 Sam. 2. 22. John 10. 9.

1. I am the Door. The Door into the Court, the Door into the Porch, the Door into the Temple, the Door into the Holiest, the Door to the Father. But now we are at the Door of the Temple.

2. And observe it, this Door by Solomon was not measured, as the Door of the Porch was: for though the Door into the Court, and the Door into the Porch were measured, to shew that the right to Ordinances, and the inlet into the Church is to be according to a prescript Rule, yet this Door was not measured; to shew that Christ, as he is the inlet to saving Grace, is beyond all measure, and unsearchable. Hence his Grace is called unsearchable riches, and that above all we can ask or think, for that it passeth knowledge, Ephes. 3. 8, 19, 20.

3. It is therefore convenient that we put a note upon this, that we may distinguish Rule and Duty, from Grace and pardoning Mercy; for, as I said, tho' Christ, as the Door to outward Privileges is set forth by Rule and Measure: yet, as he is the Door to Grace, and Favour, never a Creature, as yet, did see the Length and Breadth of him, Eph. 3. 17, 18, 19.

4. Therefore, I say, this Gate was not measured, for what should a Rule do here, where Things are beyond all measure?

5. This Gate being also to open by degrees, is of Signification to us, for 'twill be opening first, by one Fold, then by another, and yet will never be set wide, wide open until the Day of Judgment. For then, and not till then, will the whole of the matter be open. For now we see thorow a Glass darkly, but then Face to Face; now we know in part, but then shall we know even as we are known, 1 Cor. 13. 12.

XXVIII. Of the Leaves of this Gate of the Temple.

THE Leaves of this Gate or Door, as I told you before, were folding, and so, as was hinted, has something of signification in them. For by this means, a Man, especially a young Disciple, may easily be mistaken; thinking that the whole Passage, when yet but a Part was open, whereas three parts might be yet kept undiscovered to him. For these Doors, as I said before, were never yet so wide open, I mean in the Antitype; never Man yet saw all the Riches, and Fulness which is in Christ. So that I say, (a New comer, if he judged by present sight, especially if he saw but little, might easily be mistaken, wherefore such for the most part are most horribly afraid, that they shall never get in thereat.

How saist thou, young comer, is not this the case with thy Soul? So it seems to thee that thou art too big, being so great, so Tun-bellied a Sinner. But O thou Sinner, fear not, the Doors are folding-Doors, and may be opened wider, and wider again after that; wherefore when thou comest to this Gate, and imaginest there is not space enough for thee to enter, Knock and it shall be wider opened unto thee, and thou shalt be received, Luke 11. 9. John 9. 37. So then, whoever thou art, that art come to the Door, of which the Temple-door was a Type, trust not to thy first Conceptions of Things, but believe there is Grace abundant: Thou knowest not yet what Christ can do, the Doors are folding-doors. He can do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, Ephes. 3. 20.

The Hinges, on which these Doors do hang, were, as I told you, Gold, to signify that they both turned upon motives, and motions of Love, and also that the openings thereof were Rich. Golden Hinges the Gate to God doth turn upon.

The Posts on which these Doors did hang, were of the Olive-Tree, that fat and oily Tree, to shew that they do never open with Lothness, or Sluggishness, as Doors do, whose Hinges wanteth Oil. They are always oily, and so open easily and quickly to those who knock at them. Hence you read, that he that dwells in this House, gives freely, loves freely, and doth us good with all his Heart. Yea, saith he, I will rejoyce over them to do them good, and I will plant them in this Land assuredly with my whole Heart, and with my whole Soul, Jer. 3. 12, 14, 22. Jer. 32. 41. Revel. 21. 6. Chap. 22. 17.

Wherefore the Oyl of Grace, signified by this Oily Tree, or these Olive-posts, on which these Doors do hang, causes that they open glibly, or frankly to the Soul.

XXIX. What the Doors of the Temple were made of.

THE Doors of the Temple were made of Firr, that is so sweet scented, and pleasant to the smell, 1 Kings 6. 34.

2. Mankind is also often compared to the Firr-Tree, as Isa. 41. 19. Chap. 55. 13. Chap. 60. 17. and Chap. 14. 8.

3. Now since the Doors of the Temple were made of the same, doth it not shew, that the Way into God's House, and into his Favour, is by the same Nature which they are of, that thither enter, even thorow the Vail his Flesh? (Heb. 10.) For this Door, I mean the Antitype, doth even say of himself, I am as a green Firr-Tree, from me is thy Fruit found, Hos. 14. 8.

4. This Firr-Tree is Christ, Christ as Man, and so as the Way to the Father. The

The Doors of the Temple are also as you see here, made of the Firr-Tree: even of that Tree which was a Type of the Humanity of Jesus Christ. Consider, Heb. 2. 14.

5. The Firr-Tree, is also the House of the Stork, that unclean Bird, even as Christ is a Harbour and Shelter for Sinners. As for the Stork, saith the Text, the Firr-Tree is her House: and Christ saith to the Sinners, that see their want of Shelter, Come, unto me, and I will give you Rest. He is a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in time of trouble, Deut. 14. 18. Levit. 11. 19. Psal. 104. 17. Psal. 84. 2, 3. Mat. 11. 27, 28. Heb. 6. 17, 18.

He is, as the Doors of Firr of the Temple, the inlet to God's House to God's Presence, and to a partaking of his Glory. Thus God did of old by Similitudes teach his People his Way.

XXX. How the Doors of the Temple were adorned.

AND Solomon carved upon the Doors Cherubims, Palm-trees, and open Flowers, and overlaid them all with Gold, Kings 6. 35. Ezek. 41. 15.

He carved Cherubims thereon; These Cherubims were Figures, or Types of Angels, and for as much as they were carved here upon the Door, it was to shew,

First, What delight the Angels take in waiting upon the Lord, and in going at his bidding, at his beck. They are always waiting Servants at the Door of their Lord's House.

Secondly, It may be also to shew how much pleased they are to be where they may see Sinners come to God. For there is joy in the Presence of the Angels of God over one sinner that repenteth, and comes to God by Christ for Mercy, Luke 15. 10.

Thirdly, They may be also placed here to behold with what reverence, or irreverence, those that come hither to worship, do behave themselves. Hence Solomon cautions those that come to God's House to worship, that they take heed to their feet, because of the Angels. Paul also says, Women must take heed that they behave themselves in the Church as they should, and that because of the Angels, Eccles. 5. 1, 2, 6. 1 Cor. 11. 14.

Fourthly, They may also be carved upon the Temple Doors, to shew us how ready they are, so soon as any poor Creature comes to Christ for Life, to take the Care and Charge of its Conduct thorow this miserable World: Are they not all ministering Spirits, sent forth to minister for those which shall be Heirs of Salvation, Heb. 1. 14.

Fifthly, They may also be carved here, to shew that they are ready at Christ's Command, to take Vengeance for him, upon those that despise his People, and hate his Person. Hence he bids the World take heed what they do to his little ones, for their Angels behold the face of their Father which is in Heaven, and are ready at the Door to run at his bidding, Matt. 18. 10.

Sixthly, or Lastly, They may be carved upon these Doors, to shew that Christ Jesus is the very Supporter and Upholder of Angels, as well as the Saviour of sinful Man: For as he is before all things, so by him all things consist; Angels stand by Christ, Men are saved by Christ, and therefore the very Cherubims themselves, were carved upon these Doors, to shew they are upheld, and subsist by him, 1 Cor. 8. 6. Col. 1. 17. Heb. 1. 3.

Secondly, Again, as the Cherubims are carved here, so there were Palm-trees carved here also. The Palm-tree is upright, it twisteth not it self awry; Jer. 10. 5.

1. Apply this to Christ, and then it shews us the uprightness of his Heart, Word, and Ways with Sinners. Good and upright is the Lord, therefore will he teach Sinners in the way, in at the Door to Life, Psal. 25. 8. Psal. 92. 15.

2. The Palm or Palm-tree is also a token of Victory, and as placed here, it betokeneth the Conquest that Christ, the Door, should get over Sin, Death, the Devil, and Hell, for us, Rom. 7. 24. chap. 8. 37. 1 Cor. 15. 54, 55, 56. Revel. 7. 9, 10, 11.

3. If we apply the Palm-tree to the Church, as we may; for she also is compared thereto, Song. 7. 8, 9, 10. Then the Palm-tree may be carved here to shew, That none but such as are upright of Heart and Life, shall dwell in the pretence of God. The hypocrite, says Job, shall not come before him. The upright, says David, shall dwell in thy presence, Job 13. 16. Psal. 24. 3, 4.

They are they that are clothed in white Robes, which signifies uprightness of Life, that stand before the Lamb with Palms in their hands, Revel. 7. 9.

Thirdly, There was also carved upon these Doors open Flowers. And that to teach us that here is the sweet scent and fragrant smell, and that the coming Soul will find it so in Christ, this Door, I am, saith he, the Rose of Sharon, and the Lilly of the Vallies; And again, His Cheeks are as Beds of Spices and several Flowers, his Lips like Lillies drop sweet smelling myrrhe, Song. 2. 1. chap. 5. 13.

Open Flowers: Open Flowers are the sweetest, because full grown, and because, as such, they yield their fragrancie most freely. Wherefore, when he saith upon the Doors are open Flowers, he setteth Christ Jesus forth in his good Savours, as high as by such Similitudes he could. And that both in Name and Office. For open Flowers, lay, by their thus opening themselves before us, all their beauty also most plainly before our Faces. There are Varieties of beauty in open Flowers, the which they also commend to all observers. Now upon these Doors, you see are open Flowers, Flowers ripe, and spread before us, to shew that his Name and Offices are savory to them, that by him do enter his House to God his Father, Song.

you

1. 1, 2, 3, 4.

All these were overlaid with fine Gold. Gold is most rich of all Metals, and here 'tis said the Doors, the Cherubims, the Palm-trees, and open Flowers were overlaid therewith. And this shews that as these things are rich in themselves, even so they should be to us.

We have a Golden Door to go to God by, and golden Angels to conduct us thorow the World: we have golden Palm-trees, as tokens of our Victory, and golden Flowers to smell on all the way to Heaven.

XXXI. Of the Wall of the Temple.

THE Wall of the Temple was cieled with Firr, which he overlaid with fine Gold: and set thereon Palm-trees, and Chains, 2 Chron. 3. 5, 6, 7.

The Walls were as the Body of the House, unto which Christ alluded, when he said, Destroy this Temple, and in three Days I will raise it up, John 2. 19, 21.

Hence to be, and worship in the Temple, was a Type of being in Christ, and worshipping God by him. For Christ, as was said, is the great Temple of God, in the which all the Elect meet, and in whom they do service to and for his Father.

Hence again, the true Worshippers are said to be in him, to speak in him, to walk in him, to obey in him: (2 Cor. 2. 14. chap. 12. 19. Col. 2. 6.) For as of old all true Worship was to be found at the Temple, so now it is only found with Christ, and with them that are in him. The Promise of old was made to them that worshipped within these Walls. I will give, saith he, to them in my House, and within my Walls, (to them that Worship there in Truth) a Place, and a Name, better than that of Sons and of Daughters, Isa. 56. 5.

But now in New Testament times, all the promises in Him are yea, and in Him Amen, to the glory of God by us, 2 Cor. 1. 20.

This is yet further hinted to us, in that 'tis said these Walls are cieled with Firr; Which, as was shewed before, was a figure of the Humanity of Jesus Christ.

A Wall is for defence, and so is the Humanity of Jesus Christ. 'Tis, was, and will be our defence for ever. For it was that which underwent, and overcame the curse of the Law, and that in which our everlasting Righteousness is found. Had he not in that interposed, we had perished for ever. Hence we are said to be reconciled to God in the Body of his Flesh thorow Death, Col. 1. 19, 20. Rom. 5. 8, 9, 10.

Now this Wall was overlaid with fine Gold. Gold here is a Figure of the Righteousness of Christ, by which we are justified in the Sight of God. Therefore you read that his Church as justified, is said to stand at his right Hand in Cloth of Gold. Upon thy right Hand did stand the Queen in Gold of Ophir. And again, her Clothing is of wrought Gold, Psal. 45. 9, 13. This the Wall was overlaid with, this the Body of Christ was filled with. Men, while in the Temple, were clothed with Gold, even with the Gold of the Temple: And Men in Christ are clothed with Righteousness, the Righteousness of Christ. Wherefore this Consideration doth yet more illustrate the Matter.

Vol. II.

In that the Palm-trees were Set on this Wall, it may be to shew, that the Elect are fixed in Jesus, and so shall abide for ever.

Chains were also carved on these Walls, yea, and they were golden Chains; there were Chains on the Pillars; and now also we find Chains upon the Walls, Phil. 1. 12, 13.

1. Chains were used to hold Captives, and such Paul did wear at Rome, but he calls them his Bands in Christ.

2. Chains sometimes signify great afflictions, which God lays on us for our Sins, Psal. 107. 9, 10, 11. Lam. 1. 14. chap. 3. 7.

3. Chains also may be more mytically understood, as of those Obligations which the Love of God lays upon us, to do and suffer for him, Acts 20. 22.

4. Chains do sometimes signify beauty and comely Ornaments; Thy Neck, saith Christ to his Spouse, is comely with Chains of Gold: And again, I put Bracelets upon thy Hands, and a Chain about thy Neck; Song. 1. 10. Ezek. 16. 8, 9, 10, 11. Prov. 1. 9.

5. Chains also do sometimes denote Greatness and Honour, such as Daniel had, when the King made him the Third Ruler in the Kingdom, Dan. 5. 7, 16, 29.

Now all these are Temple-chains, and are put upon us for good, some to prevent our ruin, some to dispose our Minds the better, and some to dignify, and to make us noble. Temple-chains are brave Chains. None but Temple-worshippers, must wear Temple-chains.

XXXII. Of the garnishing the Temple with precious Stones.

AN D he garnished the House with precious Stones for beauty, 2 Chron. 3. 6, 7.

1. This is another Ornament to the Temple of the Lord: wherefore as he saith, it was garnished with them; he saith, It was garnished with them, for beauty. The Line saith garnished, the Margent saith covered.

2. Wherefore, I think, they were fixed as Stars, or as the Stars in the Firmament, so they were set in the cieling of the House, as in the Heaven of the holy Temple.

3. And thus fixed, they do the more aptly tell us, of what they were a Figure, namely, of the Ministerial Gifts, and Officers in the Church. For Ministers, as to their Gifts and Office, are called Stars of

5 F

God,

God, and are said to be in the Hand of Christ, Revel. 1. 20.

4. Wherefore, as the Stars glitter, and twinkle in the Firmament of Heaven: So do true Ministers in the Firmament of his Church, 1 Chron. 29. 2. Joh. 5. 35. Dan. 12. 3.

5. So that 'tis said again, these Gifts come down from above, as signifying they distill their dew from above. And hence again, the Ministers are said to be set over us in the Lord, as placed in the Firmament of his Heaven, to give a Light upon his Earth. There is Gold, and a Multitude of Rubies, but the Lips of Knowledge are a precious Jewel, Prov. 20. 15.

Verily 'tis enough to make a Man in this House, look always upward: since the cieling above head doth thus glitter with precious Stones.

Precious Stones, all manner of precious Stones; Stones of all Colours: For there are divers Gifts, differences of Administrations, and diversities of Operations: but it is the same God which worketh all in all, 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6.

Thus had the cieling of this House a Pearl, here; and there, a Diamond; here a Jasper, and there a Sapphire; here a Sardius, and there a Jacinth; here a Sardonix, and there an Amethyst. For to one is given by the Spirit the Word of Wisdom, to another the Word of Knowledge; to one the Gift of Healing, to another Faith; to this Man to work Miracles, to that a Spirit of Prophecy; to another the discerning of Spirits, to another diverse kinds of Tongues, 1 Cor. 12. 8, 9, 10, 11.

He also overlaid the House, Beams, Posts, Walls, Doors, &c. And all with Gold. O what a beautiful House the Temple was, how full of Glory was it! And yet all was but a Shadow, a Shadow of Things to come, and which was to be answered in the Church of the living God, the Pillar and Ground of Truth, by better things than these.

XXXIII. Of the Windows of the Temple.

AN D for the House, he made Windows of narrow Lights, 1 Kings 6. 4. There was Windows for this House, Windows for the Chambers, and Windows round about, Ezek. 4. 16, 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 33, 36.

These Windows were of several Sizes, but all narrow, narrow without, but wide within, they also were finely wrought, and beautified with goodly Stones; Isa. 54. 14.

1. Windows, as they are to an House, an Ornament, so also to it they are a benefit. Truly the Light is good, and a pleasant thing it is for the Eye to behold the Sun, Eccles. 11. 7. The Window is that which Christ looks forth at, the Window is that which the Sun looks in at, Song. 2. 9.

2. By the Light which shines in at the Window, we also see to make, and keep the House clean, and also to do what Business is necessary there to be done. In thy Light we see Light; Light to do our Duty, and that both to God and Man.

3. These Windows therefore were Figures of the written Word, by and thorough which Christ shews himself to his, and by which we also apprehend him. And hence the Word of God is compared to a Glass thorough which the Light doth come, and by which we see not only the Beams of the Sun, but our own Smutches also, 2 Chron. 3. 18. Jam. 1. 23, 24, 25.

4. The Lights indeed were narrow, wherefore we see also thorow their anti-type but darkly, and imperfectly. Now we see thorow a Glass darkly, or as in a riddle, now we know but in part, 1 Cor. 13. 12.

5. Their Windows and their Light are but of little Service to those that are without; the Word sees but little of the beauty of the Church by the Light of the written Word, though the Church by that Light can see the dismal State of the World, and also how to avoid it.

XXXIV. Of the Chambers of the Temple.

IN the Temple Solomon made Chambers, 1 Kings 6. 5.

1. The Chambers were of several Sizes; some little, some large; some higher, some lower; some more inward, and some outward.

2. These Chambers were for several services, some were for rest, some to hide in, some to lay up Treasure in, and some for solace and delight, 2 Chron. 3. 9. Ezek. 40. 7. Chap. 41. 5, 9, 44. 2 Chron. 31. 11, 12. 2 Kings 11. 1, 2, 3. Ezra. 8. 29.

1. They were for resting Places. Here the Priests and Porters were wont to lodge.

2. They were for hiding Places. Here Jehoshabab hid Joash from Athaliah the term of six Years.

3. They were also to lay the Temple-Treasure, or dedicated Things in, that they might be safely kept there for the Worshipers.

4. And some of them were for solace and delight; and I must add, some for durable Habitation. Wherefore in some of them, some dwelt always, yea their Names dwelt there when they were dead.

1. Those of them which were for rest, were Types of that rest, which by Faith we have in the Son of God, Matt. 11. and of that Eternal rest which we shall have in Heaven by him, Heb. 4. 3.

2. Those Chambers which were for hiding, and security, were Types of that safety which we have in Christ from the rage of the World, Isa. 26. 20.

3. Those Chambers which were for the reception of the Treasures, and dedicated things, were Types of Christ, as he is the common common Store-house of Believers. For it pleased the Father that in him should all Fulness dwell, and of his Fulness we all receive, and Grace for Grace, John 1. 16. Col. 1. 19.

4. Those Chambers that were for Solace and Delight, were Types of those retirements, and secret meetings of Christ with the Soul, where he gives it his embraces, and delights her with his bosom and ravishing delights. He brought me, said she, in to his Chambers, into the Chamber of her which conceived me; and there he gave her his Love, Song. 1. 4. Chap. 3. 4.

5. The Chambers which were for durable dwelling-places, were Types of those Eternal dwelling-places, which are in the Heavens, prepared of Christ and the Father, for them that shall be saved, John 14. 1, 2, 3, 4. 2 Cor. 5. 1, 2, 3, 4.

This it is to dwell on high, and to be safe from fear of evil. Here therefore you see are Chambers for rest; Chambers for safety, Chambers for treasure, Chambers for solace, and Chambers for durable Habitations. O the Rest and Peace that the Chambers of God's high House will yield to its Inhabitants in another World. Here they will rest from their Labours, rest upon their Beds, rest with God, rest from Sin, Temptation, and all Sorrow, Rev. 14. 13. Isa. 57. 1, 2. 2 Thes. 1. 7.

God therefore then shall wipe all tears from our Eyes, even when he comes out of his Chambers as a Bridegroom, to fetch his Bride, his Wife, unto him thither, to the end they may have Eternal Solace together.

O these are far better than the Chambers of the South.

XXXV. Of the Stairs, by which they went up into the Chambers of the Temple.

THERE was Stairs, by which Men went up into these Chambers of the Temple, and they were but one pair, and they went from below to the first, and so to the middle, and thence to the highest Chambers in the Temple, 1 Kings 6. 8. Ezek. 41. 7.

1. These Stairs were winding, so that they turned about that did go up them. So then, he that assayed to go into these Chambers, must turn with the Stairs, or he could not go up, no, not into the lowest Chambers.

2. These Stairs therefore were a Type of a twofold Repentance. That by which we turn from Nature to Grace, and by which we turn from the Imperfections which attend a state of Grace, to Glory. Hence true Repentance, or the right going up these turning Stairs, is called Repentance to Salvation; for true Repentance stoppeth not at the reception of Grace, for that is but a going up these Stairs to the middle Chambers, 2 Cor. 7. 10.

Thus therefore the Soul, as its going up these Stairs, turns and turns, till it enters the Doors of the highest Chambers.

It groans, though in a state of Grace, 'cause that's not the state of Glory. I count then that from the first to the middle Chambers, may be a Type of turning from Nature to Grace. But from the middle to the highest, these Stairs may signify a turning still from the Imperfections and Temptations that attend a state of Grace, to that of Immortality and Glory, 2 Cor. 5. 1, 10.

For as there are turning Stairs, from the lowest to the middle Chambers, so the Stairs from thence still turn, and so will do, till you come to the highest Chambers. I do not say that they that have received Grace, do repent they have received Grace, but I say, they that have received Grace, are yet sorry that Grace is not consummate in Glory. And hence they are for going up thither still by these turning Stairs; yea, they cannot rest below, as they would, till they ascend to the highest Chambers. O wretched Man that I am; and in this we groan earnestly, is the Language of gracious Souls, Rom. 7. 20. 2 Cor. 5. 1, 2, 3.

True, every one doth not do thus, that comes into the Temple of God, many rest below Stairs, they like not to go turning upward. Nor do I believe that all that bid fair for ascending to the middle Chambers, get up to the highest stories, to his Stories in the Heavens: Many in Churches, who seem to be turned from Nature to Grace, have not the Grace to go up turning still, but rest in that shew of Things, and so die below a Share in the highest Chambers.

All these Things are true in the Antitype, and, as I think, prefigured by these turning Stairs, to the Chambers of the Temple. But this turning, and turning still, displeases some much, they say it makes them giddy: but I say there is no Way like this, to make a Man stand steddy: stedfast in the Faith, and with Boldness in the Day of Judgment. For he has this seated in his Heart, I went up the turning Stairs, till I came to the highest Chambers. A strait pair of Stairs, are like that Ladder by which Men ascend to the Gallows, they are the turning Ones, that lead us to the heavenly Mansion Houses. Look therefore, you that come into the Temple of God to worship, that you stay not at the Foot of these turning Stairs, but go up thence; yea, up them, and up them, and up them, till you come to the view of the Heavens; yea, till you are possesst of the highest Chambers. How many times has God by the Scripture called upon you to TURN, and told you, you must Turn or Die, and now here he has added to his Call, a Figure, by placing a Pair of turning Stairs in his Temple, to convict your very senses, that you must TURN, if you mean to go up into his holy Chambers, and so into his eternal Mansion-houses: and look that that you turn to purpose. For every turning will not serve. Some turn, but not to the most High, and so turn to no purpose.

XXXVI. Of the molten Sea that was in the Temple.

THERE was also a molten Sea in the Temple, it was made of Brass, and contained three thousand baths, 2 Chron. 4. 2, to 9.

This Sea was for the Priests to wash in, when they came into the Temple, to accomplish the Service of God: to wash their Hands and Feet at, that they might not when they came thither, die for their Un-preparableness. The Laver also which was in the Wilderness, was of the same use there, Exod. 28.

1. It was, as may be supposed, called a Sea, for that it was large to contain, and a Sea of Brass, for that it was made thereof. It is called in Revelations a Sea of Glass, alluding to that in the Wilderness, which was made of the brazen Looking-glasses of the Women, that came to worship at the Door of the Tabernacle, Revel. 4. 6. Chap. 15. 2. Exod. 28. 8.

2. It was also said to be molten, because it was made of that fashion, by Fire, and its Antitype therefore said to be a Sea of Glass mingled with Fire, Rev. 15. 2.

1. This Sea was a Figure of the Word of the Gospel, in the cleansing vertue of it, which vertue, then it has, when mingled with the Fire of the Holy Ghost. And to this Christ alludes, when he saith, Now ye are clean through the Word, which I have spoken unto you, John 15. 3.

2. It was a Figure of the Word, without mixture of Mens Inventions: Hence it is called, pure Water. Having your Bodies wash't with pure Water: And again, He sanctifies and cleanseth his Church with the washing of Water by the Word, Ephes. 5. 26. Tit. 3. 5.

All these Places are an Allusion to the molten Sea, at which of old they washed, when they went into the Temple to worship. Therefore, saith he, being washed, let us draw near to God, Heb. 10. 22.

3. This Sea from brim to brim was compleat ten Cubits, perhaps to shew, there is as much in the Word of the Gospel to save, as there is in the ten Words to condemn.

4. From under this Sea round about appeared Oxen, ten in a Cubit did compass it round about, 2 Chron. 4. 3. Understand by these Oxen, Ministers, for to them they are compared in 1 Cor. 9. 9. And then we are taught whence true Ministers come, to wit, from under the Power of the Gospel, for this Sea breeds Gospel Ministers, as the Waters breed Fish.

5. 'Tis also said in the Text, that these Oxen were cast when the Sea was cast: insinuating that when God ordained a Word of Grace to save us, he also in his Decree provided Ministers to preach it to us to that end. Paul tells us that he was made a Minister of the Gospel, according to God's eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord, Ephes. 3. 9, 10, 11. Col. 1. 25.

6. This Sea is said to have a Brim like the Brim of a Cup. To invite us as well to drink of its Grace, as to wash in its Water. For the Word and Spirit when mixt, has not only a cleansing, but a saving quality in it, 2 Chron. 4. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. 1 Cor. 15. 1, 2.

7. This Brim was wrought with Lillies: or was like a Lilly-flower: To shew how they should grow and flourish, and with what beautiful Robes they should be adorned, who were washed, and did drink of this holy Water: Yea, that God would take care of them, as he also did of Lillies, and would not fail to bestow upon them, what was necessary for the Body, as well as for the Soul, Mat. 6. 28, to 34.

XXXVII. Upon what the molten Sea stood in the Temple.

1. THIS molten Sea stood upon the Backs of twelve brazen Bulls, or Oxen, 2 Chron. 4. 4.

2. These Oxen, as they thus stood, looked three towards the North, three towards the West, three towards the East, and three towards the South.

3. These twelve Oxen, were Types of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb, who, as these Beasts, stood looking into the four corners of the Earth, and were bid to go Preach the Gospel in all the World.

4. They were compared to Oxen, because they were clean, for the Ox was a clean Beast. Hence the Apostles are called Holy. They were compared to Oxen, because the Ox is strong; and they also were mighty in the Word, Prov. 14. 4. 2 Cor. 12. 12.

5. The Ox will not lose what he has got by drawing; he will not let the Wheels go back: So the Apostles were set to defend, and not let that Doctrine go back, which they had preached to others, nor did they, they delivered it pure to us.

6. One of the Cherubs of which you read in the Vision, had a Face like an Ox, to shew that the Apostles, these Men of the first Order, are most like the Angels of God, Ezek. 1. 10.

7. In that they stood with their Faces every way, it was, as I said, to shew how the Apostles should carry the Gospel into all the World, Matt. 28. 19. Mark 16.

8. And observe, just as these Oxen were placed looking in the Temple every way, even so stand open the Gates of the new Jerusalem, to receive those that by their Doctrine should be brought into it. And they shall shall come from the East, and from the West, and from the North, and from the South, and shall sit down in the Kingdom of God, Rev. 21. 13, 14. Luke 13. 29.

9. These Oxen bear this molten Sea upon their Backs, to shew that they should be the Foundation Workmen of the Gospel, and that it ought not to be removed, as was the molten Sea of old from that Basis to another.

10. It is also said concerning these Oxen, that thus did bear this molten Sea, that all their hinder Parts were inwards, that is, covered by that Sea that was set upon their Backs. Their hinder-parts, or as the Apostle has it, our uncomely Parts, 1 Cor. 12. 23, 24.

11. And indeed it becomes a Gospel-Minister to have his uncomely Parts covered with that Grace, which by the Gospel he preacheth unto others. As Paul exhorts Timothy to take heed unto himself, and to his Doctrine, 1 Tim. 4. 6.

12. But alas, there are too many, who, can they but have their Heads covered with a few Gospel-notions, care not though their hinder Parts are seen of all the World. But such are false Ministers, the Prophet calls them the Tail. The Prophet that speaketh lies, either by word or with his feet, he is the Tail, Isa. 9. 15. Prov. 6. 12, 13.

13. But what a Shame is it to hide his Head under this molten Sea, while his hinder Parts hang out. Such an one is none of Christ's Oxen, for they with Honour to their Master, show their Heads, before all the World, for that their hinder Parts are inward, covered.

14. Look to thy hinder Parts Minister; least while thy Mouth doth preach the Gospel, thy Nakedness and Shame be seen of those which hear thee.

For they that do not observe to learn this Lesson themselves, will not teach others to believe the Word, nor to live a holy Life: They will learn of them to shew their Shame, instead of learning to be Holy.

XXXVIII. Of the Lavers of the Temple.

BESIDES this molten Sea, there was ten Lavers in the Temple. Five of which were put on the right side, and five also on the left, 2 Chron. 4. 6.

1. Of their Fashion and their Furniture, you may see, 1 King. 7. These Lavers, as the molten Sea, were Vessels which contained Water, but they were not of the same use with it. True, they were both to wash in; The Sea to wash the Worshippers, but the Lavers to wash the Sacrifice. He made the ten Lavers to wash in them such Things as they offered for Burnt-offering, but the Sea was for the Priest to wash in, 2 Chron. 4. 6.

2. The Burnt-offering was a Type of the Body of Christ, which he once offered for our Sins, and the Fire on which the Sacrifice was burned, a Type of the Curse of the Law which seized on Christ, when he gave himself a Ransom for us. For therefore, that under the Law was called the Burnt-offering, because of the burning upon the Altar, Levit. 6. 8.

But what then must we understand by these Lavers, and by this Sacrifice being washed in them in order to its being burned upon the Altar.

I answer, verily, I think, that the ten Lavers were a Figure of the ten Commandments: In the Purity and Perfection of Christ's Obedience to which, he became capable of being made a Burnt-offering, acceptable to God for the Sins of the People. Christ was made under the Law, and all his Acts of Obedience to God for us, was legal, and his living thus a perfect legal Life, was his washing his Offering in these ten Lavers, in order to his presenting it upon the Altar for our Sins. The Lavers went upon Wheels, to signify walking Feet, and Christ walked in the Law, and so became a clean Offering to God for us. The Wheels were of the very same as was the Lavers; To shew that Christ's Obedience to the Law was of the same, as to length and breadth, with its Commands, and demands to their utmost tittle and extent. The inwards and legs of the Burnt-offering was to be washed in these Lavers, Levit. 1. 9, 13. 2 Chron. 4. 6. To shew that Christ should be pure and clean in Heart and Life.

We know that Obedience, whether Christ's, or ours, is called a walking in the Way, typified by the Lavers walking upon their Wheels. But I mean not by Christ his washing of his Offering, that he had any filthiness cleaving to his Nature or Obedience: Yet this, I say, that so far as our guilt laid upon him, could impede, so far he wiped it off by washing in these Lavers. For his Offering was to be without blemish, and without spot to God. Hence 'tis said, he sanctified himself, in order to his Suffering; and being made perfect, he became the Author of Eternal Salvation to all them that obey him, John 17. 19. Heb. 5. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

For, albeit, he came holy into the World, yet that holiness was but preparatory to that by which he sanctified himself, in order to his suffering for Sin. That then which was his immediate preparation for his Suffering, was his Obedience to the Law, his washing in these Lavers. He then first yielded complete Obedience to the Law on our behalf, and then, as so qualified, offered his washed Sacrifice for our Sins without spot to God.

Thus therefore he was our Burnt-offering washed in the ten Lavers, that he might, according to Law, be accepted of the Lord.

And he set five of the Lavers on the right side of the House, and five of them on the left. Thus was the ten divided, as the Tables of the Law, one shewing our duty towards our God, the other our duty towards our Neighbour: in both which the Burnt-offering ing was washed, that it might be clean in both respects.

They might also be thus placed, the better to put the People in mind of the Necessity of the Sanction of Christ, according to the Law, in order to his offering of Himself an Offering to God for us.

XXXIX. Of the Tables in the Temple.

HE made also ten Tables, and placed them in the Temple, five on the right Hand, and five on the left, 2 Chron. 4. 8.

Some, if not all of these Tables, so far as I can see, was they on which the Burnt-offering was to be cut in pieces, in order to its burning.

These Tables were made of Stone, of hewen Stone, on which this work was done, Ezek. 40. 40, 41, 42, 43, 44.

Now since the Burnt-offering was a Figure of the Body of Christ, the Tables on which this Sacrifice was slain, must needs, I think, be a Type of the Heart, the stony Heart of the Jews: For had they not had Hearts hard as an Adamant, they could not have done that Thing.

Upon these Tables therefore, was the Death of Christ contrived, and this horrid Murder acted, even upon these Tables of Stone.

In that they are called Tables of hewen Stone, it may be to shew, that all this Cruelty was acted under smooth Pretences, for hewen Stones are smooth. The Tables were finely wrought with Tools, even as the Hearts of the Jews were with Hypocrisy. But alas they were Stone still, that is, hard and cruel, else they could not have been an Anvil for Satan to forge such horrid Barbarisms upon. The Tables were in Number the same with the Lavers, and were set by them, to shew what are the fruits of being devoted to the Law, as the Jews were, in opposition to Christ and his Holy Gospel: there flows nothing but hardness, and a stony Heart from thence. This was shewed in its first writing, it was writ on Tables of Stone, Figures of the Heart of Man, and on the same Tables or Hearts was the Death of Jesus Christ compassed.

One would think, that the Meekness, Gentleness, or good Deeds of Jesus Christ, might have procured in them some Relentings, when they were about to take away his Life; but alas, their Hearts were Tables of Stone. What feeling, or compassion can a Stone be sensible of? Here were stony Hearts, stony Thoughts, stony Counsels, stony Contrivances, a stony Law, and stony Hands: and what could be expected hence, but barbarous Cruelty indeed? If I ask you, said Christ, you will not answer me, neither will you let me see, Luke 22. 68.

In that the stony Tables were placed about the Temple, it supposeth that they were Temple-men, Priests, Scribes, Rulers, Lawyers, &c. That were to be the Chief on whose Hearts this murder was to be designed, and by them inacted to their own Damnation, without Repentance.

XL. Of the Instruments wherewith this Sacrifice was slain, and of the four Tables they were laid on in the Temple.

THE Instruments that were laid upon the Tables in the Temple, were not Instruments of Musick, but those with which the Burnt-offering was slain.

And the four Tables were of hewen Stone for the Burnt-offering: whereon also they laid the Instruments wherewith they slew the Burnt-offering and the Sacrifice, Ezek. 40. 42, 43.

1. Here we are to take notice, that the Tables are the same, and some of them of which we spake before.

2. That the Instruments with which they slew the Sacrifice, was laid upon these Tables.

The Instruments with which they slew the Sacrifices, what were they, but a bloody Ax, bloody Knives, bloody Hooks, and bloody Hands? For these we need no Proof, Matter of Fact declares it.

But what were those Instruments a Type of?

Answer. Doubtless they were a Type of our Sins. They were the bloody Ax, the Knife, and bloody Hands, that shed his precious Blood. They were the meritorious ones, without which he could not have died. When I say ours, I mean the Sins of the World. Though then the Hearts of the Jews were the immediate Contrivers, yet they were our Sins that were the bloody Tools, or Instruments which slew the Son of God.

He was wounded for our Transgressions, he died for our Sins, Isa. 53. 1 Cor. 15. Gal. 1.

Oh the Instruments of us Churls, by which this poor Man was taken from off the Earth! Isa. 32. 7. Prov. 30. 14.

The Whip, the Buffetings, the Crown of Thorns, the Nails, the Cross, the Spear, with the Vinegar and Gall, were all nothing in comparison of our Sins. For the Transgressions of my People was he stricken, Isa. 53. Nor were the flouts, taunts, mocks, scorn, derisions, &c. with which they followed him from the Garden to the Cross, such cruel Instruments as these. They were our Sins then, our cursed Sins, by, with, and for the sake of which, the Lord Jesus became a bloody Sacrifice.

But why must the Instruments be laid upon the Tables?

1. Take the Tables for the Hearts of the Murderers, and the Instruments, for their Sins, and what place more fit for such Instruments to be laid upon? 'Tis God's Command, that these things should be laid to Heart, and he complains of those that do not do it, Isa. 42. 25. chap. 57. 11.

2. Nor

2. Nor are Men ever like to come to good, until these Instruments with which the Son of God was slain, indeed be laid to heart. And they were eminently laid to heart even by them, soon after; the effect of which, was the Conversion of thousands of them, Acts 2. 36, 37.

3. Wherefore when it says these Instruments must be laid upon the stony Tables, he insinuates, that God would take a Time to charge the Murder of his Son home, upon the Consciences of them that did that Murder, either to Conversion or Condemnation. And is it not Reason that they who did this horrid Villany, should have their doings laid before their Faces upon the Tables of their Heart: That they may look upon him, whom they have pierced, and mourn, Zech. 12. 10. Rev. 1. 7.

4. But these Instruments were laid but upon some of the Tables, and not upon all the Ten, to shew that not all, but some of those, so horrid, should find Mercy of the Lord.

5. But we must not confine these Tables only to the Hearts of the Bloody Jews, they were our Sins for the which he died. Wherefore the Instruments should be laid upon our Tables too, and the Lord lay them there for good, that we also may see our horrid doings, and come bending to him for Forgiveness.

6. These Instruments thus lying on the Tables in the Temple, became a continual Motive to God's People to Repentance, for so oft as they saw these bloody and cruel Instruments, they were put in mind how their Sins should be the cause of the Death of Christ.

7. It would be well also, if these Instruments were at all times laid upon our Tables, for our more humbling for our Sins in every Thing we do, especially upon the Lord's Table, when we come to eat and drink before him. I am sure the Lord Jesus doth more than intimate, that he expects that we should do so, where he saith, When ye eat that Bread, and drink that Cup, Do this in remembrance of me. In remembrance that I died for your Sins, and consequently, that they were the Meritorious cause of the shedding of my Blood.

To conclude, Let all Men remember, that these cruel Instruments are laid upon the Table of their Hearts, whether they see them or no. The Sin of Judah is written with a pen of Iron, and with the point of a Diamond, upon the Tables of their Heart, Jer. 17. 1.

A Pen of Iron, will make Letters upon a Table made of Stone, and the point of a Diamond will make Letters upon Glass. Wherefore in this saying, God informs us, that if we shall forbear to read these Lines to our Conversion, God will one Day read them against us unto our Condemnation.

XLI. Of the Candlesticks of the Temple.

AND he made ten Candlesticks of Gold, according to the form, and he set them in the Temple, five on the right Hand, and five on the Left, 2 Chron. 4. 7.

1. These Candlesticks were made of Gold, to shew the Worth and Value of them.

2. They were made after the Form, or Exact, according to Rule, like those that were made in the Tabernacle, or according to the Pattern which David gave to Solomon to make them by; observe, there was great Exactness in these, and need there was of this hint, that Men might see, that every Thing will not pass for a right ordered Candlestick with God, Exod. 25. 31, to 37. 1 Chron. 28. 15, 16.

These Candlesticks are said sometimes to be ten, sometimes seven, and sometimes one; ten here, seven Revel. 1. and one in Zech. 4. ten, is a note of multitude, and seven, a note of Perfection, and one, a note of Unity.

Now as the precious Stones with which the House was garnished, were a Type of Ministerial gifts: So these Candlesticks were a Type of those that were to be the Churches of the New Testament. Wherefore he says, The Candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven Churches, Revel. 1. 12, 13, 20.

1. The Candlesticks were here in number ten, to shew that Christ under the New Testament would have a many Gospel Churches. And I, if I be lifted up from the Earth, saith he, will draw all Men unto me; that is, abundance: For the Children of the Desolate, that is, of the New Testament Church, shall be many more than they of the Jews were, John 12. 32. Gal. 4. 27.

2. In that the Candlesticks were set by the Lavers and stony Tables, it might be to shew us, that Christ's Churches should be much in considering, that Christ, tho' he was righteous, yet died for our Sins: Tho' his Life was according to the holy Law, yet our stony Hearts caused him to die. Yea, and that the Candlesticks are placed there, it is to shew us also, that we should be much in looking on the Sins by which we caused him to die, for the Candlesticks were set by those Tables, whereon they laid the Instruments, with which they slew the Sacrifice.

3. These Candlesticks being made according to form, seems not only to be exact as to Fashion, but also as to Work. For that in Exodus with its furniture, was made precisely of one Talent of Gold, perhaps to shew, that Christ's true Spouse is not to be a Grain more, nor a Dram less, but just the Number of God's Elect. This is Christ's Compleatness, his Fulness, one more, one less, would make his Body a Monster.

4. The

4. The Candlesticks was to hold the Lights, and to shew it to all the House, and the Church is to let her Light so shine that they without may see the Light, Mat. 5. 15, 16. Luke 8. 16. Chap. 11. 33. Chap. 12. 35.

5. To this end the Candlesticks were supplied with Oil-olive, a Type of the supply that the Church hath, that her Light may shine, even of the Spirit of Grace.

XLII. Of the Lamps belonging to the Candlesticks of the Temple.

TO these Candlesticks belonged several Lamps, with their Flowers, and their Knops, 2 Chron. 4. 21.

1. These Lamps were Types of that Profession, that the Members of the Church do make of Christ, whether such Members have saving Grace, or not, Matt. 25. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7.

2. These Lamps were beautified with Knops and Flowers, to shew how comely and beautiful that Professor is, that adorns his Profession with a suitable Life and Conversation.

3. We read that the Candlestick in Zecharias had seven Lamps belonging to it, and a Bowl of Golden Oil on the Top, and that by Golden Pipes this Golden Oil emptied itself into the Lamps, and all, doubtless, that the Lamps might shine, Zech. 4.

4. Christ therefore, who is the High-Priest, and to whom it belongs to dress the Lamps, doth dress them accordingly. But now there are Lamp-Carriers of two sorts, such as have only Oil in their Lamps, and such as have Oil in their Lamps and Vessels too, and both these belong to the Church, and in both these Christ will be glorified. And they should have their proper Places at last. They that have the Oil of Grace in their Hearts, as well as a Profession of Christ in their Hands, they shall go in with him to the Wedding; but they who only make a Profession, and have not Oil in their Vessels, will surely miscarry at last, Matt. 25.

5. Wherefore, O thou Professor! Thou Lamp-Carrier! Have a Care and look to thy self, content not thy self with that only, that will maintain thee in a Profession, for that may be done without saving Grace. But I advise thee to go to Aaron, to Christ, the trimmer of our Lamps, and beg thy Vessel full of Oil of him, (that is Grace) for the seasoning of thy Heart, that thou mayst have wherewith, not only to bear thee up now, but at the Day of the Bridegroom's coming, when many a Lamp will go out, and many a Professor be left in the dark, for that will to such be a woful day, Levit. 24. 2. Matt. 25.

Some there are, that are neither for Lamps nor Oil for themselves, neither are they pleased if they think they see it in others. But they that have Lamps, and they that have none, and they which would blow out other folks Light, must shortly appear to give an account of all their doings to God. And then they shall see, what it is to have Oil in their Vessels and Lamps; and what 'tis to be without it in their Vessels, though 'tis in their Lamps; and what a dismal thing 'tis to be a Malignant to either; but at present let this suffice.

TH E R E was also Shew-bread set upon a Golden Table in the Temple, 1 Kings 7. 48.

The Shew-bread consisted of twelve Cakes made of fine Flour, Two tenth deals was to go to one Cake, and they were to be set in order in two rows upon the pure Table, Exod. 29. 33. Levit. 8. 31. Chap. 24. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.

1. These twelve Loaves, to me, do seem to be a Type of the twelve Tribes under the Law, and of the Children of God under the Gospel, as they present themselves before God, in, and by his Ordinances, through Christ. Hence the Apostle says, For we being many are one bread, &c. 1 Cor. 10. 17. For so were the twelve Cakes, though twelve, and so are the Gospel Saints, though many. For we being many are one Body in Christ, Rom. 12. 5.

2. But they were a Type of the true Church, not of the false. For Ephraim, who was the Head of the Ten Tribes in their Apostacy, is rejected, as a Cake not turned. Indeed he is called a Cake, as a false Church may be called a Church: But he is called a Cake not turned, as a false Church is not prepared for God, nor fit to be set on the Golden Table before him, Hos. 7. 8.

3. These Cakes or Shew-bread, was to have Frankincense strewed upon them, as they stood upon the Golden Table, which was a Type of the sweet perfumes of the Sanctifications of the Holy Ghost. To which, I think, Paul alludes, when he says, The offering up of the Gentiles is acceptable to God, being sanctified by the Holy Ghost, Rom. 15. 16.

4. They were to be set upon the pure Table, new, and hot: To shew that God delighteth in the Company of new and warm Believers. I remember thee, the kindness of thy Youth: When Israel was a Child, I loved him. Men, at first Conversion, are like to a Cake well baked, and new taken from the Oven, they are warm, and cast forth a very fragrant scent, especially when, as warm, sweet Incense is strewed upon them, Jer. 2. Hos. 11.

5. When the Shew-bread was old, and stale, it was to be taken away, and new and warm put in its place, to shew that God has but little delight in the service of his own own People, when their duties grow stale and mouldy. Therefore he removed his old, stale, mouldy Church of the Jews from before him, and set in their Rooms upon the Golden Table, the warm Church of the Gentiles.

6. The Shew-bread by an often remove, and renewing, was continually to stand before the Lord in his House, to shew us, that all ways, as long as Ordinances shall be of use, God will have a new, warm, and sanctified People to worship him.

7. Aaron and his Sons were to eat the old Shew-bread, to shew that when Saints have lived in the World as long as living is good for them; and when they can do no more Service for God in the World, they shall yet be accepted of Jesus Christ: and that it shall be as Meat and Drink to him to save them from all their unworthinesses.

8. The new Shew-bread was to be set even on the Sabbath before the Lord. To shew with what warmth of Love and Affections God's Servants should approach his Presence upon his holy Day.

XLIV. Of the Snuffers belonging to the Candlesticks and Lamps of the Temple.

AS there were Candlesticks and Lamps, so there were Snuffers also prepared for these in the Temple of the Lord. And the Snuffers were Snuffers of Gold, 1 Kings 6. 50.

1. Snuffers: The use of Snuffers is to Trim the Lamps, and Candles, that their Lights may shine the brighter.

2. Snuffers, you know are biting, pinching Things, but use them well, and they will prove, not only beneficial to those within the House, but profitable to the Lights.

Snuffers, you may say, of what were they a Type?

Answer, If our snuffs are our superfluities of naughtiness; our Snuffers then are those righteous reproofs, rebukes, and admonitions, which Christ has ordained to be in his House for good; or as the Apostle hath it, for our Edification; and perhaps, Paul alludes to these, when he bids Titus to rebuke the Cretians sharply, that they might be sound in the Faith, Tit. 1. 12, 13.

As who should say, they must use the Snuffers of the Temple, to trim their Lights withal, if they burn not well. These Snuffers therefore are of great use in the Temple of God, only, as I said, they must be used wisely. 'Tis not for every fool to handle Snuffers, at, or about the Candles, lest perhaps, instead of mending the Light, they put the Candle out. And therefore Paul bids them that are spiritual do it, Gal. 6. 1.

My Reason tells me, that if I use these Snuffers as I should, I must not only endeavour to take the superfluous Snuff away, but so to do it, that the Light thereby may be mended; which then is done, if, as the A-postle saith, I use sharpness to Edification, and not for Destruction, 1 Cor. 5. 4, 5. 2 Cor. 13. 10.

Are not the seven Churches in Asia called by the Name of Candlesticks? And why Candlesticks, if they were not to hold the Candles? And Candles must have Snuffers therewith to trim the Lights. And Christ who is our true Aaron, in those rebukes which he gave those Churches, alluding to these Snuffers did it, that their Lights might shine the brighter, Revel. chap. 2. 3.

Wherefore as he used them, he did it still with caution to their Light, that it might not be impaired. For as he still thus trimmed these Lamps, he yet encouraged what he saw would shine, if helped. He only nipt the Snuff away.

Thus therefore he came to them with these Snuffers in his Hand, and trimmed their Lamps and Candlesticks, Revel. 2. 4. ver. 20. chap. 3. 2. ver. 15.

This should teach Ministers, to whom it belongs, under Christ, to use these Snuffers well. Strike at the Snuff, not at the Light, in all your rebukes and admonitions, inuff not your Lamps of a private revenge, but of a design to nourish Grace and Gifts in Churches. Thus our Lord himself says he did, in his using of these Snuffers about these Candlesticks. As many, saith he, as I love, I rebuke and chasten; be zealous therefore, and repent, Revel. 3. 19.

To conclude, Watchmen, watch, and let not your Snuffs be too long, nor pull them off with your Fingers, or carnal Reasonings, but with godly Admonitions, &c. Use your Snuffers graciously, curb Vice, nourish Virtue, so you will use them well, and so your Light will shine to the Glory of God.

XLV. Of the Snuff-dishes that were with the Snuffers in the Temple.

AS there were Snuffers, so there were also Snuff-dishes in the Temple. And they were also made of Gold, Exod. 25. 28. chap. 37. 23. Numb. 4. 9. The Snuff-dishes were those in which the Snuffs were put when Snuffed off, and by which they were carried forth of the Temple. They therefore as the Snuffers are, are of great use in the Temple of God.

1. By them the golden Floor of the Temple is kept, from being daubed by the Snuffs.

2. By them also the clean Hands of those that worship there, are kept from being defiled.

3. By them also the stinks of the Snuffs is soonest suppressed in the Temple, and consequently the tender Noses of them that worship there, preserved from being offended.

Snuffs, you know are daubing Things, stinking Things, nauseous Things. Therefore we must take heed that they touch

not

not this Floor on which we walk, nor defile the Hands which we lift up to God, when we come to worship him. But how must this be done, but as we take them off with the Snuffers, and put them in these Snuff-dishes?

Some are for being at the Snuffs with their Fingers, and will also cast them at their Feet, and daub the Floor of God's holy House, but usually such do burn, as well as defile themselves. But is it not a Shame for a Man to defile himself with that Vice which he rebuketh in another? Let us then, while we are taking away the Snuffs of others, bate even the Garment spotted by the Flesh, and labour to carry such stink with the Snuff-dishes out of the Temple of God.

Snuff-dishes, you may say, what are they?

I answer, If Sins are the Snuffs, and rebukes, and admonitions the Snuffers: Then methinks, Repentance, or in case that be wanting, the Censures of the Church should be the Snuff-dishes.

Hence Repentance is called, a Church-cleansing Grace, and the Censures of the Church a purging out of the old Leaven, and making it a new Lump, 1 Cor. 5. 2. 2 Cor. 7. 11.

Ah! Were these Snuff-dishes more of use in the Churches, we should nor have this Man's Snuff, defile that Man's Fingers as it doth. Nor would the Temple of God be so besmeared with these Snuffs, and be daubed as it is.

Ah, Snuffs pull'd off, lie still in the Temple-floor, and there stink, and defile both Feet and Fingers; both the Callings and Conversations of Temple-worshippers, to the disparaging of Religion, and the making of religious Worship but of low Esteem with Men. And all, I say, for want of the due use of these Snuffers, and these Snuff-dishes, there.

Nay, are not whole Churches now defiled with those very Snuffs, that long since were plucked off, and all for want of the use of these Snuff-dishes, according to the Lord's Commandment. For you must know that Reproofs and Admonitions are but of small use, where Repentance, or Church Censures, are not thereto annexed. When Ministers use the Snuffers, the People should hold the Snuff-dishes.

Round reproofs for Sin, when they light upon penitent Hearts, then brave work is in the Church: Then the Snuff is not only pulled away, but carried out of the Temple of God aright, &c.

And now the Worship and Worshippers shine like Gold. As an ear-ring of Gold, and an Ornament of fine Gold: So is a wise reprovener upon an obedient Ear, Prov. 25. 12.

Ministers, it appertains to you to use the Snuffers, and to teach the People to hold the Snuff-dishes right, Acts 20. 20, 21. 1 Tim. 4. 2. We must often be snuffed with these Snuffers, or our Light will burn but dimly, our Candle will also waste: Pray therefore, O Men of God, look diligently to your People. Snuff them as you see there is need, but touch not their Snuff with your White Fingers, a little Smutch on you will be seen a great way. Remember also that you leave them no where, but with these Snuff-dishes, that the Temple may be cleared of them.

Do with the Snuff, as the neat Housewife doth with the Toad, which she finds in her Garden. She takes the Fork, or a pair of Tongs, and therewith doth throw it over the Pales. Cast them away, I say, with Fear, Zeal, Care, Revenge, and with great Indignation, (2 Cor. 7. 11.) And then your Church, your Conversation, your Fingers, and all will be kept white and clean.

XLVI. Of the Golden Tongs belonging to the Temple.

THERE was also Tongs of Gold used in the Temple of old, 1 King. 7. 49.

1. These Tongs was used about the Altar, to order the Fire there.

2. They were used too, about the Candlestick, and are therefore called HIS Tongs.

3. Perhaps there was Tongs for both these Services, but of that the Word is silent.

But what were they used about the Candlestick to do?

Answer, To take holy Fire from off the Altar to light the Lamps withal. For the Fire of the Temple was holy Fire, such as at first, was kindled from Heaven, and when kindled, maintained by the Priests, and of that the Lamps were lighted, Levit. 9. 24. 2 Chron. 7. 1.

Nor was there, upon pain of Death, any other Fire to be used there, Levit. 10. 1. These Tongs therefore was used to take Fire from off the Altar, to light the Lamps and Candlesticks withal. For to trim the Lights, and dress the Lamps, was Aaron's work Day by Day, Exod. 40. 24, 25. Levit. 24. 2, 3. Numb. 8. 3. He shall light and order the Lamps upon the pure Candlestick before the Lord, and Aaron did so: He lighted the seven Lamps thereof, as the Lord commanded Moses.

What is a Lamp or Candlestick to us, if there be not Light thereon; and how lighted without Fire, and how shall we take up Coals to light the Lamps withal, if we have not Tongs prepared for that purpose?

With these Tongs Fire also was taken from off the Altar, and put into the Censers to burn sweet Incense with, before the Lord. The Tongs then were of great use in the Temple of the Lord.

But what were the Tongs a Type of?

The Altar was a Type of Christ, the Fire, of the Holy Ghost; and these Tongs were a Type of that holy Hand of God's Grace, Grace, by which the Coals, or several Dispensations and Gifts of this Holy Ghost are taken and given to the Church, and to her Members, for her work and profit in this World.

Tongs, we know, are used instead of Fingers, wherefore Aaron's golden Tongs, were a Type of Christ's golden Fingers, Song 5. 14.

Isaiah saith, That one of the Seraphims flew to him with a live Coal in his Hand, which he had taken with the Tongs from off the Altar. Here the Type, and Antitype, to wit, Tongs, and Hand, are put together: (Isa. 6.) But the Prophet Ezekiel treating of like matters, quite waves the Type, the Tongs, and speaketh only of this holy Hand. And he spake to the Man cloathed with Linnen, and said, go in between the Wheels under the Cherub, (where the Mercy-seat stood, where God dwelt, Exod. 2. Psal. 80. 1.) and fill thy Hand with Coals of Fire from between the Cherubims: Ezek. 10. 2.

Thus you see our golden Tongs, are now turned into a golden Hand; into the golden Hand of the Man cloathed in Linnen, which is Jesus Christ, who at his Ascension received of God the Father the Spirit in all Fulness, to give, as his divine Wisdom knew was best, the several Coals or Dispensations thereof unto this Church, for his Praise, and her Edification, Mat. 3. 11. Acts 2.

'Tis by this Hand also, that this holy Fire is put into our Censers. 'Tis this Hand also that takes this Coal, therewith to touch the Lips of Ministers, that their Words may warm like Fire: And 'tis by this Hand that the Spirit is given to the Churches, as returns of their holy Prayers, Luke 11. 1, 2. Rom. 8. 26. Rev. 8. 5.

'Twas convenient that Fire in the Temple should be disposed of by golden Tongs, but the Holy Ghost, by the golden Hand of Christ's Grace, for that can wittingly dispose of it, according as Men and Things are placed, and to do and be done in the Churches. Wherefore he adds, And one Cherub stretched forth his Hand from between the Cherubims, unto the Fire that was between the Cherubims, and took thereof and put it into the Hands of him that was cloathed with Linnen, who took it and went out, Ezek. 10. 7.

By this Hand then, by this Man's Hand, the Coals of the Altar are disposed of, both to the Lamps, the Candlesticks, the Censers, and the Lips of Ministers, according to his own good pleasure. And of all this was the Tongs in the Temple a Type.

XLVII. Of the Altar of Incense in the Temple.

THE Altar of Incense, was made first for the Tabernacle, and that of Shittim Wood, but it was made for the Temple of Cedar, and it was to be set before the Vail, that is, by the Ark of the Testimony, before the Mercy-Seat; that is, at the entring of the Holiest, but not within. And the Priest was to approach it every Morning, which, as to the Holiest, he might not do. Besides, when he went in to make an Atonement, he was to take Fire from off that Altar, to burn his Incense within the holy Place, Exod. 30. 4, to 11. Levit. 16. 18.

1. It was called the golden Altar, because 'twas overlaid with pure Gold. This Altar was not for burnt-offering, as the brazen Altar was, not for the Meat-offering, nor the Drink-offering, but to burn Incense thereon, ver. 7. which sweet Incense was a Type of the Grace of Prayer, Psalm 141. 2.

2. Incense, or that called Incense bene, was not a Simple, but a Compound, made up of sweet Spices, called Stacte, Onycha and Galbanum: These three may answer to these three parts of this Duty, to wit, Prayer, Supplication, and Intercession, Exod. 30. 34, 35, 36, 37. Chap. 37. 29. 1 Tim. 2. 1.

3. This Incense was to be burned upon the Altar every Morning, upon that Altar, which was called the Altar of Incense, which was before the Vail; to shew, that it is our Duty every Morning to make our Prayer to God by Jesus Christ, before the Vail: that is, before the Door of Heaven, and there to seek, knock, and ask for what we need, according to the Word, Luke 11. 9, 10, 11, 12.

4. This Incense was to be kindled every Morning, to shew how he continueth interceding for us, and also that all true praise of Men to God is by the Work, the renewed Work of the Holy Ghost upon our Hearts, Rom. 8. 26.

5. Incense, as you see, was made of sweet Spices, such as were gummy, and so, apt to burn with a smoke, to shew, that not cold and flat, but hot and fervent, is the Prayer that flows from the Spirit of Faith and Grace, Zech. 12. 10. Jer. 5. 16.

6. The smoke of this Incense was very sweet and favoury; like pleasant perfume: to shew how delightful and acceptable, the very sound and noise of right Prayer is unto the Nostrils of the living God, because it comes from a broken Heart, Psal. 51. 17. Song. 2. 14.

7. This Incense was to be offered upon the golden Altar, to shew us that no Prayer is accepted, but what is directed to God, in the Name of his Holy and Blessed Son, our Saviour, 1 Pet. 2. 5. Heb. 13. 15.

8. They were commanded to burn Incense every Morning upon this Altar, to shew that God is never weary of the godly Prayers of of his People. It also sheweth, that we need every Day to go to God for fresh Supplies of Grace to carry us through this evil World.

9. This Altar, though it stood without the Vail, to teach us to live by Faith, and to make use of the Name of Christ, as we find it recorded in the first Temple; yet was placed so nigh unto the Holiest, that the smell of the smoak might go in thither, to shew that it is not distance of Place, that can keep the Voice of true Prayer from our God, the God of Heaven: but that he will be taken with what we ask for according to his Word.

It stood, I say, nigh the Vail, nigh the Holiest, and he that burnt Incense there, did make his approach to God. Hence the Psalmist, when he spake of praying, saith, 'Tis good for me to draw nigh unto God, Psal. 73. 20. Heb. 10. 22.

10. This Altar thus placed, did front the Ark within the Vail; To put us in mind, that the Law is kept therein from hurting us: To let us know also, that the Mercy-Seat is above, upon the Ark, and that God doth sit thereon, with his Pardon in his hand to save us. O! What speaking Things are Types, Shadows, and Parables, had we but Eyes to see, had we but Ears to hear!

He that did approach the Altar with Incense of Old, aright, (and then he did so, when he approached it by Aaron, his High-Priest) pleased God: how much more shall we have both Person and Prayers accepted, and a grant of what we need, if indeed we come as we should to God by Jesus Christ.

But take heed you approach not to a wrong Altar, take heed also that you come not with strange Fire, for they are dangerous Things and cause the Worshipers to miss of what they would enjoy. But more of this in the next particular.

XLVIII. Of the golden Censers belonging to the Temple.

THERE were also golden Censers belonging to the Temple; and they were either such as belonged to the Sons of Levi in general, or that were for Aaron and his Sons in special, as Numbers 16. 16, 17, 18.

The Censers of the Levites were a Type of ours, but the Censer of Aaron was a Type of Christ's.

The Censers, as was hinted before, were for this use in the Temple, namely to hold the holy Fire in, on which Incense was to be burned before the Lord, Levit. 10. 1.

These Censers then were Types of Hearts. Aaron's golden one, was a Type of Christ's golden Heart, and the Censers of the Levites, were Types of other Worshipers Hearts.

The Fire also which was put therein, was a Type of that Spirit, by which we pray, and the Incense that burnt thereon, a Type of our Desires.

Of Christ's Censer, we read, Revelations the 8. which is always filled with much Incense, that is, with continual Intercessions, which he offereth to God for us: and from whence also there always goes a Cloud of sweet Savour, covering the Mercy seat, Levit. 16. 13. Heb. 7. 25. Revel. 8. 3, 4.

But to speak of the Censers, and Fire, and Incense of the Worshipers. For albeit they were all put under one rule, that is, to be according to Law, yet oftentimes, as were the Worshipers, such was the Censers, Fire and Incense.

1. Hence the two hundred and fifty Censers with which Corah and his Company offered, are called the Censers of Sinners; for they came with wicked hearts, then to burn Incense before the Lord, Numb. 16. 17, 37.

2. Again, as the Censers of these Men were called the Censers of Sinners, shewing they came at that time to God with naughty Hearts, so the Fire that was in Nadab and Abihu's Censers is called strange Fire, which the Lord commanded them not, Levit. 10. 1.

3. This strange Fire, was a Type of that strange Spirit, opposed to the Spirit of God, in and by which, notwithstanding, some adventure to perform Worship to God.

4. Again, as these Censers are called the Censers of Sinners, and this Fire called strange Fire, so the Incense of such is also called strange, and is said to be an Abomination unto God, Exod. 30. 9. Isa. 1. 13. Chap. 66. 3.

Thus you see that both the Censers, Fire, and Incense of some, is rejected, even as the Heart, Spirit, and Prayer of Sinners, are an Abomination unto God, Hos. 7. 14. Chap. 4. 12. Chap. 5. 4. Prov. 28. 9.

But there was besides these, true Censers, holy Fire, and sweet Incense among the Worshipers in the Temple, and their Service was accepted by Aaron their High-Priest: For that was thorough the Faith of Christ, and these were a Type of our true Gospel-Worshipers, who come with holy Hearts, the holy Spirit, and holy Desires before their God, by their Redeemer. These are a perfume in his Nose. The Prayer of the Upright is his delight. David's Prayers went up like Incense, and the lifting up of his Hands, as the Evening Sacrifice, Prov. 15. 8. Psal. 141. 2.

Let them then that pretend to Worship before God in his holy Temple, look to it that both their Censers, Fire, and Incense, Heart, Spirit, and Desires, be such as the Word requires. Lest instead of receiving of gracious returns from the God of Heaven, their Censers be laid up against them, lest the Fire of God devours them, and their Incense Incense becomes an Abomination to him, as it happened to those, made mention of before.

But 'tis said the Censers of Corah and his Company was hallowed.

Answer. So is God's Worship, which is so his by his Ordination, yet even that very Worship may be spoiled by Man's Transgressions. Prayer is GOD's Ordinance, but all Prayer is not accepted of God. We must then distinguish between the Thing commanded, and our using of that Thing. The Temple was GOD's House, but was abused by the Irreverence of those that worshipped there, even to the demolishing of it.

A golden Censer is a gracious Heart, heavenly Fire is the Holy Ghost, and sweet Incense the effectual fervent Prayer of Faith. Have you these? These God expects, and these you must have, if ever your Persons or Performances be of God accepted.

XLIX. Of the golden Spoons of the Temple.

1. THE golden Spoons belonging to the Temple, were in number, according to Moses, twelve; answering to the twelve Tribes. But when the Temple was built, I suppose they were more, because of the Number of the Basons, Numb. 7. 14, 20, 26, 32, 38, 40, 50, 56, 62, 68, 74, 80, 86.

2. The Spoons, as I suppose, were for the Worshippers in the Temple to eat that broth withal, wherein the Treipass-offerings were boiled: For which purpose there were several Cauldrons hanged in the Corners of that Court called the Priest's, to boil them in, 1 Sam. 2. 13, 14. Ezek. 46. 19, 20.

3. Now in that he saith here were Spoons, what is it, but that there are also Babes in the Temple of the Lord. There was Broth for Babes, as well as Meat for Men, and Spoons to eat the Broth withal.

4. True, the Gospel being more excellent than the Law, doth change the Term, and instead of Broth, saith, there is Milk for Babes. But in that he saith Milk, he insinuates that there are Spoons for Children in the Church.

5. I could not, saith Paul to them at Corinth, speak to you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto Babes in Christ, I have fed you with Milk and not with Meat, for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able, 1 Cor. 3. 1, 2.

6. See, here were need of Spoons, Milk is Spoon-meat; for here were those which could not feed themselves with Milk, let them then that are Men eat the strong Meat, For every one that useth Milk is unskilful in the Word of Righteousness, for he is a Babe. For strong Meat belongeth to them that are of full age, who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil; Heb. 6. 13, 14.

7. Spoons, you know are to feed us with weak and thin Food, even with that which best suited with weak Stomachs, or with a babish Temper. Hence as the strong Man is opposed to the weak, so the Milk is opposed to the strong Meat.

8. So then, though the Babe in Christ is weaker than the Man in Christ, yet is he not by Christ left unprovided for: For here is Milk for Babes, and Spoons to eat it with. All this is taught us by the Spoons, for what need is there of Spoons, where there is nothing to eat but strong Meat?

9. Babes, you know, have not only babish Stomachs, but also babish Tricks, and must be dealt withal as Babes; their childish Talk, and froward Carriages, must be born withal.

10. Sometimes they cry for nothing, yea, and count them for their foes which rebuke their childish Toys and Ways. All which the Church must bear, because they are God's Babes; yea, they must feed them too; For if he has found them Milk and Spoons, 'tis that they may be fed therewith, and live: Yea, grown Ministers are God's Nurses, wherefore they must have a Lap to lay them in, and Knees to dandle them upon, and Spoons to feed them with.

11. Nor are the Babes without their use in the Church of God, for he commands that they be brought to cry with the Congregation before the Lord, for Mercy for the Land, Joel 2. 16.

12. Incense, I told you, was a Type of Prayers, and the Spoons in the time of Moses, were presented at the Temple full of it. Perhaps to shew that God will with the Milk which he has provided for them, give it to them as a return of their crying to him, even as the Nurse gives the Child the Teat and Milk.

13. You know the Milk is called for, when the Child is crying, as we say to stop its Mouth with it. O Babes, did you but cry soundly, God would give you yet more Milk.

14. But what were those golden Spoons, a Type of?

Answer, If the Milk is the Juice, and Consolations of the Word, then the Spoons must be those soft sentences, and golden Conclusions, with which the Ministers feed their Souls by it. I have fed you, said Paul, with the Milk of the Word; saith Peter, even as you have been able to bear it. Compare these two or three Texts; 1 Pet. 2. 1, 2, 3. 1 Cor. 3. 2. 1 Thess. 2. 7.

15. And this is the Way to strengthen the weak Hands, and to confirm the feeble Knees. This is the Way to make them grow to be Men, who now are but as Infants of Days. Thus a little one may become a Thousand, and a small one a strong Nation. Yea, thus in time, you may make a little Child to jostle it with a Leopard, yea, to take a Lion by the Head; yea thus you may imbolden him to put his Hand to the Hole of the Ass, and to play before the Den of the Cockatrice, Isa. 11. 6, 7, 8. Chap. 60. 22.

Who is most stout, was once a Babe, he that can now eat Meat, was sometimes glad of Milk, and to be fed with the Spoon. Babes in Christ therefore must not be despised, nor over look'd: God has provided them Milk, and Spoons to eat it with, that they may grow up to be Men before him.

L. Of the Bowls and Basons belonging to the Temple.

AS there were Spoons, so there were Bowls, and Basons belonging to the Temple: Some of these were of Gold, and some of Silver: and when they were put together, their Number was four hundred and forty. These you read of, Ezra 1. 10.

The Bowls, or Basons, were not to wash in, as was the Sea and Lavers of the Temple, they were rather to hold the Messes in, which the Priests at their holy Feasts, did use to set before the People. This being so, they were Types of that Proportion of Faith, by which, or by the measure of which, every Man received of the holy Food, for the Nourishment of his Soul. For, as a Man, had he a thousand Messes set before him, he eating for his Health, cannot go beyond what his Stomach will bear: So neither can the Child of God, when he comes to worship in the Temple of God, receive the good things that are there, beyond the Proportion of his Faith, or, as it is in another place, according to the Ability which God giveth, Rom. 12. 6. 1 Pet. 4. 11.

And hence it is at the self same Ordinance, some receive three times as much as others do: for that their Bowl, I mean their Faith, is able to receive it. Yea Benjamin's Mess was five times as big as was the Mess of any of his Brethren; and so it is with some Saints, while they eat with their Brother Joseph in the House of the living God.

There are three go to the same Ordinance, and are all of them Believers, who when they come and compare Notes, do find their Receivings are not of the same Quantity.

One says, I got but little; to'ther says, 'twas a pretty good Ordinance to me; the third says, I was exceeding well there. Why, to be sure, he that had but little there, had there but little Faith, but great Faith in him would have received more. He had it then according to the Largeness of his Bowl, even according to his Faith, even as God hath dealt to every Man the Measure of Faith, Rom. 12. 3. Mark, Faith is a certain Measure, and that not only as to its Degree, but for that it can receive, retain, or hold what is put into it.

So then, here it is no matter how much Milk, or holy Broth there is, but how big is thy Bowl, thy Faith. Little Bowls hold but little, nor canst thou receive, but as thy Faith will bear: (I speak now of God's ordinary dealing with his People) For so he saith in his Word, According to thy Faith be it unto thee, Matt. 9. 29.

If a Man goeth to the Ocean Sea for Water, let him carry but an Egg-shell with him, and with that he shall not bring a Gallon home. I know indeed that our little Pots, have a Promise of being made like the Bowls of the Altar; but still our *Mess*s must be according to our Measure, be that small, or be it great. The same Prophet saith again, The Saints shall be filled like Bowls, as the Corners of the Altar: Which though it supposes an Enlargement, yet it must be confined to that Measure of Faith, which is provided for its Reception, Zech. 9. 15. Chap. 14. 2. And suppose these Bowls should signify the Promises, though the Saints, not the Promises, are compared to them, because they, not Promises, are the Subjects of Faith. Yet it is the Promise by our Measure of Faith in that, that is nourishing to our Souls.

When Ahasuerus made a Feast to his Subjects, they drank their Wine in Bowls. They did not drink it by the Largeness of the Vessel, whence they drew it, but according to their Health, and as their Stomachs would so receive it, Esth. 1.

Thy Faith then is one of the Bowls, or Basons of the Temple, by, or according to which, thou receivedst thy Mess, when thou sitting feasting at the Table of God.

And observe, all the Bowls were not made of Gold, as all Faith is not of a saving sort. 'Tis the Golden Faith that is right, the Silver Bowls were of an inferior sort, Revel. 3. 18.

Some, I say, have golden Faith, all Faith is not so. Wherefore look to it, Soul, that thy Bowl, thy Faith, be golden Faith, or of the best kind. Look, I say, after a good Faith, and great, for a great Faith receives a great Mess.

Of old, Beggars did use to carry their Bowls in their Laps, when they went to a Door for an Alms. Consequently if their Bowls were but little, they oft-times came off by the Loss, though the Charity of the Giver was large. Yea, the greater the Charity, the larger the Loss, because the Beggar's Bowl was too little. Mark it well, it is oft-times thus in the Matters of our God.

Art thou a Beggar, a Beggar at God's Door, be sure thou gettest a great Bowl, for as thy Bowl is, so will be thy Mess. According to thy Faith, saith he, be it unto thee, Matt. 9. 29.

LI. Of the Flaggons and Cups of the Temple.

THE next Thing to be considered, is, the Flaggons and Cups of the Temple; of these we read, 1 Chron. 28. 17. Jer. 52. 19.

These were of great use among the Jews, especially on their Feasting-days; as of their Sabbaths, New Moons, and the like, Levit. 23. 13. Numb. 28. 7. 1 Chron. 16. 3. Isa. 25. 6. chap. 62. 8, 9.

For instance, the Day that David danced before the Ark, he dealt among all the People, even to the whole Multitude of Israel, as well to the Women as to Men, to every Man a Cake of Bread, a good piece of Flesh, and a Flaggon of Wine, 2 Sam. 6. 19. 1 Chron. 16. 3.

In this Mountain, that is, in the Temple typically, saith the Prophet, shall the Lord of Hosts make unto all People a Feast of fat Things, a Feast of Wine on the Lees, of fat Things full of Marrow, of Wine on the Lees well refined, Isa. 25. 6.

These are Feasting-times: The Times in which our Lord used to have his Spouse into his Wine-Cellar, and in which he used to display with delight his Banner over her Head in love, Song. 2. 5.

The Church of Christ, alas, is of her self a very sickly puely Thing, a Woman, a weaker Vessel, but how much more must she needs be so weak, when she is sick of Love: Then she indeed has need of a Draught, for she now sinks, and will not else be supported; Stay me with Flaggons, saith she, and comfort me with Apples, for I am sick of Love, Song. 2. 4, 5.

These Flaggons therefore were Types of those Feastings, and of those large Draughts of Divine Love, that the Lord Jesus draweth for, and giveth to his Spouse in those Days that he feasteth with them. For then he saith, Drink, yea drink abundantly, O Beloved. This he does to chear her up under her Hours of Sadness and Dejection: For now new Corn makes the young Men chearful, and new Wine the Maids, Prov. 31. 6, 7. Psal. 116. 13. Jer. 16. 7. Song. 5. Zech. 9. 17.

As there were Flaggons, so there were Cups, and they are called Cups of Consolation, and Cups of Salvation, because, as I said, they were they by which God at his Feastings with his People, or when he suppeth with them, giveth out the more large Draughts of his Love unto his Saints, to revive the Spirits of the humble, and to revive the Hearts of the contrite ones. At these Times God made David's Cup run over. For we are now admitted, if our Faith will bear it, to drink freely into this Grace, and to be merry with him, Psal. 23. 5. Luk. 15. 22, 23, 24. Song. 5. 1. chap. 7. 11, 12. Job. 14. 23. Revel. 3. 20.

This is that to which the Apostle alludeth, when he saith, Be not drunk with Wine, wherein is excess, but be ye filled with the Spirit; speaking to your selves in Psalms, and Hymns, and spiritual Songs, singing and making melody in your Hearts unto the Lord.

For the Cups, as to their use in the general, understand them, as of the Bowls made mention of before. For assurances are the Blooms and Flowers of Faith, not always on it, though usually on Feasting Days, 'tis so. So the Degree of the one, is still according to the Measure of the other, Ephes. 5. 18. Jam. 5. Rom. 15. 13.

LII. Of the Chargers of the Temple.

IN the Tabernacle they had but twelve of them, and they were made of Silver, but in the Temple they had in all a thousand and thirty. The thirty were made of Gold, the rest were made of Silver, Numb. 7. 84.

These Chargers, were not for uses common or profane, but, as I take it, they were those in which the Passover, and other Meat-offerings were drest up, when the People came to eat before God in his holy Temple.

The Meat, you know, I told you was opposite to Milk, and so are these Chargers, to the Bowls, and Cups, and Flaggons of the Temple.

The Meat was of two sorts, roast or boyl'd. Of that which was roast, was the Passover, and of that which was boyl'd, was the Trespas-offerings. Wherefore concerning the Passover, he saith, Eat not of it raw, nor sodden at all in Water, but roast with Fire, his Head, with his Legs, and with the purtenance thereof, Exod. 12.

This roast Meat, was a Type of the Body of Christ, as suffering for our Sins, the which when it was roast, was, and is, as drest up in Chargers, and set before the Congregations of the Saints.

But what were the Chargers a Type of?

I also ask, in what Chargers our Gospel-Passover is now drest up, and set before the People. Is it not in the Evangelists, the Prophets, and Epistles of the Apostles? They therefore are the Chargers, and the Ordinance of the Supper; in these also is the Trespas-offerings, with what is fried in Pans, mystically prepared for the Children of the highest.

And why might they not be a Type of Gospel-Sermons?

I answer, I think not so fitly, for alas! the best of Sermons in the World, are but as thin Slices cut out of those large Dishes. Our Ministers are the Carvers, good Doctrine is the Meat, and the Chargers in which this Meat is found, are the holy Canonical Scriptures, &c. Though, as I said, most properly, the New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

In these is Christ most truly, lively, and amply set before us as crucified, or roast at the Fire of God's Law for our Sins, that we might might live by him through Faith, feeding upon him, 2 Cor. 3. 12. Gal. 3. 12. Acts 3. 18, to 22. Chap. 13. 4. Chap. 26. 22. 1 Pet. 1. 10. Acts 7. 42. Chap. 15. 15. Chap. 28. 23. Rom. 16. 26. Rev. 10. 7.

There is in these Chargers, not only Meat, but sawce (if you like it) to eat the Meat withal. For the Passover there is bitter Herbs, or sound Repentance: and for other, as the Thank-offerings, there is Holy Chearfulness and Prayers to God for Grace. All these are set forth before in the Holy Scriptures, and presented to us thereby, as in the golden Chargers of the Temple. He that will scoff at this, let him scoff. The Chargers were a Type of some Thing, and he that can shew a fitter Antitype than is here proposed to Consideration, let him do it, and I'll be thankful to him.

Christians, here is your Meat before you: and this know, the deeper you dip it in the Sawce, the better it will relish. But let not unbelief teach you such Manners, as to make you leave the best bits behind you. For your liberty is to eat freely of the Best, of the Fat, and of the Sweet.

LIII. Of the goings out of the Temple.

AS to the comings into the Temple, of them we have spoken already; namely, of the outer and inner Court, as also of the Doors of the Porch, and Temple. The coming in was but one strait course, and that a Type of Jesus Christ, but the goings out were many, John 10. 9. Chap. 14. 6.

Now, as I said, it is insinuated, that the goings out are many, answerable to the many Ways which the Children of Men have invented to Apostatize in from God. Christ is the Way into, but Sin, the Way out of the Temple of God. True, I read not of a Description of the goings out of this House, as I read of the comings in. Only when they had Athalia out thence, She is said, To go out by the Way by which the Horses come into the King's Stables, and there she was slain; as it were upon the Horse-dunghil, 2 Kings 11. 16. 2 Chron. 24. 15.

When Uzziah also went out of this House for his Transgression, he was cast out of all Society, and made to dwell in a kind of a Pest-house, even to the Day of his Death, 2 Chron. 26. 20, 21.

Thus therefore, though these goings out are not particularly described, the Judgments that followed them, that have for their Transgressions been thrust out thence, have been both remarkable, and tremendous. For, to die upon a Dunghil, or in a Pest-house, and that for wicked Actions, is a shameful, a disgraceful Thing. And God will still be spreading dung upon the Faces of such, no Greatness shall prevent it; Yea, and will take them away with it, Mal. 2. I will drive them out of my House, says he,

I will love them no more, Hos. 9. 15.

But what are we to understand in Gospel Days, by going out of the House of the Lord, for, or by Sin?

I answer, If it be done voluntarily, then Sin leads you out, if it be done by the Holy compulsion of the Church, then 'tis done by the Judicial Judgment of God; That is, they are cut off, and cast out from thence, as a Just reward for their Transgressions, Levit. 20. 18. Chap. 22. 3. Ezek. 14. 8. 1 Cor. 5. 13.

Well, but whither do they go, that are thus gone out of the Temple or Church of God?

I answer, Not to the Dunghil with Athalia, nor to the Pest-house with Uzziah, but to the Devil, that's the first step, and so to Hell, without Repentance. But if their Sin be not unpardonable, they may by Repentance be recovered, and in Mercy tread these Courts again. Now the Way to this recovery, is to think seriously what they have done, or by what Way they went out from the House of God. Hence the Prophet is bid to shew to the rebellious House, first the goings out of the House, and then the comings in. But, I say first, he bids shew them the goings out thereof, Ezekiel 43. 10, 11.

And this is of absolute necessity, for the recovering of the Sinner. For until he that has sinned himself out of God's House, shall see what danger he has incurred to himself, by this his wicked going out, he will not unfeignedly desire to come in thither again.

There is another Thing as to this point to be taken notice of. There is a way, by which God also doth depart from this House, and that also is by Sin, as the Occasion. The Sin of a Man will thrust him out, and the Sin of Men will drive God out of his own House. Of this you read, Ezek. 11. 22, 23. For this, he saith, I have forsaken mine House, I have left mine heritage, I have given the dearly Beloved of my Soul into the Hand of her Enemies, Jer. 12. 7.

And this also is dreadful: The great sentence of Christ upon the Jews lay much in these words, Your House is left unto you desolate; that is, God has left you to bare Walls, and to lifeless Traditions.

Consider therefore of this going out also. Alas, a Church, a true Church, is but a poor Thing, if God leaves, if God forsakes it. By a true Church, I mean, one that is congregated, according to outward Rule, that has sinned God away, as she had almost quite done, that was of Laodicea, Revel. 3.

He that Sins himself out, can find no good in the World, and they that have sinned God out, can find no good in the Church. A Church that has sinned God away from it, is a sad Lump indeed. You therefore that are in God's Church, take heed of sinning ning your selves out thence; also take heed that while you keep in, you sin not God away, for thenceforth, no good is there, Yea, wo unto them when I depart from them, saith God, Hof. 9. 12.

LIV. Of the Singers belonging to the Temple.

HAVING thus far passed thorow the Temple, I come now to the Singers there. The Singers were many, but all of the Church, either Jews, or Profelites. Nor was there any, as I know of, under the Old Testament-worship, admitted to sing the Songs of the Church, and to celebrate that part of Worship with the Saints, but they, who, at least, in appearance, were so. The Song of Moses, of Deborah, and of those that danced before David, with others that you read of, they were all performed, either by Jews by Nature, or by such as were profelited to their Religion, Exod. 15. 1. Judges 5. 1, 2. 1 Sam. 18. 6. And such worship then was occasioned by God's appearance for them, against the Power of the Gentiles, their Enemies.

But we are confined to the Songs of the Temple, a more distinct Type of ours in the Church under the Gospel.

1. The Singers then were many, but the chief of them in the Days of David, were David himself, Asaph, Jeduthan, and Heman, and their Sons.

2. In David's time the chief of these Singers were two hundred threescore and eight, 1 Chron. 25.

These Singers of old were to sing their Songs over the Burnt-offering, which were Types of the sacrificed Body of Christ, a Memorial of which Offering we have at the Lord's Table, the Consummation of which Christ and his Disciples celebrated with a Hymn, Mat. 26. 30.

And as of old, they were the Church, that did sing in the Temple, according to Institution, to God; So also they are by God's Appointment to be sung by the Church in the New. Hence,

1. They are said to be the Redeemed that sing.

2. The Songs that they sing, are said to be the Songs of their Redemption, Revel. 5. 9, 10.

3. They were and are Songs, that no Man can learn, but they.

But let us run a little in the Parallel.

1. They were of old appointed to Sing, that were cunning and skilful in Songs. And answerable to that, 'tis said, That no Man could learn our New-Testament Songs, but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the Earth, 1 Chron. 15. 22. Revel. 14. 3.

2. These Songs were sung with *Harp*s, Psalteries, Cymbals, and Trumpets; a Type of our singing with spiritual Joy, from grace in our Hearts, 1 Chron. 25. 6. 2 Chron. 29. 26, 27, 28. Col. 3. 16.

3. The Singers of old were to be clothed in fine Linnen, which fine Linnen, was a Type of Innocency, and an upright Conversation. Hence the Singers under the New Testament, are said to be Virgins, such, in whose Mouth was no Guile, and that were without fault before the Throne of God, 1 Chron. 15. 27. and Rev. 14. 1, to 6. See also Chap. 7. 9, to 16. Psal. 33. 1.

4. The Songs sung in the Temple, were new, or such as were compiled after the Manner of repeated Mercies, that the Church of God had received or were to receive, and answerable to this is the Church to sing now, new Songs, with new Hearts for new Mercies, Psal. 33. 3. Psal. 40. 3. Psal. 96. Psal. 144. 9. Revel. 14. 3.

New Songs, I say, are grounded on new Matter, new Occasions, new Mercies, new Deliverances, new Discoveries of God to the Soul, or for new frames of Heart. And are such as are most taking most pleasing, and most refreshing to the Soul.

5. These Songs of Old; to distinguish them from heathenish Ones, were called God's Songs, the Lord's Songs; because taught by him, and learned of him, and enjoined to them, to be sung to his Praise. Hence David said, God had put a new Song in his Mouth, even Praises to our God, 1 Chron. 25. 7. Psal. 47. 6, 7. Psal. 137. 4. Psal. 40. 3.

6. These Songs also were called the Songs of Sion, and the Songs of the Temple, Psal. 137. 3. Amos 8. 3.

And they are so called as they were theirs to Sing there, I say, of them of Sion, and the Worshipers in the Temple: I say, to Sing in the Church, by the Church, to him who is the God of the Church, for the Mercies, Benefits and Blessings, which she has received from him, Sion-Songs, Temple-Songs, must be sung by Sion's Sons, and Temple-worshippers.

The redeemed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with Songs, and everlasting Joy upon their Heads, they shall obtain Joy and Gladness; and sorrow and sighing shall fly away. Therefore they shall come and sing in the height, or upon the Mountain of Zion; and shall flow together, thither, to the Goodness of the Lord. Break forth into singing ye Mountains, and let the Inhabitants of the Rock sing, Isa. 44. 23. Chap. 42. 11.

To sing to God, is the highest Worship we are capable of performing in Heaven; and 'tis much if Sinners on Earth, without Grace, should be capable of performing it, according to his Institution, acceptably. I pray God it be done by all those that now a Days get into Churches, in spirit and with understanding.

LV. Of

LV. Of the Union of the Holy and most Holy Temple.

THAT commonly called the Temple of God at Jerusalem, considered as standing of two parts, was called the outward, and inward Temple, or, the Holy, and most holy Place. They were built upon one, and the same Foundation, neither could one go into the Holiest, but as thorow the holy Place, 1 Kings 3. 1. Chap. 6. 1. 2 Chron. 5. 1, 13. Chap. 7. 2.

The first House, namely, that which we have been speaking of, was a Type of the Church-militant, and the Place most Holy a Type of the Church Triumphant. I say, of the Church-triumphant, as it is now.

So then, The House standing of these two parts, was a Shadow of the Church both in Heaven and Earth. And for that they are joined together by one and the same Foundation, it was to shew, that they above, and we below, are yet one and the self-same House of God. Hence they, and we together, are called, The whole Family in Heaven and Earth, Ephes. 3. 14, 15.

And hence it is said again, that we who believe on Earth, are come to Mount Zion, to the City of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem; and to an innumerable company of Angels. To the general Assembly, and Church of the first born, which are written in Heaven, and to the Spirits of just Men made perfect, and to God the Judge of all, and to Jesus the Mediator of the new Covenant, and to the Blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better Things than that of Abel, Heb. 12. 22, 23, 24.

The difference then betwixt us, and them, is, not that we are really two, but one body in Christ, in divers Places. True we are below stairs, and they above; they in their holy-day, and we in our working-day cloaths: they in harbour, but we in the storm; they at rest, and we in the Wilderness: they singing, as crowned with Joy; we crying, as crowned with Thorns. But I say, we are all of one House, one Family, and are all the Children of one Father.

This therefore we must not forget, lest we debar our selves of much of that, which otherwise, while here we have a right unto. Let us therefore, I say, remember, that the Temple of God is but one, though divided, as one may say, into Kitchen and Hall, above stairs and below; or Holy and most holy Place. For it stands upon the same Foundation, and is called, but one, the Temple of God; which is built upon the Lord our Saviour.

I told you before, that none of old, could go into the most Holy, but by the holy Place, even by the Vail that made the Partition between, Exod. 26. 33. Levit. 16. 2, 12, 15. Heb. 9. 7, 8. chap. 10. 19.

Wherefore, they are deceived, that think to go into the Holiest which is Heaven, when they die; who yet abandon, and hate the holy Place, while they live.

Nay Sirs, The Way into the Holiest, is thorow the holy Place; the Way into Heaven, is thorow the Church on Earth; for that Christ is there by his Word to be received by Faith, before he can by us in Person, be received in the beatific Vision. The Church on Earth, is as the House of the Women, spoken of in the Book of Esther, where we must be dieted, perfumed, and made fit to go into the Bridegroom's Chamber, or as Paul says, made meet to be partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in light, Eph. 2. Col. 1. 12.

LVI. Of the Holiest or Inner Temple.

THE most holy Place was, as I said, a Figure of Heaven it self, consequently, a Type of that where the most special Presence of God is; and where his Face is most clearly seen, and the gladness of his Countenance most enjoyed, Heb. 9. 23, 24. Exod. 25. 22. Numb. 7. 89.

The most holy Place was dark, it had no Windows in it, though there was such round the Chambers; the more special Presence of God too, on Mount Sinai, was in the thick Darkness there, 1 Kings 8. 12. 2 Chron. 6. 1. Exod. 19. 9. Chap. 20. 21.

1. This Holiest therefore being thus made, was to shew that God as in Heaven, to us on Earth, is altogether invisible, and not to be reached otherwise than by Faith. For I say, in that this House had no Windows, nothing therein could be seen by the highest light of this World. Things there were only seen by the Light of the Fire of the Altar, which was a Type of the Shining of the Holy Ghost, 1 Cor. 2. Chap. And hence it is said, notwithstanding this Darkness, He dwelleth in the Light, which no Man can approach unto; none but the high Priest, Christ, 1 Tim. 6. 16. 1 Pet. 3. 21, 22.

2. The Holiest therefore was thus built, to shew how different our state in Heaven will be, from this our state on Earth. We walk here by one Light, by the Light of a written Word; For that is now a Light to our Feet, and a Lanthorn to our Path. But that Place, where there will be no written Word, nor Ordinances as here, will yet to us shine more light and clear, then if all the Lights that are in the World were put together to light one Man: For God is Light, and in him is no Darkness at all, 1 John 1. 5. And in his Light, and in the Light of the Lamb immediately, we shall live, and walk, and rejoyce all the Days of Eternity.

3. This also was ordained thus, to shew, that we while in the first Temple, should live by Faith, as to what there was, or as to

to what was done in the second. Hence 'tis said, as to that, we walk by Faith, not by Sight, 2 Cor. 5, to 9.

The Things that are there we are told of, even of the Ark of the Testimony, and Mercy-Seat, and the Cherubims of Glory, and the Presence of Christ, and of God; we are, I say, told of them by the Word, and believe, and are taken therewith, and hope to go to them hereafter: but otherwise we see them not. Therefore we are said to look, not at the Things that are seen, but at the Things that are not seen; for the Things that are seen are Temporal, but the Things that are not seen are Eternal, 2 Cor. 4. 18.

4. The People of old were not to look into the Holiest, lest they died, (Numb. 17. 13.) save only their High-Priest, he might go into it: To shew that we, while here, must have a Care of vain Speculations, for there is nothing to be seen by us while here, in Heaven, otherwise than by Faith in God's eternal Testament: True, we may now come to the Holiest, even as high as the first Temple will admit us to come; but it must be by Blood and Faith, not by vain Imagination, Sense, or carnal Reason.

5. This Holiest of all was four square every way, both as to Height, Length, and Breadth. To be thus, is a Note of Perfection, as I have shewed elsewhere; wherefore it was on purpose thus built, to shew us, that all Fulness of Blessedness is there, both as to the Nature, Degree, and Duration. So when that which is perfect is come, that which is in part shall be done away, 1 Cor. 13. 8, 9, 10. Heb. 10. 19, 20, 21, 22.

LVII. Of the Vail of the Temple.

THE Vail of the Temple was a Hanging, made of blue and purple, and crimson, and fine linnen, and there were Cherubims wrought thereon, Exod. 26. 31, 32.

1. This Vail was one Partition 'twixt the holy and most holy Place. And I take it, it was to keep from the Sight of the Worshipers, the Things most holy, when the High Priest went in thither, to accomplish the Service of God, Exod. 26. 33. 2 Chron. 3. 14. Heb. 9. 8.

2. The Vail was a Type of two Things.

1. Of these visible Heavens, through which Christ passed, when he went to make Intercession for us. And as by the Vail, the Priest went out of the Sight of the People, when he went into the Holiest of all: So Jesus Christ when he ascended, was by the Heavens, that great and stretched out Curtain, received out of the Sight of his People here. Also by the same Curtain, since it is become as a Tent for him to dwell in, he is still received, and still kept out of our Sight: For now we see him not, nor shall, until these Heavens be rolled together as a Scrole, and pass away like a Thing rolled together, Isa. 40. 22. Acts 1. 9, 10, 11. Chap. 3. 19, 20, 21. 1 Pet. 1. 8.

2. This is that Vail, thorow which the Apostle saith, Jesus is a Fore-runner for us, entered into the presence of God. For by Vail here also, must be meant the Heavens, or out-spread Firmament thereof. As both Mark and Peter says, He is gone into Heaven, and is on the right Hand of God, Mark 16. 19. 1 Pet. 3. 22.

3. The Vail of the Temple was made of blue, the very Colour of the Heavens. Of purple, and crimson, and scarlet also, which are the Colour of many of the Clouds: because of the reflections of the Sun. But again.

4. The Vail was also a Type of the Body of Christ. For as the Vail of the Temple, when whole, kept the View of the Things of the Holiest from us, but when rent, gave place to Man to look in unto them: Even so the Body of Christ while whole, kept the Things of the Holiest from that View, we, since he was pierced, have of them. Hence we are said to enter into the Holiest, by Faith, thorow the Vail, that is to say, his Flesh, Heb. 10. 19, 20, 21, 22.

But yet, I say, all is by Faith; and indeed the renting of the Vail that Day that Christ was crucified, did loudly preach this to us. For no sooner was the Body of Christ pierced, but the Vail of the Temple rent in twain from the Top to the Bottom: And so a Way was made for a clearer Sight of what was there beyond it, both in the Type and Anti-type, Matt. 27. 50, 51, 52, 53. Heb. 10. 19, 20.

Thus you see that the Vail of the Temple was a Type of these visible Heavens, and also of the Body of Christ; of the first, because, he passed thorow it unto the Father; of the second, because, we by it have boldness to come to the Father.

I read also of two other Vails, as of that spread over the Face of Moses, to the end the Children of Israel should not steadfastly behold, and of the first Vail of the Tabernacle; But of these I shall not in this place speak.

Upon the Vail of the Temple there was also the Figures of Cherubims wrought, that is, of Angels; to shew that as the Angels are with us here, and wait upon us all the Days of our Pilgrimage in this World: so, when we die, they stand ready, even at the Vail, at the Door of these Heavens, to come, when bid, to fetch us, and carry us away into Abraham's Bosom, Luke 16. 22.

The Vail then thus understood, teaches us first where Jesus is, namely, not here, but gone into Heaven, from whence we should wait for him. It also teaches us, that if we would even now discern the Glories that are in the Holiest of all, we must look thorow Jesus to them, even thorow the Vail, that is to say, his Flesh. Yea, it teaches teaches us, that we may by Faith through him, attain to a kind of a Presence, at least of the Beauty and Sweetness of them.

LVIII. Of the Doors of the Inner Temple.

1. BESIDES the Vail, there was a Door to the inner Temple, and that Door was made of Olive-Tree; and for the entering in of the Oracle, he made Doors of Olive-Tree. The two Doors also of Olive-Tree, and he carved upon them Cherubims, and Palm-Trees, and open Flowers, and overlaid them with Gold, and spread Gold upon the Cherubims, and upon the Palm-Trees, 1 King. 6. 31.

2. These Doors were a Type of the Gate of Heaven, even of that which lets into the Eternal Mansion-house that is beyond that Vail. I told you before, that the Vail was a Type of the visible Heavens, which God has spread out as a Curtain, and through which Christ went, when he ascended to the right Hand of the Father.

3. Now beyond this Vail, as I said, I find a Door, a Gate opening with two Leaves, as afore, we found at the Door of the outward Temple. These are they which the Psalmist calls to, when he saith, Lift up your Heads, O ye Gates, even lift them up ye everlasting Doors, and the King of Glory shall come in, Psal. 24. 7, 9.

4. The Doors of the Temple were made of Firr, but these, as you see, were made of Olive; To shew us by that fat Tree, that rich Type, with what Glory we shall meet, who shall be counted worthy to enter at these Gates. The Olive-Tree has its Name from the Oil and Fatness of its Nature, and the Doors that let into the Holiest were made of this Olive-Tree.

5. Cherubims were also carved upon these Doors, to shew, that as the Angels met us at the Temple-door, and as they wait upon us in the Temple, and stand also ready at the Vail, so even at the Gate of the Mansion-house, they will be also ready to give us a welcome thither, and to attend us into the Presence-Chamber.

6. Palm-trees also, as they were carved upon the Temple-doors, so we also find them here before the Oracle, upon the Doors that let in thither. To shew that as Christ gave us the Victory at our first entering into Faith, so he will finish that Victory, by giving of us Eternal Salvation. Thus is he the Author and Finisher of our Faith. For as sure as at first we received the Palm-branch by Faith, so surely shall we wear it in our Hands, as a Token of his Faithfulness in the Heaven of Heavens, for ever, Revel. 7. 9.

7. Open Flowers, are also carved here; To shew, that Christ, who is the Door to Glory, as well as the Door to Grace, will be precious to us at our entering in thither, as well as at the first Step we took thitherward in a sinful miserable World. Christ will never lose his sweet scent in the Nostrils of his Church. He is most sweet now, will be so at Death, and sweetest of all, when by him we shall enter into that Mansion-house prepared for us in Heaven.

8. The Palm-trees, and open Flowers may also be a Type of the precious ones of God, who shall be counted worthy of his Kingdom: The one, of the Uprightness of their Hearts; the other, of the good favour of their Lives. The Upright shall dwell in thy Presence; and to him that ordereth his Conversation aright, I will shew the Salvation of God, Psal. 140. 13. Psal. 50. ult.

9. Thus sweet in Earth, sweet in Heaven: And he that yields the Fruit of the Gospel here, shall find it for himself, and his Eternal Comfort, at the Gates of Glory.

10. All these were overlaid with Gold, as you may say, and so they were at the Door of the first House. True, but observe here we have an addition. Here is Gold upon Gold. Gold laid on them, and then Gold spread upon that. He overlaid them with Gold, and then spread Gold upon them. The Lord gives Grace and Glory, Psal. 84.

11. Gold and Gold. Gold spread upon Gold. Grace is Gold in the Leaf, and Glory is Gold in Plates. Grace is thin Gold, Glory is Gold that is thick. Here is Gold laid on, and Gold spread upon that. And that both upon the Palm-trees, and the Cherubims. Gold upon the Palm-trees, that's on the Saints; Gold upon the Cherubims, that's upon the Angels. For, I doubt not, but that the Angels themselves shall receive Additional Glory for the Service which they have served Christ and his Church on Earth.

11. The Angels are God's Harvest-men, and doubtless he will give them good Wages, even Glory upon their Glory then, Matt. 13. 38, 39. Chap. 24. 31. Joh. 4. 36.

12. You know Harvest-men use to be paid well for gathering in the Corn, and I doubt not but so shall these, when the great Ingathering is over. But what an entrance into Life is here? Here is Gold upon Gold at the Door, at our first Step into the Kingdom.

LIX. Of the Golden Nails of the Inner Temple.

I SHALL not concern my self with all the Nails of the Temple, as of those made with Iron, &c. 1 Chron. 22. 3. but only with the Golden ones, of which you read, 2 Chron. 3. 4. Where he saith, And the Weight of the Nails was fifty Shekels of Gold: These Nails, as I conceive, were all fastned to the place most Holy, and of Form most apt to that of which they were a Figure.

1. Some of them represented Christ Jesus our Lord, as fixed in his Mediatory Office in the Heavens, wherefore in one place, when when the Holy Ghost speaks of Christ, as he sprang from Judah to be a Mediator, faith, Out of him came the Corner (the Corner-stone) out of him the Nails, Zech. 10. 4.

Now since he is here compared to a Nail, a golden Nail, it is to shew, that as a Nail, by driving, is fixed in his place; so Christ by God's Oath is made an everlasting Priest, Heb. 7. 25. Therefore as he saith again, The Nail, the Aaronical Priesthood, that was fastned in a sure place, should be removed, be cut down, and fall: So he who has the Key of David, which is Christ (Revel. 3. 7.) shall by God, as a Nail, be fastned in a sure place, abide; therefore he says again, And he shall be for a glorious Throne, or Mercy-seat, to his Father's House: And moreover, that they shall hang on him (as on a Nail) all the Glory of his Father's House, the Offspring, and the Issue, all Vessels of small quantity, from the Vessels of Cups, even to the Vessels of Flag-gons. According to that which is written, And they sang a new Song to the Lamb that was slain, saying, Thou art worthy, &c. Isa. 22. 20, 22, 23, 24, 25. Rev. 5. 9, 12.

And therefore it is again, that Christ under the Similitude of a Nail, is accounted by Saints indeed, their great Pledge or Hope, as he is in Heaven, of their certain coming thither: Hence they said of old, God has given us a Nail in his holy place: A Nail, says the Line, a Pin, a constant and sure abode, says the Margin, Ezra 9. 8. Now this Nail in his holy place, as was shewed before, is Christ; Christ, as possessor of Heaven, and as abiding, and ever living therein for us.

Hence he is called, as there, our Head, our Life, and our Salvation; and also we are said there to be set down together in him, Ephes. 1. ult. Col. 3. 3. Ephes. 2. 5, 6.

2. Some of these Nails were Types of the holy Words of God, which for ever are settled in Heaven. Types, I say, of their Tea, and Amen. Hence Solomon in another place compares the Words of the wise God, To Goads and Nails, fastned by the Masters of the Assemblies, which are given from one Shepherd, Eccles. 12. 11.

They are called Goads, because, as such prick the Oxen on in their drawing, so God's Words prick Christians on in their Holy Duties. They are called Nails, to shew, that as Nails, when fastned well in a sure place, are not easily removed: So God's Words by his Will, stand firm for ever. The Masters of the Assemblies are first, the Apostles. The one Shepherd is Jesus Christ. Hence the Gospel of Christ is said to be everlasting, to abide for ever, and to be more stedfast than Heaven and Earth, Isa. 40. 6, 7, 8. 1 Pet. 1. 24, 25. Heb. 18. 20. Revel. 14. 6. Matt. 24. 35.

The Lord Jesus then, and his Holy Words are the Golden Nails of the Temple, and the fixing of these Nails in the Temple, was to shew, that Christ is the same to day, yesterday, and for ever: And that his Words abide, and remain the same for ever and ever. He then that hath Christ, has a Nail in the Holiest, he that hath a Promise of Salvation, hath also a Nail in Heaven, a Golden Nail in Heaven.

LX. Of the Floor and Walls of the Inner Temple.

1. THE Floor of the Oracle was overlaid with Cedar, and so also was the Walls of this House. He built twenty Cubits on the Sides of the House, both the Floor and the Walls with Boards of Cedar. He even built for it within, for the Oracle, for the most holy place, 1 Kings 16. 2.

2. In that he doth tell us with what it was cieled, and doth also thus repeat, saying, for the Oracle, for it within, even for the most holy place; it is because he would have it noted, that this only is the Place, that thus was done.

3. Twenty Cubits, that was the Length, and Breadth, and Height of the House: So that by his thus saying, he teacheth that thus it was builded round about.

4. The Cedar is, if I mistake not, the highest of the Trees, Ezek. 31. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

Now in that it is said the House, the Oracle, was cieled round about therewith. It may be to shew, that in Heaven, and no where else, is the height of all Perfections.

Perfection is in the Church on Earth, but not such as is in Heaven.

1. There is a natural Perfection, and so a Penny is as natural Silver, as is a Shilling.

2. There is a comparative Perfection, and so one Thing may be perfect and imperfect at the same time; as a half Crown is more than a Shilling, yet less than a Crown.

3. There is also that which we call the utmost Perfection, and that is it which cannot be added to, or taken from him; and so God only is perfect.

Now heavenly Glory is that which goes beyond all Perfection on the Earth, as the Cedar goes beyond all Trees for height. Hence God, when he speaks of his own Excellency, sets it forth by its Height. The high God, the most High, and the high and lofty one: And the Highest, Psal. 97. 9. Psal. 138. 6. Gen. 14. 19, 20, 21. Dan. 3. 21. Chap. 5. 18. Psal. 18. 13. Psal. 85. 7. Luke 1. 32. Chap. 6. 35. Psal. 9. 2. Psal. 56. 2. Psal. 92. 1. Isa. 14. 14.

These Terms also are ascribed to this House, for that it was the place where utmost Perfection dwelt.

I take therefore the Cedar in this place to be a Note of Perfection; even the Cedar with which this House was cieled.

For since it is the Wisdom of God to speak to us, oft-times by Trees, Gold, Silver, Stones, Beasts, Fowls, Fishes, Spiders, Ants, Ants, Frogs, Flies, Lice, Dust, &c. and here by Wood; how should we by them understand his Voice, if we count there is no meaning in them.

And the Cedar of the House within was carved with Knops, and Flowers, all was Cedar: There was no Stone seen, 1 King. 9. 18.

Knops and Flowers, were they with which the Golden Candlestick was adorned, as you read, Exod. 25. 33, 35. Chap. 37. 10, 21.

The Candlestick was a Type of the Church, and the Knops, and Flowers a Type of her Ornaments. But what! Must Heaven be hanged round about with the Ornaments of Saints! With the Fruits of their Graces? Well, it is certain, that something more than ordinary must be done with them, since they are admitted to follow them into the holy Place, Revel. 14. 13. And since 'tis said they shall have a far more exceeding and eternal weight of Glory bestowed on them for them in the Heavens, 2 Cor. 4. 16, 17.

All was Cedar, there was no Stone seen. Take Stone in the Type for that which was really so, and in the Antitype, for that which is so mystically, and then it may import to us, that in Heaven, the Antitype of this Holiest, there shall never be any thing of hardness of Heart in them that possess it for ever: All Imperfection ariseth from the badness of the Heart, but there will be no bad Hearts in Glory. No shortness in Knowledge, no crookedness of Disposition, no workings of Lusts, or Corruptions will be there, no not throughout the whole Heavens. Here alas they are seen, and that in the best of Saints, because here our Light is mixt with Darknes, but there will be no Night there, nor any Stone seen.

And the Floor of the House was overlaid with Gold, 1 King. 6. 30. This is like that of which we read of the new Jerusalem, that is to come from God out of Heaven, says the Text, The Street of the City was pure Gold; and like that, of which you read in Exodus, They saw under the Feet of the God of Israel, as it were a paved Work of a Sapphire Stone, and as it were the Body of Heaven in its clearness, Revel. 21. 21. Exod. 24. 10.

All the Visions were rich, but this the richest, that the Floor of the House should be covered, or overlaid with Gold. The Floor and Street, are walking Places, and how rich will our Steps be then! Alas! here we sometimes step into the Mire, and then again stumble upon Blocks and Stones. Here we sometimes fall into Holes, and have our Heel oft catcht in a snare; but there will be none of these; Gold, Gold, all will be Gold, and golden Perfections, when we come into the holy Place. Job at best took but his Steps in Butter, but we then shall take all our Steps in the Gold of the Sanctuary.

LXI. Of the Ark of the Covenant, which was placed in the Inner Temple.

IN the Word, I read of three Arks, to wit, Noah's Ark: That in which Moses was hid; and the Ark of the Covenant of God, Gen. 6. 14. Exod. 2. 3, 5. But it is the Ark of the Covenant, of which I shall now speak.

The Ark was made of Shittim Wood, two Cubits and a half was the Length thereof, and one Cubit and an half the Breadth thereof, and a Cubit and an half the Height thereof. It was overlaid with pure Gold within and without, and a Crown of Gold was made for it round about, Exod. 25. 10, 11.

1. This Ark was called the Ark of the Covenant, as the first that you read of was called Noah's, because, as he in THAT was kept from being drowned; So the Tables of the Covenant was kept in this, from breaking.

2. This Ark, in this, was a Type of Christ. For that in him only, and not in the Hand of Moses, these Tables were kept whole. Moses brake them, the Ark keeps them.

3. Not only that wrote on two Tables of Stone, but that also called the Ceremonial, was put into the Ark to be kept. The two Tables were put into the midst of the Ark, to answer to this, Thy Law is within my Heart to do it. But the Ceremonial was put into the SIDE of the Ark, to shew, that out of the Side of Christ must come that which must answer that. For out thence came Blood, and Water; Blood to answer the Blood of the Ceremonies, and Water to answer the Purifyings and Rinsings of that Law.

The Ceremonies, therefore were lodged in the Side of the Ark, to shew, that they should be answered out of the Side of Jesus Christ, Exod. 25. 16, 17. Deut. 10. 5. Chap. 31. 26. Psal. 40. 8. Joh. 19. 34. Heb. 10. 7.

4. The Ark had the Name of God put upon it; yea it was called the Strength of God, and his Glory, though made of Wood. And Christ is God both in Name and Nature, though made Flesh; yea more, made to be Sin for us, 2 Sam. 6. 2. 2 Chron. 6. 14. Chap. 13. 6. Joh. 1. 14. Rom. 9. 5. 2 Cor. 5. 21.

5. The Ark was carried upon Men's Shoulders this Way and that, to shew how Christ should be carried and preached by his Apostles and Ministers, into all Parts of the World, Exod. 25. 14. 1 Cor. 15. 15. Matt. 28. 19, 20. Luke 24. 46, 47.

6. The Ark had these Testimonies of God's Presence accompanying it, as had no other Ceremony of the Law; and Christ had had those Signs and Tokens of his Presence with him, as never had Man either in Law or Gospel. This is so apparent, it needs no Proof. And now for a few Comparisons more.

1. 'Twas at that that God answered the People, when they were wont to come to enquire of him: And in these last Days, God has spoken to us by his Son, 1 Chron. 13. 3. 1 Sam. 14. 18. Heb. 1. 2. John 16. 23, 24.

2. At the presence of the Ark, the Waters of Jordan stood still, till Israel, the ransomed of the Lord, passed over from the Wilderness to Canaan: And it is by the Power and Presence of Christ, that we pass over Death: Jordan's Antitype from the Wilderness of this World to Heaven, Jos. 3. 15, 16, 17. John 11. 25. Rom. 8. 37, 38, 39. 1 Cor. 15. 54, 55, 56, 57.

3. Before the Ark the Walls of Jericho fell down, and at the Presence of Christ shall all high Towers, and strong holds, and hiding Places for Sinners be raised, and dissolved at his coming, Isa. 6. 20. Chap. 30. 25. Chap. 2. 1, 2, 13, 14, 15, 16. 2 Pet. 3. 10. Revel. 20. 11, 12, 13.

4. Before the Ark, Dagon fell, that Idol of the Philistines; and before Christ Jesus, Devils fell, those Gods of all those Idols. And he must reign till all his Enemies be put under his Feet: And until they be made his Footstool, 1 Sam. 5. 1, 2, 3, 4. Mark 5. 12. 1 Cor. 15. 25. Heb. 10. 13.

5. The Philistines were also plagued for meddling with the Ark, while they abode uncircumcised, and the Wicked will one Day be most severely plagued for their meddling with Christ, with their uncircumcised Hearts, 1 Sam. 5. 6, to 13. Psal. 50. 16. Mat. 24. 51. Chap. 25. 11, 12. Luke 13. 25, to 29.

6. God's Blessing was upon those that entertained the Ark as they should; and much more is, and will his Blessing be upon those that so imbrace and entertain his Christ, and profess his Name sincerely, 2 Sam. 6. 11. Acts 3. 26. Gal. 3. 13, 14. Mat. 19. 27, 28, 29. Luke 22. 28, 29.

7. When Uzza put forth his Hand to stay the Ark, when the Oxen shook it, as despairing of GOD's protecting of it, without a human Help, he died before the Lord: even so will all those do (without Repentance) who use unlawful Means to promote Christ's Religion, and to support it in the World, 1 Chron. 13. 9, 10. Mat. 26. 52. Revel. 13. 10.

8. The Ark, though thus dignified, was, of it self, but low; but a Cubit and a half high: Also Christ, though he was the glory of Heaven and of God, yet made himself of no Reputation, and was found in the Likeness of a Man, Exod. 25. 11, 12. Phil. 2. 6, to 11.

9. The Ark had a Crown of Gold round about upon it, To shew how Christ is crowned by his Saints by Faith, and shall be crowned by them in Glory, for all the good he hath done for them, as also how all Crowns shall one Day stoop to him, and be set upon his Head. This is shewed in the Type, Zech. 6. 11, 14. and in the Antitype, Revel. 4. 10. Chap. 19. 12.

10. The Ark was over-laid with gold within, and without. To shew, that Christ was perfect in inward Grace; and outward Life; in Spirit, and in Righteousness, John 1. 12, 13, 14. 1 Pet. 2. 22.

11. The Ark was placed under the Mercy Seat, to shew that Jesus Christ, as Redeemer, brings and bears, as it were upon his Shoulders, the Mercy of God to us, even in the Body of his Flesh, thorough Death, Exod. 25. 21. Ephes. 4. 23. Chap. 5. 1, 2.

12. When the Ark was removed far from the People, the godly went mourning after it; And when Christ is hid, or taken from us, then we mourn in those Days, 2 Sam. 7. 2. Mark 2. 19, 20. Luke 5. 34, 35. John 16. 20, 21, 22.

13. All Israel had the Ark again, after their Mourning-time was over: And Christ, after his People have sorrowed for him a while, will see them again, and their Hearts shall rejoice, John 16. 1, 2, 3, 20, 21, 22.

By all these things, and many more, that might be mentioned, it is most evident, that the Ark of the Testimony was a Type of Jesus Christ; and take notice a little of that which follows; namely, that the Ark at last arrived to the Place most Holy, Heb. 9. 3, 4.

That is, after its Wanderings, for the Ark was made first to wander like a Non-inhabitant, from place to place; now hither, and then thither, now in the Hands of Enemies, and then abused by Friends; yea it was caused to rove from place to place, as that of which the World was weary. I need instance to you for proof, none other place, than the 5th, 6th, and 7th, Chapters of the first Book of Samuel: And answerable to this, was our dear Lord Jesus posted backwards and forwards, hither and thither, by the Force of the Rage of his Enemies.

1. He was hunted into Egypt so soon as he was born, Matt. 2.

2. Then he was driven to live in Galilee, the space of many Years.

3. Also when he shewed himself to Israel, They drove him sometimes into the Wilderness, sometimes into the Desert, sometimes into the Sea, and sometimes into the Mountains, and still in every of these places he was either haunted, or hunted by new Enemies.

And last of all, the Pharisees plot for his Life, Judas sells him, the Priests buy him, Peter denies him, his Enemies mock, scourge, buffet, and much abuse him. In fine, fine, they get him condemned, and crucified, and buried; but at last God commanded, and took him to his Place, even within the Vail, and sets him to bear up the Mercy-Seat, where he is to this very Day, being our Ark to save us, as Noah's did him, as Moses did him; Yea better, as none but Christ doth save his own.

LXII. Of the placing of the Ark in the Holiest, or Inner Temple.

1. THE Ark as we have said, and as the Text declares, when carried to its rest, was placed in the inner Temple, or in the most holy Place, even under the Wings of the Cherubims. And the Priests brought in the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord unto his Place, to the Oracle of the House, unto the most holy Place, even under the Wings of the Cherubims, Exod. 26. 33. Chap. 39. 35. 1 Kings 8. 3. 2 Chron. 5. 7.

2. Before this, as was said afore, the Ark was carried from place to place, and caused to dwell in a Tent under Curtains, as all our Fathers did. To shew that Christ, as we, was made for a Time to wander in the World, in order to his being possessor of Glory, 2 Sam. 7. 1, 2, 6. Heb. 11. 9. Jo. 1. 10. Chap. 16. 28. Chap. 3. 13.

3. But now, when the Ark was brought into the Holiest, 'tis said to be brought into its Place. This World then was not Christ his Place, he was not from beneath, he came from his Father's House, wherefore while here, he was not at his Place, nor could until he ascended up where he was before, John 8. 23. Chap. 16. 28. Chap. 6. 62. Chap. 3. 13.

4. Christ's proper Place therefore is the Holiest. His proper Place, as God, as Priest, as Prophet, as King, and as the Advocate of his People. Here, with us, he has no more to do, in Person, as Mediator. If he were on Earth, he should not be a Priest, &c. His Place and Work is now above with his Father, and before the Angels, Acts 5. 31. 1 Pet. 3. 22. Heb. 4. 14. Chap. 8. 4. Chap. 9. 24. 1 John 2. 1. 2. Revel. 1. 1, 2.

5. 'Tis said, the Ark was brought to the Oracle of the House. Solomon was not content to say, it was brought into the Holiest; but he saith, his Place was the Oracle, the holy Oracle, that is, the Place of hearing. For he, when he ascended, had somewhat to say to God on the behalf of his People. To the Oracle, that is, to the Place of revealing; For he also was there to receive, and from thence to reveal to his Church on Earth something that could not be made manifest, but from this holy Oracle. There therefore he is with the two Tables of Testimony in his Heart, as perfectly kept; he also is there with the whole fulfilling of the Ceremonial Law in his side, shewing and pleading the Perfection of his Righteousness, and the Merit of his Blood with his Father, and to receive and to do us good, who believe in him, how well pleased the Father is, with what he has done in our behalf.

6. Into the most holy Place. By these words is shewed, whither also the Ark went, when it went to take up its rest. And in that this Ark was a Type of Christ in this, it is to shew or further manifest, that what Christ doth now in Heaven, he doth it, before his Father's Face. Yea, it intimates that Christ even there makes his appeals to God, concerning the Worth of what he did on Earth, to God the Judge of all; I say, whether he ought not for his suffering sake, to have granted to him his whole desire, as Priest and Advocate for his People.

Wilt thou, said Festus to Paul, go up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these Things before me? Acts 25. 9. Why, this our blessed Jesus was willing when here, to go up to Jerusalem to be judged; and being misjudged of there, he made his appeal to God, and is now gone thither, even into the holy Place, even to him that is Judge of all, for his Verdict upon his doing; and whether the Souls for whom he became undertaker, to bring them to Glory, have not by him a right to the Kingdom of Heaven.

7. Under the Wings of the Cherubims. This doth further confirm our Words; for having appealed from Earth to Heaven, as the Ark was set under the Wings of the Cherubims, so he in his interceding with God, and pleading his Merits for us, doth it in the presence and hearing of all the Angels of Heaven.

And thus much of the Ark of the Covenant, and of its Antitype; We come next to speak of the Mercy-seat.

LXIII. Of the Mercy-seat, and how it was placed in the holy Temple.

THE Mercy-seat was made in the Wilderness, but brought up by Solomon, after the Temple was built, with the rest of the holy Things, 2 Chron. 5. 2, to 10.

The Mercy-seat, as I have shewed of the Ark, was but low, Two Cubits and a half was the Length, and a Cubit and a half the Breadth thereof. But the height thereof, was without measure.

1. The Length and Breadth of the Mercy-seat is the same with that of the Ark; perhaps to shew us that the Length and Breadth of the Mercy of God to his Elect, is the same with the Length and Breadth of the Merits of Christ, Exod. 25. 10, 17.

Therefore we are said to be justified in him, blest'd in him, even according to the purpose which God purposed in him.

2. But

2. But in that the Mercy-seat is without measure, as to the height, it is to shew, that, would God extend it, it is able to reach, even them that fall from Heaven, and to save all that ever lived on Earth, even all that are now in Hell. For there is, not only Breadth enough for them that shall be saved, but Bread enough and to spare, Luke 15. 17.

And thou shalt, says God, put the Mercy-seat above upon the Ark. Thus he said to Moses, and this was the Place which David assigned for it, Exod. 25. 21. 1 Chron. 28. 11.

Now its being by God's Ordinance placed thus, doth teach us many Things.

1. That Mercy's Foundation to us is Christ. The Mercy-seat was set upon the Ark of the Testimony, and there it rested to us-ward. Justice would not, could not have suffered us to have had any benefit by Mercy, had it not found an Ark, a Christ to rest upon. Deliver him, saith God, from going down into the Pit, I have found a Ransom, Job 33. 24.

2. In that it was placed above, it doth shew also that Christ was of Mercies ordaining, a Fruit of Mercy. Mercy is above, is the Ordainer; God is love, and sent of love his Son to be the Saviour, and Propitiation for our Sins, John 3. 16. 1 John 4. 10.

3. In that the Mercy-seat, and Ark, was thus joined together, it also shews, that without Christ, Mercy doth not act. Hence, when the Priest came of old to God for Mercy, he did use to come into the holy Place with Blood; yea, and did use to sprinkle it upon the Mercy-seat, and before it seven times. Take away the Ark, and the Mercy-seat will fall, or come greatly down at least: So take away Christ, and the Flood-gate of Mercy is let down, and the current of Mercy stopt. This is true, for so soon as Christ shall leave off to Mediate, will come the Eternal Judgment.

4. Again, In that the Mercy-seat, was set above upon the Ark, it teacheth us to know, that Mercy can look down from Heaven, though the Law stand by, and looks on; but then it must be in Christ, as kept there and fulfilled by him for us. The Law out of Christ is terrible, as a Lion, the Law in him is meek as a Lamb. The reason is, for that it finds in him enough to answer for all their faults, that come to God for Mercy by him. Christ is the end of the Law for Righteousness, and if that be true, the Law for that can look no further, whoever comes to God by him. The Law did use to sentence terribly, until it was put into the Ark to be kept: But after it was said it is there to be kept, we read not of it as afore, 1 Kings 8. 9. 2 Chron. 5. 10. Rom. 10. 4.

5. Let them then that come to God for Mercy, be sure to come to him by the Ark, Christ. For grace, as it descends to us from above the Mercy-seat, so that Mercy-seat doth rest upon the Ark. Wherefore Sinner, come thou for Mercy that Way: For there, if thou meetest with the Law, it can do thee no harm: Nor can Mercy, shouldest thou elsewhere meet it, do thee good.

Come therefore, and come boldly to the Throne of Grace, this Mercy-seat, thus born up by the Ark, and obtain Mercy, and find Grace to help in time of need, Heb. 4. ult.

Wherefore the thus placing of Things in the Holiest, is admirable to behold in the Word of God. For that indeed is the Glass, by, and through which we must behold this Glory of the Lord. Here we see the reason of Things: Here we see how a just God can have to do, and that in a Way of Mercy, with one that has sinned against him; It is because the Law has been kept by the Lord Jesus Christ. For as you see the Mercy-seat stands upon the Ark of the Covenant, and there God acts in a Way of Grace towards us, Exod. 25. 17, to 23.

LXIV. Of the Living Waters of the Inner Temple.

ALTHOUGH in the holy Relation of the Building of the Temple, no mention is made of these Waters, but only of the Mount on which, and the Materials with which the King did build it; Yet it seems to me, that in that Mount, and there too, where the Temple was built, there was a Spring of living Water. This seems more than probable by Ezek. 47. 1. where he saith, He brought me to the Door of the House, and behold, Waters issued out from under the Threshold of the House Eastward, for the Fore-front of the House stood toward the East, and the Waters came down from under, from the right side of the House, at the South side of the Altar.

So, Again, Joel 3. 18. And a Fountain shall come forth of the House of the Lord, and shall Water the Valley of Shittim. Nor was the Spring, where-ever was the first Appearance of these holy Waters, but in the Sanctuary, which is the holiest of all (Ezek. 47. ver. 12.) where the Mercy-seat stood; which in Revelations is called, The Throne of God, and of the Lamb, Chap. 22. 1, 2.

This also is that which the Prophet Zechariah means, when he says, Living Waters shall go forth from Jerusalem, half of them toward the former Sea, and half of them toward the hinder Sea, &c. Zech. 14. 8. They are said to go forth from Jerusalem, because they came down to the City from out of the Sanctuary which stood in Jerusalem.

This is that which in another place is called a River of Water of Life, because it comes comes forth from the Throne, and because it was at the head of it, as I supposed, used in and about Temple Worship. 'Twas with this, I think, that the Molten Sea and the ten Lavers were filled, and in which the Priests washed their Hands and Feet when they went into the Temple to do service; and that also in which they washed the Sacrifices before they offered them to God; Yea, I presume, all the washings and rinsings about their Worship, was with this Water.

This Water is said in Ezekiel and Revelations, to have the Tree of Life grow on the Banks of it, Ezek. 47. Rev. 22. and was a Type of the Word and Spirit of God, by which, both Christ himself sanctified himself, in order to his Worship, as high Priest; And also this Water is that which heals all those that shall be saved; and by which, they being sanctified thereby also, do all their works of Worship and Service acceptably, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

This Water therefore is said to go forth into the Sea, the World, and to heal its Fish, the Sinners therein; Yea, this is that Water of which Christ Jesus our Lord saith, Whosoever shall drink thereof, shall live for ever, Ezek. 47. 8, 9, 10. Zech. 14. 8.

LXV. Of the Chains which were in the Oracle or Inner Temple.

AS there were Chains on the Pillars that stood before the Porch of the Temple, and in the first House; so, like unto them, there was Chains in the Holiest, here called the Oracle.

These Chains were not Chains in shew, or as carved on Wood, &c. but Chains indeed; and that of Gold; And they were prepared to make a Partition before the Oracle within, 1 Kings 6. 21. 2 Chron. 3. 16.

I told you before, that the Holiest was called the Oracle, not because in a strict Sense the whole of it was so, but because such answer of God was there, as was not in the outward Temple; but I think that the Ark and Mercy-seat, was indeed more specially that called the Oracle; for there will I meet with thee, said God, and from above that will I commune with thee. When David said, I lift my Hands toward thy holy Oracle; he meant not so much towards the holiest House, as toward the Mercy-seat that was therein. Or as he saith in the Margin, Toward the Oracle of thy Sanctuary, Psal. 28. 2.

1. When therefore he saith before the Oracle, he means, these Chains were put in the most holy Place, before the Ark and Mercy-seat, to give to Aaron and his Sons to understand, that an Additional Glory was there; For the Ark and Mercy-seat were preferred before that holy House it self, even as Christ and the Grace of God is preferred before the highest Heavens. The Lord is high above all Nations, and his Glory is above the Heavens, Psal. 113. 4.

So then, the Partition that was made in this House by these Chains, these Golden-Chains, was not so much to divide the Holy from the Place most holy, as to shew that there is in the holiest House, that, which is yet more worthy than it.

The Holiest, was a Type of Heaven, but the Ark and Mercy-seat were a Type of Christ, and of the Mercy of God to us by him; and I trow, any Man will conclude, If he knows what he says, that the God and Christ of Heaven are more excellent, than the House they dwell in. Hence David said again, Whom have I in Heaven but thee? For thou art more Excellent than they, Psal. 73. 25.

For though that which is called Heaven, would serve some; yea, though God himself was out on't, yet none but the God of Heaven will satisfy a truly gracious Man: 'Tis God that the Soul of this Man thirsteth for; 'Tis God that is his exceeding Joy, Psal. 42. 2. Psal. 63. 1. Psal. 143. 6. Psal. 17. ult. Psal. 43. 4.

These Chains then, as they made this Partition in the most holy Place, may teach us, that when we shall be glorified in Heaven, we shall yet, even then, and there, know that there will continue an infinite Disproportion between God and us. The golden Chains that are there, will then distinguish the Creator from the Creature.

For we, even we which shall be saved, shall yet retain our own Nature, and shall still continue finite beings; yea, and shall there also see a Disproportion between our Lord, our Head, and us; for though now we are, and also then shall be like him, as to his Manhood; yea, and shall be like him also, as being glorified with his Glory; yet he shall transcend and go beyond us, as to Degree and Splendor, as far as ever the highest King on Earth did shine above the meanest Subject that dwelt in his Kingdom.

Chains have of old been made use of as notes of Distinction, to shew us who are bond Men, and who free: Yea, they shall at the Day of Judgment be a note of Distinction of bad and good; even as here they will distinguish the Heavens from God, and the Creature from the Creator, 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6. Mat. 22. 13.

True, They are Chains of Sin and Wrath, but these Chains of Gold; yet these Chains, even these also, will keep Creatures in their place, that the Creator may have his Glory, and receive those acknowledgments there from them, which is due unto his Majesty, Rev. 4. and Chap. 5. 11, to 15.

LXVI. Of

LXVI. Of the high Priest, and of his Office in the Inner-Temple.

WHEN things were thus ordained in the House most Holy, then went the high Priest in thither, according as he was appointed, to do his Office, which was to burn Incense in his golden Censer, and to sprinkle with his Finger the Blood of his Sacrifice, for the People, upon and above the Mercy-seat, Exod. 30. 7, 8, 9, 10. Levit. 16. 11, to 15.

Now for this special Work of his, he had peculiar Preparations.

1. He was to be washed in Water.
2. Then he was to put on his holy Garments.
3. After that he was to be anointed with holy Oil.
4. Then an Offering was to be offered for him, for the further fitting of him for his Office.
5. The Blood of this Sacrifice must be put, some of it, upon his right Ear, some on the Thumb of his right Hand, and some on the great Toe of his right Foot.

This done, some more of the Blood, with the Anointing Oil, must be sprinkled upon him, and upon his Garment; for after this manner must he be Consecrated to his Work, as High Priest, Exod. 29. Chap.

His being washed in Water, was to shew the Purity of Christ's Humanity.

His Curious Robes was a Type of all the Perfections of Christ's Righteousness.

The holy Oil that was poured on his Head, was to shew how Christ was Anointed with the Holy Ghost unto his Work, as Priest.

The Sacrifice of his Consecration was a Type of that Offering Christ offered in the Garden, when he mixed his Sweat with his own Blood, and Tears, and Cries, when he prayed to him that was able to save him; and was heard in that he feared; for with his Blood, as was Aaron with the Blood of the Bullock that was slain for him, was this Blessed One besmeared from Head to Foot, when his Sweat, as great drops or clodders of Blood, fell down from his Head, and Face, and whole Body, to the Ground, Luke 22. 44. Heb. 10. 20.

When Aaron was thus prepared, then he offered his Offering for the People, and carried the Blood within the Vail, Levit. 16. The which Christ Jesus also answered, when he offered his own Body without the Gate, and then carried his Blood into the Heavens, and sprinkled it before the Mercy-seat, Heb. 13. 11. 12. Chap. 9. 11, 12, 24.

For Aaron was a Type of Christ; his Offering, a Type of Christ's offering his Body; the Blood of the Sacrifice, a Type of the Blood of Christ; his Garments, a Type of Christ's Righteousness; the Mercy-seat, a Type of the Throne of Grace; the Incense, a Type of Christ's Praise; and the sprinkling of the Blood of Christ's upon the Mercy-seat, a Type of Christ's pleading the Virtue of his Sufferings for us in the presence of God in Heaven.

Wherefore holy Brethren, partakers of the Heavenly Calling, consider the Apostle and high Priest of our Profession, Christ Jesus: And seeing we have a great high Priest, that is passed into the Heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our Profession; for we have not an high Priest, which cannot be touched with the feeling of our Infirmities, but was in all points tempted as we are, yet without Sin. Let us therefore come boldly to the Throne of Grace, that we may obtain Mercy, and find Grace to help in time of need: For every high Priest taken from among Men, is ordained for Men, in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both Gifts and Sacrifices for Sin, who can have Compassion on the Ignorant, and on them that are out of the way, for that he himself also is compassed with Infirmary.

This then is our high Priest; and he was made so, not after the Law of a carnal Commandment, but after the Power of an endless Life: For Aaron and his Sons were made Priests without an Oath, but this with an Oath by him that said unto him, The Lord Swore, and will not repent; Thou art a Priest for ever, after the Order of Melchisedec.

By so much was Jesus made the Surety of a better Testament; and they truly were many Priests, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of Death; but this Man, because he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable Priesthood. Wherefore he is able to save them to the uttermost that come to God by him, seeing he ever-liveth to make Intercession for them.

For such an High-Priest became us, who is Holy, Harmless, Undeiled, Separate from Sinners, and made higher than the Heavens; who needeth not daily, as those high Priests, to offer up Sacrifice, first for his own Sins, and then for the Sins of the People; for this he did once, when he offered up himself. For the Law maketh Men high Priests which have Infirmities; but the Word of an Oath which was since the Law, maketh the Son, who is consecrated for evermore.

Now of the Things which we have spoken, this is the Sum; We have such an high Priest who is set down on the right Hand of the Throne of the Majesty in the Heavens. A Minister of the Sanctuary, and of the New Tabernacle, which the Lord pitched and not Man. For every high Priest is ordained to offer Sacrifices, wherefore it is of Necessity that this Man have somewhat also to offer. For if he were on Earth, he should not be a high Priest, seeing that there are Priests that offer Gifts according to the Law. Who serve unto the Example, and Shadow of heavenly Things; as Moses was admonished when he was about to make the Tabernacle: For see, saith saith he, that thou make all Things according to the Pattern shewed to thee in the Mount.

But Christ being come an high Priest of good things to come; by a greater and more perfect Tabernacle; that is to say, not of this Building: Neither by the Blood of Bulls and Calves, but by his own Blood he entered in once into the holy Place, having obtained Eternal Redemption for us. For if the Blood of Goats, Bulls, and Asbes of an Heifer sprinkling the Unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the Flesh: How much more shall the Blood of Christ, who through the Eternal Spirit offered himself without Spot to God, purge your Consciences from dead Works, to serve the living God.

For Christ is not entered into the holy Places made with Hands, which are the Figures of the true: But into Heaven it self, now to appear in the presence of God for us. Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high Priest entered into the Holiest every Year with the Blood of others, for then must he often have suffered since the Foundation of the World. But now once in the End of the World hath he appeared to put away Sin by the Sacrifice of himself. And as it is appointed unto Men, once to die; and after this, the Judgment: So Christ was once offered to bear the Sins of many: And to them that look for him, shall he appear the second time without Sin, unto Salvation, Heb. 3. 1, 2. Chap. 4. 14, 15. Chap. 5. 1, 2. Chap. 7. 16, to 29. Chap. 8. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Chap. 9. 10, to 29.

LXVII. Of the High Priests going into the Holiest alone.

AS it was the Privilege of the high Priest to go into the Holiest alone; so there was something of mystery also; to which I shall speak a little: There shall, says God, be no Man in the Tabernacle of the Congregation, when Aaron goeth in to make an Atonement in the holy Place, until he comes out, and have made an Atonement for himself and for his Household, and for all the Congregation of Israel, Lev. 16. 17, &c.

The Reason is, For that Christ is Mediator alone; he trod the Wine-press alone, and of the People there was none with him, to help him there, Isa. 63. 3. 1 Tim. 2. 5.

Of the People there was none to help him to bear his Cross, or in the Management of the first Part of his Priestly Office: Why then should there be any to share with him in his executing of the second Part thereof. Besides, he that helps an Intercessor, must himself be innocent, or in favour, upon some grounds not depending on the worth of the Intercessor. But as to the Intercession of Christ, who can come in to help upon the account of such innocency or worth? Not the highest Angel; for there is none such but One, wherefore he must do that alone. Hence 'tis said he went in alone, is there alone, and there interceeds alone. And this is manifest, not only in the Type, Aaron: But in the Antitype, Christ Jesus, Heb. 6. 19, 20. Chap. 9. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 23, 24.

I do not say that there is no Man in Heaven but Jesus Christ; but I say, he is there to make Intercession for us alone. Yea the holy Text says more:

I go, saith Christ, to prepare a Place for you; and if I go and prepare a Place for you: I will come again and take you to my self, that where I am, there ye may be also, Joh. 14. 1, 2, 3, 4.

This Text seems to insinuate that Christ is in the Holiest, or highest Heavens alone; and that he there alone must be until he has finished his Work of Intercession: For not till then, he comes again to take us to himself.

Let us grant Christ the prehemineny in this, as also in all other things; for he is Intercessor for his Church, and makes it for them in the Holiest alone. 'Tis said he is the Light that no Man can approach unto.

LXVIII. Of the high Priests going in thither but once a Year.

AS the high Priest went into the Holiest, when he went thither alone: So to do that Work, he went in thither but once a Year. Thou shalt not come at all times, said God to him, into the holy Place, within the Vail, before the Mercy-seat, which is upon the Ark, that thou die not, Levit. 16. 2.

And as he was to go in thither but once a Year, so not then neither, unless clothed and adorned with his Aaronical holy Robes. Then he was to be clothed, as I hinted before, with the holy Robes, the Frontlet of Gold upon his Forehead, the Names of the twelve Tribes upon his Breast, and the jingling Bells upon the Skirts of his Garment; nor would all this do, unless he went in thither with Blood, Exod. 28. Levit. 16.

Now this once a Year, the Apostle taketh special notice of, and makes great use of it. Once a Year, saith he, this high Priest went in thither: once a Year, that is, to shew that Christ should once in the End of the World, go into Heaven it self to make Intercession there for us. For by this Word, Year, he shews the Term and Time of the World is meant, and by once in that Year, he means, once in the End of the World.

Not, saith he, that he should offer himself often: as the high Priest entered into the holy Place every Year with the Blood of others: For then must he often have suffered, since the Foundation of the World. But now once in the End of the World, hath he appeared to put away Sin, by the Sacrifice of himself, Heb. 9.

And having thus once offered his Sacrifice without the Vail, he is now gone into the Holiest

Holiest to perfect his Work of Mediation for us: Not into the holy Places made with Hands, which are the Figures of the True, but into Heaven it self; Now to appear in the presence of God for us.

Now if our Lord Jesus is gone indeed, Now to appear in the presence of God for us: And if this now be the once a Year, that the Type speaks of. The once in the End of the World, as our Apostle says; then it follows, that the People of God should all stand waiting for his Benediction, that to them he shall bring with him, when he shall return from thence. Wherefore he adds, Christ was once offered to bury the Sins of many, and to them that look for him shall he appear the second time without Sin unto Salvation.

This therefore shews us the Greatness of the Work that Christ has to do at the right Hand of God, for that he stays there so long. He accomplished all the first part of his Priesthood in less than forty Years, if you take in the making of his holy Garments and all; but about this second Part thereof, he has been above in Heaven above sixteen hundred Years, and yet has not done.

This therefore calls for Faith and Patience in Saints, and by this he also tries the World; so that they in mocking manner begin to say already. Where is the Promise of his coming, (2 Pet. 3. 4.) But I say again, We must look and wait.

If the People waited for Zacharias, and wondered that he stayed so long, because he stayed in the holy Place somewhat longer than they expected. No marvel, if the Faith of the World about Christ's coming is fled and gone long ago, yea, and that the Children also are put to wait, since a Scripture little while doth prove so long: For that which the Apostle saith, Yet a little while, doth prove to some to be a very long little, John 16. Heb. 10. 37.

True, Zacharias had then to do with Angels, and that made him stay so long. O but Jesus is with God, before him, in his Presence, talking with him, swallowed up in him, and with his Glory, and that's one Cause he stays so long. He is there also pleading his Blood for his tempted Ones, and interceding for all his Elect, and waits there till all his be fitted for, and ready to enter into Glory: I say, he is there, and there must be till then: And this is another Reason why he doth stay the time we count so long.

And indeed 'tis a wonder to me, that Jesus Christ our Lord should once think, now he is there, of returning hither again, considering the ill treatment he met with here before. But what will not Love do? Surely he will never touch the Ground again, had he not a People here that cannot be made perfect, but by his coming to them. He also is made Judge of quick and dead, and will get him Glory in the ruin of them that hate him.

His People are as himself to him. Can a loving Husband abide to be always from a beloved Spouse? Besides, as I said, he is to pay the wicked off, for all their Wickedness, and that in that very plat, where they have committed it. Wherefore the day appointed for this is set, and he will, and shall come quickly to do it.

For however, the time may seem long to us, yet according to the reckoning of God, it is but a little while since he went into the Holiest to interceed. A thousand Tears with the Lord is but as one Day, and after this manner of counting he has not been gone yet full two Days into the Holiest. The Lord is not slack concerning his Promise, as some Men count slackness; he will come quickly, and will not tarry, 2 Pet. 3. Heb. 10. 37.

LXIX. Of the Cherubims, and of their being placed over the Mercy-seat in the inner Temple.

THERE was also Cherubims in the most holy Place, which were set on high above the Mercy-seat. See 1 Kings 6. 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28.

1. These are called by the Apostles, The Cherubims of Glory covering the Mercy-seat, Heb. 9. 5.

2. These Cherubims were Figures of the Angels of God, as in other places we have proved.

3. 'Tis said these Cherubims were made of Image-work, and that in such manner, as that they could, as some think, move their Wings by Art: Wherefore 'tis said they stretched forth their Wings; the Wings of the Cherubims spread themselves; and that the Cherubims spread forth their Wings over the place of the Ark, and the Staves thereof above, 1 Kings 6. 27. 2 Chron. 3. 13. Chap. 5. 8.

4. I read also of these Cherubims, that they had Chariots and Wheels; by which is taught us how ready and willing the Angels are to fetch us when commanded, unto the Paradise of God; for these Chariots, were Types of the Bosoms of the Angels; and these Wheels, of the quickness of their Motion to come for us when sent. The Chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of Angels; the Lord is among them, as in Sinai, in the holy Place, 1 Chron. 20. 28. Ezek. 16. 9, 15, 16, 18, 19, 28. 1 Kings 6. 17. Psal. 68. 17. 2 Kings 2. 11. Dan. 9. 20.

5. What difference, if any, there is between Cherubims and Seraphims, into that I shall not now enquire; though I believe that there is diverse Orders and Degrees of Angels in the Heavens, as there are Degrees and diverse Orders among Men in the World. But that these Cherubims were Figures of the holy Angels, their being thus placed placed in the holy Oracle, doth declare; for their Dwelling-place is Heaven, though they, for our sakes, are conversant in the World, Heb. 1.

6. 'Tis said, that these Cherubims in this holy Place, did stand upon their Feet. To shew,

1. That the Angels of Heaven are not fallen from their Station, as the other Angels are.

2. To shew also that they are always ready at God's bidding, to run with swiftness to do his pleasure.

3. To shew also that they shall continue in their Station, being therein confirmed by Jesus Christ, by whom all Things consist, Col. 1.

7. 'Tis said, their Faces were inward, looking one to another, yet withal, somewhat ascending, to shew that the Angels both behold, and wonder at the Mysteries of Grace, as 'tis displayed to Us-ward, from off the Mercy-seat. The Faces of the Cherubims shall look one to another; toward the Mercy-seat shall the Faces of the Cherubims be, Exod. 25. 20. 2 Chron. 3. 13. 1 Pet. 1. 12. Ephes. 3. 10.

1. Towards the Mercy-seat: They are desirous to see it, and how from thence (I say) Mercy doth look towards us.

2. They look one towards another, to shew that they agree to rejoice in the Salvation of our Souls, Luke 15. 10.

3. They are said to stand above the Mercy-seat (perhaps) to shew that the Angels have not need of those Acts of Mercy and Forgiveness as we have, who stand below, and are Sinners. They stand above it, they are holy. I do not say, they have No need that the Goodness of God should be extended to them, for 'tis by that they have been, and are preserved; but they need not to be forgiven, for they have committed no Iniquity.

4. They stand there also with Wings stretched out, to shew how ready, if need be, the Angels are to come from Heaven to preach this Gospel to the World, Luke 2. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14.

5. 'Tis said in this, their thus standing, their Wings did reach from Wall to Wall; from one Side of this holy House, to the other, to shew, that All the Angels within the Boundaries of the Heavens, with one Consent, and one Mind, are ready to come down to help, and serve, and do for God's Elect at his Command.

'Tis said also that their Wings are stretched on high, to shew that they are only delighted in those Duties, which are enjoined them by the high and lofty One, and not inclined, no not to serve the Saints in their Sensual or Fleshly Designs. It may be also to shew that they are willing to take their Flight from one end of Heaven, to the other, to serve God and his Church for good,

Matt. 13. 41, 49. Chap. 24. 31. Chap. 25. 31. 2 Thes. 1. 7, 8.

LXX. Of the Figures that were upon the Walls of the inner Temple.

THE Wall of the inner Temple, which was a Type of Heaven, was, as I have already told you, cieled with Cedar from the Bottom to the Top. Now by the Vision of Ezekiel, it is said, this Wall was carved with Cherubims and Palm-Trees. So that a Palm-Tree was between a Cherub, and every Cherub had two Faces: So that the Face of a Man was toward the Palm-Tree on the one Side, and the Face of a young Lion toward the Palm-Tree on the other Side. It was made thorow all the House round about; from the Ground to above the Door, were the Cherubims and the Palm-Trees made, Ezek. 41. 17, 18, 19, 20.

1. As to these Cherubims and Palm-Trees, I have already told you what I think them to be Figures of. The Cherubims are Figures of the holy Angels, and the Palm-Trees of Upright Ones: We therefore here are to Discourse only of the placing of them in the Heavens.

2. Now you see the Palm-Trees in the Holiest are placed between a Cherub and a Cherub, round about the House, which methinks should be to signify, that the Saints shall not there live by Faith and Hope, as here, but in the immediate Enjoyment of God; for to be placed between the Cherubims, is to be placed where God dwells; for holy Writ says plainly, He dwells between the Cherubims, even where, here 'tis said, these Palm-Trees, or Upright Ones are placed, 1 Sam. 4. 4. 2 Kings 19. 15. 1 Chron. 13. 6. Psal. 80. 1. Isa. 37. 16.

The Church on Earth, is called God's House, and he will dwell in it for ever; and Heaven it self is called God's House, and We shall dwell in it for ever; and that between the Cherubims. This is more than Grace, this is Grace and Glory, Glory indeed.

3. To dwell between the Cherubims, may also be to shew that there we shall be equal to the Angels. Mark, Here's a Palm-Tree and a Cherub, a Palm-Tree and a Cherub. Here we are a little lower, but there we shall not be a whit behind the very Chief of them. A Palm-Tree and a Cherub, an Upright One, between the Cherubs, will then be round about the House; we shall be placed in the same rank, neither can they die any more, for they are equal to the Angels, Luke 20. 36.

4. The Palm-Trees thus placed, may be also to shew us, that the Elect of God shall there take up the Vacancies of the Fallen Angels; they for Sin were cast down from the holy Heavens; and we by Grace shall be caught up thither, and be placed between a Cherub and a Cherub. When I say their places, I do not mean the Fickleness of that State, that they for want of Electing Love did stand in while in Glory; for the Heavens, by the Blood of Christ, is now to us become a purchased Possession; wherefore, as we shall have their place in the heavenly Kingdom, so by virtue of Redeeming Blood, we shall there abide, and go no more out, for by that Means that Kingdom will stand to us unshaken, Heb. 9. 12. Chap. 12. 22, 23, 24, 28. Revel. 3. 12.

5. These Palm-Trees, I say, seem to take their places, who for Sin were cast from thence. The Elect therefore take that place in possession, but a better Crown for ever. Thus Israel possessed that of the Canaanites, and David, Saul's Kingdom, and Matthias, the Apostleship of Judas, Acts 1. 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26.

6. Nor were the Habitations which the Fallen Angels lost, excepting that which was excepted before, at all inferiour to theirs that stood; for their Captain and Prince is called Son of the Morning, for he was the Antitype thereof, Isa. 14. 12.

7. Thus you see they were placed from the Ground, up to above the Door; that is, from the lowest to the highest Angel there. For as there are great Saints and small ones in the Church on Earth, so there are Angels of divers Degrees in Heaven, some greater than some; but the smallest Saint, when he gets to Heaven, shall have an Angel's Dignity, an Angel's Place; from the Ground, you find a Palm-Tree, between a Cherub and a Cherub.

8. And every Cherub had two Faces, so here; but I read in Chap. 10. that they had four Faces apiece: The first, was the Face of a Cherubim: The second, the Face of a Man; The third, the Face of a Lion: And the fourth, the Face of an Eagle.

9. They had two Faces apiece, not to shew that they were of a double Heart, for their Appearance and themselves was the same, and they went every one straight forward, Ezek. 10. 22.

These two Faces then was to shew here the quickness of their Apprehension, and their Terribleness to execute the Mind of God. The Face of a Man, signifies them Masters of Reason: The Face of a Lion, the Terribleness of their Presence, 1 Cor. 13. 12. Judg. 13. 6.

In another place I read of their Wheels; yea, that themselves, their whole Bodies, their Backs, their Hands, their Wings, and their Wheels, were full of Eyes round about, Ezek. 1. 18. Chap. 10. 12.

And this is to shew us how knowing and quick-sighted they are in all Providences and dark Dispensations, and how nimble in apprehending the mischievous Designs of the Enemies of God's Church, and so how able they are to Undermine them; and for as much also as they have the Face of a Lion, we by that are shewed how full of Power they are to kill and to destroy, when God says go forth and do so.

Now with these we must dwell, and cohabit, a Palm-Tree and a Cherub; a Palm-Tree and a Cherub, must be from the Ground to above the Door, round about the House; the Heavens.

So that the Face of a Man was toward the Palm-Tree on the one Side, and the Face of a young Lion toward the Palm-Tree on the other Side.

By these two Faces may be also shewed, that we in the Heavens shall have Glory sufficient to Familiarize us to the Angels. Their Lion-like looks, with which they used to fright the biggest Saint on Earth, as you have it, Gen. 32. 30. Judg. 13, 15, 22. shall then be accompanied with the Familiar Looks of a Man. Then Angels and Men shall be Fellows, and have to do with each as such.

Thus you see something of that little I have found in the Temple of God.

The Acceptable Sacrifice:

OR, THE

Excellency of a Broken Heart:

SHEWING THE Nature, Signs, and Proper Effects of a Contrite Spirit.

With a PREFACE prefixed thereunto by an eminent Minister of the Gospel in LONDON.

A PREFACE to the Reader.

THE Author of the ensuing Discourse (Now with God, reaping the Fruit of all his Labour, Diligence and Success in his Master's Service) did experience in himself (through the Grace of God,) the Nature, Excellency and Comfort of a truly Broken, and Contrite Spirit. So that what is here written, is but a Transcript out of his own Heart: For God (who had much work for him to do) was still hewing and hammering him by his Word, and sometimes also by more than ordinary Temptations and Desertions: The Design, and also the Issue thereof, through God's Goodness, was the humbling and keeping of him low in his own Eyes. The truth is, (as himself sometimes acknowledged) he always needed the Thorn in the Flesh, and God in Mercy sent it him, least under his extraordinary Circumstances, he should be exalted above measure: which perhaps was the evil that did more easily beset him, than any other. But the Lord was pleased to over-rule it, to work for his good, and to keep him in that Broken frame, which is so acceptable unto him, and concerning which it is said, That he healeth the broken in Heart, and bindeth up their Wounds, Psal. 147. 3. And indeed it is a most necessary Qualification that should always be found in the Disciples of Christ, who are most eminent, and as Stars of the first Magnitude in the Firmament of the Church: Disciples in the highest form of Profession need to be thus qualified in the exercise of every Grace, and the performance of every Duty: It is that which God doth principally and more especially look after, in all our Approaches, and Accesses to him. It is to him that God will look, and with him God will dwell, who is poor, and of a Contrite Spirit, Isa. 57. 15 and 66. 2. And the reason why God will manifest so much respect to one so qualified, is, because he carries it so becomingly towards him: He comes and lies at his Feet, and discovers a quickness of Sense, and Apprehensiveness of whatever may be dishonourable and distasteful to God, Psal. 38. 4. And if the Lord doth at any time but shake his Rod over him, he comes trembling, and kisses the Rod, and says, It is the Lord, let him do what seemeth him good, 1 Sam. 3. 18. He is sensible he hath sinned and gone astray like a lost Sheep, and therefore will justify God in his severest Proceedings against him. This broken heart is also a pliable, and flexible Heart, and prepared to receive whatsoever Impressions God shall make upon it, and is ready to be moulded into any frame that should best please the Lord. He says with Samuel, Speak, Lord, for thy Servant heareth, 1 Sam. 3. 10. And with David, When thou sayest, Seek ye my Face; my Heart said unto thee, Thy Face, Lord, will I seek, Psal. 27. 8. And so with Paul, who tremblingly said, Lord, What wilt thou have me to do? Acts 9. 6.

Now therefore surely such a Heart as this is must needs be very delightful to God: He says to us, My Son give me thy Heart, Prov. 23. 16. But doubtless he means there a Broken Heart: An unbroken Heart we may keep to our selves; it is the Broken Heart which God will have us to give to him. For indeed it is all the amends that the best of us are capable of making, for all the injury we have done to God in sinning against him: We are not able to give better satisfaction for breaking God's Laws, than by breaking our own Hearts;

this is all we can do of that kind, for the Blood of Christ only must give the due and full satisfaction to the Justice of God, for what Provocations we are at any time guilty of: But all that we can do, is to accompany the acknowledgments we make of miscarriages with a broken and Contrite Spirit. Therefore we find that when David had committed those two foul Sins of Adultery and Murder, against God, he saw that all his Sacrifices signified nothing to the expiating of his Guilt; therefore he brings to God a broken Heart, which carried in it the best Expression of Indignation against himself, as of the highest respect he could shew to God, 2 Cor. 7. 11.

The Day in which we live, and the present Circumstances which the People of God, and these Nations are under, do loudly proclaim a very great necessity of being in this broken and tender frame: For who can foresee what will be the Issue of these violent Fermentations that are amongst us? Who knows what will become of the Ark of God? Therefore it is a seasonable Duty, with old Eli to sit trembling for it. Do we not also hear the sound of the Trumpet, the Alarm of Wars; and ought we not with the Prophet, cry out, My Bowels, My Bowels! I am pained at my very heart; my heart maketh a noise in me; I cannot hold my Peace, &c. Jer. 4. 19. Thus was that holy Man affected with the Consideration of what might befall Jerusalem, the Temple and Ordinances of God, &c. as the consequence of the present dark Dispensations they were under: Will not a humble posture best become us when we have humbling Providences in prospect? Mercy and Judgment seem to be struggling in the same Womb of Providence; and which will come first out, we know not: But neither of them can we comfortably meet, but with a Broken and a Contrite Spirit. If Judgment comes, Josiah's posture of Tenderness will be the best we can be found in; and also to say with David, My Flesh trembleth for fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy Judgments, Psal. 119. 120. It is very sad when God smites, and we are not grieved; which the Prophet complains of, Thou hast stricken them, but they have not grieved, &c. They have made their Faces harder than a Rock, they have refused to return, Jer. 5. 3.

But such as know the Power of his Anger, will have a deep awe of God upon their Hearts, and observing him in all his Motions, will have the greatest apprehensions of his Displeasure. So that when he is coming forth in any terrible Dispensation, they will according to their duty prepare to meet him with a humbled and broken Heart. But if he should appear to us in his Goodness, and further lengthen out the Day of our Peace and Liberty, yet still the contrite Frame will be most seasonable; then will be a proper time, with Job, to abhor our selves in dust and ashes: Job 42. 6. And to say with David, Who are we, that thou hast brought us hitherto! 2 Sam. 7. 18.

But we must still know that this broken tender Heart is not a Plant that grows in our own Soil, but is the peculiar Gift of God himself. He that made the Heart, must break the Heart: We may be under heart-breaking Providences, and yet the Heart remain altogether unbroken; as it was with Pharaoh; whose Heart, though it was under the Hammer of ten terrible Judgments, immediately succeeding one another, yet continued hardened against God. The Heart of Man is harder than Hardness it self, till God softneth and breaks it; Men move not, they relent not, let God thunder never so terribly; let God in the greatest earnest cast abroad his Firebrands, Arrows, and Death, in the most dreadful Representations of Wrath and Judgment, yet still Man trembles not, nor is any more astonished than if in all this God were but in jest till he comes and falls to work with him, and forces him to cry out, What have I done? What shall I do?

Therefore let us have recourse to him, who as he gives the new Heart, so also there-with the broken Heart. And let Mens Hearts be never so hard, if God comes once to deal effectually with them, they shall become mollified and tender; as it was with those hardened Jews, who by wicked and cruel Hands murdered the Lord of Life, though they flouted it out a great while; yet how suddenly, when God brought them under the Hammer of his Word and Spirit, in Peter's powerful Ministry, were they broken, and being pricked in their Hearts, cry'd out, Men and Brethren what shall we do? Acts 2. 37.

And the like instance we have in the Jailor, who was a most barbarous hard hearted wretch; yet when God came to deal with him, he was soon tamed, and his heart became exceeding soft and tender, Acts 16. 29, 30.

Men may speak long enough, and the Heart not at all be moved; but, The Voice of the Lord is Powerful; the Voice of the Lord is full of Majesty, and breaketh the Rocks and Cedars: He turns the Rock into a standing Water, the Flint into a Fountain of Waters. And this is a glorious Work indeed, that Hearts of Stone should be dissolved and melted into Waters of godly Sorrow, working Repentance not to be repented of, 2 Cor. 7. 10.

When God speaks effectually, the stoutest Heart must melt and yield; Wait upon God then for the softening thy Heart, and avoid whatsoever may be a means of hardning it; as the Apostle cautions the Hebrews, Take heed, lest ye be hardned through the deceitfulness of Sin, Heb. 3. 23.

Sin is deceitful, and will barden all those that indulge it; the more tender any Man is to his Lust, the more will he be hardned by it. There is a native Hardness in every Mans Heart;

Heart; and though it may be softened by Gospel means, yet if those means be afterwards neglected, the Heart will fall to its native Hardness again; as it is with the Wax and the Clay.

Therefore how much doth it behove us to keep close to God, in the use of all Gospel means, whereby our Hearts being once softned, may be always kept so? Which is best done by repeating the use of those means which were at first blessed for the softning of them.

The following Treatise may be of great use to the People of God (through his Blessing accompanying it) to keep their Hearts tender and broken, when so many after their Hardness, and impenitent Heart, are treasuring up Wrath against the Day of Wrath, Rom. 2. 5.

O let none who peruse this Book, herd with that Generation of hardned Ones, but be a Companion of all those that mourn in Zion, and whose Hearts are broken for their own, the Churches, and the Nations; who indeed are the only likely ones that will stand in the gap to divert Judgments. When Shishak King of Egypt, with a great Host came up against Judah, and having taken their frontier fenced Cities, they sat down before Jerusalem, which put them all under a great Consternation; but the King and Princes upon this humbled themselves; the Lord sends a gracious Message to them by Shemaiah the Prophet, the import whereof was, That because they humbled themselves, the Lord would not destroy them, nor pour out his Wrath upon them by the Hand of Shishak, 2 Chron. 12. 5, 6, 7.

The greater the Party is of mourning Christians, the more hope we have that the Storm impending, may be blown over, and the Blessings enjoyned may yet be continued: As long as there is a sighing Party, we may hope to be yet preserved; at least such will have the Mark set upon themselves, which shall distinguish them from those whom the Slaughtermen shall receive Commission to destroy, Ezek. 9. 4.

But I shall not further enlarge the Porch, as designing to make way for the Reader's Entrance into the House, where I doubt not but he will be pleased with the Furniture and Provision he finds in it. And I shall only further assure him, that this whole Book was not only prepared for, but also put unto the Press by the Author himself whom the Lord was pleased to remove (to the great Loss, and unexpressible Grief of many precious Souls) before the sheets could be all wrought off.

And now as I hinted in the beginning, that what was transcribed out of the Author's Heart, into the Book, may be transcribed out of the Book into the Hearts of all who shall peruse it, is the Desire and Prayer of Sept. 21, 1688.

A Lover and Honourer of all Saints as such,

George Cokeyn.

The Acceptable Sacrifice: OR, THE Excellency of a Broken Heart.

Psal. LI. 17. The Sacrifices of God, are a Broken Spirit: A Broken and a Contrite Heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

THIS Psalm is David's Penitential Psalm; It may be fitly so called, because it is a Psalm by which is manifest, the unfeigned Sorrow which he had for his horrible Sin, in defiling of Bathsheba, and slaying Uriah her Husband: A Relation at large, of which you have in the 11th and 12th of the Second of Samuel.

Many workings of Heart, as this Psalm sheweth, this poor Man had, so soon as Conviction did fall upon his Spirit; one while he cries for Mercy, then he confesses his heinous Offences, then he bewails the depravity of his Nature; sometimes he cries out, to be washed and sanctified, and then again, he is afraid that God will cast him him away from his Presence, and take his holy Spirit utterly from him: And thus he goes on till he comes to the Text, and there he stayeth his mind, finding in himself, that Heart and Spirit which God did not dislike: The Sacrifices of God, says he, are a broken Spirit; as if he should say, I thank God I have that. A Broken, and a Contrite Heart, saith he, O God, thou wilt not despise. As if he should say, I thank God I have that.

The Words consist of Two Parts.

1. An Assertion.
2. A Demonstration of that Assertion.

The Assertion is this, The Sacrifices of God are a broken Spirit.

The Demonstration is this, Because a Broken and a Contrite Heart God will not despise.

In the Assertion, we have two Things present themselves to our Consideration.

1. That a Broken Spirit is to God a Sacrifice.

2. That it is to God, as that which answereth to, or goeth beyond ALL Sacrifices: The Sacrifices of God are a broken Spirit.

The Demonstration of this is plain, for that Heart, God will not despise it; A Broken and a Contrite Heart, O God thou wilt not despise.

Whence I draw this Conclusion: That a Spirit rightly broken, an Heart truly Contrite, is to God an excellent Thing.

That is, a Thing that goeth beyond all external Duties whatever; for that is intended by this saying, The Sacrifices, because it answereth to all Sacrifices which we can offer to God: it serveth in the room of all: All our Sacrifices without this, are nothing, this alone is all.

There are four Things that are very acceptable to God. The First is, The Sacrifice of the Body of Christ for our Sins, of this you read, Heb. 10. For there you have it preferred to all burnt Offerings and Sacrifices; 'tis this that pleaseth God, 'tis this that sanctifieth and setteth the People acceptable in the Sight of God.

Secondly, Unfeigned Love to God, is counted better than all Sacrifices, or external Parts of Worship: And to love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, with all the Understanding, and with all the Soul, and with all the strength, and to love his Neighbour as himself, is better than all whole burnt-offerings and Sacrifices, Mar. 12. 33.

Thirdly, To walk holily and humbly, and obediently towards and before God, is another; Mich. 6. 6, 7, 8. Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt Offerings and Sacrifices, as in obeying the Voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than Sacrifice; and to hearken, than the fat of Rams, 1 Sam. 15. 22.

Fourthly, And this in our Text is the Fourth, The Sacrifices of God are a broken Spirit: A broken and a Contrite Heart, O

God, thou wilt not despise.

But note by the Way, that this broken, this broken and contrite Heart, is thus excellent only to God: O God, saith he, THOU wilt not despise it: by which is implied, the World have not this esteem or respect for such a Heart, or for one that is of a broken and a contrite Spirit: No, no; a Man, a Woman, that is blessed with a broken Heart is so far off from getting; by that, esteem with the World, that they are but burdens, and trouble Houses where-ever they are or go; Such People carry with them, Molestation and Disquietment; they are in Carnal Families, as David was to the King of Gath, Troublers of the House, 1 Sam. 21.

Their Sighs, their Tears, their Day and night Groans, their Cries and Prayers and solitary Carriages puts all the Carnal Family out of Order: Hence you have them brow beaten by some, contemned by others; yea, and their Company fled from and deserted by others: But mark the Text, A Broken and a Contrite Heart, O GOD, thou wilt not despise, but rather accept; for not to despise, is with God to esteem and set a high Price upon.

But we will demonstrate by several particulars, that a broken Spirit, a Spirit RIGHTLY broken, an Heart TRULY contrite, is to God an excellent Thing.

First, This is evident from the Comparison, thou desirest not Sacrifice, else would I give it; thou delightest not in Burnt-offerings: The Sacrifices of God, are a broken Spirit, &c. Mark, He rejecteth Sacrifices, Offerings and Sacrifices: that is, all levitical Ceremonies under the Law, and all external Performances under the Gospel; but accepteth a broken Heart: It is therefore manifest by this, were there nothing else to be said, that proves, that a Heart rightly broken, truly contrite, is to God an excellent Thing; for as you see such a Heart is set before all Sacrifice, and yet they were the Ordinances of God, and things that he commanded; but so, a broken Spirit is above them all, a contrite Heart goes beyond them, yea beyond them, when all put together. Thou wilt not have the one, thou wilt not despise the other; O Brethren; A broken and a contrite Heart is an excellent Thing. Have I said a broken Heart, a broken and a contrite Heart is esteemed above all Sacrifices. I will add, Secondly, It is of great Esteem with God, than is either Heaven or Earth, and that's more than to be set before external Duties. Thus saith the Lord, Heaven is my Throne, and the Earth is my Footstool, where is the House that ye built me, or where is the Place of my rest? For all these things hath mine Hands made, and all these things have been, saith the Lord; But to this Man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite Spirit, and trembleth at my Word, Isa. 66. 1, 2.

Mark;

Mark, God saith, He hath made all these Things, but he doth not say, that he will look to them, that is, take complacency and delight in them; No, there is that wanting in all that he hath made, that should take up and delight his Heart: But now, let a broken-hearted Sinner come before him, yea, he ranges the World throughout to find out such an one, and having found him, To this Man, saith he, will I look: I say again, that such a Man to him, is of more value than is either Heaven or Earth; They, saith he, shall wax old, they shall perish and vanish away, but this Man he continues, he, as is presented to us in another place, under another Character, he shall abide for ever, Heb. 1. 10, 11, 12. 1 John 2. 17.

To this Man will I look, with this Man will I be delighted; for so to look, doth sometimes signify: Thou hast ravished my Heart, my Sister, my Spouse, saith Christ to his humble-hearted, thou hast ravished my Heart with one of thine Eyes, (while it is as a Conduit to let the Rivers out of thy broken Heart) I am taken, saith he, with one Chain of thy Neck, Song 4. 9. Here you see he looks and is ravished, he looks and is taken, as it saith in another place, The King is held in the Galleries, Song 7. 5. That is, is taken with his Beloved, with the Doves Eyes of his beloved, Chap. 1. 15. with the contrite Spirit of his People.

But it is not thus reported of him with respect to Heaven or Earth, them he sets more lightly by; Them he reserves unto Fire against the Day of Judgment, and Perdition of Ungodly Men, 2 Pet. 3. 7. But the broken in Heart are his Beloved, his Jewels.

Wherefore what I have said as to this, must go for the Truth of God, to wit, That a broken hearted Sinner, a Sinner with a Contrite Spirit, is of more Esteem with God, than is either Heaven or Earth: He saith, He hath made them, but he doth not say, He will look to them; He saith, They are his Throne and Footstool; but he doth not say, They have taken or ravished his Heart; No, 'tis those that are of a contrite Spirit do this.

But there is yet more in the Words, To this Man will I look; that is, For this Man will I care, about this Man will I care, I will put this Man under my Protection; for so to look to one, doth sometimes signify; and I take the Meaning in this Place to be such, Prov. 27. 23. Jer. 39. 12. Chap. 40. 4.

The Lord upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up all that are bowed down, (Psal. 145. 14.) And the broken hearted are of this Number, wherefore he careth for, campeth about, and hath set his Eyes upon such an one for good. This therefore is a second Demonstration to prove, That the Man that hath his Spirit rightly broken, his Heart truly contrite, is of great esteem with God.

Thirdly, yet further, God doth not only prefer such an one, as has been said, before

Heaven and Earth, but he loveth, he desireth to have that Man for an Intimate, for a Companion; he must dwell, he must cohabit with him that is of a broken Heart, with such as are of a contrite Spirit. For thus saith the high and lofty one, that inhabiteth Eternity, whose Name is Holy, I dwell in the high, and holy Place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble Spirit, &c. Isa. 57. 15.

Behold here, both the Majesty and Condescension of the high, and lofty One; His Majesty, in that he is high, and the Inhabiter of Eternity; I am the high and lofty One; saith he, I inhabit Eternity: Verily this Consideration is enough to make the broken-hearted Man creep into a Mouse-hole to hide himself from such a Majesty: But behold his Heart, his condescending Mind: I am for dwelling also with him that hath a broken Heart, with him that is of a contrite Spirit: That's the Man that I would converse with, that's the Man with whom I will Co-habit; that is, He, saith God, I will choose for my Companion: For to desire to dwell with one, supposeth all these things; and verily, of all the Men in the World, none have Acquaintance with God, none understand what Communion with him, and what his Teachings mean, but such as are of a broken and contrite Heart; He is nigh to them that are of a broken Spirit, Psal. 34. 18. These are intended in the 14th Psalm, where 'tis said, The Lord looked down from Heaven, to see if any did understand and seek God, that he might find some body in the World with whom he might converse; for indeed there is none else that either understand, or that can tend to hearken to him. God, as I may say, is forced to break Men's Hearts, before he can make them willing to cry to him, or be willing that he should have any Concerns with them; the rest shut their Eyes, stop their Ears, withdraw their Hearts, or say unto God, Be gone: Job 21. But now the broken in Heart can tend it, he has leisure, yea, leisure, and will, and understanding, and all; and therefore is a fit Man to have to do with God. There is also room in this Man's House, in this Man's Heart, in this Man's Spirit, for God to dwell, for God to walk, for God to set up a Kingdom.

Here therefore is suitableness, Can two walk together, saith God, except they are agreed? Amos 3. The broken hearted desireth God's Company, when wilt thou come unto me, saith he? The broken hearted loveth to hear God speak and talk to him. Here is a suitableness, Cause me, saith he, to hear Joy and Gladness, that the Bones which thou hast broken may rejoice, Psal. 51. 8.

But here lies the Glory, in that the high and lofty One, the God that inhabiteth Eternity, and that has a high and holy Place for his Habitation, should choose to dwell with, and to be a Companion of the broken Heart, Heart, and of them that are of a contrite Spirit : yea, and here is also great Comfort for such.

Fourthly, God doth not only prefer such a Heart before all Sacrifices, nor esteem such a Man above Heaven and Earth, nor yet only desire to be of his Acquaintance, but he reserveth for him his chief Comforts, his Heart-Reviving and Soul-Cherishing Cordials. I dwell, saith he, with such to revive them, and to support and comfort them, to revive the Spirit of the humble, and to revive the Heart of the contrite Ones, Isa. 57. 15. The broken hearted Man, is a fainting Man; he has his qualms, his sinking Fits, he oftentimes dies away with Pain and Fear; he must be stayed with Flaggons, and comforted with Apples, or else he can't tell what to do : He pines, he pines away in his Iniquity; nor can any thing keep him alive and make him well, but the Comforts and Cordials of Almighty God : Wherefore with such an one God will dwell, to revive the Heart, to revive the Spirit : To revive the Spirit of the humble, and to revive the Hearts of the contrite ones, Ezek. 33. 10, 11.

God has Cordials, but they are to comfort them that are cast down, 2 Cor. 7. 6. And such are the broken hearted : As for them that are whole, they need not the Physician, Mark 1. 17. They are the broken in Spirit, that stand in need of Cordials : Physicians are Men of no esteem, but with them that feel their Sickness; and this is one Reason, why God is so little accounted of in the World, even because they have not been made sick by the wounding stroke of God. But now when a Man is wounded, has his Bones broken, or is made sick, and laid at the Graves Mouth; Who is of that Esteem with him, as is an able Physician? What is so much desired as is the Cordials, Comforts and suitable Supplies of the skilful Physician in those Matters: And thus it is with the broken hearted; he needs, and God has prepared for him plenty of the Comforts and Cordials of Heaven, to succour and relieve his sinking Soul.

Wherefore such a one, lieth under all the Promises, that have Succour in them, and Consolation for Men, Sick and Desponding under the Sense of Sin and the heavy Wrath of God: And they, says God, shall be refreshed and revived with them.

Yea, They are designed for them, he hath therefore broken their Hearts, he hath therefore wounded their Spirits; that he might make them apt to relish his reviving Cordials, that he might minister to them his reviving Comforts.

For indeed, so soon as he hath broken; his Bowels yearn, and his Compassions roul up and down within him, and will not suffer him to abide Afflicting: Ephraim was one of these; but so soon as God had smitten him, behold his Heart, how it works towards him; Is Ephraim, saith he, my dear Son? that is, he is so; Is he a pleasant Child? that is, he is so; for since I speak against him, I do earnestly remember him still, therefore my Bowels are troubled for him, I will surely have Mercy upon him, saith the Lord God, Jer. 31. 18, 19, 20. This therefore is another Demonstration.

Fifthly, As God prefers such a Heart, and esteems the Man that has it, above Heaven and Earth; as he covets Intimacy with such an one, and prepares for him his Cordials: So when he sent his Son Jesus into the World to be a Saviour; he gave him in special, a charge to take care of such; yea, that was one of the main Reasons he sent him down from Heaven, Anointed for his work on Earth.

The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, saith he, because he hath Anointed me to preach the Gospel to the Poor, he hath sent me to bind up the broken hearted, &c. Isa. 61. 1.

Now that this is meant of Christ, is confirmed by his own Lips; for in the Days of his Flesh, he takes this Book in his Hand, when he was in the Synagogue at Nazareth, and read this very place unto the People, and then tells them, that that very Day, that Scripture was fulfilled in their Ears, Luke 4. 16, 17, 18.

But see, These are the Souls whose welfare is contrived in the Heavens: God consulted their Salvation, their Deliverance, their Health, before his Son came down from thence. Doth not therefore this demonstrate: That a broken hearted Man, that a Man of a Contrite Spirit, is of great esteem with God. I have often wondred at David, that he should give Joab and the Men of War a charge, that they take heed that they carry it tenderly to that young Rebel Abshalom his Son, 2 Sam. 18. 5. But that God, the High God, the God against whom we have sinned; should so soon as he has smitten, give his Son a Command, a Charge, a Commission, to take care of, to bind up and heal the broken in Heart; this is that which can never be sufficiently admired, or wondred at, by Men or Angels.

And as this was his Commission, so he acted; as is evidently set forth by the Parable of the Man who fell among Thieves: He went to him, poured into his Wounds Wine and Oil; he bound him up, took him, set him upon his own Beast, had him to an Inn, gave the Host a charge to look well to him, with Money in hand, and a Promise at his return, to recompense him in what further he should be expensive while he was under his care, Luke 10. 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35.

Behold therefore the care of God which he has for the broken in Heart; he has given a charge to Christ his Son, to look well to them, and to bind up and heal their Wounds: Behold also the Faithfulness of Christ, who doth not hide, but read this Commission as soon as he entred upon his Ministry, and also falls into the practical Part thereof: He healeth the broken in Heart, and bindeth up his Wounds, Psalm 147. 3.

And behold again into whose care a broken Heart and a contrite Spirit, hath put this poor Creature; he is under the care of God, the care and cure of Christ: If a Man was sure that his Disease had put him under the special care of the King and the Queen, yet could he not be sure of Life, he might dye under their Sovereign Hands. Ay, but here is a Man in the favour of God, and under the Hand of Christ to be healed; under whose Hand, none yet ever died for want of skill and power in him to save their Life; wherefore this Man must live, Christ has in Commission not only to bind up his Wounds, but to heal him; he has of himself so expounded it in reading his Commission: Wherefore he that has his Heart broken, and that is of a contrite Spirit; must not only be taken in Hand, but healed; healed of his Pain, Grief, Sorrow, Sin, and Fears of Death and Hell-Fire: Wherefore he adds, That he must give unto such, Beauty for Ashes, the Oil of Joy for Mourning, the Garment of Praise for the Spirit of Heaviness, and must comfort all that mourn, Isa. 61. 2. 3.

This I say, he has in the Commission, the broken hearted are put into his Hand, and he has said himself he will heal him: Hence he says of that same Man, I have seen his ways and will heal him; I will lead him also, and restore comforts unto him, and to his mourners; and I will heal him, Isa. 57. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19. And this is a fifth Demonstration.

Sixthly, As God prefers such a Heart, and so esteems the Man that has it, as he desires his Company, has provided for him his Cordials, and given a charge to Christ to heal him: so he has promised in conclusion, to save him. He saveth such as be of a contrite Spirit; or as the margin has it, that be contrite of Spirit, Psalm 34. 18.

And this is the Conclusion of all; for to save a Man, is the end of all special Mercy. He saveth such as be of a contrite Spirit. To Save, is to Forgive; for without Forgiveness of Sins, we cannot be Saved. To Save, is to preserve one in this miserable World; and to deliver one from all those Devils, Temptations, Snares, and Destructions that would, were we not kept, were we not preserved of God, destroy us Body and Soul for ever. To Save, is to bring a Man Body and Soul to Glory; and to give him an Eternal Mansion-House in Heaven, that he may dwell in the Presence of this good God, and the Lord Jesus, and to sing to them the Songs of his Redemption for ever and ever.

This it is to be Saved, nor can any thing less than this, compleat the Salvation of the Sinner. Now this is to be the Lot of him that is of a broken Heart; and the End that God will make with him that is of a Contrite Spirit: He saveth such as be contrite of Spirit: He saveth such; This is Excellent.

But, do the broken in Heart believe this? Can they imagine, that this is to be the End that God has designed them to, and that he intended to make with them in the Day in which he began to break their Hearts? No, no, they alas, think the quite contrary! They are afraid that this is but the beginning of Death, and a token, that they shall never see the Face of God with comfort, either in this World, or that which is to come. Hence they cry, Cast me not away from thy Presence; or, Now I am free among the Dead, whom God remembers no more, Psalm 51. 11. Psalm 88. 4, 5.

For indeed, there goes to the breaking of the Heart, a visible Appearance of the Wrath of God, and a home-charge from Heaven of the guilt of Sin to the Conscience. This to Reason, is very dreadful; for it cuts the Soul down to the Ground. For a wounded Spirit none can bear, Prov. 18. 14.

It seems also now to this Man, that this is but the beginning of Hell; but as it were, the first Step down to the Pit; when alas! All these are but the beginnings of Love, and but that which makes way for Life. The Lord kills before he makes alive, he wounds before his Hands make whole. Yea, he does the one, in Order to, or because he would do the other; he wounds, because his Purpose is to heal. He maketh sore, and bindeth up: He woundeth, and his Hands make whole, Deut. 32. 39. 1 Sam. 2. 6. Job 15. 18.

His design, I say, is the Salvation of the Soul. He scourgeth, he breaketh the Heart of every Son whom he receiveth, and Wo be to him whose Heart God breaketh not.

And thus have I proved, what at first I asserted; namely, That a Spirit rightly broken, an Heart truly contrite, is to God an excellent thing. A broken and a contrite Heart, O God, thou wilt not despise. For thus say I,

1. This is evident, for that it is better than Sacrifices; than all Sacrifice.

2. The Man that has it, is of more esteem with God than Heaven and Earth.

3. God coveteth such a Man, for his Intimate and House-Companion.

4. He reserveth for him his Cordials; and spiritual Comforts.

5. He has given his Son a Charge, a Commandment, to take care that the broken hearted be healed, and he is resolved to heal them.

6. And concluded, that the broken-hearted, and they that are of a contrite Spirit, shall shall be saved, that is, possess of the Heavens.

I come now in order, to shew you, what a broken Heart, and what a contrite Spirit is. This must be done, because in the Discovery of this, lies both the comfort of them that have it, and the Conviction of them that have it not.

Now that I may do this the better, I must propound, and speak to these four Things.

1. I must shew you, what an one that Heart is, that is not broken, that is not contrite.

2. I must shew you how, or, with what the Heart is broken and made contrite.

3. Shew you how, and what it is, when broken and made contrite. And

4. I shall last of all, give you some Signs of a broken and contrite Heart.

For the first of these, to wit, What an one that Heart is, that is not a broken, that is, not a contrite Heart.

1. The Heart before 'tis broken, is hard and stubborn, and obstinate against God, and the Salvation of the Soul, Zach. 7. 12. Deut. 2. 30. Chap. 9. 27.

2. 'Tis an Heart full of evil Imaginations and Darkness, Gen. 8. 12. Rom. 1. 21.

3. 'Tis a Heart deceitful and subject to be deceived, especially about the Things of an Eternal Concernment, Isa. 44. 20. Deut. 11. 16.

4. 'Tis an Heart, that rather gathereth Iniquity and Vanity to it self, than any thing that is good for the Soul, Psal. 41. 6. Psal. 94. 11.

5. 'Tis an Unbelieving Heart, and one that will turn away from God to Sin, Heb. 3. 12. Deut. 17. 17.

6. 'Tis an Heart, not prepared for God, being Uncircumcised, nor for the Reception of his holy Word, 2 Chron. 12. 14. Psal. 78. 8. Acts 7. 51.

7. 'Tis an Heart not single, but double: 'Twill pretend to serve God, but will withal, lean to the Devil and Sin, Psal. 12. 2. Ezek. 33. 31.

8. 'Tis an Heart, proud and stout; it loves not to be controuled, though the Controuler be God himself, Psal. 101. 5. Prov. 16. 5. Mal. 3.

9. 'Tis an Heart that will give place to Satan, but will resist the Holy Ghost, Acts 5. 3. chap. 7. 51.

10. In a Word, 'Tis deceitful above all Things, and desperately wicked: So wicked that none can know it, Jer. 17. 9.

That the Head before it is broken is such, and worse than I have described it to be, is sufficiently seen by the whole course of the World. Where is the Man, (whose Heart has not been broken, and whose Spirit is not contrite) that according to the Word of God, deals honestly with his own Soul?

It is one Character of a right Heart, that it is sound in God's Statutes, and honest, Psal. 119. 80. Luke 8. 15.

Now, an honest Heart will not put off it self, nor be put off with that, which will not go for current Money with the Merchants; I mean, with that which will not go for saving Grace at the Day of Judgment: But alas, alas! But few Men, how honest soever they are to others, have honesty towards themselves; though he is the worst of Deceivers who deceiveth his own Soul, as James has it, about the Things of his own Soul, Jam. 1. 22, 26. But,

Secondly, I now come to shew you, with What, and How the Heart is broken, and the Spirit made contrite.

The Instrument with which the Heart is broken, and with which the Spirit is made contrite, is the Word. Is not my Word, says God, like a Fire, and like a Hammer, that breaketh the Rock in pieces? Jer. 23. 29.

The Rock in this Text, is the Heart, which in another place, is compared to an Adamant, which Adamant is harder than Flint, Zach. 7. 11, 12. Ezek. 3. 9.

This Rock, this Adamant, this Stony Heart, is broken and made contrite by the Word. But it only is so, when the Word is as a Fire, and as a Hammer to break and melt it. And then, and then only it is as a Fire, and a Hammer to the Heart to break it, when 'tis managed by the Arm of God. No Man can break the Heart with the Word; no Angel can break the Heart with the Word; that is, if God forbears to second it by mighty Power from Heaven. This made Balaam go without an Heart rightly broken, and truly contrite, though he was rebuked by an Angel; and the Pharisees die in their Sins, though rebuked for them, and admonished to turn from them, by the Saviour of the World. Wherefore, though the Word is the Instrument with which the Heart is broken, yet it is not broken with the Word, till that Word is managed by the Might and Power of God.

This made the Prophet Isaiah, after long Preaching, cry out, That he had laboured for nought, and in vain: And this made him cry to God, to rent the Heavens and come down; that the Mountains, or Rocky Hills, or Hearts, might be broken, and melt at his Presence, Isa. 49. 4. Chap. 64. 1, 2.

For he found by Experience, that as to this, no effectual Work could be done, unless the Lord put to his Hand. This also is often intimated in the Scriptures, where it saith, When the Preachers preached effectually to the breaking of Men's Hearts, the Lord wrought with them; the Hand of the Lord was with them; and the like, Mar. 16. 20. Acts 11. 21.

Now when the Hand of the Lord is with the Word, then 'tis mighty; 'tis mighty thorough God to the pulling down of strong holds. 'Tis sharp then, as a Sword in the Soul

Soul and Spirit : It sticks like an Arrow in the Hearts of Sinners, to the causing of the People to fall at his Foot for Mercy. Then 'tis, as was said afore, as a Fire, and as a Hammer to break this Rock in pieces, 2 Cor. 10. 4. Heb. 4. 14. Psal. 110. 3.

And hence the Word is made mention of, under a double Consideration.

1. As it stands by it self.

2. As attended with Power from Heaven.

As it stands by it self, and is not seconded with saving Operation from Heaven, it is called the Word only, the Word barely, or as if it was only the Word of Men, 1 Thes. 1. 5, 6, 7. 1 Cor. 4. 19, 20. 1 Thes. 2. 13.

Because then, it is only as managed by Men, who are not able to make it accomplish that Work. The Word of God, when in a Man's Hand only, is like the Father's Sword in the Hand of the sucking Child; which Sword, though never so well pointed, and though never so sharp on the Edges, is not now able to conquer a Foe, and to make an Enemy fall and cry out for Mercy, because 'tis but in the Hand of the Child.

But now, let the same Sword be put into the Hand of a skilful Father, (and God is both skilful, and able to manage his Word) and then the Sinner, and then the proud helpers too, are both made to stoop, and submit themselves: Wherefore I say, though the Word be the Instrument, yet of it self doth do no saving good to the Soul, the Heart is not broken, nor the Spirit made contrite thereby, it only worketh Death, and leaveth Men in the Chains of their Sins, still faster bound over to eternal Condemnation, 2 Cor. 2. 15, 16.

2. But when seconded by mighty Power, then the same Word is as the roaring of a Lion, as the piercing of a Sword, as a burning Fire in the Bones, as Thunder, and as a Hammer that dashes all to pieces, Jer. 25. 30. Amos 1. 2. Chap. 3. 8. Acts 2. 37. Jer. 20. 9. Psal. 29. 3, to 10.

Wherefore from hence it is to be concluded, that whoever has heard the Word preached, and has not heard the Voice of the living God therein, has not as yet had their Hearts broken, nor their Spirits made contrite for their Sins.

And this leads me to the second Thing, to wit, To shew how the Heart is broken and the Spirit made contrite by the Word; And verily it is when the Word comes home with Power. But this is but general: Wherefore more particularly,

First, Then the Word works effectually to this purpose, when it findeth out the Sinner and his Sin, and shall convince him that it has found him out: Thus it was with our first Father; when he had sinned, he sought to hide himself from God; he gets among the Trees of the Garden, and there he shrouds himself; but yet not thinking himself secure, he covers himself with Fig-

Leaves, and now he lieth quiet; now God shall not find me, thinks he, nor know what I have done; but lo, by and by, he hears the Voice of the Lord God walking in the Garden; and now Adam, what do you mean to do? Why as yet, he sculketh, and hides his Head, and seeks yet to lye undiscovered, but behold, the Voice cries out, Adam! And now he begins to Tremble. Adam where art thou? Says God, and now Adam is made to answer: But the Voice of the Lord God doth not leave him here: No, it now begins to search, and to enquire after his doings, and to unravel what he had wrapt together and covered, until it had made him bare and naked in his own sight before the Face of God, Gen. 3. 7, to 12.

Thus therefore, doth the Word, when managed by the Arm of God. It findeth out, it singleth out the Sinner, the Sinner finds it so; it finds out the Sins of the Sinner, it unravels his whole Life, it strips him, and lays him naked in his own Sight, before the Face of God; neither can the Sinner nor his Wickedness, be longer hid and covered; and now begins the Sinner to see what he never saw before.

2. Another instance for this, is David, the Man of our Text; he Sins, he Sins grossly, he Sins and hides it; yea, and seeks to hide it from the Sight of God and Man. Well, Nathan is sent to preach a preaching to him, and that in common, and that in special; in common by a Parable; in special, by a particular Application of it to him: While Nathan only preached in common or in general, David was fish-whole, and stood as right in his own Eyes, as if he been as innocent and as harmless as any Man alive: But God had a love for David, and therefore commands his Servant Nathan, to go home, not only to David's Ears, but to David's Conscience.

Well, David now must fall: says Nathan, Thou art the Man; says David, I have sinned, (1 Sam. 12. 1, 5, 7, 13.) and then his Heart was broken, and his Spirit made contrite, as this Psalm and our Text doth shew.

3. A third instance is that of Saul; he had heard many a Sermon, and was become a great Professor, yea, he was more zealous than was many of his Equals; but his Heart was never Broken, nor his Spirit never made Contrite, till he heard one Preach from Heaven, till he heard God, in the Word of God, making enquiry after his Sins: Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? says Jesus; and then he can stand no longer; for then his Heart brake, then he Falls to the Ground, then he trembles, then he cries out, Who art thou, Lord? And, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Acts 8.

Wherefore as I said, Then the Word works effectually to this purpose, when it findeth out the Sinner and his Sin, and also when when it shall convince him that it has found him out. Only I must joyn here a caution, for every Operation of the Word upon the Conscience, is not saving; nor doth all Conviction end in the saving Conversion of the Sinner: It is then only such an Operation of the Word that is intended, namely, That shews the Sinner, not only the evil of his Ways, but brings the Heart unfeignedly over to God by Christ. And this brings me to the third Thing.

Thirdly, I am therefore come to shew you, how, and what the Heart is, when broken and made contrite. And this I must do, by opening unto you the two chief Expressions in the Text

1. What is meant by this Word Broken.

2. What is meant by this Word Contrite.

First, For this Word Broken, Tindal renders it a troubled Heart: but I think there is more in it: I take it therefore to be a Heart disabled, as to former Actions; even as a Man whose Bones are broken, is disabled, as to his way of Running, Leaping, Wrestling, or ought else, which vainly he was wont to do; wherefore that which was called a broken Heart in the Text, he calls his broken Bones, in Verse the eighth: Cause me, saith he, to hear Joy and Gladness, that the Bones which thou hast broken may rejoice. And why is the breaking of the Heart compared to the breaking of the Bones? But because, as when the Bones are broken, the outward Man is disabled as to what it was wont to do; so when the Spirit is broken, the inward Man is disabled as to what Vanity and Folly it before delighted in: Hence Feebleness is joined with this brokenness of Heart: I am feeble, saith he, and sore broken: I have lost my Strength and former Vigour, as to vain and sinful Courses, Psal. 38. 8.

This then it is to have the Heart Broken; namely, to have it lamed, disabled, and taken off, by sense of God's Wrath due to Sin, from that course of Life it formerly was conversant in; and to shew that this Work is no fancy, nor done, but with great trouble to the Soul, it is compared to the putting the Bones out of joint, the breaking of the Bones, the burning of the Bones with Fire; or as the taking the natural Moisture from the Bones: The vexing of the Bones, &c. Psal. 22. 14. Jer. 20. 9. Lam. 1. 13. Psal. 6. 2. Prov. 17. 22.

All which are Expressions adorned with such Similitudes, as do undeniably declare, that to Sense and Feeling, a broken Heart is a grievous thing.

Secondly, What is meant by the Word CONTRITE. A Contrite Spirit is a penitent one; one sorely grieved, and deeply sorrowful for the Sins it has committed against God, and to the damage of the Soul; and so it is to be taken in all those places where a contrite Spirit is made mention of. As in Psal. 34. 18. Isa. 57. 15. chap. 66. 2.
Vol. II.

As a Man that has by his folly procured a broken Leg or Arm, is heartily sorry, that ever he was so foolish, as to be engaged in such foolish ways of Idleness and Vanity: So he whose Heart is broken with a sense of God's Wrath due to his Sin, hath deep Sorrow in his Soul, and greatly repents, that ever he should be such a Fool, as by rebellious doings, to bring himself and his Soul to so much sharp Affliction. Hence, while others are sporting themselves in Vanity, such a one doth call his Sin his greatest Folly: My Wounds stink, and are corrupt, saith David, because of my foolishness. And again, O God, thou knowest my Foolishness, and my Sins are not hid from thee, Psal. 38. 5. Psal. 69. 5.

Men, what e're they say with their Lips, cannot conclude, if yet their Hearts want breaking, That Sin is a foolish Thing. Hence it says, The Foolishness of Fools, is their Folly, Prov. 14. 24.

That is, the Foolishness of some Men is, that they take Pleasure in their Sins; for their Sins are their Foolishness, and the Folly of their Soul lies in their countenancing of this Foolishness. But the Man whose Heart is broken, he is none of these, he cannot be one of these, no more than he that has his Bones broken can rejoice that he is desired to play a Match at Football. Hence to hear others talk foolishly, is to the grief of those whom God has wounded: Or, as it is in another place, Their Words are like the piercings of a Sword, Psal. 69. 26. Prov. 12. 18.

This therefore, I take to be the meaning of these two Words, A broken and a Contrite Spirit.

Fourthly, and lastly, As to this, I now come more particularly, to give you some Signs of a Broken Heart, of a broken and a contrite Spirit.

First, A broken hearted Man, such as is intended in the Text, is a sensible Man: he is brought to the exercise of all the Senses of his Soul. All others are dead, senseless, and without true feeling of what the broken hearted Man is sensible of.

1. He Sees himself to be what others are ignorant of; that is, he sees himself to be, not only a sinful Man, but a Man by Nature, in the Gall and Bond of Sin. In the Gall of Sin; it is Peter's Expression to Simon, and it is a Saying common to all Men. For every Man in a State of Nature, is in the Gall of Sin. He was shapen in it, conceived in it; it has also Possession of, and by that Possession, infected the whole of his Soul and Body, Psal. 51. 5. Act. 8. 23.

This he sees, this he understands; every Professor sees not this, because the Blessing of a broken Heart, is not bestowed on every one. David says, There is no Soundness in my Flesh. And Solomon suggests, that a Plague or running Sore, is in the very Heart:
5 Q

Heart: but every one perceives not this, Psal. 38. 3. 1 Kings 8. 38.

He saith again, That his Wounds stank, and were corrupted; that his Sore ran, and ceased not, Psal. 38. 5. Psal. 77. 2.

But these Things, the brutish Man, the Man whose Heart was never broken, has no Understanding of. But the broken hearted, the Man that has a broken Spirit, he sees, as the Prophet has it; he sees his Sickness, he sees his Wound; when Ephraim saw his Sickness, and Judah saw his Wound, Hos. 5. 13. He sees it to his Grief, he sees it to his Sorrow.

2. He FEELS what others have no Sense of. He feels the Arrows of the Almighty, and that they stick fast in him. He feels how sore and sick, by the smiting of God's Hammer upon his Heart to break it, his poor Soul is made. He feels a Burden intollerably lying upon his Spirit. Mine Iniquities, saith he, are gone over my Head as an heavy Burden, they are too heavy for me. He feels also the heavy Hand of God upon his Soul, a Thing unknown to carnal Men, Psal. 38. 2. Hos. 6. 13. Psal. 38. 4.

He feels Pain being wounded, even such Pains as others cannot understand, because they are not broken. My Heart, says David, is sore pained within me. Why so, Why, The Terrours of Death are fallen upon me. The Terrours of Death causes Pain; yea, Pain of the highest Nature. Hence that which is here called Pains, is in another place called Pangs, Psal. 55. 4. Isa. 21. 3.

You know, broken Bones occasion Pain, strong Pain; yea, Pain that will make a Man or Woman groan, with the groaning of a deadly wounded Man, Ezek. 30. 24.

Soul-pain is the sorest Pain, in comparison to which, the Pain of the Body is a very tolerable thing, Prov. 18. 14.

Now, here is Soul-pain, here is Heart-pain, here we are discoursing of a wounded, of a broken Spirit. Wherefore this Pain is to be felt to the sinking of the whole Man; neither can any support this but God. Here is Death in this Pain, Death for ever, without God's special Mercy: and this the broken hearted Man doth feel. The Sorrows of Death, said David, compassed me about, and the Pains of Hell got hold upon me, and I found Trouble and Sorrow, Psal. 116.

Aye, I'll warrant thee, poor Man, thou foundest Trouble and Sorrow indeed. For the Pains of Hell, and Sorrows of Death, are Pains and Sorrow the most intollerable. But this the Man is acquainted with, that has his Heart broken.

3. As he Sees and Feels, so he HEARS that which augments his Woe and Sorrow. You know, if a Man has his Bones broken, he does not only See and Feel, but oft-times also, Hear what increases his Grief; as that his Wounds are uncurable, that his Bone is not rightly sett, that there is danger of a Gangreen, that he may be lost for want of looking to. These are the Voices, the Sayings, that haunt the House of one that has his Bones broken. And a broken hearted Man knows what I mean by this; he hears that which makes his Lips quiver, and at the Noise of which, he seems to feel rottenness enter into his Bones: He trembleth in himself, and wishes that he may hear Joy and Gladness, that the Bones, the Heart, and Spirit which God has broken may rejoice, Hab. 3. 16. Psal. 51. 8.

He thinks he hears God say, the Devil say, his Conscience say, and all good Men to whisper among themselves, saying, There is no help for him from God. Job heard this, David heard this, Haman heard this; and this is a common sound in the Ears of the broken hearted.

4. The broken hearted SMELL what others cannot scent: Alas! Sin never smell'd so to any Man alive, as it smells to the broken hearted. You know, Wounds will stink; but no stink like that of Sin, to the broken hearted Man: His own Sins stink, and so doth the Sins of all the World to him. Sin is like Carrion, 'tis of a stinking Nature; yea, it has the worst of Smells; however, some Men like it, Psal. 38. 5.

But none are offended with the Scent thereof, but God, and the broken hearted Sinner: My Wounds stink, and are corrupt, saith he, both in God's Nostribs, and mine own.

But, alas! who smells the stink of Sin? None of the Carnal World; they, like Carrion-Crows, seek it, love it, and eat it as the Child eats Bread. They eat up the Sins of my People, saith God, and set their Heart on their Iniquity, Hos. 4. 8.

This I say, they do, because they do not smell the nauseous scent of Sin: You know, that what is nauseous to the Smell, cannot be palatable to the taste. The broken hearted Man doth find, that Sin is nauseous, and therefore cries out, it stinketh. They also think at times, the smell of Fire, of Fire and Brimstone, is upon them, they are so sensible of the wages due to Sin.

5. The broken hearted is also a Tasting Man. Wounds, if sore, and full of Pains, of great Pains, do sometimes alter the taste of a Man. They make him think, his Meat, his Drink, yea, that Cordials have a bitter Taste in them. How many times doth the poor People of God, that are the only Men that know what a broken Heart doth mean, cry out, That Gravel, Wormwood, Gall, and Vinegar, was made their Meat, Lam. 3. 15, 16, 19.

This Gravel, Gall, and Wormwood, is the true temporal Taste of Sin; and God to make them loath it for ever, doth feed them with it, till their Hearts doth ache, and break therewith. Wickedness is pleasant of Taste to the World. Hence 'tis said,

They

They feed on Ashes, they feed on Wind, Isa. 44. 20. Hos. 12. 1. Lusts, or any thing that is vile and refuse, the carnal World think relishes well; as is set out most notably in the Parable of the Prodigal Son, He would fain have filled his Belly, saith our Lord, with the husks that the Swine did eat. But the broken hearted Man has a relish that's true as to these things; though by reason of the anguish of his Soul, it also abhors all manner of dainty Meat, Job 33. 19, 20. Psal. 107. 17, 18, 19.

Thus I have shewed you one Sign of a broken hearted Man; he is a sensible Man, he has all the Senses of his Soul awakened, he can See, Hear, Feel, Taste, Smell, and that as none but himself can do. I come now to another Sign of a Broken and Contrite Man.

Secondly, And that is, He is a very sorrowful Man. This, as the other is natural, 'tis natural to one that is in Pain, and that has his Bones broken, to be a grieved and sorrowful Man.

He is none of the jolly ones of the Times, nor can he, for his Bones, his Heart, his Heart is broken.

1. He is sorry that he feels and finds in himself, a pravity of Nature: I told you before, he is sensible of it, he sees it, he feels it; and here I say, he is sorry for it. 'Tis this that makes him call himself wretched Man; 'tis this that makes him loath and abhor himself; 'tis this that makes him blush; blush before God and be ashamed, Rom. 7. 24. Job 42. 5, 6. Ezek. 36. 31.

He finds by Nature, no Form nor Comeliness in himself; but the more he looks in the Glais of the Word, the more unhand-some, the more deformed he perceiveth Sin has made him. Every Body sees not this, therefore every Body is not sorry for it: but the broken in Heart sees that he is by Sin corrupted, marr'd, full of lewdness and naughtiness; he sees that in him; that is, in his Flesh dwells no good Thing; and this makes him sorry, yea, it makes him sorry at Heart. A Man that has his Bones broken, finds he is spoil'd, marr'd, disabled from doing as he would and should, at which he is grieved and made sorry.

Many are sorry for actual Transgressions, because they do oft bring them to shame before Men; but, few are sorry for the defects that Sin has made in Nature, because they see not those defects themselves. A Man cannot be sorry for the sinful defects of Nature, till he sees they have rendered him contemptible to God; nor is it any thing but a Sight of God, that can make him truly see what he is, and so be heartily sorry for being so. Now mine Eyes see thee, said Job, now I abhor my self. Woe is me, I am undone, said the Prophet, for mine Eyes have seen the Lord, the King. And 'twas This that made Daniel say, His Comeliness in him was turned into Corruption: For he had now the Vision of the holy One, Job 42. 6. Isa. 6. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Dan. 10. 8.

Visions of God, break the Heart, because by the Sight the Soul then has of his Perfections, it sees its own infinite and unspeakable disproportion, because of the vileness of its Nature.

Suppose a Company of ugly, uncomely, deformed Persons, dwelt together in one House; and suppose, that they never yet saw any Man or Woman more than themselves, that were arrayed with the Splendors and Perfections of Nature: These would not be capable of comparing themselves with any but themselves, and consequently, would not be affected, and made sorry, for their uncomely, natural Defections. But now, bring them out of their Cells and Holes of Darkness, where they have been shut up by themselves, and let them take a view of the Splendour and Perfections of Beauty that are in others; and then, if at all, they will be sorry and dejected, at the view of their own defects.

This is the case; Men by Sin are marr'd, spoil'd, corrupted, depraved, but they dwell by themselves in the dark; they see neither God, nor Angel, nor Saint, in their excellent Nature and Beauty; and therefore they are apt to count their own uncomely Parts, their Ornaments, and their Glory. But now, let such, as I said, see God, see Saints, or the Ornaments of the holy Ghost, and themselves as they are without them; and then they cannot, but must be affected with, and sorry for their own deformity. When the Lord CHRIST put forth but a little of his Excellency before his Servant Peter's Face, it raised up the depravity of Peter's Nature before him, to his great Confusion and Shame; and made him cry out to him in the midst of all his Fellows, Depart from me, for I am a sinful Man, O Lord! Luke 5. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

This therefore, is the cause of a broken Heart; even a sight of divine Excellencies, and a Sense that I am a poor, depraved, spoiled, defiled Wretch: and this Sight having broken the Heart, begets Sorrow in the broken hearted.

2. The broken hearted is a sorrowful Man, for that he finds his depravity of Nature strong in him, to the putting forth it self to oppose, and overthrow what his changed Mind doth prompt him to. When I would do good, said Paul, Evil is present with me, Rom. 7. 21. Evil is present to oppose, to resist, and make head against the desires of my Soul. The Man that has his Bones broken, may have yet a Mind to be industriously occupied, in a lawful and honest Calling, but he finds by Experience, that an Infirmity attends his present Condition, that strongly resists his good Endeavours: and at this he shakes his Head, makes Complaints, and with Sorrow of Heart he sighs and says, I cannot do the Thing

Thing that I would, Rom. 7. 15. Gal. 5. 17.

I am weak, I am feeble, I am not only depraved, but by that depravity, deprived of ability to put good Motions, good Intentions and Desires into Execution, to Compleatness: O, says he, I am ready to halt, my sorrow is continually before me.

You must know, the Broken-hearted loves God, loves his Soul, loves Good, and hates Evil. Now, for such an one to find in himself an Opposition, and continual Contradiction to this holy Passion, it must needs cause sorrow; Godly sorrow, as the Apostle Paul calls it. For such are made sorry after a godly Sort. To be sorry, for that thy Nature is with Sin depraved, and that through this depravity, thou art deprived of ability to do what the Word, and thy holy Mind doth prompt thee to, is to be sorry after a godly Sort. For this Sorrow worketh that in thee, of which thou wilt never have cause to repent; no, not to Eternity, 2 Cor. 7. 9, 10, 11.

3. The broken-hearted Man is sorry for those breaches, that by reason of the depravity of his Nature, is made in his Life and Conversation. And this was the Case of the Man in our Text. The Vileness of his Nature had broken out to the defiling of his Life, and to the making of him at this time, base in Conversation. This, this was it, that almost broke his Heart.

He saw in this he had dishonoured God, and that cut him. Against thee, thee only have I sinned, and done this Evil in thy Sight, Psal. 51. 4. He saw in this, he had caused the Enemies of God to open their Mouths and blaspheme; and this cut him to the Heart. This made him cry, I have sinned against thee, Lord: This made him say, I will declare mine Iniquity, I will be sorry for my Sin, Psal. 38. 18.

When a Man is designed to do a Matter, when his Heart is set upon it, (and the Broken-hearted doth design to glorify God) an Obstruction to that design, the spoiling of this Work makes him sorrowful. Hannah coveted Children, but could not have them, and this made her a Woman of a sorrowful Spirit, 1 Sam. 1. 15.

A Broken-hearted Man would be well inwardly, and do that which is well outwardly; but he feels, he finds, he sees, he is prevented, prevented at least in part. This makes him sorrowful, in this he groans, groans earnestly, being burdened with his Imperfection, 2 Cor. 5. 1, 2, 3.

You know, one with broken Bones has Imperfections many, and is more sensible of them too, (as was said afore, than any other Man;) and this makes him sorrowful; yea, and makes him conclude, That he shall go softly all his Days, in the Bitterness of his Soul, Isa. 57. 15.

Thirdly, The Man with a broken Heart, is a very humble Man; or true Humility, is a sign of a broken Heart. Hence, Brokenness of Heart, Contrition of Spirit, and Humbleness of Mind, are put together. To revive the Heart of the humble, and to revive the Spirit of the contrite Ones, Isa. 57. 15.

To follow our Similitude: Suppose a Man while in bodily health, stout and strong, and one that fears and cares for no Man; yet let this Man have but a Leg or an Arm broken, and his Courage is quell'd; he is now so far off from hectoring of it with a Man, that he is afraid of every little Child that doth but offer to touch him: Now he will court the most feeble that has ought to do with him, to use him and handle him gently: Now he is become a Child in Courage, a Child in Fear, and humbleth himself as a little Child.

Why, thus it is with that Man that is of a broken and contrite Spirit. Time was indeed, he could hector, even hector it with God himself, saying, What's the Almighty, that we should serve him? Or what profit shall I have, if I keep his Commandments? Job 21. 15. Mal. 3. 13, 14.

Aye! But now his Heart is broken, God has wrestled with him, and given him a fall, to the breaking of his Bones, his Heart; and now he crouches, now he cringes, now he begs of God, that he will not only do him good, but do it with tender Hands. Have Mercy upon me, O God, said David, yea, according to the multitude of thy TENDER Mercies, blot out my Transgression, Psal. 51. 1.

He stands as he sees, not only in need of Mercy, but of the tenderest Mercies; God has several sorts of Mercies; some rough, some more tender. God can save a Man, and yet have him a dreadful Way to Heaven. This the Broken-hearted sees, and this the Broken-hearted dreads, and therefore pleads for the tenderest sort of Mercies; and here we read of his gentle dealing, and that he is very pitiful, and that he deals tenderly with his. But the reason of such Expressions no Man knows, but he that is Broken-hearted, he has his Sores, his running Sores, his stinking Sores: Wherefore he is pained, and therefore covets to be handled tenderly. Thus GOD has broken the Pride of his Spirit, and humbled the Loftiness of Man. And his Humility yet appears,

1. In his Thankfulness for natural Life: He reckoneth at Night, when he goes to Bed, that like as a Lion, so GOD will tear him to pieces before the Morning Light, Isa. 38. 13.

There is no Judgment that has fallen upon others, but he counts of right he should be swallowed up by it. My Flesh trembleth for fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy Judgments, Psal. 119. 120.

But perceiving a Day added to his Life, and that he in the Morning, is still on this side side Hell; he cannot choose but take notice of it, and acknowledge it as a special Favour; saying, God be thanked, for holding my Soul in Life till now, and for keeping my Life back from the Destroyer. Compare Job 33. 22. and Psalm 56. 13. Psalm 86. 13.

Man before his Heart is broken, counts Time his own, and therefore he spends it lavishly, upon every idle Thing. His Soul is far from fear, because the Rod of God is not upon him; but when he sees himself under the wounding Hand of God, or when God like a Lyon, is breaking all his Bones, then he humbleth himself before him, and falleth at his Foot. Now he has learn'd to count every Moment a Mercy, and every small Morsel a Mercy.

2. Now also, the least hopes of Mercy for his Soul, O, how precious is it! He that was wont to make Orts of the Gospel, and that valued Promises but as Stubble, and the Words of God but as Rotten Wood. Now, with what an Eye doth he look on the Promise? Yea, he counted a Peradventure of Mercy, more rich, more worth than the whole World. Now, as we say, He is glad to leap at a Crust; now, to be a Dog in God's House, is counted better by him, than to dwell in the Tents of the Wicked, Matth. 15. 16, 27. Luke 15, 17, 18, 19.

3. Now he that was wont to look scornfully upon the People of God; yea, that used to scorn to shew them a gentle cast of his Countenance; Now he admires and bows before them, and is ready to lick the dust of their Feet; and would count it his greatest, the highest Honour, to be as one of the least of them. Make me as one of thy hired Servants, says he, Luke 15. 19.

4. Now he is in his own Eyes the greatest Fool in Nature, for that he sees he has been so mistaken in his Ways, and has not yet but little, if any true knowledge of God. Every one now, says he, has more knowledge of God than I, every one serves him better than I, Psal. 73. 21, 22. Prov. 30. 2, 3.

5. Now may he be but one, though the least in the Kingdom of Heaven! Now may he be but one, tho' the least in the Church on Earth! Now may he be but be loved, though the least beloved of Saints! How high an Account doth he set thereon?

6. Now when he talketh with God or Men, how doth he debase himself before them! If with God, how does he accuse himself, and load himself with the Acknowledgments of his own Villanies, which he committed in the Days wherein he was the Enemy of God? Lord, said Paul, that Contrite one, I imprisoned, and did beat in every Synagogue them that believe on thee: And when the Blood of thy Martyr Stephen was shed, I also was standing by, and consenting unto his Death, and kept the Raiment of them that slew him,

Acts 22. 19, 20. Yea, I punished thy Saints oft in every Synagogue, and compelled them to Blaspheme: And being exceeding mad against them, I persecuted them even unto strange Cities, Acts 26. 9, 10, 11.

Also when he comes to speak to Saints, how doth he make himself vile before them? I am, saith he, the least of the Apostles, I am not meet to be called an Apostle; I am less than the least of all Saints: I was a Blasphemer, I was a Persecuter, and Injurious, &c. 1 Cor. 15. 9. Ephes. 3. 8. 1 Tim. 1. 13.

What Humility, what Self-abasing Thoughts, doth a broken Heart produce? When David danced before the Ark of God also, how did he discover his Nakedness to the disliking of his Wife? And when she taunted him for his doings, says he, It was before the Lord, &c. And I will be yet more vile than thus, and will be base in mine own Sight, 2 Sam. 6. 20, 21, 22.

Oh the Man that is, or that has been kindly broken in his Spirit, and that is of a contrite Heart, is a lowly, a humble Man.

Fourthly, The Broken-hearted Man, is a Man that sees himself in Spirituals to be poor: Therefore as humble and contrite, so poor and contrite are put together in the Word: But to this Man will I look, even to him that is Poor and of a contrite Spirit, Isa. 66. 1, 2.

And here we still pursue our Metaphor. A wounded Man, a Man with broken Bones, concludes his Condition to be but Poor, very Poor: Ask him how he does, and he answers, Truly Neighbour, in a very poor Condition. Also you have the spiritual Property of such as have, or have had their Hearts broken, and that have been of contrite Spirits, much made mention of in the Word. And they go by two Names to distinguish them from others; They are called THE Poor; that is, God's Poor; they are also called, The poor in Spirit, Psal. 72. 2. Psal. 74. 9. Mat. 5. 3.

Now, the Man that is poor in his own Eyes, (for of him we now discourse, and the Broken-hearted is such an one,) is sensible of his wants. He knows he cannot help himself, and therefore is forced to be content to live by the Charity of others. Thus it is in Nature, thus it is in Grace.

First, The Broken-hearted now knows he wants, and he knew it not till now. As he that has a broken Bone, knew no want of a Bone-setter, till he knew his Bone was broken: His broken Bone makes him know it, his pain and anguish makes him know it: And thus it is in Spirituals. Now he sees, to be Poor indeed, is to want the Sense of the Favour of God; for his great pain, is sense of Wrath, as hath been shewn before. And the Voice of Joy would heal his broken Bones, Psal. 51. 8.

Two things he thinks would make him rich.

1. A Right and Title to Jesus Christ, and all his Benefits.

2. And saving Faith therein. They that are spiritually rich, are rich in him, and in the Faith of him, 2 Cor. 8. 9. James 2. 5.

The first of these, giveth us a Right to the Kingdom of Heaven; and the second, yields the Soul the comfort of it; and the broken hearted Man wants the Sense and Knowledge of his Interest in these. That he knows he wants them, is plain; but that he knows he has them, is what as yet he wants the attainment of. Hence he says, The poor and needy seek Water, and there is none, and their Tongue fails for Thirst: There is none in their view, none in their view for them, Isa. 41. 17.

Hence David when he had his broken Heart, felt he wanted washing, he wanted purging, he wanted to be made white: He knew that Spiritual Riches lay there, but he did not so well perceive, that God had washed and purged him: Yea, he rather was afraid that all was going, that he was in danger of being cast out of God's Presence, and that the Spirit of Grace would be utterly taken from him. See Psalms 51.

That's the first Thing: The broken hearted is poor, because he knows his Wants.

Secondly; The broken hearted is poor, because he knows he cannot help himself to what he knows he wants. The Man that has a broken Arm, as he knows it, so he knows of himself he cannot set it. This therefore is a second Thing, that declares a Man is poor, otherwise he is not so: For, suppose a Man wants never so much, yet if he can but help himself, if he can furnish himself, if he can support his own Wants out of what he has, he cannot be a poor Man: Yea, the more he wants, the greater is his Riches, if he can supply his own Wants out of his own Purse.

He then is the poor Man, that knows his spiritual Want, and also knows he cannot supply, or help himself.

But this the broken hearted knows, therefore he in his own Eyes, is the only poor Man. True, he may have something of his own, but that will not supply his Want, and therefore he is a poor Man still. I have Sacrifices, says David, but thou dost not desire them, therefore my Poverty remains, Psal. 51. 16.

Lead is not Gold, Lead is not current Money with the Merchant: There is none has Spiritual Gold to Sell but CHRIST, Revel. 2. 18.

What can a Man do to procure Christ, or procure Faith or Love? Yea, had he never so much of his own carnal Excellencies, no not one Penny of it will go for Pay, in that Market where Grace is to be had. If a Man would give all the Substance of his house for Love, it would be utterly contemned, Song 8. 7.

This the broken hearted Man perceives, and therefore he sees himself to be spiritually poor: True, he has a broken Heart, and that's of great esteem with God, but that is not of Nature's Goodness; that's a Gift, a Work of God, that's the Sacrifices of God: Besides, a Man cannot remain content, and at rest with that; for that in the Nature of it, does but shew him he is poor, and that his Wants are such as himself cannot supply. Besides, there's but little ease in a broken Heart.

Thirdly, The broken hearted Man is poor, and sees it: Because he finds he is now disabled to live any way else, but by Begging.

This David betook himself too, though he was a King; for he knew as to his Soul's health, he could live no way else: This poor Man cried, saith he, and the Lord heard him, and saved him out of all his Troubles, (Psalms 34. 6.) And this leads me to the fifth Sign.

Fifthly, Another sign of a broken Heart, is a Crying, a Crying OUT. Pain you know will make one cry: Go to them that have upon them the anguish of broken Bones, and see if they don't cry; Anguish makes them cry. This, this is that which quickly follows, if once thy Heart be broken, and thy Spirit indeed made contrite.

First, I say, Anguish will make thee cry. Trouble and Anguish, said David, have taken hold upon me, Psal. 119. 143. Anguish, you know, doth naturally provoke to crying; now, as a broken Bone has anguish, a broken Heart has anguish: Hence the Pains of one that has a broken Heart, are compared to the Pangs of a Woman in Travail, Joh. 16. 20, 21, 22.

1. Anguish will make one cry alone, cry to ones self; and this is called a bemoaning of ones self. I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself, said God, Jer. 31. 18.

That is, being at present under the breaking, chastizing Hand of God: Thou hast chastized me, saith he, and I was chastized, as a Bullock unaccustomed to the Yoke: This is his Meaning also, who said, I mourn in my Complaint, and make a Noise; and why? Why? My Heart is pained within me, Psal. 53. 2, 3, 4.

This is a Self-bemoaning, a bemoaning themselves in secret and retired Places.

You know, it is common with them who are distressed with Anguish, though all alone, to cry out to themselves of their present Pains, saying, O my Leg! O my Arm! O my Bowels! Or as the Son of the Shunamite, My Head, my Head, 2 Kings 4. 19. O the Groans, the Sighs, the Cries, that the broken hearted have, when by themselves, or alone! O say they, My Sins, my Sins, my Soul, my Soul: How am I laden with with Guilt? How am I surrounded with Fear? O this hard, this desperate, this unbelieving Heart! O how Sin defileth my Will, my Mind, my Conscience! I am afflicted and ready to die, Psal. 88. 15.

Could some of you Carnal People, but get behind the Chamber-door, to hear Ephraim when he is at the work of Self-bemoaning, 'twould make you stand amazed to hear him bewail that Sin in himself, in which you take delight; and to hear him bemoan his mispending of Time, while you spend all in pursuing your filthy Lusts; and to hear him offended with his Heart, because 'twill not better comply with God's holy Will, while you are afraid of his Word and Ways, and never think your selves better, than when farthest off from God. The unruliness of the Passions, and Lusts of the broken hearted, make them often get into a Corner, and thus bemoan themselves.

Secondly, As they thus cry out in a bemoaning manner of, and to themselves; so they have their Out-cries of, and against themselves, to others. As she said in another case, Behold and see, if there be any Sorrow like my Sorrow, Lam. 1. 12.

O the bitter Cries and Complaints that the broken hearted have, and make to one another! Still every one imagining, that his own Wounds are deepest, and his own Sores fullest of anguish, and hardest to be cured. Say they, If our Iniquities be upon us, and we pine away in them, how can we then live, Ezek. 33. 10.

Once being at an honest Woman's House, I, after some pause, asked her, How she did? She said, Very badly: I asked her, if she was sick, she answered No: What then? said I, Are any of your Children ill? She told me No: What, said I, is your Husband amiss, or do you go back in the World? No, no, said she, But I am afraid I shall not be saved. And brake out with heavy Heart, saying, Ah Goodman Bunyan! Christ and a Pitcher; if I had Christ, though I went and begged my Bread with a Pitcher, 'twould be better with me, than I think it is now.

This Woman had her Heart broken, this Woman wanted Christ, this Woman was concerned for her Soul: There are but few Women, rich Women, that count Christ and a Pitcher, better than the World, their Pride and Pleasures. This Woman's Cries are worthy to be recorded: 'twas a Cry that carried in it, not only a Sense of the want, but also of the worth of Christ. This Cry, Christ and a Pitcher, made a melodious Noise in the Ears of the very Angels.

But I say, few Women cry out thus; few Women are so in love with their own Eternal Salvation, as to be willing to part with all their Lusts and Vanities, for Jesus Christ, and a Pitcher. Good Jacob also was thus: If the Lord, said he, will give me Bread to eat, and Rayment to put on, then he shall be my God: Yea, he vowed it should be so. And Jacob vowed a Vow, saying, If God will be with me, and keep me in this way that I go, and will give me Bread to eat, and Raiment to put on; so that I come again to my Father's House in Peace: then shall the Lord be my God, Gen. 28.

3. As they bemoan themselves, and make their Complaints to one and another, so they cry to God. O God, said Heman, I have cried Day and Night to thee: But when? Why, when his Soul was full of trouble, and his Life drew near to the Grave, Psal. 88. 1, 2, 3. Or as it says in another place, Out of the Deep, out of the Belly of Hell cried I: By such Words, expressing what painful Condition they were in, when they cried, Psal. 130. 1. Jonah 2. 2.

See how God himself words it, My pleasant portion, says he, is become a desolate Wilderneck, and being desolate, it mourneth unto me, Jer. 12. 11.

And this also is natural to those whose Hearts are broken. Whether goes the Child, when it catcheth harm, but to its Father, to its Mother? Where doth it lay its Head, but in their Laps? Into whose Bosom doth it pour out its Complaint, more especially, but into the Bosom of a Father, of a Mother; because there is Bowels, there is Pity, there is Relief and Succour? And thus it is with them, whose Bones, whose Hearts are broken: 'Tis natural to them, they must cry, they can't but cry to him. Lord heal me, said David, for my Bones are vexed; Lord heal me, for my Soul is vexed, Psal. 6. 1, 2, 3.

He that cannot cry, feels no Pain, feels no want, fears no danger, or else is dead.

Sixthly, Another Sign of a broken Heart, and of a contrite Spirit, is, It trembleth at God's Word. To him that is poor, and of a contrite Spirit, and trembled at my Word, Isa. 66. 2.

The Word of God, is an awful Word to a broken hearted Man. Solomon says, The Word of a King is as the Roaring of a Lion: And if so, what is the Word of God? (For by the Wrath and Fear, is meant the Authoritative Word of a King.)

We have a Proverb, The burnt Child dreads the Fire: The whipp'd Child fears the Rod; even so the broken hearted fears the Word of God. Hence you have a Remark set upon them that tremble at God's Word: to wit, They are they that keep among the godly; they are they that keep within compass; they are they that are aptest to mourn, and to stand in the Gap, when God is angry; And to turn away his Wrath from a People.

'Tis a sign the Word of God has had place, and wrought powerfully, when the Heart trembleth at it, is afraid, and stands in awe of it. When Joseph's Mistress tempted him to lie with her, he was afraid of the Word of God; How shall I do this great Wickedness, said he, and Sin against God? He stood in awe of God's Word, durst not do it, because he kept in remembrance, what a dreadful Thing 'twas to rebel against God's Word. When old Eli heard that the Ark was taken, his very Heart trembled within him; for he read by that sad loss, that God was angry with Israel, and he knew the anger of God, was a great and terrible Thing. When Samuel went to Bethlehem, the Elders of the Town trembled; for they feared that he came to them with some sad Message from God, and they had had Experience of the dread of such Things before, Gen. 39. 7, 8, 9. 1 Sam. 4. 13. 16, 1, 2, 3, 4.

When Ezra would have a Mourning in Israel for the Sins of the Land, he sent, And there came to him, every one that trembled at the Words of the God of Isaac, because of the Transgressions of those, that had been carried away, Ezek. 9. 4.

There are, I say, a sort of People, that tremble at the Words of God, and that are afraid of doing ought that is contrary to them; but they are only such, with whose Souls and Spirits the Word has had to do. For the rest, they are resolved to go on their course, let God say what he will. As for the Word of the Lord, said rebellious Israel to Jeremiah, which thou hast spoken to us in the Name of the Lord, we will not hearken unto it: But we will do whatsoever Thing goeth out of our own mouth, Jer. 44. 16, 17. But do you think, that these People did ever feel the Power and Majesty of the Word of God, to break their Hearts? No verily; had that been so, they would have trembled at the Words of God, they would have been afraid of the Words of God. God may command some People what he will, they'll do what they list. What care they for God? What care they for his Word? Neither Threats nor Promises, neither Punishments or Favours, will make them obedient to the Word of God; and all because they have not felt the Power of it, their Hearts have not been broken with it. When King Josias did but read in God's Book, what punishment God had threatned against rebellious Israel; though he himself was a holy and good Man, He humbled himself, he rent his Cloths, and wept before the Lord, and was afraid of the Judgment threatned, 2 King. 22. 2 Chron. 34.

For he knew what a dreadful Thing the Word of God is. Some Men, as I said before, dare do any Thing, let the Word of God be never so much against it; but they that tremble at the Word, dare not do so. No, they must make the Word their Rule for all they do; they must go to the Holy Bible, and there enquire what may, or may not be done; for they tremble at the Word.

This then is another Sign, a true Sign that the Heart has been broken, namely, When the Heart is made afraid of, and trembleth at the Word, Acts 9. 4, 5, 6. Chap. 16. 29, 30, 31.

Trembling at the Word, is caused by a belief of what is deserved, threatned, and of what will come, if not prevented by Repentance; and therefore the Heart melts, and breaks before the Lord.

I come in the next Place to speak to this Question.

But what necessity is there that the Heart must be broken? Cannot a Man be saved unless his Heart be broken?

I answer, avoiding secret Things, which only belongs to God, there is a necessity of breaking the Heart, in order to Salvation; because a Man will not sincerely comply with the Means conducing thereunto, until his Heart is broken. For,

First, Man, take him as he comes into the World, as to Spirituals, as to evangelical Things, in which mainly lies Man's eternal Felicity, and there he is as one dead, and so stupified, and wholly in himself, as unconcerned with it: Nor can any Call nor Admonition, that has not a Heart-breaking Power attending of it, bring him to a due Consideration of his present State, and so unto an effectual desire to be saved.

Many ways God has manifested this:

1. He has threatned Men with Temporal Judgments; yea, sent such Judgments upon them, once and again, over and over, but they will not do. What, says he, I have given you Cleanness of teeth in all your Cities; I have with-holden the Rain from you; I have smitten you with blasting and mildew; I have sent among you the Pestilence; I have overthrow some of you, as God overthrow Sodom and Gomorrah: Yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the Lord, Amos 4. 6, to 12.

See here! Here is Judgment upon Judgment, Stroke after Stroke, Punishment after Punishment, but all will not do unless the Heart is broken! Yea, another Prophet seems to say, that such Things, instead of converting the Soul, sets it further off: If Heart-breaking Work attend not such strokes, Why should ye be stricken any more? says he, Ye will revolt more and more, Isa. 1. 5.

Man's Heart is fenced, it is grown gross, there is a skin, that like a Coat of Mail has wrapp'd it up, and enclosed it on every side. This Skin, this Coat of Mail, unless it be cut off and taken away, the Heart remains untouched, whole; and so as unconcerned, whatever Judgments or Afflictions light upon the Body, Mat. 13. 15. Act. 28. 27.

This which I call the Coat of Mail, the Fence of the Heart, has two great Names in Scripture. It is called, the Fore-skin of the Heart, and the Armour in which the Devil trusteth, Deut. 10. 16. Luke 11. 22.

Because these Shield and Fence the Heart from from all Gospel Doctrine, and from all legal Punishments; nothing can come at it, till these are removed. Therefore in order unto Conversion, the Heart is said to be circumcised; that is, this Fore-skin is taken away, and this Coat of Mail is spoiled. I will circumcise thy Heart, saith he, to love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, (and then the Devil's goods are spoiled) that thou mayest live, Deut. 10. 6. Luke 11. 22.

And now the Heart lies open, now the Word will prick, cut and pierce it; and it being cut, prick'd and pierced, it bleeds, it faints, it falls and dies at the Foot of God, unless it is supported by the Grace and Love of God in Jesus Christ.

Conversion, you know, begins at the Heart; but if the Heart be so secured by Sin and Satan, as I have said, all Judgments are, while that is so, in vain. Hence Moses, after he had made a long Relation of Mercy and Judgment unto the Children of Israel, suggests, that yet the great Thing was wanting to them; and that Thing was, An Heart to perceive, and Eyes to see, and Ears to hear unto that Day, Deut. 29. 2, 3.

Their Hearts were as yet not touched to the quick, were not awakened, and wounded by the holy Word of God, and made tremble at its Truth and Terrour.

But I say, before the Heart be touched, prick'd, made smart, &c. how can it be thought, be the Danger never so great, that it should repent, cry, bow, and break at the Foot of God, and supplicate there for Mercy? And yet thus it must do; for thus God has ordained, and thus God has appointed it; nor can Men be saved without it.

But I say, Can a Man spiritually dead, a stupid Man, whose Heart is past feeling, do this, before he has his dead and stupid Heart awakened, to see and feel its State and Misery without it? But,

Secondly, Man, take him as he comes into the World (and how wise soever he is in worldly and temporal Things) He is yet a Fool, as to that which is spiritual and heavenly. Hence, he says, The Natural Man receiveth not the Things that are of the Spirit of God; for they are Foolishness to him, (because he is indeed a Fool to them,) neither, says the Text, can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned, 1 Cor. 2. 14.

But, how now? Must this Fool be made wise? Why Wisdom must be put into his Heart, Job 38. 36.

Now none can put it there but God; and how doth he put it there, but by making room there for it, by taking away the Thing which hinders, which is that Folly and Madness which naturally dwelleth there? But how doth he take that away but by a severe chastising of his Soul for it, until he has made him weary of it? The Whip and Stripes are provided for the natural Fool, and so it is for him that is spiritually so, Prov. 19. 29.

Solomon intimates, that 'tis a hard Thing to make a Fool become wise. Though thou shouldest bray a Fool in a Mortar among Wheat with a Pestle, yet will not his Foolishness depart from him, Prov. 27. 22.

By this it appears, that it is a hard Thing to make a Fool a wise Man. To bray one in a Mortar is a dreadful Thing, to bray one there with a Pestle; and yet it seems a Whip, a Mortar and a Pestle is the Way. And if this is the Way to make one wise in this World; and if all this will hardly do, how must the Fool that is so in Spirituals, be whip'd and beaten, and striped before he is made wise therein? Yea, his Heart must be put into God's Mortar, and must be beaten; yea, brayed there with the Pestle of the Law, before it loves to hearken unto heavenly Things. It is a great Word in Jeremiah, Through Deceit, that is, Folly, they refuse to know me, saith the Lord. And what follows? Why, Therefore thus saith the Lord, behold I will melt them, and try them, (that is, with Fire) for how shall I do for the Daughter of my People? Jer. 9. 6, 7.

I will melt them; I will put them into my Furnace, and there will I try them; and there I will make them know me, saith the Lord. When David was under spiritual Chastisement for his Sin, and had his Heart under the breaking Hand of God: then he said, God should make him know Wisdom, Psal. 51. 6.

Now he was in the Mortar, now he was in the Furnace, now he was bruised and melted; yea, now his Bones, his Heart was breaking; and now his Folly was departing. Now, says he, Thou shalt make me to know Wisdom. If I know any thing of the Way of God with US Fools, there is nothing else will make us wise Men; yea, a thousand Breakings will not make us so wise as we should be.

We say, Wisdom is not good till 'tis bought; and he that buys it, according to the Intention of that Proverb, usually smarts for it. The Fool is wise in his own conceit: wherefore, there is a double difficulty attends him, before he can be wise indeed: Not only his Folly, but his Wisdom must be removed from him; and how shall that be, but by a ripping up of his Heart, by some sore Conviction, that may shew him plainly, that his Wisdom is his Folly, and that which will undo him. A Fool loves his Folly; that is, as Treasure; so much is he in love with it. Now then, it must be a great Thing that must make a Fool forsake his Folly. The Foolish will not weigh, not consider, not compare Wisdom with their Folly. Folly is Joy to him that is destitute of Wisdom: As a Dog returneth to his Vomit, so a Fool returneth to his Folly. So loth are they when driven from it, to let it go, to let it depart from them, Prov. 15. 21. Chap. 26. 11.

Wherefore, there must go a great deal to the making of a Man a Christian; for as to that, every Man's a Fool; yea, the greatest Fool, the most unconcerned Fool, the most self-willed Fool of all Fools: Yea, one that will not be turned from his folly, but by the breaking of his Heart. David was one of these Fools; Manasseh was one of these Fools; Saul, otherwile called Paul, was one of these Fools; and so was I, and that the biggest of all.

Thirdly, Man, Take him as he comes into the World, and he is not only a dead Man, and a Fool, but a proud Man also. Pride is one of those Sins that first sheweth itself in Children; yea, and it grows up with them, and mixeth itself with all they do: But it lies most hid, most deep in Man as to his Soul Concerns. For the Nature of Sin as Sin, is not only to be vile, but to hide its vileness from the Soul. Hence many think they do well when they sin. Jonah thought he did well to be angry with God. The Pharisees thought they did well, when they said, Christ had a Devil; and Paul thought verily, that he ought to do many things against, or contrary to the Name of Jesus; which he also did with great madness, Job. 4. 9. Job. 8. 48. Acts 26. 9, 10.

And thus Sin puffs up Men with Pride, and a Conceit of themselves, that they are a thousand times better than they are. Hence they think, they are the Children of God, when they are the Children of the Devil; and that they are something as to Christianity, when they neither are such, nor know what it is that they must have to make them such, Job. 8. 41, 42, 43, 44. Gal. 6. 3.

Now, whence flows this, but from Pride, and a Self-conceit of themselves; and that their State is good for another World, when they are yet in their Sins, and under the Curse of God: Yea, and this Pride is so strong and high, and yet so hid in them, that all the Ministers in the World cannot perswade them that this is Pride, not Grace, in which they are so confident.

Hence they slight all Reproofs, Rebukes, Threatnings, or Admonitions that are prest upon them, to prevail with them to take heed, that they be not herein deceived. Hear ye, saith the Prophet, and give Ear; be not proud for the Lord hath spoken, Jer. 13. 15. And if ye will not hear it, my Soul shall weep in secret for your pride, (ver. 17.) And what was the conclusion? Why, All the proud Men stood out still, and maintained their Resistance of God and his holy Prophet, Chap. 43. 2.

Nor is there any thing that will prevail with these, to the saving of their Souls, until their Hearts are broken. David after he had defiled Bathsheba, and slay'd her Husband, yet boasted himself in his Justice and Holiness, and would by all means have the Man put to Death, that had but taken the poor Man's Lamb, 2 Sam. 12. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. When, alas poor Soul! himself was the great Transgressor. But, would he believe it? No, no, he stood upon the vindicating of himself to be a just Doer; nor would he be made to fall, until Nathan by Authority from God, did tell him, That he was the Man, whom himself had condemned, Thou art the Man, said he: At which word his Conscience was awakened, his Heart wounded, and so his Soul made to fall under the Burden of his guilt, at the Feet of the God of Heaven for Mercy, verse 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

Ah! Pride, Pride! Thou art that which holds many a Man in the Chains of his Sins: Thou art it, thou curfist Self-conceit, that keepest them from believing that their State is damnable. The wicked through the pride of his Countenance will not seek after God, Psal. 10. 4. And if there is so much in the Pride of his Countenance, what is there think you, in the Pride of his Heart?

Therefore Job says, It is to hide Pride from Man, and so to save his Soul from Hell, That God chasteneth him with pain upon his Bed, until the Multitude of his Bones stick out, and until his Life draws nigh to the Destroyer, Job 33. 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22.

'Tis an hard thing to take a Man off of his Pride, and make him, instead of trusting in, and boasting of his Goodness, Wisdom, Honesty, and the like; to see himself a Sinner, a Fool; yea, a Man that is cruel as to his own immortal Soul.

Pride of Heart has a Power in it, and is therefore compared to an Iron Sinew, and an Iron Chain, by which they are made stout; and with which, they are held in that stoutness, to oppose the Lord, and drive his Word from their Hearts, Levit. 26. 19. Psal. 73. 6.

This was the Sin of Devils, and it is the Sin of Man; and the Sin, I say, from which no Man can be delivered until his Heart is broken; and then his Pride is spoiled, then he'll be glad to yield.

If a Man be proud of his Strength or Manhood, a broken Leg will maul him: And if a Man be proud of his Goodness a broken Heart will maul him; because, as has been said, a broken Heart comes by the discovery and charge of Sin, by the power of God upon the Conscience.

Fourthly, Man, take him as he comes into the World, and he is not only a dead Man, a Fool, and proud; but also Self-willed, and head-strong, 2 Pet. 2. 10.

A stubborn ungain Creature is Man, afore his Heart is broken. Hence they are so often called Rebels, Rebellious and Disobedient; They will only do what they list.

All

All Day long, says God, have I stretched out my Hand, to a disobedient and gain-saying People.

And hence again, they are compared to a Self-willed or head-strong Horse, that will in spite of his Rider, rush into the Battle. Every one, says God, turneth to his course, and as the Horse rusheth into the Battle, Jer. 8. 16.

They say, With our Tongues we will prevail, our Lips are our own; who is Lord over us, Psal. 12. 4.

Hence they are said to stop their Ear, to pull away their Shoulder, to shut their Eyes, and harden their Hearts against the Words of God, and to contemn the Counsel of the most High, Zech. 7. 10, 11, 12. Psal. 107. 11.

They are fitly compared to the Rebellious Son, who would not be ruled by his Parents; or to the Prodigal, who would have all in his own Hand, and remove himself far away from Father, and Father's House, Deut. 21. 20. Luke 15. 13.

Now for such Creatures, nothing will do but Violence. The stubborn Son, must be stoned till he dies; and the Prodigal must be famished out of all: Nothing else, I say, will do. Their self-willed, stubborn Heart, will not comply with the Will of God, before 'tis broken, Deut. 21. 21. Luk. 15. 14, 15, 16, 17.

These are they that are called the stout-hearted; these are said to be far from Righteousness, and so will remain until their Hearts are broken; for so they must be made to know themselves, Isa. 9. 9, 10, 11.

Fifthly, Man, as he comes into the World, is not only a dead Man, a Fool, Proud, and Self-willed; but also a fearless Creature. There is, saith the Text, no fear of God before their Eyes, Rom. 3. 18.

No fear of God. There is fear of Man, fear of losing his Favour, his Love, his Good Will, his Help, his Friendship: This is seen every where; how does the Poor fear the Rich, the Weak fear the Strong; and those that are Threatned, them that Threaten? But come now to God, why none fears him; that is, by Nature, none Reverence him; they neither fear his Frowns, nor seek his Favour, nor enquire, how they may escape his revenging Hand, that is lifted up against their Sins, and their Souls, because of Sin. Little things, they fear the losing of them; but the Soul they are not afraid to lose. They fear not me, saith the Lord, Mal. 3. 5.

How many times are some Men put in Mind of DEATH, by Sicknes upon themselves, by Graves, by the Death of others?

How many times are they put in Mind of HELL, by reading the Word, by lashes of Conscience; and by some, that go roaring in Despair out of this World?

How many times are they put in Mind of the Day of Judgment? As,

1. By God's binding the Fallen Angels over to Judgment.

2. By the drowning of the Old World, 2 Pet. 2, 4, 5. Jude 6, 7.

3. By the burning of Sodom and Gomorrah with Fire from Heaven, 2 Pet. 2. 6. Jude 7.

4. By appointing a Day, Acts 17. 29, 30, 31.

5. By appointing a Judge, Acts 10. 40, 41, 42.

6. By reserving their Crimes in Records, Isa. 30. 8. Rev. 20. 12.

7. By appointing and preparing of Witnesses, Rom. 12. 15.

8. And by Promising, yea Threatning, yea, Resolving to call the whole World to his Bar, there to be judged, for all which they have done and said; and for every secret Thing, Matt. 25. 31, 32, 33. Chap. 12. 36. Eccles. 11. 9. Chap. 12. 14.

And yet they fear not God: Alas! They believe not these things: These things, to carnal Men, are like Lot's preaching to his Sons and Daughters, that were in Sodom. When he told them, that God would destroy that Place, He seemed unto them as one that mocked; and his Words, to them, were as idle Tales, Gen. 19. 14.

Fearless Men are not won by Words: Blows, Wounds, and Killings, are the things that must bring them under Fear. How many struggling Fits, had Israel with God in the Wilderness? How many times did they declare, that there they feared him not? And observe, they were seldom, if ever, brought to fear and dread his glorious Name, unless he beset them round with Death and the Grave: Nothing, nothing but a severe Hand, will make the fearless fear. Hence, to speak after the manner of Men, God is put upon it, to go this way with Sinners, when he would save their Souls; even bring them, and lay them at the Mouth, and within sight of Hell and Everlasting Damnation; and there also charge them with Sin and Guilt, to the breaking of their Hearts, before they will fear his Name.

Sixthly, Man, as he comes into the World, is not only a dead Man, a Fool, Proud, Self-willed and Fearless; but he is a false believer concerning God. Let God report of himself never so plainly, Man by Nature, will not believe this report of him: No, They are become vain in their Imaginations, and their foolish Heart is darkned; wherefore they turn the Glory of God, which is his Truth, into a Lie, Rom. 1. 21, 22, 23, 24, 25.

1. God says, He sees; They say, He seeth not: God saith, He knows; They say, He doth not know: God saith, None is like to himself: Yet they say, He is altogether like to them : God saith, None shall keep his Door for nought : They say, 'Tis in vain, and to no profit to serve him : He saith, He will do good : They say, He will neither do good nor evil, Job 22. 13, 14. Psal. 50. 21. Job 21. 14, 15. Mal. 3. 14. Zeph. 1. 12.

Thus they falsely believe concerning God : Yea, as to the Word of his Grace, and the Revelation of his Mercy in Christ. They stick not to say by their Practice, (for a wicked Man speaketh with his Feet, Prov. 6. 13.) that that is a stark Lie, and not to be trusted to, 1 John 5. 10.

Now, what shall God do to save these Men ? If he hides himself, and conceals his Glory, they perish : If he sends to them by his Messengers, and forbears to come to them himself, they perish : If he comes to them, and forbears to work upon them by his Word, they perish : If he worketh on them, but not effectually, they perish : If he works effectually he must break their Hearts, and make them, as Men wounded to Death, fall at his Feet for Mercy, or there can be no good done on them ; they will not rightly believe, until he fires them out of their mis-belief ; and makes them to know, by the breaking of their Bones for their false Faith, that he is, and will be what he has said of himself, in his holy Word. The Heart therefore must be broken, before the Man can come to good.

Seventhly, Man, as he comes into the World, is not only a dead Man, a Fool, Proud, Self-willed, Fearless and false Believer, but a great Lover of Sin. He is captivated, ravished, drowned in the Delights of it. Hence it says, They love Sin, delight in Lies, do take pleasure in Iniquity, and in them that do it; that they sport themselves in their own deceivings, and Glory in their Shame, John 3. 9, 12. Psal. 62. 4. Rom. 1. 32. 2 Pet. 2. 13. Phil. 3. 19.

This is the Temper of Man by Nature, for Sin is mixed with, and has the mastery of all the Powers of his Soul. Hence, they are said to be Captives to it, and to be led Captive into the Pleasures of it, at the Will of the Devil, 2 Tim. 2. 26.

And you know, 'tis not an easy thing to break Love, or to take the Affections off of that Object, on which they are so deeply set, in which they are so deeply rooted, as Man's Heart is in his Sins. Alas ! how many are there, that contemn all the Allurements of Heaven, and that trample upon all the Threatnings of God, and that say, Tush, at all the Flames of Hell, whenever they are propounded, as motives to work them off their sinful Delights ? So fixed are they, so mad are they, upon these beastly Idols : Yea, he that shall take in hand, to stop their course in this their way, is, as he that shall attempt to prevent the raging Waves of the Sea, from their course, when driven by the mighty Winds.

When Men are somewhat put to it, when

Reason and Conscience shall begin a little to hearken to a Preacher, or a Judgment, that shall begin to hunt for Iniquity, how many tricks, evasions, excuses, demurs, delays, and hiding holes will they make, invent, find, to hide and preserve their sweet Sins, with themselves, and their Souls, in the delights of them, to their own eternal perdition. Hence they endeavour to stifle Conscience, to choak Convictions, to forget God, to make themselves Atheists, to contradict Preachers that are plain and honest, and to heap to themselves such of them only, as are like themselves, That speak unto them smooth things, and prophesy deceits; yea, they say themselves to such Preachers, Get ye out of the way; turn aside out of the path: cause the holy one of Israel to cease from before us, Isa. 30. 8, 9, 10, 11.

If they be followed still, and Conscience and Guilt shall, like Blood-hounds, find them out in their secret Places, and roar against them for their wicked Lives ; then they will flatter, cogg, dissemble and lie against their Souls, promising to mend, to turn, to repent, and grow better shortly ; and all to daff-off Convictions and Molestations, in their wicked ways ; that they may yet pursue their Lusts, their Pleasures and sinful Delights in quiet, and without controul.

Yea, further, I have known some that have been made to roar like Bears, to yell like Dragons, and to howl like Dogs, by reason of the weight of guilt, and the lashes of Hell upon their Conscience, for their evil Deeds ; who have, so soon as their present Torments and Fears were gone, returned again with the Dog to his Vomit ; or as the Sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the Mire, Hof. 7. 14. 2 Pet. 2. 20, 21, 22.

Once again, Some have been made taste of the good Word of God, of the Joy of Heaven, and of the Powers of the World to come ; and yet could not by any one, nay, by all of these, be made to break their League for ever with their Lusts and Sins, Heb. 6. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Luke 8. 13. John 5. 33, 34, 35.

O Lord ! What's Man, that thou art mindful of him ? Wherein is he to be accounted of ? He has sinned against thee, he loves his Sins more than thee. He is a Lover of Pleasures, more than he is a Lover of God.

But now, how shall this Man be reclaimed from this Sin ? How shall he be brought, wrought, and made, to be out of Love with it ? Doubtless, it can be by no other means, by what we can see in the Word, but by the wounding, breaking, and disabling of the Heart that loves it ; and by that means, making it a Plague and Gall unto it. Sin may be made an Affliction, and as Gall and Wormwood to them that love it ; but the making of it so bitter a thing to such a Man, will not be done, but by great and fore fore means. I remember we had in our Town, some time since, a little Girl, that loved to eat the heads of foul Tobacco-pipes, and neither Rod, nor good Words could reclaim her, and make her leave them: So her Father takes Advice of a Doctor, to wean her from them; and 'twas this: Take saith he, a great many of the foulest Tobacco pipe-heads you can get, and boyl them in Milk, and make a Posset of that Milk, and make your Daughter drink the Posset-drink up. He did so, and gave his Girl it, and made her drink it up; the which became so irksome and nauseous to her Stomach, and made her so sick, that she could never abide to meddle with Tobacco-pipe-heads any more, and so was cured of that Disease.

Thou lovest thy Sin, and neither Rod, nor good Words will as yet reclaim thee; well, take heed; if thou wilt not be reclaimed, God will make thee a Posset of them, which shall be so bitter to thy Soul, so irksome to thy Taste, so loathsome to thy Mind, and so afflicting to thy Heart, that it shall break it with Sickness and Grief, till it be loathsome to thee: I say, thus he will do, if he loves thee: If not, he will suffer thee to take thy course, and will let thee go on with thy Tobacco-pipe-heads.

The Children of Israel will have Flesh, must have Flesh; they weep, cry, and murmur, because they have not Flesh. The Bread of Heaven, that's but light and sorry stuff in their esteem, Numb. 11. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6.

Moses goes and tells God, how the People despised his Heavenly Bread, and how they longed, lusted, and desired to be fed with Flesh. Well, says God, They shall have Flesh, they shall have their fill of Flesh: I will feed them with it; they shall have to the full; and that, Not for a Day, or two Days, or five Days, neither ten Days, nor twenty Days: But even a whole Month, until it come out at their Nostrils, and it be loathsome unto them; because they have despised the Lord, Numb. 11. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20.

He can tell how to make that loathsome to thee, on which thou most dost set thine evil Heart: And he will do so, if he loves thee; else, as I said, he will not make thee sick by smiting of thee, nor punish thee for, or when thou committest Whoredom, but will let thee alone till the Judgment Day, and call thee to a Reckoning for all thy Sins then. But to pass this.

Eighthly, Man as he comes into the World, is not only a dead Man, a Fool, Proud, Self-willed, Fearless, a false Believer, and a Lover of Sin; but a wild Man. He is of the wild Olive Tree, of that which is wild by Nature, Rom. 11. 17, 24.

So in another place, Man by Nature is compared to the Ass, to a wild Ass: For vain or empty Man would be wise, though Man be born as a wild Asses Colt, Job 11. 12.

Isaac was a Figure of Christ, and of all converted Men, Gal. 4. 28.

But Ismael was a Figure of Man by Nature: And the Holy Ghost as to that, saith this of him; And he will be a wild Man, Gen. 16. 12. This Man, I say, was a Figure of all carnal Men in their Wildness, or Estrangedness from God. Hence 'tis said of the Prodigal at his Conversion, That he came to himself then; implying, that he was mad, wild, or out of his WITS afore, Luke 15. 17.

I know there is a difference sometimes, betwixt ones being wild and mad: Yet, sometimes Wildness arriveth to that degree, as to give one rightly the Denomination of being mad: And 'tis always true in Spirituals; namely, that he that is wild, as to God, is mad, or besides himself; and so not capable, before he is tamed, of minding his own eternal good as he should.

There are these several things, that are Tokens of one wild or mad; and they all meet in a Carnal Man.

1. A wild or mad Man, gives no heed to good Counsel: The Frenzy of his Head shuts all out, and by its Force, leads him away from Men that are wise and sober; and thus it is with Carnal Men. Good Counsel is to them as Pearls are, that are cast afore Swine. It is trampled under foot of them, and the Man is despised that brings it. The poor Man's Wisdom is despised, and his Words are not heard, Matt. 7. 6. Eccl. 9. 16.

2. A wild or mad Man, let him alone, and he will greatly busy himself all his Life, to accomplish that, which when it is completed, amounts to nothing. The Work, the Toyl, the Travel of such an one, comes to nothing, save to declare, that he was out of his Wits that did it. David imitating of such an one, Scrabled upon the Gate of the King, as Fools do with Chalk; and like to this, is all the Work of all carnal Men in the World, 1 Sam. 21. 12, 13.

Hence, such an one is said to labour for the Wind, or for what will amount to no more, than if he filled his Belly with the East Wind, Eccles. 5. 16 Job 15. 2.

3. A wild or mad Man, if you set him to do any thing, and he does it; he will yet do it, not by, or according to your bidding, but after the folly of his own wild fancy; even as Jehu executed the Commandment of the Lord; he did it in his own madness, taking no heed to the Commandment of the Lord, 2 Kings 9. 20. Chap. 10. 31.

And thus do carnal Men do, when they meddle with any of God's Matters; as Hearing, Praying, Reading, Professing; they do all according to their own wild fancy: They take no heed to do these, after the Commandment of the Lord.

4. Wild or mad Men, if they deck or array themselves with ought, as many times they they do, why, the Spirit of their wildness or frenzy, appears even in the mode and way, in which they do it. Either the things themselves, which they make use of for that purpose, are very Toys and Trifles; or if they seem to be better, they are put on after an antick manner; rather to the rendering of them ridiculous, than to bespeak them sober, judicious, or wise: And so do natural Men array themselves, with what they would be accepted in with God. Would one in his Wits, think to make himself fine or acceptable to Men, by arraying himself in Menstruous Cloaths, or by painting his Face with drofs and dung? And yet, this is the finery of carnal Men, when they approach for Acceptance into the Presence of God, Isa. 64. 6. Phil. 3. 7, 8.

O the wildness, the frenzy, the madness that possesses the Heart and Mind of carnal Men! They walk according to the course of this World, according to, or after that Spirit, which is in Truth, the Spirit of the Devil, which worketh in the Children of Disobedience, Eph. 2. 1, 2, 3.

But, do they believe, that thus it is with them? No, they are in their own Accounts as other mad Men are, the only ones in the World. Hence they are so taken, and tickled with their own frantick Motions, and deride all else that dwell in the World.

But which is the way to make one that is wild, or a mad Man, sober? To let him alone, will not do it; to give him good Words only, will not do it. No, he must be tamed, means must be used to tame him. He brought down their Hearts with Labour, or by continual Molestation; as you have it, Psal. 107. 10, 11, 12. He speaketh there of mad Men, That are kept up in Darkness, and bound in Afflictions and Irons, because they rebelled against the Words of God, and contemned the Counsel of the most High.

This therefore is the way to deal with such, and none but God can so deal with them. They must be taken, they must be separated from Men; they must be laid in Chains, in Darkness, Afflictions and Irons: They must be blooded, half starved, whipped, purged, and be dealt with, as mad People are dealt with. And thus they must be dealt with, till they come to themselves, and cry out in their distresses: And then they cry to the Lord in their Troubles, and he saveth them out of their distresses; Then he brings them out of darkness, and the Shadow of Death; and breaks their Bands in sunder, Psal. 107. 13, 14, 15.

Thus, I say, God tames the wild, and brings mad Prodigals to themselves, and so to him for Mercy.

Ninthly, Man as he comes into the World, is not only a dead Man, a Fool, Proud, Self-willed, Fearless, a false Believer, a Lover of Sin, and a wild Man; but a Man, that dis-relishes the things of the Kingdom of God. I told you before, that Unconverted Man, is such as did not taste Things: But now I add, that he dis-relishes things, he calls bitter things, sweet; and sweet, bitter; he judges quite amiss. These are they God threatneth with a Woe. Woe to them that call Evil Good, and Good Evil; that put Darkness for Light, and Light for Darkness; that put Bitter for Sweet, and Sweet for Bitter, Isa. 5. 20.

This latter part of this Text, shews us evidently, that the things of God are dis-relished by some. They call his sweet things, bitter; and the Devil's bitter things, sweet; and all this is for want of a broken Heart. A broken Heart, relishes otherwise than an whole, or unbroken one doth.

A Man that has no Pain, or bodily distress, cannot find, or feel Vertue or Good, in the most Sovereign Plaister, were it applied to Arm or Leg; no, he rather says, Away with these stinking daubing things. O! But lay the same Plaisters where there is need, and the Patient will relish, and taste, and savour the Goodness of them; yea, will prize and commend them to others.

Thus it is in Spirituals. The World, they know not what the Anguish or Pain of a broken Heart means; they say, Who will shew us any Good; that is, better than we find in our Sports, Pleasures, Estates, and Preferments? There may be many, says the Psalmist, speak after this sort: But what says the distressed Man? Why, Lord, lift thou up the light of thy Countenance upon us. And then adds, Thou hast put gladness in our Heart; namely, by the light of thy Countenance, for that is the Plaister for a broken Heart. Thou hast put Gladness in our Heart, more than in the Time that their Corn and their Wine encreaseth, Psal. 4. 1, 6, 7.

O! A broken Heart can savour Pardon, can savour the Consolations of the Holy Ghost. Yea, as a hungry or thirsty Man prizes Bread and Water, in the want thereof, so doth the broken in Heart prize, and set an high esteem on the things of the Lord Jesus: His Flesh, his Blood, his Promise, and the Light of his Countenance, are the only sweet things both to Scent and Taste, to those, that are of a wounded Spirit. The full Soul loatheth the Honey-comb; the whole despise the Gospel, they savour not the things that are of God.

If twenty Men were to hear a Pardon read, and but one of those twenty were condemned to die; and the Pardon was for none but such; which of these Men, think you, would taste the Sweetness of that Pardon, they who were not, or he that was condemned? The condemned Man doubtless.

This is the Case in hand: The broken in Heart is a condemned Man: yea, 'tis sense of Condemnation, with other things, that has indeed broken his Heart; nor is there any any thing but sense of Forgiveness, that can bind it up, or heal it. But could that heal it, could he not taste, truly taste, or rightly relish this Forgiveness? No. Forgiveness would be to him, as it is to him that has not Sense of the want of it.

But I say, what's the Reason some so prize what others so despise, since they both stand in need of the same Grace and Mercy of God in Christ? Why, the one sees, and the other sees nothing of this woful, miserable State. And thus have I shewed you the necessity of a broken Heart.

1. Man is Dead, and must be quickned.
2. Man is a Fool, and must be made wise.
3. Man is Proud, and must be humbled.
4. Man is Self-willed, and must be broken.
5. Man is Fearless, and must be made to consider.

6. Man is a false Believer, and must be rectified.

7. Man is a Lover of Sin, and must be weaned from it.

8. Man is Wild, and must be tamed.

9. Man disrelishes the Things of God, and can take no favour in them, until his Heart is broken.

And thus have I done with this, and shall next come to the Reasons of the Point; namely, to shew you, Why or how it comes to pass, that a broken Heart, a Heart truly contrite, is to God such an excellent thing.

That to him it is so, we have proved by six Demonstrations: What it is, we have shewed by the six Signs thereof: That it must be, is manifest by those nine Reasons, but now urged: And WHAT it is with God, or in his esteem an excellent Thing, that is shewn by that which follows.

First, A broken Heart is the handy-work of God; an Heart of his OWN preparing, for his own Service. It is a Sacrifice of his own providing, of his providing for himself. As Abraham said in another case, God will provide himself a Lamb, Gen. 22. 8.

Hence it is said, The preparation of the Heart in Man, &c. is from the Lord. And again, God maketh my Heart soft, and the Almighty troubleth me, Job 23. 16.

The Heart, as it is by Nature hard, stupid, and impenetrable; so it remains, and so will remain, until God, as was said, bruisseth it with his Hammer, and melts it with his Fire.

The stony Nature of it, is therefore said to be taken away of God. I will take away the stony Heart out of your Flesh, and will give you, saith he, an Heart of Flesh, Ezek. 36. 26.

I will take away the stony Heart, or the stunness, or the hardness of your Heart, and I will give you an Heart of Flesh; that is, I will make your Heart sensible, soft, yielding, governable, and penitent. Sometimes he bids Men to rend their Hearts, not because they can, but to convince them rather, that though it must be so, they cannot do it: So he bids them make themselves a new Heart, and a new Spirit, for the same purpose also; for if God doth not rend it, it remains unrent; if God makes it not new, it abides an old one still.

This is that that is meant, by his bending of Men for himself, and of his working in them, that which is pleasing in his Sight, Zach. 9. 13.

The Heart, Soul, or Spirit, as in itself, as it came from God's Fingers, is a precious Thing, a Thing in God's Account worth more than all the World; this Heart, Soul or Spirit, Sin has hardened, the Devil has bewitched, the World has deceived. This Heart thus beguiled, God coveteth and desireth: My Son, saith he, give me thy Heart, and let thine Eyes observe my Way, Prov. 30. 26.

This Man cannot do this Thing, for that his Heart has the mastery of him, and will not but carry him after all manner of vanity. What now must be done? Why, God must take the Heart by storm, by power, and bring it to a compliance with the Word: But the Heart of it self, will not, it is deluded, carried away to another, than God. Wherefore, God now betakes him to his Sword, and brings down the Heart with Labour; opens it, and drives out the strong Man armed, that did keep it; wounds it, and makes it smart for its rebellion, that it may cry; so he rectifies it for himself. He maketh sore, and bindeth up; he woundeth, and his Hands make whole, Job 5. 18.

Thus having wrought it for himself, it becomes his Habitation, his Dwelling-place: That Christ might dwell in your Heart by Faith.

But I would not swerve from the Thing in Hand. I have told you, a broken Heart is the handy-work of God, a Sacrifice of his own preparing; a Material fitted for himself.

1. By breaking of the Heart he openeth it, and makes it a Receptacle for the Graces of his Spirit; that's the Cabinet, when unlocked, where God lays up the Jewels of the Gospel: There he puts his fear; I will put my fear in their Heart: There he writes his Law: I will write my Law in their Heart. There he puts his Spirit, I will put my Spirit within you, Jer. 31. 31, 32, 33. chap. 32. 39, 40, 41. Ezek. 36. 26, 27.

The Heart, I say, God chuses for his Cabinet: There he hides his Treasure, there is the Seat of Justice, Mercy, and of every Grace of God: I mean, when 'tis broken, made contrite, and so regulated by the Holy Word.

2. The Heart when broken, is like sweet Gums and Spices, when beaten: For as such cast their fragrant scent into the Nostrils of Men; so the Heart when broken, casts casts its sweet smell in the Nostrils of God. The Incense, which was a Type of Prayer of Old, was to be beaten or bruised, and so to be burned in the Censer. The Heart must be beaten or bruised, and then the sweet Scent will come out; even Groans, and Cries, and Sighs for the Mercy of God; which Cries, &c. to him, are a very excellent Thing, and pleasing in his Nostrils.

Secondly, A broken Heart is in the sight of God, an excellent Thing: Because a broken Heart is submissive; it falleth before God, and giveth to him his Glory. All this is true from a multitude of Scriptures, which I need not here mention. Hence such an Heart is called an honest Heart, a good Heart, a perfect Heart, a Heart fearing God; and such as is found in God's Statutes.

Now this cannot but be an excellent Thing, if we consider, that by such a Heart, unfeigned Obedience is yielded unto him that calleth for it. You have obeyed from the Heart, says Paul to them at Rome, that Form of Doctrine which was delivered unto you, Rom. 6.

Alas! the Heart before 'tis broken and made contrite, is quite of another temper; 'Tis not subject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. The great stir before the Heart is broken, is about who shall be Lord, God or the Sinner: True, the right of Dominion is the Lord's, but the Sinner will not suffer it, but will be ALL himself; saying, Who is Lord over us; and again say they to God, We are Lords, we will come no more unto thee, Psal. 12. 4. Jer. 2. 31.

This also is evident by their Practice; God may say what he will, but they will do what they list. Keep my Sabbath, says God; I will not, says the Sinner. Leave your Whoring, says God; I will not, says the Sinner. Do not tell Lies, nor Swear, nor Curse, nor Blaspheme my holy Name, says God: O but I will, says the Sinner. Turn to me, says God; I will not, says the Sinner. The right of Dominion is mine, says God; but like that young rebel, 1 Kings 1. 5. I will be King, says the Sinner. Now this is intolerable, this is unsufferable, and every Sinner by Practice says thus; for they have not submitted themselves unto the Righteousness of God.

Here can be no Concord, no Communion, no Agreement, no Fellowship. Here, here is Enmity on the one side, and flaming Justice on the other, 2 Cor. 6. 14. 15, 16. Zech. 11. 8.

And what delight, what content, what pleasure can God take in such Men? None at all; No, tho' they should be mingled with the best of the Saints of God; yea, tho' the best of Saints should supplicate for them. Thus, says Jeremiah, said the Lord unto me, Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, that is, to pray for them, yet my mind could not be towards this People, cast them out of my Sight, and let them go forth, Jer. 14. 1.

Here is nought but open War, Acts of Hostility, and shameful Rebellion on the Sinner's side; And what delight can God take in that? Wherefore if God will bend and buckle the Spirit of such an one, he must shoot an Arrow at him, a bearded Arrow, such as may not be pluckt out of the Wound; an Arrow that will stick fast, (Psal. 38. 1, 2.) and cause that the Sinner falls down as dead at God's Foot; then will the Sinner deliver up his Arms, and surrender up himself as one conquered, into the Hand of, and beg for the Lord's Pardon, and not till then, I mean not sincerely.

And now God has overcome, and his Right Hand, and his Holy Arm has gotten him the Victory. Now he rides in Triumph, with his Captive at his Chariot-wheel: Now he glories, now the Bells in Heaven do ring, now the Angels shout for Joy: yea, are bid to do so; Rejoyce with me, for I have found my sheep which was lost, Luke 15. 1, to 11.

Now also the Sinner, as a Token of being overcome, lies groveling at his foot, saying, Thine arrows are sharp in the Heart of the King's enemies, whereby the People fall under thee, Psal. 45. 3, 4, 5.

Now the Sinner submits, now he follows his Conqueror in Chains, now he seeks Peace, and would give all the World, were it his own, to be in the favour of God, and to have hopes by Christ of being saved.

Now this must be pleasing, this cannot but be a Thing acceptable in God's Sight. A broken and a contrite Heart, O God, thou wilt not despise. For it is the Desire of his own Heart, the Work of his own Hands.

Thirdly, Another reason, why a broken Heart is to God such an excellent Thing, is this: A broken Heart prizes Christ, and has an high esteem for him. The whole have no need of a Physician, but the sick; this Sick Man, is the Broken-hearted in the Text. For God makes Men sick by smiting of them, by breaking of their Hearts. Hence Sickness and Wounds are put together, for that the one is a true effect of the other, Mark 2. 17. Micah 6. 13. Hof. 5. 13.

Can any think that God should be pleased, when Men despise his Son; saying, He hath no Form nor Comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no Beauty that we should desire him? And yet so say they of him, whose Hearts God has not mollified; yea, the Elect themselves confess, that before their Hearts were broken, they set light by him also. He is, say they, despised and rejected of Men, and WE hid as it were our Faces from him; he was despised, and WE esteemed him not, Isa. 53. 2, 3.

He is indeed the great Deliverer: But what's a Deliverer to them that never saw themselves themselves in Bondage, as was said before? Hence 'tis said of him that delivered the City, No Man remember'd that same poor Man, Eccles. 9. 14, 15.

He has sorely suffered, and been bruised for the Transgression of Man, that they might not receive the Smart, and Hell, which by their Sins they have procured to themselves: But what is that to them that never saw ought but Beauty, and that never tasted any thing but Sweetness in Sin?

'Tis he that holdeth by his Intercession, the Hands of God; and that causes him to forbear to cut off the Drunkard, the Lyar, and unclean Person, even when they are in the very act and work of their Abomination: But their hard Heart, their stupified Heart, has no Sense of such Kindness as this, and therefore they take no notice of it. How many times has God said to this Dreſſer of his Vineyard, Cut down the barren Fig-Tree; while he yet by his Intercession, has prevailed for a Reprieve for another Year? But no notice is taken of this, no Thanks is from them returned to him for such Kindness of Christ. Wherefore such ungrateful, inconsiderate Wretches as these, must needs be a continual Eye-sore, as I may say, and great Provocation to God. And yet thus Men will do before their Hearts are broken, Luke 13. 6, 7, 8, 9.

Christ, as I said, is called a Physician; yea, he is the only Soul Physician. He heals, how desperate soever the Disease be; yea, and heals who he undertakes for ever. I give unto them eternal Life, (John 10. 27, 28.) and doth all of free Cost, of meer Mercy and Compassion.

But what's all this to one that neither sees his Sickness, that sees nothing of a Wound? What is the best Physician alive, or all the Physicians in the World, put all together, to him that knows no Sickness, that is sensible of no Disease? Physicians, as was said, may go a begging for all the healthful; Physicians are of no esteem, save only to the sick, or upon a Supposition of being so now, or at any other time.

Why, this is the cause Christ is so little set by in the World, God has not made them sick by smiting of them; his Sword has not given them the Wound, his Dart has not been struck through their Liver, they have not been broken with his Hammer, nor melted with his Fire. So they have no regard to his Physician; so they slight all the Provision which God has made for the Salvation of the Soul.

But now, let such a Soul be wounded, let such a Man's Heart be broken; let such a Man be made sick through the sting of Guilt, and be made to wallow himself in Ashes under the Burden of his Transgressions; and then who but Christ, (as has been shew'd afore) then the Physician; then,

Vol. II.

Wash me Lord; Supple my Wounds; then, Pour thy Wine and Oil into my Sore: Then, Lord Jesus cause me to hear the Voice of Joy and Gladness, that the Bones which thou hast broken may rejoice. Nothing now so welcome as healing; and so nothing, no Man so desirable now as Christ: His Name to such, is the best of Names; His Love to such is the best of Love; himself being now, not only in himself, but also to such a Soul, the chiefest of ten thousands, Song 5.

As Bread to the hungry, as Water to the thirsty, as Light to the blind, and Liberty to the imprisoned: So, and a thousand times more, is Jesus Christ to the wounded, and to them that are broken hearted.

Now, as was said, this must be excellent in God's Eyes, since Christ Jesus is so glorious in his Eyes. To contemn what a Man counts excellent, is an offence to him; but to value, esteem, or think highly of that which is of esteem with me, this is pleasing to me, such an Opinion is excellent in my Sight.

What says Christ? My Father loveth you, because ye loved me. Who hath an high esteem for Christ, the Father hath an high esteem for them. Hence 'tis said, He that hath the Son, hath the Father: the Father will be his, and will do for him as a Father, who receiveth and sets an honourable esteem on his Son, John 16. 27.

But none will, none can do this, but the broken hearted; because they, and they only are sensible of the want and worth of an interest in him.

I dare appeal to all the World as to the Truth of this, and do say again, That these, and none but these, have Hearts of esteem in the Sight of God. Alas! the Heart of the wicked is little worth, (Prov. 10. 20.) for it is destitute of a precious esteem of Christ, and cannot but be destitute, because it is not wounded, broken, and made sensible of the want of mercy by him.

Fourthly, A broken Heart is of great esteem with God, because it is a thankful Heart for that sense of Sin and of Grace it has received.

The broken Heart is a sensible Heart. This we touched upon before. It is sensible of the Dangers which Sin leadeth to; yea, and has cause to be sensible thereof, because it has seen and felt what Sin is, both in the Guilt and Punishment that by Law is due thereto. As a broken Heart is sensible of Sin, in the evil Nature, and Consequences of it; so it is also sensible of the Way of God's delivering the Soul from the Day of Judgment; consequently, it must be a thankful Heart. Now he that praises me, glorifies me, saith God; and God loves to be glorified, God's Glory is dear unto him, he will not part with that, Psal. 50. 23. Isa. 42. 8.

The

The broken hearted, say I, forasmuch as he is the sensible Soul, it follows, that he is the thankful Soul. Bless the Lord, O my Soul, said David, and all that is within me bless his holy Name. Behold what Blessing of God is here! And yet not content herewith, he goes on with it again, saying, Bless the Lord, O my Soul, and forget not all his Benefits, Psal. 103. 1, 2. But what's the Matter? Oh, he has forgiven all thine Iniquities, and healed all thy Diseases. He has redeemed thy Life from Destruction, and crowneth thee with loving Kindness and tender Mercies, verse 3, 4. But how came he to be affected with this? Why, he knew what it was to hang over the Mouth of Hell for Sin: Yea, he knew what it was for Death and Hell to beset and compass him about: Yea, they took hold of him, as we have said, and were pulling of him down into the deep; this he saw to the breaking of his Heart. He saw also the way of Life, and had his Soul relieved with Faith and Sense of that, and that made him a thankful Man. If a Man who has had a broken Leg, is but made to understand, that by the breaking of that, he was kept from breaking of his Neck, he will be thankful to God for a broken Leg. 'Tis good for me, said David, that I have been afflicted. I was by that preserved from a great danger; for before that, I went astray, Psal. 119. 67.

71. And who can be thankful for a Mercy, that is not sensible that they want it, have it, and have it of Mercy. Now this the broken hearted, this the Man that is of a contrite Spirit is sensible of; and that with reference to Mercies of the best sort, and therefore must needs be a thankful Man, and so have an Heart of esteem with God, because it is a thankful Heart.

Fifthly, A broken Heart is of great esteem with, or an excellent thing in the Sight of God, Because 'tis an Heart that desires now to become a Receptacle, or Habitation for the Spirit and Graces of the Spirit of God. It was the Devil's hold before, and was contented so to be. But now it is for entertaining of, for being possessed with the holy Spirit of God. Create in me a clean Heart, said David, and renew a right Spirit within me. Take not thy holy Spirit from me, uphold me with thy free Spirit, Psal. 51. 10, 11, 12.

Now he was for a clean Heart, and a right Spirit; now he was for the sanctifyings of the blessed Spirit of Grace: A thing which the uncircumcised in Heart resists, and do despite unto, Acts 7. 51. Heb. 10. 29.

A broken Heart therefore suiteth with the Heart of God, a contrite Spirit is one Spirit with him. God, as I told you before, covets to dwell with the broken in Heart, and the broken in Heart desireth communion with him. Now here's an Agreement, an Oneness of Mind; now the same Mind is in thee which was also in Christ Jesus. This must needs be an excellent Spirit; this must needs be better with God, and in his Sight, than thousands of Rams, or ten thousand Rivers of Oyl.

But does the carnal World covet this, this Spirit, and the blessed Graces of it? No, they despise it, as I said before, they mock at it, they prefer and countenance any sorry dirty Lust rather; and the reason is, because they want a broken Heart, that Heart so highly in esteem with God; and remain for want thereof, in their enmity to God.

The broken hearted knows, that the Sanctifyings of the Spirit, is a good means to keep from that relapse, out of which a Man cannot come, unless his Heart be wounded a second time. Doubtless David had a broken Heart at first Conversion, and if that brokenness had remained; that is, had he not given way to hardness of Heart again, he had never fallen into that Sin out of which he could not be recovered, but by the breaking of his Bones a second time. Therefore, I say, a broken Heart is of great esteem with God; for it (and I will add, so long as it retains its tenderness) covets none but God, and the things of his holy Spirit, Sin is an abomination to it.

And here, as in a fit place, before I go any further, I will shew you some of the Advantages that a Christian gets by keeping of his Heart tender. For,

As to have a broken Heart, is to have an excellent thing, so to keep this broken Heart tender, is also very advantageous.

First, This is the way to maintain in thy Soul always a fear of sinning against God. Christians do not wink at, or give way to Sin, until their Hearts begin to lose their Tenderness. A tender Heart will be afflicted at the Sin of another, much more it will be afraid of committing Sin it self, 2 Kings 22. 19.

Secondly, A tender Heart quickly yieldeth to Prayer; yea, prompteth to it, puts an edge and fire into it; we never are backward to Prayer, until our Heart has lost its Tenderness, though then it grows cold, flat and formal, and so carnal to, and in that holy duty.

Thirdly, A tender Heart, has always Repentance at hand for the least fault or slip or sinful thought that the Soul is guilty of; in many things the best offend: But if a Christian loseth his Tenderness, if he says he has his Repentance to seek, his Heart is grown hard; has lost that Spirit, that kind Spirit of Repentance it was wont to have. Thus it was with the Corinthians, they were decayed, and lost their Tenderness; wherefore their Sin, yea, great Sins, remain unrepented of, 2 Cor. 12. 20, 21.

Fourthly,

Fourthly, A tender Heart is for receiving often its Communion with God, when he that is hardened, tho' the Seed of Grace is in him, will be content to eat, drink, sleep, wake, and go Days without Number without him, Isa. 17. 10, 18. Jer. 2. 32.

Fifthly, A tender Heart is a wakeful watchful Heart. It watches against Sin in the Soul, Sin in the Family, Sin in the Calling, Sin in spiritual Duties and Performances, &c. It watches against Satan, against the World, against the Flesh, &c.

But now when the Heart is not tender; there is sleepiness, unwatchfulness, idleness, a suffering the Heart, the Family and Calling to be much defiled, spotted and blemished with Sin; for a hard Heart depart from God, and turns aside in all these things.

Sixthly, A tender Heart will deny it self, and that in lawful things, and will forbear even that which may be done, for some Jew, or Gentile, or the Church of God, or any Member of it should be offended, or made weak thereby: whereas the Christian that is not tender, that has lost his Tenderness, is so far off, of denying himself in lawful things, that he will even adventure to meddle in things utterly forbidden, whoever is offended, grieved, or made weak thereby: For an instance for this, we need go no further than to the Man in the Text. who while he was tender, trembled at little things, but when his Heart was hardened, he could take Bathsheba to satisfy his Lust, and kill her Husband to cover his Wickedness.

Seventhly, A tender Heart, I mean the Heart kept tender, preserves from many a blow, lash, and fatherly Chastisement; because it shuns the causes, which is Sin, of the scourging hand of God. With the upright thou wilt shew thy self upright, but with the froward thou wilt shew thy self unsavoury, 2 Sam. 22. 27. Psal. 18. 25, 26, 27.

Many a needless rebuke and wound, doth happen to the Saints of God thorow their unwise Behaviour; when I say needless, I mean, they are not necessary, but to reclaim us from our Vanities, for we should not feel the smart of them, were it not for our Follies. Hence the afflicted is called a Fool, because his Folly brings his Affliction upon him. Fools, says David, Because of their Transgressions, and because of their Iniquities are afflicted, Psal. 107. 17. And therefore it is, as was said afore, that he calls his Sin his Foolishness. And again, God will speak Peace to his People, and his Saints, but let not them return again to Folly, Psal. 38. 5. Psal. 85. 8.

If his Children transgress my Laws, I will visit their Transgressions with a Rod, and their Iniquities with Stripes.

Quest. But what should a Christian do, when God has broke his Heart, to keep it tender.

Ans. To this I will speak briefly. And, First, Give you several Cautions. Secondly, Several Directions.

For Cautions:

1. Take heed, that you choke not those Convictions that at present do break your Hearts, by labouring to put those things out of your Minds which were the cause of such Convictions, but rather nourish and cherish those things in a deep and sober remembrance of them. Think therefore with thy self thus, What was it that at first did wound my Heart? And let that still be there, until by the Grace of God, and the redeemed Blood of Christ, it is removed.

2. Shun vain Company; the keeping of vain Company has stifled many a Conviction, kill'd many a Desire, and made many a Soul fall into Hell, that once was hot in looking after Heaven. A Companion that is not profitable to the Soul, is hurtful. He that walketh with wise Men shall be Wise, but a Companion of Fools shall be destroyed, Prov. 13. 20.

3. Take heed of idle Talk, that thou neither hear nor join with it. Go from the presence of a foolish Man, when thou perceivest not in him the Lips of Knowledge, Prov. 14. 7. Evil Communication corrupts good Manners. And a Fool's Lips are a Snare to his Soul. Wherefore take heed of these things, Prov. 18. 7. 1 Cor. 15. 33.

4. Beware of the least Motion to Sin, that it be not countenanced, lest the countenancing of that, makes way for a bigger: David's Eye took his Heart, and so his Heart nourishing the thought, made way for the Woman's Company, the Act of Adultery and bloody Murder. Take heed therefore Brethren, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of Sin, Heb. 3. 12, 13.

And remember, that he that will rend the Block, puts the thin End of the Wedge first thereto, and so by driving does his Work.

5. Take heed of evil Examples among the godly, learn of no Man to do that which the Word of God forbids. Sometimes Satan makes use of a good Man's bad Ways, to spoil and harden the Heart of them that come after: Peter's false doing had like to have spoiled Barnabas, yea, and several others more. Wherefore take heed of Men, of good Men's Ways, and measure both theirs and thine own, by no other Rule but the holy Word of God, Gal. 2. 11, 12, 13.

6. Take heed of Unbelief, or Atheistical Thoughts; make no question of the truth and reality of heavenly things: For know, Unbelief is the worst of Evils; nor can the Heart be tender, that nourisheth or gives place unto it. Take heed therefore lest there be in any of you an evil Heart of unbelief in departing from the living God, Heb. 3. 12.

These

These Cautions are necessary to be observed with all diligence, of all them that would, when their Heart is made tender, keep it so.

And now to come to the Directions.

1. Labour after a deep Knowledge of God to keep it warm upon thy Heart. Knowledge of his Presence, that is every where. Do not I fill Heaven and Earth, saith the Lord? Jer. 23. 24.

2. Knowledge of his piercing Eye. That it runneth too and fro thorough the Earth, beholding in every place the Evil and the Good. That his Eyes behold, and his Eye-lids try the Children of Men, Prov. 15. 3.

3. The Knowledge of his Power, that he is able to turn and dissolve Heaven and Earth into Dust and Ashes; and that they are in his hand but as a Scrole or Vesture, Heb. 1. 11, 12.

4. The Knowledge of his Justice, that the Rebukes of it are as devouring Fire, Heb. 12. 19.

5. The Knowledge of his Faithfulness, in fulfilling Promises to them to whom they are made, and of his Threatnings on the impenitent, Matt. 5. 18. Chap. 24. 35. Mark 13. 31.

Secondly, Labour to get, and keep a deep sense of Sin in its evil Nature, and in its Soul-destroying Effects upon thy Heart; be perswaded, that it is the only Enemy of God, and that none hate, or are hated of God, but through that.

1. Remember, it turned Angels into Devils, thrust them down from Heaven to Hell.

2. That it is the Chain in which they are held and bound over to Judgment, 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jud. 6.

3. That 'twas for that that Adam was turned out of Paradise: That for which the Old World was drowned: That for which Sodom and Gomorrab was burned with Fire from Heaven: And that which cost Christ his Blood to redeem thee from the Curse it has brought upon thee: And that, if any thing, will keep thee out of Heaven for ever and ever.

4. Consider the pains of Hell, Christ makes use of that as an Argument to keep the Heart tender; yea, to that End repeats and repeats both the Nature and Durableness of the burning Flame thereof, and of the gnawing of the never dying Worm that dwells there, Mar. 9. 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48.

Thirdly, Consider of Death, both as to the Certainty of thy dying, and Uncertainty of the Time when. We must dye, we must needs dye, our Days are determined, the Number of our Months are with God, tho' not with us; nor can we pass them, would we, had we them, give a thousand Worlds to do it, 2 Sam. 14. 14. Job 7. 1. Chap. 14. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

Consider thou must die but once, I mean but once as to this World, for if thou, when thou goest hence, dost not die well, thou canst not come back again and die better. 'Tis appointed unto all Men once to die, and after this the Judgment, Heb. 9. 27.

Fourthly, Consider also of the Certainty and Terribleness of the Day of Judgment, when Christ shall sit upon his great white Throne, when the Dead shall, by the Sound of the Trump of God, be raised up; when the Elements, with Heaven and Earth, shall be on a burning Flame; when Christ shall separate Men one from another, as a Shepherd divideth his Sheep from the Goats; when the Books shall be opened, the Witness produced, and every Man be judged according to his Works; when Heavens Gate shall stand open to them that shall be saved, and the Jaws of Hell stand gaping for them that shall be damned. Acts 7. 30, 31. Chap. 10. 42. Matt. 25. 30, 31. Revel. 2. 11. 1 Cor. 15. 51, 52. Revel. 20. 12. 2 Pet. 3. 7, 10, 12. Matt. 25. 32. Rom. 2. 2. 15, 16. Revel. 22. 12. Matt. 25. 34, 41. Revel. 20. 15.

Fifthly, Consider, Christ Jesus did use no means to harden his Heart against doing and suffering those Sorrows which were necessary for the Redemption of thy Soul: No, though he could have hardened his Heart against thee, in the way of Justice and Righteousness, because thou hadst sinned against him; he rather awakened himself, and put on all Pity, Bowels, and Compassion; yea, tender Mercies, and did it. In his Love, and in his Pity he saved us. His tender Mercies from on high hath visited us. He loved us, and gave himself for us.

Learn then of Christ, to be tender of thy self, and to endeavour to keep thy Heart tender to Godward, and to the Salvation of thy Soul. But to draw to a Conclusion.

The U S E.

LET us now then make some Use of this Doctrine: As,

First, from the Truth of the Matter, namely, That the Man who is truly come to God, has had his Heart broken, his Heart broken in order to his coming to him; and this shews us what to judge of the League that is between Sin and the Soul; to wit, that it is so firm, so strong, so inviolable, as that nothing can break, disannul, or make it void, unless the Heart be broken for it. 'Twas so with David; yea, his new League with it could not be broken, until his Heart was broken.

'Tis amazing to consider, what hold Sin has on some Mens Souls, Spirits, Will, and Affections. 'Tis to them better than Heaven, better than God, than the Soul, aye, than Salvation; as is evident, because, tho' all these are offered them upon upon this Condition, if they will but leave their Sins; yet they will choose rather to abide in them, to stand and fall by them. How sayst thou Sinner? Is not this a Truth? How many times hast thou had Heaven and Salvation offer'd to thee freely, wouldst thou but break thy League with this great Enemy of God? Of God, do I say? If thou wouldest but break this League with this great Enemy of thy Soul; but couldest never yet be brought unto it: No, neither by Threatning, nor by Promise couldest thou ever yet be brought unto it.

'Tis said of Ahab, he sold himself to work Wickedness: And in another place, Tea, for your iniquities have ye sold your selves, 1 King. 21. 25. Isa. 50. 1.

But what is this Iniquity? Why, a Thing of nought; nay, worse than nought a thousand times; but because nought, is as we say nought; therefore it goes under that term, where God saith again to the People, Ye have sold your selves for nought, Isa. 52. 3.

But I say, What an amazing Thing is this? That a rational Creature should make no better a Bargain; that one that is so wise in all terrene things, should be such a Fool in the Thing that is most weighty: And yet such a Fool he is, and he tells every one that goes by the Way, that he is such an one, because he will not break his League with Sin, until his Heart is broken for it.

Men love Darknes rather than Light: Aye, they make it manifest they love it, since so great a Proffer will not prevail with them to leave it.

Secondly, Is this a Truth? That the Man that truly comes to God in order thereto, has had his Heart broken? Then this shews us a reason, why some Mens Hearts are broken; even a reason, why God breaks some Mens Hearts for Sin; namely, because he would not have them dye in it, but rather come to God that they might be saved.

Behold therefore in this, how God resolved as to the saving of some Mens Souls! He will have them, he will save them, he will break their Hearts, but he will save them; he will kill them, that they may live; he will wound them, that he may heal them.

And it seems by our discourse, that now there is no way left but this; fair means, as we say, will not do; good Words, a glorious Gospel, Entreatings, beseeching with Blood and Tears will not do: Men are resolved to put God to the utmost of it; if he will have them, he must fetch them, follow them, catch them, lame them; yea, break their Bones, or else he shall not save them.

Some Men think an Invitation, an outward call, a rational Discourse will do; but they are much deceived. There must a Power, an exceeding great and mighty Power attend the Word, or it worketh not effectually to the Salvation of the Soul, I know these Things are enough to leave Men without excuse; but yet they are not enough to bring Men home to God. Sin has hold of them, they have sold themselves to it; the Power of the Devil has hold of them, they are his Captives at his will; yea, and more than all this, their will is one with Sin, and with the Devil, to be held captive thereby: And if God gives not Contrition, Repentance, or a broken Heart for Sin, there will not be; no, not so much as a mind in Man, to forsake this so horrible a Confederacy and Plot against his Soul, 2 Tim. 2. 24, 25.

Hence Men are said to be drawn from these Breasts, that come, or that are brought to him, Isa. 26. 9. John 6. 44.

Wherefore John might well say, Behold what manner of Love the Father hath bestowed upon us! Here is Cost bestowed, Pains bestowed, Labour bestowed, Repentance bestowed; yea, and an Heart made sore, wounded, broken, and fill'd with pain and sorrow, in order to the Salvation of the Soul.

Thirdly, This then may teach us what Estimation to set upon a broken Heart. A broken Heart is such as God esteems; yea, as God counts better than all external Service. A broken Heart is that which is in order to Salvation; in order to thy coming to Christ for Life.

The World know not what to make of it, not what to say to one that has a broken Heart, and therefore do despise it, and count that Man that carries it in his Bosom a moping Fool, a miserable Wretch, an undone Soul. But a broken and a contrite Spirit, O God, thou wilt not despise. A broken Heart takes thine Eye, thy Heart; thou choolest it for thy Companion; yea, has given thy Son a charge to look well to such a Man, and hast promised him thy Salvation, as has afore been proved.

Sinner, hast thou obtained a broken Heart? has God bestowed a contrite Spirit upon thee? he has given thee what himself is pleased with; he has given thee a Cabinet to hold his Grace in, he has given thee an Heart that can heartily desire his Salvation; an Heart, after his own Heart; that is, such as suits his Mind.

True, it is painful now, sorrowful now, penitent now, grieved now; now 'tis broken, now it bleeds, now, now it sobs, now it sighs, now it mourns and cryeth unto God. Well, very well. All this is because he has a mind to make thee laugh; he has made thee sorry on Earth, that thou mightest rejoyce in Heaven. Blessed are ye that mourn, for ye shall be comforted. Blessed are ye that weep now, for ye shall laugh, Mat. 5. 4. Luke 6. 21.

But Soul, be sure thou hast this broken Heart; all Hearts are not broken Hearts, nor is every heart that seems to have a Wound, an Heart that's truly broken: A Man may be cut to, yet not into the Heart; a Man may have another, yet not a broken Heart, Acts 7. 54. 1 Sam. 10. 9. We know there's a Difference betwixt a Wound in the Flesh, and a Wound in the Spirit; yea, a Man's Sin may be wounded, and yet his Heart not broken; so was Pharaoh's, so was Saul's, so was Abab's; but they had none of them the Mercy of a broken Heart: Therefore, I say, Take heed every scratch with a Pin, every prick with a Thorn; nay, every blow that God giveth with his Word upon the Heart of Sinners, doth not therefore break them. God gave Abab such a Blow, that he made him stoop, fast, humble himself, gird himself with, and lay in Sackcloth, which was a great Matter for a King; and go softly, and yet he never had a broken Heart, 1 Kings 21. 27, 29.

What shall I say, Pharaoh and Saul confessed their Sin, Judas repented himself of his doings, Esau sought the Blessing, and that carefully with Tears, and yet none of these had an Heart rightly broken, or a Spirit truly contrite: Pharaoh, Saul, and Judas, were Pharaoh, Saul, and Judas still; Esau was Esau still: there was no gracious change, no thorough turn to God, no unfeigned parting with their Sins; no hearty flight for refuge, to lay hold on the hope of Glory, tho' they indeed had thus been touched, Exod. 10. 16. 1 Sam. 26. 21. Mat. 27. 3. Heb. 12. 14, 15, 16, 17.

The Consideration of these Things, call aloud to us to take heed, that we take not that for a broken and a contrite Spirit, that will not go for one at the Day of Death and Judgment.

Wherefore, seeking Soul, let me advise thee, that thou mayest not be deceived as to this Thing of so great weight.

1. To go back towards the beginning of this Book, and compare thy self with those six or seven signs of a broken and a contrite Heart, which there I have, according to the Word of God, given to thee for that End; and deal with thy Soul impartially about them.

2. Or, which may, and will be great help to thee, if thou shalt be sincere therein; namely, to betake thy self to the search of the Word, especially where thou readest of the Conversion of Men, and try if thy Conversion be like, or has a good resemblance or oneness with theirs: But in this have a care, that thou dost not compare thy self with those good folk, of whose Conversion thou readest not, or of the breaking of whose Heart, there is no mention made in Scripture; for all that are recorded in the Scripture for Saints, have not their Conversion as to the Manner or Nature of it, recorded in the Scripture.

3. Or else, Do thou consider truly, of the true signs of Repentance, which are laid down in Scripture, for that is the true effect of a broken Heart, and of a wounded Spirit. And for this see, Mat. 3. 5, 6. Luke 18. 13. Chap. 19. 8. Acts 2. 37, to 41, &c. Chap. 16. 29, 30. Chap. 19. 18, 19. 2 Cor. 7. 8, 9, 10, 11.

4. Or else, Take into Consideration, how God has said, they shall be in their Spirits, that he intends to save. And for this, read these Scriptures.

1. That in the One and thirtieth of Jeremiah, They shall come with weeping, and with Supplication will I lead them, &c. ver. 9.

2. Read Jer. 50. 4, 5. In those Days, and at that Time, the Children of Israel shall come, they and the Children of Judah together, going and weeping: They shall go, and seek the Lord their God. They shall ask the Way to Zion with their Faces thitherward; saying, Come and let us joyn our selves to the Lord, in a perpetual Covenant that shall not be forgotten.

3. Read Ezek. 6. 9. And they that escape of you shall remember me among the Nation, whither they shall be carried Captives, because I am broken with their whorish Heart, which have departed from me, and with their Eyes which go a whoring after their Idols: and they shall loath themselves for the Evils which they have committed in all their Abominations.

4. Read Ezek. 7. 16. But they that escape of them, shall escape, and shall be on the Mountains like Doves of the Valleys, all of them mourning, every one for his Iniquity.

5. Read Ezek. 20. 43. And there shall ye remember your Ways, and all your doings, wherein ye have been defiled, and ye shall loath your selves in your own sight, for all your Evils that ye have committed.

6. Read Ezek. 36. 31. Then shall ye remember your own evil Ways, and your doings that were not good, and shall loath your selves in your own sight, for your Iniquities, and for your Abominations.

7. Read Zech. 12. 10. And I will pour upon the House of David, and upon the Inhabitants of Jerusalem, the Spirit of Grace and of Supplications: And they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only Son, and shall be in bitterness for him as one that is in bitterness for his first-born.

Now all these are the Fruits of the Spirit of God, and of the Heart, when it is broken: Wherefore Soul, Take notice of them, and because these are Texts by which God promiseth, that those whom he saveth, shall have this Heart, this Spirit, and these holy Effects in them: Therefore consider, consider again, and examine thy self, whether this is the State and Condition of thy Soul.

And that thou may'st do it fully, consider again, and do thou,

1. Remember that here is such a Sense of Sin, and of the irksomeness thereof, as maketh the Man, not only to abhor that, but himself, because of that: This is worth the noting by thee.

2. Remember again, That here is not only a Self-abbhorrence, but a sorrowful Mourning unto God, at the Consideration, that the Soul by Sin has affronted, contemned, disregarded, and set at nought, both God and his holy Word.

3. Remember also, That here are Prayers and Tears for Mercy, with desires, to be now out of Love with Sin for ever, and to be in Heart and Soul, firmly joined and knit unto God.

4. Remember also, That this People here spoken of, have all the way, from Satan to God, from Sin to Grace, from Death to Life, scattered with Tears and Prayers, with Weeping and Supplication: They shall go weeping and seeking the Lord their God.

5. Remember that these People, as Strangers and Pilgrims do, are not ashamed to ask the Way of those they meet with, to Zion, or the heavenly Country; whereby they confess their Ignorance as became them, and their desire to know the way to Life; yea, thereby they declare, that there is nothing in this World, under the Sun, or this side Heaven, that can satisfy the Longings, the Desires and Cravings, of a broken and a contrite Spirit.

Reader, be advised, and consider of these things seriously, and compare thy Soul with them, and with what else thou shalt find here written, for thy Conviction and Instruction.

Fourthly, If a broken Heart, and a contrite Spirit, be of such esteem with God, Then this should encourage them that have it, to come to God with it. I know the great Encouragement for Men to come to God, is, for that there is a Mediator between God and Men, the Man Christ Jesus (1 Tim. 2. 5.) This, I say, is the great Encouragement, and in its place, there is none but that; but there are other Encouragements subordinate to that, and a broken, and a contrite Spirit is one of them; this is evident from several places of Scripture.

Wherefore, thou that canst carry a broken Heart, and a sorrowful Spirit with thee; when thou goest to God, tell him, thy Heart is wounded within thee, that thou hast Sorrow in thy Heart, and art sorry for thy Sins, but take heed of lying. Confess also thy Sins unto him, and tell him, they are continually before thee, David made an Argument of these things, when he went to God by Prayer. O Lord,

Rebuke me not in thine Anger, neither chasten me in thy sore displeasure. But why so? O, says he, thine Arrows stick fast in me, and thy Hand presseth me sore. There is no Soundness in my Flesh, because of thine Anger, neither is there any rest in my Bones because of my Sin. For mine Iniquities are gone over mine Head: as an heavy Burden, they are too heavy for me. My Wounds stink and are corrupt, because of my Foolishness, I am troubled, I am bowed down greatly; I go mourning all the Day long. For my Loins are filled with a loathsome Disease: and there is no Soundness in my Flesh. I am feeble and sore broken: I have roared by reason of the disquietness of my Heart. Lord, all my desire is before thee; and my groaning is not hid from thee. My Heart panteth, my Strength faileth me: As for the Light of mine Eyes, it also is gone from me: My Lovers and Friends stand aloof from my Sore. And so he goes on, Psal. 38. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.

These are the Words, Sighs, Complaints, Prayers, and Arguments of a broken Heart to God for Mercy; and so are they. Have Mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving Kindness: according to the Multitude of thy tender Mercies, blot out my Transgressions. Wash me thoroughly from mine Iniquity, and cleanse me from my Sin. For I acknowledge my Transgressions, and my Sins are ever before me, Psal. 51. 1, 2, 3.

God alloweth poor Creatures, that can without lying, thus to plead and argue with him. I am poor and sorrowful, said the good Man to him, Let thy Salvation set me on high, Psal. 69. 29.

Wherefore, thou that hast a broken Heart, take Courage, God bids thee take Courage; say therefore to thy Soul, Why art thou cast down, O my Soul: As usually the broken hearted are: And why art thou disquieted within me? Hope thou in God. I had fainted, if I had not been of good Courage; therefore be of good Courage, and he shall strengthen thine Heart, Psal. 42. 11. Psal. 43. 5. Psal. 27. 12, 13, 14.

But alas! the broken hearted are far off from this, they faint, they reckon themselves among the dead, they think God will remember them no more; the thoughts of the greatness of God, and his Holiness, and their own Sins and Vilenesses, will certainly consume them; they feel guilt and anguish of Soul, they go mourning all the Day long; their Mouth is full of Gravel and Gall, and they are made to drink draughts of Wormwood and Gall: So that he must be an Artist indeed at believing, who can come to God under his guilt and horror, and plead in Faith, that the Sacrifices of God are a broken Heart, such as he had, and that a broken and a contrite Spirit, God will not despise.

Fifthly, If a broken Heart, if a broken and a contrite Spirit is of such esteem with God;

God; Then why should some be, as they are, so afraid of a broken Heart, and so shy of a contrite Spirit?

I have observed, that some Men are as afraid of a broken Heart, or that they for their Sins would have their Hearts broken, as the Dog is of the Whip. O! they can't away with such Books, with such Sermons, with such Preachers, or with such Talk, as tends to make a Man sensible of, and to break his Heart, and to make him contrite for his Sins. Hence they heap to themselves such Teachers, get such Books, love such Company, and delight in such Discourse, as rather tends to harden, than soften; to make desperate in, than sorrowful for their Sins: They say to such Sermons, Books, and Preachers, as Amaziah said to Amos. O thou Seer, go, flee thou away into the Land of Judah, and there eat Bread, and prophesy there, but prophesy not again any more at Bethel, &c. Amos 7. 12, 13.

But do these People know what they do? Yes, think they, for such Preachers, such Books, such Discourses, tend to make one melancholly or mad; they make us, that we cannot take Pleasure in our selves, in our Concerns, in our Lives.

But, Oh Fool in grain! Let me speak unto thee: Is it a time to take Pleasure, and to recreate thy self in any thing, before thou hast mourned and been sorry for thy Sins? That Mirth that is before Repentance for Sin, will certainly end in heaviness. Wherefore the wise Man putting both together, saith, that Mourning must be first: There is a time to Weep, and a time to Laugh, a time to Mourn, and a time to Dance, Eccles. 3. 4.

What! an Unconverted Man, and laugh! Shouldst thou see one singing merry Songs, that is riding up Holbourn, to Tyburn, to be hanged for Felony, wouldst thou not count him besides himself, if not worse; and yet thus it is with him that is for Mirth, while he standeth condemned by the Book of God for his Trespases. Man! Man! Thou hast cause to mourn; yea, thou must mourn, if ever thou art saved. Wherefore my Advice is, that instead of shunning, thou covet both such Books, such Preachers, and such Discourses, as has a tendency to make a Man sensible of, and to break his Heart for Sin; and the Reason is, because thou wilt never be as thou should'st, concerned about, nor seek the Salvation of thine own Soul, before thou hast a broken Heart, a broken and a contrite Spirit.

Wherefore, be not afraid of a broken Heart, be not shy of a contrite Spirit: It is one of the greatest Mercies that God bestows upon a Man or a Woman. The Heart rightly broken at the sense of, and made truly contrite for Transgression, is a certain Fore-runner of Salvation. This is evident from those six Demonstrations, which was laid down to prove the point in hand at first.

And for thy awaking in this Matter, let me tell thee, and thou wilt find it so, thou must have thy Heart broken, whether thou wilt or no. God is resolved to break all Hearts for Sin, some time or other.

Can it be imagined, Sin being what it is, and God what he is; to wit, a Revenger of Disobedience, but that one time or other, Man must smart for Sin: Smart, I say, either to Repentance, or to Condemnation. He that mourns not now, while the Door of Mercy's open; must mourn for Sin when the Door of Mercy's shut.

Shall Men despise God, break his Law, contemn his Threats, abuse his Grace; yea, shut their Eyes when he says, See; and stop their Ears, when he says, Hear; and shall they So escape? No, no, Because he called, and they refused; he stretched out his Hand, and they regarded it not: Therefore shall Calamity come upon them as upon one in Travail, and they shall cry in their Destruction, and then God will laugh at their Destruction, and mock when their Fear cometh. Then saith he, They shall cry, Prov. 1. 24, 25, 26, &c.

I have often observed, that this threatening is repeated at least seven times in the New Testament, saying, There shall be weeping and gnashing of Teeth; there shall be wailing and gnashing of Teeth, as Matt. 8. 12. chap. 13. 42. and 50. chap. 12. 13. chap. 24. 51. chap. 25. 30. Luke 13. 28.

There, where: in Hell, and at the Barr of Christ's Tribunal, when he comes to judge the World, and shall have shut too the Door to keep them out of Glory, that have here despised the offer of his Grace, and over-looked the Day of his Patience: There shall be wailing and gnashing of Teeth. They shall weep and wail for this.

There are but two Scriptures that I shall use more, and then I shall draw towards a Conclusion. One is that in Proverbs, where Solomon is counselling of young Men to beware of strange, that is of wanton, light, and ensnaring Women. Take heed of such, said he, Lest thou mourn at last, that is, in Hell, when thou art dead, when thy Flesh and thy Body are consumed, and say, How have I hated Instruction, and despised Reproof, and have not obeyed the Voice of my Teachers, nor inclined mine Ears to them that instructed me, Prov. 5. 1, 2, 3, &c.

The other Scripture is that in Isaiab, where he says, Because when I called, ye did not answer; when I spake, ye did not hear, but did Evil before mine Eyes, and did choose that wherein I delighted not. Therefore, thus saith the Lord God, Behold, my Servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry; behold, my Servants shall drink, but ye shall be thirsty; behold, my Servants shall rejoice, but ye ye shall be ashamed; behold, my Servants shall sing for Joy of Heart, but ye shall cry for Sorrow of Heart, and howl for Vexation of Spirit, Isa. 65. 12, 13, 14.

How many Beholds are here? And every Behold, is not only a Call to careless ones to consider, but as a Declaration from Heaven, that thus at last it shall be with all impenitent Sinners; that is, when others sing for Joy in the Kingdom of Heaven, they, they shall sorrow in Hell, and howl for Vexation of Spirit there.

Wherefore, let me advise, that you be not afraid of, but that ye rather covet a broken Heart, and prize a contrite Spirit; I say, covet it now, now the White Flag is hung out, now the Golden Scepter of Grace is held forth to you. Better mourn now God inclines to Mercy and Pardon, than mourn when the Door is quite shut up. And take notice, that this is not the first time that I have given you this Advice.

Lastly, If a broken Heart be a thing of so great esteem with God, as has been said, and if Duties cannot be rightly performed by a Heart that has not been broken. Then this shews the Vanity of those Peoples Minds, and also the Invalidity of their pretended divine Services, who worship God with an Heart that was never broken, and without a contrite Spirit. There has indeed at all times been great Flocks of such Professors in the World in every Age; but to little purpose, unless to deceive themselves, to mock God, and lay Stumbling-blocks in the way of others; for a Man whose Heart was never truly broken, and whose Spirit was never contrite, cannot profess Christ in earnest, cannot love his own Soul in earnest: I mean, he cannot do these things in Truth, and seek his own good the right Way, for he wants a Bottom for it; to wit, a broken Heart for Sin, and a contrite Spirit.

That which makes a Man an hearty, an unfeigned, a sincere seeker after the good of his own Soul, is sense of Sin, and a godly fear of being overtaken with the Danger which it brings a Man into. This makes him contrite, or repentant, and puts him upon seeking of Christ the Saviour, with Heart-aking, and Heart-breaking Considerations.

But this cannot be, where this Sense, this godly Fear, and this holy Contrition is wanting: profess Men may, and make a Noise, as the empty Barrel maketh the biggest Sound; but prove them, and they are full of Air, full of Emptiness, and that's all.

Nor are such Professors tender of God's Name, nor of the Credit of that Gospel which they profess; nor can they, for they want that which should oblige them thereunto; which is a sense of Pardon and Forgiveness; by the which their broken Hearts have been replenished, succoured, and made hope in God. Paul said, The love of Christ constrained him. But what was Paul, but a broken hearted and a contrite Sinner? See Acts 9. 3, 4, 5, 6. 2 Cor. 5. 14.

When God shews a Man the Sin he has committed, the Hell he has deserved, the Heaven he has lost: and yet that Christ, and Grace, and Pardon may be had; this will make him serious, this will make him melt, this will break his Heart, this will shew him that there is more than Air, than a Noise, that an empty sound in Religion; and this is the Man, whose Heart, whose Life, whose Conversation and all, will be engaged in the Matters of the eternal Salvation of his precious and immortal Soul.

Object. But some may object, That in this Saying I seem too rigid and censorious; and will, if I moderate not these Lines, with something milder afterward, discourage many an honest Soul.

I Answer: Not a jot, not an honest Soul in all the World will be offended at my Words, for not one can be an honest Soul, I mean with reference to its Concerns in another World, that has not had a broken Heart, that never had a contrite Spirit. This I will say, because I would be understood aright; That all attain not to the same degree of Trouble, nor lie so long there under, as some of their Brethren do: But to go to Heaven without a broken Heart, or to be forgiven Sin without a contrite Spirit, is no Article of my Belief. We speak not now of what is secret, revealed Things belong to us and our Children; nor must we venture to go further in our Faith. Doth not Christ say, The Whole have no need of a Physician; that is, they see no need, but Christ will make them see their need before he ministers his Sovereign Grace unto them; and good reason, otherwise he will have but little Thanks for his Kindness.

Object. But there are that are godly educated from their Childhood, and so drink in the Principles of Christianity they know not how.

Answer. I count it one Thing to receive the Faith of Christ from Men only, and another to receive it from God by the Means. If thou art taught by an Angel, yet if not taught of God, thou wilt never come to Christ; I do not say thou wilt never profess him. But if God speaks, and thou shalt hear and understand him, that Voice will make such work within thee as was never made before. The Voice of God is a Voice by itself, and is so distinguished by them that are taught thereby. John 6. 44, 45. Psalms 29. Hab. 3. 15, 16. Ephes. 4. 20, 21. 1 Pet. 2. 2, 3.

Object. But some Men are not so debauched and profane as some, and so need not to be so hammered and fired as others: so broken and wounded as others.

Answer. God knows best what we need. Paul was as righteous before Conversion, as any that can pretend to Civility now, I suppose: and yet, that notwithstanding, he was made to shake, and was astonished at himself, at his Conversion. And truly, I think, the more Righteous any is in his own Eyes before Conversion, the more need he has of heart-breaking Work, in order to his Salvation, because a Man is not by Nature so easily convinced that his Righteousness is to God abominable, as he is that his Debauchery and Profaneness is.

A Man's Goodness is that which blinds him most, is dearest to him, and hardly parted with; and therefore when such an one is converted, that thinks he has goodness of his own enough to commend him in whole, or in part to God, (tho' but few such are converted) there is required a great deal of breaking work upon his Heart to make him come to Paul's conclusion, What! are we better than they? No, in no wise, Rom. 3. 9. I say, before he can be brought to see, his glorious Robes are filthy Rags, and his gainful Things but loß and dung, Isaiah 64. Phil. 3.

This is also gathered from these words, Publicans and Harlots enter into the Kingdom of God before the Pharisees, Mat. 21. 31.

Why before them, but because they lie fairer for the Word, are easier convinced of their need of Christ, and so are brought home to him without (as I may) all that adoe, that the holy Ghost doth make to bring home one of these to him.

True, nothing is hard or difficult to God. But I speak after the manner of Men. And let who will take to task a Man debauch'd in this Life, and one that is not so, and he shall see, if he laboureth to convince them both that they are in a state of Condemnation by Nature; that the Pharisee will make his Appeals to God, with a great many, God I thank thee's; while the Publican hangs his Head, shakes at Heart, and smites upon his Breast, saying, God be merciful to me a Sinner, Luke 18. 11, 12, 13.

Wherefore a self-righteous Man, is but a painted Satan, or a Devil in fine Cloaths; but thinks he is so of himself? No! no! He saith to others, Stand back, come not near me, I am holier than thou. 'Tis almost impossible, that a self-righteous Man should be saved. But he that can drive a Camel through the Eye of an Needle, can cause, that even such a one should see his lost Condition, and that he needeth the Righteousness of God, which is by Faith of Jesus Christ. He can make him see, I say, that his own Goodness did stand more in his Way to the Kingdom of Heaven, than he was aware of; and can make him feel too, that his leaning to that is as great iniquity, as any immorality that Men commit. The sum then is, That Men that are converted to God by Christ, through the Word and Spirit (for all this must go to effectual Conversion) must have their Hearts broken, and Spirits made contrite. I say, it must be so, for the Reasons shewed before.

Yea, and all decayed, apostatized, and backsliden Christians must, in order to their recovery again to God, have their Hearts broken, their Souls wounded, their Spirits made contrite, and sorry for their Sins.

Come, come, Conversion to God is not so easy, and so smooth a Thing, as some would have Men believe it is. Why is Man's Heart compared to fallow Ground, God's Word to a Plow, and his Ministers to Plow-men; if the Heart indeed has no need of breaking, in order to the receiving of the Seed of God unto eternal Life, Jer. 4. 3. Luke 9. 62. 1 Cor. 9. 10.

Who knows not that fallow ground must be plowed, and plowed too, before the Husband-man will venture his Seed: yea, and after that oft soundly harrowed, or else he will have but a slender Harvest?

Why is the Conversion of the Soul compared to the grafting of a Tree, if that be done without cutting?

The Word is the Graft, the Soul is the Tree, and the Word as the Scion must be let in by a Wound; for to stick on the outside, or to be tied on with a string, will do no good here; Heart must be set to Heart, and Back to Back, or your pretended ingrafting will come to nothing, Rom. 11. 17, 24. Jam. 1. 20.

I say, Heart must be set to Heart, and Back to Back, or the sap will not be conveyed from the Root to the Branch. And I say, This must be done by a Wound. The Lord opened the Heart of Lidia, as a Man openeth the stock to graft in the Scions, and so the Word was let into her Soul, and so the Word and her Heart cemented, and became one, Acts 16. 14.

Why is Christ bid to gird his Sword upon his Thigh? And why must he make his Arrows sharp, and all that the Heart may with this Sword and these Arrows, be shot, wounded, and made to bleed? Yea, why is he commanded to let it be so, if the People would bow and fall kindly under him, and heartily implore his Grace without it? Psal. 45. 55. 3, 4, 4. Alas, Men are too lofty, too proud, too wild, too devilishly resolved in the Ways of their own Destruction; in their occasions they are like the wild Asses upon the wild Mountains; nothing can break them of their purposes, or hinder them from ruining of their own precious and immortal Souls, but the breaking of their Hearts.

Why is a broken Heart put in the room of all Sacrifices which we can offer to God; and a contrite Spirit put in the room of all

all offerings, as they are, (and you may see it so, if you compare the Text with that Verse which goes before it) I say, why is it counted better than all, were they all put together, if any one part, or if all external parts of Worship were they put together, could be able to render the Man a sound, and a rightly made New Creature without it? A broken Heart, a contrite Spirit, God will not despise; but both thou, and all thy Service he will certainly slight and reject; if when thou comest to him, a broken Heart be wanting: Wherefore here is the Point, Come broken, come contrite, come sensible of, and sorry for thy Sins, or thy coming will be counted no coming to God aright; and if so, consequently thou wilt get no benefit thereby.

SIGHS from HELL:

OR, THE

Groans of a Damned Soul:

Discovering from the 6th of LUKE, the Lamentable Estate of the Damned.

And may fitly serve

As a Warning-Word to SINNERS, both Old and Young, by Faith in JESUS CHRIST, to avoid the same Place of Torment. With a Discovery of the Usefulness of the SCRIPTURES, as our safe Conduct for avoiding the Torments of HELL.

The AUTHOR to the READER.

FR I E N D, because it is a dangerous thing to be walking towards the place of Darkness and Anguish: And again, because it is (notwithstanding) the Journey that most of the poor Souls in the World are taking, and that with Delight and Gladness, as if there was the only Happiness to be found: I have therefore thought it my Duty (being made sensible of the Danger that will befall those that fall therein,) for the preventing of thee, (O thou poor Man or Woman!) to tell thee, by opening this Parable, what sad Success those Souls have had, and are like to have, that have been, or shall be found persevering therein.

We use to count him a Friend that will forewarn his Neighbour of the Danger, when he knoweth thereof, and doth also see that the Way his Neighbour is walking in doth lead right thereto, especially when we think that our Neighbour may be either ignorant or careless of his Way. Why Friend, it may be, nay, twenty to one, but thou hast been ever since thou didst come into the World, with thy Back towards Heaven, and thy Face towards Hell; and thou, either through Ignorance, (or Carelessness, which is as bad, if not worse,) hast been running full hastily that Way ever since. Why, I beseech thee put a little stop to thy earnest Race, and take a View of what Entertainment thou art like to have, if thou do in Deed and in Truth persist in this thy Course. Thy Way leads down to Death, and thy Steps take hold on Hell, Prov. 5. 5. It may be the Path indeed is pleasant to the Flesh, but the End thereof will be bitter to thy Soul. Hark, dost thou not hear the bitter Cries of them that are but newly gone before? Saying, let him dip the Tip of his Finger in Water, and cool my Tongue, that is so tormented in this Flame, Luke 16. Dost thou not hear them say, Send out from the dead, to prevent my Father, my Brother, and my Father's House, from coming into this place of Torment? Shall not then these mournful Groans pierce thy

flinty Heart? Wilt thou stop thine Ears, and shut thy Eyes? And wilt thou not regard? Take warning and stop thy Journey before it be too late. Wilt thou be like the silly Fly, that is not quiet unless she be either intangled in the Spider's Web, or burned in the Candle? Wilt thou be like the Bird that hasteth to the Snare of the Fowler? Wilt thou be like that simple one named in the seventh of Proverbs, that will be drawn to the Slaughter by the Cord of a silly Lust? O Sinner, Sinner, there are better Things than Hell to be had, and at a cheaper rate by the thousandth part! O (there is no Comparison) there is Heaven, there is God, there is Christ, there is Communion with an innumerable Company of Saints and Angels. Hear the Message then that God doth send, that Christ doth send, that Saints do bring, nay, that the Dead doth send unto thee: I pray thee therefore that thou would'st send him to my Father's House; if one went to them from the Dead they would repent. How long ye simple ones will you love Simplicity? And ye Scorners delight in Scorning? And ye Fools hate Knowledge? Turn ye at my Reproof, and behold, faith God, I will pour out my Spirit upon you, I will make known my Words unto you. I say, hear this Voice, O silly one, and turn and live thou sinful Soul, lest he make thee hear that other Saying. But, because I have called, and you have refused, I have stretched out my Hand, and no Man regarded; I also will laugh at your Calamity, and mock when your Fear cometh.

O poor Soul, if God and Christ did wish thee for thine harm, it would be another Matter; then if thou didst refuse, thou mightst have some Excuse to make, or Fault to find, and Ground to make Delays: But this is for thy Profit, for thy Advantage, for the pardoning of thy Sins, the Salvation of thy Soul, the delivering thee from Hell Fire, from the Wrath to come, from everlasting Burnings, into Favour with God, Christ, and Communion with all Happiness, (that is so indeed.)

But it may be thou wilt say, All that hath been spoken to in this Discourse, is but a Parable, and Parables are no Realities.

I could put thee off with this Answer, That though it be a Parable, yet it is a Truth, and not a Lie; and thou shalt find it so too, to thy cost, if thou shalt be found a sligher of God, Christ, and the Salvation of thy own Soul.

But Secondly, know for certain, that the Things signified by Parables, are wonderful Realities. O what a glorious Reality was there signified by that Parable! The Kingdom of Heaven is like to a Net that is cast into the Sea, &c. signifying, that Sinners of all sorts, of all Nations, should be brought into God's Kingdom, by the Net of the Gospel. And O! how real a thing shall the other Part thereof be, when it is fulfilled, which saith, And when it was full they drew it to the Shore, and put the good into Vessels, but threw the bad away, Matt. 13. 47, 48. signifying the Mansions of Glory that the Saints should have, and also the rejection that God will give to the Ungodly, and to Sinners. And also that Parable, what a glorious Reality is there in it? which saith, Except a Corn of Wheat fall to the Ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it doth bring forth much Fruit, John 12. 24. To signify, that unless Jesus Christ did indeed spill his Blood, and die the cursed Death, he should abide alone; that is, have never a Soul into Glory with him; but if he died, he should bring forth much Fruit; that is, save many Sinners. And also how real a Truth there was in that Parable, concerning the Jews putting Christ to Death, which the poor dispersed Jews can best experience to their Cost; for they have been almost ever since a banished People, and such as have had God's sore Displeasure wonderfully manifested against them, according to the Truth of the Parable, Matt. 21. v. 33, to 41. O therefore, for Jesus Christ's Sake, do not slight the Truth, because it is discovered in a Parable! For by this Argument thou mayst also, nay, thou wilt also slight almost all the Things that our Lord Jesus Christ did speak; for he spake to them for the most part (if not all) in Parables. Why should it be said of thee, as it is said of some? These things are spoken to them that are without, in Parables, that seeing they might not see; and that hearing they might not understand, Luke 8. 10. I say, take heed of being a Quarreller against Christ's Parables; lest Christ also object against the Salvation of thy Soul at the Judgment Day.

Friend, I have no more to say to thee now; If thou dost love me, pray for me, that my God would not forsake me, nor take his Holy Spirit from me; and that God would fit me to do and suffer what shall be from the World or Devil inflicted upon me. I must tell thee, the World rages, they stamp and shake their Heads, and fain they would be doing; the Lord help me to take all they shall do with Patience; and when they smite the one Cheek, to turn the other to them, that I may do as Christ hath bidden me; for then the Spirit of God, and of Glory, shall rest upon me. Farewel.

I am thine, to serve in the Lord Jesus,

John Bunyan.

LUKE 16. 19, &c.

19. THERE was a certain Rich Man, which was cloathed in Purple and fine Linnen, and fared sumptuously every Day.

20. And there was a certain Beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his Gate full of Sores.

21. And desiring to be fed with the Crumbs which fell from the rich Man's Table: more-over the Dogs came and licked his Sores.

22. And it came to pass that the Begger died, and was carried by the Angels into Abraham's Bosom: The rich Man also died and was buried.

23. And in Hell he lift up his Eyes, being in Torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his Bosom.

24. And he cried and said, Father Abraham have Mercy on me, and send Lazarus that he may dip the Tip of his Finger in Water and cool my Tongue, for I am tormented in this Flame.

25. But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy Life time receivedst thy good Things, and likewise Lazarus evil Things; but now he is comforted and thou art tormented.

26. And besides all this, between us and you, there is a great Gulf fixed, so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us that would come from thence.

27. Then he said, I pray thee therefore Father, that thou wouldst send him to my Father's House;

28. For I have five Brethren, that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of Torment.

29. Abraham saith unto him, they have Moses and the Prophets, let them hear them.

30. And he said, nay Father Abraham: But if one went to them from the Dead, they will repent.

31. And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the Prophets, neither will they be perswaded though one rose from the Dead.

VERSE 29.

THIS Scripture was not spoken by our Lord Jesus Christ, to shew you
N^o. XXII. Vol. II.

the State of two single Persons only, (as some through Ignorance of the drift of Christ in his Parables do dream) but to shew you the State of the Godly and Ungodly to the World's End; as is clear to him that is of an understanding Heart. For he spake them to the End, that After-Generations should take notice thereof, and fear, lest they also fall into the same Condition.

Now in my Discourse upon these Words I shall not be tedious, but as briefly as I may, I shall pass through the several Verses, and lay you down some of the several Truths contained therein: And the Lord grant that they may be profitable, and of great Advantage to those that read them, or hear them read.

The 19th and 20th Verses also, I shall not spend much time upon, only give you three or four short hints, and so pass to the next Verses; for they are the Words I do intend most especially to insist upon.

The 19th, 20th and 21st Verses run thus; There was a certain rich Man which was cloathed in Purple and fine Linnen, and fared deliciously or sumptuously every Day. And there was a certain Begger named Lazarus, which was laid at his Gate full of Sores, &c.

1. If these Verses had been spoken by Jesus Christ and no more, all the World would have gone near to have cast a wrong Interpretation upon them. I say, if Jesus had said only thus much, There was a certain rich Man which fared sumptuously daily, and a certain Begger laid at his Gate full of Sores: The World would have made this conclusion of them, The rich Man was the happy Man; for, at the first view, it doth represent such a thing: But take all together, (that is) read the whole Parable, and you shall find, that there is no Man in a worse Condition than he; as I shall clearly hold forth afterward.

2. Again, If a Man would judge of Men according to outward Appearance, he shall oft-times take his Mark amiss. Here is a Man to outward Appearance, appears the only blessed Man, better by half than the Begger, in as much as he is rich, the Begger poor; he is well cloathed, but peradventure the Begger is naked; he hath good Food, Food, but the Begger would be glad of Dog's-Meat. (And he desired to be fed with the Crumbs that fell from the rich Man's Table :) the rich Man fares well every Day, but the Begger must be glad of a bit when he can get it. O! who would not be in a rich Man's State? A wealthy Man, sorts of new Suits, and dainty Dishes every Day; enough to make one who minds nothing but his Belly, and his Back, and his Lusts, to say, O that I were in that Man's Condition! O that I had about me as that Man has! Then I should live a Life indeed; then should I have Hearts-ease good store; then I should live pleasantly, and might say to my Soul, Soul be of good cheer, eat, drink, and be merry, Luke 12. 19. thou hast every thing plenty, and art in a most blessed Condition.

I say, this might be the conclusion with them that judge according to outward Appearance. But if the whole Parable be well considered, you will see, Luke 26. 15. That which is had in high Estimation with Men, is an Abomination in the Sight of God. And again, Job 16. 20, 21, 22. That Condition that is the saddest Condition, according to outward Appearance, is oft-times the most excellent; for the Begger had ten thousand Degrees the best of it, though to outward Appearance his State was the saddest; from whence we shall observe thus much:

1. That those who judge according to outward Appearance, do for the most part judge amiss, Job. 7. 24.

2. That they that look upon their outward Enjoyments to be Tokens of God's special Grace unto them, are also deceived Rev. 3. 17. For as it is here in the Parable, a Man of Wealth, and a Child of the Devil may make but one Person; or a Man may have abundance of outward Enjoyments, and yet be carried by the Devils into eternal Burning, Luke 12. 10. But this is the Trap in which the Devil hath caught many Thousands of poor Souls, namely, by getting them to judge according to outward Appearance, or according to God's outward Blessings.

Do but ask a poor carnal, covetous Wretch, how we should know a Man to be in a happy State; and he will answer, Those that God Blesseth, and giveth abundance of this World unto; when for the most part they are they that are the cursed Men. Alas, poor Men! they are so ignorant as to think, that because a Man is increased in outward Things, and that by a small Stock, therefore God doth love that Man with a special Love, or else he would never do so much for him, never bless him so, and prosper the Work of his Hands. Ah poor Soul! It is the rich Man that goes to Hell. And the rich Man died, and in Hell, mark, in Hell he lift up his Eyes, &c.

Methinks to see how the great Ones of the World will go strutting up and down the Streets sometimes, it makes me wonder. Surely they look upon themselves to be the only happy Men; but it is because they judge according to outward Appearance; they look upon themselves to be the only blessed Men, when the Lord knows the generality are left out of that blessed Condition. Not many wise Men after the Flesh, not many Mighty, not many Noble are called, 1 Cor. 1. 26. Ah! did they that do now so brag, that no Body dare scarce look on them, but believe this, it would make them hang down their Heads and cry, O give me a Lazarus's Portion.

I might here enlarge very much, but I shall not; only thus much I shall say to you that have much of this World, Have a Care that you have not your portion in this World; take heed that it be not said to you hereafter, when you would very willingly have Heaven, Remember in your Life-time you had your good Things, in your Life-time you had your Portion, Psal. 17. 14.

And Friend, thou that seekest after this World, and desirest Riches, let me ask this Question; wouldest thou be content that God should put thee off with a Portion in this Life? Wouldest thou be glad to be kept out of Heaven with a Back well clothed, and a Belly well filled with the Dainties of this World? Wouldest thou be glad to have all thy good Things in thy Life-time, to have thy Heaven to last no longer than while thou dost live in this World? Wouldest thou be willing to be deprived of eternal Happiness and Felicity? If thou say no, then have a Care of the World and thy Sins; have a Care of desiring to be a rich Man, lest thy Table be made a Snare unto thee, Psalm 69. 22. lest the Wealth of this World do bar thee out of Glory. For, as the Apostle saith, They that will be rich, do fall into Temptation and a Snare, and into many foolish and hurtful Lusts, which drown Men in Perdition and Destruction, 1 Tim. 6. 9. Thus much in general, but now particularly.

These two Men here spoken of (as I said) do hold forth to us the State of the Godly and Ungodly; the Begger holdeth forth the godly, and the rich Man the ungodly. There was a certain rich Man, &c.

But why are the Ungodly held forth under the notion of a rich Man?

1. Because Christ would not have them look too high, as I said before, but that those who have Riches would have a Care that they be not all their Portion, Jam. 1. 10, 11, 12. 1 Tim. 6. 17.

2. Because rich Men are most liable to the Devil's Temptations; are most ready to be puffed up with Pride, Stoutness, Cares of this World, in which things they spend most of their time in Lusts, Drunkenness, Wantonness, Idleness, together with other Works Works of the Flesh; For which things sake, the Wrath of God cometh upon the Children of Disobedience, Col. 3. 6.

3. Because he would comfort the Hearts of his own, which are most commonly of the poorer sort: But God hath chosen the poor, despised, and base things of this World, 1 Cor. 1. 26. Should God have set the rich Man in the blessed State, his Children would have concluded, being poor, that they had no share in the Life to come.

And again, had not God given such a discovery of the sad Condition of those that are for the most part rich Men, we should have had Men concluded absolutely, that the Rich are the blessed Men. Nay, albeit the Lord himself doth so evidently declare, that the Rich ones of the World are for the most part in the saddest Condition, yet they through Unbelief, or else Presumption, do harden themselves, and seek for the Glory of this World, as though the Lord Jesus Christ did not mean as he said, or else that he will say more than shall assuredly come to pass: But let them know, that the Lord hath a time to fulfil what he had a time to declare, for the Scripture cannot be broken, Joh. 10. 35.

But again, the Lord by his Word doth not mean those are ungodly who are Rich in the World, and no other; for then must all those that are Poor, yet graceless and vain Men be saved, and delivered from eternal Vengeance; which would be contrary to the Word of God, which saith, that together with the Kings of the Earth, and the great Men, and the chief Captains, and the mighty Men; there are Bondmen or Servants, and Slaves, that cry out at the appearance of the Almighty God, and his Son Jesus Christ to Judgment, Rev. 6. 15.

So that tho' Christ doth say, There was a certain rich Man, yet you must understand, he meaneth all the Ungodly, rich or poor. Nay, if you will not understand it so now, you shall be made to understand it to be so meant at the Day of Christ's second coming, when all that are ungodly shall stand at the left hand of Christ with pale Faces, and guilty Consciences, with the Vials of the Almighty's Wrath ready to be poured out upon them. Thus much in brief touching the 19th Verse. I might have observed other things from it, but now I forbear, having other things to speak of at this time.

Verse 20. And there was a certain Begger named Lazarus, which was laid at his Gate full of Sores.

THIS Verse doth chiefly hold forth these things:

1. That the Saints of God are a poor contemptible People: There was a certain Begger. If you understand the word Begger, to hold forth outward Poverty, or Scarcity in outward Things, such are Saints of the Lord, for they are for the most part a poor, despised, contemptible People. But if you allegorize it, and interpret it thus, They are such as beg earnestly for heavenly Food; this is also the Spirit of the Children of God, and it may be, and is a Truth in this Sense, tho' not so naturally gathered from this Scripture.

2. That he was laid at his Gate full of Sores. These words hold forth the Distempers of Believers, saying, He was full of Sores; which may signify the many Troubles, Temptations, Persecutions, and Afflictions in Body and Spirit, which they meet withal while they are in the World, and also the Entertainment they meet with at the Hands of those Ungodly ones who live upon the Earth. Whereas it is said, He was laid at his Gate full of Sores. Mark, He was laid at his Gate, not in his House, that was thought too good for him, But he was laid at his Gate full of Sores. From whence observe, That the ungodly World do not desire to entertain and receive the poor Saints of God into their Houses. If they must needs be somewhere near unto them, yet they shall not come into their Houses, but shut them out of Doors; if they will needs be near us, let them be at the Gate. And he was laid at the Gate full of Sores. 2. Observe, that that the World are not at all touched with the Afflictions of God's Children, for all they are full of Sores; a despised, afflicted, tempted, persecuted People, the World doth not pity; no, but rather labour to aggravate their trouble, by shutting them out of Doors; sink or swim, what cares the World, they are resolved to disown them, they will give them no entertainment; if the lying in the Streets will do them any good; if hard usage will do them any good; if to be disowned, rejected, and shut out of Doors by the World will do them any good, they shall have enough of that; but otherwise no refreshment, no comfort from the World. And he was laid at his Gate full of Sores.

Verse 21. And he desired to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich Man's Table: The Dogs came also and licked his Sores.

BY these words, our Lord Jesus doth shew us the Frame of a Christians Heart, and also the Heart and Carriage of worldly Men towards the Saints of the Lord. The Christians Heart is held forth by this, that any Thing will content him while he is on this side Glory; And he desired to be fed with the crumbs, the Dogs meat, any Thing. I say, a Christian will be content with any Thing, if he have but to keep Life and Soul together, (as we use to say) he is content, he is satisfied; he hath learned, if he hath learned to be a Christian, to be content with any Thing;

as Paul saith, I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. He learns in all Conditions to study to love God, to walk with God, to give up himself to God, and if the crumbs that fall from the rich Man's Table will but satisfy Nature, and give him bodily Strength, that thereby he may be the more able to walk in the Way of God, he is contented. And he desired to be fed with the crumbs that fell from the rich Man's Table. But mark, he had them not, you do not find that he had so much as a Crumb, or a Scrap allow'd unto him. No, then the Dogs will be beguil'd, that must be preserv'd for the Dogs. From whence observe, that the ungodly World do love their Dogs better than the Children of God. You will say, that's strange. It is so indeed, yet it is true, as will be clearly manifested; as for instance; how many pounds do some Men spend on their Dogs, when in the mean while the poor Saints of God may starve for hunger? They will build Houses for their Dogs, when the Saints must be glad to wander and lodge in Dens, and Caves of the Earth, Heb. 11. 38. And if they be in any of their Houses for the hire thereof, they will warn them out or eject them, or pull down the House over their Heads, rather than not rid themselves of such Tenants. Again, some Men cannot go half a mile from home but they must have Dogs at their heels; but they can very willingly go half a score miles without the Society of a Christian. Nay, if when they are busy with their Dogs they should chance to meet a Christian, they would willingly shift him if they could. They will go on the other side the Hedge or the Way, rather than they will have any Society with him; and if at any time a Child of God should come into a House where there are but two or three ungodly Wretches, they do commonly wish either themselves or the Saint out of Doors; and why so? because they cannot down with the Society of a Christian; tho' if there come in at the same time a Dog, or a drunken swearing Wretch, which is worse than a Dog, they will make him welcome; he shall sit down with them and partake of their Dainties. And now tell me, you that love your Sins and your Pleasures, had you not rather keep company with a Drunkard, a Swearer, a Strumpet, a Thief, nay, a Dog, than with an honest-hearted Christian? If you say no: What means your four Carriage to the People of God? Why do you look on them as if you would eat them up? Yet at the very same time, if you can but meet your Dog, or a drunken Companion, you can fawn upon them, take Acquaintance with them, to the Tavern or Alehouse with them, if it be two or three times in a Week: But if the Saints of God meet together, pray together, and labour to edify one another, you will stay till Doomsday before you will look into the House where they are. Ah Friends, when all comes to all, you will be found to love Drunkards, Strumpets, Dogs, any thing, nay, to serve the Devil, rather than to have loving and friendly Society with the Saints of God.

Moreover, The Dogs came and lick'd his Sores.) Here again you may see, not only the afflicted state of Saints of God in this World, but also, that even Dogs themselves, according to their kind, are more favourable to the Saints, than the sinful World; tho' the ungodly will have no Mercy on the Saints, yet it is ordered so, that these Creatures, Dogs, Lyons, &c. will. Tho' the rich Man would not entertain him in his House, yet his Dogs will come and do him the best good they can, even to lick his running Sores. It was thus with Daniel, when the World was mad against him, and would have him thrown to the Lions to be devoured, the Lions shut their Mouths at him, (or rather the Lord did shut them up) so that there was not that hurt befall to him, as was desired by the Adversaries, Dan. 6. And this I am perswaded of, that would the Creatures do as some Men would have them; the Saints of God should not walk so quietly up and down the Streets, and other places as they do. And as I said before, so I say again, I am perswaded, that at the Day of Judgment, many Mens Conditions and Carriages will be so laid open, that it will evidently appear, they have been very merciless, and mad against the Children of God; insomuch, that when the Providence of God did fall out so, as to cross their Expectation, they have been very much offended thereat, as is very evidently seen in them who set themselves to study (Psal. 31. 13.) how to bring the Saints into Bondage, and to thrust them into corners, as in these late Years. And because God hath in his Goodness ordered Things otherwise, they have gnashed their Teeth thereat. Hence then let the Saints learn, not to commit themselves to their Enemies; Beware of Men, Mat. 10. 17. They are very merciless Men, and will not so much favour you, (if they can help it) as you may suppose they may. Nay, unless the over ruling Hand of God in Goodness, do order Things contrary to their natural Inclination, they will not favour you so much as a Dog.

Verse 22. And it came to pass, that the Begger died, and was carried by the Angels into Abraham's Bosom: the rich Man also died and was buried.

THE former Verses do briefly hold forth the Carriage of the Ungodly in this Life, toward the Saints. Now this Verse Verse doth hold forth the Departure both of the Godly and Ungodly, out of this Life.

Where he saith, And it came to pass that the Begger died, and was carried into Abraham's Bosom; and the rich Man died also. This Begger died, that represents the Godly; and the rich Man died, that represents the Ungodly. From whence observe; neither Godly nor Ungodly must live always without a Change, either by Death or Judgment; the good Man died, and the bad Man died. That Scripture doth also back this Truth, that good and bad must die; marvellous well, where it is said, And it is appointed for Men once to die, and after that the Judgment, Heb. 9. 27.

Mark, he doth not say it is so, that Men by chance may die; which might begget in the Hearts of the Ungodly especially, some hope to escape the Bitterness of it: But he saith, it is a Thing most certain, it is appointed; mark, it is appointed for Men once to die, and after that the Judgment: God hath decreed it, that since Men have fallen from that happy Estate that God at the first did set them in, they shall die, Rom. 6. 23. Now when it is said the Begger died, and the rich Man died, part of the meaning is, they ceased to be any more in this World; I say partly the meaning is, but not altogether. Tho' it be altogether the meaning when some of the Creatures die, and yet it is but in part the meaning, when it is said that Men, Women, or Children die; for there is to them something else to be said, more than a barely going out of the World; For if when unregenerate Men and Women die there were an end of them, not only in this World but also in the World to come, they would be happy over they will be now; for when ungodly Men and Women die, there is that to come after Death that will be very terrible to them, namely, to be carried by the Angels of Darkness from their Death-beds to Hell, there to be reserved to the Judgment of the great Day, when both Body and Soul shall meet and be united together again, and made capable to undergo the uttermost Vengeance of the Almighty to all Eternity. This is that I say, which doth follow a Man (that is not born again) after Death; as is clear from that in 1 Pet. 3. 18, 19. where before speaking of Christ being raised again by the Power of his Eternal Spirit, he saith, By which, that is, by that Spirit he went and preached to the Spirits in Prison: But what is the meaning of this? Why thus much, that those Souls who were once alive in the World, in the Time or Days in which Noah lived, being disobedient in their times to the Calls of God, by his Spirit in Noah, for so I understand it, was according to that which was foretold by that Preacher, deprived of Life, and overcome by the Flood, and are now in Prison. Mark, he preached to the Spirits in Prison: He doth not say, who were in Prison, under Chains of Darkness, reserved, or kept there in that Prison, in which now they are, (ready like Villains in the Goal, to be brought before the Judgment-Seat of Christ at the great Day.) But of this I shall speak further by and by. Now if this one Truth, that Men must die and depart this World, and either enter into Joy, or else into Prison, to be reserved to the Day of Judgment, were believed, we should not have so many Wantons walk up and down the Streets as there do; at least it would put a mighty check to their filthy Carriages, so that they would not, could not walk so basely and sinfully as they do. Belshazzar, notwithstanding he was so far from the Fear of God as he was, yet when he did but see God was offended, and threatned him for his Wickedness, it made him hang down his Head, and knock his Knees together, Dan. 5. 5, 6. If you read the Verses before, you will find he was careless; and satisfying his Lusts in drinking, and playing the Wanton with his Concubines: But so soon as he did perceive the Finger of an Hand writing, then (saith the Scripture) the King's Countenance was changed, and his Thoughts troubled him; so that the joints of his Loyns were loosed, and his knees smote one against another. And when Paul told Felix of Righteousness, Temperance, and Judgment to come, it made him tremble. And let me tell thee (Soul) whoever thou art, that if thou didst but verily believe that thou must die, and come to Judgment, it would make thee turn over a new Leaf. But this is the Misery, the Devil doth labour by all means, as to keep out other things that are good, so to keep out of the Heart, as much as in him lies, the Thoughts of passing from this Life into another World; for he knows, if he can but keep them from the serious Thoughts of Death, he shall the more easily keep them in their Sins, and so from closing with Jesus Christ; as Job saith, Their Houses are safe from fear, neither is the Rod of God upon them. Which makes them say to God, Depart from us, for we desire not the knowledge of thy Ways, verse 14. Because there is no fear of Death and Judgment to come, therefore they do put off God and his Ways; and spend their Days in their Sins, and in a Moment, that is, before they are aware, go down to the Grave, verse 17. And thus it fared also with the Man spoken of in Luke 12. 20. The Man instead of thinking on Death, he thought how he might make his Barns bigger: But in the midst of his Business in the World, he lost his Soul before he was aware, supposing that Death had been many Years off: But God said unto him,

Vol. II.

6 A

Thou

Thou Fool, thou troublest thy self about things of this Life, thou puttest off the thoughts of departing this World, when this Night thy Soul shall be taken from thee; or, this Night, They, that is, Devils will fetch away thy Soul from thee. And here it comes to pass, Mens not being exercised with the Thoughts of departing this Life, that they are so unexpectedly to themselves and their Neighbours, taken away from the Pleasures and Profits, yea, and all the Enjoyments they busy themselves withal while they live in this World. And hence it is again, that you have some in your Towns and Cities that are so suddenly taken away, some from haunting the Alehouses, others from haunting the Whorehouses, others from Playing and Gaming, others from the Cares and covetous Desires after this World, unlooked for as by themselves, or their Companions. Hence it is also, that Men do so wonder at such Tydings as these, That there is such a one Dead, such a one Departed; it is because they do so little consider both the Transitoriness of themselves and their Neighbours: For had they but their Thoughts well exercised about the Shortness of this Life, and the Danger that will befall such as do miss of the Lord Jesus Christ, it would make them more wary and sober, and spend more time in the Service of God, and be more delighted and diligent in enquiring after the Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Deliverer from Wrath to come, 1 Thess. 1. 10. For, as I said before, it is evident, that they who live after the Flesh in the Lusts thereof, do not really and seriously think on Death, and the Judgment that doth follow after; neither do they indeed endeavour so to do; for did they, it would make them say with holy Job, All the Days of my appointed Time, will I wait till my Change come, Job 14. 14. And as I said before, that not only the Wicked, but also the Godly have their time to depart this Life. And the Begger died. The Saints of the Lord, they must be deprived of this Life also, they must yield up the Ghost into the Hands of the Lord their God; they must also be separated from their Wives, Children, Husbands, Friends, Goods, and all that they have in the World. For God hath decreed it; It is appointed, namely, by the Lord, for Men once to die, and we must appear before the Judgment-seat of Christ. As it is, 2 Cor. 5. 10, 11. But it may be objected, if the Godly die as well as the Wicked, and if the Saints must appear before the Judgment-seat, as well as the Sinners; then what Advantage have the Godly more than the Ungodly, and how can the Saints be in a better Condition than the Wicked?

Ans. Read the 22d Verse over again, and you will find a marvellous difference between them, as much as is between Heaven and Hell, everlasting Joy, and everlasting Torments; for you find, that when the Begger died, which represents the Godly, He was carried by the Angels into Abraham's Bosom, or into everlasting Joy, Psal. 1. But the Ungodly are not so, but are hurried by the Devils into the bottomless Pit, drawn away in their Wickedness, Prov. 14. 32. for he saith, And in Hell he lift up his Eyes. When the Ungodly do die, their Misery beginneth, for then appear the Devils, like so many Lions; waiting every Moment till the Soul depart from the Body. Sometimes they are visible to the dying Party, but sometimes more invisible; but always this is certain, they never miss of the Soul, if it do die out of the Lord Jesus Christ; but do hale it away to the Prison, as I said before, there to be tormented and reserved until the great and dreadful Day of Judgment, at which Day they must, Body and Soul, receive a final Sentence from the Righteous Judge, and from that time be shut out from the Presence of God into everlasting Woe and Distress. But the Godly, when the time of their Departure is at hand, then also are the Angels of the Lord at hand; yea, they are ready waiting upon the Soul to conduct it safe into Abraham's Bosom. I do not say, but the Devils are oft-times very busy doubtless, and attending the Saints in their Sickness; Ay, and no question but they wou'd willingly deprive the Soul of Glory. But here is the comfort, as the Devils come from Hell to devour the Soul, (if it be possible at its departure) so the Angels of the Lord come from Heaven, to watch over and conduct the Soul (in spite of the Devils) safe into Abraham's Bosom.

David had the comfort of this, and speaks it forth for the comfort of his Brethren, Psal. 34. 7. saying, The Angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them. Mark, the Angel of the Lord encampeth round about his Children, to deliver them: From what? From their Enemies, of which the Devil is not the least. This is an excellent comfort at any time, to have the holy Angels of God to attend a poor Man or Woman; but especially it is comfortable in the time of Distress, at the time of Death, when the Devils beset the Soul with all the Power that Hell can afford them. But now it may be, that the glorious Angels of God do not appear at the first, to the view of the Soul; nay, rather Hell stands before it, and the Devils ready, as if they would carry it thither; but this is the comfort, the Angels do always appear at the last, and will not fail the Soul, but will carry it safe into Abraham's Bosom. Ah Friends! consider, here is an ungodly Man upon his Death-bed, and he hath none to speak for him, none to speak comfort unto him; but it is not so with the Children of God, for they have the Spirit to comfort them.

them. Here is the Ungodly, and they have no Christ to pray for their safe Conduct to Glory; but the Saints have an Intercessor, Job 17. 9. Here is the World, when they die, they have none of the Angels of God to attend upon them; but the Saints have their Company. In a word, the unconverted Person when he dieth, he sinks into the bottomless Pit; but the Saints, when they die, do ascend with, and by the Angels, into Abraham's Bosom, or into unspeakable Glory, Luke 23. 43.

Again it is said, that the rich Man when he died, was buried, or put into the Earth; but when the Begger died, he was carried by the Angels into Abraham's Bosom. The one is a very excellent Stile, where he saith, he was carried by Angels into Abraham's Bosom; it denotes the excellent Condition of the Saints of God, as I said before; and not only so, but also the preciousness of the Death of the Saints in the Eyes of the Lord, Ps. 116. 15. that After-Generations may see how precious in the Sight of the Lord, the Death of his Saints is, when he saith, they are carried by the Angels into Abraham's Bosom.

Thus many times the Lord adorneth the Death and Departure of his Saints, to hold forth to After-Generations, how excellent they are in his Eyes. It is said of Enoch, that God took him; of Abraham, that he died in a good Old Age; of Moses, that the Lord buried him; of Elijah, that he was taken up into Heaven; that the Saints sleep in Jesus; that they die in the Lord; that they rest from their Labours, that their Works follow them: That they are under the Altar; that they are with Christ; that they are in Light; that they are to come with the Lord Jesus to Judge the World. All which Sayings signify thus much, That to die as a Saint, is a very great Honour and Dignity. But the Ungodly are not so. The Rich or Ungodly die and are buried, he is carried from his Dwelling to his Grave, and there he is buried, hid in the Dust; and his Body doth not so fast moulder and come to nought there, but his Name doth stink as fast in the World. As saith the holy Scripture: The Name of the Wicked shall rot. And indeed, the Names of the Godly are not in so much Honour after their Departure, but the Wicked and their Names do as much rot. What a Dishonour to Posterity was the Death of Balaam, Agag, Achitophel, Haman, Judas, Herod, with the rest of their Companions?

Thus the wicked have their Names written in the Earth, and they do perish and rot, and the Name of the Saints casts forth a dainty savour to following Generations; and that the Lord Jesus doth signify, where he saith, The Godly are carried by the Angels into Abraham's Bosom. And the wicked are nothing worth; where he saith, The Ungodly die and are buried.

Verse 23. And in Hell he lift up his Eyes, being in Torment, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his Bosom.

THE former Verse speaks only of the departure of the Ungodly out of this Life, together with the glorious Conduct that the Godly have into the Kingdom of their Father. Now our Lord doth shew in this Verse, partly what doth, and shall befall to the Reprobate, after this Life is ended, where he saith, [And in Hell he lift up his Eyes] That is, the Ungodly after they depart this Life, do lift up their Eyes in Hell. From these Words, may be observed these things.

1. That there is an Hell for Souls to be tormented in, when this Life is ended. Mark, after he was dead and buried, In Hell he lift up his Eyes.

2. That all that are Ungodly, and do live and die in their Sins, so soon as ever they die, they go into Hell: he died and was buried; And in Hell he lift up his Eyes.

3. That some are so fast asleep, and secure in their Sins, that they scarce know well where they are till they come into Hell; and that I gather from these Words, In Hell he lift up his Eyes. He was asleep before, but Hell makes him lift up his Eyes.

As I said before, it is evident, there is an Hell for Souls, yea, and Bodies too, to be tormented in after they depart this Life: as is clear, First, because the Lord Jesus Christ that cannot lie, did say that after the Sinner was dead and buried, In Hell he lift up his Eyes.

Now if it be objected that by Hell is here meant the Grave. That I plainly deny:

First, Because there the Body is not sensible of torment or ease; but in that Hell, into which the Spirits of the damned depart, they are sensible of Torment, and would very willingly be free from it, to enjoy Ease, which they are sensible of the want of; as is clearly discovered in this Parable, Send Lazarus that he may dip the Tip of his Finger in Water, to cool my Tongue.

Secondly, It is not meant the Grave, but some other place, because the Bodies, so long as they lie there, are not capable of lifting up their Eyes, to see the glorious Condition of the Children of God, as the Souls of the damned do. In Hell he lift up his Eyes.

Thirdly, It cannot be the Grave, for then it must follow, that the Soul was buried there with the Body, which cannot stand with such a dead State as is here mentioned; for he saith, The rich Man died; that is, his Soul was separated from his Body. And in Hell he lift up his Eyes.

If it be again objected that there is no Hell but in this Life; that I do also deny, as I said before: after he was dead and buried ried, In Hell he lift up his Eyes. And let me tell thee, O Soul, whoever thou art, that if thou close not in savingly with the Lord Jesus Christ, and lay hold on what he hath done, and is doing in his own Person for Sinners, thou wilt find such an Hell after this Life is ended, that thou wilt not get out of again for ever and ever. And thou that art wanton, and dost make but a mock at the Servants of the Lord, when they tell thee of the Torments of Hell, thou wilt find, that when thou departest out of this Life, that Hell, even the Hell which is after this Life, will meet thee in thy Journey thither; and will with its hellish Crew, give thee such a sad Salutation, that thou wilt not forget it to all Eternity; when that Scripture comes to be fulfilled on thy Soul, in Isa. 14. 9. Hell from beneath is moved for thee to meet thee at thy coming: It stirreth up the Dead for thee, even all the chief ones of the Earth: It hath raised from their Thrones all the Kings of the Nations. All they, that is, that are in Hell, shall say, Art thou become weak as we? Art thou become like unto us? O sometimes when I have had but thoughts of going to Hell, and consider the everlastingness of their Ruin that fall in thither, it hath stirred me up, rather to seek to the Lord Jesus Christ to deliver me from thence, than to slight it, and make a mock at it.

And in Hell he lift up his Eyes.] The second thing I told you was this, That all the Ungodly that live and die in their Sins, so soon as ever they depart this Life, do descend into Hell. This is also verified by the Words in this Parable, where Christ saith, he died and was buried, and in Hell he lift up his Eyes. As the Tree falls, so it shall lie, whether it be to Heaven or Hell, Eccles. 11. 3. And as Christ said to the Thief on the Cross, This Day shalt thou be with me in Paradise; Even so the Devil in the like manner may say unto the Soul, To Morrow shalt thou be with me in Hell. See then what a miserable case he that dies in an Unregenerate State, is in; he departs from a long Sickness to a longer Hell; from the Gripings of Death, to the everlasting Torments of Hell. And in Hell he lift up his Eyes. Ah Friends! If you were but your selves, you would have a care of your Souls; if you did but regard, you would see how mad they are that slight the Salvation of their Souls. O what will it profit thy Soul to have Pleasure in this Life, and Torment in Hell, Mark 8. 36. Thou hadst better part with all thy Sins, and Pleasures, and Companions, or whatsoever thou delightest in, than to have Soul and Body cast into Hell. O then do not neglect our Lord Jesus Christ, lest thou drop down to Hell, Heb. 2. 3. Consider, would it not wound thee to thine Heart, to come upon thy Death-bed, and instead of having the Comfort of a well spent Life, and the Merits of the Lord Jesus Christ, together with the Comfort of his glorious Spirit: to have, first, the Sight of an ill-spent Life, thy Sins flying in thy Face, thy Conscience uttering of it self with Thunder-claps against thee, the Thoughts of God terrifying of thee, Death with his merciless Paw seizing upon thee, the Devils standing ready to scramble for thy Soul, and Hell enlarging herself, and ready to swallow thee up; and Eternity of Misery and Torment attending upon thee, from which there will be no release. For mark, Death doth not come alone to an unconverted Soul, but with such Company, as wast thou but sensible of, it would make thee tremble. I pray consider that Scripture, Rev. 6. 8. And I looked and behold a pale Horse, and his Name that sat upon him was Death, and Hell followed with him. Mark, Death doth not come alone to the ungodly, no, but Hell goeth with him. O miserable Comforters! O miserable Society! Here comes Death and Hell unto thee. Death goeth into thy Body, and separates Body and Soul asunder; Hell stands without (as I may say) to embrace, or rather, to crush thy Soul between its everlasting Grinders. Then thy Mirth, thy Joy, thy sinful Delights will be ended when this comes to pass. Lo it will come. Blessed are all those, that through Jesus Christ his Mercies, by Faith, do escape these Soul murdering Companions. And in Hell he lift up his Eyes.

The third Thing you know that we did observe from these Words, was this, That some are so fast asleep, and secure in their Sins, that they scarce know where they are, until they come into Hell. And that I told you I gather by these Words, In Hell he lift up his Eyes: Mark, it was in Hell that he lift up his Eyes. Now some do understand by these Words, that he came to himself, or began to consider with himself, or to think with himself in what an Estate he was, and what he was deprived of; which is still a Confirmation of the Thing laid down by me. There it is that they come to themselves, that is, there they are sensible where they are indeed; Thus it fares with some Men that they scarce know where they are, till they lift up their Eyes in Hell. It is with those People as with those that fall down in a Swoon; you know if a Man do fall down in a Swoon in one Room, tho' you take him up and carry him into another, yet he is not sensible where he is till he cometh unto himself, and lifts up his Eyes.

Truly, thus, as it is to be feared, it is with many poor Souls, they are so senseless, so hard, so seared in their Conscience, 1 Tim. 4. 2. that they are very ignorant of their State; and when Death comes, it strikes them as it were into a Swoon, (especially if they die suddenly) and so they are hurried away, away, and scarce know where they are, till in Hell they lift up their Eyes: this is he who dieth in his full strength fully at Ease and Quiet, Job 21. 23.

Of this sort are they spoken of in Psal. 37. where he saith, There are no bonds in their Death, but their strength is firm: They are not troubled as other folk, neither are they plagued like other Men. And again, they spend their days in Wealth, and in a Moment, mark, in a Moment, before they are aware, they go down into the Grave, Job 21. 17.

Indeed this is too much known by woful and daily Experience; sometimes when we go to visit them that are sick in the Towns and Places where we live, O how senseless, how seared in their Consciences are they! They are neither sensible of Heaven, nor of Hell; of Sin, nor of a Saviour: speak to them of their Condition and the State of their Souls, and you shall find them as ignorant as if they had no Souls to regard. Others, tho' they lye ready to dye, yet they are busying themselves about their outward Affairs, as tho' they should certainly live here, even to live and enjoy the same for ever. Again, come to others, speak to them about the State of their Souls, tho' they have no more Experience of the new Birth than a Beast, yet will they speak as confidently of their eternal Estate, and the welfare of their Souls, as if they had the most excellent Experience of any Man or Woman in the World, saying, I shall have Peace, Deut. 29. 19. When, as I said even now, the Lord knows they are as ignorant of the New-birth, of the Nature and Operation of Faith, of the Witness of the Spirit, as if there were no New-birth, no Faith, no Witness of the Spirit of Christ in any of the Saints in the World. Nay, thus many of them are, even an hour or less before their departure. Ah, poor Souls! tho' they may go away here like a Lamb, as the World says, yet if you could but follow them a little, to stand and listen, soon after their departure; it is to be feared, you shall hear them roar like a Lion, at their first entrance into Hell, far worse than ever did Corah, &c. when they went down quick into the Ground, Numb. 16. 31 to 36.

Now by this one Thing doth the Devil take great advantage on the Hearts of the Ignorant, suggesting unto them, that because the Party deceased, departed so quietly, without all doubt they are gone to Rest and Joy; when, alas! It is to be feared, the Reason why they went away so quietly, was rather because they were senseless and hardned in their Consciences; yea, dead before in Sins and Trespases. For had they had but some awakenings on their Death-beds, as some have had, they would have made all the Town ring of their doleful Condition; But because they are seared and ignorant, and so depart quietly, therefore the World takes Heart at grafs, (as we use to say) and make no great matter of living and dying they cannot tell how: Therefore Pride compasseth them as a Chain, Psal. 73. 5, 6. But let them look to themselves, for if they have not an Interest in the Lord Jesus now while they live in the World, they will, whether they die raging or still, go unto the same Place, and lift up their Eyes in Hell.

O my Friends, did you but know what a miserable Condition they are in, that go out of this World without an Interest in the Son of God, it would make you smite upon your Thigh, and in the Bitterness of your Souls cry out, Acts 16. 29, 30, 31. Men and Brethren, what shall we do to be saved? And not only so, but thou wouldst not be comforted until thou didst find a rest for thy Soul in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Verse 23. And in Hell he lift up his Eyes being in Torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.

Something in brief I have observed from the first part of this Verse, namely from these Words, And in Hell he lift up his Eyes. And indeed, I have observed but some things, for they are very full of matter, and many things might be taken notice of in them. There is one thing more that I might touch upon, as touched in this saying, and that is this. Methinks the Lord Jesus Christ doth hereby signify, that Men are naturally unwilling to see or to take notice of their sad State, I say by Nature; but tho' now they are willingly Ignorant; yet in Hell they shall lift up their Eyes. That is, in Hell they shall see and understand their miserable Condition; and therefore to these Words; In Hell he lifted up his Eyes, he adds, being in Torment. As if he had said, tho' once they shut their Eyes, tho' once they were (2 Pet. 3. 5.) willingly Ignorant, yet when they depart into Hell, they shall be so miserably handled and tormented, that they shall be forced to lift up their Eyes. While Men live in this World, and are in a natural State, they will have a good conceit of themselves, and of their Condition; they will conclude that they are Christians, that Abraham is their Father, Mat. 3. 7, 8. and their State to be as good as the best; they will conclude they have Faith, the Spirit, good Hope, and an Interest in the Lord Jesus Christ: but when they drop into Hell, and lift up their Eyes there, and behold, first their Souls to be in extream Torments; their dwelling to be the bottomless Pit; their Company thousands of damned Souls; also the innumerable company of Devils; and the hot scalding Vengeance of God, not only to drop, but to fall very violently upon them; then they will be awakened, who all their Life-time were in a dead Sleep, I say, when this comes to pass; For so it will; then in Hell they they shall lift up their Eyes, in the midst of Torment they shall lift up their Eyes.

Again, you may observe in these Words: And in Hell he lift up his Eyes, being in Torment, That ungodly Men will smart for their Sins, in the Torments of Hell. Now here I am put to a stand, when I consider the Torments of Hell into which the Damned do fall: O unspeakable Torments! O endless Torments! Now that thy Soul might be made to flee from these intolerable Torments into which the Damned do go, I shall shew you briefly what are the Torments of Hell. First, by the Names of it. Secondly, by the sad State thou wilt be in, if thou comest there. First, the Names: It is called a never dying Worm, Mark 9. It is called, an oven fire, hot, Malachi 4. 1. It is called, a Furnace, a Fiery-Furnace, Mat. 13. It is called the bottomless Pit, the unquenchable Fire, Fire and Brimstone, Hell Fire, the lake of Fire, devouring Fire, everlasting Fire, eternal Fire, a stream of Fire, Rev. 21.

First, One part of thy Torments will be this, thou shalt have a full Sight of all thy ill spent Life from first to last; tho' here thou canst sin to Day, and forget it by to Morrow; yet there thou shalt be made to remember how thou didst sin against God at such a Time, and in such a Place, for such a Thing, and with such an One, which will be an Hell unto thee, Psalms 50. 21. God will set them in order before thine Eyes.

2. Thou shalt have the Guilt of them all lie heavy on thy Soul, not only the Guilt of one or two, but the Guilt of them all together, and there they shall lie in thy Soul, as if thy Belly were full of pitch, and set on a light Fire. Here Men can sometimes think on their Sins with Delight, but there with unspeakable Torment; for that I understand to be the Fire that Christ speaketh of, which shall never be quenched, Mark 8. 43, to 47. While Men live here, O how doth the Guilt of one Sin sometimes crush the Soul! It makes a Man in such plight, that he is a weary of his Life, so that he can neither rest at home nor abroad, neither up nor in bed. Nay, I do know, that they have been so tormented with the Guilt of one sinful Thought, that they have been even at their Wits ends, and have hanged themselves. But now when thou comest into Hell, and hast not only one or two, or an hundred Sins, with the Guilt of them all on thy Soul and Body, but all the Sins that ever thou didst commit since thou camest into the World, altogether clapt on thy Conscience at one Time, as one should clap a red hot Iron to thy Breast, and there to continue to all Eternity; this is miserable.

Again, then thou shalt have brought in to thy remembrance, the slighting of the Gospel of Christ; here thou shalt consider how willing Christ was to come into the World to save Sinners, and for what a trifle thou didst reject him. This is plainly held forth in Isa. 28. where, speaking of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Foundation of Salvation, ver. 16. he saith of them that reject the Gospel, that when the overflowing scourge doth pass through the Earth, (which I understand to be at the End of the World) then saith he, It shall take you morning by morning, by day and by night shall it pass over you; that is, continually without any Intermission. And it shall be a Vexation only to hear the report. A Vexation, that is, a Torment, or a great part of Hell only to understand the Report, to understand the good Tidings that came into the World by Christ's Death for poor Sinners. And you will find this verily to be the mind of the Spirit, if you compare it with Isa. 53. 1. where he speaks of Mens turning their backs upon the Tenders of God's Grace in the Gospel, he saith, Who hath believed our report, or the Gospel declared by us? Now this will be a mighty Torment to the Ungodly, when they shall understand the Goodness of God was so great, that he even sent his Son out of his bosom to die for Sinners, and yet that they should be so foolish as to put him off from one time to another, that they should be so foolish, as to lose Heaven and Christ, and eternal Life in Glory, for the Society of a Company of Drunkards; that they should lose their Souls for a little sport, for this World, for a Strumpet, for that which is lighter than Vanity and nothing; I say this will be a very great Torment unto thee.

4. Another part of thy Torment will be this; Thou shalt see thy Friends, thy Acquaintance, thy Neighbours; nay, it may be thy Father, thy Mother, thy Wife, thy Husband, thy Children, thy Brother, thy Sister, with others, in the Kingdom of Heaven, and thy self thrust out, Luke 13. 28. There shall be weeping, &c. when you shall see Abraham, (your Father) and Isaac, and Jacob, (together with your Brethren) the Prophets in the Kingdom of Heaven, and you your selves thrust out. Nay, saith he, They shall come from the East, and from the West, that is, those that thou didst never see in all thy Life before, and they shall sit down with thy Friends, and thy Neighbours, thy Wife and Children, in the Kingdom of Heaven, and thou for thy Sins and Disobedience shalt be shut, nay, thrust out. O wonderful Torment!

5. Again, thou shalt have none but a Company of damned Souls, with an innumerable Company of Devils to keep Company with thee; while thou art in this World, the very Thoughts of the Devils appearing to thee makes thy Flesh to tremble, and thine hair ready to stand up right on thy Head. But O! What wilt thou do (when not not only the Supposition of the Devils appearing) but the real Society of all the Devils of Hell will be with thee howling and roaring, screeching and roaring in such a hideous manner, that thou wilt be even at thy wits end, and be ready to run stark mad again for Anguish and Torment.

6. Again, that thou mightest be tormented to purpose, the mighty God of Heaven will lay as great Wrath and Vengeance upon thee as ever he can, by the might of his glorious Power. As I said before, Thou shalt have his Wrath, not by Drops, but by whole Showers shall it come, Thunder, Thunder, upon thy Body and Soul so fast, and so thick, that thou shalt be tormented out of Measure. And so saith the Scripture, 2 Thess. 1. 9. speaking of the Wicked, Who shall be punished with everlasting Destruction from the Presence of the Lord, and from the Glory of his Power, when the Saints shall be admiring his Goodness and Glory.

Again, this thou shalt have, as I said before, without any Intermission; thou shalt not have any ease so long as while a Man may turn himself round; thou shalt have it always every Hour, Day and Night; for their Worm never dies, but always gnaws, and their Fire is never quenched; as it is written in Mark 9.

Again, in this Condition thou must be for ever, and that is as sad as all the rest. For if a Man were to have all his Sins laid to his charge, and Communion with the Devils, and as much Wrath as the great God of Heaven can inflict upon him; I say, if it were but for a Time, even ten thousand Years, and so end, there would be ground of Comfort, and hopes of Deliverance; but here is thy Misery, this is thy State for ever, here thou must be for ever; when thou lookest about thee, and seest what an innumerable Company of howling Devils thou art amongst, thou shalt think this again, this is my Portion for ever. When thou hast been in Hell so many thousand Years as there are Stars in the Firmament, or Drops in the Sea, or Sands on the Sea-shore, yet thou hast to lie there for ever. O this one Word Ever, how will it torment thy Soul!

Friends, I have only given a very short touch of the Torments of Hell. O! I am set, I am set, and am not able to utter what my Mind conceives of the Torments of Hell. Yet this let me say to thee, accept of God's Mercy through our Lord Jesus Christ, lest thou feel that with thy Conscience, which I cannot express with my Tongue, and say, I am sorely tormented in this Flame.

And seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in Bosom.

When the damned are in this pitiful State, surrounded with Fears, with Terrors, with Torment and Vengeance, one thing they shall have, which is this, They shall see the happy and blessed State of God's Children: He seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his Bosom; which as I said before, is the happy State of the Saints when this Life is ended. This now shall be so far from being an ease unto them, that it shall most wonderfully aggravate or heighten their Torment, as I said before. There shall be weeping, or cause of Lamentation, when they shall see Abraham, and Isaac and Jacob in the Kingdom of Heaven, and themselves thrust out.

2. Observe, Those that die in their Sins are far from going to Heaven; he seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his Bosom. And indeed, it is just with God to deal with them that die in their Sins according to what they have done; and to make them who are far from Righteousness now, to stand far from Heaven to all Eternity. Harken to this, ye stout-hearted, that are far from Righteousness, and that are resolved to go on in your Sins, when you die you will be far from Heaven; you will see Lazarus, but it will be afar off.

Again, he seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his Bosom.

These are some of the Things the damned do behold, so soon as they come into Torment. Mark, And he seeth Lazarus in Abraham's Bosom. Lazarus, Who was he? Why, even he that was so slighted, so disregarded, so undervalued by this ungodly one while he was in the World, he seeth Lazarus in his Bosom.

From whence observe, That those who live and die the Enemies of the Saints of God, let them be never so great and stout, let them bear never so much Sway while they are in the World, let them brag and boast never so much while they are here, they shall in spite of their Teeth see the Saints, yea, the poor Saints, even the Lazarus's, or the ragged ones that belong to Jesus, to be in a better Condition than themselves, O! Who do you think was in the best Condition? Who do you think saw themselves in the best Condition, he that was in Hell, or he that was in Heaven? He that was in Darkness, or he that was in Light? He that was in everlasting Joy, or he that was in everlasting Torments? The one with God, Christ, Saints, Angels, the other in tormenting Flames, under the Curse of God's eternal Hatred, with the Devils and their Angels, together with an innumerable Company of howling, roaring, cursing, ever burning Reprobates? Certainly, this Observation will be easily proved to be true here in this World, by him that looks upon it with an understanding Heart, and will clear it self to be true in the World to come, by such as shall go either to Heaven or to Hell.

2. The second Observation from these Words, [And seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his Bosom] is this; they that are the Persecutors of the Saints of the Lord now in this World, shall see the Lord's persecuted Ones to be they that are so highly esteemed by the Lord, as to sit or to be in Abraham's Bosom (in everlasting Glory) tho' the Enemies to the Children of God did so lightly esteem them, that they scorn'd to let them gather up the Dogs-meat that fell under their Table. This is also verified, and held forth plainly by this Parable. And therefore be not grieved, O you that are the Tempted, Persecuted, Afflicted, Sighing, Praying Saints of the Lord, tho' your Adversaries look upon you now with a Disdainful, Surly, Rugged, Proud and Haughty Countenance, yet the time shall come, when they shall spy you in Abraham's Bosom.

I might enlarge upon these things, but shall leave them to the Spirit of the Lord, which can better by ten thousand Degrees enlarge them on thy Heart and Conscience, than I can upon a piece of Paper: Therefore leaving these to the Blessing of the Lord, I shall come to the next Verse, and shall be brief in speaking to that also, and so pass to the rest.

Verse 24. And he cried, and said, Father Abraham have Mercy upon me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the Tip of his Finger in Water, to cool my Tongue; for I am tormented in this Flame.

YOU know I told you, that Verse 22. is a discovery of the departure of the godly and the ungodly out of this Life; where he saith, The Begger died, and the Rich Man also died. The 23d Verse is a Discovery of the proper places, both of the godly and the ungodly after Death; one being in Abraham's Bosom, or in Glory, the other in Hell: Now Verse 24. is a Discovery of part of the too late Repentance of the ungodly, when they are dropt down into Hell; [And he cried, and said, Father Abraham have Mercy on me.]

From the Words, And he cried, we may observe, First, What a change the ungodly will have when they come into Hell. He cried: It is like he was laughing, jesting, jeering, drinking, mocking, swearing, cursing, prating, persecuting of the ungodly in his Prosperity, among his filthy Companions: But now the Case is otherwise, now he is in another Frame, now his Proud, Stout, Curriish Carriage is come down; And he cried. The Laughter of the ungodly will not last always, but will be sure to end in a Cry; The triumphing of the Wicked is short, Job 20. 5. Consider, you must have a change either here or in Hell. If you be not New Creatures, Regenerate Persons, New-born Babes, in this World before you go hence, your Note will be changed, your Conditions will be changed; for if you come into Hell, you must Cry. O did but the singing Drunkards, when they are making merry on the Alehouse-bench, think on this, it would make them change their Note and Cry, What shall I do? Whither shall I go when I die? But as I said before, the Devil, as he labours to get poor Souls to follow their Sins, so he labours also to keep the Thoughts of eternal Damnation out of their Minds; and indeed, these two Things are so nearly linked together, that the Devil cannot well get the Soul to go on in Sin with delight unless he can keep the Thoughts of that terrible After-clap out of their Minds.

But let them know, that it shall not always be thus with them; for if when they depart, they drop down into eternal Destruction, they shall have such a Sense of their Sins, and the Punishment due to the same, that it shall make them to Cry; And he cried. O what an alteration will there be among the ungodly when they go out of this World? It may be a Fortnight, or a Month before their Departure, they were light, stout, surly, drinking themselves drunk, slighting God's People, mocking at Goodness, and delighting in Sin, following the World, seeking after Riches, faring deliciously, keeping Company with the bravest; but now, they are dropt down into Hell, they Cry. A little while ago they were painting their Faces, feeding their Lusts, following their Whores, robbing their Neighbours, telling of Lies, following of Plays and Sports to pass away the Time; but now they are in Hell, they do Cry. It may be last Year they heard some good Sermons, were invited to receive Heaven, were told their Sins should be pardoned if they closed in with Jesus, but refusing his Proffers, and slighting the Grace that was once tendred, they are now in Hell, and do Cry.

Before they had so much time, they thought that they could not tell how to spend it, unless it were in Hunting, and Whoring, in Dancing, and Playing, and spending whole Hours, yea, Days, nay, Weeks, in the Lusts of the Flesh: but when they depart into another place, and begin to lift up their Eyes in Hell, and consider their miserable, and irrecoverable Condition, They will Cry.

O what a Condition wilt thou fall into, when thou dost depart this World; if thou depart unconverted, and not born again, thou hadst better have been smothered the first Hour thou wast born; thou hadst better have been plucked one Limb from another; thou hadst better have been made a Dog, a Toad, a Serpent, nay, any other Creature in the visible World, than to die unconverted; and this thou wilt find to be true, when in Hell thou dost lift up thine Eyes, and dost Cry.

Here

Here then before we go any further, you may see that it is not without good Ground, that these Words are here spoken by our Lord, that when any of the ungodly do depart into Hell, they will Cry. Cry, why so?

1. They will cry to think that they should be cut off from the Land of the Living, never more to have any footing therein.

2. They will cry to think, that the Gospel of Christ should be so often proffered to them, and yet they are not profited by it.

3. They will cry to think that now, tho' they would never so willingly repent and be saved, yet they are past all recovery.

4. They will cry to think that they should be so foolish as to follow their Pleasures, when others were following of Christ, Luke 13. 28.

5. They will cry to think that they must be separated from God, Christ and the Kingdom of Heaven, and that for ever.

6. To think that their crying will now do them no good.

7. To think that at the Day of Judgment they must stand at the left Hand of Christ, among an innumerable Company of damned Ones.

8. They will cry to think, that Lazarus whom once they slighted, must be of them that must sit down with Christ to judge, or together with Christ, to pass a Sentence of Condemnation on their Souls for ever, 1 Cor. 6. 2, 3.

9. Cry to think, that when the Judgment is over, and others are taken into the everlasting Kingdom of Glory, then they must depart back again into that Dungeon of Darkness from whence they came out, (to appear before the terrible Tribunal) where they shall be tormented so long as Eternity lasts, without the least Intermission or Ease.

How sayest thou, O thou wanton, proud, swearing, lying ungodly Wretch! Whether this be to be slighted and made a mock at; And again, tell me, now if it be not better to leave Sin, and to close in with Christ Jesus, notwithstanding that Reproach thou shalt meet with for so doing, than to live a little while in this World in Pleasures and feeding thy Lusts, in neglecting the Welfare of thy Soul, and refusing to be justified by Jesus; and in a Moment, to drop down to Hell, and to Cry? O! Consider, I say, consider betimes, and put not off the Tenders of the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, lest you lift up your Eyes in Hell, and cry for anguish of Spirit.

And he cried, and said, Father Abraham, have Mercy upon me, and send Lazarus, &c.

These Words do not only hold forth the lamentable Condition of the Damned, and their lamentable howling and crying out under their anguish of Spirit, but also they do signify to us (as I said before) their too late Repentance; and also that they would very willingly, if they might, be set at Liberty from that everlasting Misery, that by their Sins they have plunged themselves into. I say, these Words do hold forth a desire that the Damned have, to be delivered from those Torments that they now are in: O Father Abraham, saith he, have Mercy upon me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the Tip of his Finger in Water, and cool my Tongue, for I am tormented in this Flame. These Words, Father Abraham, may have some Difficulty in them. It is possible that some may think them to be meant of Abraham; and those, or him that cryeth out here, to be the Jews. Or it may be some may understand it to be GOD, or Jesus Christ his Son, which I rather suppose it may be, that is here cried unto; because you find the same Cry to him as it were uttered by the ungodly in other places of Scripture; as in Luke 13. 25, 26. Then shall they say, Lord, Lord, we have eat and drunk in thy Presence, and thou hast taught in our Streets. Nay more, In thy Name have we cast out Devils, and in thy Name done many wonderful Works. This was just at their Rejection. And again, in Matt. 25. 11. They cry again to him, even to Jesus, Lord, Lord, open to us. And he there again gives them a Repulse, as also in this Parable. But however, or whosoever Abraham is, yet these Truths may be observed from the Words.

1. That the Damned, when in an irrecoverable Estate will seek for, or desire Deliverance from the Wrath that they are, and shall be in for Eternity. Surely in the Floods of great Waters they shall not come nigh unto him.

2. That they will pray (if I may so call it) earnestly for deliverance from their miserable Estate. These two Things are clear from the Words. For mark, He not only said Father Abraham have Mercy upon me; But he cried, and said, Father Abraham have Mercy on me. From whence, take a third Observation, and that is, There is a Time coming wherein tho' Men shall both cry and pray, yet they are like to have no Mercy at the Hand of God; for so was this Man served, as I shall further shew by and by when I come to it.

Some People are so deluded by the Devil, as to think that God is so merciful, as to own and regard any thing for Prayer; They think any thing will go for current and good Satisfaction, while they are here in this World, through Ignorance of the true Nature of the Mercy of GOD, and the Knowledge in what way God is satisfied for Sinners. Now I say, through Ignorance they think, that if they do but mutter over some Form of Prayers, tho' they know not what they say, nor what they request, yet God is satisfied, yea, very well well satisfied with their doings; when alas! there is nothing less. O Friends, I beseech you to look about you, and seek in good earnest for the Spirit of Christ so to help you now, to strive and pray, and to enable you to lay hold on Christ, that your Souls may be saved, lest the Time come, that tho' you cry and pray, and wish also that you had laid hold on the Lord Jesus, yet you must and shall be damned.

Then again, you may see that tho' God be willing to save Sinners at some time, yet this time doth not always last. No, he that can find in his Heart to turn his Back upon Jesus Christ now, shall have the Back turned upon him hereafter, when he may cry and pray for Mercy, and yet go without it. God will have a Time to meet with them, that now do not seek after him: They shall have a Time, yea Time enough hereafter to repent their Folly, and to befool themselves, for turning their Backs upon the Lord Jesus Christ. I will laugh at their Calamities, saith he, and mock when their fear cometh, Prov. 1. 26, 27.

Again, This should admonish us to take Time while it is proffered, lest we repent us of our Unbelief and Rebellion when we are deprived of it. Ah Friends! Time is precious, an hours Time to hear a Sermon is precious: I have sometimes thought thus with my self, Set the Case, the Lord should send two or three of his Servants the Ministers of the Gospel, to Hell among the Damned, with this Commission; Go ye to Hell, and preach my Grace to those that are there: Let your Sermon be an Hour long, and hold forth the Merits of my Son's Birth, Righteousness, Death, Resurrection, Ascension and Intercession, with all my Love in him, and proffer it to them, telling them, that now once, do I proffer the means of Reconciliation to them. They who are now roaring, being past Hope, would then leap at the least proffer of Mercy: Oh they that could spend whole Days, Weeks, nay, Years in rejecting the Son of God, would now be glad of one Tender of that Mercy. Father, saith he, have Mercy on me.

Again, From these Words you may observe, that Mercy would be welcome, when Souls are under Judgment: Now this Soul is in the Fire, now he is under the Wrath of God, now he is in Hell, there to be tormented; now he is with the Devils and damned Spirits, now he feels the Vengeance of God: Now, oh now have Mercy upon me! Here you may see, that Mercy is prized by them that are in Hell, they would be glad if they could have it. Father have Mercy on me; for my poor Soul's sake, send me a little Mercy.

And send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his Finger in water, and cool my Tongue.

These words do not only hold forth, that the Ungodly have a desire of Mercy, but what those Mercies are, what these poor Creatures would be glad of.

As first, to have the Company of a Lazarus granted to them. Father Abraham have Mercy upon me, and send Lazarus. Now Lazarus was he that was beloved of God, and also he that was hated of them. Therefore,

2. Observe, That those Saints, that the World in their Life-time could not endure, now they are departed, they would be glad to have Society with them. O now send Lazarus! Though the Time was when I cared not for him, yet now let me have some Society with him.

Though the World disregard the Society of God's Children now, yet there is a Time coming, in which they would be glad to have the least Company with them. Nay, do but observe, those of the Saints that are now most rejected by them, even from them shall they be glad of comfort, if it might be. Send Lazarus; he that I slighted more than my Dogs, he that I could not endure should come into my House, but must lye at my Gate, send him: Now Lazarus shall be welcome to me, now I desire some Comfort from him; but he shall go without it.

From whence again observe; That there is a Time coming, O ye furly dogged Persecuters of the Saints, that they shall slight you as much as ever you slighted them. You have given them many an hard Word, told many a Lye of them, given them many a Blow: And now in your greatest need and extremity they shall not pity you, the Righteous shall rather rejoyce when he seeth the Vengeance of God upon thee, Psal. 58. 10.

Again, Send Lazarus. From whence observe, That any of the Saints shall then be owned by you to be Saints. Now you look upon them to be the Sect with Hymeneus and Philetus, but then you shall see them to be the Lazarus's of God, even God's dear Children. Tho' now the Saints of the Lord will not be owned by you, because they are beggerly, low, poor, contemptible among you; yet the Day is coming that you shall own them, desire their Company and wish for the least Courtesy from them.

Send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his Finger in Water and cool my Tongue: for I am tormented in this Flame.

Thus shall the Souls that abide in their Sins, cry out in the Bitterness of their Spirits, with wonderful anguish and torment of Conscience, without Intermission; That he may dip the tip of his Finger in Water and cool my Tongue. That he, namely the Man who before I scorned should eat with the Dogs of my flock, that before I slighted and had no regard of, that I shut out of Door; send him, that he may dip the the tip of his Finger in Water and cool my Tongue.

Now these Words, that he may dip the tip of his Finger in Water, &c. do hold forth the least Friendship, or Favour; as if he should have said, Now I would be glad of the least Mercy, now I would be glad of the least Comfort, tho' it be but one drop of cold Water on the tip of his Finger. One would have thought that this had been a small Request, a small Courtesy, one drop of Water, what is that? Take a Pail full of it if that will do thee any good. But mark, he is not permitted to have so much as one drop, not so much as a Man may hold upon the tip of his Finger; this signifies, That they that fall short of Christ, shall be tormented even as long as Eternity lasteth, and shall not have so much as the least ease, no not so long as while a Man may turn himself round, not so much leave as to swallow his spittle, not one drop of cold Water.

O that these Things did take place in your Hearts, how would it make you to seek after Rest for your Souls before it be too late, before the Sun of the Gospel be set upon you.

Consider, I say, the Misery of the Ungodly that they shall be in, and avoid their Vices, by closing in with the Tenders of Mercy; lest you partake of the same Portion with them, and cry out in Bitterness of your Souls, One drop of cool Water to cool my Tongue:

For I am tormented in this Flame.

Indeed, the Reason why the poor World do not so earnestly desire Mercy, is partly, because they do not so seriously consider the Torment that they must certainly fall into if they die out of Christ. For let me tell you, did but poor Souls indeed consider that Wrath, that doth by right fall to their Shares, because of their Sins against God, they would make more haste to God through Christ for Mercy than they do; then we should have them say, It is good closing with Christ to Day, before we fall into such distress.

But why is it said, Let him dip the tip of his Finger in Water, and cool my Tongue? Because that as the several Members in the Body, have their share in Sin, and committing of that; so the several members of the Body, shall at that Time be punished for the same. Therefore when Christ is admonishing his Disciples, that they should not turn aside from him, and that they should rather fear and dread the Power of their God, than another Power; he saith, Fear him therefore, that can cast both [Body] and Soul into Hell, Luke 12. 4. And again, Fear him that can destroy both Body and Soul in Hell. Here is not one Member only, but all the Body, the whole Body, of which the Hands, Feet, Eyes, Ears and Tongue, are Members. And I am perswaded, that though this may be judged carnal by some now, yet it will appear to be a Truth then to the greater Misery of those, who shall be forced to undergo that which God in his just Judgment shall inflict upon them. O then they will cry, one Dram of Ease for my cursing, swearing, lying, jeering Tongue. Some Ease for my bragging, braving, flattering, threatening, dissembling Tongue. Now Men can let their Tongues run at random, as we use to say; now they will be apt to say, Our Tongues are our own, who shall controul them? Psal. 12. 4. But then they will be in another mind. Then, O that I might have a little Ease for my deceitful Tongue! Methinks sometimes to consider, how some Men do let their Tongues run at random, it makes me marvel. Surely they do not think they shall be made to give an Account for their offending with their Tongue. Did they but think they shall be made to give an Account to him who is ready to judge the quick and the dead; surely they would be more wary of, and have more regard unto their Tongue.

The Tongue, saith James, is an unruly Member, full of deadly Poyson; it setteth on fire the whole frame of Nature, and is set on fire of Hell, Jam. 2. The Tongue, how much mischief will it stir up in a very little Time? How many blows and wounds doth it cause? How many times doth it (as James saith) curse Man? How oft is the Tongue made the conveyer of that hellish Poyson that is in the Heart, both to the dishonour of God, the hurt of its Neighbours, and the utter ruin of its own Soul? and do you think the Lord will sit still (as I may say) and let thy Tongue run as it lists, and yet never bring you to an Account for the same; No, stay; The Lord will not always keep silence, but will reprove thee, and set thy Sins in order before thine Eyes, O sinner: Yea, and thy Tongue, together with the rest of thy Members, shall be tormented for sinning. And I say, I am very confident, that tho' this be made light of now, yet the Time is coming, when many poor Souls will rue the Day that ever they did speak with a Tongue; O, will one say, that I should so disregard my Tongue! O that I, when I said so and so, had before bitten off my Tongue! That I had been born without a Tongue! my Tongue, my Tongue, a little Water to cool my Tongue, for I am tormented in this Flame; even in that Flame that my Tongue, together with the rest of my Members, by sinning have brought me to. Poor Souls now will let their Tongues say any thing for a little Profit, for two pence or three pence gain. But, O what a grief will this be at that Day, when they together with their Tongue, must smart for that which they by their Tongues have done while they were in this World. Then you that that love your Souls, look to your Tongues, lest you bind your selves down so fast to Hell with the Sins of your Tongues, that you will never be able to get loose again to all Eternity. For by thy Words thou shalt be condemned, if thou have not a care of thy Tongue. For I say unto you, that for every idle Word that Man shall speak, he shall give an account thereof in the Day of Judgment, Mat. 12. 36.

Verse 25. But Abraham said, Son, Remember that thou in thy Life-time hadst thy good Things, and likewise Lazarus evil Things, but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

TH E S E Words are the Answer to the Request of the Damned. The Verse before (as I told you) is a discovery of the Desires they have after they depart this World. Here is the Answer, Son, Remember, &c.

The Answer signifies thus much, That instead of having any Relief or Ease, they are hereby the more tormented, and that by fresh Recollections, or by bringing afresh their former ill-spent Life, while in the World, into their remembrance: Son, Remember, thou hadst good Things in thy Life-time; as much as if he had said, Thou art now sensible what it is to lose thy Soul, thou art now sensible what is to put off Repentance; thou art now sensible that thou hast befooled thy self, in that thou didst spend that time in seeking after outward, momentary, earthly Things, which thou shouldst have spent in seeking to make Jesus Christ sure to thy Soul; and now through thy Anguish of Spirit, in the Pains of Hell thou wouldst enjoy that which in former Time thou didst make slight of, but alas! Thou art here beguiled and altogether disappointed, thy crying will now avail thee nothing at all, This is not the acceptable Time, 2 Cor. 6. 2. This is not a time to answer the desires of damned Reprobates; if thou hadst cried out in good earnest while Grace was offered, much might have been; but then thou wast careless, and didst turn the Forbearance and Goodness of God into Wantonness. Wast thou not told, that those who would not hear the Lord when he did call, should not be heard (if they turned away from him) when they did call, Prov. 1. 24. to 28. But contrariwise he would laugh at their Calamity, and mock when their Fear did come.

Now therefore, instead of expecting the least drop of Mercy and Favour, call into thy Mind how thou didst spend those Days which God did permit thee to live; I say, remember, that in thy Life-time thou didst behave thy self rebelliously against the Lord, in that thou wert careless of his Word and Ordinances, yea, and of the Welfare of thine own Soul also: Therefore, now I say, instead of expecting or hoping for any Relief, thou must be forced to call to Remembrance thy filthy Ways, and feed upon them, to thine everlasting Astonishment and Confusion.

From these Words therefore which say, Remember, that thou in thy Life-time hadst thy good Things, There are these Things to be taken notice of.

1. They that by putting off Repentance and living in their Sins, lose their Souls; shall instead of having the least measure of Comfort when they come into Hell, have their ill-spent Life always very fresh in their Remembrance. While they live here, they can Sin and forget it; but when they depart, they shall have it before them; they shall have a Remembrance, or their Memory notably enlightned, and a clearer, and a continual Sight of all their wicked Practices that they wrought and did while they were in the World. Son, remember, saith he; then you will be made to remember: 1. How you were born in Sin, and brought up in the same.

2. Remember how thou hadst many a time the Gospel preached to thee for taking away of the same, by him whom the Gospel doth hold forth.

3. Remember that out of Love to thy Sins and Lusts, thou didst turn thy Back on the Tenders of the same Gospel of good Tidings and Peace.

4. Remember that the reason why thou didst lose thy Soul, was because thou didst not close in with free Grace, and the Tenders of a loving and free-hearted Jesus Christ.

5. Remember how near thou wast to turning at such and such a time, only thou wast willing to give way to thy Lusts when they wrought, to Drunkards when they called, to Pleasures when they proffered themselves, to the Cares and Incumbrance of the World, which like so many Thorns, did choak that or those Convictions that were set on thy Heart.

6. Remember how willing thou wast to satisfy thy self with an Hypocrite's hope, and with a Notion of the Things of God, without the real Power and Life of the same.

7. Remember how thou, when thou wast admonished to turn, didst put off turning and repenting till another time.

8. Remember how thou didst dissemble such a time, lie at such a time, cheat thy Neighbour at such a time, Mock, Flout, Scoff, Taunt, Hate, Persecute the People of God at such a time, in such a place, among such Company.

9. Remember that while others were met together in the fear of the Lord to seek him, thou wast met with a Company of vain Companions to Sin against him, while the Saints were a Praying, thou wast a Cursing;

Cursing; while they were speaking good of the Name of God, thou wast speaking Evil of the Saints of God. O then thou shalt have a Scalding hot Remembrance of all thy sinful Thoughts, Words and Actions, from the very first, to the last of them that ever thou didst commit in all thy Life-time: Then thou wilt find that Scripture to be a Truth, (Deut. 28. 65, 66, 67.) The Lord shall give thee there a trembling Heart and failing of Eyes, and Sorrow of Mind. And thy Life shall hang in doubt before thee, and thou shalt fear Day and Night, and shalt have none Assurance of thy Life. In the Morning thou shalt say, would to God it were Evening; for the fear of thine Heart where-with thou shalt fear, and for the Sight of thine Eyes which thou shalt see. Nay, thou shalt find worst things to thy Woe than this Scripture doth manifest. For indeed there is no Tongue able to express the Horror, Terror, Torment, and Eternal Misery, that those poor Souls shall undergo, without the least Mitigation of Ease, a very great part of it shall come from that quick, full, and continual Remembrance of their Sins that they shall have. And therefore there is much weight in these Words, Son, Remember that thou in thy Life-time hadst thy good Things.

From these Words you see, this is to be observed, That the Ungodly shall remember, or have in remembrance the mispending their Lives; Remember that in thy Life-time, thou hadst thy good Things. You may take these Words, good Things, either simply for the Things of this World, which in themselves are called and may be called good Things; or else with these Words, namely, (the Things of this Life) all the Pleasures, Delights, Profits and Vanities, which the ignorant People of the World do count their good Things, and do very much cheer themselves therewith. Soul, Soul, eat, drink, and be merry; for thou hast much Goods laid up for many Years, Luke 12. 20. Now I say God according to his glorious Power and Wisdom, will make poor Creatures have always in their Minds, a fresh and clear remembrance of their ill spent Life; he will say unto them, Remember, remember, that in thy Life-time, it was thus and thus with thee, and in thy Life-time thy Carriage was so and so.

If Sinners might have their choice, they would not have their Sins and Transgressions so much in the remembrance, as it is evident by their Carriages here in this World; for they will not endure to entertain a serious Thought of their filthy Life, they put far away the evil Day, Amos 6. 3. Ezek. 12. 27. and labour by all means to put the Thoughts of it out of their Mind; but there they shall be made to remember to purpose, and to think continually of their ungodly deeds. And therefore it is said, that when our Lord Jesus Christ comes to Judgment, it will be to convince the ungodly World of their wicked and ungodly Deeds; Mark, To convince them, Jude 14, 15. They will not willingly take notice of them now. But then they shall, hereafter in spite of their Teeth: for those that die out of Christ shall be made to see, acknowledge, and confess their Guilt, do what they can, when they lift up their Eyes in Hell, and remember their Transgressions. God will be a swift Witness against them, Mal. 3. 5. and will say, Remember what thou didst in thy Life-time, how thou didst live in thy Life-time. Ha Friend! If thou dost not in these Days of Light remember the Days of Darkness, Eccl. 11. 8. (the Days of Death, Hell, and Judgment) thou shalt be made in the Days of Darkness, Death, Hell, and at the Judgment too, to remember the Days of the Gospel, and how thou didst disregard them too, to thy own Destruction, and everlasting Misery. This is intimated in that 25th of St. Matthew.

Remember that in thy Life-time thou hadst thy good Things.

The Great God, instead of giving the Ungodly any Ease, will even aggravate their Torments; first, by slighting their Perplexities, and by telling of them what they must be thinking of: Remember, saith he, O ye lost Souls, that you had your Joy in your Life-time, your Peace in your Life-time, your Comforts, Delights, Ease, Wealth, Health, your Heaven, your Happiness, and your Portion in your Life-time.

O miserable State! Thou wilt then be in a sad Condition indeed, when thou shalt see that thou hast had thy good Things, thy best Things, thy pleasant Things; for that is clearly signified by these Words, Remember that thou in thy Life-time hadst thy good Things, or all the good Things thou art like to have. From whence take notice of another Truth, (though it be a dreadful one) which is this; There are many poor Creatures, who have all their good, sweet, and comfortable Things in this Life, or while they are alive in this World: Remember, saith he, that in thy Life-time thou hadst thy good Things, Psal. 17. 14.

The Wicked's good Things will shortly have an End; they will last no longer with them than this Life, or their Life-time. That Scripture, was not written in vain: It is like the crackling of Thorns under a Pot, make a little Blaze for a sudden, a little Heat for a while; but come and consider them by and by, and instead of a comfortable Heat, you will find nothing but a few dead Ashes; and instead of a flaming Fire, nothing but a smell of Smoke.

There is a time coming, that the Ungodly would be glad of a better Portion, when they shall see the Vanity of this, that is, when they shall see what a poor thing it is, for a Man to have his Portion in this World.

World. 'Tis true, while they are here on this Side-Hell, they think there is nothing to be compared with Riches, Honours, and Pleasures in this World; which makes them cry out, Who will shew us any good, Psal. 4. 7. that is comparable to the Pleasures, Profits, and Glory of this World? But then they will see there is another thing that is better, and of more value than ten thousand Worlds. And seriously Friends, will it not grieve you, trouble, perplex, and torment you, when you shall see that you lost Heaven for a little Pleasure and Profit in your Life-time? Certainly, it will grieve you and perplex you exceedingly, to see what a blessed Heaven you left for a Dunghil-World. Oh! That you did but believe this, that you did but consider this, and say within your selves, What, shall I be contented with my Portion in this World? What, shall I lose Heaven for this World? I say, consider it while you have Day-light, and Gospel-light, while the Son of God doth hold out Terms of Reconciliation to you, lest you be made to hear such a Voice as this is, Son, remember that in thy Life-time thou hadst thy good Things; Thy Comforts, thy Joys, thy Ease, thy Peace, and all the Heaven thou art like to have. O poor Heaven! O short Pleasures! What a pitiful thing it is to be left in such a Case? Soul consider is it not miserable to lose Heaven, for twenty, thirty, or forty Years sinning against God? When thy Life is done, thy Heaven is also done; when Death comes to separate thy Soul and Body, in that Day also thou must have thy Heaven and Happiness separated from thee, and thou from that. Consider these Things sometimes, lest thou have thy Portion in thy Life-time. For if in this Life only we have our Portion, we are of all People the most miserable, 1 Cor. 15. 19. Again consider that when other Men (the Saints) are to receive their good Things, then thou hast had thine: When others are to enter into Joy, then thou art to leave and depart from thy Joy: When others are to go to God, thou must go to the Devil. O miserable! Thou hadst better thou hadst never been born, than to be an Heir of such a Portion; therefore, I say, have a care it be not thy Condition.

Remember that thou hadst thy good Things, and Lazarus evil Things.

These Words do not only hold forth the Misery of the Wicked in this Life, but also great Consolation to the Saints; where he saith, And Lazarus evil Things; That is, Lazarus had his evil Things in his Life-time, or when he was in the World.

From whence observe,

1. That the Life of the Saints, so long as they are in this World, is attended with many Evils or Afflictions; which may be discovered to be of divers Natures; as saith the Scripture, Many are the Troubles of the Righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all.

2. Take notice, that the Afflictions or Evils that accompany the Saints, may continue with them their Life-time, so long as they live in this Vale of Tears; Yea, and they may be divers, that is, of several sorts; some outward, some inward, and that as long as they shall continue here below, as hath been the Experience of all Saints in all Ages; and this might be proved at large, but I only hint in these things, though I might enlarge much upon them.

3. The Evils that do accompany the Saints will continue no longer with them than their Life-time; and here indeed lies the comfort of Believers, the Lazarus's, the Saints, they must have all their bitter Cup wrung up to them in their Life-time: Here must be all their Trouble, here must be all their Grief, Behold, saith Christ, the World shall rejoice, but ye shall lament; but your Mourning shall, mark, it shall be turned into Joy, Joh. 16. 2. You shall lament, you shall be sorrowful, you shall weep in your Life-time, but your Sorrow shall be turned into Joy, and your Joy no Man (let him be what he will, no Man) shall take away from you. Now if you think, when I say the Saints have all their evil Things in their Life-time, that I mean, they have nothing else but Trouble in this their Life-time, this is your Mistake: For let me tell you, That tho' the Saints have all their evil Things in their Life-time, yet even in their Life-time they have also Joy unspeakable, and full of Glory, while they look not at the Things that are seen, but at the Things which are not seen. The Joy that the Saints have sometimes in their Heart, by a believing Consideration of the good Things to come, when this Life is ended, doth fill them fuller of Joy, than all the Crosses, Troubles, Temptations, and Evils, that accompany them in this Life can fill them with Grief, 2 Cor. 4.

But some Saints may say, My Troubles are such as are ready to overcome me. Ans. Yet be of good Comfort, they shall last no longer than thy Life-time.

But my Trouble is, I am perplex'd with an Heart full of Corruption and Sin, so that I am much hindred in walking with God. Ans. 'Tis like so, but thou shalt have these Troubles no longer than thy Life-time.

But I have a cross Husband, and that's a great Grief to me.

Well but thou shalt be troubled with him no longer than thy Life-time, and therefore be not dismayd, be not discomfited, thou shalt have no Trouble longer than this Life-time.

Art thou troubled with cross Children, cross Relations, cross Neighbours? They shall trouble thee no longer than this Life-time.

Art thou troubled with a cunning Devil, with with Unbelief; yea, let it be what it will, thou shalt take thy farewell of them all (if thou be a Believer) after thy Life-time is ended. O Excellent! Then God shall wipe away all Tears from your Eyes; There shall be no more Death, nor Sorrow, nor Crying, nor any more Pain; for the former Things are passed away.

But now on the contrary, if thou be not a right and sound Believer: Then thou shouldest live a thousand Years in this World, and meet with sore Afflictions every Day; Yet these Afflictions, be they never so great and grievous, they are nothing to that Torment that will come upon thee, both in Soul and Body, after this Life is ended.

I say, be what thou wilt, if thou be found in unbelief, or under the first Covenant, thou art sure to smart for it at the Time when thou dost depart this World. But the Thing to be lamented is, for all this is so sad a Condition to be fallen into, yet poor Souls are for the most part senseless of it, yea, so senseless (at some times) as tho' there was no such misery to come hereafter. Because the Lord doth not immediately strike with his Sword, but doth bear long with his Creature, waiting that he might be gracious: Therefore, I say, the Hearts of some of the Sons of Men, are wholly set upon it to do mischief, Eccl. 8. 11. And that Forbearance and Goodness of God, that one would think should lead them to Repentance; the Devil hardening of them, by their continuing in Sin, and by blinding their Eyes, as to the End of God's Forbearance towards them, they are lead away with a very hardened and senseless Heart, even until they drop into eternal Destruction.

But poor Hearts, they must have a Time in which they must be made sensible of their former Behaviours, when the just Judgments of the Lord shall flame about their Ears, inasmuch, that they shall be made to cry out again with anguish, I am sorely tormented in this Flame.

But now he is Comforted, and thou art Tormented.

As if he should say, Now hath God recompensed both Lazarus and you, according to what you sought after, while you were in this World: As for your part, you did neglect the precious Mercy and Goodness of God, you did turn your Back on the Son of God, that came into the World to save Sinners; you made a mock of Preaching the Gospel; you was admonished over and over, to close in with the loving Kindness of the Lord, in his Son Jesus Christ. The Lord let you live twenty, thirty, forty, fifty, sixty Years; all which time, you instead of spending it, to make your Calling and Election sure, Job 21. 29, 30. did spend it in making of eternal Damnation sure to thy Soul. And also Lazarus, he in his Life time did make it his business to accept of my Grace and Salvation in the Lord Jesus Christ. When thou wast in the Ale-house, he frequented the Word preached; when thou wert jeering at Goodness, he was sighing for the Sins of the Times, Eccles. 9. 4. While thou wert Swearing, he was Praying; In a Word, while thou wert making sure of Eternal Ruin, he by Faith in the Blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, was making sure of Eternal Salvation. Therefore, Now he is Comforted, and thou art Tormented.

Here then you may see, that as the Righteous shall not be always void of Comfort and Blessedness; so neither shall the Ungodly go always without their Punishment. As sure as God is in Heaven, it will be thus: They must have their several Portions. And therefore, you that are the Saints of the Lord, follow on, be not dismayed, Forasmuch as you know, that your Labour is not in vain in the Lord, 1 Cor. 15. last Verse. Your Portion is eternal Glory. And, you that are so loath now to close in with Jesus Christ, and to leave your Sins to follow him; Your Day is coming, Psal. 37. 13. in which you shall know, that your sweet morsels of Sin, that you so easily take down, Job 20. 12, 13, 14. and it scarce troubles you, will have a Time so to Work within you to your eternal Ruin, that you will be in a worse Condition than if you had ten thousand Devils tormenting you: Nay, you had better have been plucked Limb from Limb a thousand times, (if it could be) than to be Partakers of this Torment, and will assuredly, without Mercy, lye upon you.

Verse 26. And besides all this, between us and you, there is a great Gulf fixed, so that they which would go from hence to you cannot, neither can they come to us, that would come from thence.

THESE Words are still part of that Answer, that the Souls in Hell shall have for all the sobbings, sighings, grievous cries, tears and desires, that they have, to be released out of those intolerable Pains they feel, and are perplexed with. And O methinks the Words at the first view, if rightly considered, are enough to make any hard-hearted Sinner in the World to fall down dead. The Verse I last spake to, was, and is a very terrible one, and aggravates the Torments of poor Sinners wonderfully. Where he saith, Remember that thou in thy Life time hadst thy good Things, and Lazarus his evil Things, &c. I say, these words are very terrible to those poor Souls that dye out of Christ. But these latter words do much more hold out their Sorrow. They were spoken, as to the present Condition of the Sinner: These do not only back the former, but do yet further aggravate their Misery, holding holding forth that which will be more intolerable: The former Verse is enough to smite any Sinner into a Swound, but this is to make them fall down dead. Where he saith, And besides all this: There is still something to aggravate thy Misery, yet far more abundantly. I shall briefly speak to the Words, as they have relation to the Terrour spoken of in the Verses before. As if he had said, Thou thinkest the present State unsupportable, it makes thee Sob and Sigh, it makes thee to rue the Time that ever thou wert born: Now thou findest the want of Mercy; now thou wouldst leap at the least dram of it; now thou feelest what it is to slight the Tenders of the Grace of God; now it makes thee to Sob, Sigh, and Roar exceedingly, for the anguish that thou art in. But besides all this, I have other things to tell thee of, that will break thine Heart indeed. Thou art now deprived of a Being in the World; thou art deprived of hearing the Gospel; the Devil hath been too hard for thee, and hath made thee miss of Heaven; thou art now in Hell among an innumerable Company of Devils, and all thy Sins beset thee round; thou art all over wrapped in Flames, and canst not have one drop of Water to give thee any Ease; Thou cryest in vain, for nothing will be granted; Thou seeest the Saints in Heaven, which is no small trouble to thy damned Soul; Thou seeest that neither God nor Christ takes any care to ease thee, or speak any comfort unto thee: But besides all this, There thou art like to lie, never think of any Ease, never look for any Comfort; Repentance now will do thee no good, the Time is past, and can never be called again; look what thou hast now, thou must have for ever.

'Tis true, I spoke enough before to break thine Heart asunder; But besides all this, there lye and swim in Flame for ever: These words, Besides all this, are terrible Words indeed. I will give you the Scope of them in a Similitude. Set the case you should take a Man, and tie him to a Stake, and with red-hot pinchers, pinch off his Flesh by little Pieces for two or three Years together, and at last, when the poor Man cries out for Ease and Help, the Tormentors answer, Nay, But besides all this, you must be handled worse.

We will serve you thus these twenty Years together, and after that we will fill your mangled Body full of scalding Lead, or run you through with a red-hot Spit; would not this be lamentable? Yet this is but a Flee-biting to the Sorrow of those that go to Hell; for if a Man were served so, there would e'er it were long be an end of him. But he that goes to Hell shall suffer ten thousand times worse Torments than these, and yet shall never be quite Dead under them. There they shall be ever Whining, Pining, Weeping, Mourning, ever Tormented without Ease; and yet never dissolv'd into nothing; if the biggest Devil in Hell might pull thee all to pieces, and rend thee small as dust, and dissolve thee into nothing, thou wouldst count this a Mercy. But here thou mayst lye and Fry, Scorch, and Broil, and Burn for ever: For ever, that is a long while, and yet it must be so long. Depart from me, saith Christ, into everlasting Fire, into the Fire that burns for ever, prepared for the Devil and his Angels, Mat. 25. 41. Oh, thou that wast loath to foul thy Foot if it were but Dirty, or did but Rain; thou that wast loath to come out of the Chimney-corner, if the Wind did but blow a little Cold; and wast loath to go half a Mile, yea, half a Furlong to hear the Word of God, if it were but a little Dark; thou that wast loath to leave a few vain Companions to edify thy Soul; thou shalt have Fire enough, thou shalt have Night enough, and evil Company enough, thy Belly-full if thou miss of Jesus Christ; and besides all this, thou shalt have them for ever, and for ever.

O thou that dost spend whole Nights in Carding and Dicing, in Rioting and Wantonness; thou that countest it a brave thing to swear as fast as the bravest, to spend with the greatest Spend-thrift in the Country; thou that lovest to Sin in a Corner when no Body sees thee! O thou that for by-ends dost carry on the Hypocrite's Profession, because thou wouldst be counted somebody among the Children of God, but art an Enemy to the things of Christ in thine Heart; Thou that dost satisfy thy self, either with Sins, or a bare Profession of Godliness, thy Soul will fall into extream Torment and Anguish, so soon as ever thou dost depart this World, and there thou shalt be Weeping and Gnashing thy Teeth, Mat. 8. 11, 12. And besides all this, thou art like never to have any Ease or Remedy, never look for any Deliverance, thou shalt die in thy Sins, and be tormented as many Years, as there are Stars in the Firmament, or Sands on the Sea-shore; and besides all this, thou must abide it for ever.

And besides all this, Between us and you there is a great Gulf fixed, so that they which would pass from hence to you, cannot; neither can they come to us that would come from hence. There is a great Gulf fixed.] You will say, what is that? Ans. It is a nice Question; therefore, first seek thou, rather to enter in at the strait Gate, than curiously to enquire what this Gulf is.

But 2dly, If thou wouldst needs know, if thou do fall short of Heaven, thou wilt find it this, namely, The Everlasting Decree of God; that is, There is a Decree gone forth from God, that those who fall short of Heaven in this World, God is resolv'd they shall never enjoy it in the World to come.

come. And thou wilt find this Gulf so deep, that thou shalt never be able to wade through it as long as Eternity lasts. As Christ saith, Agree with thine Adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him, lest he hale thee to the Judge, and the Judge deliver thee to the Officer, and thou be cast into Prison: I tell thee thou shalt in no wise come out thence (there is the Gulf) the Decree: thou shalt not depart thence till thou hast paid the uttermost Farthing, or very last Mite, Luk. 12. 58, 59. These Words therefore, there is a great Gulf fixed, I do understand to be the everlasting Decree of God: God hath decreed, that those who go to Heaven shall never go from thence again into a worse place; and also those that go to Hell, and would come out, they shall not come out from thence again. And Friend, this is such a Gulf, so fixed by him that cannot lie, that thou wilt find it so which way soever thou goest, whether it be to Heaven or Hell. Here therefore thou seest how secure God will make those who die in the Faith; God will keep them in Heaven; but those that die in their Sins, God will throw them to Hell, and keep them there; so that they that would go from Heaven to Hell, cannot, neither can they come from Hell that would go to Heaven: Mark, he doth not say, they would not: For O how fain would these who have lost their Souls for a Lust, for Twopence, for a Jugg of Ale, for a Strumpet, for this World, come out of that hot scalding fiery Furnace of God's Eternal Vengeance, if they might; but here is their Misery, they that would come from you to us, that is, from Hell to Heaven, cannot, they must not, they shall not; they cannot, God hath Decreed it, and is resolv'd the contrary; here therefore lies the Misery, not so much as they are in Hell, but there they must lie for ever and ever. Therefore if thy Heart would at any time tempt thee to Sin against God, cry out, No, for then I must go to Hell, and lie there for ever. If the Drunkards, Swearers, Liars, and Hypocrites did but take this Doctrine soundly down, it would make them tremble when they think of Sinning. But poor Souls, Now they will make a mock of Sin, Prov. 14. 9. and play with it as a Child doth play with a Rattle; but the time is coming, that these Rattles that now they play with, will make such a Noise in their Ears and Consciences, that they shall find, that if all the Devils in Hell were yelling at their Heels, the Noise would not be comparable to it, Numb. 32. 23. Friend, Thy Sins, as so many Blood-hounds, will first hunt thee out, and then take thee and bind thee, and hold thee down for ever, Prov. 5. 22. They will gripe thee and gnaw thee as if thou hadst a Nest of pisonous Serpents in thy Bowels, Job 20. 14. and this will not be for a time, but as I have said for ever, for ever, for ever.

Verse 27. Then he said, I pray thee therefore, Father, that thou wouldst send him to my Father's House.

THE Verses before I told you, were spoken partly to hold forth a desire that the Damned have to be freed of their endless Misery. Now this Verse still holds forth the Cries of those poor Souls very vehement, they would very fain have something granted to them, but it will not be; as will more clearly appear afterward.

Then he said, I pray thee therefore Father, &c.] As if he should say, Seeing I have brought my self into such a miserable Condition, that God will not regard me, that my exceeding loud and bitter Cries will not be heard for my self; seeing I must not be admitted to have so much as one Drop of cold Water, nor the least help for the poorest Saints.

And seeing, besides all this, here my Soul must lie to all Eternity broiling and frying; seeing I must whether I will or no, undergo the Hand of Eternal Vengeance, and the rebukes of devouring Fire; seeing my State is such, that I would not wish a Dog in my Condition, Send him to my Father's House. It is worthy to be taken notice of, (again) who it is he desired to be sent, namely, Lazarus. O Friend, see here now the stout Hearts and Stomachs of poor Creatures will be humbled, (as I said before) they will be so brought down, that those things that they disdained and made light of in this World, they would be glad of in the Life to come; He who by this Man was so slighted, as that he thought it a dishonour that he should eat with the Dogs of his Flock; what, shall I regard Lazarus, scrubbed, beggarly Lazarus; What shall I so far dishonour my fair, sumptuous, and gay House, with such a scabbed Creep-hedge as he? No, I scorn he should be entertained under my Roof. Thus in his Life-time, while he was in his Bravery; but now he is come into another World, now he is parted from his Pleasures, now he sees his fine House, his dainty Dishes, his rich Neighbours and Companions, and he are parted asunder; now he finds instead of Pleasures, Torments; instead of Joys, Heaviness; instead of Heaven, Hell; instead of the Pleasures of Sin, the Horror and Guilt of Sin; O now send Lazarus!

Lazarus it may be, might have done him some good, if he might have been entertained in time past, and might have persuaded him, at least not to have gone on so grievously wicked, but he slights him, will not regard him, he is resolved to dishonour him, tho' he lose his own Soul for so doing. Ay, but now send Lazarus, if not to me, to my Father's House, and let him tell them, from me, That if they run on in Sin, as I have done, they must and shall receive the same Wages that I have received.

Take notice of this, you that are despisers of the least of the Lazarus's of our Lord Jesus Christ; it may be now you are loth to receive these little Ones of his, because they are not Gentlemen, because they cannot with Pontius Pilate speak Hebrew, Greek and Latin. Nay, they must not, shall not speak to them, to admonish them, and all because of this.

Tho' now the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ may be preached to them freely, and for nothing; nay, they are now desired to hear and receive it. Though now they will not own, regard, and embrace these Christian Proffers of the glorious Truth of Jesus, because they come out of some of the basest earthen Vessels, 1 Cor. 1. 26. yet the time is coming, when they will both Sigh and Cry, Send him to my Father's House. I say, remember this, ye that despise the Day of small Things; the time is coming, when you would be glad, if you might enjoy from God, from Christ, or his Saints, one small drop of cold Water, tho' now you are unwilling to receive the glorious distilling drops of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus.

Again, See here the lamentable State they are in, that go to Hell from their Fathers, Mothers, Sisters, Brothers, &c. While they are in this World, Men delight to set their Children ill Examples: and also Children love to follow the wicked Steps of their ungodly Parents; but when they depart this Life, and drop down into Hell, and find themselves in irrecoverable Misery, then they cry, Send some body to my Father's House, to my Brother's House. Tell them my State is miserable, tell them I am undone for ever; and tell them also, that if they will be walking in these ungodly Steps wherein I left them, they will assuredly fall into this place of Torments.

I pray thee send him to my Father's House. Ah Friends and Neighbours, it is like you little think of this, that some of your Friends and Relations are crying out in Hell, Lord send some Body to my Father's House, to preach the Gospel to them, lest they also come into these Torments.

Here, Men while they live, can willingly walk together in the way of Sin, and when they are parted by Death, they that are Living, seldom or never consider of the sad Condition that they that are dead are descended into. But ye ungodly Fathers, how are your ungodly Children, roaring now in Hell? And your ungodly Parents that lived and died ungodly, now in the Pains of Hell also? And one Drunkard is singing on the Alehouse-bench, and another roaring under the Wrath of God, saying, O that I was with him, how would I rebuke him, and perswade him by all means, to leave off these evil Courses. O that they did but consider what I now suffer for Pride, Covetousness, Drunkenness, Lying, Swearing, Stealing, Whoring, and the like. O! did they but feel the thousandth part thereof, it would make them look about them, and not buy Sin at so dear a rate as I have done; even with the loss of my precious Soul.

Send him to my Father's House. Not to my Father's, but to my Father's House. It may be there's ungodly Children, there's ungodly Servants, wallowing in their Ungodliness; send him therefore to my Father's House. It is like, they are still the same that I left them; I left them wicked, and they are wicked still; I left them flighters of the Gospel, Saints, and ways of God, and they do it still; send him to my Father's House, it is like there is but a little between them and the place where I am; send him to Day, before to Morrow, lest they come into the same place of Torment. I pray thee thou wouldst send him.] I beg it on my bended Knee, with Crying and with Tears, in the Agony of my Soul. It may be, they will not consider, if thou do not send him: I left them sottish enough, hardened as well as I; they have the same Devil to tempt them, the same Lusts and World to overcome them, I pray thee therefore, that thou wouldst send him to my Father's House; make no delay, lest they lose their Souls, lest they come hither; if they do, they are like never to return again. O little do they think, how easily they may lose their Souls, they are apt to think their Condition to be as good as the best, as I once through Ignorance did; but send him, send him without delay, lest they come into this place of Torment. O that thou wouldst give him Commission, do thou send him thy self; the time was when I, together with them, slighted those that were sent of God; tho' we could not deny but that he spake the Word of God, and was sent of him, as our Conscience told us; yet we preferred the Calls of Men before the Calls of God: For tho' they had the one, yet because they had not the other in that Antichristian way which we thought meet, we could not, would not, either hear him our selves, nor yet give consent that others should. But now a Call from God is worth all. Do (Thou) therefore send him to my Father's House.

The time was, when we did not like it, except it might be preached in the Synagogue; we thought it a low thing to Preach and Pray together in Houses: We were too High-spirited, too Superstitious; the Gospel would not down with us, unless we had it in such a place, by such a Man; no, nor then neither effectually: But now, Oh that I was to live in the World again; and might have that Privilege to have some some Acquaintance with blessed Lazarus, some Familiarity with that holy Man; what Attendance would I give unto his wholesome Words? How would I affect his Doctrine, and close in with it? How would I square my Life thereby? Now (therefore) as it is better to hear the Gospel under a Hedge, than to sit roaring in a Tavern; it is better to welcome God's begging Lazarus's, than the wicked Companions of this World. It is better to receive a Saint in the Name of a Saint, a Disciple, in the Name of a Disciple, Luke 10. 16. than to do as I have done. O! It is better to receive a Child of God, that can by Experience deliver the things of God, his free Love, his tender Grace, his rich Forbearance, and also the Misery of Man if without it, than to be daubed up with untempered Mortar, Ezek. 13. O! I may curse the Day that ever I gave way to the Flatteries, and Fawning of a Company of carnal Men, but this my Repentance is too late; I should have look'd about me sooner, if I would have been saved from this woful place. Therefore send him, not only to the Town I liv'd in, and unto some of my Acquaintance, but to my Father's House.

In my Life-time, I did not care to hear that Word that cut me most, and shewed me mine Estate aright.

I was vexed to hear my Sins mentioned, and laid to my charge; I loved him best that deceived me most, that said, Peace, Peace when there were no such Thing, Jer. 5. 30, 31. But now, O that I had been soundly told of it! O that it had pierced both mine Ears and Heart, and had stuck so fast, that nothing could have cured me, saving the Blood of Christ! It is better to be dealt plainly with, than that we should be deceived; they had better see their lost Condition in the World, than stay while they be Damned, as I have done: Therefore send Lazarus, send him to my Father's House. Let him go and say, I saw your Son, your Brother, in Hell weeping and wailing, and gnashing his Teeth: Let him bear them down in it, and tell them plainly, it is so, and that they shall see their everlasting Misery, if they have not a special Care. Send him to my Father's House.

Verse 28. For I have five Brethren, that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this Place of Torment.

THESE words are (if I may so say) a Reason given by those in Hell, why they are restless and do cry so loud, it is that their Companions might be delivered from those intolerable Torments, which they must and shall undergo, if they fall short of everlasting Life by Jesus Christ. Send him to my Father's House; for I have five Brethren, &c. Tho' while they liv'd among them in the World, they were not so sensible of their ruin, yet now they are passed out of the World, and do partake of that which before they were warned of; they can, I say, then cry out, now I find that to be true indeed, which was once and again told, and declared to me, that it would certainly come to pass.

For I have five Brethren] Here you may see that there may be, and are, whole households in a damnable State and Condition, as our Lord Jesus doth by this signify. Send him to my Father's House, for they are all in one State, I left all my Brethren in a pitiful Case. People while they live here, cannot endure to hear that they should be all in a miserable Condition; but when they are under the Wrath of God, they see it, they know it, and are very sure of it; for they themselves, when they were in the World, lived as they do, but they fell short of Heaven, and therefore if they go on, so shall they. Oh therefore send quickly to my Father's House, for all the House is in an undone condition, and must be damned if they continue so.

The Thing observable is this, namely, That those that are in Hell, do not desire that their Companions should come thither; nay, rather saith he, Send him to my Father's House, and let him testify to them that are therein, lest they also come, &c.

Quest. But some may say; What should be the Reason, that the Damned should desire not to have their Companions come into the same Condition that they are fallen into, but rather that they might be kept from it, and escape that dreadful State?

Ans. I do believe there is scarce so much Love in any of the damned in Hell, as really to desire the Salvation of any. But in that there is any desire in them that are Damned, that their Friends and Relations should not come into that place of Torment: It appears to me, to be rather for their own ease, than for their Neighbours good; for let me tell you, this I do believe, that it will aggravate the Grief and Horror of them, to see their ungodly Neighbours in the like Destruction with them: For where the ungodly do live and die, and descend into the Pit together, the one is rather a Vexation to the other, than any Thing else. And it must needs be so, because there are no ungodly People that do live ungodly together, but they do learn ill Examples one of another, as thus; If there live one in the Town that is very expert and cunning for the World, why now the rest that are of the same mind with him, they will labour to imitate and follow his Steps; this is commonly seen.

Again, If there be one given to Drunkenness, others of the Town through his means, run the more into that Sin with him, and do accustom themselves the more unto it, because of his enticing them, and

and also by setting such an ill Example before them. And so if there be any addicted to Pride, and must needs be in all the newest Fashions, how do their Example provoke others to love and follow the same Vanity! Spending that upon their Lusts, which should relieve their own and others Wants. Also if there be any giving to Jestings, Scoffing, Lying, Whoring, Backbiting, Junketing, Wantonness, or any other Sin; they that are most expert in these things, do oft-times intangle others, that peradventure would not have been so vile as now they are, had they not had such an Example, and hence they are called Corrupters, Isa. i. 4.

Now these will by their doings, exceedingly aggravate the Condemnation of one another. He that did set his Neighbour an ill Example, and thereby caused him to walk in Sin: He will be found one cause of his Friend's Destruction, inasmuch, that he will have to answer for his own Sin, and for a great part of his Neighbours too, which will still add to his Destruction; as the Scripture in Ezekiel sheweth, where speaking of the Watchman that should give the People warning; if he do not, though the Man did die in his Sins, yet his Blood should be required at the Watchman's Hand, Ezek. 33.

So here let me tell thee that if thou shouldst be such an one, as by thy Conversation and Practices shalt be a Trap and a Stumbling-block to cause thy Neighbour to fall into eternal Ruin; though he be damned for his own Sin; yet God may, nay he will charge thee, as being guilty of his Blood, in that thou didst not content thyself to keep from Heaven thyself, but didst also by thy filthy Conversation keep away others, and cause them to fall with thee. O therefore, will not this aggravate thy Torment? Yea, if thou shouldst die and go to Hell before thy Neighbours or Companions, besides the guilt of thine own Sins, thou wouldst be so laden with the Fear of the Damnation of others to be laid to thy Charge, that thou wouldst cry out; O send one from the Dead to this Companion, and that Companion with whom I had Society in my Life-time, for I see my cursed Carriage will be one cause of his Condemnation, if he fall short of Glory.

I left him living in foul and heinous Offences: But I was one of the first instruments to bring him to them. Oh! I shall be guilty both of my own, and his Damnation too! O that he might be kept out hence, lest my Torment be aggravated by his coming hither.

For where ungodly People do dwell together, they being a Snare and Stumbling-block one to another by their Practice, they must be a Torment one to another, and an Aggravation of each others Damnation. O cursed be thy Face, saith one, that ever I set mine Eyes on thee: It was long of thee: I may thank thee: It was thee that did intice me, and ensnare me: It was your filthy Conversation that was a Stumbling-block to me: It was your Covetousness, it was your Pride, your haunting the Ale-house, your Gaming and Whoring: It was long of you that I fell short of Life; if you had set me a good Example, as you set me an ill one, it may be I might have done better than now I do: But I learned of you, I followed your Steps: I took Council of you. O, that I had never seen your Face! O, that thou hadst never been born to do my Soul this Wrong, as you have done: O, saith the other: And I may as much blame you, for do you not remember how at such a time, and at such a time, you drew me out; and drew me away, and asked me if I would go with you, when I was going about other Business, about my Calling; but you called me away, you sent for me, you are as much in the fault as I; though I were Covetous, you were Proud; and if you learned Covetousness of me, I learned Pride and Drunkenness of you; Though I learned you to Cheat, you learned me to Whore, to Lie, to Scoff at Goodness. Though I base Wretch did stumble you in some Things, you did as much stumble me in others. I can blame you as you blame me; and if I have to answer for some of your most filthy Actions, you have to answer for some of mine. I would you had not come hither, the very looks of you do wound my Soul, by bringing my Sins afresh into my Mind, the time when, the manner how, the place where, the Persons with whom: It was with you, you! Grief to my Soul! Since I could not shun thy Company there, O that I had been without thy Company here?

I say therefore for these that have sinned together, to go to Hell together, it will very much perplex and torment them both; therefore I judge this one Reason, why they that are in Hell do desire, that their Friends, or Companions do not come thither into the same place of Torment that they are in. And therefore where Christ saith, that the damned Souls cry out, Send to our Companions, that they may be warned and commanded to look to themselves. O, send to my five Brethren! It is because they would not have their own Torments heightened by their Company; and a Sense, yea, a continual Sense of their Sins, which they caused them to commit, when they were in the World with them. For I do believe that the very Looks of those that have been beguiled of their Fellows, I say, their very Looks will be a Torment to them; for thereby will the Remembrance of their own Sins be kept (if possible) the fresher on their Consciences, which they committed with them; and also they will wonderfully have the guilt of the others Sins upon them, in that they were partly the cause of his committing them, being Instru-

Instruments in the Hands of the Devil, to draw them in too. And therefore, lest this come to pass, I pray thee send him to my Father's House. For if they might not come hither, peradventure my Torment might have some Mitigation; that is, If they might be saved, then their Sins will be pardoned, and not so heavily charged on my Soul. But if they do fall into the same Place where I am, the Sins that I have caused them to commit, will lye so heavy, not only on their Soul, but also on mine, that they sink me into eternal Misery, deeper and deeper. O therefore send him to my Father's House, to my five Brethren, and let him testify to them, lest they come into this place of Torment.

These Words being thus understood: What a Condition doth it shew them to be in then, that now much delight in being the very Ring-leaders of their Companions into Sins of all sorts whatsoever?

While Men live here, if they can be counted the cunningest in Cheating, the boldest for Lying, the archest for Whoring, subtillest for Coveting, and getting the World: If they can but cunningly defraud, undermine, cross, and anger their Neighbours; yea, and hinder them from the Means of Grace, the Gospel of Christ; they glory in it, take a pride in't, and think themselves pretty well at ease, and their Minds are somewhat quiet, being beguiled with Sin.

But Friend, when thou hast lost this Life, and dost begin to lift up thine Eyes in Hell, and seest what thy Sins have brought thee to; and not only so, but that thou by thy filthy Sins didst cause others (Devil-like) to fall into the same Condemnation with thee: And that one of the Reasons of their Damnation was this, that thou didst lead them to the Commission of those wicked Practices of this World, and the Lusts thereof. Then, Oh that some Body would stop them from coming, lest they also come into this place of Torment, and be damned as I am! How will it Torment me? Balaam could not be contented to be damned himself, but also he must by his Wickedness cause others to stumble and fall. The Scribes and Pharisees could not be content to keep out of Heaven themselves, but they must labour to keep out others too. Therefore theirs is the greater Damnation.

The deceived cannot be content to be deceived himself, but he must labour to deceive others also. The Drunkard cannot be content to go to Hell for his Sins, but he must labour to cause others to fall into the same Furnace with him. But look to your selves, for here will be Damnation upon Damnation, damned for thy own Sins, and damned for thy being partakers with others in their Sins; and damned for being guilty of the Damnation of others. O how will the Drunkards cry, for leading their Neighbours into Drunkenness? How will the covetous Person howl, for setting his Neighbour, his Friend, his Brother, his Children and Relations, so wicked an Example? by which he hath not only wronged his own Soul, but also the Souls of others. The Liar, by lying, learned others to lie; the Swearer learned others to swear; the Whoremonger learned others to whore.

Now all these with others of the like sort, will be guilty, not only of their own Damnation, but of others. I tell you, that some Men have so much been the Authors of the Damnation of others, that I am ready to think, that the Damnation of them will trouble them, as much as their own Damnation. Some Men (it is to be feared) at the Day of Judgment, will be found to be the Authors of destroying whole Nations. How many Souls do you think, Balaam with his deceit, will have to answer for? How many Mabomet? How many the Pharisees, that hired the Soldiers to say the Disciples stole away Jesus? Mat. 28. 11 to 16. And by that means, stumbled their Brethren to this Day; and was one means of binding them from believing the Things of God and Jesus Christ, and so the cause of the Damnation of their Brethren to this very Day.

How many poor Souls hath Bonner to answer for, think you? And several filthy blind Priests? How many Souls have they been the means of destroying by their Ignorance and corrupt Doctrine? Preaching, that was no better for their Souls, than Ratsbane to the Body, for filthy Lucre's sake. They shall see, that they, many of them, it is to be feared, will have whole Towns to answer for; whole Cities to answer for. Ah Friend, I tell thee, thou that hast taken in hand to Preach to the People, it may be thou hast taken in hand thou canst not tell what; Will it not grieve thee, to see thy whole Parish come bellowing after thee to Hell, crying out, This we may thank thee for, this is long of thee, thou didst not teach us the Truth; Thou didst lead us away with Fables, thou wast afraid to tell us of our Sins, lest we should not put Meat fast enough into thy Mouth. O cursed Wretch, that ever thou shouldst beguile us thus, deceive us thus, flatter us thus! We would have gone out to hear the Word abroad; but that thou didst reprove us; and also tell us, That that which we see now is the way of God, was Heresy, and a deceivable Doctrine; and wast not contented (blind Guide as thou wert) to fall into the Ditch thy self, but hast also led us thither with thee.

I say, look to thy self, lest thou cry out when it is too late, Send Lazarus to my People, my Friends, my Children, my Congregation to whom I Preached, and beguiled, through my Folly. Send him to the Town in which I did Preach last, lest I be the cause of their Damnation. Send him to my Friends from whence I came, lest I be made to answer for their Souls and mine own to, Ezek. 33. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6.

O send him therefore, and let him tell them, and testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of Torment. Consider that ye thus live in the World, while ye are in the Land of the Living, lest you fall into this Condition. Set case thou shouldest by thy carriage destroy but a Soul, but one poor Soul, by one of thy Carriages or Actions, by thy sinful Works; consider it now, I say, lest thou be forced to cry, I pray thee therefore that thou wouldst send him to my Father's House, for I have five Brethren, that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this Place of Torment.

If so, then I shall not only say to the blind Guides, look you to your selves and shut not out others: No, but this doth reach unto all those that do not only keep Souls from Heaven by Preaching, and the like, but speaks forth the doom of those that shall any ways be instrumental to hinder others from closing in with Jesus Christ. O what red Lines will those be against all these rich ungodly Landlords, that so kept under their poor Tenants, that they dare not go out to hear the Word, for fear their Rent should be raised, or they turned out of their Houses? What sayest thou Landlord, will it not cut thy Soul, when thou shalt see that thou couldest not be content to miss of Heaven thy self, but thou must labour to hinder others also? Will it not give thee an Eternal Wound in thy Heart, both at Death and Judgment, to be accused of the ruin of thy Neighbour's Soul, thy Servant's Soul, thy Wife's Soul, together with the ruin of thy own? Think on this you drunken, proud, rich and scornful Landlords, think on this mad-brained blasphemous Husbands, that are against the godly and chaste Conversation of your Wives; also you that hold your Servants so hard to it, that you will not spare them time to hear the Word, unless it be where, and when your Lusts will let you. If you love your own Souls, your Tenants Souls, your Wives Souls, your Servants Souls, your Childrens Souls: If you would not cry, if you would not howl, if you would not bear the Burden of the ruin of others for ever; then I beseech you consider this doleful Story, and labour to avoid the Soul-killing Torment that this poor Wretch groaneth under, when he saith, I pray thee therefore that thou wouldst send him to my Father's House.

For I have five Brethren, that he may testify, Mark, that he may testify unto them, lest they come into this Place of Torment.

These Words have still something more in them than I have yet observed from them; there are one or two things more that I shall briefly touch upon, and therefore, Mark, he saith, That he may testify unto them, &c. Mark I pray you, and take notice of the Word Testify. He doth not say, and let him go unto them, or speak with, or tell them such and such Things. No, but let him Testify, or affirm it constantly, in case any should oppose it. Let him Testify unto them. It is the same Word the Scripture uses to set forth the vehemency of Christ, his telling of his Disciples of him that should betray him. And he Testified, saying, One of you shall betray me. And he Testified, that is, he spake it so as to dash, or overcome any that should have said it shall not be. It is a Word that signifies, that in case any should oppose the thing spoken of, yet that the party speaking should still continue constant in his saying. And he commanded them to Preach, and to testify, that it is he that was ordained of God to be the Judge of Quick and Dead. To testify, Mark, that is, to be constant, irresistible, undaunted, in case it should be opposed and objected against. So here, let him testify to them, lest they come into this Place of Torment.

From whence observe, That it is not an easy matter to persuade them who are in their Sins alive in this World, that they must, and shall be damned if they turn not, and be converted to God, Let him testify to them, let him speak confidently, though they frown upon him, or dislike his way of speaking. And how is this Truth verified and cleared by the Carriages of almost all Men now in the World toward them that do preach the Gospel; and shew their own miserable State plainly to them, if they close not with it? If a Man do but indeed labour to convince Sinners of their Sins, and lost condition by Nature, though they must be damned if they live and die in that Condition, O how angry are they at it! Look how he judges, say they, hark how he condemns us; he tells us we must be damn'd if we live and die in this State: We are offended at him, we cannot abide to hear him, or any such as he; we will believe none of them all, but go on in the way we are a going; Forbear, why shouldst thou be smitten, said the ungodly King to the Prophet, when he told him of his Sins, 2 Chron. 25. 15, 16.

I say, tell the Drunkard he must be damned if he leaves not his Drunkenness, the Swearer, Lyar, Cheater, Thief, Covetous, Railers, or any ungodly Persons, they must and shall lie in Hell for it, if they die in this Condition; they will not believe you, not credit you.

Again, Tell others that there are many in Hell that have lived and died in their Conditions, and so are they like to be, if they convert not to Jesus Christ, and be found found in him, or that there are others that are more civil and sober Men, who (although we know that their civility will not save them) if we do but tell them plainly of the Emptiness, and Unprofitableness of that, as to the saving of their Souls, and that God will not accept them, nor love them, notwithstanding these things, and that if they intend to be saved, they must be better provided than with such Righteousness as this; they will either fling away, and come to hear no more, or else if they do come, they will bring such prejudice with them in their Hearts, That the Word Preached shall not profit them, it being mixed not with Faith, but with Prejudice in them that hear it, Heb. 4. 1, 2. Nay, they will some of them be so full of Anger, that they will break out and call, even those that speak the Truth, Hereticks; yea, and kill them, Luk. 4. 25, 26, 27, 28, 29. And why so? Because they tell them, That if they live in their Sins, that will damn them; yet if they turn and live a righteous Life, according to the holy, and just, and good Law of God, that will not save them. Yea, because we tell them plainly, that unless they leave their Sins and Unrighteousness too, and close in with a naked Jesus Christ, his Blood and Merits, and what he hath done, and is now doing for Sinners, they cannot be saved; and unless they do eat the Flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his Blood, they have no Life abiding in them; they gravel presently, and are offended at it (as the Jews were with Christ for speaking the same thing to them, Joh. 6. 53, 60.) and fling away themselves, their Souls and all; by quarrelling against the Doctrine of the Son of God, as indeed they do, though they will not believe they do; and therefore he that is a Preacher of the Word, had need, not only tell them, but testify to them; again and again, that their Sins, if they continue in them, will Damn them, and Damn them again. And tell them again, their living honestly according to the Law, their paying every one their own, their living quietly with their Neighbours, their giving to the Poor, their Notion of the Gospel, and saying, they do believe in Christ, will do them no good at the general Day of Judgment. Ha Friends! How many of you are there at this very Day, that have been told once and again of your lost undone Condition, because you want the right, real, and saving Work of God upon your Souls? I say, hath not this been told you, yea, testified unto you from time to time, that your State is miserable, that yet you are never the better, but do still stand where you did; some in an open ungodly Life, and some drown'd in a self-conceited holiness of Christianity? Therefore, for God's sake, if you love your Souls, consider, and beg of God for Jesus Christ's sake, that he would work such a Work of Grace in your Hearts, and give you such a Faith in his Son Jesus Christ, that you may not only have rest here, as you think, not only think your State safe while you live here, as you may be safe indeed, not only here, but also when you are gone, lest you do cry in the anguish and perplexity of your Souls; Send one to my Companions that have been beguiled by Satan, as I have been; and so by going on, come into this Place of Torment, as I have done.

Again, one thing more is to be observed from these Words, Let him testify to them, lest they come into this Place of Torment.

Mark, lest they come in, as if he had said, or else they will come into this Place of Torment, as sure as I am here. From whence observe, That though some Souls do for Sin fall into the bottomless Pit of Hell before their Fellows, because they depart this World before them; yet the other abiding in the same course, are as sure to go to the same place as if they were there already. How so? Because they are all condemned together, they have all fallen under the same Law, and have all offended the same Justice, and must for certain, if they die in that Condition, drink as deep, if not deeper, of the same Destruction. Mark I pray you what the Scripture say, He that believeth not, is condemned already, John 3. 18.

He is condemned as well as they, having broken the same Law with them; if so, then what hinders, but they will partake of the same Destruction with them? Only the one hath not the Law yet so executed upon them, because they are here; the other have had the Law executed upon them, they are gone to drink that which they have been brewing, and thou art brewing that in this Life, which thou must certainly drink. The same Law, I say, is in force against you both, only he is executed, and thou art not. Just as if there were a Company of Prisoners at the Bar, and all condemned to die; what because they are not all executed in one day, therefore shall they not be executed at all? Yes, the same Law that executed its severity upon the Parties now deceased, will for certain be executed upon them that are alive in its appointed time. Even so it is here, we are all condemned by Nature, if we close not in with the Grace of God by Jesus Christ, we must and shall be destroyed with the same Destruction; and therefore send him, (saith he) lest, Mark, lest they come into this Place of Torment.

Again, Send him to my Father's House, and let him testify to them, lest they come into this place of Torment. As if he had said, It may be he may prevail with them, it may be he may win upon them, and so they may be kept from hence, from coming into this grievous place of Torment. Observe again, That there is a possibility of obtaining obtaining Mercy, if now, I say, now in this Day of Grace we turn from our Sins to Jesus Christ; yea, it is more than possible. And therefore for thy encouragement, do thou know for certain, that if thou shalt in this thy Day accept of Mercy upon God's own Terms, and close with him effectually, God hath promised, yea, made many Promises, that thy Soul shall be conducted safe to Glory, and shall for certain escape all the Evils that I have told thee of; Ay, and many more than I can imagine. Do but search the Scriptures, and see how full of Consolation they are to a poor Soul that is minded to close in with Jesus Christ. He that cometh to me, (saith Christ) I will in no wise cast out. Tho' he be an old Sinner, I will in no wise cast him out; mark, in no wise, tho' he be a great Sinner, I will in no wise cast him out, if he come unto me. Tho' he have slighted me never so many times, and not regarded the Welfare of his own Soul, yet let him now come to me, and notwithstanding this, I will in no wise cast him out, nor throw away his Soul, John 6. 37. Again, saith the Apostle, Now (mark now,) is the accepted time, now is the Day of their Salvation. Now here is Mercy good store, now God's Heart is open to Sinners; now he will make you welcome; now he will receive any Body if they do but come to Christ. He that comes to me (saith Christ) I will in no wise cast out. And why? Because now is the accepted Time, now is the Day of Salvation, 1 Cor. 6. 2, 3. As if the Apostle had said, If you will have Mercy, have it now, receive it now, close in with it now.

God hath a certain Day to hold out his Grace to Sinners: Now is the Time, now is the Day. 'Tis true, there is a Day of Damnation, but this is a Day of Salvation. There is a Day coming, wherein Sinners must cry to the Mountains to fall on them, to the Hills to cover them from the Wrath of God; but now, now is the Day in which he doth hold out his Grace. There is a Day coming, in which you will not be admitted to have the Privilege of one drop of Water to cool your Tongue, if now, I say, if now you slight his Grace and Goodness which he holds out to you. Ah Friends, consider there is now hopes of Mercy, but then there will not; now Christ holds forth Mercy unto you, but then he will not, Mat. 7. 23. Now there are his Servants that do beseech you to accept of his Grace, but if thou lose the Opportunity that is put into thine Hand, thou thyself mayest beseech hereafter, and no Mercy be given thee. And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have Mercy me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his Finger in Water and cool my Tongue. And there was none given. Therefore let it never be said of thee, as it will be said of some, Why is there a Price put into the Hand of a Fool, seeing he hath no heart to it: Seeing he hath no heart to make a good use of it? (Prov. 17. 16.) consider therefore with thy self, and say, It is better going to Heaven than Hell: It is better to be saved than damned; It is better to be with Saints, than with damned Souls; and to go to God is better than to go to the Devil.

Therefore seek the Lord while he may be found, and call upon him while he is near; Isa. 55. 6. Left in thy trouble he leave thee to thy self, and say unto thee plainly, Where I am, thither ye cannot come, John 8. 21.

O if they that are in Hell might but now again have one such Invitation as this, how would they leap for Joy? I have thought sometimes should God send but one of his Ministers to the damned in Hell, and give him Commission to Preach the free Love of God in Christ extended to them, and held out to them, if now while it is proffered to them they will accept of his Kindness; O how welcome would they make this News, and close in with it on any Terms!

Certainly they would say, we will accept of Grace on any terms in the World, and thank you too, tho' it cost Life and Limbs to boot; we will spare no cost nor charge, if Mercy may be had. But poor Souls, while they live here they will not part from Sin, with Hell-bred devilish Sin: No, they will rather lose their Souls, than lose their filthy Sins.

But Friend, thou wilt change thy note before it be long and cry, O simple Wretch that I am that I should damn my Soul by Sin!

'Tis true, I have had the Gospel preached to me, and have been invited in: I have been preached to, and have been warned of this; but how have I hated Instruction, and mine Heart despised Reproof? I have not obeyed the Voice of my Teachers, nor inclined mine Ear to them that instructed me, Prov. 5. 10, 11. O therefore, I say, poor Soul! Is there hope? Then lay thine Hand upon thy Mouth, and kiss the Dust, and close in with the Lord Jesus Christ, and make much of his glorious Mercy; and invite also thy Companions to close in with the same Lord Jesus Christ, lest one of you do go to Hell beforehand, and expect with grief of Heart your Companions to come after; and in the mean Time, with anguish of Heart, do sigh and say,

O send him to my Companions, and let him testify to them, lest they also come into this place of Torment.

Now then from what hath been said, there might many Things be spoken by way of Use and Application; But I shall be very brief, and but touch some Things, and so wind up.

And first, I shall begin with the sad Condition

dition of those that die out of Christ, and speak something to that.

Secondly, To the latter end of the Parable, which more evidently concerns the Scripture, and speak some what to that.

1. Therefore you see, that the first part of the Parable, contains a sad Declaration of the State of one living and dying out of Christ; how that they lose Heaven for Hell, God for the Devil, Light for Darkness, Joy for Sorrow.

2. How that they have not so much as the least Comfort from God, who in the Time they live here below, neglect coming to him for Mercy; not so much as one drop of cold Water.

3. That such Souls will repent of their Folly, when Repentance will do them no good, or when they shall be past recovery.

4. That all the Comfort such Souls are like to have, they have it in this World.

5. That all their groanings and sighs, will not move God to mitigate in the least, his heavy Hand of Vengeance that is upon them, for the Transgressions they have committed against him.

6. That their sad State is irrecoverable, or they must never, (mark) never come out of that Condition.

7. Their desires will not be heard for their ungodly Neighbours.

From these things then, I pray you consider the State of those that die out of Christ Jesus; yea, I say, consider their miserable State; and think thus with thy self: Well, if I neglect coming to Christ, I must go to the Devil, and he will not neglect to fetch me away into those intolerable Torments.

Think thus with thy self; What, shall I lose a long Heaven for short Pleasure? shall I buy the Pleasures of this World at so dear a Rate, as to lose my Soul for the obtaining of that? shall I content my self with a Heaven, that will last no longer than my Life-time? What advantage will these be to me, when the Lord shall separate Soul and Body asunder, and send one to the Grave, the other to Hell, and at the Judgment-day, the final Sentence of Eternal Ruin must be past upon me?

1. Consider, That the Profits, Pleasures and Vanities of this World will not last for ever, but the Time is coming, yea, just at the Doors, when they will give thee the slip, and leave thee in the Suds, and in the Brambles of all that thou hast done.

2. And therefore to prevent this thy dismal State, think thus with thy self. 'Tis true, I do love my Sins, my Lusts and Pleasures; but what good will they do me at the day of Death and of Judgment? Will my Sins do me good then? Will they be able to help me when I come to fetch my last Breath? What good will my Profits do me? And what good will my Vanities do, when Death says he will have no nay? What good will all my Companions, Fellow-jesters, Jeerers, Liars, Drunkards, and all my Wantons do me? Will they help to ease the pains of Hell? Will these help to turn the Hand of God from inflicting his fierce Anger upon me? Nay, will they not rather cause God to shew me no Mercy, to give me no Comfort; but rather to thrust me down in the hottest Place of Hell, where I may swim in Fire and Brimstone.

3. Consider thus with thy self; would I be glad to have all, every one of my Sins to come in against me, to inflame the Justice of God against me? Would I be glad to be bound up in them, as the three Children were bound in their Clothes, and to be as really thrown into the Fiery Furnace of the Wrath of Almighty God, as they were into Nebuchadnezzar's Fiery Furnace?

4. Consider thus; would I be glad to have all, and every one of the Ten Commandments, to discharge themselves against my Soul? The first saying damn him, for he hath broken me. The second, saying, damn him, for he hath broken me, &c.

Consider how terrible this will be, yea more terrible, than if thou shouldest have ten of the biggest Pieces of Ordinance in England to be discharged against thy Body, thunder, thunder, one after another! Nay: this would not be comparable to the reports that the Law (for the Breach thereof) will give against thy Soul? For those can but kill the Body; but these will kill both Body and Soul; and that not for an Hour, a Day, a Month or a Year, but they will condemn thee for ever.

Mark, it is for ever, for ever. It is into everlasting Damnation, eternal Destruction, eternal Wrath and Displeasure from God, eternal gnawings of Conscience, eternal Continuance with Devils.

O consider, it may be the Thought of seeing the Devil, doth now make thine Hair to stand right upon thy Head. O but this, to be damned, to be among all the Devils, and that not only for a Time, as I said before, but for ever, to all Eternity!

This is wonderfully miserable, ever miserable; that no Tongue of Man, no nor of Angels, is able to express it.

5. Consider much with thy self, not only my sins against the Law will be laid to my charge, but also the Sins I have committed in slighting the Gospel, the glorious Gospel: These also must come with a Voice against me. As thus, Nay, he is worthy to be damned, for he rejected the Gospel, he slighted the free Grace of God tendered in the Gospel; How many times wast thou (damned Wretch) invited, intreated, beseeched to come to Christ, to accept of Mercy, that thou mightest have Heaven, thy Sins pardoned, thy Soul saved, thy Body and Soul glorified, and all this for nothing but the acceptance, and through Faith forsaking those Imps of Satan, which by their Embracements have drawn thee down toward the Gulf of God's Eternal Displeasure?

How often didst thou read the Promises, yea the free Promises of the common Salvation? How oft didst thou read the sweet Counsels and Admonitions of the Gospel, to accept of the Grace of God? But thou wouldst not, thou regardest it not, thou didst slight all.

2. As I would have thee to consider the sad and woful State of those that die out of Christ, and are past all recovery, so would I have thee consider the many Mercies and Privileges thou enjoyest above some (peradventure) of thy Companions that are departed to their proper place.

As first, Consider, thou hast still the thread of thy Life lengthned, which for thy Sins might seven Years ago, or more, have been cut asunder, and thou have dropped down amongst the Flames.

2. Consider, the Terms of Reconciliation by Faith in Christ, are still proffered unto thee, and thou invited, yea intreated to accept of them.

3. Consider, the Terms of Reconciliation are but (bear with me, tho' I say but) only to believe in Jesus Christ, with Faith that purifies the Heart, and enables thy Soul to feed on him effectually, and be saved from this sad State.

4. Consider, the time of thy Departure is at hand, and the time is uncertain, and also that for ought thou knowest, the Day of Grace may be past to thee before thou diest, not lasting so long as the uncertain Life in this World. And if so, then know for certain, that thou art as sure to be damned, as if thou wast in Hell already; if thou convert not in the mean while.

5. Consider, it may be some of thy Friends are given all diligence to make their Calling and Election sure, being resolved for Heaven, and thou thy self endeavourst as fast to make sure of Hell, as if resolved to have it; and together with this, consider how it will grieve thee, that while thou wast making sure of Hell, thy Friends were making sure of Heaven; but more of this by and by.

6. Consider, what a sad Reflection this will have on thy Soul, to see thy Friends in Heaven, and thy self in Hell; thy Father in Heaven, and thou in Hell; thy Mother in Heaven and thou in Hell; thy Brother, thy Sister, thy Children in Heaven, and thou in Hell. As Christ said to the Jews of their Relations according to the Flesh, so may I say to thee concerning thy Friends, There shall be weeping and wailing and gnashing of Teeth, when you shall see your Fathers and Mothers, Brethren and Sisters, Husbands and Wives, Children and Kinfolk, with your Friends and Neighbours in the Kingdom of Heaven, and thou thy self thrust out, Luke 13. 27, 28, 29.

But again, because I would not only tell thee of the damnable State of those that die out of Christ, but also perswade thee to take hold of Life, and go to Heaven, take notice of these following Things.

1. Consider, that whatever thou canst do, as to thy Acceptance with God, is not worth the dirt of thy Shoes, but is all as menstruous Rags, Isa. 64. 6.

2. Consider, that all the Conditions of the new Covenant (as to Salvation) are and have been compleatly fulfilled by the Lord Jesus Christ, and that for Sinners.

3. Consider, That the Lord calls to thee, for to receive whatsoever Christ hath done, and that on free-cost, Rev. 22. 17.

4. Consider, That thou canst not honour God more, than to close in with his Profers of Grace, Mercy, and Pardon of Sin, Rom. 4.

Again, That which will add to all the rest, Thou shalt have the very Mercy of God, the Blood of Christ, the Preachers of the Word, together with every Sermon; all the Promises, Invitations, Exhortations, and all the Counsels and Threatnings of the Blessed Word of God; Thou shalt have all thy Thoughts, Words, and Actions, together with all thy Food, thy Raiment, thy Sleep, thy Goods, and also all Hours, Days, Weeks, Months and Years, together with whatsoever else God hath given thee; I say thy abuse of all these shall come up in Judgment against thy Soul. For God will reckon with thee for every Thing, whether it be good or bad, Eccl. 12. 14.

5. Nay further, it is so unreasonable a thing for a Sinner to refuse the Gospel, that the very Devils themselves will come in against thee, as well as Sodom, that damned Crew: May not they, I say, come in against thee, and say, O thou simple Man! O vile Wretch! That had not so much care of thy Soul, thy precious Soul, as the Beast hath of its Young, or the Dog of the very Bone that lyeth before him. Was thy Soul worth so much, and didst thou so little regard it? Were the Thunder-claps of the Law so terrible, and didst thou so slight them? Besides, was the Gospel so freely, so frequently, so fully tendred to thee, and yet hast thou rejected all these things?

Hast thou valued Sin at a higher rate than thy Soul? Than God, Christ, Angels, Saints, and Communion with them in Eternal Blessedness and Glory? Wast thou not told of Hell-fire, those intolerable Flames? Didst thou never hear of those intolerable Roarings of the Damned Ones that are therein? Didst thou never hear or read that doleful Saying in the 16th of Luke, how the sinful Man cries out among the Flames, One drop of Water to cool my Tongue? Thus

I say,

I say, may the very Devils, being ready to go with thee into the Burning Furnace of Fire and Brimstone, tho' not for Sins of so high a Nature as thine, trembling say, O that Christ had died for Devils, as he died for Man! And, O that the Gospel had been preached to us, as it hath been to thee! How would we have laboured to have closed in with it? But woe be to us, for we might never have it proffered; no, not in the least, tho' we would have been glad of it. But you, you have it proffered, preached and proclaimed unto you, Prov. 8. 4. Besides, you have been intreated, and beseeched to accept of it, but you would not. O simple Fools! That might have escaped Wrath, Vengeance, Hell-fire, and that to all Eternity, and had no Heart at all to do it.

6. May not the Messengers of Jesus Christ also come in with a shrill and terrible Note against thy Soul, when thou standest at the Bar of God's Justice, saying, Nay, Thou ungodly One, how often hast thou been forewarned of this Day? Did we not sound an Alarm in thine Ears, by the Trumpet of God's Word Day after Day? How often didst thou hear us tell thee of these things! Did we not tell thee, Sin would damn thy Soul? Did we not tell thee, that without Conversion, there was no Salvation? Did we not tell thee, that they who loved their Sins, should be damned at this dark and gloomy Day (as thou art like to be?) Yea, did we not tell thee, that God out of his Love to Sinners, sent Christ to die for them, that they might (by coming to him) be saved? Did not we tell thee of these things? Did we not run, ride, labour and strive abundantly (if it might have been) for the good of thy Soul, (tho' now a damned Soul?) Did we not venture our Goods, our Names, our Lives? Yea, did we not even kill our selves with our earnest intreaties of thee to consider of thine Estate, and by Christ to escape this dreadful Day? O sad doom! When thou shalt be forced full sore against thy Will, to fall under the Truth of this Judgment, saying, O how have I hated Instruction, and how hath my Heart despised Reproof? (for indeed) I have not obeyed the Voice of my Teachers, nor inclined mine Ear to them that instructed me, Prov. 5. 11, 12, 13.

7. May not thy Father, thy Mother, thy Brother, thy Sister, thy Friend, &c. appear with gladness against thee at the terrible Day? Saying, O thou silly Wretch! How rightly hath God met with thee? O how righteously doth his Sentence pass upon thee? Remember, thou wouldst not be ruled; nor perswaded in thy Life-time: As thou didst not care for us and our Admonitions then, so neither do we care for thy Ruin, Terror, and Damnation now. No, but we will stand on God's Side in sentencing of thee to that Portion which the Devils must be partakers of. The Righteous shall rejoice when he seeth the Vengeance, he shall wash his Foot in the Blood of the Wicked, Plal. 5. 8, 10. O sad! It is enough to make Mountains tremble, and the Rocks rend in pieces, to hear this doleful sound. Consider these things, and if thou wouldst be loath to be in this Condition, than have a care of living in Sin now. How loath wilt thou be to be thrust away from the Gates of Heaven? And how loath wilt thou be to be deprived of the Mercy of God?

How unwillingly wilt thou set Foot forward towards the Lake of Fire; Never did Malefactor so unwillingly turn off the Ladder, when the Halter was about his Neck, as thou wilt turn from God to the Devil, from Heaven to Hell, when the Sentence is passed upon thy Soul.

O how wilt thou sigh and groan? How willingly wouldst thou hide thy self, and run away from Justice? But alas! As it is with them that are on the Ladder ready to be executed, so it will be with thee. They would fain run away, but there are many Halbard-men to stay them: And so the Angels of God will beset thee round, I say, round on every Side; so that thou mayst indeed look, but run thou canst not: Thou mayst wish thy self under some Rock, or Mountain, Rev. 6. 15, 16. But how to get under, thou knowest not.

O how unwilling wilt thou be to let thy Father go to Heaven without thee? thy Mother or Friends, &c. go to Heaven without thee? How willingly wouldst thou hang on them, and not let them go? O Father! Cannot you help me? Mother, cannot you do me some good? O how loath am I to Burn and Fry in Hell, while you are Singing in Heaven? But alas, the Father, Mother, or Friends reject them, slight them, and turn their Backs upon them, saying, You would have none of Heaven in your Life-time, therefore you shall have none of it now: You slighted our Counsels then, and we slight your Tears, Cries, and Condition now. What sayst thou Sinner? Will not this perswade thine Heart, nor make thee bethink thy self? This is now before thou fall into that dreadful place, that fiery Furnace. But O consider how dreadful the place it self, the Devils themselves, the Fire it self will be! And this at the end of all, here thou must lye for ever, here thou must fry for ever, and for ever. This will be more to thee, than any Man with Tongue can express, or with Pen can write: There is none that can, I say, by the ten thousandth part, discover the State and Condition of such a Soul.

I shall conclude this then with a few Considerations of Encouragement.

1. Consider, (for I would fain have thee come in Sinner) that there is way made by Jesus Christ for them that are under the Curse

Curse of God, to come to this comfortable and blessed State of Lazarus, I was speaking of. See Ephes. 2.

2. Consider, What pains Christ Jesus took for the Ransoming of thy Soul from all the Curses, Thunder-claps, and Tempests of the Law; from all the intolerable Flames of Hell; from that Soul-sinking appearance of thy Person, (on the Left-hand) before the Judgment-Seat of Christ Jesus, from everlasting Fellowship, with innumerable Companies of Yelling, and Soul-amazing Devils, I say, consider what Pains the Lord Jesus Christ took in bringing in Redemption for Sinners, from these things.

1. In that, Though he were rich, yet he became poor, that thou, through his Poverty, might be made rich, 2 Cor. 8. 9. He laid aside his Glory, Joh. 17. and became a Servant, Phil. 2. He left the Company of Angels, and incountred with the Devil, Luk. 4. Matt. 4. He left Heaven's Ease for a time, to lie upon hard Mountains, Joh. 8. In a Word, he became poorer than those that go with Flail and Rake; yea, than the very Birds or Foxes, and all to do thee good. Besides, consider a little of these unspeakable and intolerable Slightings and Rejections, and the manifold Abuses that came from Men upon him. How he was falsely accused, being a sweet, harmless, and undefiled Lamb. How he was undervalued, so that a Murtherer was counted less worthy of Condemnation than he. Besides, how they mock him, spit on him, beat him over the Head with Staves, had the Hair pluck'd from his Cheeks. I gave my Back to the Smilers, (saith he) and my Cheeks to them that pluck'd off the Hair; I hid not my Face from Shame and Spitting. His Head crown'd with Thorns, his Hands pierced with Nails, and his Side with a Spear; together, with how they used him, Scourged him, and so miserably misusing him, that they had even spent him in a great measure before they did Crucify him. Inasmuch, that there was another pain to carry his Cross.

Again, not only this, but lay to heart a little what he received from GOD his dear Father, though he were his dear and tender Son. First, in that he did deal with him as the greatest Sinner and Rebel in the World: For he laid the Sins of Thousands, and Ten Thousands, and Thousand of Thousands of Sinners to his charge, Isa. 53. And caused him to drink the terrible Cup that was due to them all: And not only so, but did delight in so doing: For it pleased the Lord to bruise him. God dealt indeed with his Son, as Abraham would have dealt with Isaac, ay, and more terrible by ten thousand Parts. For he did not only tear his Body like a Lion, but made his Soul an Offering for Sin. And this was not done feignedly, but really (for Justice call'd for it, he standing in the room of Sinners) witness that horrible and unspeakable Agony that fell on him suddenly in the Garden, as if all the Vials of God's unspeakable scalding Vengeance had been cast upon him all at once, and all the Devils in Hell had broken loose from thence at once to destroy him, and that for ever; inasmuch, that the very Pangs of Death seized upon him in the same hour. For, saith he, My Soul is exceeding sorrowful and amazed, even unto Death, Mark 14. 33, 34.

Witness also that strange kind of Sweat, that trickled down his most blessed Face, where it is said; And he Sweat, as it were great drops or clodders of Blood, trickling down to the Ground. O Lord Jesus! What a Load didst thou carry? What a Burden didst thou bear of the Sins of the World, and the Wrath of God? O thou that didst not only bleed at Nose and Mouth, with the pressure that lay upon thee, but thou wast so pressed, so loaden, that the pure Blood gushed through the Flesh and Skin, and so ran trickling down to the Ground. And his Sweat was as it were great drops of Blood, trickling or falling down to the Ground, Luke 22. 44. Canst thou read this, O thou wicked Sinner, and yet go on in Sin? Canst thou think of this, and defer Repentance one hour longer? O heart of Flint! yea, harder. O miserable Wretch! What place in Hell will be hot enough for thee to have thy Soul put into, if thou shalt persist or go on still to add Iniquity to Iniquity.

Besides, his Soul went down to Hell, Psal. 16. 10. Acts 2. 31. and his Body to the Bars of the Grave. And had Hell, Death or the Grave, been strong enough to hold him, then he had suffered the Vengeance of eternal Fire to all Eternity. But, O Blessed Jesus! How didst thou discover thy Love to Man in thy thus suffering? And, O God the Father! How didst thou also declare the Purity, and Exactness of thy Justice, in that, tho' it was thine only, holy, innocent, harmless, and undefiled Son Jesus, that did take on him our Nature, and represent our Persons, answering for our Sins, instead of our selves: Thou didst so wonderfully pour out thy wrath upon him, to the making of him cry out, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? And, O Lord Jesus! What a glorious Conquest hast thou made over the Enemies of our Souls, even Wrath, Sin, Death, Hell and Devils, in that thou didst wring thy self from under the Power of them all? And not only so, but hast led them Captive which would have led us Captive; and also hast received for us that glorious and unspeakable Inheritance, That Eye hath not seen, nor Ear heard, neither hath it entred into the Heart of Man to conceive. And also hast given them some discovery thereof through thy Spirit.

And now Sinner, together with this, consider,

Fourthly,

Fourthly, That though Jesus Christ hath done all these things for Sinners, yet the Devils make it their whole Work, and continual Study, how they may keep thee and others from enjoying of these Blessed Privileges, that have been thus obtained for Sinners, by this sweet Jesus. He labours, I say,

First, To keep thee ignorant of thy State by Nature.

Secondly, To harden thy Heart against the Ways of God.

Thirdly, To inflame thy Heart with love to Sin and the Ways of Darkness.

And Fourthly, To get thee to continue herein. For that is the Way, he knows, to get thee to be a Partaker with him of flaming Hell-fire, even the same that he himself is fallen into; together with the rest of the wicked World by reason of Sin: Look to it therefore.

But now, in the next place, a Word of Encouragement to you that are the Saints of the Lord.

1. Consider what an happy State thou art in, that hast gotten the Faith of the Lord Jesus into thy Soul. (But be sure thou have it) I say, how safe, how sure, how happy art thou! For when others go to Hell, thou must go to Heaven; when others go to the Devil, thou must go to God; when as others go to Prison, thou must be set at Liberty, at Ease, and at Freedom; when others must roar for sorrow of Heart, then thou shalt also sing for the joy of Heart.

Secondly, Consider thou must have all thy well-spent Life to follow thee, instead of all thy Sins, and the glorious Blessings of the Gospel, instead of the dreadful Curses and Condemnations of the Law; the Blessing of the Father, instead of a fiery Sentence from the Judge.

Thirdly, let Dissolution come when it will, it can do thee no harm; for it will be but only a Passage out of a Prison into a Palace; out of a Sea of Troubles into an Haven of Rest, out of a Croud of Enemies, to an innumerable Company of true, loving and faithful Friends; out of Shame, Reproach and Contempt, into exceeding great and eternal Glory. For Death shall not hurt thee with his Sting, nor bite thee with his Soul-murdering Teeth, but shall be a welcome Guest to thee, even to thy Soul, in that it is sent to free thee from thy Troubles which thou art in whilst here in this World, dwelling in the Tabernacle of Clay.

Fourthly, consider, However it goes with Friends and Relations, yet it will go well with thee, Eccles. 8. 12.

However it goes with the Wicked, yet I know; mark, yet I know, (saith he) that it shall go well with them that fear the Lord, that fear before him.

And therefore let this in the first Place cause thee chearfully to exercise thy Patience under all the Calamities, Crosses, Troubles and Afflictions that may come upon thee; and by patient Continuance in well-doing, to commit both thy self, and thine Affairs and Actions into the hands of God, through Jesus Christ, as to a faithful Creator, who is true to his Word, and loveth to give unto thee whatsoever he hath promised to thee.

And therefore to encourage thee, while thou art here with Comfort, to hold on for all thy Crosses in this thy Journey, be much in considering the Place that thou must go into, so soon as Dissolution comes.

It must be into Heaven, to God the Judge of all, to an innumerable Company of Angels, to the Spirits of just Men made perfect, to the general Assembly and Church of the first born, whose names are written in Heaven, and to Jesus (to the Redeemer) who is the Mediator of the New Covenant, and to the Blood of Sprinkling, that speaks better things for thee than Abel's did for Cain, Heb. 11. 22, 23, 24.

3. Consider, That when the Time of the Dead that they shall be raised is come, then shall thy Body be raised out of the Grave, and be glorified, and be made like to Jesus Christ, Phil. 3. 21. O Excellent Condition!

4. When Jesus Christ shall sit on the Throne of his Glory, you shall also sit with him, even when he shall sit on the Throne of his Glory. O will not this be glorious, that when thousands, and thousands of thousands shall be arraigned before the Judgment-Seat of Christ, then for them to sit with him upon the Throne, together with him to pass the Sentence upon the ungodly, 1 Cor. 6. 2, 3. Will it not be glorious to enjoy those things that Eye hath not seen, nor Ear heard, neither hath entred into the Heart of Man to conceive?

Will it not be glorious to have this Sentence, Come ye Blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you before the Foundation of the World? Will it not be glorious to enter then with the Angels and Saints into that glorious Kingdom? will it not be glorious for thee to be in Glory with them, while others are in unutterable Torments? O then! how will it comfort thee to see thou hast not lost that Glory; to think that the Devil hath not got thy Soul, that thy Soul should be saved, and that not from a little, but a great exceeding danger; not with a little, but a great Salvation. O therefore let the Saints be joyful in Glory, let them triumph over all their Enemies. Let them begin to sing Heaven upon Earth, triumph before they come to Glory, even when they are in the midst of their Enemies, For this Honour shall shall all his Saints have, Psal. 149. 6, 7, 8, 9.

Verse 29. Abraham said unto him, They have Moses and the Prophets, let them hear them.

IN the Verses foregoing, you see there is a discovery of the lamentable State of the poor Soul that dies out of Christ, and the special Favour of God. And also, how little the glorious God of Heaven doth regard, and take notice of their most miserable Condition.

Now in this Verse, he doth magnify the Words which were spoken to the People by the Prophets and Apostles, They have Moses and the Prophets, let them hear them. As if he should say, thou askest me, that I should send Lazarus back again into the World to preach to them that live there, that they might escape that doleful Place that thou art in: What needs that? Have they not Moses and the Prophets? Have they not had my Ministers and Servants sent unto them and coming as from me? I sent Enoch and Noah, Moses and Samuel; I sent David, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, Hosea, and the rest of the Prophets, together with Peter, Paul, John, Matthew, James, Jude, with the rest; Let them hear them. What they have spoken by Divine Inspiration I will own, whether it be for the Damnation of those that reject, or the saving of them that receive their Doctrine. And therefore, what need have they that one should be sent unto them in another way? They have Moses, and the Prophets, Let them hear them; Let them receive their Word, close in with the Doctrine declared by them. I shall not at this Time speak any thing to that word (Abraham) having touched upon it already; but shall tell you what is to be understood by these Words, They have Moses and the Prophets, let them hear them. The Things that I shall observe from hence, are these, 1. That the Scriptures spoken by the holy Men of God, are a sufficient Rule to instruct to Salvation, them that do assuredly believe and close in with what they hold forth. They have Moses and the Prophets, let them hear them. That is, if they would escape that doleful Place, and be saved indeed from the intolerable Pains of Hell-fire, as they desire; they have that which is sufficient to counsel them, They have Moses and the Prophets; let them be instructed by them, Let them hear them, 2 Tim. 3. 16, 17. For all Scripture is given by Inspiration of God, and is profitable for Doctrine, for Reproof, for Correction, for Instruction in Righteousness; why? That the Man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished to every good Work.

Do but mark these Words, All Scripture is profitable: All; take it where you will, and in what place you will: All is profitable: For what? That the Man of God, or he that is bound for Heaven would instruct others in their Progress thither.

It is profitable to instruct him, in case he be ignorant; to reprove him, in case he transgress; to correct him, if he hath need of it; to confirm him, if he be wavering. It is profitable for Doctrine, and all this in a very righteous way, that the poor Soul may not only be helped, but thoroughly furnished, not only to some, but to all good Works. And when Paul would counsel Timothy, to stick close to the Things that are sound and sure, presently he puts him upon the Scriptures, saying, Thou hast from a Child known the Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto Salvation, through Faith which is in Christ Jesus. The Scripture holds forth God's Mind and Will, of his Love and Mercy towards Man. and also the Creatures carriage towards him from first to last; so if thou wouldest know the Love of God in Christ to Sinners, Then search the Scriptures, for they are they that testify of him.

Wouldst thou know what thou art, and what is in thine Heart? Then search the Scriptures and see what's written in them, Rom. 3. from 9. to 18. Rom. 1. 29, 30, 31. Jer. 17. 9. Gen. 6. 5. Chap. 8. 21. Eph. 4. 18. with many others. The Scriptures, I say, they are able to give a Man perfect Instruction into any of the Things of God, necessary to Faith and Godliness, if he hath but an honest Heart, seriously to weigh and ponder the several Things contained in them. As to instance in Things more particular for the further clearing up of this: And first, if we come to the Creation of the World.]

Wouldst thou know somewhat concerning that; Then read Gen. 1, and 2 Chapters, and compare them with Psalms 33. at the 6th Verse. Also Isa. 66. 2. Prov. 8. towards the end.

Wouldst thou know whether he made them of something or nothing? Read Heb. 11. 3.

Wouldst thou know whether he put forth any labour in making them, as we do in making Things? Read Psal. 33. 2.

If thou wouldst know whether Man was made by God corrupt or upright, read Eccles. 7. 26. Gen. 1. 10, 18, 25, 31.

Wouldst thou know where God did place Man after he had made him? Read Gen. 2. 15.

Wouldst thou know whether that Man did live there all this time or not? Then read Gen. 3. 23, 24.

If thou wouldst know whether Man be still in that State by Nature, that God did place him in; Then read Eccl. 7. 26. and compare it with Rom. 5. 16. and Eph. 2. 1, 2, 3. God made Man Upright, but he hath sought out many Inventions.

If thou wouldst know whether Man were first beguiled, or the Woman, that God

God made an help mate for him, read Gen. 3. 6. and compare it with 1 Tim. 2. 14.

Wouldst thou know whether God looked upon Adam's eating the forbidden Tree, to be Sin or no? Read Rom. 5. 12, 13, 14, 15. and compare it with Gen. 3. 17.

Wouldst thou know whether it were the Devil who beguiled them, or whether it was a natural Serpent, such as do haunt the desolate Places? Read Gen. 3. 12. with Rev. 20. 1, 2, 3.

Wouldst thou know whether that Sin be imputed to us? Read Rom. 5. 12, 13, 14, 15. and compare it with Eph. 2. 2.

Wouldst thou know whether Man was cursed for his Sin? Read Gal. 3. 10. Rom. 5. 15.

Wouldst thou know whether the Curse did fall on Man, or on the whole Creation with him? Compare Gen. 3. 7. with Rom. 8. 20, 21, 22.

Wouldst thou know whether Man be defiled in every part of him, by the Sin he hath committed? Then read Isa. 1. 6.

Wouldst thou know Man's Inclination so soon as he is born? Read Psalms 58. 3. The Wicked are estranged from the Womb, they go astray so soon as they be born.

Wouldst thou know whether Man once fallen from God by Transgression, can recover himself by all he can do? Then read Rom. 3. 20, 23.

Wouldst thou know whether it be the desire of the Heart of Man by Nature, to follow God in his own way or no? Compare Gen. 6. 5. and Gen. 8. 21, with Hos. 11. 7.

Wouldst thou know how God's Heart stood affected towards Man before the World began? Compare Eph. 1. 4. with 2 Tim. 1. 9.

Wouldst thou know whether Sin were sufficient to draw God's Love from his Creatures? Compare Jer. 3. 7. and Micah 7. 18. with Rom. 5. 6, 7, 8.

Wouldst thou know whether God's Love did still abide towards his Creatures for any thing they could do to make him amends? Then read Deut. 11. 5, 6, 7, 8.

Wouldst thou know how God could still love his Creatures, and do his Justice no wrong? Read Rom. 3. 24, 25, 26. Being justified freely by his Grace, through the Redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath sent forth to be a Propitiation for Sin, through Faith in his Blood, to declare his Righteousness for the Remission of Sins that are past, through the Forbearance of God. To declare, I say, at this time his Righteousness; that he might be just, and the Justifier of him that believeth in Jesus.

That is, God having his Justice satisfied in the Blood, and Righteousness, and Death of his own Son Jesus Christ for the Sins of poor Sinners, he can now save them that come to him, though never so great Sinners, and do his Justice no wrong, because it hath had a full and compleat satisfaction given it by that Blood, 1 Job. 2. 7, 8.

Wouldst thou know who he was, and what he was, that did out of his Love die for Sinners, then compare Job. 3. 16, 17. Rom. 5. 8. with Isa. 9. 6.

Wouldst thou know whether this Saviour had a Body of Flesh and Bones, before the World was, or took it from the Virgin Mary? Then read Gal. 4. 4.

Wouldst thou know whether he did in that Body bear all our Sins, and where? Then read 1 Pet. 2. 4. Who bear our Sins in his own Body on the Tree.

Wouldst thou know whether he did rise again after he was Crucified, with the very same Body? Then read Luke 24. at ver. 38, 39, 40, 41.

Wouldst thou know whether he did eat or drink with his Disciples after he rose out of the Grave? Then read Luke 24. 42. and Acts 10. 41.

If thou wouldst be perswaded of the Truth of this, that that very Body is now above the Clouds and Stars, read Acts 1. 9, 10, 11. and Luke 24. toward the end.

If thou wouldst know that the Quakers hold an Error, that say the Body of Christ is within them; consider the same Scripture.

Wouldst thou know what that Christ that died for Sinners, is doing in that place whither he is gone? Then read Heb. 7. 24.

Wouldst thou know who shall have Life by him, read 1 Tim. 1. 14, 15. and Rom. 5. 6, 7, 8. which say, Christ died for Sinners, for the ungodly.

Wouldst thou know whether they that live and die in their Sins, shall go to Heaven or not? Then read 1 Cor. 6. 10. Rev. 21. 8, 27. which saith, They shall have their part in the Lake that burns with Fire and Brimstone.

Wouldst thou know whether Man's Obedience will obtain that Christ should die for them, or save them? Then read Mark 2. 17. Rom. 5. 7.

Wouldst thou know whether Righteousness, Justification and Sanctification do come through the Vertue of Christ's Blood? Compare Rom. 5. 9. with Heb. 12. 12.

Wouldst thou know whether a natural Man abstain from the outward Act of Sin against the Law, merely by a principle of Nature? Then compare well Rom. 2. 14. with Phil. 3. 6.

Wouldst thou know whether a Man by Nature may know something of the invisible Things of God? Compare seriously Rom. 1. 20, 21. with Rom. 2. 14, 15.

Wouldst thou know how far a Man may go on in a Profession of the Gospel, and yet fall away? Then read Heb. 6. 4, 5, 6. They may taste the good Word of Word, and the Powers of the World to come. They may taste the Heavenly Gift, and be partakers of the Holy Ghost, and yet so fall as never to be be recovered, or renewed again unto Repentance: see also Luke 13.

Wouldst thou know how hard it is to go to Heaven? read Mat. 7. 13, 14. Luke 13. 24.

Wouldst thou know whether a Man by Nature be a Friend to God, or an Enemy? Then read Rom. 5. 11. Col. 1. 21.

Wouldst thou know what, or who they are that shall go to Heaven? then read John 3. 3, 5, 7. and 2 Cor. 5. 7. Also wouldst thou know what a sad Thing it is for any to turn their Backs upon the Gospel of Jesus Christ? Then read Heb. 10. 28, 29, and Mark 16. 16.

Wouldst thou know what is the Wages of Sin? Then read Rom. 6. 23.

Wouldst thou know whither those do go, that die unconverted to the Faith of Christ? Then read Psalms 9. 17. and Isa. 14. 9.

Reader, here might I spend many Sheets of Paper, yea, I might upon this subject, write a very great Book, but I shall now forbear, desiring thee to be very conversant in the Scriptures, for they are they that will testify of Jesus Christ, John 5. 39. The Bereans were counted Noble upon this account; These were Nobler than those of Thessalonica, in that they received the Word with all readiness of mind; and searched the Scriptures daily, &c. Acts 17. 11. But here let me give thee one caution, that is, have a care that thou do not satisfy thy self with a bare search of them, without a real Application of him whom they testify of to thy Soul, lest instead of faring better for thy doing this Work, thou dost fare a great deal the worse, and thy Condemnation be very much heightened, in that, tho' thou didst read so often the sad State of those that die in Sin, and the glorious Estate of them that close in with Christ, yet thou thy self shouldest be such a Fool as to lose Jesus Christ, notwithstanding thy hearing, and reading so plentifully of him.

They have Moses and the Prophets, let them hear them.]

As if he should say, what need have they, that one should be sent to them from the Dead? Have they not Moses and the Prophets? Hath not Moses told them the danger of living in Sin? Deut. 27. from ver. 15. to ver. 26. and chap. 28. 15, to 21, &c. in the end of the Chapter: also chap. 29. 18 to 22. Hath he not there told them, what a sad State these Persons are in, that deceive themselves with the deceit of their Hearts, saying, They shall have peace though they follow their Sins, in these words; And when he heareth the words of this Curse, he blesteth himself in his Heart, saying, I shall have peace tho' I go on, or walk in the Imagination of my Heart, to add Drunkenness to Thirst. The Lord will not spare that Man, but then the Anger of the Lord, and his Jealousy shall smother against him, and all the Curses that are written in this Book shall lie upon him: and the Lord shall blot out his Name from under Heaven.

Again, did not Moses write of the Saviour that was to come afterwards into the World? Deut. 18. 18. Nay, have not all the Prophets from Samuel, with all those that follow after, prophesied, and foretold these things? Therefore what need have they that I should work such a Miracle, as to send one from the Dead unto them? They have Moses and the Prophets, let them hear them.

From whence observe again, That God doth honour the writings of Moses and the Prophets, as much, nay more, than if one should rise from the Dead: Should not a People seek unto their God? What, seek for the Living among the Dead? To the Law, and to the Testimonies, (saith God) if they speak not according to this Word, it is because there is no light in them, Isa. 8. 19, 20. And let me tell you plainly, I do believe that the Devil knows this full well, which makes him labour to beget in the Hearts of his Disciples and Followers, light Thoughts of them; and doth persuade them, that even a Motion from their own beguiled Conscience, or from his own wicked Spirit, is to be observed, and obeyed before them. When the very Apostle of Jesus Christ, tho' he heard a Voice from the excellent Glory, saying This is my beloved Son, &c. Yet writing to the Churches, he commends the writings of the Prophets before it, saying, We have also a more sure Word of the Prophets, unto which ye do well to take heed, &c. 2 Pet. 1. 17, 18, 19. Now if thou doubtest whether in that place be meant the Scriptures, the words of the Prophets or no; read but the next Verse, where he addeth for a certain Confirmation thereof, these words: Knowing this first, that there is no Prophecy of the Scriptures, of any private Interpretation: for Prophecy came not in old Time by the will of Man, but holy Men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

And therefore what a sad Thing is it for those that go about to disown the Scriptures! I tell you however they may slight them now, yet when they come into Hell, they will see their Folly: They have Moses and the Prophets, let them hear them.]

Further, who are they that are so tossed to and fro, with the several Winds of Doctrine that have been broached in these Days, but such for the most part, as have had a light Esteem of the Scriptures; for the ground of Error (as Christ saith) is because they know not them, Mark 12. 24. And indeed, it is just with God to give them over to follow their own dark blinded Consciences, to be led into Errors, that they might be damned in Hell, who did not believe believe that the things contained in the Scripture were the Truth, that they might be saved and go to Heaven. I cannot well tell how to have done speaking for, and on the Scriptures side; only this I consider, A word is enough to the wise; and therefore I shall commit these Things into the hands of them that are of God: and as for the rest, I shall say to them, rather than God will save them from Hell with the breach of his holy Word, if they had a thousand Souls a-piece, God would destroy them all; for the Scriptures cannot be broken, John 10. 35.

Verse 30. And he said, Nay, Father Abraham, but if one went unto them from the Dead, they would repent.

THE Verse before, you know as I told you, it was Part of an Answer to such as lose their Souls; so is it a Vindication of the Scriptures of Moses and the Prophets, They have Moses and the Prophets let them hear them.

Now this Verse is an Answer to what was said in the former; and such an one as hath in it a Rejection of the former Answer. Nay, Father Abraham, Nay faith he, do not say so, do not put them off with this; send one from the Dead, and then there will be some Hopes. 'Tis true, thou speakest of the Scripture, of Moses and the Prophets, and sayest, let them hear them; but these Things are not so well as I could wish, I had rather thou wouldst send one from the Dead. In these Words therefore Nay, Father Abraham, there is a Repulse given, nay, let it not be so. Nay, I do not like of that Answer: Hear Moses, and the Prophets; nay, The same Expression is used by Christ, Luke 13. 2, 3. Think you that they upon whom the Tower of Siloe fell, were Sinners above others? I tell you nay; for except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish. So here, Nay, Father Abraham, &c.

By this Word Nay, therefore is signify'd a rejecting the first Answer.

Now observe, I pray you, the Reason why he says nay, is, because God doth put over all those that would be saved, to observe and receive the Truth contained in Scripture, and believe that. To have a high Esteem of them, and to love and search them, as Christ faith, Search the Scriptures. ----- for they are they which testify of me, John 5. 39. But the Damned say, Nay, as if he had said, This is the Thing; to be short, my Brethren are Unbelievers, and do not regard the Word of God: I know it by myself, for when I was in the World, it was so with me; Many a good Sermon did I hear, many a Time was I admonished, desired, intreated, beseech'd, threaten'd, forewarned of what I now suffer: But alas! I was ignorant, self-conceited, furly, obstinate, and rebellious. Many a Time the Preachers told me, Hell would be my Portion, the Devil would wreck his Malice on me, God would pour on me his fore Displeasure; but he had as good have preached to the Stock, to the Post, to the Stones I trod on; his Words rang in mine Ears, but I kept them from mine Heart. I remember he alledged many a Scripture, but those I valued not; the Scriptures, thought I, what are they? A dead Letter, a little Ink and Paper, of three or four Shillings Price. Alas! What is the Scripture? Give me a Ballad, a News-book, George on Horse-back, or Bevis of Southampton; give me some Book that teaches curious Arts, that tells of Old Fables; but for the Holy Scriptures I cared not. And as it was with me then, so it is with my Brethren now, we were all in one Spirit, loved all the same Sins, slighted all the same Counsels, Promises, Encouragements and Threatnings of the Scripture; and they are still as I left them, still in Unbelief, still provoking God, and rejecting good Counsel, so hardened in their Ways, so bent to follow Sin, that let the Scriptures be shewed to them daily, let the Messengers of Christ preach till their Hearts ache, till they fall down dead with preaching, they will rather trample it under Foot, and swine-like rend them, than close in with those gentle and blessed Proffers of the Gospel.

Nay Father Abraham, but if one should rise from the dead, they would repent. Tho' they have Moses and the Prophets, (the Scriptures) they will not repent and close in with Jesus Christ, though the Scriptures do witness against them. If therefore there be any Good done to them, they must have it another Way. I think, faith he, it would work much on them if one should rise from the Dead. And this Truth indeed is so evident, that ungodly ones have a light Esteem of the Scriptures, that it needs not many strong Arguments to prove it, being so evidently manifested by their every Days Practice, both in Words and Actions, almost in all Things they say and do. Yet for the Satisfaction of the Reader, I shall shew you by a Scripture or two, (though I might shew many) that this was and is true, with the Generality of the World. See the Words of Nehemiah in his 9th Chapter concerning the Children of Israel, who though the Lord afforded them Mercy upon Mercy, as it is from ver. 19. to ver. 25, yet ver. 26. faith he, Nevertheless they were disobedient for all thy Goodness towards them, and rebelled against thee, (but how?) and cast the Law behind their Back: Slew the Prophets which testified against them, to turn them to thee, and they wrought great Provocations. Observe, 1. They sinned against Mercy. And then, 2. They slighted the Law, or Word of God. 3. They slew the Prophets that declared it unto them. 4. The Lord counts it a great Provocation. See Heb. 3. from ver. 10, to ver. 19. And see Zach. 7. 11, 12. But they refused to hearken, (saith he there of the Wicked) and pulled away the Shoulder, and stopped their Ears, that they should not hear the Law. Yea, they made their Hearts hard as an Adamant Stone, lest they should hear the Law, and the Words which the Lord of Hosts sent unto them by his Spirit in the former Prophets, &c. Mark I pray you, here is also,

1. A refusing to hearken to the Words of the Prophets.

2. That they might so do, they stopped their Ears.

3. If any thing was to be done, they pulled away their Shoulder.

4. To effect this, they labour to make their hearts hard as an Adamant Stone.

5. And all this, lest they should bear and close in with Jesus, and live, and be delivered from the Wrath to come. All which things do hold out an unwillingness to submit to, and embrace the words of God, and so Jesus Christ which is testified of by them. Many other Scriptures I might bring in for Confirmation of the Thing, as that in Amos 7. 12, 13. also 2 Sam. 2. 24, 25. 2 Chron. 25. 15, 16. Jer. 7. 23, 24, 25, 26, 27. and Chap. 16. 12. Read also seriously that saying in 2 Chron. 36. 15. where he saith, And the Lord God of their Fathers sent unto them by his Messengers rising up betimes, because he had Compassion on his People, and on his Dwelling-place. And did they make them welcome? No, But mocked the Messengers of God, and despised his Words: And was that all? No, they misused his Prophets. How long? Until the Wrath of the Lord arose against them: Till there was no remedy. See also Jer. 29. 19. Chap. 25. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. Luke 11. 49.

And besides, the Conversion of almost all Men doth bear witness to the same, both religious and profane Persons, in that they daily neglect, reject, and turn their Backs upon the plain Testimony of the Scriptures.

As, 1. Take the Threatnings laid down in holy Writ, and how are they disregarded? There are but a few places in the Bible, but there are Threatnings against one Sinner or other; against Drunkards, Swearers, Lyars, proud Persons, Strumpets, Whore-mongers, Covetous, Railers, Extortioners, Thieves, lazy Persons; In a word, all manner of Sins are reprov'd, and without Faith in the Lord Jesus, there is a sore Punishment to be executed on the Committers of them; and all this made mention of in the Scriptures.

But for all this, how thick, and by heaps, do these Wretches walk up and down our Streets? Do but go into the Ale-houses, and you shall see almost every Room besprinkled with them, so foaming out their own Shame, that it is enough to make the Heart of a Saint to tremble, inso much that they would not be bound to have Society with them any long while for all the World. For as the ways of the godly are not liked of by the Wicked, even so the ways of the Wicked are an Abomination to the Just, Prov. 29. 27. Psal. 120. 5, 6.

The Scriptures say, Cursed is the Man that trusteth in Man, that maketh Flesh his Arm, and whose Heart departeth from the Lord, Jer. 17. 5.

And yet how many poor Souls are there in the World, that stand in so much awe and dread of Men, and do so highly esteem their Favour, that they will rather venture their Souls in the hands of the Devil with their Favour, than they will fly to Jesus Christ for the Salvation of their Souls? Nay, though they be convinced in their Souls, that the way is the way of God; yet how do they labour to stifle Conviction, and turn their Ears away from the Truth, and all because they will not lose the favour of an opposite Neighbour? O! I dare not for my Master, my Brother, my Landlord, I shall lose his favour, his house of Work, and so decay my Calling. O saith another, I would willingly go in this way, but for my Father, he chides and tells me he will not stand my Friend when I come to want; I shall never enjoy a pennyworth of his Goods; he will disinherit me. And I dare not, saith another, for my Husband, for he will be a railing, and tells me, he will turn me out of Doors, he will beat me, and cut off my Legs. But I tell you, if any of these, or any other things be so prevalent with thee now, as to keep thee from seeking after Christ in his ways; they will also be so prevalent with God against thee, as to make him cast off thy Soul, because thou didst rather trust Man than God; and delight in the embracing of Man rather than in the favour of the Lord.

2. Again, the Scripture saith, He that being often reprov'd, hardneth his Neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy, Prov. 29. 1. Yet many are so far from turning, though they have been convinced of their wretched State an hundred times, that when Convictions or Trouble for Sin comes on their Consciences, they go on still in the same manner, resisting and choaking the same, though remediless Destruction be hard at their heels.

3. Again thou hast heard say, Unless a Man be born again, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, John 3. 3, 5, 7. And yet thou goest on in a natural State, an unregenerate Condition; Nay, thou dost resolve never to turn nor be changed, tho' Hell be appointed on purpose to swallow up such, Isa. 14. 9. Psal. 9. 17. The wicked shall be turned into Hell, and all the Nations that forget God.

4. Again, the Scripture saith plainly, That he that loveth and maketh a Lie, shall have his part in the Lake that burneth with Fire

Fire and Brimstone, Rev. 21. 8, 27. And yet thou art so far from dreading it, that it is thy delight to jest and jeer, and lie for a penny, or two pence, or six pence again. And also if thou make the rest of thy Companions merry, by telling things that are false of them that are better than thy self, thou dost not care a Straw: Or if thou hearest a Lie from, or of another, thou wilt tell it, and swear to the Truth of it, O miserable!

5. Thou hast heard and read, That he that believes not, shall be damned, Mark 16. 16. And that all Men have not Faith, 2 Thess. 3. 2. and yet thou dost so much disregard these things, that it is like thou didst scarce ever so much as examine seriously whether thou wast in the Faith or no; but doth content thy self with the Hypocrites hope, which at the last God will cut off, count it no better than the Spiders-web, Job 8. 13, 14. or the House that is built on the Sands, Luke 6. 49. Nay, thou peradventure didst flatter thy self, and thinkest that thy Faith is as good as the best of them all; when, alas poor Soul, thou mayst have no saving Faith at all; which thou hast not, if thou beest not born again and made a new Creature, 2 Cor. 2. 17.

6. Thou hast heard, That he that neglects God's great Salvation, shall never escape his great Damnation, Heb. 2. 3. compared with Luke 14. 24. and Rev. 14. 19, 20. And yet when thou art invited, intreated and beseeched to come in (Luke 14. 17, 18. 2 Cor. 5. 19, 20. Rom. 12. 1.) thou wilt make any excuse to serve the turn. Nay, thou wilt be so wicked, as to put off Christ time after time, notwithstanding he is so freely proffered to thee; a little Ground, a few Oxen, a Farm, a Wife, a two penny Matter, a Play; nay, the fear of a mock, a scoff or a jeer, is of greater weight to draw thee back, than the Salvation of thy Soul to draw thee forward.

7. And thou hast heard, That whosoever would be a Friend of the World, is the Enemy of God, Jam. 4. 4. But thou regardest not these Things; but contrariwise, rather than thou wilt be out of the Friendship and Favour of this World, thou wilt Sin against thine own Conscience, and get thy self into favour by fawning and flattering of the World. Yea, rather than thou wilt go without it, thou wilt dissemble, lie, backbite thy Neighbour, and an hundred other Tricks thou wilt have.

8. You have heard that the Day of Judgment is near, in which you and I, all of us must appear before the Tribunal of Jesus Christ, and there be made to give an account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead; even of all that ever we did, yea, of all our Sins in Thought, Word and Deed, and shall certainly be damned for them too, if we close not in with our Lord Jesus Christ, and what he hath done and suffered for Eternal Life; and that not notionally or traditionally, but really and savingly, in the power, and by the operation of the Spirit, through Faith, Eccl. 11. 9, 12, 14. Heb. 9. 27. Acts 10. 42. Acts 17. 30, 31. 2 Cor. 5. 10. Rev. 20. 12. And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God, and the Books were opened, and another Book was opened, which is the Book of Life, and the Dead were judged out of those Things that were written in the Books. There is the Book of the Creatures, the Book of Conscience, the Book of the Lord's Remembrance, the Book of the Law, the Book of the Gospel, (Rom. 1. 20. compare with Rom. 2. 12. 15. Rev. 6. ver. 19. Job. 12. 48.) Then shall he separate them one from another, as a Shepherd divideth his Sheep on the Right-hand, and the Goats on his Left, (Matt. 25. 30, 31, 32.) And shall say to them on his Right-hand, come ye Blessed, ver. 34. But to the other, go, or depart ye Cursed, ver. 41. Yet, notwithstanding the Scriptures do so plainly and plentifully speak of these things, alas! Who is there that is weaned from the World, and from their Sins and Pleasures, to fly the Wrath to come? Matt. 3. 7. Notwithstanding the Scripture saith also, That Heaven and Earth shall pass away, rather than one jot, or one Tittle of the Word shall fail, till all be fulfilled, they are so certain, Luke 22. 27.

But leaving the Threatnings, let us come to the Promises, and speak somewhat of them, and you may see how light Men make of them, and how little they set by them, notwithstanding the Mouth of the Lord hath spoken them.

As first, Turn ye Fools, ye Scorners, ye simple Ones, at my Reproof, and behold I will pour out my Spirit unto you, Prov. 1. 23. And yet Persons had rather be in their foolishness and scorning still, and had rather embrace some filthy Lust, than the holy, undefiled, and blessed Spirit of Christ, through the Promise, tho' by it, as many as receive it, are sealed unto the Day of Redemption, Eph. 4. 30. And although he that lives and dies without it, is none of Christ's, Rom. 8. 9.

2. God hath said, If thou do but come to him in Christ, Though your Sins be as red as Scarlet, they shall be as white as Snow; and he will by no means cast thee away, (compare Isa. 1. 18. with Job. 6. 27.) yet poor Souls will not come to Christ that they might have Life, (John 5. 41.) but rather after their hardness and impenitent Heart, treasure up unto themselves Wrath against the Day of Wrath, and Revelation of the righteous judgment of God, Rom. 2. 4, 5, 6.

3. Christ Jesus hath said in the word of Truth, That if any Man will serve and follow him, Where he is, there shall also his Servant be, Joh. 12. 16. but yet poor Souls choose rather to follow Sin, Satan, and the World, though their Companions be Devils, vils, and damned Souls forever, Mat. 25. 41.

4. He hath also said, Seek first the Kingdom of God, and all other Things shall be added. But let who so will seek after the Kingdom of Heaven first for them; for they will take the first Time, while Time serves to get the Things of this Life. And if it be so, that they must needs seek after Heaven, or else be damned, they must stay till they have more Leisure, or till they can better attend to it; or till they have other Things handsome about them, or till they are older; when they have little else to do, or when they come to be Sick, and die. Then Lord have Mercy upon them! Tho' it be ten Thousand to one but they perish for ever.

For commonly the Lord hath this Way to deal with Sinners, who put him off when he is striving with them, either to laugh at their Calamity, and mock when their Fear cometh (Prov. 1. 26, 28.) or else send them to the Gods they have served, which are the Devils, Judg. 10. 13, 14. Go to the Gods you have served, and let them deliver you (saith he) compare this with John 8. 44.

5. He hath said, There is no Man that forsaketh Father, or Mother, Wife, Children, or Lands for his sake and the Gospel, but shall have a hundred fold in this World, with Persecutions, and in the World to come Life everlasting, Mark 10. 29, 30.

But Men for the most Part, are so far off from believing the certainty of this, they will scarce lose the earning of a Penny to hear the Word of God, the Gospel of Salvation. Nay, they will neither go themselves, nor suffer others to go (if they can help it) without threatening to do them a Mischief, if it lie in their Way: Nay further, many are so far from parting from any worldly Gain for Christ's sake, and the Gospel's, that they are still striving, by hook and crook, as we say by swearing, lying, cozening, stealing, covetousness, extortion, oppression, forgery, bribery, flattery, or any other Way to get more, tho' they get together with these, Death, Wrath, Damnation, Hell, the Devil, and all the Plagues that God can pour upon them. And if any do not run with them on the same excess of Riot, but rather for all their Threats, will be so bold and careless (as they call it) as to follow the ways of God; if they can do no more, yet they will whet their Tongues like a Sword to wound them, and do them the greatest Mischief they can, both in speaking against them to Neighbours, to Wives, to Husbands, to Landlords, and raising false Reports of them. But let such take heed, lest they be in such a State, and woful Condition as he was in, who said in Vexation and Anguish of Soul, One drop of cold Water to cool my Tongue.

Thus might I add, many Things out of the holy Writ, both Threatnings and Promises, besides those heavenly Counsels, loving Reproofs, free Invitations to all sorts of Sinners, both old and young, rich and poor, bond and free, wise and unwise. All which have been, now are, and is to be feared, as long as this World lasts, will be trampled under the Feet of those Swine, (I call not Men) who will continue in the same. But take a Review of some of them.

1. Counsel.

What heavenly Counsel is that where Christ saith, buy of me Gold tried with Fire, that thou mayest be rich, and white Rayment that thou mayest be cloathed, that the Shame of thy Nakedness do not appear, Rev. 3. 17, 18. Also that, Ho, every one that thirsteth, come to the Waters: Yea, come, buy Wine and Milk without Money, and without Price, Isa. 55. 1. Hear and your Souls shall live, v. 3. Lay hold of my Strength, that you may make Peace with me, and you shall make Peace with me, Isa. 27. 5.

2. Instruction.

What Instruction is here?

Hear Instruction and be wise, and refuse it not. Blessed is the Man that heareth me, (saith Christ) watching daily at my Gates, waiting at the Posts of my Doors: For who so findeth me, findeth Life, and shall obtain Favour of the Lord, Prov. 8. 32 to 36. Take heed that no Man deceive you by any Means. Labour not for the Meat that perisheth, but for that which endureth unto everlasting Life, John 9. 31. Strive to enter into the strait Gate, Luke 13. 24. Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved, Acts 15. 31. Believe not every Spirit, but try the Spirits. Quench not the Spirit. Lay hold on eternal Life. Let your light so shine before Men, that they may see your good Works, and glorify your Father which is in Heaven, Mat. 5. 16. Take heed and beware of Hypocrisy; watch and be sober, learn of me (saith Christ) Come unto me.

3. Forewarning.

What forewarning is here?

Because there is Wrath, beware; lest he take away with his stroke, then a great Ransome cannot deliver thee, Job 36. 18. Be ye not mockers, lest your Hands be made strong, for I have heard from the Lord of Hosts, a Consumption even determined on the whole Earth, Isa. 28. 22. Beware therefore, lest that come upon you that is written: Behold, ye Despisers, and wonder and perish. For behold I work a Work in your Days, which ye shall in no wise believe, tho' a Man declare it unto you, Acts 13. 40, 41. Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest they fall, 1 Cor. 16. 12. Watch and Pray, lest you enter into Temptation, Luke 22. 40, 41. Let us fear therefore lest a Promise being made, and lest us of entering into his Rest, any of you should seem to come short of it, Heb. 4. 1. I will therefore put you in Remembrance, though you once knew this, how that the Lord having saved the People out of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not, Jude 5. Hold fast that that thou hast, let no Man take thy Crown, Rev. 3. 11.

4. Comfort.

What Comfort is here?

He that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out, John 6. 37. Come unto me all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you Rest, Mat. 12. 28. Be of good Cheer, thy Sins are forgiven thee. I will never leave, nor forsake thee (for) I have loved thee with an everlasting Love, Jer. 13. 3. I lay down my Life for my Sheep, I lay down my Life that they may have Life: I am come that they might have Life, and that they may have it more abundantly. I have heard thee in a Time accepted, and in the Day of Salvation have I succoured thee, 2 Cor. 6. 2. Though their Sins be as Scarlet, they shall be as white as Snow, though they are as Crimson, they shall be as Wool. For I have blotted out as a thick Cloud thy Transgressions, and as a Cloud thy Sins; return unto me, for I have redeemed thee, Isa. 44. 22.

5. Grief to those that fall short.

O sad Grief!

How have I hated instruction, and my Heart despised Reproof, and have not obeyed the Voice of my Teachers, nor inclined mine Ear to them that instructed me, Prov. 7. 11, 12, 16. They shall curse their King and their God, and look upward. And they shall look to the Earth, and behold Trouble and Darknes, and Dimness of Anguish, and they shall be driven into Darknes, Isa. 8. ver. 21, 22. He hath dispersed abroad, he hath given to the Poor, his Righteousness endureth for ever --- The Wicked shall see it, and be grieved, he shall gnash his Teeth, and melt away; the Desire of the Wicked shall perish, Psal. 112. 9, 10.

There shall be weeping, when ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the Prophets in the Kingdom of Heaven, and yourselves thrust out, Luke 13. 26, 27, 28. all which Things are slighted by the World.

Thus much in short touching this, That ungodly Men undervalue the Scriptures, and give no Credit to them, when the Truth that is contained in them, is held forth in Simplicity unto them, but rather cry out, nay, but if one should rise from the Dead, then they think something might be done; when alas, though Signs and Wonders are wrought by the Hands of those that preach the Gospel, those poor Creatures would never the sooner convert, tho' they suppose they should, as is evident by the Carriages of their Fore-runners, who albeit the Lord Jesus Christ himself did confirm his Doctrine by Miracles, as opening blind Eyes, casting out of Devils, and raising the Dead, they were so far from receiving either him, or his Doctrine, that they put him to Death for his Pains? tho' he had done so many Miracles among them; yet they believed not in him, John 12. 27. But to pass this, I shall lay down some of the Grounds of their rejecting and undervaluing the Scriptures, and so pass on.

1. Because they do not believe that they are the Word of God, but rather suppose them to be the Inventions of Men, written by some Politicians, on Purpose to make poor ignorant People to submit to some Religion and Government. Though they do not say this, yet their Practices testify the same: as he that when he hears the Words of the Curse, yet blesteth himself in his Heart, and saith he shall have Peace, though God saith he shall have none, Deut. 29. 18, 19, 20. And this must needs be, for did but Men believe this, that it is the Word of God, then they must believe that he that spake it, is true, therefore shall every Word and Tittle be fulfilled. And if they come once to this, unless they be stark mad, they will have a Care how they do throw themselves under the Lash of eternal Vengeance. For the Reason why the Thessalonians received the Word, was, because they believed it was the Word of God, and not the Word of Man, which did effectually work in them by their thus believing, 1 Thess. 2. 13, 14. When ye received the Word which ye heard of us, saith he, ye received it not as the Word of Man, but (as it is indeed) the Word of God, which effectually worketh in you that believe. So that did a Man but receive it in Hearing, or Reading, or Meditating, as it is the Word of God, they would be converted. But the Word Preached, doth not profit, not being mix'd with Faith in them that hear it, Heb. 4. 1, 2.

2. Because they do not indeed see themselves by Nature Heirs of that exceeding Wrath and Vengeance that the Scriptures testify of. For did they but consider what God intends to do with those that live and die in a natural State, it would either sink them into Despair, or make them fly for Refuge to the Hope that is set before them. But if there be never such Sins committed, and never so great Wrath denounced, and the Time of Execution be never so near; yet if the Party that is guilty be senseless, and altogether ignorant thereof, he will be careless, and regards it nothing at all. And that Man by Nature is in this Condition, it is evident. For take the same Man that is senseless, and ignorant of that Misery he is in by Nature, I say, take him at another Time when he is a little awakened, and then you well hear him roar, and cry out so long as trouble is upon him; and a Sense of the Wrath of God hanging over his Head; Good Sirs, what I must do to be saved?

Though the same Man at another Time (when his Conscience is fallen asleep, and grown hard) will lie like the Smith's Dog at the Foot of the Anvil, though the Fire-sparks fly in his Face. But as I said before, when any one is a little awakened, O what Work will one Verse, one Line, nay, one Word of the Holy Scriptures make in his Heart! He cannot eat, sleep, work, keep Company with his former Companions; and all because he is afraid that the Damnation spoken of in Scripture, will fall to his Share, like Balaam, who said, I cannot go beyond the Word of the Lord, Numb. 22. 18. So long as he had something of the Word of the Lord with Authority, Severity, and Power on his Heart; but at another Time he could teach Balak to cast a stumbling Block before the Children of Israel, Rev. 2. 14.

3. Because the carnal Priests do tickle the Ears of their Hearers with vain Philosophy and Deceit, and thereby harden their Hearts against the Simplicity of the Gospel and Word of God, which Things the Apostle admonished those that have a Mind to close in with Christ to avoid, Col. 2. 8. saying, Beware lest any Man (be he what he will) spoil you, through Philosophy and vain Deceit, after the Traditions of Men, and Rudiments of the World, and not after Christ: And you who muzzle up your People in Ignorance with Aristotle, Plato, and the rest of the heathenish Philosophers, and preach little, if any Thing of Christ rightly; I say unto you, that you will find you have sinned against God, and beguiled your Hearers, when God shall in the Judgment-day, lay the Cause of the Damnation of many Thousands of Souls to your Charge, and say, He will require their Blood at your Hands, Ezek. 33. 6.

4. Another Reason why the carnal unbelieving World do so slight the Scriptures, the Word of God, is, because the Judgment spoken of in the Scripture, is not presently executed on the Transgressors. Because sentence against an evil Act, is not speedily executed, therefore the Hearts of the Sons of Men are wholly set in them to do evil, Eccles. 8. 11. Because God doth not presently strike the poor Wretch as soon as he sins but waits, and forbears, and is patient; therefore the World judging God to be unfaithful, go to it again and again, and every time grow harder and harder, till at last God is forced, either to stretch out his mighty Power to turn them, or else send Death with the Devil and Hell to fetch them. Thou thoughtest (saith God) that I was altogether such an one as thyself, but I will reprove thee and set them in order before thy face. Now consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver, Psal. 50. 20, 21.

5. Another Reason why the blind World do slight the Authority of Scripture, is, because they give Ear to the Devil, who through his Subtilty casteth false Evasions, and corrupt Interpretations on them, rendring them not so point blank the Mind of God, and a Rule for Direction to poor Souls, persuading them that they must give Ear and Way to something else besides, and beyond that: Or else he labours to render it vile and contemptible, by persuading them that it is a dead Letter, which indeed they know not what they say, nor whereof they affirm. For the Scripture is not so dead, but that the Knowledge of it is able to make any Man wise unto Salvation through Faith and Love, which is in Christ Jesus, 2 Tim. 3. 15. And is profitable for Instruction, Reproof, and Correction in Righteousness, that the Man of God may be thoroughly furnished to all good Works, ver. 17.

And where it is said, the Letter killeth, he meaneth the Law, as it is the Ministration of Damnation, or a Covenant of Works, and so indeed it doth kill, and must do so, because it is just, forasmuch as the Party that is under the same, is not able to yield it to a complete and continual Obedience. But yet I will call Peter and Paul to witness, that the Scriptures are of a very glorious Concernment, in as much as in them is held forth to us the Way of Life; and also, in that they do administer good Ground of hope to us, Rom. 15. 4. For whatsoever things were written afore-time, were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scripture might have hope. And again Rom. 16. 25, 26. Now to him that is of power to establish you according to my Gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ; according to the revelation of the Mystery which was kept hid since the World began, but now is made manifest, and by the Scriptures of the Prophets, according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all Nations for the Obedience of Faith. And therefore whosoever they be that slight the Scriptures, they slight that which is no less than the Word of God; and that they who slight that, slight him that spake it; and they that do so, let them look to themselves; for God will be revenged on such. Much more might be said to this thing, but I would not be tedious.

A Word or two more, so I have done with this. Consider the danger of slighting the Words of the Prophets or Apostles, whether they be Correction, Reproof, Admonition, Forewarning, or the blessed Invitations and Promises contained in them.

1. Such Souls do provoke God to Anger, and to execute his Vengeance on them. They refused to hearken, they pulled away their Shoulders, they stopped their Ears, lest they should hear the Law, and they made their Hearts as an Adamant stone, that they might not hear the Law, and the Words that were spoken to them by his Spirit in the former mer Prophets: Therefore came a great Wrath upon them, Zach. 7. 11, 12.

2. God will not regard in their Calamity. Because I called, and ye refused, I stretched out my Hand, and no Man regarded, but set at nought all my Counsels, and would have none of my Reproof. I also will laugh at your Calamities, and mock when your fear cometh. When their fear cometh as Desolation, and their destruction like a Whirlwind. Then shall they call, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me, Prov. 1. 25, 26, 27.

3. God doth commonly give up such Men to Delusions to believe Lies. Because they received not the love of the Truth, that they might be saved, therefore God shall send them strong Delusions, that they should believe a Lye, that they all might be damned, 2 Thess. 2. 11, 12.

4. In a word, they that do continue to reject and slight the Word of God, they are such, for the most part, as are ordained to be damned. Old Eli, his Sons not hearkning to the Voice of their Father, reprovng them for their Sins, but disobeying his Voice, it is said, It was because the Lord would slay them, 1 Sam. 2. 15. Again see in 2 Chron. 25. 15, 16. Amaziab having sinned against the Lord, he sends to him a Prophet to reprove him; but Amaziab says, Forbear, wherefore shouldst thou be smitten? (He did not hearken to the Word of God) Then the Prophet foretore, saying, I know that God hath determined to destroy thee, because thou hast not hearkened to my Counsel. Read therefore, and the Lord give thee Understanding. For a miserable End will those have that go on in sinning against God, rejecting his Word.

Other Things might have been observed from this Verse, which at this time I shall pass by; partly, because the Sum of them hath been touched already, and may be more clearly hinted at in the following Verse; and therefore I shall speak a few Words to the next Verse, and so draw towards a Conclusion.

Verse 31. And he said unto him, if they hear not Moses and the Prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rise from the Dead.

AND he said] That is, and God made answer to the Words spoken in the Verse before, And he said unto him, if they hear not Moses, &c. As if he had said, Moses was a Man of great Renown, a Man of worthy Note, a Man that talketh with God Face to Face, as Man speaketh to his Friend; The Words that Moses spake, were such as I commanded him to speak; Let who will question them, I will own them, credit them, bless them that close in with them, and curse those that reject them.

I my self sent the Prophets, they did not run of their own Heads; I gave them Commission; I thrust them out, and told them what they should say. In a word; they have told the World what my Mind is to do, both to Sinners and to Saints; They have Moses, and the Prophets, let them hear them. Therefore, he that shall reject and turn his back either upon the Threatnings, Counsels, Admonitions, Invitations, Promises, or whatsoever else I have commanded them to speak, as to Salvation and Life, and to Directions therein, shall be sure to have a Share in the many Curses that they have spoken, and the Doctrine that is pronounced by them. Again, If they hear not Moses, and the Prophets, &c. As if he had said, Thou wouldst have me send one from the Dead unto them; what needs that? They have my Mind already, I have declared unto them what I intend to stand to, both for saving them that believe, and damning them that do not. That therefore which I have said, I will make good, whether they hear or forbear. And as for this Desire of yours, you had as good desire me to make a new Bible, and so to revoke my first Sayings by the Mouth of my Prophets. But I am God and not Man, and my Word is immutable, unchangeable, and shall stand as fast as my Decrees can make it; Heaven and Earth shall pass away, but one jot or Tittle of my Word shall not pass. If thou hadst ten thousand Brethren, and every one in danger of losing his Soul, if they did not close in with what is contained and recorded in the Scriptures of Truth, they must even every one of them perish, and be for ever damned in Hell; for the Scriptures cannot be broken. I did not send them so unadvisedly to recall it again by another Consideration. No; For I speak in Righteousness and in Judgment, Isa. 63. 1, 2, 3. and in much Wisdom and Counsel. It being therefore gone out of my Mouth in this manner, It shall not return in vain, until it hath accomplished the thing whereto I have sent it.

But again, Thou supposest that Miracles and Wonders will work on them, which makes thee say, Send one from the Dead. But herein thou art mistaken, for I have proved them with that once and again, by more than one, or two, or three of my Servants. How many Miracles did my Servant Moses work by Commandment from me in the Land of Egypt, at the Red-Sea, and in the Wilderness? Yet they of that Generation were never the sooner converted for that, but notwithstanding rebelled and lusted, and in their Hearts turned back into Egypt, Acts 7. How many Miracles did Samuel, David, Elias, Elisha, Daniel, and and the Prophets, together with my Son, who raised the Dead, cast out Devils, made them to see that were born blind, gave and restored Limbs? Yet for all this, (as I said before) they hated him, they crucified him. I raised him again from the Dead, and he appeared to his Disciples, who were called, and chosen, and faithful, and he gave them Commandment and Commission to go and testify the Truth of this to the World; and to confirm the same, he enabled them to speak with divers Tongues, and to work Miracles most plentifully, yet there was great Persecution raised against them, insomuch that but a few of them died in their Beds. And therefore, though thou thinkest that a Miracle will do so much with the World, yet I say, No: For if they will not believe Moses and the Prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one should rise from the Dead.

From these Words therefore take notice of this Truth; namely, That those who reject and believe not Moses and the Prophets, are a very hard-hearted People, that will not be persuaded though one rise from the Dead.

They that regard not the holy Scriptures, to turn to God, finding them to testify of his Goodness and Mercy, there is but little hopes of their Salvation; For they will not, mark, they will not be persuaded though one should rise from the Dead. This Truth is confirmed by Jesus himself: If you read John 5. where the Lord is speaking of himself, that he is the very Christ; he brings in four or five Witnesses to back what he said. First, John Baptist. 2. The Works that his Father gave him to do. 3. His Father speaking from Heaven. 4. The Testimony of the Scriptures; when all this was done, seeing yet they would not believe, he lays the Fault upon one of these two Things.

1. Their regarding an esteem among Men.

2. Their not believing of the Prophets Writings, even Moses and the rest. For had ye believed Moses (saith he) ye would have believed me. For he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his Writings, how can ye believe my Words. Now, I say, he that shall slight the Scriptures, and the Testimony of the Prophets in them concerning Jesus Christ, must needs be in great danger of losing his Soul, if he abide in this Condition: because he that slights the Testimony, doth also slight the Thing testified of, let him say the contrary never so often. For as Jesus Christ hath here laid down the Reason of Mens not receiving him; so the Apostle in another place lays down the Reason again with an high and mighty aggravation, 1 John 5. 10. saying, He that believeth on the Son of God, hath the Witness in himself: He that believeth on God, hath made him a Liar, because he believeth not the Record, mark, the Record that God gave of his Son. The Record, you will say, what is that? Why even the Testimony that God gave of him by the Mouth of all the holy Prophets since the World began, Acts 3. 20. That is, God sending his holy Spirit into the Hearts of his Servants, the Prophets and Apostles, he, by his Spirit in them, did bear Witness or Record to the Truth of Salvation by his Son Jesus, both before and after his coming. And thus is that place also to be understood, which saith; There are three that bear Record in Earth, the Spirit, the Water, and the Blood. That is, the Spirit in the Apostles, which preached him to the World, as is clear, if you read seriously, 1 Thess. 4. 8. The Apostle speaking of Jesus Christ, and obedience to God through him, saith thus, Now he that despiseth, despiseth not us, but God; But it is you that speak; True, but it is by and through the Spirit, He therefore that despiseth, despiseth not Man, but God, who also hath given us of his Holy Spirit. This is therefore a mighty Confirmation of this Truth, that he that slights the Record or Testimony that God by his Spirit, in his Prophets and Apostles, hath testified unto us, slights the Testimony of the Spirit, who moved them to speak these Things; and if so, then I would fain know, how any Man can be saved by Jesus Christ, that slights the Testimony concerning Christ; yea, the Testimony of his own Spirit, concerning his own self? 'Tis true, Men may pretend to have the Testimony of the Spirit, and from that conceit set a low esteem on the holy Scriptures; but that Spirit that dwelleth in them, and teacheth them so to do, it is no better than the Spirit of Satan, though it calls it self by the Name of the Spirit of Christ. To the Law therefore, and to the Testimony, Try them by that; If they speak not according to the Word, it is because there is no Light in them.

The Apostle Peter when he speaks of the glorious Voice that he had from his Excellent Majesty, saying of Christ, This is my beloved Son, hear him, saith thus to them whom he wrote unto; You have also a more sure Word of Prophecy, (or of the Prophets, for so you may read it) unto which you do well that you take heed. That is, Though we tell you that we had this excellent Testimony from his own Mouth, evidently, yet you have the Prophets; We tell you this, and ye need not doubt of the Truth of it; but if you should, yet you may not, must not, ought not to question them; Search therefore into them, until the Day dawn, and the Day-Star arise in your Hearts; That is, until by the same Spirit that gave forth the Scriptures, you find the Truth confirmed to your Souls, which you have recorded in the Scriptures, That this Word of Prophecy, or of the Prophets, is the Scriptures, read on; For (saith he) knowing knowing this first, that no Prophecy of the Scriptures is of any private Interpretation, &c. 2 Pet. 1. 18, 19, 20. But you will say, What needs all this ado, and why is all this Time and Pains spent in speaking to this, that is surely believed already? This is a thing received by all, that they believe the Scriptures to be the Word of God, that sure Word of Prophecy; and therefore you need not spend your time in proving these Things, and the Truth of them, seeing we grant and confess the Truth of it before you begin to speak your Judgment of them.

Ans. The Truths of God cannot be born witness unto too often; you may as well say, You need not preach Jesus Christ so much, seeing he hath been, and is received for the true Messias already.

2. Though many may suppose that they do believe the Scriptures, yet if they were but well examined, you will find them either by Word of Mouth, or else by Conversation, to deny, reject, and slight the holy Scriptures. 'Tis true, there is a Notional, and Historical Assent in the Head. I say, In the Head of many, or most, to the Truth contained in Scripture: But try them, I say, and you shall find but a little, if any, of the Faith of the Operation of God in the Hearts of poor Men, to believe the Scriptures, and things contained in them. Many, yea, most Men believe the Scriptures, as they believe a Fable, a Story, a Tale, of which there is no certainty! But alas! There are but few do in Deed, and in Truth believe the Scriptures to be the very Word of God.

Obj. But you will say, This seems strange to me.

Ans. And it seems as true to me; and I doubt not but to make it manifest, that there are but few, yea very few, that do effectually, (for that I aim at) believe the Scriptures and the Truths contained in, and spoken of by them. But to make this appear, and that to purpose (if God will) I shall lay you down the several Operations that the Scriptures have on them, who do effectually believe the things contained in them.

1. He that doth effectually believe the Scriptures, hath in the first Place been killed, I say, killed by the Authority of the holy Scriptures; struck stark dead in a spiritual Sense, by the holy Scriptures, being set home by that Spirit, which gave them forth upon the Soul. The Letter killeth; the Letter strikes Men dead, 2 Cor. 2. 6. And this Paul witnessed, and found, before he could say, I believe all that the Prophets have spoken. Where he saith, I was alive without the Law once; That is, in my natural State, before the Law was set on my Heart with Power; But when the Commandment came, Sin revived and I died, Rom. 7. 9. And that Law that was ordained to Life, I found to be un- to Death; For Sin taking Occasion by the Commandment deceived me, and thereby slew me, ver. 10. Now that which is called the Letter in 2 Cor. is called the Law in Rom. 7. which by its Power and Operation, as it is wielded by the Spirit of God, doth in the first Place kill and slay all those that are enabled to believe the Scriptures. I kill, saith God: That is, with my Law. I pierce, I wound, I prick Men into the very Heart, by shewing them their Sins against the Law, Deut. 32. 69. Acts 2. 36, 37. And he that is ignorant of this, is also ignorant of, and doth not really and effectually believe the Scripture.

But you will say, How doth the Law kill and strike dead the poor Creature?

Ans. First, the Letter or Law doth kill thus; It is set home upon the Soul, and discovers to the Soul its Transgressions against the Law; and shews the Soul also, that it cannot compleatly satisfy the Justice of God, for the Breach of his Law. therefore it is condemned, John 3. 19. Mark, He that believeth not, is condemned already; To wit, by the Law, that is, the Law doth condemn him; yea, it hath condemned him already for his Sins against it; as it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all Things that are written in the Book of the Law to do them. Gal. 3. 10. Now all Men as they come into the World are in this Condition, that is, condemned by the Law. Yet not believing their Condemnation, by the Law really, they do not also believe really and effectually the Law that doth condemn them. For as Men have but a Notion of the one, that is, their Condemnation, because of Sins against the Law; so they have but a Notion of the condemning, killing, and destroying Power of the Law: For, as the one is, so in these Things always is the other. There is no Man that doth really believe the Law or Gospel, further than they do feel the Power and Authority of them in their Hearts: Ye err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the Power of God. Now this Letter, or Law, is not to be taken in the largest Sense, but is strictly to be tyed to the Ten Commandments, whose proper Work, is only by shewing the Soul its Sin against the Law, to kill, and there leaves him stark dead, not giving him the least Life, or Support, or Comfort, but leaves the Soul in an helpless and hopeless Condition, as from itself, or any other meer Creature.

'Tis true, The Law hath laid all Men for dead, as they come into the World; but all Men do not see themselves dead, until they see the Law that struck them dead, striking in their Souls, and having struck them that fatal Blow: As a Man that is fast asleep in a House, and that on fire about his Ears, and he not knowing of it, because he is asleep; even so, because poor Souls are asleep in Sin, though the Wrath of God, the Curse of his Law, and the Flames of Hell have beset them round about, yet they do not believe it, because they are asleep in Sin. Now, as he that is awakened and sees this, sees that through this he is a dead Man: Even so they that do see their State by Nature, being such a sad Condition, do also see themselves by that Law to be dead Men naturally.

But now, when didst thou feel the Power of this first Part of the Scripture, the Law, so mighty as to strike thee dead? If not, thou dost not so much as verily believe that Part of the Scripture that doth contain the Law in it, to be the Truth of God. Yet if thou shouldest have felt something, I say, something of the killing Power of the Law of God in thine Heart, this is not an Argument to prove, that thou believest all the Things contained in Scripture, for there is Gospel as well as Law, and therefore I shall speak to that also; that is, whether thou hast felt the Power of the Gospel, as well as something of the Power of the Law?

2. Then thou hast found the Power of the Gospel, and so believed it, thou hast found it thus with thy Soul.

1. Thou hast been shewed by the Word or Truth of the Gospel, in the Light of the Spirit of Christ, that by Nature thou wert without the true Faith of the Son of God in thy Soul: For when He, the Spirit is come, he shall shew Men that they believe not in me, saith Christ, John 16. 9. Mark, though thou hast, as I said before, felt somewhat of the Power of the Law, Letter, or Ten Commandments, yet, as thou hast not been brought to this, to see by the Spirit in the Gospel, that thou art without Faith by Nature, thou hast not yet tasted, much less believed any Part of the Gospel. For the Gospel and the Law are two distinct Covenants. And they that are under the Law may be convinced by it, and so believe the Law or first Covenant, and yet in the mean Time to be a Stranger to the Covenant of Promise, that is the Gospel, and so have no Hope in them, (Ephes. 2. 12.) There is not any Promise that can be savingly believed, until the Soul be by the Gospel converted to Jesus Christ. For though Men do think never so much that they believe the Things or the Word of the Gospel of our Salvation; yet unless they have the Work of Grace in their Souls, they do not, cannot rightly believe the Things contained in the Scriptures.

Again, As the Law killeth those that believe it, even so the Promises contained in the Gospel, do through Faith, administer Comfort to those that believe it aright. My Words (saith Christ) My Words they are Spirit, and they are Life, John 6. 63. As if he had said, the Words contained in the Law as a Covenant of Works, they wound, they kill, they strike dead those that are under them. But as for me, The Words that I speak unto you, they are Spirit, and they are Life. That is, whosoever doth receive them believingly, shall find them full of Operation, to comfort, quicken and revive the Soul. For as I did not come into the World to destroy Mens lives, so the Words that I speak, (as I am sent to preach the Gospel) they have no such tendency unto those that believe them. The Promises that are in the Gospel, oh, how do they comfort them! Such a Promise, and such a Promise, O how sweet is it! How comfortable to those that believe them! Alas! there are many poor Souls that think they believe the Scriptures to be the Word of God, and yet they never enjoyed any thing of the Life and Promises; they come in upon the Heart to quicken, to revive thee, to raise thee from the Sentence of Death that is passed on thee by the Law. And through the Faith that is wrought in thy Soul, by the Operation of God's holy Spirit, (though once killed by the Law or Letter) thou art made alive in the Lord Jesus Christ, who is presented to thy Soul in the Promises.

3. Dost thou in Deed and in Truth, believe the Scriptures to be the Word of God? Then the Things contained in them, especially the Things of the Gospel, are very excellent to thy Soul; as the Birth of Christ, the Death, Resurrection, Intercession and second Coming. O how precious and excellent are they to thy Soul! Inasmuch, that thou regardest nothing in comparison of them? O, it is Christ's Birth, Death, Blood, Resurrection, &c. according to the Scriptures, that thou dost rejoyce in exceedingly, and abundantly desire after! Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom though now ye see him not, yet believing ye rejoyce, with Joy unspeakable, and full of Glory, 1 Cor. 15. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. compared with Phil. 3. 6, 7, 8. 1 Pet. 1. 8.

4. Dost thou believe the Scriptures to be the Word of God? Then thou standest in awe of, and dost much reverence them. Why, they are the Word of God, the true sayings of God; they are the Counsel of God; they are his Promises and his Threatnings. Poor Souls are apt to think, if I could hear God speak to me from Heaven with an audible voice, then sure I should be serious and believe it. But truly, if God should speak to thee from Heaven, except thou wert converted, thou wouldst not regard, nor really believe him. But if thou dost believe the Scriptures, thou seest that they are the Truth as really as if God should speak to thee from Heaven through the Clouds, and therefore never flatter thyself, foolishly thinking, that if it were so and so, then thou couldst believe. I tell thee, saith Christ, If they believe not Moses and the Prophets, neither will they believe though one should rise from the Dead. But,

5. Dost

5. Dost thou believe the Scriptures to be the Word of God? Then through Faith in Christ thou endeavourest to have thy Life squared according to the Scriptures, both in Word and Practice. Nay, I say, thou may'st have, though thou do not believe them all. My meaning is, that if thou believe none but the Ten Commandments, thy Life may be according to them, a legal holy Life; and if thou do believe the Gospel too, then thy Life will be the Faith of our Lord Jesus Christ; that is, either thou wilt live in the blessed and holy Enjoyment of what is testified in the Scripture concerning the glorious Things of the Lord Jesus Christ, or else thou wilt be exceedingly panting after them. For the Scriptures carry such a blessed Beauty in them to that Soul that hath Faith in the Things contained in them, that they do take the Heart, and captivate the Soul of him that believeth them into the love and liking of them, believing all things that are written in the Law and the Prophets, and have hope towards God, that there shall be a Resurrection of the Dead, both of the just and unjust; and herein do I exercise my self, to have always a Conscience void of offence, both towards God and towards Man, Acts 24. 14, 15, 16.

6. He that believes the Scriptures to be the Word of God, if he do but suppose that any one place of Scripture doth exclude him, and shut him out of, and from a share in the Promises contained in them: O it will trouble him, grieve him, perplex him; yea, he will not be satisfied until he be resolved, and the contrary sealed to his Soul, for he knows that the Scriptures are the Word of God, all Truth; and therefore he knows, that if any one Sentence doth exclude or bar him out for want of this, or the other Qualification; he knows also, that not the World alone shuts him out, but he that speaks it, even God himself; and therefore he cannot, will not, dare not be contented until he find his Soul and Scripture together, (with the Things contained therein) to embrace each other, and a sweet correspondency and agreement between them. For you must know, that to him that believes the Scripture aright, the Promises, or Threatnings, are of more power to comfort or cast down, than all the Promises or Threatnings of all the Men in the World. And this was the cause why the Martyrs of Jesus did so flight both the Promises of their Adversaries, when they would have overcome them, with proffering the great Things of this World unto them; and also their Threatnings, when they told them they would rack them, hang them, burn them; Acts 20. 24. None of these things could prevail upon them, or against them; because they did most really believe the Scriptures, and the Things contained in them, as is clearly found, and to be seen in Heb. 11. and also in Mr. Fox's Records of their Brethren.

7. He that believeth the Scriptures to be the Word of God, believeth that Men must be born again, and also be partakers of that Faith which is of the Operation of God (according as he hath read and believed) or else he must and shall be damned. And he that believeth this aright, will not be contented until (according as it is written) he do partake of, and enjoy the New-birth, and until he do find through Grace, that Faith that is wrought by the Operation of God in his Soul. For this is the cause why Men do satisfy themselves with so slender a conceited hope that their State is good (when it is nothing so) namely, because they do not credit the Scripture; for did they, they would look into their own Hearts, and examine seriously whether that Faith, that Hope, that Grace which they think they have, be of that Nature, and wrought by that Spirit and Power which the Scripture speaketh of. I speak this of an effectual believing, without which all other is nothing unto Salvation. Now then, because I would not be tedious, I shall at this time lay down no more discoveries of such an one as doth savingly believe the Scriptures, and the Things contained in them, but shall speak a few words of Examination concerning the Things already mentioned. As.

1. Thou say'st thou dost in Deed and in Truth effectually believe the Scriptures: I ask therefore, wast thou ever killed stark dead by the Law of Works contained in the Scriptures? Killed by the Law or Letter, and made to see thy Sins against it, and left in an helpless Condition by the Law? For, as I said, the proper Work of the Law is to slay the Soul, and to leave it dead in a helpless State. For it doth neither give the Soul any Comfort it self when it comes, nor doth it shew the Soul where Comfort is to be had; and therefore it is called the Ministration of Condemnation, as in 2 Cor. 3. 9. the Ministration of Death, 2 Cor. 3. 7. For though Men may have a Notion of the blessed Word of God, as the Children had, yet before they be converted, it may truly be said of them, Ye err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the Power of God, Mark 12. 24.

2. You say you do believe the Scriptures to be the Word of God. I say again, Examine, wert thou ever quickned from a dead State by the Power of the Spirit of Christ through the other part of the Scripture; That is to say, by the power of God in his Son Jesus Christ, through the Covenant of Promise? I tell thee from the Lord, if thou hast, thou hast felt such a quickning power in the Words of Christ, [Joh. 6.] that thou hast been lifted out of that dead Condition that thou before wert in; and that when thou wast under the Guilt of Sin, the the curse of the Law, and the power of the Devil, and the Justice of the great God, thou hast been enabled by the power of God in Christ revealed to thee by the Spirit, through and by the Scripture, to look Sin, Death, Hell, the Devil, and the Law, and all Things that are at enmity with thee, with boldness and comfort in the Face, through the Blood, Death, Righteousness, Resurrection and Intercession of Christ, made mention of in the Scriptures.

And Thirdly, on this account, O how excellent are the Scriptures to thy Soul? O how much Vertue dost thou see in such a Promise, in such an Invitation! They are so large, as to say, Christ will in no wise cast me out! My Crimson Sins shall be white as Snow. I tell thee Friend, there are some Promises that the Lord hath helped me to lay hold of Jesus Christ through and by, that I would not have out of the Bible, For as much Gold and Silver as can lie between York and London piled up to the Stars; because through them Christ is pleased by his Spirit to convey comfort to my Soul! I say, when the Law curses, when the Devil tempts, when Hell-fire flames in my Conscience, my Sins with the guilt of them tearing of me, then is Christ revealed so sweetly to my poor Soul thro' the Promises, that all is forc'd to fly and leave off to accuse my Soul. So also, when the World frowns, when the Enemies rage and threaten to kill me, then also the precious, the exceeding great and precious Promises do weigh down all, and comfort the Soul against all. This is the effect of believing the Scriptures savingly; for they that do so, have by and through the Scriptures good comfort, and also ground of hope, Rom. 15. 4. believing those things to be its own which the Scriptures hold forth.

4. Examine, Dost thou stand in awe of sinning against God, because he hath in the Scriptures commanded thee to abstain from it? Dost thou give diligence to make thy Calling and Election sure, because God commandeth it in Scripture? Dost thou examine thy self whether thou be in the Faith or no, having a command in Scripture so to do? Or dost thou (notwithstanding what thou readest in the Scripture) follow the World, delight in Sin, neglect coming to Jesus Christ, speak evil of the Saints, slight and make a mock at the Ordinance of God, delight in wicked Company, and the like? Then know, that it is because thou dost not in Deed and in Truth believe the Scriptures effectually. For as I said before, If a Man do believe them, and that savingly, then he stands in awe, he looks to his steps, he turns his Feet from evil, and endeavours to follow that which is good, which God hath commanded in the Scriptures of Truth; yet not from a legal or natural Principle; that is, to seek for Life by doing that good Thing, but knowing that Salvation is already obtained for him by the Blood of that Man Christ Jesus on the Cross, because he believes the Scriptures, therefore (mark I pray) therefore I say, he labours to walk with his God in all well-pleasing and godliness, because the sweet power of the Love of Christ, which he feels in his Soul by the Spirit, according to the Scriptures, constrains him so to do, 2 Cor. 5. 14.

5. Examine again, Dost thou labour after those Qualifications that the Scriptures do describe a Child of God by? That is, Faith, yea the right Faith, the most holy Faith, the Faith of the operation of God? And also dost thou examine whether there is a real growth of Grace in thy Soul, as Love, Zeal, Self-denial, and a seeking by all means to attain (if possible) to the Resurrection of the Dead? That is, not to satisfy thy self until thou be dissolved and rid of this Body of Death, and be transformed into that glory that the Saints should be in after the Resurrection day? And in the mean time dost labour and take all Opportunities to walk as near as may be to the pitch, though thou know thou canst not attain it perfectly? Yet I say, thou dost aim at it, seek after it, press toward it, and to hold on in thy Race; thou shunnest that which may any way hinder thee, and also closest in with what may any way further the same; knowing, that that must be, or desiring that it should be thine eternal frame, and therefore out of love and liking to it thou dost desire and long after it, as being the thing that doth most please thy Soul.

Or how is it with thy Soul? Art thou such an one as regards not these things? But rather busy thy Thoughts about the things here below, following those things that have no scent of Divine Glory upon them? If so, look to thy self, thou art an Unbeliever, and so under the Wrath of God, and wilt for certain fall into the same place of Torment that thy Fellows have fallen into before thee, to the Grief of thy own Soul, and thy everlasting Destruction.

Consider and regard these Things, and lay them to thy Heart before it be too late to recover thy self, by repenting of the one, and desiring to close in with the other. O! I say, regard, regard, for Hell is hot. God's Hand is up, the Law is resolved to discharge against thy Soul! The Judgment-day is at hand, the Graves are ready to fly open, the Trumpet is near the founding, the Sentence will ere long be past, and then you and I cannot call time again.

But again, seeing they are so certain, so sure, so irrecoverable and firm, and seeing the saving Faith of the things contained therein, is to reform the Soul, and bring it over to the things of God, really conforming to the things contained therein, both to the point of Justification, and also an impartial walking, and giving up thy Soul and Body to a Conformity to all the Commands, Counsels, Instructions and Exhortations contained therein. This then will learn us how to judge of those who give up themselves to walk in the Imaginations of their own Hearts, who slight and lay aside the Scriptures, counting them but empty and uncertain things, and will live every Day in open Contradiction to what is contained, commanded, and forbidden therein.

As first, This will shew us that all your Drunkards, Whore-masters, Lyars, Thieves, Swearers, Back-biters, Slanderers, Scoffers at Goodness, &c. I say, we may see by this, that they that live in such things, have not the Faith of these things contained in their Hearts; seeing they delight to practise those things that are forbidden by and in them. And so they continuing living and dying in this State, we may conclude without fear, that these Portions of holy Scripture belong unto them, and shall for certain be fulfilled upon them; He that believeth not, shall be damned, Mark 16. 16. The Unrighteous shall not inherit the Kingdom of God, 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. But the Abominable, the Unbelieving, the Whoremongers, and all Lyars, shall have their part in the Lake that burneth with Fire and Brimstone, Rev. 21. 8. Depart ye cursed into everlasting Fire, prepared for the Devil and his Angels, Matt. 25. 41. Depart, depart from me, for I will not save you. Depart, for my Blood shall not at all wash you. Depart, for you shall not set one Foot into the Kingdom of Heaven.

Depart ye cursed, ye are cursed of God, cursed of his Law, cursed of Me, cursed by the Saints, and cursed by the Angels, cursed all over, nothing but cursed, and therefore depart from me; and whither? Into Everlasting Fire; Fire that will scald, scorch, burn, and flame to purpose; Fire that shall never be quenched, Mark 9. Fire that will last to all Eternity. And must we be all alone? No, you shall have Company, store of Company with you. Namely, all the raging, roaring Devils, together with an innumerable Company of fellow damned Sinners, Men, Women and Children. And if the Scriptures be true, (as they will one Day wonderfully appear to be) then this must and shall be thy Portion if thou live and die in this State, and of all them who continue in Sinning against the Truth contained in the Scriptures.

Secondly, Dost thou slight and scorn the Counsels contained in the Scriptures, and continue in so doing? Then thou art gone.

Thirdly, Dost thou continually neglect to come to Christ, and usest Arguments in thine own Heart to satisfy thy Soul with so doing? Then thou art gone, Luk. 14. 17,

N^o. XXIV. Vol. II.

18. compared with Verse 24, and Heb. 2. 3. How shall we escape if we neglect so great Salvation? How shall we escape, that is, there is no way to escape.

First, Because God hath said we shall not, Heb. 12. 25. See that ye refuse not him that speaketh; for if they escaped not who refused him that spake on Earth (that was Moses) much more shall not we escape if we turn away from him that speaketh from Heaven.

2. Because he hath not only said, they shall not, but also hath bound it with an Oath, saying, So I swear in my Wrath, they shall not enter into my rest, Heb. 3. 11. To whom did he swear that they should not enter into his rest? Answer, to them that believed not; So we see they could not enter in, because of Unbelief, ver. 18, 19.

Secondly, This will teach us what to think and conclude of such, who though they do not so openly discover their Folly by open and gross Sins against the Law, yet will give more heed to their own Spirits, and the movings thereof, though they be neither commanded, nor commended for the same in Scripture; nay, though the Scripture command and commend the contrary, Isa. 8. 20. than they will to the holy and revealed Will of God. I say, such Men are in as bad a State as the other to the full, being disobedient to God's Will revealed in his Word, as well as they, though in a different manner; the one openly transgressing against the plain and well known Truths revealed in it; the other, though more close and hidden, yet secretly rejecting and slighting them, giving more heed to their own Spirits, and the Motion thereof, although not warranted by the Scriptures.

A few Words more, and so I shall conclude.

And first take heed that you content not your self with a bare notion of the Scriptures in your Heads, by which you may go far, even so far as to be able to dispute for the Truth, to preach the Gospel, and labour to vindicate it in opposition to gain-sayers, and yet be found at the left Hand of Christ at the Judgment-day, for as much as thou didst content thy self with a Notion or traditional Knowledge of them.

2. Have a care that thou own the whole Scripture, and not own one part and neglect another, or slight it; as thus: To own the Law, and slight the Gospel; or to think that thou must be saved by thy good Doings and Works; for that is all one as if thou didst thrust Christ away from thee; or else so to own the Gospel, as if by it thou wert exempted from all Obedience to the Ten Commandments, and Conformity to the Law in Life and Conversation; for in so doing thou wilt for certain make sure of Eternal Vengeance.

6 M

Thirdly,

Thirdly, Have a care that thou put not wrong Names on the Things contained in the Scriptures, as to call the Law Christ, and Christ the Law. For some having done so (in my Knowledge) have so darkened to themselves the glorious Truths of the Gospel, that in a very little time they have been resolved to thwart and oppose them, and so have made room in their own Souls for the Devil to inhabit, and obtained a place in Hell for their own Souls to be tormented for ever and ever.

Against this danger therefore in reading and receiving the Testimony of Scripture, learn to distinguish between the Law and the Gospel, and to keep them clear asunder, as to the Salvation of thy Soul: And that thou mayest so do, in the first place beg of God that he would shew thee the nature of the Gospel, and set it home effectually with Life and Power upon thy Soul by Faith. Which is this, That God would shew thee, that as thou being Man, hast sinned against God; so Christ being God-man, hath brought thee again, and with his most precious Blood set thee free from the Bondage thou hast fallen into by thy Sins, and that not upon Condition that thou wilt do thus and thus, this and the other good Work; but rather, that thou being justified freely by mere Grace through the Blood of Jesus, shouldst also receive thy Strength from him who hath bought thee, to walk before him in all well-pleasing, being inabled thereto by virtue of his Spirit, which hath revealed to thy Soul that thou art delivered already from Wrath to come, by the obedience, not of thee, but of another Man, viz. Jesus Christ.

Secondly, Then if the Law thou readest of, tell thee in thy Conscience, thou must do this and the other good Work of the Law, if ever thou wilt be saved: Answer plainly, that for thy part thou art resolved now not to work for Life, but to believe in the Vertue of that Blood shed upon the Cross, upon Mount Calvary, for the Remission of Sins; and yet because Christ hath justified thee freely by his Grace, thou wilt serve him in Holiness and Righteousness all the Days of thy Life, yet not in a legal Spirit, or in a Covenant of Works; but mine obedience (say thou) I will endeavour to have it free, and chearful, out of love to my Lord Jesus.

Thirdly, Have a care thou receive not this Doctrine in the Notion only, lest thou bring a just Damnation upon thy Soul, by professing thy self to be freed by Christ's Blood from the Guilt of Sin, while thou remainest still a Servant to the filth of Sin. For I must tell you, that unless you have the true and saving Work of the Faith and Grace of the Gospel in your Hearts, you will either go on in a legal Holiness, according to the Tenour of the Law; or else through a Notion of the Gospel (the Devil bewitching, and beguiling thy Understanding, Will and Affections,) thou wilt Ranter-like, turn the Grace of God into Wantonness, and bring upon thy Soul double, if not treble Damnation, in that thou couldest not be contented to be Damned for thy Sins against the Law, but also to make ruin sure to thy Soul, thou wouldst dishonour the Gospel, and turn the Grace of God held forth and discovered to Men by that, into Licentiousness.

But that thou mightest be sure to escape these dangerous Rocks on the right Hand, and on the left, see that thy Faith be such as is spoken of in Scripture: and that thou be not satisfied without that, which is a Faith wrought by the mighty Operation of God, revealing Christ to, and in thee, as having wholly freed thee from thy Sins by his most precious Blood. Which Faith, if thou attain unto, will so work in thy Heart, that first thou wilt see the Nature of the Law, and also the Nature of the Gospel, and delight in the Glory of it; and also thou wilt find an engaging of thy Heart and Soul to Jesus Christ, even to the giving up of thy whole Man unto him, to be ruled, and governed by him to his Glory, and thy Comfort, by the Faith of the Lord Jesus.

The HOLY WAR,

MADE BY

SHADDAI upon DIABOLUS, for the Re- gaining the Metropolis of the World.

OR, THE

Losing and Taking again of the Town of Mansoul.

I have used Similitudes, Hof. 12. 10.

To the READER.

TIS strange to me, that they that love to tell Things done of old, yea, and that do excel
Their Equals in Historiologie,
Speak not of Mansoul's Wars, but let them lye Dead, like old Fables, or such worthless things,
That to the Reader no advantage brings:

When Men, let them make what they will their own,
Till they know this, are to themselves unknown.

Of Stories I well know there's divers sorts,
Some foreign, some domestick; and reports
Are thereof made as fancy leads the Writers;
(By Books a Man may guess at the Inditers.)

Some

Some will again of that which never was,
Nor will be, feign, (and that without a cause)

Such matter, raise such Mountains, tell such things

Of Men, of Laws, of Countries, and of Kings:

And in their Story seem to be so sage,
And with such gravity cloath ev'ry Page,
That though their Frontice-piece says all is vain,

Yet to their way Disciples they obtain.

But, Readers, I have somewhat else to do,
Than with vain stories thus to trouble you;
What here I say, some Men do know so well,
They can with tears and joy the story tell.

The Town of Mansoul, is well known to many,

Nor are her troubles doubted of by any
That are acquainted with those Histories
That Mansoul, and her Wars Anatomize.

Then lend thine ear to what I do relate Touching the Town of Mansoul and her state,
How she was lost, took captive, made a Slave;

And how against him set, that should her save.

Yea, how by hostile ways, she did oppose
Her Lord, and with his enemy did close.
For they are true, he that will them deny,
Must needs the best of records vilify.

For my part I (my self) was in the Town,
Both when 'twas set up, and when pulling down,

I saw Diabolus in his possession,
And Mansoul also under his oppression.

Yea, I was there when she own'd him for Lord,

And to him did submit with one accord.

When Mansoul trampled upon things Divine,

And wallowed in filth as doth a Swine:
When she betook herself unto her arms,

Fought her Emanuel, despis'd his charms,
Then I was there, and did rejoice to see
Diabolus and Mansoul so agree.

Let no Men then count me a Fable-maker,
Nor make my name or credit a partaker

Of their derision: what is here in view,
Of mine own knowledge, I dare say is true.

I saw the Princes armed Men come down
By troops, by thousands, to besiege the Town.

I saw the Captains, heard the Trumpets
sound,

And how his forces cover'd all the ground.
Yea, how they set themselves in battle-ray,

I shall remember to my dying Day.

I saw the Colours waving in the wind,
And they within to mischief how combin'd,

To ruin Mansoul, and to make away
Her Primum mobile without delay.

I saw the Mounts cast up against the Town,
And how the slings were plac'd to beat it down.

I heard the stones fly whizzing by mine ears,
(What longer kept in mind than got in fears,)

I heard them fall, and saw what work they made,

And how old Mors did cover with his shade
The face of Mansoul: and I heard her cry, ^{Death.}
Wo worth the Day in dying I shall die.

I saw the battering Rams and how they play'd

To beat open Ear-gate, and I was afraid,
Not only Ear-gate, but the very Town
Would by those battering Rams be beaten down.

I saw the fights, and heard the Captains shout,

And in each battel saw who fac'd about:

I saw who wounded were, and who were ^{Lusts.}
slain;

And who when dead, would come to life
again.

I heard the cries of those that wounded were,
(While others fought like Men bereft of fear)

And while they cry, kill, kill, was in mine ears,

The Gutters ran, not so with blood as tears.
Indeed the Captains did not always fight,

But then they would molest us day and night;

Their cry, up, fall on, let us take the Town,
Kept us from sleeping, or from lying down.

I was there when the Gates were broken
ope,

And saw how Mansoul then was stript of hope.

I saw the Captains march into the Town,
How there they fought, and did their foes cut down.

I heard the Prince bid Boanerges go
Up to the Castle, and there seize his foe,

And saw him and his fellows bring him down
In chains of great contempt quite through the Town.

I saw Emanuel when he possess'd
His Town of Mansoul, and how greatly blest

A Town, his gallant Town of Mansoul was,
When she receiv'd his pardon, liv'd his Laws.

When the Diabolonians were caught,
When try'd, and when to execution brought,

Then I was there; yea, I was standing by
When Mansoul did the rebels crucify.

I also saw Mansoul clad all in white,
And heard her Prince call her his heart's delight.

I saw him put upon her chains of Gold,
And Rings, and Bracelets, goodly to behold.

What shall I say, I heard the Peoples cries.

And saw the Prince wipe tears from Man-soul's eyes.

I heard the groans, and saw the joy of many:
Tell you of all, I neither will, nor can I.

But by what here I say, you well may see That Mansoul's matchless Wars no Fables be.

Mansoul! the desire of both Princes was,
One keep his gain would, t'other gain his loss;

Diabolus would cry the Town is mine,
Emanuel would plead a right Divine

True Christians.

The Scriptures.

His Coun-fels.

Her Soul.

Unto his Mansoul; then to blows they go,
And Mansoul crys, these Wars will me undo.
Mansoul! her Wars seem'd endless in her eyes,

She's lost by one, becomes another's prize.
And he again that lost her last would swear,
Have her I will, or her in pieces tare.

Mansoul, it was the very seat of war,
Wherefore her troubles greater were by far,
Than only where the noise of war is heard,
Or where the shaking of a sword is fear'd,
Or only where small skirmishes are fought,
Or where the fancy fighteth with a thought.

She saw the swords of fighting Men made red,
And heard the cries of those with them
wounded;

Must not her frights then be much more by far,

Than theirs that to such doings strangers are?
Or theirs that bear the beating of a Drum,
But not made fly for fear from house and home?

Mansoul, not only heard the Trumpets
sound,

But saw her Gallants gasping on the ground.
Wherefore we must not think that she could rest

With them, whose greatest earnest is but jest:
Or where the blustering threatening of great Wars

Do end in Parleys, or in wording fars.

Mansoul, her mighty Wars, they did portend

Her weal or wo, and that world without end.

Wherefore she must be more concern'd than they

Whose fears begin, and end the self-same-day,
Or where none other harm doth come to him
That is engag'd, but loss of life or limb,
As all must needs confess that now do dwell
In Universe, and can this story tell.

Count me not then with them that to amaze
The People, set them on the stars to gaze,
Insinuating with much confidence,
That each of them is now the residence
Of some brave Creatures; yea, a world they will

Have in each Star, though it be past their skill

To make it manifest to any Man,
That reason hath, or tell his fingers can.

But I have too long held thee in the Porch,
And kept thee from the Sun-shine with a Torch.

Well, now go forward, step within the door,
And there behold five hundred times much more

Of all sorts of such inward Rarities
As please the mind will, and will feed the Eyes

With those, which if a Christian, thou wilt see

Not small, but things of greatest moment be.

Nor do thou go to work without my Key,
(In mysteries Men soon do lose their way)

And also turn it right if thou wouldst know
My riddle, and wouldst with my heifer plow.

It lies there in the Window, fare thee well, The matgent.

My next may be to ring thy passing-Bell.

AN ADVERTISEMENT to the R E A D E R.

SOME say the Pilgrims Progress is not mine,
Insinuating as if I would shine
In name and fame by the worth of another,
Like some made rich by robbing of their Brother.

Or that so fond I am of being Sire,
I'll father Bastards: or if need require,
I'll tell a lye in Print to get applause.
I scorn it; John such dirt-heap never was,
Since God converted him. Let this suffice
To shew why I my Pilgrim Patronize.

It came from mine own heart, so to my head,

And thence into my fingers trickled;
Then to my Pen, from whence immediately
On Paper I did dribble it daintily.

Manner and matter too was all mine own,
Nor was it unto any mortal known,

'Till I had done it. Nor did any then
By books, by wits, by tongues, or hand, or pen,

Add five words to it, or wrote half a line Thereof: the whole, and ev'ry whit is mine.

Also for This, thine eye is now upon,
The matter in this manner came from none
But the same heart, and head, fingers and pen,

As did the other. Witness all good men;
For none in all the world without a lye,
Can say that this is mine, excepting I.

I write not this of any ostentation,
Nor 'cause I seek of men their commendation;

I do it to keep them from such surmize,
As tempt them will my name to scandalize.
Witness my name, if anagram'd to thee,
The Letters make, Nu hony in a B.

A RELATION OF THE HOLY WAR, &c.

IN my Travels, as I walked through many Regions and Countries, it was my chance to happen into that famous Continent of Universe; a very large and spacious Country it is. It lieth between the two Poles, and just amidst the four points of the Heavens. It is a place well watered, and richly adorned with Hills and Valleys, bravely situate; and for the most part (at least where I was) very fruitful, also well peopled, and a very sweet Air.

The People are not all of one Complexion, nor yet of one Language, Mode, or way of Religion; but differ as much as 'tis said do the Planets themselves. Some are right, and some are wrong, even as it happeneth to be in lesser Regions.

In this Country, as I said, it was my lot to travel, and there travel I did, and that so long, even till I learned much of their mother-tongue, together with the Customs, and manners of them among whom I was. And to speak truth, I was much delighted to see, and hear many things which I saw and heard among them: Yea I had (to be sure) even lived and died a Native among them, (so was I taken with them and their doings) had not my Master sent for me home to his House, there to do business for him and to over-see business done.

Now, there is in this gallant Country of Universe, a fair and delicate Town, a Corporation, called Mansoul: a Town for its Building so curious, for its Situation so commodious, for its Privileges so advantageous; (I mean with reference to its Original) that I may say of it, as was said before, of the Continent in which it is placed, There is not its equal under the whole Heaven.

As to the Situation of this Town, it lieth just between the two Worlds, and the first founder, and builder of it, so far as by the best, and most Authentick records I can gather, was one Shaddai; and he built it for his own delight. He made it the mirror, and glory of all that he made, even the Top-piece beyond any thing else that he did in that Country: yea, so goodly a Town was Mansoul, when first built, that it is said by some, the Gods at the setting up thereof, came down to see it, and sang for joy. And as he made it goodly to behold, so also mighty to have Dominion over all the Country round about. Yea all was commanded to acknowledge Mansoul for their Metropolitan, all was enjoined to do homage to it. Ay, the Town it self had positive Commission, and Power from her King to demand service of all, and also to subdue any, that any ways denied to do it.

There was reared up in the Midst of this Town, a most famous and stately Palace; for Strength, it might be called a Castle; for Pleasantness, a Paradise; for Largeness, a Place so copious as to contain all the World. This Place, the King Shaddai intended but for himself alone, and not another with him: partly because of his own Delights, and partly because he would not that the Terror of Strangers should be upon the Town. This Place Shaddai made also a Garrison of, but committed the Keeping of it, only, to the Men of the Town.

The Wall of the Town was well built, yea so fast and firm was it knit and compact together, that had it not been for the Townsmen themselves, they could not have been shaken, or broken for ever.

For here lay the excellent Wisdom of him that built Mansoul, that the Walls could never be broken down, nor hurt, by the most mighty adverse Potentates, unless the Townsmen gave Consent thereto.

This famous Town of Mansoul had five Gates, in at which to come, out at which to go, and these were made likewise answerable to the Walls, to wit, impregnable: and such as could never be opened nor forced, but by the Will and Leave of those within. The Names of the Gates were these, Ear-gate, Eye-gate, Mouth-gate, Nose-gate, and Feel-gate.

Other Things there were that belonged to the Town of Mansoul, which if you adjoin to these, will yet give farther Demonstration to all, of the Glory and Strength of the Place. It had always a Sufficiency of Provision within its Walls; it had the best, most wholesome, and excellent Law that then was extant in the World. There was not a Rascal, Rogue, or traiterous Person then within its Walls: They were all true Men, and fast joined together; and this you know is a great Matter. And to all all these, it was always (so long as it had the Goodness to keep true to Shaddai the King) his Countenance, his Protection, and it was his Delight, &c.

The Devil. Well, upon a Time there was one Diabolus, a mighty Giant, made an Assault upon this famous Town of Mansoul to take it, and make it his own Habitation. This Giant was King of the Blacks or Negroes, and a most raving Prince he was. We will if you please first discourse of the Original of this Diabolus, and then of his taking of this famous Town of Mansoul.

Sinners the fallen Angels. The Original of Diabolus.

Isa. 14. 12.

This Diabolus is indeed, a great and mighty Prince, and yet both poor and beggerly. As to his Original, he was at first, one of the Servants of King Shaddai, made, and taken, and put by him into most high and mighty Place, yea, was put into such Principalities, as belonged to the best of his Territories and Dominions. This Diabolus was made Son of the Morning, and a brave Place he had of it: It brought him much Glory, and gave him much Brightness, an Income that might have contented his Luciferian Heart, had it not been insatiable, and enlarged as Hell itself.

Well, he seeing himself thus exalted to Greatness and Honour, and raging in his Mind for higher State, and Degree, what doth he, but begins to think with himself, how he might be set up as Lord over all, and have the sole Power under Shaddai. (Now that did the King reserve for his Son, yea, and had already bestowed it upon him) wherefore he first consults with himself what had best to be done, and then breaks his Mind to some other of his Companions, to the which they also agreed. So in fine, they came to this Issue, that they should make an Attempt upon the King's Son to destroy him, that the Inheritance might be theirs. Well, to be short, the Treason (as I said) was concluded, the Time appointed, the Word given, the Rebels rendezvouz'd, and the Assault attempted. Now the King, and his Son being All, and always Eye, could not but discern all Passages in his Dominions; and he having always Love for his Son, as for himself, could not, at what he saw, but be greatly provoked, and offended: wherefore what does he, but takes them in the very Nick, and first Trip that they made toward their Design, convicts them of their Treason, horrid Rebellion, and Conspiracy that they had devised, and now attempted to put into practice; and casts them altogether out of all Place of Trust, Benefit, Honour, and Preferment; this done, he banishes them the Court, turns them down into the horrible Pits, as fast bound in Chains, never more to expect the least Favour from his Hands, but to abide the Judgment that he had appointed, and that for ever, and yet.

Now they being thus cast out of all Place of Trust, Profit, and Honour, and also knowing that they had lost their Princes Favour for ever; being banished his Court, and cast down to the horrible Pits. You may be sure they would now add to their former Pride, what Malice and Rage against Shaddai, and against his Son they could. Wherefore roving, and ranging in much Fury from Place to Place (if perhaps they might find something that was the King's,) to revenge, by spoiling of that themselves on him: At last they happened into this spacious Country of Universe, and steer their Course towards the Town of Mansoul; and considering that that Town was one of the chief Works, and Delights of King Shaddai, what do they, but after Counsel taken, make an Assault upon that. I say they knew that Mansoul belonged unto Shaddai, for they were there when he built it, and beautified it for himself. So when they had found the Place, they shouted horribly for Joy, and roared on it as a Lion upon the Prey: saying, now we have found the Prize, and how to be revenged on King Shaddai for what he hath done to us. So they sat down and called a Council of War, and considered with themselves what Ways and Methods they had best to engage in, for the winning to themselves this famous Town of Mansoul: and these four Things were then propounded to be considered of.

A Council of War held by Diabolus and his Fellows against the Town of Mansoul.

First, Whether they had best, all of them to shew themselves in this Design to the Town of Mansoul.

Proposals.

Secondly, Whether they had best to go and sit down against Mansoul, in their now ragged and beggarly Guise.

Thirdly, Whether they had best shew to Mansoul their Intentions, and what Design they came about, or whether to assault it with words and ways of Deceit.

Fourthly, Whether they had not best, to some of their Companions, to give out private Orders to take the Advantage, if they see one, or more of the principal Townsmen, to shoot them: if thereby they should judge their Cause and Design will the better be promoted.

It was answered to the first of these Proposals, in the Negative, to wit, that it would not be best that all should shew themselves before the Town: because the Appearance of many of them might alarm and fright the Town. Whereas, a few, or but one of them, was not so likely to do it. And to inforce this Advice to take Place, 'twas added further, that if Mansoul was frightened, or did take the Alarm, 'tis impossible, said Diabolus, (for he spake now) that we should take the Town; for that none can enter into it without its own Consent. Let therefore but few, or but one assault Mansoul, and in mine Opinion said Diabolus, let me be he. Wherefore to this they all agreed, and then to the second Proposal they came, namely, whether they had best to go and sit down before Mansoul, soul, in their now ragged and beggarly Guise. To which it was answered also in the Negative, by no Means; and that because, though the Town of Mansoul, had been made to know, and to have to do before now, with Things that are invisible; they did never as yet see any of their fellow Creatures in so sad, and rascally Condition as they. And this was the Advice of that fierce Aleto. Then said Apol'yon, the Advice is pertinent, for even one of us appearing to them as we are now, must needs both beget, and multiply such Thoughts in them, as will both put them into a Consternation of Spirit, and necessitate them to put themselves upon their Guard: And if so, said he, Then, as my Lord Aleto said but now, 'tis in vain for us to think of taking the Town. Then said that mighty

Beelzebub

Giant Beelzebub, the Advice that already is given is safe, for though the Men of Mansoul have seen such Things as we once were, yet hitherto they did never behold such things as we now are. And 'tis best in mine Opinion to come upon them in such a Guise, as is common to, and most familiar among them. To this when they had consented; the next Thing to be considered was, in what Shape, Hue, or Guise, Diabolus had best to shew himself, when he went about to make Mansoul his own. Then one said one Thing, and another the contrary, at last Lucifer answered, that in his Opinion, 'twas best that his Lordship should assume the Body of some of those Creatures, that they of the Town had Dominion over. For quoth he, these are not only familiar to them, but being under them, they will never imagine that an Attempt should by them be made upon the Town; and to blind all, let him assume the Body of one of these Beasts that Mansoul deems to be wiser than any of the rest. This Advice was applauded of all, so it was determined that the Giant Diabolus should assume the Dragon, for that he was in those Days as familiar with the Town of Mansoul as now is the Bird with the Boy. For nothing that was in its primitive State was at all amazing to them. Then they proceeded to the third Thing, which was,

The third Proposal.

3. Whether they had best to shew their Intentions, or the design of his coming to Mansoul, or no? This also was answered in the Negative; because of the weight that was in the former Reasons, to wit, for that Mansoul were a strong People, a strong People in a strong Town, whose Wall and Gates were impregnable, (to say nothing of their Castle) nor can they by any means be won but by their own consent. Besides said Legion, (for he gave answer to this) A discovery of our Intentions, may make them send to their King for Aid, and if that be done, I know, quickly what time of Day 'twill be with us. Therefore let us assault them in all pretended fairness, covering of our Intentions with all manner of Lies, Flatteries, delusive Words; feigning of things that never will be, and promising of that to them, that they shall never find: This is the way to win Mansoul, and to make them of themselves to open their Gates to us; yea, and to desire us too, to come in to them.

And the Reason why I think that this Project will do, is, because the People of Mansoul now, are every one simple and innocent; all honest and true: Nor do they as yet know what it is to be assaulted with Fraud, Guile, and Hypocrisy. They are Strangers to lying and dissembling Lips; wherefore, we cannot, if thus we be disguised, by them at all be discerned, our Lies shall go for true Sayings, and our Dissimulations for upright Dealings. What we promise them, they will in that believe us: especially, if in all our Lies and feigned Words, we pretend great Love to them, and that our Design is only their Advantage, and Honour. Now there was not one bit of a Reply against this, this went as current down, as doth the Water down a steep descent: wherefore they go to consider of the last Proposal, which was,

4. Whether they had not best to give out Orders to some of their Company, to shoot some one or more of the principal of the Townsmen: If they judge that their Cause may be promoted thereby.

The fourth
Proposal.

This was carried in the Affirmative, and the Man that was designed by this Stratagem to be destroyed, was one Mr. Resistance, otherwise called Captain Resistance. And a great Man in Mansoul, this Captain Resistance was; and a Man that the Giant Diabolus, and his band, more feared than they feared the whole Town of Mansoul besides. Now who should be the Actor to do the murder; that was the next, and they appointed one Tisaphane, a Fury of the Lake to do it.

Of Capt.
Resistance

They thus having ended their Council of War, rose up, and assayed to do as they had determined; they marched towards Mansoul, but all in a manner invisible, save one, only one; nor did he approach the Town in his own likeness, but under the shape, and in the Body of the Dragon.

The result of their Council.

So they drew up, and sat down before Ear-gate, so that was the place of Hearing for all without the Town, as Eye-gate was the place of Perspection. So, as I said, he came up with his Train to the Gate, and laid his Ambuscado for Captain Resistance within Bow-shot of the Town. This done, the Giant ascended up close to the Gate, and called to the Town of Mansoul for Audience. Nor took he any with him, but one All-pause, who was his Orator in all difficult Matters. Now, as I said, he being come up to the Gate, (as the manner of those Times was) sounded his Trumpet for Audience. At which the chief of the

Town

The Lords of Mansoul
appeared.

Town of Mansoul, such as my Lord Innocent, my Lord Willbewill, my Lord Mayor, Mr. Recorder, and Captain Resistance came down to the Wall to see who was there, and what was the Matter. And my Lord Willbewill, when he had looked over and saw who stood at the Gate, demanded, what he was, wherefore he was come, and why he roused the Town of Mansoul with so unusual a sound.

Diabolus
his Oration.

Diab. Diabolus then, as if he had been a Lamb, began his Oration, and said, Gentlemen of the famous Town of Mansoul, I am, as you may perceive, no far dweller from you, but near, and one that is bound by the King to do you my Homage, and what Service I can; wherefore that I may be faithful to my self, and to you, I have somewhat of Concern to impart unto you. Wherefore grant me your Audience and hear me patiently. And first, I will assure you, it is not my self but you; not mine, but your Advantage that I seek by what I now do, as will full well be made manifest, by that I have opened my Mind unto you. For Gentlemen, I am (to tell you the Truth) come to shew you how you may obtain great and ample Deliverance, from a bondage that unawares to your selves, you are captivated and enslaved under. At this the Town of Mansoul began to prick up its Ears, and what is it, pray what is it, thought they: and he said, I have somewhat to say to you concerning your King, concerning his Law, and also touching your selves. Touching your King, I know he is great and potent, but yet, all that he hath said to you, is neither true, nor yet for your Advantage. 1. 'Tis not true, for that wherewith he hath hitherto awed you, shall not come to pass, nor be fulfilled, though you do the thing that he hath forbidden. But if there was danger, what a Slavery is it to live always in fear of the greatest of Punishments, for doing so small and trivial a Thing, as eating of a little Fruit is. 2. Touching his Laws, this I say further, they are both unreasonable, intricate and intolerable. Unreasonable as was hinted before, for that the Punishment is not proportioned to the Offence. There is great difference, and disproportion betwixt the Life, and an Apple: yet the one must go for the other by the Law of your Shaddai. But it is also intricate, in that he saith, first, you may eat of all; and yet after, forbids the eating of one. And then in the last place, it must needs be intolerable, for as much as that Fruit which you are forbidden to eat of (if you are forbidden any) is that, and that alone, which is able by your eating, to minister to you, a good, as yet unknown by you. This is manifest by the very Name of the Tree, it is called the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil, and have you that Knowledge as yet? No, no, nor can you conceive how good, how pleasant, and how much to be desired to make one Wise it is, so long as you stand by your King's Commandment. Why

Diabolus
his Subtilty made up of lies.

should you be holden in Ignorance and Blindness? Why should you not be enlarged in Knowledge and Understanding? And now! Ah ye Inhabitants of the famous Town of Mansoul, to speak more particularly to your selves, you are not a free People! You are kept both in Bondage and Slavery, and that by a grievous threat; no Reason being annexed, but so I will have it, so it shall be. And is it not grievous to think on, that that very Thing that you are forbidden to do, might you but do it, would yield you both Wisdom and Honour: For then your Eyes will be opened, and you shall be as Gods. Now since this is thus, quoth he, can you be kept by any Prince in more Slavery, and in greater Bondage than you are under, this Day? You are made Underlings, and are wrapt up in Inconveniencies, as I have well made appear? For what Bondage greater than to be kept in Blindness; will not Reason tell you, that it is better to have Eyes than to be without them; and so to be at Liberty, to be better than to be shut up in a dark and sinking Cave.

And just now while Diabolus was speaking these Words to Mansoul, Tisiphane shot at Captain Resistance, where he stood on the Gate, and mortally wounded him in the Head; so that he to the Amazement of the Townsmen, and the Incouragement of Diabolus, fell down dead quite over the Wall. Now when Captain Resistance was dead (and he was the only Man of War in the Town) poor Mansoul was wholly left naked of Courage, nor had she now any Heart to resist. But this was as the Devil would have it. Then stood forth that He, Mr. Ill-pause, that Diabolus brought with him, who was his Orator, and he addressed himself to speak to the Town of Mansoul: The tenor of whose Speech here follows.

Captain
Resistance

Mr. Ill-pause his Speech to the Town of Man-
soul.

Ill-pause. Gentlemen, quoth he, it is my Master's Happiness, that he has this Day a quiet and teachable Auditory; and it is hoped by us, that we shall prevail with you not to cast off good Advice; my Master has a very great Love for you, and although, as he very well knows, that he runs the hazard of the Anger of King Shaddai, yet love to you will make him do more than that. Nor doth there need that a Word more would be spoken to confirm for Truth what he hath said; there is not a Word but carries in it Self-evidence in its Bowels; the very Name of the Tree may put an end to all Controversy in this Matter. I therefore at this time shall only add this Advice to you, under, and by the leave of my Lord, (and with that he made Diabolus a very low Congee.) Consider his Words, look on the Tree, and the promising Fruit thereof; remember also that yet you know but little, and that this is the way to know more: And if your Reasons be not conquered to accept of such good Council, you are not the Men that I took

you

you to be. But when the Towns-folk saw that the Tree was good for Food, and that it was pleasant to the Eye, and a Tree to be desired to make one Wife, they did as old Ill-pause advised, they took and did eat thereof. Now, this I should have told you before, that even then, when this Ill-pause was making of his Speech to the Townsmen, my Lord Innocency, (whether by a shot from the Camp of the Giant, or from some sinking qualm that suddenly took him, or rather by the stinking Breath of that treacherous Villain old Ill-pause, for so I am most apt to think) sunk down in the place where he stood, nor could he be brought to Life again. Thus these two brave Men died; brave Men I call them, for they were the Beauty and Glory of Mansoul, so long as they lived therein: nor did there now remain any more, a noble Spirit in Mansoul, they all fell down, and yielded Obedience to Diabolus, and became his Slaves and Vassals as you shall hear.

The Town taken,
and how.

Now these being dead, what do the rest of the Towns-folk, but as Men that had found a Fools Paradise, they presently, as afore was hinted, fall to prove the Truth of the Giant's Words; and first they did as Ill-pause had taught them, they looked, they considered, they were taken with the forbidden Fruit, they took thereof, and did eat: and having eaten, they became immediately drunken therewith; so they opened the Gate, both Ear-gate, and Eye-gate, and let in Diabolus with all his bands, quite forgetting their good Shaddai, his Law, and the Judgment that he had annexed with solemn threatening to the breach thereof.

Diabolus, having now obtained Entrance in at the Gates of the Town, marches up to the Middle thereof, to make his Conquest as sure as he could, and finding by this time the Affections of the People warmly inclining to him, he as thinking it was best striking while the Iron is hot, made this further deceiveable Speech unto them, saying, Alas my poor Mansoul! I have done thee indeed this Service, as to promote thee to Honour, and to greaten thy Liberty, but Alas! Alas! Poor Mansoul, thou wantest now one to defend thee, for assure thy self that when Shaddai shall hear what is done, he will come: for sorry will he be that thou hast broken his Bonds, and cast his Cords away from thee. What wilt thou do, wilt thou after Enlargement suffer thy Privileges to be invaded and taken away? Or what wilt resolve with thy self.

He is entertained for their King.

Then they all with one Consent said to this Bramble, do thou Reign over us. So he accepted the Motion, and became the King of the Town of Mansoul. This being done, the next Thing was, to give him possession of the Castle, and so, of the whole Strength of the Town. Wherefore, into the Castle he goes (it was that which Shaddai built in Mansoul for his own delight, and pleasure:) This now was become a Den, and hold for the Giant Diabolus. He is possessed of the Castle and fortified it for himself.

Now having got possession of this stately Palace, or Castle, what doth he, but make it a Garrison for himself, and strengthens and fortifies it with all sorts of Provision against the King Shaddai, or those that should endeavour the regaining of it, to him, and his obedience again.

This done, but not thinking himself yet secure enough, in the next place, he be-thinks himself of new modelling the Town; and so he does, setting up one, and putting down another at pleasure. Wherefore my Lord Mayor, whose Name was my Lord Understanding, and Mr. Recorder, whose Name was Mr. Conscience, those he puts out of Place and Power. He new modelleth the Town.

As for my Lord Mayor, though he was an understanding Man, and one too that had complied with the rest of the Town of Mansoul, in admitting of the Giant into the Town; yet Diabolus thought not fit to let him abide in his former lustre and glory, because he was a seeing Man. Wherefore he darkned it not only by taking from him his Office and Power, but by building of an high and strong Tower, just between the Sun's Reflections, and the Windows of my Lord's Palace: By which means his House and all, and the whole of his Habitation, was made as dark as Darkness it self. And thus being alienated from the Light, he became as one that was born blind. To this his House, my Lord was confined, as to a Prison; nor might he upon his parole go further than within his own bounds. And now had he had an Heart to do for Mansoul: What could he do for it, or wherein could he be profitable to her? So then, so long as Mansoul was under the Power and Government of Diabolus: (And so long it was under him, as it was obedient to him; which was, even until by a War it was rescued out of his Hand.) So long my Lord Mayor was rather an impediment in, than an Advantage to, the famous Town of Mansoul. My Lord Mayor put out of Place. 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. Ephes. 4. 18, 19.

As for Mr. Recorder, before the Town was taken, he was a Man well read in the Laws of his King, and also a Man of Courage and Faithfulness to speak Truth at every occasion: And he had a Tongue as bravely hung, as he had an Head filled with Judgment. Now this Man, Diabolus could by no means abide, because, tho' he gave his consent to his coming into the Town, yet he could not, by all Wiles, Trials, Stratagems, and Devices that he could use, make him wholly his own. True, he was much degenerated from his former King, and also much pleased with many of the Giant's Laws, and Service: but all this would not do for as much as he was not wholly his. He would now and then think upon upon Shaddai, and have dread of his Law upon him, and then he would speak with a Voice, as great against Diabolus, as when a Lion roareth. Yea, and would also at certain Times when his Fits were upon him (for you must know that some times he had terrible Fits) make the whole Town of Mansoul shake with his Voice: and therefore the now King of Mansoul could not abide him.

He is more debauched than before.

Diabolus therefore feared the Recorder more than any that was left alive in the Town of Mansoul, because, as I said, his Words did shake the whole Town; they were like the ratling-thunder, and also like Thunder-claps. Since therefore the Giant could not make him wholly his own, what doth he do but studies all that he could, to debauch the old Gentleman; and by Debauchery, to stupify his Mind, and more harden his Heart in ways of Vanity. And as he attempted, so he accomplished his Design: He debauched the Man, and by little and little, so drew him into Sin and Wickedness, that at last he was not only debauched as at first; and so by consequence defiled, but was almost (at last, I say) past all Conscience of Sin. And this was the farthest Diabolus could go. Wherefore he bethinks him of another Project, and that was to perswade the Men of the Town that Mr. Recorder was mad, and so not to be regarded. And for this he urged his Fits, and said, if he be himself, why doth he not do thus always? But, quoth he, as all mad folks have their Fits, and in them their raving Language; so hath this old and doating Gentleman. Thus by one means or another, he quickly got Mansoul to slight, neglect, and despise whatever Mr. Recorder could say. For besides what already you have heard, Diabolus had a way to make the old Gentleman, when he was merry, unsay and deny what he in his Fits had affirmed. And indeed, this was the next way to make himself ridiculous, and to cause that no Man should regard him. Also now he never spake freely for King Shaddai, but always by force and constraint. Besides, he would at one time be hot against that, at which at another he would hold his peace. So uneven was he now in his doings. Sometimes he would be, as if fast asleep, and again sometimes, as dead even then when the whole Town of Mansoul was in her career after Vanity, and in her dance after the Giant's pipe.

Wherefore, sometimes when Mansoul did use to be frightened with the thundring Voice of the Recorder that was, and when they did tell Diabolus of it, he would answer, that what the old Gentleman said, was neither of love to him, nor pity to them, but of a foolish fondness that he had to be prating: and so would hush, still, and put all to quiet again. And that he might leave no Argument un urged that might tend to make them secure, he said, and said it often; O Mansoul! Consider that notwithstanding the old Gentleman's Rage, and the rattle of his high and thundring Words, you hear nothing of Shaddai himself (when liar and deceiver, that he was, every out-cry of Mr. Recorder against the Sin of Mansoul, was the Voice of God in him to them.) But he goes on and says, You see that he values not the loss, nor rebellion of the Town of Mansoul, nor will he trouble himself with calling of his Town to a reckoning for their giving up themselves to me. He knows that though ye were his, now you are lawfully mine; so leaving us one to another, he now hath shaken his Hands of us.

Satanical
Rhetorick

Moreover O Mansoul! quoth he, Consider how I have served you, even to the utmost of my power; and that with the best that I have, could get, or procure for you in all the World: Besides, I dare say, that the Laws and Customs that you now are under, and by which you do Homage to me, do yield you more Solace and Content, than did the Paradise that at first you possessed. Your Liberty also, as your selves do very well know, has been greatly widened, and enlarged by me; whereas I found you a pen'd up People. I have not laid any restraint upon you; you have no Law, Statute, or Judgment of mine to fright you; I call none of you to account for your doings, except the Madman, you know who I mean: I have granted you to live, each Man like a Prince in his own, even with as little controul from me, as I myself have from you.

Conscience.

And thus would Diabolus hush up, and quiet the Town of Mansoul, when the Recorder that was, did at times molest them: Yea, and with such cursed Orations as these, would set the whole Town in a Rage and Fury against the old Gentleman: Yea, the Rascal crew, at sometimes would be for destroying of him. They have often wished (in my hearing) That he had lived a thousand Miles off from them: his Company, his Words, yea, the Sight of him, and especially when they remembered how in old times he did use to threaten and condemn them; (for all he was now so debauched) did terrify and afflict them sore.

But all wishes were vain, for I do not know how, unless by the Power of Shaddai, and his Wisdom, he was preserved in being amongst them. Besides, his House was as strong as a Castle, and stood hard to a strong hold of the Town: Moreover, if at any time any of the Crew or Rabble attempted to make him away, he could pull up the Sluces, and let in such Floods, as would drown all round about him.

Thoughts,
Of Fears.

But to leave Mr. Recorder, and to come to my Lord Willbewill, another of the Gentry of the famous Town of Mansoul. This

The Will.

Willbewill

Willbewil was as high born, as any Man in Mansoul, and was as much if not more a Freeholder than many of them were: besides, if I remember my tale aright, he had some privilege peculiar to himself in the famous Town of Mansoul: Now together with these, he was a Man of great Strength, Resolution, and Courage, nor in his Occasion could any turn him away. But I say, whether he was proud of his Estate, Privileges, Strength or what, (but sure it was through pride of something) he scorns now to be a Slave in Mansoul; and therefore resolves to bear Office under Diabolus, that he might (such an one as he was) be a petty Ruler and Governour in Mansoul. And (head-strong Man that he was) thus he began betimes; for this Man, when Diabolus did make his Oration at Eargate, was one of the first that was for consenting to his words, and for accepting of his counsel as wholesome, and that was for the opening of the Gate, and for letting him into the Town: wherefore Diabolus had a kindness for him; and therefore he designed for him a Place: And perceiving the Valour and Stoutness of the Man, he coveted to have him for one of his great ones, to act and do in matters of the highest concern.

The Will
takes place under Di- abolus.

So he sent for him, and talked with him of that secret matter that lay in his breast, but there needed not much Perswasion in the Case. For as at first he was willing that Diabolus should be let into the Town; so now he was as willing to serve him there: When the Tyrant therefore perceived the willingness of my Lord to serve him, and that his mind stood bending that way, he forthwith made him the Captain of the Castle, Governour of the Wall, and keeper of the Gates of Mansoul. Yea there was a Clause in his Commission, That nothing without him should be done in all the Town of Mansoul. So that now next to Diabolus himself, who but my Lord Willbewil in all the Town of Mansoul; nor could any thing now be done, but at his Will and Pleasure throughout the Town of Mansoul. He had also one Mr. Mind for his Clerk, a Man to speak on, every way like his Master: For he and his Lord were in principle one, and in practice not far asunder. And now was Mansoul brought under to purpose, and made to fulfil the Lusts of the Will and of the Mind.

But it will not out of my Thoughts, what a desperate one this Willbewil was, when Power was put into his Hand. First, he flatly denied that he owed any suit or service to his former Prince, and Liege-lord. This done, in the next place he took an Oath, and swore fidelity to his great Master Diabolus, and then being stablished and settled in his places, offices, advancements and preferments; oh! you cannot think unless you had seen it, the strange work, that this workman made in the Town of Mansoul.

First, he maligned Mr. Recorder to death, he would neither indure to see him, nor to hear the words of his Mouth; he would shut his Eyes when he saw him, and stop his Ears when he heard him speak: Also he could not endure that so much as a fragment of the Law of Shaddai should be any where seen in the Town. For example, his Clerk Mr. Mind had some old, rent, and torn parchments of the Law of good Shaddai in his House, but when Willbewil saw them, he cast them behind his back. True Mr. Recorder had some of the Laws in his study, but my Lord could by no means come at them: He also thought and said, That the Windows of my old Lord Mayor's House, were always too light for the profit of the Town of Mansoul. The light of a candle he could not indure. Now nothing at all pleased Willbewil, but what pleased Diabolus his Lord.

There was none like him to trumpet about the Streets, the brave Nature, the wise Conduct, and great Glory of the King Diabolus: He would range and rove throughout all the Streets of Mansoul, to cry up his illustrious Lord, and would make himself even as an abject, among the base and Rascal crew, to cry up his valiant Prince. And I say, when, and wheresoever he found these Vassals, he would even make himself as one of them. In all ill courses he would act without bidding, and do mischief without commandment.

The Lord Willbewil also had a Deputy under him, and his name was Mr. Affection; one that was also greatly debauched in his Principles, and answerable thereto in his Life: He was wholly given to the Flesh, and therefore they called him Vile Affection: Now there was he, and one Carnal Lusts, the daughter of Mr. Mind (like to like quoth the Devil to the Collier) that fell in love, and made a match, and were married; and as I take it, they had several Children, as Impudent, Blackmouth and Hate-reproof: these three were black Boys: and besides these they had three Daughters, as Scorn-Truth, and Slight-God, and the Name of the youngest was Revenge; these were all married in the Town, and also begot and yielded bad brats, too many to be here inserted. But to pass by this.

When the Giant had thus ingarrisoned himself in the Town of Mansoul, and had put down and set up whom he thought good: he betakes himself to defacing. Now there was in the Market place in Mansoul, and also upon the Gates of the Castle, an image of the blessed King Shaddai, this image was so exactly ingraven (and it was ingraven in gold) that it did the most resemble Shaddai himself of any thing that then was extant in the World. This he basely

What No-Truth did. basely commanded to be defaced, and it was as basely done by the Hand of Mr. No-Truth. Now you must know, that as Diabolus had commanded, and that by the Hand of Mr. No-Truth the Image of Shaddai was defaced, He likewise gave order that the same Mr. No-Truth should set up in its stead the horrid and formidable Image of Diabolus: to the great contempt of the former King, and debasing of his Town of Mansoul.

All Law books destroyed that could be so. Moreover, Diabolus made havock of all remains of the Laws and Statutes of Shaddai, that could be found in the Town of Mansoul: to wit, such as contained either the Doctrines of Morals, with all Civil and Natural Documents. Also relative severities he sought to extinguish. To be short, there was nothing of the remains of good in Mansoul, which he and Willbewil sought not to destroy: for their design was to turn Mansoul into a brute, and to make it like to the sensual sow: by the Hand of Mr. No-Truth.

1 John 2. When he had destroyed what Law, and good orders he could, then further to effect his design, namely, to alienate Mansoul from Shaddai her King, he commands and they set up his own vain Edicts, Statutes and Commandments, in all places of resort, or concourse in Mansoul, to wit such as gave liberty to the Lusts of the Flesh, the Lusts of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life, which are not of Shaddai, but of the World. He encouraged, countenanced and promoted Lasciviousness, and all Un-godliness there. Yea much more did Diabolus to encourage Wickedness in the Town of Mansoul, he promised them peace, content, joy, and bliss in doing his commands, and that they should never be called to an account for their not doing the contrary. And let this serve to give a taste to them that love to hear tell of what is done beyond their knowledge, afar off in other Countries.

Now Mansoul being wholly at his beck, and brought wholly to his bow: nothing was heard or seen therein but that which tended to set up him.

They have a new Lord Mayor and a new Recorder. But now, he having disabled the Lord Mayor, and Mr. Recorder from bearing of Office in Mansoul: and seeing that the Town, before he came to it, was the most ancient of Corporations in the World; and fearing, if he did not maintain Greatness, they at any time should object that he had done them an injury: Therefore, I say, (that they might see that he did not intend to lessen their Grandeur, or to take from them any of their advantageous Things) he did chuse for them a Lord-mayor, and a Recorder, himself: and such as contented them at the Heart, and such also as pleased him wondrous well.

The new Lord Mayor. The Name of the Mayor that was of Diabolus's making, was, the Lord Lustings.

Vol. II.

A Man that had neither Eyes nor Ears, all that he did whether as a Man, or as an Officer, he did it naturally as doth the Beast: And that which made him yet the more ignoble, though not to Mansoul, yet to them that beheld, and were grieved for its ruins, was, that he never could favour good, but evil.

The Recorder, was one whose Name was Forget-good. And a very sorry fellow he was. He could remember nothing but mischief, and to do it with delight. He was naturally prone to do things that were hurtful; even hurtful to the Town of Mansoul, and to all the dwellers there. These two therefore, by their power, and practice, example and smiles upon evil; did much more Grammer, and settle the common People in hurtful Ways. For who doth not perceive but when those that sit aloft, are vile, and corrupt themselves; they corrupt the whole Region and Country where they are. The new Recorder's Thoughts

Besides these, Diabolus made several Burgeses, and Aldermen in Mansoul: such as out of whom the Town, when it needed, might chuse them Officers, Governours, and Magistrates. And these are the Names of the chief of them, Mr. Incredulity, Mr. Haughty, Mr. Swearing, Mr. Whoreing, Mr. Hard-heart, Mr. Pitiless, Mr. Fury, Mr. No-truth, Mr. Stand-to-lies, Mr. False-Peace, Mr. Drunkenness, Mr. Cheating, Mr. Atheism, Thirteen in all. Mr. Incredulity, is the eldest, and Mr. Atheism the youngest of the Company. He doth make them new Aldermen, and who.

There was also an Election of Common Council-men, and others; as Bailiffs, Sergeants, Constables, and others, but all of them like to those afore-named, being either Fathers, Brothers, Cousins, or Nephews to them. Whose Names, for brevities-sake I omit to mention.

When the Giant had thus far proceeded in his work, in the next place he betook him to build some strong holds in the Town. And he built three that seemed to be impregnable. The first he called the Hold of Defiance, because it was made to command the whole Town, and to keep it from the Knowledge of its ancient King. The second he called Midnight-hold, because it was built on purpose to keep Mansoul from the true knowledge of it self. The third was called Sweet-sin-hold, because by that he fortified Mansoul against all desires of good. The first of these Holds stood close by Eye-gate, that as much as might be, Light might be darkened there. The second was built hard to the Old Castle, to the end that that might be made more blind (if possible.) And the third stood in the Market-place. He buildeth three strong holds, their names, and Governours.

He that Diabolus made Governour over the first of these, was one Spite-God, a most blasphemous Wretch. He came with the whole Rabble of them that came against Mansoul.

Mansoul at first, and was himself one of themselves. He that was made the Governour of Midnight-hold was one Love-no-light. He was also of them that came first against the Town. And he that was made the Governour of the Hold called Sweet-sin Hold, was one whose Name was Love-flesh, he was also a very leud Fellow, but not of that Country where the other are bound. This Fellow could find more Sweetness when he stood sucking of a Lust, than he did in all the Paradise of God.

Diabolus

his Nest.

And now Diabolus thought himself safe; he had taken Mansoul; he had ingarrisoned himself therein; he had put down the old Officers, and had set up new ones; he had defaced the Image of Shaddai, and had set up his own; he had spoiled the old Law-Books, and had promoted his own vain Lies; he had made him new Magistrates, and set up new Aldermen; he had built him new Holds, and had man'd them for himself. And all this he did to make himself secure, in case the good Shaddai, or his Son, should come to make an Incurfion upon him.

Tidings carried to the Court of what had happened to
Mansoul.

Now you may well think, that long before this time, Word by some or other could not but be carried to the good King Shaddai, how his Mansoul in the Continent of Universe was lost; and that the Runagate Giant Diabolus, once one of his Majesty's Servants, had in Rebellion against the King made sure thereof for himself: Yea tidings were carried and brought to the King thereof, and that to a very circumstance.

As first, How Diabolus came upon Mansoul (they being a simple People and innocent) with craft, subtilty, lies and guile; Item, That he had treacherously slain the right noble and valiant Captain, their Captain Resistance, as he stood upon the Gate with the rest of the Townsmen; Item, How my brave Lord Innocent fell down dead (with Grief some say, or with being poisoned with the stinking Breath of one Ill-pause, as say others) at the hearing of his just Lord, and rightful Prince Shaddai so abused by the Mouth of so filthy a Diabolian, as that Varlet Ill-pause was. The Messenger further told, That after this Ill-pause had made a short Oration to the Townsmen, in behalf of Diabolus his Master, the simple Town believing that what was said was true, with one consent did open Ear-gate, the chief Gate of the Corporation, and did let him with his Crew into a Possession of the famous Town of Mansoul. He further shewed how Diabolus had served the Lord Mayor, and Mr. Recorder, to wit, That he had put them from all place of Power and Trust; Item, He shewed also that my Lord Willbewill, was turned a very Rebel and Runagate, and that so was one Mr. Mind his Clerk, and that they two did range and revel it all the Town over, and teach the wicked ones their ways. He said moreover, That this Willbewill was put into great trust. And particularly that Diabolus had put into Willbewill's hand, all the strong Places in Mansoul: And that Mr. Affection was made my Lord Willbewill's Deputy in his most rebellious Affairs. Yea, said the Messenger, this monster, Lord Willbewill, has openly disavowed his King Shaddai, and hath horribly given his Faith and plighted his Troth to Diabolus.

Also said the Messenger, besides all this, the new King or rather rebellious Tyrant, over the once famous, but now perishing Town of Mansoul, has set up a Lord Mayor, and a Recorder of his own. For Mayor he has set up one Mr. Lustings, and for Recorder, Mr. Forget-good: two of the vilest of all the Town of Mansoul. This faithful Messenger also proceeded and told what a sort of new Burgesses, Diabolus had made, also that he had built several strong Forts, Towers, and strong holds in Mansoul. He told too, the which I had almost forgot; how Diabolus had put the Town of Mansoul into Arms, the better to capacitate them on his behalf to make Resistance against Shaddai their King, should he come to reduce them to their former Obedience.

Now this Tidings-teller did not deliver his Relation of things in private, but in open Court, the King and his Son, high Lords, chief Captains, and Nobles, being all there present to hear. But by that they had heard the whole of the Story, it would have amazed one, to have seen, had he been there to behold it, what Sorrow and Grief, and Compunction of Spirit there was among all sorts, to think that famous Mansoul was now taken: only the King, and his Son foresaw all this long before, yea, and sufficiently provided for the relief of Mansoul, though they told not every body thereof: Yet because they also would have a share in condoling of the Misery of Mansoul, therefore they also did, and that at the rate of the highest degree, bewail the losing of Mansoul. The King said plainly, That it grieved him at the Heart, and you may be sure that his Son was not a whit behind him. Thus gave they Conviction to all about them, that they had Love and Compassion for the famous Town of Mansoul. Well, when the King and his Son were retired into the Privy-Chamber, there they again consulted about what they had designed before, to wit, That as Mansoul should in time be suffered to be lost; so as certainly it should be recovered again; recovered I say, in such a way as that both the King and his Son would get themselves eternal Fame and Glory thereby. Wherefore after this consult, the Son of Shaddai (a sweet and comely Person, and one that had always great Affection for those that

This Son of Shaddai, I say, having stricken Hands with his Father, and promised that he would be his Servant to recover his Mansoul again, stood by his Resolution, nor would he repent of the same. The purport of which Agreement was this; To wit, That at a certain time prefixed by both, the King's Son should take a Journey into the Country of Universe, and there in a way of Justice and Equity, by making of amends for the Follies of Mansoul, he should lay a Foundation of her perfect deliverance from Diabolus, and from his Tyranny.

A brave design on foot for the Town of Mansoul.

Moreover Emanuel resolved to make, at a time convenient, a War upon the Giant Diabolus, even while he was possessed of the Town of Mansoul. And that he would fairly by strength of hand drive him out of his hold, his nest, and take it to himself, to be his Habitation.

By the Holy Ghost.

This now being resolved upon, order was given to the Lord Chief Secretary, to draw up a fair Record of what was determined, and to cause that it should be published in all the Corners of the Kingdom of Universe. A short Breviat of the Contents thereof, you may if you please take here as follows.

Let all Men know who are concerned, That the Son of Shaddai the great King, is engaged by Covenant to his Father, to bring his Mansoul to him again; Tea and to put Mansoul too, through the Power of his matchless Love, into a far better, and more happy Condition than 'twas in before it was taken by Diabolus.

The Contents.

These Papers therefore were published in several places, to the no little molestation of the Tyrant Diabolus, for now thought he, I shall be molested, and my Habitation will be taken from me.

But when this matter, I mean this purpose of the King and his Son, did at first take air at Court: who can tell how the high Lords, chief Captains, and noble Princes that were there, were taken with the business. First, they whispered it one to another, and after that it began to ring out throughout the King's Palace, all wondering at the glorious design that between the King and his Son was on foot for the miserable Town of Mansoul. Yea the Courtiers could scarce do any thing, either for the King or Kingdom, but they would mix with the doing thereof, a noise of the Love of the King and his Son, that they had for the Town of Mansoul.

Among the Angels.

Nor could these Lords, high Captains, and Princes, be content to keep this News at Court, yea before the Records thereof were perfected, themselves came down and told it in Universe. At last it came to the Ears, as I said, of Diabolus, to his no little discontent. For you must think it would perplex him to hear of such a design against him: well, but after a few casts in his Mind, he concluded upon these four things.

First, that this News, this good tydings (if possible) should be kept from the Ears of the Town of Mansoul: For, said he, if they shall once come to the knowledge that Shaddai their former King, and Emanuel his Son, are contriving of good for the Town of Mansoul: What can be expected by me, but that Mansoul will make a revolt from under my Hand and Government, and return again to him.

He concluded on several Things.

Now to accomplish this his design, he renews his Flattery with the Lord Willbewill, and also gives him strict charge and command, that he should keep watch by Day, and by Night at all the Gates of the Town, especially Ear-gate and Eye-gate:

First how to keep the News from Mansoul.

For I hear of a design, quoth he, a design to make us all Traytors, and that Mansoul must be reduced to its first bondage again.

I hope they are but flying Stories quoth he, however, let no such News by any means be let into Mansoul, lest the People be deceived thereat: I think my Lord it can be no welcome News to you, I am sure it is none to me. And I think that at this time it should be all our Wisdoms and Care, to hip the head of all such Rumours as shall tend to trouble our People: Wherefore I desire my Lord, that you will in this matter do as I say, let there be strong Guards daily kept at every Gate of the Town.

Stop also and examine, from whence such come that you perceive do from far come hither to trade; nor let them by any means be admitted into Mansoul, unless you shall plainly perceive that they are Favourers of our excellent Government. I command moreover, said Diabolus, that there be spies continually walking up and down the Town of Mansoul, and let them have power to suppress, and destroy, any that they shall perceive to be plotting against us, or that shall prate of what by Shaddai and Emanuel is intended.

This therefore was accordingly done, my Lord Willbewill hearkned to his Lord and Master, went willingly after the commandment, and with all the diligence he could, kept any that would, from going out abroad, or that sought to bring this tydings to Mansoul, from coming into the Town.

Secondly, This done, in the next place, Diabolus, that he might make Mansoul as sure as he could, frames and imposes a new Oath, and horrible Covenant upon the Townsfolk:

A new Oath imposed upon Mansoul.

To wit, That they should never desert him, nor his Government, nor yet betray him, nor seek to alter his Laws: But that they should own, confess, stand by, and acknowledge him for their rightful King, in defiance to any that do or hereafter shall, by any Pretence, Law, or Title whatever, lay claim to the Town of Mansoul. Thinking belike that Shaddai had had had not Power to absolve them from this Covenant with Death, and Agreement with Hell. Nor did the silly Mansoul stick or boggle at all at this most monstrous Ingagement, but as if it had been a Sprat in the Mouth of a Whale, they swallowed it without any chewing. Were they troubled at it? Nay, they rather bragged and boasted of their so brave Fidelity to the Tyrant their pretended King, swearing that they would never be Changlings, nor forsake their Old Lord for a New.

Odious Atheistical

 phlets and filthy Bal-

 Ribaldry.

Thus did Diabolus tye poor Mansoul fast, but Jealousy that never thinks it self strong enough, put him in the next place upon another exploit, which was yet more, if possible, to debauch this Town of Mansoul: Wherefore he caused by the hand of one Mr. Filth, an odious, nasty, lascivious piece of beastliness to be drawn up in Writing, and to be set upon the Castle Gates: Whereby he granted, and gave license to all his true and trusty Sons in Mansoul, to do whatsoever their lustful Appetites prompted them to, and that no Man was to lett, hinder, or controul them, upon pain of incurring the displeasure of their Prince.

Reasons
 of his thus doing.

Now this he did for these Reasons:

1. That the Town of Mansoul might be yet made weaker and weaker, and so more unable, should tidings come, that their Redemption was designed: to believe, hope, or consent to the Truth thereof. For Reason says, The bigger the Sinner, the less grounds of hopes of Mercy.

2. The second Reason was, If perhaps Emanuel the Son of Shaddai their King, by seeing the horrible, and profane doings of the Town of Mansoul, might repent, tho' entred into a Covenant of redeeming them, of pursuing that Covenant of their Redemption; for he knew that Shaddai was holy, and that his Son Emanuel was holy, yea, he knew it by woful Experience: for, for the Iniquity and Sin of Diabolus, was he cast from the highest Orbs. Wherefore what more rational than for him to conclude that thus, for Sin it might fare with Mansoul. But fearing also lest this knot should break, he bethinks himself of another, to wit:

3. Thirdly, To endeavour to possess all Hearts in the Town of Mansoul, that Shaddai was raising of an Army, to come to overthrow, and utterly to destroy this Town of Mansoul, (and this he did to forestal any Tidings that might come to their Ears, of their deliverance) for thought he, if I first brute this, the Tidings that shall come after, will all be swallowed up of this; for what else will Mansoul say, when they shall hear that they must be delivered, but that the true meaning is, Shaddai intends to destroy them: Wherefore, he summons the whole Town into the Market-place, ing and of

and there with deceitful Tongue thus he addressees himself unto them.

Gentlemen, and my very good Friends, You are all as you know my legal Subjects, and Men of the famous Town of Mansoul; you know how from the first Day that I have been with you until now, I have behaved my self among you, and what Liberty, and great Privileges you have enjoyed under my Government, I hope to your Honour, and mine, and also to your Content and Delight; Now my famous Mansoul, a noise of Trouble there is abroad, of Trouble to the Town of Mansoul, sorry I am thereof for your sakes. For I have received but now by the Post from my Lord Lucifer, (and he useth to have good Intelligence) That your old King Shaddai, is raising of an Army to come against you, to destroy you Root and Branch: And this O Mansoul! is now the Cause, that at this time I have called you together; namely, to advise what in this juncture is best to be done; for my part, I am but one, and can with ease skift for my self, did I list to seek my own ease, and to leave my Mansoul in all the danger: But my Heart is so firmly united to you, and so unwilling am I to leave you; that I am willing to stand and fall with you, to the utmost hazard that shall befall me. What say you? O my Mansoul! will you now desert your old Friend; or do you think of standing by me. Then as one Man, with one Mouth, they cried out together, Let him die the Death that will not.

Then said Diabolus again, 'Tis in vain for us to hope for quarter, for this King knows not how to shew it: True perhaps, he at his first sitting down before us, will talk of and pretend to Mercy, that thereby with the more ease, and less trouble, he may again make himself the master of Mansoul; what ever therefore he shall say, believe not one syllable or tittle of it, for all such language is but to overcome us, and to make us while we wallow in our Blood, the Trophies of his merciless victory. My mind is therefore, that we resolve to the last man, to resist him, and not to believe him upon any terms, For in at that door will come our danger. But shall we be flattered out of our lives? I hope you know more of the rudiments of Politicks than to suffer your selves so pitifully to be served.

Very de-
 ceivable
 Language

But suppose he should, if he gets us to yield, save some of our lives, or the lives of some of them that are underlings in Mansoul, what help will that be to you that are the chief of the Town, especially of you whom I have set up, and whose Greatness has been procured by you through your faithful sticking to me? And suppose again, that he should give quarter to every one of you, be sure he will bring you into that bondage under which you were captivated before, or a worse; and then what good will your lives do you? Shall you you with him live in pleasure as you do now? No, no, you must be bound by Laws that will pinch you, and be made to do that which at present is hateful to you; I am for you if you are for me, and it is better to die valiantly, than to live like pitiful Slaves. But I say, the Life of a Slave, will be counted a Life too good for Mansoul now; Blood, Blood, nothing but Blood is in every blast of Shaddai's Trumpet against poor Mansoul now. Pray be concerned, I hear he is coming up, and stand to your Arms, that now while you have any leisure, I may learn you some feats of War. Armour for you I have, and by me it is; Tea, and it is sufficient for Mansoul from top to toe; nor can you be hurt by what his force can do, if you shall keep it well girt and fastned about you: Come therefore to my Castle and welcome, and Harness your selves for the War. There is Helmet, Breast-plate, Sword and Shield, and what not, that will make you fight like Men.

He is afraid of losing of Mansoul.

He puts them upon Arming of themselves.

His Helmet. Deut. 29. 19.

1. My Helmet, otherwise called an head-piece, is hope of doing well at last what Lives soever you live: This is that which they had, who said, That they should have peace tho' they walked in the Wickedness of their Heart, to add Drunkenness to Thirst; A piece of approved Armour this is, and whoever has it and can hold it, so long no Arrow, Dart, Sword or Shield can hurt him; this therefore keep on, and thou wilt keep off many a blow my Mansoul.

His Breast-plate. Rev. 9. 8.

2. My Breast-Plate is a Breast-Plate of Iron; I had it forged in mine own Countrey, and all my Soldiers are armed therewith, in plain Language it is an hard Heart, an Heart as hard an Iron, and as much past feeling as a stone, the which if you get and keep, neither Mercy shall win you, nor Judgment fright you. This therefore is a piece of Armour, most necessary for all to put on that hate Shaddai, and that would fight against him under my Banner.

His Sword. Psal. 57. 4. Psal. 64. 3. Jam. 3.

3. My Sword is a Tongue that is set on Fire of Hell, and that can bend itself to speak evil of Shaddai, his Son, his Ways, and People; Use this, it has been tried a thousand times twice told; whoever hath it, keeps it, and makes that Use of it as I would have him, can never be conquered by mine Enemy.

His Shield. Job 15. 26. Psal. 76. 3. Mar. 6. 5. 6.

4. My Shield is Unbelief, or calling into Question the Truth of the Word, or all the Sayings that speak of the Judgment that Shaddai has appointed for wicked Men, use this Shield; many attempts he has made upon it, and sometimes, 'tis true, it has been bruised; but they that have writ of the Wars of Emanuel against my servants, have testified, that he could do no mighty Work there because of their Unbelief: Now to handle this weapon of mine aright, it is, not to believe things, because they are true, of what sort or by whomsoever asserted; If he speaks of Judgment, care not for it; if he speaks of mercy, care not for it; if he promises, if he swears that he would do to Mansoul, if it turns, no hurt but good; regard not what is said, question the truth of all; for this is to wield the Shield of unbelief aright, and as my servants ought and do: and he that doth otherwise loves me not, nor do I count him but an Enemy to me.

5. Another part or piece, said Diabolus, of mine excellent Armour is, a dumb and prayerless Spirit, a spirit that scorns to cry for mercy; wherefore be you my Mansoul, sure that you make use of this: What! cry for quarter, never do that, if you would be mine; I know you are stout men, and am sure that I have clad you with that which is Armour of proof; wherefore to cry to Shaddai for mercy, let that be far from you: Besides all this, I have a maul, fire-brands, arrows and Death, all good hand-weapons, and such as will do Execution.

After he had thus furnished his Men with Armour and Arms, he addressed himself to them in such like words as these, Remember quoth he, that I am your rightful King, and that you have taken an Oath, and entred into Covenant to be true to me and my cause; I say remember this, and shew your selves stout, and valiant men of Mansoul. Remember also the kindness that I have always shewed to you, and that without your petition; I have granted to you external things, wherefore the Privileges, Grants, Immunities, Profits and Honours wherewith I have indowed you, do call for at your hands, returns of loyalty, my Lion-like men of Mansoul; And when so fit a time to shew it, as when another shall seek to take my dominion over you, into their own hands; One word more and I have done: Can we but stand, and overcome this one shock or brunt, I doubt not but in little time, all the World will be ours; And when that day comes, my true hearts, I will make you Kings, Princes and Captains, and what brave days shall we have then?

He backs all with a speech to them.

Diabolus having thus armed, and fore-armed his Servants and Vassals in Mansoul, against their good and lawful King Shaddai, in the next place he doubleth his Guards, at the Gates of the Town, and he takes himself to the Castle, which was his strong Hold: His Vassals also to shew their wills, and supposed (but ignoble) gallantry, exercise themselves in their Arms every day, and teach one another feats of War; they also defied their Enemies, and sang up the praises of their Tyrant; they threatned also what Men they would be, if ever things should rise so high, as a War between Shaddai and their King.

They of Mansoul shew their loyalty to the Giant.

Now all this time, the good King, the King Shaddai was preparing to send an Army to recover the Town of Mansoul again from under the Tyranny of their pretended King Diabolus: But he thought good at the first, not to send them by the Hand and Conduct of brave Emanuel his Son, but under the Hand of some of his Servants, Shaddai prepareth an Army for the recovery of Mansoul.

The words of God.

The Captains names.

to see first by them the Temper of Mansoul; and whether by them they would be won to the obedience of their King. The Army consisted of above forty thousand, all true Men: For they came from the King's own Court, and were those of his own chusing. They came up to Mansoul under the Conduct of four stout Generals, each Man being a Captain of ten thousand Men, and these are their names, and their signs. The Name of the first was Boanerges. The Name of the second was Captain Conviction. The Name of the third was Captain Judgment; And the Name of the fourth was Captain Execution: These were the Captains that Shaddai sent to regain Mansoul.

These four Captains (as was said) the King thought fit in the first place to send to Mansoul, to make an attempt upon it; for indeed generally in all his Wars he did use to send these four Captains in the Van, for they were very stout and rough-hewn Men, Men that were fit to break the Ice, and to make their way by dint of Sword, and their Men were like themselves.

To each of these Captains the King gave a Banner that it might be displayed, because of the Goodness of his Cause, and because of the right that he had to Mansoul.

Mark 3.
17.

First to Captain Boanerges, for he was the chief, to him, I say, was given ten thousand Men; His Ensign was Mr. Thunder; he bare the black Colours, and his Scutcheon was three burning Thunder Bolts.

Deut. 33.
2.

The second Captain was Captain Conviction, to him was also given ten thousand Men; his Ensign's Name was Mr. Sorrow, he did bear the pale Colours, and his Scutcheon was the Book of the Law wide open, from whence issued a flame of Fire.

Mat. 13.
40, 41.

The third Captain was Captain Judgment, to him was given ten thousand Men: his Ensign's name was Mr. Terror, he bare the red Colours, and his Scutcheon was a burning fiery Furnace.

Mat. 3.
10.

The fourth Captain was Captain Execution; to him was given ten thousand Men: his Ensign was one Mr. Justice, he also bare the red Colours, and his Scutcheon was a fruitless tree with an Ax laying at the root thereof.

These four Captains, as I said, had every one of them under his command ten thousand Men, all of good fidelity to the King, and stout at their military Actions.

Well, the Captains and their forces, their Men and under Officers, being had upon a Day by Shaddai into the Field, and there called all over by their Names, were then and there put into such Harness, as became their degree, and that service that now they were going about for their King. Now when the King had mustered his Forces, (for it is he that mustereth the Host to the Battle) he gave unto the Captains their several Commissions: with charge and commandment in the audience of all the Soldiers, that they should take heed faithfully and courageously to do and execute the same. Their Commissions were for the substance of them the same in form, though as to name, title, place and degree of the Captains there might be some, but very small Variation: And here let me give you an Account of the matter and sum contained in their Commission.

A Commission from the great Shaddai King of Mansoul, to his trusty and noble Captain, the Captain Boanerges, for his making War upon the Town of Mansoul.

Their Commission.

Mat. 10.

Luke 10.

O! Thou Boanerges, one of my stout and thundring Captains, over one ten thousand of my valiant and faithful Servants: Go thou in my name with this thy Force to the miserable Town of Mansoul, and when thou comest thither, offer them first conditions of peace; and command them, that casting off the Yoke and Tyranny of the wicked Diabolus, they return to me their rightful Prince and Lord; command them also that they cleanse themselves from all that is his in the Town of Mansoul, (and look to thy self that thou hast good satisfaction touching the truth of their obedience.) Thus when thou hast commanded them (if they in truth submit thereto) then do thou to the uttermost of thy Power, what in thee lies, to set for me a Garrison in the famous Town of Mansoul; Nor do thou hurt the least Native that moveth or breatheth therein, if they will submit themselves to me, but treat thou such as if they were thy Friend or Brother; for all such I love, and they shall be dear unto me: And tell them that I will take a Time to come unto them, and to let them know that I am merciful.

But if they shall notwithstanding thy Summons, and the producing of thy Authority, resist, stand out against thee, and rebel: then do I command thee to make use of all thy cunning, power, might, and force to bring them under by strength of hand. Farewel.

Thus you see the sum of their Commissions, for as I said before, for the substance of them, they were the same that the rest of the noble Captains had.

Wherefore they having received each Commander his authority, at the Hand of their King: The Day being appointed, and the Place of their Rendezvous prefixed; each Commander appeared in such gallantry, as became his cause and calling. So after a new Entertainment from Shaddai; With flying Colours, they set forward to march

Eph. 2:13, 17. march towards the famous Town of Mansoul, Captain Boanerges led the Van: Captain Conviction and Captain Judgment made up the main Body; and Captain Execution brought up the Rear. They then having a great way to go, (for the Town of Mansoul was far off from the Court of Shaddai) they marched through the Regions and Countries of many People, not hurting, or abusing any, but blessing wherever they came. They also lived upon the King's cost in all the way they went.

Having travelled thus for many Days, at last they came within sight of Mansoul; the which when they saw, the Captains could for their Hearts do no less than for a while bewail the condition of the Town; for they quickly saw how that it was prostrate to the will of Diabolus, and to his ways and designs.

Well, to be short, the Captains came up before the Town, march up to Ear-gate, sit down there (for that was the place of Hearing.) So when they had pitched their Tents, and intrenched themselves, they addressed themselves to make their Assault.

The World are convinced by the well ordered Life of the Godly. Now the Townsfolk at first, beholding so gallant a Company, so bravely accoutred, and so excellently disciplined, Having on their glittering Armour, and displaying of their flying Colours: Could not but come out of their Houses and gaze. But the cunning Fox Diabolus, fearing that the People, after this Sight, should on a sudden summons open the Gates to the Captains, came down with all haste from the Castle, and made them retire into the Body of the Town, who when he had been there, made this lying and deceiveable Speech unto them.

Diabolus alienates their Minds from them. "Gentlemen, quoth he, although you are my trusty and well beloved Friends, yet I cannot but (a little) chide you for your late uncircumspect Action: in going out to gaze on that great and mighty force, that but Yesterday sat down before (and have now intrenched themselves in order to the maintaining of a Siege against the famous) Town of Mansoul. Do you know who they are? whence they come? and what is their purpose in sitting down before the Town of Mansoul? They are they of whom I have told you long ago, that they would come to destroy this Town, and against whom I have been at the cost to arm you with cap-a-pe for your Body, besides great Fortifications for your Mind; Wherefore then did you not rather, even at the first appearance of them, cry out, fire the Beacons, and give the whole Town an Alarm concerning them, that we might all have been in a posture of Defence, and been ready to have received them with the highest acts of defiance, then had you shewed your selves That's false Satan. "Satan greatly afraid of God's Ministers, that they will set Mansoul against him.

"Men to my liking, whereas by what you have done, you have made me half afraid; I say half afraid, that when they and we shall come to push a Pike, I shall find you want Courage to stand it out any longer. Wherefore have I commanded a Watch, and that you should double your Guards at the Gates? Wherefore have I endeavoured to make you as hard as Iron, and your Hearts as a piece of the nether Millstone? Was it think you, that you might shew yourselves Women, and that you might go out like a Company of Innocents, to gaze on your mortal foes! Fy, fy, put your selves into a posture of Defence, beat up the Drum, gather together in warlike manner, that our Foes may know that, before they shall conquer this Corporation, there are valiant Men in the Town of Mansoul.

"I will leave off now to chide, and will not further rebuke you; but I charge you, that hence forwards, you let me see no more such Actions. Let not hence forward a man of you, without Order first obtained from me, so much as shew his Head over the Wall of the Town of Mansoul: You have now heard me, do as I have commanded, and you shall cause me that I dwell securely with you, and that I take care as for my self, so for your safety and honour also." Farewel.

Now were the Townsfolk strangely altered; they were as Men stricken with a panick Fear; they ran to and fro through the Streets of the Town of Mansoul, crying out, help, help. The Men that turn the World upside down are come hither also; not could any of them be quiet after, but still as Men bereft of wit, they cried out, The destroyers of our Peace and People are come: This went down with Diabolus. Ay! quoth he to himself, "This I like well, now it is as I would have it, now you shew your Obedience to your Prince; hold you but here, and then let them take the Town if they can."

Well, before the King's Forces had sat before Mansoul three Days, Captain Boanerges commanded his Trumpeter to go down to Ear-gate, and there in the Name of the great Shaddai to summons Mansoul to give Audience to the Message that he in his Master's Name was to them commanded to deliver. So the Trumpeter, whose Name was, Take heed what you hear, went up as he was commanded to Ear-gate, and there sounded his Trumpet for a Hearing; but there was none that appeared, that gave answer or regard; For so had Diabolus commanded. So the Trumpeter returned to his Captain, and told him what he had done, and also how he had sped. Whereat the Captain was grieved, but bid the Trumpeter go to his Tent.

Again

A second summons repulsed.

Again Captain Boanerges sendeth his Trumpeter to Ear-gate, to sound as before for an Hearing; But they again kept close, came not out, nor would they give him an answer, so observant were they of the Command of Diabolus their King.

A Council of War.

Then the Captains, and other Field-Officers, called a Council of War to consider what further was to be done for the gaining of the Town of Mansoul, and after some close and thorough debate upon the contents of their Commissions; they concluded yet to give to the Town by the Hand of the fore-named Trumpeter, another Summons to hear; but if that shall be refused, said they, and that the Town shall stand it out still: Then they determined, and bid the Trumpeter tell them so, that they would endeavour, by what means they could, to compel them by force to the obedience of their King.

A third
Summons.

So Captain Boanerges commanded his Trumpeter to go up to Ear-gate again, and in the Name of the great King Shaddai to give it a very loud Summons to come down without delay to Ear-gate, there to give Audience to the King's most noble Captains. So the Trumpeter went, and did as he was commanded; he went up to Ear-gate, and sounded his Trumpet, and gave a third Summons to Mansoul: He said moreover, That if this they should still refuse to do, the Captains of his Prince would with Might come down upon them, and endeavour to reduce them to their obedience by force.

Isa. 58. 1.

The Lord
Willbewill
his Speech to the Trumpeter.

Then stood up my Lord Willbewill, who was the Governour of the Town: (this Willbewill was that Apostate of whom mention was made before) and the Keeper of the Gates of Mansoul. He therefore with big and ruffling Words demanded of the Trumpeter who he was? whence he came? and what was the cause of his making so hideous a noise at the Gate, and speaking such insufferable Words against the Town of Mansoul.

The Trumpeter.

The Trumpeter answered, 'I am Servant to the most noble Captain, Captain Boanerges, General of the Forces of the great King Shaddai, against whom both thy self with the whole Town of Mansoul have rebelled, and lift up the Heel; and my Master the Captain hath a special Message to this Town, and to thee as a Member thereof: The which if you of Mansoul shall peaceably hear, so; and if not, you must take what follows.'

Willbewill

Then said the Lord Willbewill, 'I will carry thy Words to my Lord, and will know what he will say.'

The Trumpeter.

But the Trumpeter soon replied, saying, 'Our Message is, not to the Giant Diabolus, but to the miserable Town of Mansoul: Nor shall we at all regard what answer by him is made; nor yet by any for him. We are sent to this Town to recover it from under his cruel Tyranny, and to persuade it to submit, as in former times it did, to the most excellent King Shaddai.'

Then said the Lord Willbewill, 'I will do your Errand to the Town.'

The Trumpeter then replied, 'Sir, do not deceive us, lest in so doing, you deceive your selves much more.' He added moreover, 'For we are resolved, if in peaceable manner you do not submit yourselves; then to make a War upon you, and to bring you under by force. And of the truth of what I now say, this shall be a Sign unto you, you shall see the black Flag with its hot-burning thunderbolts set upon the Mount to Morrow, as a token of defiance against your Prince, and of our Resolutions to reduce you to your Lord, and rightful King.'

So the said Lord Willbewill returned from off the Wall, and the Trumpeter came into the Camp. When the Trumpeter was come into the Camp, the Captains and Officers of the mighty King Shaddai, came together to know, if he had obtained a Hearing, and what was the effect of his Errand: So the Trumpeter told, saying, 'When I had sounded my Trumpet, and had called aloud to the Town for a Hearing: My Lord Willbewill the Governour of the Town, and he that hath charge of the Gates came up, when he heard me sound, and looking over the Wall, he asked me what I was? whence I came? and what was the cause of my making this noise? so I told him my Errand, and by whose Authority I brought it. Then, said he, I will tell it to the Governour and to Mansoul: And then I returned to my Lords.'

Then said the brave Boanerges, 'Let us yet for a while, lie still in our Trenches, and see what these Rebels will do.' Now when the Time drew nigh that Audience by Mansoul was to be given to the brave Boanerges and his Companions: It was commanded that all the Men of War throughout the whole Camp of Shaddai, should as one Man stand to their Arms, and make themselves ready, if the Town of Mansoul shall hear, to receive it forthwith to Mercy; but if not, to force a Subjection. So the Day being come, the Trumpeters sounded, and that throughout the whole Camp, that the Men of War might be in a Readiness for that, which then should be the Work of the Day. But when they that were in the Town of Mansoul, heard the Sound of the Trumpets throughout the Camp of Shaddai, and thinking no other, but that it must be in order to storm the Corporation; they at first were put to great Consternation of Spirit, but after they were a little settled again, they also made what Preparation they could for a War, if they did storm; else to secure themselves.

Well, when the utmost Time was come, Boanerges was resolved to hear their Answer; wherefore he sent out his Trumpeter again, to summons Mansoul to a Hearing of the Message that they had brought from Shaddai. So he went and founded, and the Townsmen came up, but made Ear-gate as sure as they could. Now when they were come up to the Top of the Wall, Captain Boanerges desired to see the Lord Mayor, but my Lord Incredulity was then Lord Mayor, for he came in the room of my Lord Lustings. So Incredulity he came up and shewed himself over the Wall; but when the Captain Boanerges had set his Eyes upon him, he cried out aloud, This is not he, where is my Lord Understanding, the ancient Lord Mayor of the Town of Mansoul, for to him I would deliver my message?

Then said the Giant, (for Diabolus was also come down) to the Captain; Mr. Captain, You have by your Boldness given to Mansoul at least four Summons to subject herself to your King: By whose Authority I know not; nor will I dispute that now. I ask therefore what is the Reason of all this Ado, or what would you be at if you knew yourselves?

Then Captain Boanerges, whose was the black Colours, and whose Scutcheon was the Three burning Thunder-bolts, (taking no Notice of the Giant or of his Speech) thus addressed himself to the Town of Mansoul, 'Be it known unto you, Oh unhappy and rebellious Mansoul! That the most gracious King, the great King Shaddai my Master, hath sent me unto you with Commission (and so he shewed to the Town his Broad Seal) to reduce you to his Obedience. And he hath commanded me, in Case you yield upon my Summons, to carry it to you as if you were my Friends, or Brother; but he also hath bid, that if after Summons to submit, you still stand out and rebel, we should endeavour to take you by Force.

Then stood forth Captain Conviction, and said, (his was the pale Colours, and for a Scutcheon he had the Book of the Law wide open &c.) 'Hear O Mansoul! Thou, O, Mansoul, wast once famous for Innocency, but now thou art degenerated into Lies and Deceit: Thou hast heard what my Brother, the Captain Boanerges hath said, and it is your Wisdom, and will be your Happiness to stoop to, and accept of Conditions of Peace and Mercy when offered; specially when offered by one, against whom thou hast rebelled, and one who is of Power to tear thee in Pieces, for so is Shaddai our King, nor when he is angry, can any Thing stand before him. If you say you have not sinned, or acted Rebellion against our King, the whole of your Doings since the Day that you cast off his Service (and there was the Beginning of your Sin) will sufficiently testify against you: what else means your hearkening to the Tyrant, and your receiving him for your King? What means else your rejecting of the Laws of Shaddai, and your obeying of Diabolus? yea, what means this your taking up of Arms against, and the shutting of your Gates upon us, the faithful Servants of your King? Be ruled then, and accept of my Brother's Invitation, and overstand not the Time of Mercy, but agree with thine Adversary quickly. Ah, Mansoul, suffer not thyself to be kept from Mercy, and to be run into a thousand Miseries, by the flattering Wiles of Diabolus: Perhaps that Piece of Deceit may attempt to make you believe that we seek our own Profit in this our Service; but know 'tis Obedience to our King, and Love to your Happiness, that is the Cause of this Undertaking of ours.

Again, I say to thee O Mansoul, consider if it be not amazing Grace that Shaddai should so humble himself as he doth, now he by us reasons with you, in a Way of Intreaty and sweet Persuasions, that you would subject yourselves to him. Has he that Need of you, that we are sure you have of him? No, no, but he is merciful, and will not that Mansoul should die, but turn to him and live.

Then stood forth Captain Judgment, whose was the red Colours, and for a Scutcheon he had the burning fiery Furnace, and he said: 'O ye the Inhabitants of the Town of Mansoul! that have lived so long in Rebellion, and Acts of Treason against the King Shaddai: Know that we come not to Day to this Place, in this Manner, with our Message of our own Minds, or to revenge our own Quarrel; it is the King my Master that hath sent us to reduce you to your Obedience to him, the which if you refuse, in a peaceable Way to yield, we have Commission to compel you thereto. And never think of yourselves, nor yet suffer the Tyrant Diabolus to persuade you to think, that our King, by his Power is not able to bring you down, and to lay you under his Feet, for he is the Former of all Things, and if he touches the Mountains they smook. Nor will the Gate of the King's Clemency stand always open, for the Day that shall burn like an Oven is before him, yea it hasteth greatly, it slumbreth not.

'O Mansoul! is it little in thine Eyes, that our King doth offer thee Mercy, and that after so many Provocations? Yea, he still holdeth out his Golden Scepter to thee, and will not yet suffer his Gate to be shut against thee, wilt thou provoke him to do it? If so, consider of what I say; To thee it is opened no more for ever. If thou sayest thou shalt not see him, yet Judgment is before him; therefore trust

'beware, lest he take thee away with his
'Stroke; then a great Ransom cannot deli'ver thee. Will he esteem thy Riches? No,
'not Gold, nor all the Forces of Strength.
'He hath prepared his Throne for Judgment,
'for he will come with Fire, and with his
'Chariots like a Whirl-wind, to render his 'Anger with Fury, and his Rebukes with 'Flames of Fire. Therefore O Mansoul
'take Heed, lest after thou hast fulfilled the 'Judgment of the Wicked, Justice and 'Judgment should take hold of thee.' Now while the Captain Judgment was making of this Oration to the Town of Mansoul, it was observed by some that Diabolus trembled: But he proceeded in his Parable, and said, 'O thou woful Town of Mansoul!
'wilt thou not yet set open thy Gate to 'receive us, the Deputies of thy King,
'and those that would rejoice to see thee
'live? Can thine Heart endure, or can 'thy Hands be strong in the Day that he 'shall deal in Judgment with thee? I say,
'canst thou endure to be forced to drink

Speech of Execution.

Then stood forth the fourth Captain,
the noble Captain Execution, and said: 'O 'Town of Mansoul! once famous, but 'now like the fruitless Bough; once the 'Delight of the high ones, but now a Den
'for Diabolus: Harken also to me, and 'to the Words that I shall speak to thee in 'the Name of the great Shaddai. Be'hold the Axe is laid to the Root of the 'Trees, every Tree therefore that bringeth
'not forth good Fruit, is hewn down, and
'cast into the Fire.

'Thou O Town of Mansoul! hast hi'therto been this fruitless Tree, thou bear-
'est naught but Thorns and Briars. Thy 'evil Fruit bespeaks thee not to be a 'good Tree: Thy Grapes are Grapes of 'Gall, thy Clusters are bitter. Thou hast
'rebelled against thy King, and lo we, the 'Power and Force of Shaddai, are the 'Axe that is laid to thy Roots; What
'saist thou, wilt thou turn? I say again,
'tell me before the first Blow is given, wilt 'thou turn? Our Axe must first be laid to 'thy Root, before it be laid at thy Root;
'it must first be laid to thy Root in a 'Way of Threatning, before it is laid at thy 'Root by Way of Execution; and between 'these two is required thy Repentance,
'and this is all the Time that thou hast.
'What wilt thou do? wilt thou turn? or 'shall I smite? If I fetch my Blow Man-
'soul, down you go: For I have Commis'sion to lay my Axe at, as well as to thy
'Roots, nor will any Thing, but yielding
'to our King, prevent doing of Execution.

and cast into the Fire and burned?

'O Mansoul! Patience and Forbearance
'do not act for ever; a Year or two, or 'three they may; but if thou provoke by
'a three Years Rebellion, and thou hast al'ready done more than this, Then what 'follows, but cut it down, nay after, that 'thou shalt cut it down. And dost thou
'think that these are but Threatnings, or
'that our King has not Power to execute
'his Words? O Mansoul! thou wilt find 'that in the Words of our King, when 'they are by Sinners made little or light
'of, there is not only Threatning, but 'burning Coals of Fire.

Luke 13.

'Thou hast been a Cumber Ground long 'already, and wilt thou continue so still?
'thy Sin has brought this Army to thy 'Walls, and shall it bring it in Judgment
'to do Execution into thy Town? Thou
'hast heard what the Captains have said,
'but as yet thou shuttest thy Gates, speak 'out Mansoul, wilt thou do so still? or
'wilt thou accept of Conditions of Peace?

These brave Speeches of these four noble Captains, the Town of Mansoul refused to hear, yet a Sound thereof did beat against Ear-gate, though the Force thereof could not break it open. In fine the Town desired a Time to prepare their Answer to these Demands. The Captains then told them, 'That if they would throw out to 'them one Ill-pause, that was in the Town,
'that they might reward him according to 'his Works, then they would give them
'Time to consider; but if they would not 'cast him to them over the Wall of Man-
'soul, then they would give them none; for said they, 'We know that so long as 'Ill-pause draws Breath in Mansoul, all
'good Consideration will be confounded,
'and nothing but Mischief will come
'thereon.

Then Diabolus, who was there present, being loth to loose his Ill-pause, because he was his Orator (and yet be sure he had, could the Captains have laid their Fingers on him) was resolved at this Instant to give them Answer by himself, but then changing his Mind, he commanded the then Lord Mayor, the Lord Incredulity to do it; saying, 'My Lord do you give these 'Runagates an Answer, and speak out that
'Mansoul may hear and understand you.

So Incredulity at Diabolus's Command began and said: 'Gentlemen, you have 'here, as we do behold, to the Disturbance
'of our Prince, and the Molestation of 'the Town of Mansoul, camped against 'it: but from whence you come, we will 'not know, and what you are, we will 'not believe. Indeed you tell us in your
'terrible Speech, that you have this Au'thority from Shaddai, but by what Right
'he commands you to do it, of that we 'shall yet be ignorant.

Diabolus

them and sets Incre-duly to them.

'You have also by the Authority aforesaid,

' said, Summoned this Town to desert her Lord, and for Protection, to yield up herself to the great Shaddai your King: flatteringly telling her, that if she will do it, he will pass by, and not charge her with her past Offences.

' Further, You have also to the Terror of the Town of Mansoul, threatned with great and sore Destructions to punish this Corporation, if she consents not to do as your Wills would have her.

The true picture of unbelief.

' Now Captains, from whence soever you come, and though your designs be never so right; yet know ye, that neither my Lord Diabolus, nor I his servant Incredulity, nor yet our brave Mansoul, doth regard either your persons, message, or the King that you say hath sent you: His Power, his Greatness, his Vengeance we fear not; nor will we yield at all to your Summons.

' As for the War that you threaten to make upon us, we must therein defend our selves as well as we can: and know ye, that we are not without wherewithal to bid defiance to you. And in short, for I will not be tedious: I tell you that we take you to be some Vagabond Runagate Crew, that having shaken off all obedience to your King, have gotten together in tumultuous manner, and are ranging from place to place to see, if, through the Flatteries you are skilled to make, on the one side, and threats wherewith you think to fright, on the other; to make some silly Town, City, or Country, to desert their place and leave it to you: But Mansoul is none of them.

' To conclude, we dread you not, we fear you not, nor will we obey your summons: Our gates we keep shut upon you, our place we will keep you out of: Nor will we long thus suffer you to sit down before us. Our People must live in quiet: your appearance doth disturb them: wherefore arise with Bag and Baggage, and be gone, or we will let fly from the * Walls against you.

Luke 11. 21. * Fleth.

This Oration made by Old Incredulity, was seconded by desperate Willbewill, in words to this effect. ' Gentlemen, we have heard your demands, and the noise of your threats, and have heard the sound of your summons, but we fear not your force, we regard not your threats, but will still abide as you found us. And we command you, that in three Days time you cease to appear in these parts, or you shall know, what it is, once to dare offer to rouse the Lion Diabolus, when asleep in his Town of Mansoul.

The Recorder whose name was Forget-good, he also added as followeth. ' Gentlemen, My Lords, as you see, have with mild and gentle words, answered your rough and angry speeches; they have moreover, in my hearing, given you leave quietly to depart as you came. Wherefore take their Kindness and be gone, we might have come out with force upon you, and have caused you to feel the dint of our Swords; but as we love ease and quiet our selves, so we love not to hurt or molest others.

Then did the Town of Mansoul shout for Joy, as if by Diabolus and his Crew some great advantage had been gotten of the Captains. They also rang the Bells, and made merry, and danced upon the Walls.

The Town resolved to withstand the Captains.

Diabolus also returned to the Castle, and the Lord Mayor and Recorder to their Place: But the Lord Willbewill took special care that the Gates should be secured with double guards, double bolts, and double locks and bars. And that Ear-gate (especially) might the better be looked to, for that was the Gate in at which the King's forces fought most to enter; The Lord Willbewill made one old Mr. Prejudice (an angry and ill-conditioned fellow) Captain of the Ward at that Gate, and put under his power sixty Men, called Deaf-men: Men advantageous for that service, for as much as they mattered no words of the Captains, nor of their Soldiers.

The band of Deaf-men set to keep Ear-gate.

Now when the Captains saw the answer of the great Ones, and that they could not get an hearing from the old Natives of the Town, and that Mansoul was resolved to give the King's Army battel: they prepared themselves to receive them, and to try it out by the power of the Arm. And first they made their force more formidable against Ear-gate. For they knew that unless they could penetrate that, no good could be done upon the Town. This done, they put the rest of their Men in their places. After which they gave out the Word, which was, ye must be born again. Then they sounded the Trumpet, then they in the Town made them answer with shout against shout, charge against charge, and so the Battel began. Now they in the Town had planted upon the Tower over Eargate, two great Guns, the one called High-mind, and the other Heady.

The Captains resolved to give them Battle.

Unto these two Guns they trusted much, they were cast in the Castle by Diabolus's founder, whose name was Mr. Puff-up, and mischievous pieces they were. But so vigilant and watchful, when the Captains saw them, were they, that though sometimes their shot would go by their Ears with a Whizz, yet they did them no harm. By these two Guns the Towns-folk made no question but greatly to annoy the Camp of Shaddai, and well enough to secure the Gate, but they had not much cause to boast of what Execution they did, as by what follows will be gathered.

The Battel begun.

Two guns planted upon Ear-gate.

They from the Camp also, did as stoutly, and with as much of that as may (in truth) be called Valour, let fly as fast at the Town, and at Ear-gate: For they saw that unless they could break open Ear-gate, it would be but in vain to batter the Wall. Now the King's Captains had brought with them several Slings, and two or three Battering-Rams; with their Slings therefore they battered the Houses and People of the Town, and with their Rams they sought to break Ear-gate open.

The Camp and the Town had several skirmishes, and brisk encounters, while the Captains with their Engines made many brave attempts to break open or beat down the Tower that was over Ear-gate, and at the said Gate to make their entrance: But Mansoul stood it out so lustily, through the Rage of Diabolus, the Valour of the Lord Willberwill, and the Conduct of old Incredulity the Mayor, and Mr. Forgetgood, the Recorder, That the Charge and Expence of that Summers Wars, (on the King's Side) seemed to be almost quite lost, and the Advantage to return to Mansoul: But when the Captains saw how it was, they made a fair Retreat, and intrenched themselves in their Winter Quarters. Now in this War, you must needs think there was much Loss on both Sides, of which be pleased to accept of this brief Account following.

An Account of this War with reference to the loss on both Sides

The King's Captains when they marched from the Court to come up against Mansoul to War; as they came crossing over the Country, they happened to light upon three young Fellows that had a mind to go for Soldiers; proper Men they were, and Men of Courage, (and Skill) to appearance. Their Names were Mr. Tradition, Mr. Human-wisdom, and Mr. Man's Invention. So they came up to the Captains, and proffered their Service to Shaddai. The Captains then told them of their design, and bid them not to be rash in their Offers: But the young Men told them, they had considered the thing before, and that hearing they were upon their march for such a design, came hither on purpose to meet them, that they might be listed under their Excellencies. Then Captain Boanerges, for that they were Men of Courage, listed them into his Company, and so away they went to the War.

Three new Soldiers.

Now when the War was begun, in one of the briskest skirmishes, so it was, that a Company of the Lord Willberwill's Men sallied out at the Sally-port, or Postern of the Town, and fell in upon the Rear of Captain Boanerges's Men, where these three Fellows happened to be, so they took them Prisoners, and away they carried them into the Town; where they had not lain long in durance, but it began to be noised about the Streets of the Town, what three notable Prisoners the Lord Willberwill's Men had taken, and brought in Prisoners out of the Camp of Shaddai. At length tidings thereof was carried to Diabolus to the Castle, to wit, what my Lord Willberwill's Men had done, and whom they had taken Prisoners.

Then Diabolus called for Willberwill, to know the certainty of this matter. So he asked him, and he told him; then did the Giant send for the Prisoners, who when they were come, demanded of them who they were, whence they came, and what they did in the Camp of Shaddai; and they told him. Then he sent them to ward again. Not many Days after he sent for them to him again, and then asked them if they would be willing to serve him against their former Captains: They then told him, that they did not so much live by Religion, as by the fates of Fortune. And that since his Lordship was willing to entertain them, they should be willing to serve him. Now while things were thus in hand, there was one Captain Anything, a great doer in the Town of Mansoul, and to this Captain Anything did Diabolus send these Men, with a Note under his hand to receive them into his Company; the Contents of which Letter were thus.

Anything, my Darling, the three men that are the Bearers of this Letter, have a desire to serve me in the War; nor know I better to whose Conduct to commit them, than to thine: Receive them therefore in my Name, and as need shall require make use of them against Shaddai and his Men. Farewell. So they came and he received them, and he made of two of them Serjeants, but he made Mr. Man's Invention, his Ancient-Bearer. But thus much for this, and now to return to the Camp.

They of the Camp did also some execution upon the Town, for they did beat down the Roof of the old Lord Mayor's House, and so laid him more open than he was before. They had almost (with a Sling) slain my Lord Willberwill outright: But he made a shift to recover again. But they made a notable Slaughter among the Aldermen, for with one only shot they cut off six of them: To wit, Mr. Swearing, Mr. Whoring, Mr. Fury, Mr. Stand-to-lies, Mr. Drunkenness, and Mr. Cheating.

They also dismounted the two Guns that stood upon the Tower over Ear-gate, and laid them flat in the dirt. I told you before that the King's noble Captains had drawn off to their Winter-Quarters, and had there intrenched themselves and their Carriages, so as with the best Advantage to their King, and the greatest Annoyance to the Enemy, they might give seasonable and warm alarms to the Town of Mansoul. And mounted.

And this design of them did so hit, that I may say they did almost what they would to the molestation of the Corporation.

Continual Alarms given to Mansoul. For now could not Mansoul sleep securely as before, nor could they now go to their Debaucheries with that quietness as in times past. For they had from the Camp of Shaddai such frequent, warm, and terrifying alarms; yea, alarms upon alarms, first at one Gate and then at another, and again, at all the Gates at once, that they were broken as to former Peace. Yea, they had their alarms so frequently, and that when the Nights were at longest, the Weather coldest, and so consequently the Season most unseasonable; that that Winter was to the Town of Mansoul a Winter by it self. Sometimes the Trumpets would found, and sometimes the Slings would whirl the Stones into the Town. Sometimes ten thousand of the King's Soldiers would be running round the Walls of Mansoul at midnight, shouting, and lifting up the Voice for the Battle. Sometimes again, some of them in the Town would be wounded, and their Cry and lamentable Voice would be heard, to the great molestation of the now languishing Town of Mansoul. Yea so distressed, with those that laid Siege against them, were they, that I dare say, Diabolus their King had in these Days his rest much broken.

Change of thoughts in Mansoul. In these Days, as I was informed, new thoughts, and thoughts that began to run counter one to another, began to possess the Minds of the Men of the Town of Mansoul. Some would say, there is no living thus: others would then reply, this will be over shortly: then would a third stand up and answer, let us turn to the King Shaddai, and so put an end to these Troubles. And a fourth would come in with a fear, saying, I doubt he will not receive us. The old Gentleman too, the Recorder, that was so before Diabolus took Mansoul; he also began to talk aloud, and his Words were now to the Town of Mansoul, as if they were great Claps of Thunder. No noise now, so terrible to Mansoul, as was his, with the Noise of the Soldiers, and Shoutings of the Captains.

A famine in Mansoul, Luk. 15. 14, 15. Also things began to grow scarce in Mansoul; now the things that her Soul lusted after, were departing from her. Upon all her pleasant things there was a blast, and burning instead of beauty. Wrinkles now, and some shews of the Shadow of Death, were upon the Inhabitants of Mansoul. And now, O how glad would Mansoul have been to have enjoyed Quietness, and Satisfaction of Mind, though joined with the meanest condition in the World!

They are summoned again to yield. The Captains also, in the deep of this Winter, did send by the Mouth of Boanerges's Trumpeter, a Summons to Mansoul to yield up her self to the King, the great King Shaddai. They sent it once, N° XXV. Vol. II.

and twice, and thrice: Not knowing but that at some times there might be in Mansoul some willingness to surrender up themselves unto them, might they but have the colour of an Invitation to do it under. Yea, so far as I could gather, the Town had been surrendred up to them before now, had it not been for the opposition of old Incredulity, and the Fickleness of the thoughts of my Lord Willbewill. Diabolus also began to rave, wherefore Mansoul as to yielding was not yet all of one Mind, Mansoul in distress. therefore they still lay distressed under these perplexing fears.

I told you but now that they of the King's Army had this Winter sent three times to Mansoul, to submit her self.

The First time the Trumpeter went, he went with Words of Peace, telling of them, The contents of the first Summons. That the Captains, the Noble Captains of Shaddai, did pity and bewail the misery of the now perishing Town of Mansoul; and was troubled to see them so much at a stand in the way of their own deliverance. He said moreover, that the Captains bid him tell them, that if now poor Mansoul would humble herself, and turn, her former Rebellions and most notorious Treasons should by their merciful King be forgiven them, yea and forgotten too. And having bid them beware that they stood not in their own way, that they opposed not themselves, nor made themselves their own losers; he returned again into the Camp.

Secondly, The second time the Trumpeter went, he did treat them a little more roughly. For after sound of Trumpet he told them, The contents of the second Summons. That their continuing in their Rebellion did but chase, and heat the Spirit of the Captains, and that they were resolved to make a Conquest of Mansoul, or to lay their Bones before the Town Walls.

Thirdly, He went again the third time, and dealt with them yet more roughly, The contents of the third Summons. telling of them, That now, since they had been so horribly profane, he did not know, not certainly know, whether the Captains were inclined to Mercy or Judgment; only, said he, they commanded me to give you a Summons to open the Gates unto them: So he returned, and went into the Camp.

These three Summons, and especially the two last, did so distress the Town, that they presently call a Consultation, the result of which was this, That my Lord Willbewill should go up to Ear-gate, and there with sound of Trumpet, call to the Captains of the Camp for a parley. Well, the Lord Willbewill sounded upon the Wall, so the Captains came up in their Harness with their ten thousands at their feet. The Townsmen then told the Captains, that they had heard and considered their Summons, and would come to an Agreement with them, and with their King Shaddai, upon such certain Terms, Articles, and Propositions as, The Town sounds for a parley. with and by the order of They propose Conditions of Agreement. their their Prince, they to them, were appointed to propound. To wit, they would agree upon these grounds to be one People with them.

Proposition on the first. 1. If that those of their own Company, as the now Lord Mayor, and their Mr. Forgetgood, with their brave Lord Willbewill, might under Shaddai be still the Governours of the Town, Castle, and Gates of Mansoul.

Proposition on the second. 2. Provided that no Man that now serveth under their great Giant Diabolus, be by Shaddai cast out of House, Harbour, or the Freedom that he hath hitherto enjoyed in the famous Town of Mansoul.

Proposition on the third. 3. That it shall be granted them, that they of the Town of Mansoul shall enjoy certain of their Rights, and Privileges: To wit, such as have formerly been granted them; and that they have long lived in the Enjoyment of, under the Reign of their King Diabolus, that now is and long has been their only Lord, and great Defender.

Proposition on the fourth. 4. That no new Law, Officer, or Executioner of Law or Office, shall have any power over them, without their own choice and consent.

These be our Propositions, or Conditions of Peace: And upon these terms, said they, we will submit to your King.

But when the Captains had heard this weak and feeble offer of the Town of Mansoul, and their high and bold demands: they made to them again by their noble Captain, the Captain Boanerges, this speech following.

Boanerges his answer. 'O ye inhabitants of the Town of Mansoul, when I heard your Trumpet sound for a Parley with us, I can truly say, I was glad; but when you said you were willing to submit your selves to our King and Lord, then I was yet more glad: But when by your silly provisos, and foolish cavils, you lay the stumbling-block of your iniquity before your own faces; then was my Gladness turned into Sorrows, and my hopeful beginnings of your return, into languishing, fainting fears.

2 Tim. 2. 19. 'I count, that old Ill-pause, the ancient enemy of Mansoul, did draw up those proposals that now you present us with, as terms of an agreement, but they deserve not to be admitted to sound in the Ear of any Man that pretends to have service for Shaddai. We do therefore jointly, and that with the highest disdain, refuse, and reject such things as the greatest of iniquities.

But O Mansoul, if you will give your selves into our Hands, or rather into the Hands of our King; and will trust him to make such terms with, and for you, as shall seem good in his Eyes, (and I dare say they shall be such as you shall find to be most profitable to you) then we will receive you, and be at peace with you: But if you like not to trust your selves in the Arms of Shaddai our King, then things are but where they were before, and we know also what we have to do.

Then cry'd out old Incredulity the Lord Mayor, and said, And who, being out of the Hands of their Enemies, as you see we are now, will be so foolish as to put the Staff out of their own Hands, into the Hands of they know not who? I for my part will never yield to so unlimited a Proposition. Do we know the manner and temper of their King? 'Tis said by some, that he will be angry with his subjects, if but the breadth of an hair they chance to step out of the Way: And of others, that he requireth of them much more than they can perform. Wherefore it seems O Mansoul, to be thy Wisdom, to take good heed what thou dost in this matter. For if you once yield, you give up your selves to another, and so you are no more your own. Wherefore to give up your selves to an unlimited Power, is the greatest folly in the World. For now you indeed may repent; but can never justly complain. But do you indeed know, when you are his, which of you he will kill, and which of you he will save alive? Or whether he will not cut off every one of us, and send out of his own Country another new People, and cause them to inhabit this Town.

This speech of the Lord Mayor, undid all, and threw flat to the ground their hopes of an accord: Wherefore the Captains returned to their Trenches, to their Tents, and to their Men, as they were: and the Mayor to the Castle, and to his King.

Now Diabolus had waited for his return, for he had heard that they had been at their Points. So when he was come into the Chamber of State, Diabolus saluted him, with, Welcome my Lord: How went matters betwixt you to Day? So the Lord Incredulity (with a low congy) told him the whole of the matter, saying, Thus and thus, said the Captains of Shaddai, and thus and thus said I. The which when 'twas told to Diabolus, he was very glad to hear it, and said, my Lord Mayor, my faithful Incredulity, I have proved thy fidelity above ten times already, but never yet found thee false. I do promise thee, if we rub over this brunt, to prefer thee to a place of Honour, a place far better than to be Lord Mayor of Mansoul. I will make thee my Universal Deputy, and thou shalt, next to me, have all Nations under thy hand; yea, and thou shalt lay bands upon them that they may not resist thee, nor shall any of our Vassals walk more at liberty, but those that shall be content to walk in thy Fetters.

Now came the Lord Mayor out from Diabolus, as if he had obtained a favour indeed; wherefore to his Habitation he goes in great state, and thinks to feed him-soul in a hubbub.

But now, though the Lord Mayor and Diabolus did thus well agree, yet this repulse to the brave Captains put Mansoul into a Mutiny. For while old Incredulity went into the Castle to congratulate his Lord with what had passed, the old Lord Mayor that was so before Diabolus came to the Town, to wit, my Lord Understanding, and the old Recorder Mr. Conscience, getting intelligence of what had passed at Ear-gate (for you must know that they might not be suffered to be at that debate, lest they should then have mutinied, for the Captains) But, I say, they got intelligence what had passed there, and were much concerned therewith) wherefore they, getting some of the Town together, began to possess them with the Reasonableness of the noble Captains demands, and with the bad consequences that would follow upon the speech of old Incredulity, The Lord Mayor:

To wit, how little reverence he shewed therein, either to the Captains, or to their King; also how he implicitly charged them with Unfaithfulness, and Treachery: For what less, quoth they, could be made of his words, when he said he would not yield to their Proposition, and added moreover a Supposition, that he would destroy us, when before, he had sent us word that he would shew us mercy. The multitude being now possessed with the Conviction of the Evil that old Incredulity had done, began to run together by companies in all places, and in every corner of the Streets of Mansoul, and first they began to mutter, then to talk openly, and after that they run to and fro, and cried as they run, O the brave Captains of Shaddai! Would we were under the Government of the Captains, and of Shaddai their King. When the Lord Mayor had intelligence that Mansoul was in an uproar, down he comes to appease the People, and thought to have quashed their heat with the higness and the shew of his countenance. But when they saw him, they came running upon him, and had doubtless done him a mischief, had he not betaken himself to House. However they strongly assaulted the House where he was, to have pulled it down about his Ears; but the Place was too strong, so they failed of that. So he taking some courage addressed himself, out at a Window, to the People in this manner.

Gentlemen, what is the reason, that there is here such an uproar to Day?

Incredulity seeks to quiet the People.
My Lord
Understanding answers him.

Und. Then answered my Lord Understanding: It is even because that thou and thy Master have carried it not rightly, and as you should, to the Captains of Shaddai; for in three things you are faulty, First, in that you would not let Mr. Conscience and my self be at the hearing of your discourse.

Secondly, In that you propounded such Terms of Peace, to the Captains, that by no means could be granted, unless they had intended that their Shaddai, should have been only a Titular Prince, and that Mansoul should still have had Power by Law, to have lived in all Lewdness and Vanity before him; and so by consequence Diabolus should still here be King in Power, and the other, only King in Name. Thirdly, For that thou didst thy self, after the Captains had shewed us upon what Conditions they would have received us to Mercy, even undo all again with thy unfavoury, and unseasonable, and ungodly Speech.

Incred. When old Incredulity had heard this Speech, He cried out, Treason, Treason. To your Arms, to your Arms, O ye, the trusty Friends of Diabolus in Mansoul. Sin, and the Soul at odds.

Und. 'Sir, you may put upon my Words, what meaning you please, but I am sure that the Captains of such an high Lord as theirs is, deserved a better treatment at your Hands.

Incred. Then said old Incredulity, This is but little better. But Sir, quoth he, what I spake, I spake for my Prince, for his Government, and the quieting of the People, whom by your unlawful Actions, you have this Day set to Mutiny against us. They hide on both Sides

Conf. 'Then replied the old Recorder, whose Name was Mr. Conscience, and said, Sir, you ought not thus to retort upon what my Lord Understanding hath said. 'Tis evident enough that he hath spoken the Truth, and that you are an Enemy to Mansoul, be convinced then of the evil of your saucy and malapert Language, and of the Grief that you have put the Captains too; yea, and of the Damages that you have done to Mansoul thereby. Had you accepted of the Conditions, the sound of the Trumpet, and the alarm of War had now ceased about the Town of Mansoul; but that dreadful sound abides, and your want of Wisdom in your Speech has been the cause of it.

Incred. Then said old Incredulity: 'Sir, If I live I will do your Errand to Diabolus, and there you shall have an answer to your Words. Mean while we will seek the good of the Town, and not ask Council of you.'

Understand. 'Sir, your Prince and you are both Foreigners to Mansoul, and not the Natives thereof. And who can tell but that when you have brought us into greater Straits (when you also shall see that your selves can be safe by no other means than by Flight) you may leave us and shift for your selves, or set us on Fire, and go away in the Smoak, or by the light of our burning, and so leave us in our ruins.'

Incred. 'Sir, you forget that you are under a Governor, and that you ought to demean

'demean your self like a Subject, and know ye, when my Lord the King shall hear of this Day's work, he will give you but little thanks for your labour.'

Men of Arms come down.

Now while these Gentlemen were thus in their chiding Words, down comes from the Walls and Gates of the Town, the Lord Willbewill, Mr. Prejudice, Old Ill-pause, and several of the new made Aldermen and Burgesses, and they asked the reason of the hubbub, and tumult. And with that every Man began to tell his own tale, so that nothing could be heard distinctly: Then was a Silence commanded, and the old Fox Incredulity began to speak; my Lord, quoth he, Here are a couple of peevish Gentlemen, that have, as a fruit of their bad Dispositions, and as I fear, through the Advice of one Mr. Discontent, tumultuously gathered this Company against me this Day; and also attempted to run the Town into Acts of Rebellion against our Prince.

A great Confusion

Then stood up all the Diabolonians that were present, and affirmed these things to be true.

Now when they that took part with my Lord Understanding, and with Mr. Conscience, perceived that they were like to come to the worst, for that Force and Power was on the other Side; they came in for their Help and Relief: So a great Company was on both Sides. Then they on Incredulities Side, would have had the two old Gentlemen, presently away to Prison; but they on the other Side said they should not. Then they began to cry up Parties again; the Diabolonians cried up old Incredulity, Forgetgood, the new Aldermen, and their great one Diabolus; and the other Party, they as fast cried up Shaddai, the Captains, his Laws, their mercifulness, and applauded their Conditions and Ways.

They fall from Words to Blows.

Thus the bickerment went a while, at last they passed from Words to Blows, and now there were knocks on both Sides. The good old Gentleman, Mr. Conscience, was knockt down twice by one of the Diabolonians, whose Name was Mr. Benumming. And my Lord Understanding had like to have been slain with an Harquebus, but that he that shot wanted to take his aim aright. Nor did the other Side wholly escape, for there was one Mr. Rashhead, a Diabolonian, that had his Brains beaten out by Mr. Mind, the Lord Willebewill's Servant; and it made me laugh to see how old Mr. Prejudice was kickt and tumbled about in the dirt. For though a while since he was made Captain of a Company of the Diabolonians, to the hurt and damage of the Town; yet now they had got him under their Feet; and I'll assure you he had by some of the Lord Understanding's Party, his Crown soundly crackt to boot. Mr. Anything also, he became a brisk Man in the broil, but both Sides were against him, because he was true to none. Yet he had for his malapertness, one of his Legs broken, and he that did it, wisht it had been his Neck. Much harm more was done on both Sides, but this must not be forgotten; it was now a wonder to see my Lord Willbewill so indifferent as he was, he did not seem to take one Side more than another, only it was perceived that he smiled to see how old Prejudice was tumbled up and down in the dirt. Also when Capt. Anything came halting up before him, he seemed to take but little notice of him.

Harm done on both Sides

Now when the uproar was over, Diabolus sends for my Lord Understanding, and Mr. Conscience, and claps them both up in Prison as the Ringleaders and Managers of this most heavy riotous Rout in Mansoul. So now the Town began to be quiet again, and the Prisoners were used hardly, yea, he thought to have made them away, but that the present Juncture did not serve for that purpose: For that War was in all their Gates. But let us return again to our Story:

The two old Gentlemen put in Prison as the Authors of this revolt.

The Captains, when they were gone back from the Gate, and were come into the Camp again, called a Council of War, to consult what was further for them to do. Now some said, let us go up presently and fall upon the Town, but the greatest part thought, rather better it would be, to give them another Summons to yield; and the reason why they thought this to be best, was, because, that so far as could be perceived, the Town of Mansoul now, was more inclinable than heretofore. And if, said they, while some of them are in a way of Inclination, we should by ruggedness give them distast, we may set them further from closing with our Summons, than we would be willing they should.

The Captain calls a Council and consult what to do.

Wherefore to this advice they agreed, and called a Trumpeter, put Words into his Mouth, set him his time, and bid him God speed. Well, many Hours were not expired before the Trumpeter, addressed himself to his Journey. Wherefore coming up to the Wall of the Town, he steereth his course to Ear-gate; and there sounded, as he was commanded; They then that were within, came out to see what was the matter, and the Trumpeter made them this Speech following.

The result is, they send another Trumpeter, to summon the Town to yield.

'O hard-hearted, and deplorable Town of Mansoul, how long wilt thou love thy sinful, sinful Simplicity, and ye Fools delight in your scorning? As yet despise you the offers of Peace, and Deliverance? As yet will ye refuse the golden offers of Shaddai, and trust to the Lies and Falsehoods of Diabolus? Think you when Shaddai shall have conquered you, that the remembrance of these your Carriages towards him, will yield you Peace, and Comfort; or that by ruffling Language, you can make him afraid as a Grasshopper? Doth he intreat you, for fear of you? Do you think that you are stronger than

The Summons it self.

' than he? Look to the Heavens, and behold, and consider the Stars, how high are they? Can you stop the Sun from running its course, and hinder the Moon from giving her Light? Can you count the Number of the Stars, or stay the Bottles of Heaven? Can you call for the Waters of the Sea, and cause them to cover the Face of the Ground? Can you behold every one that is proud, and abase him? And bind their Faces in secret? Yet these are some of the Works of our King, in whose Name, this Day, we come up unto you: That you may be brought under his Authority. In his Name therefore I summon you again, to yield up your selves to his Captains.'

The Town at a stand.

At this Summons the *Mansoul*ians seemed to be at a stand, and knew not what answer to make: Wherefore Diabolus forthwith appeared, and took upon him to do it himself, and thus he begins, but turns his Speech to them of Mansoul.

Diabolus makes a Speech to the Town, and endeavours to terrify it with the greatness of God.

' Gentlemen, quoth he, and my faithful Subjects, if it is true that this Summoner hath said, concerning the greatness of their King, by his terror you will always be kept in bondage, and so be made to sneak. Yea, how can you now, though he is at a distance, indure to think of such a mighty one? And if not to think of him, while at a distance, how can you indure to be in his Presence? I, your Prince, am familiar with you, and you may play with me, as you would with a Grass-hopper. Consider therefore, what is for your profit, and remember the Immunities that I have granted you.'

' Farther, If all be true that this Man hath said, how comes it to pass that the Subjects of Shaddai, are so enslaved in all places where they come? None in the Universe so unhappy as they, none so trampled upon as they.'

' Consider, my Mansoul; would thou wert as loth to leave me, as I am loth to leave thee. But consider I say, the Ball is yet at thy Foot, Liberty you have, if you know how to use it: Yea, a King you have too, if you can tell how to love and obey him.'

He drives Mansoul into despair.

Upon this Speech, the Town of Mansoul did again harden their Hearts yet more, against the Captains of Shaddai. The thoughts of his greatness did quite quash them, and the thoughts of his holiness sunk them in despair. Wherefore after a short consult, they (of the Diabolonian Party they were) sent back this word by the Trumpeter, That for their parts, they were resolved to stick to their King, but never to yield to Shaddai: So it was but in vain to give them any further Summons, for they had rather die upon the place than yield. And now things seemed to be gone quite back, and Mansoul to be out of reach, or call; yet the Captains who knew what their Lord could do, would not yet be beat out of Heart: They therefore sent them another Summons, more sharp and severe than the last, but the oftner they were sent to, to reconcile to Shaddai, the further off they were. As they called them, so they went from them, yea though they called them to the most high. Hof. 11.2.

So they ceased that way to deal with them any more, and inclined to think of another way. The Captains therefore did gather themselves together, to have free Conference among themselves, to know what was yet to be done to gain the Town, and to deliver it from the Tyranny of Diabolus: And one said after this manner, and another after that. Then stood up the right noble, the Captain Conviction, and said, my Brethren, mine Opinion is this:

The Captains leave off to Summons and betake themselves to Prayer.

First, ' That we continually play our Slings into the Town, and keep it in a continual alarm, molesting of them Day and Night; by thus doing we shall stop the growth of their rampant Spirit. For a Lion may be tamed, by continual molestation.'

Secondly, ' This done, I advise that in the next place we with one consent draw up a Petition to our Lord Shaddai, by which, after we have shewed our King the condition of Mansoul, and of Affairs here, and have begged his pardon for our no better Success; we will earnestly implore his Majesty's help, and that he will please to send us more Force and Power, and some gallant and well spoken Commander to head them, that so his Majesty may not lose the benefit of these his good Beginnings, but may compleat his Conquest upon the Town of Mansoul.'

To this Speech of the noble Captain Conviction, they, as one Man, consented, and agreed that a Petition should forthwith be drawn up, and sent by a fit Man, away to Shaddai with speed. The Contents of the Petition were thus:

' Most gracious, and glorious King, the Lord of the best World, and the builder of the Town of Mansoul. We have, dread Sovereign, at thy Commandment, put our Lives in Jeopardy, and at thy bidding made a War, upon the famous Town of Mansoul. When we went up against it, we did according to our Commission, first offer Conditions of Peace unto it. But they, Great King, set light by our Council, and would none of our reproof: They were for shutting of their Gates, and for keeping us out of the Town. They also mounted their Guns, they sallied out upon us, and have done us what damage they could, but we pursued them, with alarm, upon alarm, requiting of them with such Retribution as was meet, and have done some execution upon the Town. Mat. 22.5. Prov. 1. Zech. 7. 10, 11, 12, 13.

' Diabolus, Incredulity, and Willbewill, are the great doers against us, now we are in our Winter quarters, but so as that we do yet with an high hand molest, and distress the Town.

' Once, as we think, had we had but one substantial friend in the Town, such as would but have seconded the sound of our summons, as they ought, the people might have yielded themselves: But there were none but Enemies there, nor any to speak in behalf of our Lord, to the Town: Wherefore though we have done as we could, yet Mansoul abides in a state of rebellion against thee.

' Now King of Kings, let it please thee to pardon the unsuccessfulness of thy servants, who have been no more advantageous in so desirable a work, as the conquering of Mansoul is: And send, Lord, as we now desire, more forces to Mansoul, that it may be subdued; and a man to head them, that the Town may both love and fear.

' We do not thus speak, because we are willing to relinquish the Wars (for we are for laying of our bones against the place) but that the Town of Mansoul may be won for thy Majesty. We also pray thy Majesty, for expedition in this matter, that, after their conquest, we may be at liberty, to be sent about other thy gracious designs. Amen.

Who carried this Petition.
The Petition thus drawn up, was sent away with hast to the King, by the hand of that good man, Mr. Love to Mansoul.

To whom it was delivered.
When this Petition was come to the Palace of the King, who should it be delivered to, but to the King's Son. So he took it and read it, and because the Contents of it pleased him well, he mended, and also in some things, added to the Petition himself. So after he had made such amendments and additions as he thought convenient, with his own hand, he carried it in to the King: To whom when he had with obeysance delivered it, he put on Authority, and spake to it himself.

The King receives it with gladness.
Now the King, at the sight of the Petition, was glad; but how much more think you, when it was seconded by his Son. It pleased him also to hear that his servants that camped against Mansoul, were so hearty in the work, and so stedfast in their resolves, and that they had already got some ground upon the famous Town of Mansoul.

The King calls his Son, and tells him that he shall go to conquer the Town of Mansoul and he is pleased at it.
Wherefore the King called to him Emanuel his Son, who said here am I, my Father. Then said the King, thou knowest, as I do myself, the condition of the Town of Mansoul, and what we have purposed, and what thou hast done to redeem it. Come now therefore my Son, and prepare thyself for the War, for thou shalt go to my Camp at Mansoul. Thou shalt also there prosper, and prevail, and conquer the Town of Mansoul.

Then said the King's Son: Thy Law is within my Heart. I delight to do thy will. This is the day that I have longed for, and the work that I have waited for all this while. Grant me therefore what force thou shalt in thy wisdom think meet, and I will go, and will deliver from Diabolus, and from his power, thy perishing Town of Mansoul. My heart has been often pained within me, for the miserable Town of Mansoul. But now 'tis rejoyced, but now 'tis glad; and with that he leaped over the Mountains for joy, saying:

I have not, in my heart, thought any thing too dear for Mansoul, the day of vengeance is in mine heart, for thee my Mansoul, and glad am I, that thou my Father, hast made me the Captain of their Salvation: And I will now begin to plague all those that have been a plague to my Town of Mansoul, and will deliver it from their hand.

When the King's Son had said thus to his Father, it presently flew like lightning round about at Court; Yea, it there became the only talk, what Emanuel was to go to do for the famous Town of Mansoul. But you cannot think how the Courtiers too, were taken with this design of the Prince. Yea, so affected were they with this work, and with the justness of the War, that the highest Lord, and greatest Peer of the Kingdom did covet to have Commissions under Emanuel, to go to help to recover again to Shaddai, the miserable Town of Mansoul.

Then was it concluded that some should go and carry tidings to the Camp, that Emanuel was to come to recover Mansoul, and that he would bring along with him so mighty, so impregnable a force that he could not be resisted. But oh, how ready were the high Ones at Court, to run like Lacquies to carry these tidings to the Camp, that was at Mansoul. Now when the Captains perceived that the King would send Emanuel his Son, and that it also delighted the Son to be sent on this errand by the great Shaddai his Father: They also to shew, how they were pleased at the thoughts of his coming, gave a shout that made the Earth rent, at the sound thereof. Yea, the Mountains did answer again by Echo, and Diabolus himself did totter and shake.

For you must know, that though the Town of Mansoul itself, was not much, if at all, concerned with the project (for, alas for them, they were wofully besotted, for they chiefly regarded their pleasure and their lusts:) Yet Diabolus their Governour was, for he had his spies continually abroad, who brought him intelligence of all things, and they told him what was doing at Court against him, and that Emanuel would would shortly certainly come with a power to invade him. Nor was there any man at Court, nor Peer of the Kingdom, that Diabolus so feared, as he feared this Prince. For if you remember, I shewed you before that Diabolus had felt the weight of his hand already. So that, since it was he that was to come, this made him the more afraid. Well, you see how I have told you that the King's Son was engaged to come from the Court to save Mansoul, and that his father had made him the Captain of the forces: The time therefore of his setting forth, being now expired, he addressed himself for his march, and taketh with him for his power, five Noble Captains, and their forces.

Eph. 6. 16.

1. The first was that famous Captain, the Noble Captain Credence, his were the Red colours; and Mr. Promise bare them: and for a Scutcheon, he had the Holy Lamb, and Golden Shield. And he had ten thousand men at his feet.

Heb. 6. 19.

2. The second was that famous Captain, the Captain Good-hope, his were the Blue Colours: His Standard Bearer was Mr. Expectation; and for a Scutcheon he had the Three Golden Anchors. And he had ten thousand men at his feet.

1 Cor. 13.

3. The third Captain was that Valiant Captain, the Captain Charity; His Standard Bearer was Mr. Pitiful, his were the Green Colours; and for his Scutcheon, he had three naked Orphans imbracing the bosom. And he had ten thousand men at his feet.

Mat. 10.

4. The fourth was that Gallant Commander, the Captain Innocent. His Standard Bearer was Mr. Harmless; his were the White Colours, and for his Scutcheon, he had the three Golden Doves.

5. The fifth was the truly Loyal, and well beloved Captain, the Captain Patience: His Standard Bearer was Mr. Sufferlong, his were the Black Colours; and for a Scutcheon, he had three Arrows through the Golden Heart.

Heb. 6. 12.

These were Emanuel's Captains, these their Standard Bearers, their Colours, and their Scutcheons, and these the men under their command. So as was said, the brave Prince took his march to go to the Town of Mansoul. Captain Credence led the Van, and Captain Patience brought up the Rear. So the other three with their men made up the main body. The Prince himself riding in his Chariot at the head of them.

Their march.

But when they set out for their march, Oh how the Trumpets sounded; their Armor glittered, and how the Colours waved in the wind. The Prince's Armor was all of Gold, and it shone like the Sun in the Firmament. The Captains Armor was of proof and was in appearance like the glittering Stars. There were also some from the Court that rode Reformades, for the love that they had to the King Shaddai, and for the happy deliverance of the Town of Mansoul.

Emanuel also when he had thus set forwards to go to recover the Town of Mansoul; took with him at the Commandment of his Father, forty four Battering Rams, and twelve slings, to whirl stones withal. Every one of these was made of pure Gold, and these they carried with them in the heart and body of their Army, all along as they went to Mansoul.

So they marched till they came within less than a League of the Town: And there they lay till the first four Captains came thither, to acquaint him with matters. Then they took their Journey, to go to the Town of Mansoul, and unto Mansoul they came, but when the old Souldiers that were in the Camp saw that they had new forces to joyn with, they again gave such a shout before the Walls of the Town of Mansoul, that it put Diabolus into another fright. So they sat down before the Town, not now as the other four Captains did, to wit, against the Gates of Mansoul only: but they invironed it round on every side; and beset it behind and before, so that now let Mansoul look which way it will, it saw force and power lie in Siege against it. Besides, there were mounts cast up against it.

The forces

The mount Gracious was on the one side, and Mount Justice was on the other; Further, there were several small banks, and advance ground, as Plain-truth-hill, and No sin-banks, where many of the Slings were placed against the Town. Upon Mount Gracious were planted four, and upon Mount Justice were placed as many; and the rest were conveniently placed in several parts round about the Town. Five of the best Battering Rams, that is, of the biggest of them, were placed upon Mount Hearken: a Mount cast up hard by Ear-gate with intent to break that open.

Mounts

Now when the men of the Town saw the multitude of the Souldiers that were come up against the place, and the Rams and Slings, and the Mounts on which they were planted; together with the glittering of the Armour and the waving of their Colours: they were forced to shift, and shift, and again to shift their thoughts; but they hardly changed for thoughts more stout, but rather for thoughts more faint. For though before, they thought themselves sufficiently guarded; yet now they began to think that no man knew what would be their hap or lot.

The heart of Mansoul begins to fail.

When the good Prince Emanuel had thus beleaguered Mansoul: In the first place he hangs out the White Flag, which he caused to be set up among the Golden slings that were planted upon Mount Gracious. And this he did for two reasons: 1. To give notice to Mansoul that he could and would yet be gracious if they turned to him. 2. And that he might leave them the more without excuse, excuse, should he destroy them, they continuing in their rebellion.

So the White Flag, with the three Golden Doves in it, was hanged out for two Days together, to give them time, and space to consider. But they, as was hinted before, as if they were unconcerned, made no reply to the favourable Signal of the Prince.

Then he commanded, and they set the Red Flag, upon that Mount called Mount Justice. 'Twas the Red Flag of Captain Judgment, whose Scutcheon was the Burning fiery Furnace. And this also stood waving before them in the Wind, for several Days together. But look, how they carried it under the White Flag, when that was hanged out, so did they also when the Red one was: And yet he took no advantage of them.

Then he commanded again that his servants would hang out the Black Flag of defiance against them, whose Scutcheon was the three burning Thunder-bolts. But as unconcerned was Mansoul at this, as at those that went before. But when the Prince saw that neither Mercy nor Judgment, nor Execution of Judgment, would, or could come near the Heart of Mansoul: He was touched with much Compunction, and said surely this strange carriage of the Town of Mansoul, doth rather arise from ignorance of the Manner, and Feats of War; than from a secret defiance of us, and abhorrence of their own lives. Or if they know the Manner of the War of their own; yet not the Rites and Ceremonies of the Wars in which we are concerned, when I make Wars upon mine Enemy Diabolus.

Therefore he sent to the Town of Mansoul, to let them know what he meant by those Signs, and Ceremonies of the Flag, and also to know of them which of the Things they will chuse, whether Grace and Mercy, or Judgment, and the Execution of Judgment. All this while they kept their Gates shut with Locks, Bolts and Bars, as fast as they could. Their Guards also were doubled, and their Watch made as strong as they could. Diabolus also did pluck up what heart he could, to encourage the Town to make resistance.

The Towns-men also made answer to the Prince's messenger, in substance, according to that which follows.

Great Sir, As to what by your messenger you have signified to us, Whether we will accept of your Mercy, or fall by your Justice, we are bound by the Law and Custom of this place, and can give you no positive answer. For it is against the Law, Government, and the Prerogative Royal of our King, to make either Peace or War without him. But this we will do, we will petition that our Prince will come down to the Wall, and there give you such treatment as he shall think fit, and profitable for us.

When the good Prince Emanuel heard this answer, and saw the Slavery and Bondage of the People, and how much content they were to abide in the Chains of the Tyrant Diabolus: It grieved him at the Heart. And indeed, when at any time he perceived that any were contented under the Slavery of the Giant, he would be affected with it.

But to return again to our purpose. After the Town had carried this News to Diabolus, and had told him moreover, that the Prince that lay in the Leaguer, without the Wall, waited upon them for an answer: He refused, and huffed as well as he could, but in heart he was afraid.

Then said he, I will go down to the Gates my self, and give him such an answer as I think fit. So he went down to Mouthgate, and there addressed himself to speak to Emanuel (but in such language as the Town understood not) the Contents whereof were as follow.

O thou great Emanuel, Lord of all the World, I know thee, that thou art the Son of the great Shaddai! Wherefore art thou come to torment me, and to cast me out of my Possession? This Town of Mansoul, as thou very well knowest, is mine, and that by a twofold Right. 1. It is mine by right of Conquest, I won it in the open Field. And shall the Prey be taken from the mighty, or the lawful Captive, be delivered? 2. This Town of Mansoul is mine also by their Subjection. They have opened the Gates of their Town unto me. They have sworn fidelity to me, and have openly chosen me to be their King. They have also given their Castle into my hands; yea, they have put the whole strength of Mansoul under me.

Moreover, this Town of Mansoul hath disavowed thee: Yea, they have cast thy Law, thy Name, thy Image, and all that is thine behind their back: And have accepted, and set up in their room, my Law, my Name, my Image and all that ever is mine. Ask else thy Captains, and they will tell thee, that Mansoul hath, in answer to all their summons, shown Love, and Loyalty to me; but always disdain, despite, contempt, and scorn to thee, and thine: now thou art the just one, and the holy (and shouldest do no iniquity) depart then, I pray thee therefore from me, and leave me to my just inheritance, peaceably.

This Oration was made in the Language of Diabolus himself. For although he can, to every Man, speak in their own Language (else he could not tempt them all as he does) yet he has a Language proper to himself, and it is the Language of the infernal Cave, or black Pit.

Wherefore the Town of Mansoul (poor hearts) understood him not, nor did they see how he crouched, and cringed, while he stood before Emanuel their Prince.

Yea,

Yea, they all this while took him to be one of that Power and Force that by no means could be resisted. Wherefore while he was thus intreating that he might have yet his residence there, and that Emanuel would not take it from him by force: The inhabitants boasted even of his valour, saying, Who is able to make War with him.

Well, when this pretended King, had made an end of what he would say: Emanuel, the Golden Prince stood up and spake: the Contents of whose Words follow.

‘Thou deceiving one, said he, I have in my Father’s Name, in mine own Name, and on the behalf, and for the good of this wretched Town of Mansoul, somewhat to say unto thee. Thou pretendest a Right, a lawful Right to the deplorable Town of Mansoul; when it is most apparent to all my Father’s Court, that the Entrance which thou hast obtained in at the Gates of Mansoul, was through thy lie and false-hood. Thou belyedst my Father, thou belyedst his Law, and so deceivedst the People of Mansoul. Thou pretendest that the People have accepted thee for their King, their Captain, and right Liege-lord, but that also was by the exercise of deceit, and guile. Now if lying, wiliness, sinful craft, and all manner of horrible hypocrisy, will go, in my Father’s Court (in which Court thou must be tryed) for equity and right, then will I confess unto thee that thou hast made a lawful conquest. But alas! What Thief, what Tyrant, what Devil is there that may not conquer after this sort: But I can make it appear, O Diabolus, that thou in all thy pretences to a conquest of Mansoul, hast nothing of truth to say. Thinkest thou this to be right, that thou didst put the lye upon my Father, and madest him (to Mansoul) the greatest deluder in the World. And what sayest thou to thy perverting, knowingly, the right purport and intent of the Law? Was it good also that thou madest a Prey of the Innocency, and Simplicity of the now miserable Town of Mansoul? Yea, thou didst overcome Mansoul by promising to them Happiness in their Transgressions, against my Father’s Law, when thou knowest, and couldest not but know, hadst thou consulted nothing but thine own Experience, that, that was the Way to undo them. Thou hast also thyself (O! Thou Master of Enmity) of despite, defaced my Father’s Image in Mansoul, and set up thy own in its place; to the great contempt of my Father, the heightening of thy Sin, and to the intolerable damage of the perishing Town of Mansoul.

‘Thou hast moreover, (as if all these were but little things with thee) not only

Vol. II.

‘deluded and undone this place; but by thy Lies and fraudulent Carriage, hast set them against their own deliverance. How hast thou stirred them up against my Father’s Captains, and made them to fight against those that were sent of him to deliver them from their Bondage? All these things and very many more thou hast done against thy Light, and in contempt of my Father, and of his Law: Yea, and with design to bring under his displeasure for ever, the miserable Town of Mansoul. I am therefore come to avenge the wrong that thou hast done to my Father, and to deal with thee for the Blasphemies wherewith thou hast made poor Mansoul blaspheme his Name. Yea, upon thy Head, thou Prince of the infernal Cave, will I requite it.

‘As for my self, O Diabolus, I am come against thee by lawful Power, and to take by Strength of Hand, this Town of Mansoul out of thy burning Fingers. For this Town of Mansoul is mine, O Diabolus, and that by undoubted right, as all shall see that will diligently search the most ancient, and most authentick Records, and I will plead my Title to it, to the Confusion of thy Face.

‘First, For the Town of Mansoul, my Father built and did fashion it with his Hand. The Palace also that is in the midst of that Town, he built it for his own delight. This Town of Mansoul therefore is my Father’s, and that by the best of Titles: And he that gainsays the truth of this, must lie against his Soul.

‘Secondly, O thou Master of the Lie, this Town of Mansoul is mine.

1. ‘For that I am my Father’s Heir, his first-born, and the only delight of his Heart. I am therefore come up against thee in mine own right, even to recover mine own Inheritance out of thine Hand.

2. ‘But further, as I have a right and title to Mansoul, by being my Father’s Heir, so I have also by my Father’s Donation. His it was, and he gave it me; Joh. 17: nor have I at any time offended my Father that he should take it from me and give it to thee. Nor have I been forced by playing the Bankrupt to sell, or set to sale to thee, my beloved Town of Mansoul. Mansoul is my desire, my delight, and the joy of my Heart. But,

3. ‘Mansoul is mine by right of purchase. I have bought it (O Diabolus) I have bought it to my self. Now since it was my Father’s and mine, as I was his Heir, and since also I have made it mine by vertue of a great purchase, it followeth, that by all lawful right the Town of Mansoul is mine, and that thou art an Usurper, a Tyrant and Traytor in thy holding possession thereof. Now the cause of my purchasing of it was this: Mansoul had trespassed against my Father,

Mat. 5.18. 'ther, now my Father had said, That in ' the Day that they broke his Law, they ' should die. Now it is more possible for ' Heaven and Earth to pass away, than for ' my Father to break his Word. Where' fore when Mansoul had sinned indeed by ' hearkening to thy lie, I put in and be' came a Surety to my Father, Body for ' Body, and Soul for Soul, that I would ' make amends for Mansoul's Transgressi-
' ons; and my Father did accept thereof.
O sweet Prince Emanuel. ' So when the time appointed was come,
' I gave Body for Body, Soul for Soul,
' Life for Life, Blood for Blood, and so
' redeemed my beloved Mansoul.

4. ' Nor did I do this to the halves, my ' Father's Law and Justice that were both ' concerned in the threatening upon Trans' gression, are both now satisfied, and ' very well content that Mansoul should be ' delivered.

5. ' Nor am I come out this Day against ' thee, but by commandment of my Fa' ther, it was he that said unto me, Go ' down and deliver Mansoul.

' Wherefore be it known unto thee (O
' thou fountain of deceit) and be it also ' know to the foolish Town of Mansoul,
' that I am not come against thee this Day
' without my Father.

' And now (said the Golden-headed ' Prince) I have a Word to the Town of ' Mansoul' (but as soon as mention was made that he had a Word to speak to the besotted Town of Mansoul, the Gates were double guarded, and all Men commanded not to give him Audience) so he proceeded, and said, ' O unhappy Town of Mansoul,
' I cannot but be touched with Pity and ' Compassion for thee. Thou hast ac' cepted of Diabolus for thy King, and ' art become a Nurse and Minister of Di-
' abolonians against thy Sovereign Lord.
' Thy Gates thou hast opened to him, but ' hast shut them fast against me; thou hast
' given him a hearing, but hast stopt thine
' Ears at my Cry; he brought to thee thy ' Destruction, and thou didst receive both
' him and it: I am come to thee bringing ' Salvation, but thou regardest me not.
' Besides, thou hast as with sacrilegious
' Hands taken thy self with all that was ' mine in thee, and hast given all to my
' Foe, and to the greatest Enemy my Fa' ther has. You have bowed and subjected ' your selves to him, you have vowed and ' sworn your selves to be his. Poor Man-
' soul! What shall I do unto thee? Shall
' I save thee, shall I destroy thee? What ' shall I do unto thee? Shall I fall upon ' thee and grind thee to Powder, or make ' thee a Monument of the richest Grace?
' What shall I do unto thee? Hearken
' therefore thou Town of Mansoul, hearken
' to my Word, and thou shalt live. I am ' merciful, Mansoul, and thou shalt find
' me so; shut me not out of thy Gates.

' O Mansoul, neither is my Commission, Cant. 5.2.
' nor Inclination to do thee any hurt; why Joh. 12.47
' flyest thou so fast from thy Friend, and Luk. 9.56.
' stickest so close to thine Enemy? Indeed I ' would have thee, because it becomes ' thee, to be sorry for thy Sin; but do not ' despair of Life, this great Force is not to ' hurt thee, but to deliver thee from thy ' Bondage, and to reduce thee to thy Obe' dience.

' My Commission indeed is to make a ' War upon Diabolus thy King, and upon
' all Diabolonians with him; for he is the ' strong Man armed that keeps the House,
' and I will have him out; his spoils I ' must divide, his armour I must take from ' him, his hold I must cast him out of, and ' make it an Habitation for my self. And ' this, O Mansoul, shall Diabolus know,
' when he shall be made to follow me in ' Chains, and when Mansoul shall rejoice
' to see it so.

' I could, would I now put forth my ' Might, cause, that forthwith he should ' leave you and depart; but I have it in ' my Heart so to deal with him, as that
' the justice of the War that I shall make ' upon him, may be seen and acknowledged
' by all. He hath taken Mansoul by Fraud,
' and keeps it by Violence and Deceit, and ' I will make him bare and naked in the ' Eyes of all observers.

' All my Words are true, I am mighty
' to save, and will deliver my Mansoul out ' of his hand.' This Speech was intended chiefly for Mansoul, but Mansoul would not have the hearing of it. They shut up Ear-gate, they barricado'd it up, they kept it lockt and bolted, they set a Guard thereat, and commanded that no Mansolo- nian should go out to him, nor that any from the Camp should be admitted into the Town; all this they did, so horribly had Diabolus enchanted them to do, and seek to do for him, against their rightful Lord and Prince; wherefore no Man, nor Voice, nor sound of Man that belonged to the glorious Host, was to come into the Town.

So when Emanuel saw that Mansoul was thus involved in Sin, he calls his Army together (since now also his Words were despised) and gave out a Commandment throughout all his Host to be ready against the time appointed. Now forasmuch as there was no way lawfully to take the Town of Mansoul, but to get in by the Gates, and at Ear-gate as the chief, therefore he commanded his Captains and Commanders to bring their Rams, their Slings, and their Men, and place them at Eye-gate and Ear-gate, in order to his taking the Town. Emanuel prepares to make War upon Mansoul.

When Emanuel had put all things in a readiness to give Diabolus Battle, he sent again to know of the Town of Mansoul, if in peaceable manner they would yield themselves?

themselves? Or whether they were yet resolved to put him to try the utmost Extremity? They then together with Diabolus their King called a Council of War, and resolved upon certain Propositions that should be offered to Emanuel, if he will accept thereof, so they agreed; and then the next was, who should be sent on this Errand. Now there was in the Town of Mansoul an old Man a Diabolonian, and his Name was Mr. Loth-to-stoop, a stiff Man in his way, and a great doer for Diabolus; him therefore they sent, and put into his Mouth what he should say. So he went and came to the Camp to Emanuel, and when he was come, a time was appointed to give him Audience. So at the time he came, and after a Diabolonian Ceremony

Tit. 1. 16. or two, he thus began, and said, Great Sir, that it may be known unto all Men how good natured a Prince my master is, he hath sent me to tell your Lordship that he is very willing rather than to go to War, to deliver up into your Hands one half of the Town of Mansoul. I am therefore to know if your mightiness will accept of this Proposition.

Then said Emanuel, the whole is mine by gift and purchase, wherefore I will never lose one half.

Then said Mr. Loth-to-stoop, Sir, my master hath said, that he will be content that you shall be the nominal and titular Lord of all, if he may possess but a part.

Then Emanuel answered, The whole is mine really; not in Name and Word only: Wherefore I will be the sole Lord and Possessor of all, or of none at all of Mansoul.

Then Mr. Loth-to-stoop said again, Sir, behold the Condescension of my master! He says that he will be content, if he may but have assigned to him some place in Mansoul as a place to live privately in, and you shall be Lord of all the rest.

Then said the Golden Prince, All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and of all that he hath given me I will lose nothing, no not a Hoof, nor a Hair. I will not therefore grant him, no not the least Corner in Mansoul to dwell in, I will have all to my self.

Then Loth-to-stoop said again, But, Sir, suppose that my Lord should resign the whole Town to you, only with this proviso, that he sometimes when he comes into this Country, may for old Acquaintance sake be entertained as a way-faring man for two days, or ten days, or a month, or so; may not this small matter be granted?

1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

Then said Emanuel, No. He came as a way-faring Man to David, nor did he stay long with him, and yet it had like to have cost David his Soul. I will not consent that he ever should have any harbour more there.

Then said Mr. Loth-to-stoop, Sir, You seem to be very hard. Suppose my master should yield to all that your Lordship hath said, provided that his Friends and Kindred in Mansoul may have Liberty to trade in the Town, and to enjoy their present dwellings; may not that be granted, Sir?

Then said Emanuel, No; that is contrary to my Father's Will; for all, and all manner of Diabolonians that now are, or that at any time shall be found in Mansoul, shall not only lose their Lands and Liberties, but also their Lives.

Then said Mr. Loth-to-stoop again, But, Sir, may not my master, and great Lord, by Letters, by Passengers, by accidental Opportunities, and the like, maintain, if he shall deliver up all unto thee, some kind of old Friendship with Mansoul.

Joh. 10. 8.

Emanuel answered, No, by no means; for as much as any such Fellowship, Friendship, Intimacy, or Acquaintance in what way, sort or mode soever maintained, will tend to the corrupting of Mansoul, the alienating of their Affections from me, and the endangering of their Peace with my Father.

Mr. Loth-to-stoop yet added further, saying, But great Sir, since my master hath many Friends, and those that are dear to him in Mansoul, may he not, if he shall depart from them, even of his Bounty and good Nature, bestow upon them, as he sees fit, some Tokens of his Love and Kindness, that he had for them, to the end that Mansoul, when he is gone, may look upon such Tokens of Kindness once received from their old Friend, and remember him who was once their King, and the merry times that they sometimes enjoyed one with another, while he and they lived in Peace together.

Then said Emanuel, No; for if Mansoul come to be mine, I shall not admit of, nor consent that there should be the least scrap, shred, or dust of Diabolus left behind, as Tokens or Gifts bestowed upon any in Mansoul, thereby to call to remembrance the horrible Communion that was betwixt them and him.

Well Sir, said Mr. Loth-to-stoop, I have one thing more to propound, and then I am got to the End of my Commission: Suppose that when my master is gone from Mansoul, any that yet shall live in the Town, should have such Business of high Concerns to do, that if they be neglected the Party shall be undone; and suppose, Sir, that no body can help in that case so well as my master and Lord; may not now my master be sent for upon so urgent an Occasion as this? Or if he may not be admitted into the Town, may not he and the Person concerned, meet in some of the Villages near Mansoul, and there lay their Heads together, and there consult of matters?

This was the last of those ensnaring Propositions that Mr. Loth-to-stoop had to propound to Emanuel on behalf of his Master Diabolus; but Emanuel would not grant it, for he said, There can be no case, or thing, or matter fall out in Mansoul, when thy Master shall be gone, that may not be salved by my Father; besides, it will be a great disparagement to my Father's Wisdom and Skill to admit any from Mansoul to go out to Diabolus for advice, when they are bid before, in every thing by Prayer and Supplication to let their Request be made known to my Father. Further this, should it be granted, would be to grant that a Door should be set open for Diabolus, and the Diabolonians in Mansoul to hatch and plot and bring to pass treasonable Designs to the grief of my Father and me, and to the utter Destruction of Mansoul.

When Mr. Loth-to-sloop had heard this answer, he took his leave of Emanuel and departed, saying, that he would do Word to his Master concerning this whole Affair. So he departed and came to Diabolus to Mansoul, and told him the whole of the matter, and how Emanuel would not admit, no not by any means, that he when he was once gone out, should for ever have any thing more to do, either in, or with any that are of the Town of Mansoul. When Mansoul and Diabolus had heard this relation of things, they with one consent concluded to use their best endeavour to keep Emanuel out of Mansoul, and sent old Ill-pause, of whom you have heard before, to tell the Prince and his Captains so. So the old Gentlemen came up to the top of Ear-gate, and called to the Camp for a hearing; who when they gave Audience he said, I have in Commandment from my high Lord to bid you to tell it to your Prince Emanuel, That Mansoul and their King are resolved to stand and fall together, and that it is in vain for your Prince to think of ever having of Mansoul in his Hand, unless he can take it by Force. So some went and told to Emanuel what old Ill-pause, a Diabolonian in Mansoul, had said. Then said the Prince, I must try the Power of my Sword, for I will not (for all the Rebellions and Repulses that Mansoul has made against me) raise my Siege and depart, but will assuredly take my Mansoul and deliver it from the Hand of her Enemy. And with that he gave out a Commandment that Captain Boanerges, Captain Conviction, Captain Judgment, and Captain Execution should forthwith march up to Ear-gate with Trumpets founding, Colours flying, and with shouting for the Battle. Also he would that Captain Credence should join himself with them. Emanuel moreover gave order that Captain Goodhope, and Captain Charity should draw themselves up before Eye-gate. He bid also that the rest of his Captains and their Men should place themselves for the best of their Advantage against the Enemy round about the Town, and all was done as he had commanded. Then he bid that the Word should be given forth, and the Word was at that time Emanuel. Then was an alarm sounded, and the battering Rams were plaid, and the slings did whirl stones into the Town again, and thus the Battel began. Now Diabolus himself did manage the Townsmen in the War, and that at every Gate; wherefore their resistance was the more forcible, hellish, and offensive to Emanuel. Thus was the good Prince engaged and entertained by Diabolus in Mansoul for several Days together. And a sight worth seeing it was to behold how the Captains of Shaddai behaved themselves in this War.

And first for Captain Boanerges (not to undervalue the rest) he made three most fierce assaults, one after another, upon Ear-gate, to the shaking of the Posts thereof. Captain Conviction he also made up as fast with Boanerges as possibly he could, and both discerning that the Gate began to yield, they commanded that the Rams should still be played against it. Now Captain Conviction going up very near to the Gate, was with very great force driven back, and received three wounds in the Mouth. And those that rode Reformers, they went about to encourage the Captains.

For the Valour of the two Captains made mention of before, the Prince sent for them to his Pavilion, and commanded that a while they should rest themselves, and that with somewhat they should be refreshed. Care also was taken for Captain Conviction, that he should be healed of his wounds, the Prince also gave to each of them a chain of gold, and bid them yet be of good courage.

Nor did Captain Goodhope, nor Captain Charity come behind in this most desperate fight, for they so well did behave themselves at Eye-gate, that they had almost broken it quite open. These also had a reward from their Prince, as also had the rest of the Captains, because they did valiantly round about the Town.

In this Engagement several of the Officers of Diabolus were slain, and some of the Townsmen wounded. For the Officers, there was one Captain Boasting slain. This Boasting thought that no body could have shaken the Posts of Ear-gate, nor have shaken the Heart of Diabolus. Next to him there was one Captain Secure slain; this Secure used to say that the Blind and Lame in Mansoul were able to keep the Gates of the Town against Emanuel's Army. This Captain Secure did Captain Conviction cleave down the Head with a two handed sword, when he received himself three wounds in his Mouth.

Besides these there was one Captain Bragman, a very desperate fellow, and he was Captain over a band of those that threw firebrands, arrows and death, he also so received by the Hand of Captain Good-hope at Eye-gate a mortal wound in the Breast.

Mr. Feeling hurt.

There was moreover one Mr. Feeling, but he was no Captain, but a great stickler to encourage Mansoul to rebellion, he received a wound in the Eye by the Hand of one of Boanerges soldiers, and had by the Captain himself been slain, but that he made a sudden retreat.

Willbewill hurt.

But I never saw Willbewill so daunted in all my Life, he was not able to do as he was wont, and some say that he also received a wound in the Leg, and that some of the Men in the Prince's Army have certainly seen him limp as he afterwards walked on the Wall.

Many of the Soldiers in Mansoul slain.

I shall not give you a particular account of the Names of the Soldiers that were slain in the Town, for many were maimed and wounded, and slain; for when they saw that the Posts of Ear-gate did shake, and Eye-gate was well nigh broken open; and also that their Captains were slain; this took away the Hearts of many of the Diabolonians, they fell also by the force of the Shot that were sent by the Golden slings into the midst of the Town of Mansoul.

Lovenogod wounded.

Of the Townsmen there was one Love-no-good, he was a Townsman, but a Diabolonian, he also received his mortal wound in Mansoul, but he died not very soon.

Ill-pause wounded.

Mr. Ill-pause also, who was the Man that came along with Diabolus when at first he attempted the taking of Mansoul, he also received a grievous wound in the Head, some say that his brain-pan was crackt; this I have taken notice of that he was never after this able to do that mischief to Mansoul as he had done in times past. Also old Prejudice, and Mr. Anything fled.

The White flag hung out again.

Now when the Battle was over, the Prince commanded that yet once more the White-flag should be set upon mount Gracious in sight of the Town of Mansoul; to shew that yet Emanuel had Grace for the wretched Town of Mansoul.

Diabolus's new prank.

When Diabolus saw the White-flag hangd out again, and knowing that it was not for him but Mansoul; he cast in his mind to play another prank, to wit, to see if Emanuel would raise his siege and be gone upon promise of a Reformation. So he comes down to the Gate one Evening, a good while after the Sun was gone down, and calls to speak with Emanuel, who presently came down to the Gate, and Diabolus saith unto him.

His speech to Emanuel.

For as much as thou makest it appear by thy White-flag, that thou art wholly given to peace and quiet; I thought meet to acquaint thee, that we are ready to accept thereof upon terms which thou maist admit.

I know that thou art given to Devotion, and that Holiness pleases thee; yea that thy great End in making a War upon Mansoul, is, that it may be an holy Habitation. Well, draw off thy forces from the Town, and I will bend Mansoul to thy bow.

Vol. II.

First, I will lay down all acts of hostility against thee, and will be willing to become thy Deputy, and will as I have formerly been against thee, now serve thee in the Town of Mansoul. And more particularly,

Diabolus would be Emanuel's Deputy, and he would turn-reformer.

1. I will perswade Mansoul to receive thee for their Lord, and I know that they will do it the sooner when they shall understand that I am thy Deputy.

2. I will shew them wherein they have erred, and that Transgression stands in the Way to Life.

3. I will shew them the holy Law unto which they must conform, even that which they have broken.

4. I will press upon them the necessity of a Reformation according to thy Law.

5. And moreover that none of these things may fail, I my self at my own proper cost and charge will set up and maintain a sufficient Ministry, besides Lecturers, in Mansoul.

6. Thou shalt receive as a Token of our Subjection to thee continually Year by Year, what thou shalt think fit to lay and levy upon us, in token of our Subjection to thee.

Then said Emanuel to him, O full of deceit, how moveable are thy Ways! how often hast thou changed and rechanged, if so be thou mightest still keep Possession of my Mansoul; though as has been plainly declared before, I am the right heir thereof? Often hast thou made thy proposals already, nor is this last a whit better than they. And failing to deceive when thou shewedst thy self in thy black; thou hast now transformed thy self into an Angel of light, and wouldst to deceive, be now as a Minister of Righteousness. The Answer.

But know thou, O Diabolus, that nothing must be regarded that thou canst propound, for nothing is done by thee but to deceive; thou neither hast conscience to God, nor love to the Town of Mansoul; whence then should these thy sayings arise but from sinful craft and deceit? He that can of list and will propound what he pleases, and that where with he may destroy them that believe him, is to be abandoned with all that he shall say. But if Righteousness be such a Beauty-spot in thine Eyes now, how is it that Wickedness was so closely stuck to by thee before. But this is by thee.

Diabolus has no conscience to God, nor love to Mansoul.

Thou talkest now of a Reformation in Mansoul, and that thou thy self if I will please, will be at the Head of that Reformation, all the while knowing that the greatest proficiency that Man can make in the Law, and the Righteousness thereof, will amount to no more for the taking away of the curse from Mansoul, than

He knows that that will do no good, which yet he propounds for the health of Mansoul.

'than just nothing at all, for a Law being broken by Mansoul, that had before upon a Supposition of the breach thereof, a curse pronounced against him for it of God, can never by his obeying of the Law deliver himself therefrom. (To say nothing of what a reformation is like to be set up in Mansoul, when the Devil is become the corrector of vice.) Thou know'st that all that thou hast now said in this matter is nothing but guile and deceit; and is as it was the first, so it is the last card that thou hast to play. Many there be that do soon discern thee when thou shewest them thy clowen foot; but in thy white, thy light, and in thy Transformation thou art seen but of a few. But thou shalt not do thus with my Mansoul, O Diabolus, for I do still love my Mansoul.

'Besides, I am not come to put Mansoul upon works to live thereby, (should I do so, I should be like unto thee) but I am come, that by me, and by what I have and shall do for Mansoul, they may to my Father be reconciled, though by their Sin they have provoked him to anger, and though by the Law they cannot obtain mercy.

All things must be new in Mansoul.

'Thou talkest of subjecting of this Town to good, when none desireth it at thy hands. I am sent by my Father to possess it myself, and to guide it by the Skillfulness of my hands into such a Conformity to him as shall be pleasing in his sight. I will therefore possess it myself, I will dispossess and cast thee out: I will set up mine own standard in the midst of them: I will also govern them by new Laws, new Officers, new Motives, and new Ways: Yea, I will pull down this Town, and build it again, and it shall be as though it had not been, and it shall then be the glory of the whole Universe.

Diabolus confounded.

When Diabolus heard this, and perceived that he was discovered in all his deceits, he was confounded and utterly put to a nonplus; but having in himself the fountain of iniquity, rage, and malice against both Shaddai and his Son, and the beloved Town of Mansoul, what doth he but strengthen himself what he could to give fresh Battle to the noble Prince Emanuel? So then, now we must have another fight before the Town of Mansoul is taken. Come up then to the Mountains you that love to see military actions, and behold by both sides how the fatal blow is given; while one seeks to hold, and the other seeks to make himself master of the famous Town of Mansoul.

New preparations for to fight.

Diabolus therefore having withdrawn himself from the wall to his force that was in the heart of the Town of Mansoul, Emanuel also returned to the Camp; and both of them after their divers ways, put themselves into a posture fit to bid Battle one to another.

Diabolus as filled with despair of retaining in his hands the famous Town of Mansoul, resolved to do what mischief he could (if indeed he could do any) to the army of the Prince, and to the famous Town of Mansoul, (For alas it was not the happiness of the silly Town of Mansoul that was designed by Diabolus, but the utter ruin and overthrow thereof); as now is enough in view. Wherefore he commands his Officers that they should then, when they see that they could hold the Town no longer, do it what harm and mischief they could, renting and tearing of men, woman and Children. For, said he, we had better quite demolish the place, and leave it like a ruinous heap, than so leave it that it may be an habitation for Emanuel.

Diabolus despairs of holding of Mansoul, and therefore contrives to do it what mischief he can. Mar. 9. 26, 27.

Emanuel again knowing that the next Battel would issue in his being made master of the place, gave out a Royal Commandment to all his Officers, high Captains, and men of War, to be sure to shew themselves men of War against Diabolus, and all Diabolonians; but favourable, merciful, and meek to all the old inhabitants of Mansoul. Bend therefore, said the Noble Prince, the hottest front of the Battle against Diabolus and his men.

So the day being come, the command was given, and the Prince's men did bravely stand to their arms; and did as before, bend their main force against Ear-gate, and Eye-gate. The word was then, Mansoul is Won, so they made their assault upon the Town. Diabolus also as fast as he could with the main of his power, made resistance from within, and his high Lords, and chief Captains for a time fought very cruelly against the Prince's Army.

The Battel joined, and they fight on both sides fiercely.

But after three or four notable Charges by the Prince, and his Noble Captains, Ear-gate was broken open, and the bars and bolts wherewith it was used to be fast shut up against the Prince, was broken into a thousand pieces. Then did the Prince's Trumpets sound, the Captains shout, the Town shake, and Diabolus retreat to his hold. Well, when the Prince's forces had broken open the Gate, himself came up and did set his Throne in it; also he set his standard thereby, upon a mount that before by his men was cast up to place the mighty slings thereon. The mount was called mount Hear-well, there therefore the Prince abode, to wit, hard by the going in at the Gate. He commanded also that the Golden slings should yet be played upon the Town, especially against the Castle, because for shelter thither was Diabolus retreated. Now from Ear-gate the street was streight, even to the house of Mr. Recorder that so was before Diabolus took the Town, and hard by his house stood the Castle, which Diabolus for a long time had made his irk-some den. The Captains therefore did quickly clear that street by the use of their slings, so that way was made up to the heart of the Town.

Ear-gate broken open.

The Prince's Standard set up, and the Slings are plaid still at the Castle.

Then

Then did the Prince command that Captain Boanerges, Captain Conviction, and Capt. Judgment, should forthwith march up the Town to the old * Gentleman's Gate. Then did the Captains in most warlike manner enter into the Town of Mansoul, and marching in with flying Colours, they came up to the Recorder's house, (and that was almost as strong as was the Castle.) Battering Rams they took also with them to plant against the Castle-gates. When they were come to the house of Mr. Conscience, they knocked and demanded entrance. Now the old Gentleman not knowing as yet fully their design, kept his Gates shut all the time of this fight. Wherefore Boanerges demanded entrance at his Gates, and no man making answer, he gave it one stroke with the head of a Ram, and this made the old Gentleman shake, and his house to tremble and totter. Then came Mr. Recorder down to the Gate, and as he could with quivering lips, he asked who was there? Boanerges answered, We are the Captains and Commanders of the great Shaddai, and of the blessed Emanuel his Son, and we demand possession of your house for the use of our noble Prince. And with that the Battering Ram gave the Gate another shake: this made the old Gentleman tremble the more, yet durst he not but open the Gate: then the King's forces marched in, namely the three brave Captains mentioned before. Now the Recorder's house was a place of much convenience for Emanuel, not only because it was near to the Castle, and strong, but also because it was large, and fronted the Castle, the den where now Diabolus was: for he was now afraid to come out of his hold. As for Mr. Recorder, the Captains carried it very reservedly to him, as yet he knew nothing of the great designs of Emanuel; so that he did not know what judgment to make, nor what would be the end of such thundering beginnings. It was also presently noised in the Town, how the Recorder's house was possessed, his rooms taken up, and his Palace made the seat of the War; and no sooner was it noised abroad, but they took the alarm as warmly, and gave it out to others of his friends, (and you know as a snow-ball loses nothing by rolling) so in little time the whole Town was possessed, that they must expect nothing from the Prince but destruction; and the ground of the business was this, the Recorder was afraid, the Recorder trembled, and the Captains carried it strangely to the Recorder; so many came to see, but when they with their own eyes, did behold the Captains in the Palace, and their battering Rams ever playing at the Castle-gates to beat them down; they were riveted in their fears, and it made them all in amaze. And, as I said, the man of the house would increase all this, for whoever came to him, or discoursed with him, nothing would he talk of, tell them, or hear, but that Death and Destruction now attended Mansoul.

For (quoth the old Gentleman) you are all of you sensible that we all have been Traytors to that once despised, but now famously victorious and glorious Prince Emanuel. For he now, as you see, doth not only lie in close Siege about us, but hath forced his entrance in at our Gates; moreover Diabolus flees before him, and he hath as you behold, made of my House a Garrison against the Castle, where he is. I for my part have transgressed greatly (and he that is clean 'tis well for him.) But, I say, I have transgressed greatly in keeping of silence when I should have spoken, and in perverting of Justice when I should have executed the same. True, I have suffered something at the Hand of Diabolus, for taking part with the Laws of King Shaddai; but that alas! What will that do! Will that make Compensation for the Rebellions and Treasons that I have done, and have suffered without gain-saying, to be committed in the Town of Mansoul? O I tremble to think, what will be the End of this so dreadful and so ireful a Beginning!

Now while these brave Captains were thus busy in the House of the old Recorder, Captain Execution was as busy in other Parts of the Town, in securing the Backstreets, and the Walls. He also hunted the Lord Willbewill forely, he suffered him not to rest in any corner. He pursued him so hard, that he drove his Men from him, and made him glad to thrust his Head into a Hole. Also this mighty Warriour did cut three of the Lord Willbewill's Officers down to the ground; one was old Mr. Prejudice, he that had his Crown crackt in the Mutiny; this Man was made by Lord Willbewill Keeper of Ear-gate, and fell by the Hand of Captain Execution. There was also one Mr. Backward to all but naught, and he also was one of Lord Willbewill's Officers, and was the Captain of the two Guns that once were mounted on the Top of Ear-gate, he also was cut down to the ground by the Hands of Captain Execution. Besides these two there was another, a third, and his Name was Captain Treacherous, a vile Man this was, but one that Willbewill did put a great deal of Confidence in, but him also did this Captain Execution cut down to the ground with the rest.

He also made a very great slaughter among my Lord Willbewill's Soldiers, killing many that were stout and sturdy, and wounding of many that for Diabolus were nimble and active. But all these were Diabolonians, there was not a Man, a Native of Mansoul hurt.

Other feats of War were also likewise performed by other of the Captains, as at Eye-gate, where Captain Goodhope, and Captain Charity had a Charge, was great Execution done; for the Captain Goodhope with Captain Goodhope doth slay Captain Blindfold. with his own Hands slew one Captain Blindfold, the Keeper of that Gate; this Blindfold was Captain of a thousand Men, and they were they that fought with Mauls; he also pursued his Men, slew many, and wounded more, and made the rest hide their Heads in corners.

There was also at that Gate Mr. Ill-pause, of whom you have heard before, he was an old Man, and had a Beard that reached down to his Girdle, the same was he that was Orator to Diabolus, he did much mischief in the Town of Mansoul, and fell by the Hand of Captain Goodhope.

And old Ill-pause. What shall I say, the Diabolonians in these Days lay dead in every corner, tho' too many yet were alive in Mansoul.

The old Townsmen meet and consult. Now the old Recorder, and my Lord Understanding, with some others of the chief of the Town, to wit, such as knew they must stand and fall with the famous Town of Mansoul, came together upon a Day, and after Consultation had, did jointly agree to draw up a Petition, and to send it to Emanuel, now while he sat in the Gate of Mansoul. So they drew up their Petition to Emanuel, the Contents whereof were this, That they, the old Inhabitants of the now deplorable Town of Mansoul, confessed their Sin, and were sorry that they had offended his Princely Majesty, and prayed that he would spare their Lives.

The Castle-Gates broke open. Upon this Petition he gave no answer at all, and that did trouble them yet so much the more. Now all this while the Captains that were in the Recorder's House were playing with the battering Rams at the Gates of the Castle to beat them down. So after some time, labour and travel, the Gate of the Castle that was called Impregnable, was beaten open, and broken into several Splinters; and so a way made to go up to the hold in which Diabolus had hid himself. Then was tidings sent down to Ear-gate, for Emanuel still abode there, to let him know that a way was made in at the Gates of the Castle of Mansoul. But Oh! how the Trumpets at the tidings sounded throughout the Prince's Camp, for that now the War was so near an End, and Mansoul it self of being set free.

Emanuel marches into Mansoul. Then the Prince arose from the place where he was, and took with him such of his Men of War as were fittest for that Expedition, and marched up the Street of Mansoul to the old Recorder's House.

Now the Prince himself was clad all in Armour of Gold, and so he marched up the Town with his Standard born before him; but he kept his Countenance much reserved all the way as he went, so that the People could not tell how to gather to themselves love or hatred by his Looks. Now as he marched up the Street, the Townsfolk came out at every Door to see, and could not but be taken with his Person, and the Glory thereof, but wondred at the reservedness of his Countenance; for as yet he spake more to them by his Actions and Works, than he did by Words or Smiles. But also poor Mansoul, (as in such cases all are apt to do) they interpreted the Carriages of Emanuel to them, as did Joseph's Brethren his to them, even all the quite contrary way: For thought they, if Emanuel loved us, he would shew it to us by Word or Carriage, but none of these he doth, therefore Emanuel hates us. Now if Emanuel hates us, then Mansoul shall be slain, then Mansoul shall become a Dunghill. They knew that they had transgressed his Father's Law, and that against him they had been in with Diabolus his Enemy. They also knew that the Prince Emanuel knew all this; for they were convinced that he was as an Angel of God, to know all things that are done in the Earth. And this made them think that their Condition was miserable, and that the good Prince would make them desolate.

And thought they, what time so fit to do this in as now, when he has the bridle of Mansoul in his Hand. And this I took special notice of, that the Inhabitants (notwithstanding all this) could not; no, they could not, when they see him march through the Town, but cringe, bow, bend, and were ready to lick the dust of his feet. They also wished a thousand times over, that he would become their Prince and Captain, and would become their Protection. They would also one to another talk of the comeliness of his Person, and how much for Glory and Valour he out-stripped the great ones of the World. But poor Hearts, as to themselves their thoughts would change, and go upon all manner of Extreams. Yea through the working of them backward and forward, Mansoul became as a Ball tossed, and as a rolling Thing before the Whirlwind.

Now when he was come to the Castle-Gates, he commanded Diabolus to appear and to surrender himself into his Hands. But Oh how loth was the Beast to appear! How he stuck at it! How he shrunk! I how he cringed! Yet out he came to the Prince. Then Emanuel commanded, and they took Diabolus and bound him fast in Chains, the better to reserve him to the Judgment that he had appointed for him. But Diabolus stood up to intreat for himself, that Emanuel would not send him into the deep, but suffer him to depart out of Mansoul in peace.

When Emanuel had taken him and bound him in Chains, he led him into the Market-place, and there before Mansoul, stripped him of his armour in which he boasted so much before. This now was one of the Acts of Triumph of Emanuel over his Enemy, and all the while that the Giant was stripping, the Trumpets of the Golden Prince did sound again; the Captains also shouted, shouted, and the Soldiers did sing for Joy.

Mansoul
must behold it.

Then was Mansoul called upon to behold the beginning of Emanuel's Triumph over him in whom they so much had trusted, and of whom they so much had boasted in the Days when he had flattered them.

Ephes. 4.
He is bound to his Chariot-wheels.

Thus having made Diabolus naked in the Eyes of Mansoul, and before the Commanders of the Prince; in the next place he commands that Diabolus should be bound with Chains to his Chariot Wheels. Then leaving of some of his Forces, to wit, Captain Boanerges, and Captain Conviction, as a Guard for the Castle-gates, that Resistance might be made on his behalf, (if any that heretofore followed Diabolus should make an attempt to possess it) he did ride in Triumph over him quite through the Town of Mansoul, and so out at, and before the Gate called Eye-gate, to the Plain where his Camp did lie.

But you cannot think unless you had been there (as I was) what a shout there was in Emanuel's Camp when they saw the Tyrant bound by the Hand of their noble Prince, and tied to his Chariot-wheels!

They sing

And they said, He hath led Captivity captive, he hath spoiled Principalities and Powers, Diabolus is subjected to the power of his Sword, and made the object of all derision.

The Refor-
mades Joy.

10.

Those also that rode Reformades, and that came down to see the Baatle, they shouted with that greatness of Voice, and sung with such melodious Notes, that they caused them that dwell in the highest Orbs to open their Windows, put out their Heads, and look down to see the cause of that Glory.

The Men of Mansoul
taken with Emanuel.

The Townsmen also, so many of them as saw this Sight, were as it were, while they looked, betwixt the Earth and the Heavens. True, they could not tell what would be the issue of things as to them, but all things were done in such excellent Methods; and I cannot tell how, but things in the Management of them seemed to cast a Smile towards the Town, so that their Eyes, their Heads, their Hearts, and their Minds, and all that they had were taken and held, while they observed Emanuel's Order.

Mat. 12.

So when the brave Prince had finished this part of his Triumph over Diabolus his Foe, he turned him up in the midst of his Contempt and Shame, having given him a charge no more to be a possessor of Mansoul. Then went he from Emanuel, and out of the midst of his Camp to inherit the parched places in a salt Land, seeking rest but finding none.

Now Captain Boanerges, and Captain Conviction were both of them Men of very great Majesty, their Faces were like the Faces of Lions, and their Words like the roaring of the Sea; and they still quartered in Mr. Conscience's House, of whom mention was made before. When therefore the high and mighty Prince had thus far finished his Triumph over Diabolus, the Townsmen had more leisure to view and to behold the Actions of these noble Captains. But the Captains carried it with that terror and dread in all that they did (and you may be sure that they had private Instructions so to do) that they kept the Town under continual Heart-aking, and caused (in their Apprehension) the well being of Mansoul for the future, to hang in doubt before them, so that (for some considerable time) they neither knew what Rest or Ease, or Peace, or Hope meant.

Nor did the Prince himself, as yet, abide in the Town of Mansoul, but in his Royal Pavilion in the Camp, and in the midst of his Father's forces. So at a Time convenient, he sent special Orders to Captain Boanerges to summons Mansoul, the whole of the Townsmen, into the Castle yard, and then and there before their Faces, to take my Lord Understanding, Mr. Conscience, and that notable one the Lord Willbewill, and put them all three in Ward, and that they should set a strong Guard upon them there, until his pleasure concerning them were further known. The which Orders when the Captains had put them in Execution, made no small Addition to the fears of the Town of Mansoul: for now to their thinking, were their former fears of the ruin of Mansoul confirmed. Now, what death they should die, and how long they should be in dying, was that which most perplexed their Heads and Hearts: yea, they were afraid that Emanuel would command them all into the Deep, the Place that the Prince Diabolus was afraid of; for they knew that they had deserved it. Also to die by the Sword in the Face of the Town, and in the open way of Disgrace, from the Hand of so good and so holy a Prince, that (too) troubled them sore.

The Town was also greatly troubled for the Men that were committed to Ward, for that they were their stay and their guide, and for that they believed that if those Men were cut off, their Execution would be but the beginning of the ruin of the Town of Mansoul. Wherefore what do they, but together with the Men in Prison, draw up a Petition to the Prince, and sent it to Emanuel by the hand of Mr. Wouldlive. So he went and came to the Prince's quarters, and presented the Petition: the sum of which was this.

Great and wonderful Potentate, Victor over Diabolus, and Conqueror of the Town of Mansoul: We the miserable inhabitants of that most woful Corporation, do humbly beg that we may find favour in thy sight, and remember not against us former Transgressions, nor yet the Sins of the chief of our Town, but spare us according to the Greatness of thy Mercy, and let us not die, but live live in thy sight: so shall we be willing to be thy servants, and if thou shalt think fit, to gather our meat under thy Table. Amen.

They are answered with silence.

So the Petitioner went as was said with his Petition to the Prince, and the Prince, took it at his hand, but sent him away with silence. This still afflicted the Town of Mansoul, but yet considering that now they must either petition, or die; for now they could not do any thing else; therefore they consulted again, and sent another Petition, and this Petition was much after the form and method of the former.

They Petition again.

They cannot tell by whom to send it.

But when the Petition was drawn up, by whom should they send it, was the next question; for they would not send this by him by whom they sent the first, (for they thought that the Prince had taken some offence at the manner of his deportment before him,) so they attempted to make Captain Conviction their messenger with it, but he said, That he neither durst nor would petition Emanuel for Traytors; nor be to the Prince an Advocate for Rebels. Yet withal, said he, our Prince is good, and you may adventure to send it by the hand of one of your Town; provided he went with a Rope about his Head, and pleaded nothing but Mersey.

Well, they made through fear their delays as long as they could, and longer than delays were good, but fearing at last the Dangerousness of them, they thought, but with many a fainting in their minds, to send their Petition by Mr. Desires-awake; so they sent for Mr. Desires-awake; now he dwelt in a very mean cottage in Mansoul, and he came at his neighbours request. So they told him what they had done, and what they would do concerning petitioning, and that they did desire of him that he would go therewith to the Prince.

Mr. Desires-awake goes with the Petition to the Prince.

Then said Mr. Desires-awake, Why should not I do the best I can to save so famous a Town as Mansoul from deserved Destruction? They therefore delivered the Petition to him, and told him how he must address himself to the Prince, and wish him ten thousand good speeds. So he comes to the Prince's Pavilion, as the first, and asked to speak with his Majesty: so word was carried to Emanuel, and the Prince came out to the Man. When Mr. Desires-awake saw the Prince, he fell flat with his face to the Ground, and cried out, O that Mansoul might live before thee! and with that he presented the Petition. The which when the Prince had read, he turned away for a while and wept, but refraining himself, he turned again to the Man (who all this while lay crying at his feet as at the first) and said to him, Go thy way to thy place, and I will consider of thy requests.

His Entertainment.

Now you may think that they of Mansoul that had sent him, what with guilt, and what with fear, left their Petition should be rejected, could not but look with many a long look, and that too with strange workings of heart, to see what would become of their Petition. At last they saw their messenger coming back; so when he was come, they asked him how he fared, what Emanuel said? and what was become of the Petition. But he told them that he would be silent till he came to the Prison to my Lord Mayor, my Lord Willbewill, and Mr. Recorder. So he went forwards towards the Prison-house, where the Men of Mansoul lay bound. But Oh! what a multitude flocked after to hear what the Messenger said. So when he was come and had shewn himself at the Grate of the Prison, my Lord Mayor himself lookt as white as a clout, the Recorder also did quake: but they asked and said, Come, good Sir, what did the great Prince say to you? Then said Mr. Desires-awake when I came to my Lord's Pavilion, I called, and he came forth; so I fell prostrate at his feet, and delivered to him my Petition, (for the Greatness of his Person, and the Glory of his Countenance would not suffer me to stand upon my legs.) Now as he received the Petition, I cried, O that Mansoul might live before thee! So when for a while he had looked thereon, he turned him about and said to his servant, Go thy way to thy place again, and I will consider of thy requests. The Messenger added moreover, and said, The Prince to whom you sent me, is such a one for Beauty and Glory, that who so sees him must both love and fear him: I for my part can do no less, but I know not what will be the end of these Things. At this answer they were all at a stand, both they in Prison, and they that followed the Messenger thither to hear the News, nor knew they what, or what manner of Interpretation to put upon what the Prince had said. Now when the Prison was cleared of the Throng, the Prisoners among themselves began to comment upon Emanuel's Words. My Lord Mayor said, That the answer did not look with a rugged Face; but Willbewill said, it betokened evil; and the Recorder, that it was a messenger of Death. Now they that were left, and that stood behind, and so could not so well hear what the Prisoners said, some of them catcht hold of one piece of a Sentence, and some on a bit of another, some took hold of what the Messenger said, and some of the Prisoners judgment thereon, so none had the right understanding of things; but you cannot imagine what work these People made, and what a Confusion there was in Mansoul now.

His return and answer to them that sent him.

Mansoul confounded at the answer.

The Prisoners judgment upon the Prince's answer.

Misgiving thoughts breed confusion in Mansoul.

For presently they that had heard what was said, flew about the Town, one crying one thing, and another the quite contrary, and both were sure enough they told true, for they did hear they said said with their Ears what was said, and therefore could not be deceived. One would say, We must all be killed; another would say, We must all be saved; and a third would say, that the Prince would not be concerned with Mansoul; and a fourth, that the Prisoners must be suddenly put to Death. And as I said, every one stood to it, that he told his tale the rightest; and that all others but he were out. Wherefore Mansoul had now Molestation upon Molestation, nor could any Man know on what to rest the sole of his foot; for one would go by now, and as he went, if he heard his Neighbour tell his tale, to be sure he would tell the quite contrary, and both would stand in it that he told the truth. Nay, some of them had got this Story by the End, That the Prince did intend to put Mansoul to the Sword. And now it began to be dark, wherefore poor Mansoul was in sad perplexity all that Night until the Morning.

Mansoul
in perplexity.

But so far as I could gather by the best Information that I could get, all this hubbub came through the Words that the Recorder said, when he told them, That in his Judgment the Prince's answer was a messenger of death. 'Twas this that fired the Town, and that began the fright in Mansoul; for Mansoul in former times did use to count that Mr. Recorder was a Seer, and that his Sentence was equal to the best of Oracles; and thus was Mansoul a terror to it self.

What will Guilt do.

And now did they begin to feel what was the effects of stubborn Rebellion, and unlawful Resistance against their Prince. I say they now begin to feel the effects thereof by guilt and fear that now had swallowed them up; and who more involved in the one but they that were most in the other, to wit, the chief of the Town of Mansoul.

They resolve to Petition
again.

To be brief, when the fame of the fright was out of the Town, and the Prisoners had a little recovered themselves, they take to themselves some Heart, and think to petition the Prince for Life again. So they did draw up a third Petition, the Contents whereof was this.

Their Petition.

Prince Emanuel the Great, Lord of all Worlds, and master of mercy, we thy poor wretched, miserable dying Town of Mansoul, do confess unto thy great and glorious Majesty, that we have sinned against thy Father and thee, and are no more worthy to be called thy Mansoul, but rather to be cast into the Pit. If thou wilt slay us, we have deserved it. If thou wilt condemn us to the deep, we cannot but say thou art righteous. We cannot complain whatever thou dost, or however thou carriest it towards us. But Oh! let mercy reign! And let it be extended to us! O let mercy take hold upon us, and free us from our Transgressions, and we will sing of thy mercy, and of thy judgment. Amen.

This Petition when drawn up was designed to be sent to the Prince as the first, but who should carry it, that was the question. Some said, let him do it that went with the first, but others thought not good to do that, and that because he sped no better. Now there was an old Man in the Town, and his Name was Mr. Good-deed. A Man that bare only the Name, but had nothing of the Nature of the thing; now some were for sending of him, but the Recorder was by no means for that. For, said he, we now stand in need of, and are pleading for mercy, wherefore to send our Petition by a Man of this Name will seem to cross the Petition it self; should we make Mr. Good-deed our messenger, when our Petition cries for mercy?

Prayer atficulty.

Old Good-deed propounded as a fit

Petition,
the old and he is rejected.

Besides, quoth the old Gentleman, should the Prince now, as he receives the Petition, ask him, and say, What is thy Name? As no body knows but he will; and he should say, Old Good-deed; what, think you, would Emanuel say but this, Ay, is old Good-deed yet alive in Mansoul, then let old Good-deed save you from your distresses. And if he says so, I am sure we are lost, nor can a thousand of old Good-deeds save Mansoul.

After the Recorder had given in his Reasons why old Good-deed should not go with this Petition to Emanuel; the rest of the Prisoners and chief of Mansoul opposed it also, and so old Good-deed was laid aside, and they agreed to send Mr. Desires-awake again; so they sent for him, and desired him that he would a second time go with their Petition to the Prince, and he readily told them he would. But they bid him that in any wise he would take heed that in no Word or Carriage he gave offence to the Prince, for by doing so, for ought we can tell, you may bring Mansoul into utter Destruction, said they.

Now Mr. Desires-awake, when he saw that he must go of this Errand, besought that they would grant that Mr. Wet-eyes might go with him. Now this Wet-eyes was a near Neighbour of Mr. Desires, a poor Man, a Man of a broken Spirit, yet one that could speak well to a Petition. So they granted that he should go with him. Wherefore they addressed themselves to their Business; Mr. Desires put a Rope upon his Head, and Mr. Wet-eyes went with Hands wringing together. Thus they went to the Prince's Pavilion.

Desires-awake goes again and takes one Wet-eyes
with him,

Now when they went to petition this third time, they were not without thoughts that by often coming they might be a burden to the Prince. Wherefore when they were come to the Door of his Pavillion, they first made their Apology for themselves, and for their coming to trouble Emanuel so often; and they said, That they came not hither to Day, for that they delighted in being troublesome, or for that they delighted to hear themselves talk; but for

for that Necessity caused them to come to his Majesty; they could, they said, have no rest Day nor Night, because of their Transgressions against Shaddai, and against Emanuel his Son. They also thought that some misbehaviour of Mr. Desires awake the last time might give distaste to his Highness; and so caused that he returned from so merciful a Prince empty, and without Countenance. So when they had made this Apology, Mr. Desires awake cast himself prostrate upon the Ground as at the first, at the Feet of the mighty Prince, saying, Oh! that Mansoul might live before thee! And so he delivered his Petition. The Prince then having read the Petition, turned aside a while as before, and coming again to the place where the Petitioner lay on the Ground, he demanded what his Name was, and of what esteem in the account of Mansoul? For that he above all the Multitude in Mansoul should be sent to him upon such an Errand. Then said the Man to the Prince, O let not my Lord be angry; and why enquirest thou after the Name of such a dead dog as I am? Pass by I pray thee, and take no notice of who I am, because there is, as thou very well knowest, so great a disproportion between me and thee. Why the Townsmen chose to send me on this Errand to my Lord, is best known to themselves, but it could not be, for that they thought that I had favour with my Lord. For my part I am out of charity with myself, who then should be in Love with me? Yet live I would, and so would I, that my Townsmen should; and because both they and my self are guilty of great Transgressions, therefore they have sent me, and I am come in their Names to beg of my Lord for mercy. Let it please thee therefore to incline to mercy, but ask not what thy Servants are.

Then said the Prince, And what is he that is become thy Companion in this so weighty a matter? So Mr. Desires told Emanuel, that he was a poor Neighbour of his, and one of his most intimate Associates, and his Name, said he, may it please your most excellent Majesty, is Wet-eyes of the Town of Mansoul. I know that there are many of that Name that are naught, but I hope it will be no offence to my Lord, that I have brought my poor Neighbour with me.

Then Mr. Wet-eyes fell on his Face to the Ground, and made this Apology for his coming with his Neighbour to his Lord.

O my Lord, quoth he, what I am, I know not my self, nor whether my Name be feigned or true, especially when I begin to think what some have said, namely, that this Name was given me, because Mr. Repentance was my Father. Good Men have bad Children, and the sincere do oftentimes beget Hypocrites. My Mother also called me by this Name from my Cradle, but whether because of *the moistness of my Brain, or because of the softness of my Heart, I cannot tell. I see dirt in mine own Tears, and filthiness in the bottom of my Prayers. But I pray thee (and all this while the Gentleman wept) that thou wouldest not remember against us our Transgressions, nor take offence at the unqualifiedness of thy Servants, but mercifully pass by the Sin of Mansoul, and refrain from the glorifying of thy Grace no longer.*

So at his bidding they arose, and both stood trembling before him, and he spake to them to this purpose.

*The Town of Mansoul hath grievously rebelled against my Father, in that they have rejected him from being their King, and did chuse to themselves for their Captain, a Lier, a Murderer, and a runnagate Slave. For this Diabolus, and your pretended Prince, though once so highly accounted of by you, made Rebellion against my Father and me, even in our Palace and highest Court there, thinking to become a Prince and King. But being there timely discovered and apprehended, and for his Wickedness bound in Chains, and separated to the Pit with those that were his Companions, he offered himself to you, and you have received him.*

*Now this is, and for a long time hath been an high affront to my Father; wherefore my Father sent to you a powerful Army to reduce you to your Obedience. But you know how those Men, their Captains, and their Counsels were esteemed of you, and what they received at your Hand. You rebelled against them, you shut your Gates upon them, you bid them Battle, you fought them, and fought for Diabolus against them. So they sent to my Father for more Power, and I with my Men are come to subdue you. But as you treated the Servants, so you treated their Lord. You stood up in hostile manner against me, you shut up your Gates against me, you turned the deaf Ear to me, and resisted as long as you could; but now I have made a Conquest of you. Did you cry me Mercy so long as you had hopes that you might prevail against me? But now I have taken the Town, you cry; but why did you not cry before, when the white Flag of my Mercy, the red Flag of Justice, and the black Flag that threatned Execution, were set up to cite you to it? Now I have conquered your Diabolus, you come to me for favour; but why did you not help me against the mighty? Yet I will consider your Petition, and will answer it so as will be for my Glory.*

Go bid Captain Boanerges, and Captain Conviction bring the Prisoners out to me into the Camp to morrow, and say you to Captain Judgment, and Captain Execution;

The Prince talketh with them.

Mr. Desires free Speech to his Prince.

Mr. Wet-eyes Apology for his coming with his Neighbour.

The Prince's Answer.

The Original of Diabolus.

'cution; stay you in the Castle, and take good heed to your selves that you keep all quiet in Mansoul until you shall hear further from me; and with that he turned himself from them, and went to his Royal Pavilion again.'

So the petitioners having received this answer from the Prince, returned as at the first, to go to their Companions again. But they had not gone far, but thoughts began to work in their Minds, that no Mercy as yet was intended by the Prince to Mansoul; so they went to the place where the prisoners lay bound; but these workings of Mind about what would become of Mansoul, had such strong power over them, that by that they were come unto them that sent them, they were scarce able to deliver their Message.

* Of Inquisitive thoughts.

The Messengers in telling their Tale, fright the Prisoners.

But they came at length to the Gates of the Town (now the Townsmen with earnestness were waiting for their return) where many met them to know what answer was made to the Petition. Then they cried out to those that were sent, What News from the Prince, and what hath Emanuel said? But they said, that they must (as afore) go up to the Prison and there deliver their Message. So away they went to the Prison with a * Multitude at their Heels. Now when they were come to the Gates of the Prison, they told the first part of Emanuel's Speech to the Prisoners, to wit, how he reflected upon their disloyalty to his Father and himself, and how they had chose, and closed with Diabolus, had fought for him, hearkened to him, and been ruled by him, but had despised him and his Men. This made the prisoners look pale, but the Messengers proceeded, and said, He, the Prince, said moreover, that yet he would consider your Petition, and give such answer thereto as would stand with his Glory. And as these Words were spoken, Mr. Wet-eyes gave a great Sigh. At this they were all of them struck into their dumps, and could not tell what to say; Fear also possessed them in marvellous manner, and Death seemed to sit upon some of their Eyebrows. Now there was in the Company a notable sharp-witted Fellow, a mean Man of Estate, and his Name was old Inquisitive, this Man asked the Petitioners if they had told out every whit of what Emanuel said. And they answered, Verily, no. Then said Inquisitive, I thought so indeed. Pray what was it more that he said unto you? Then they paused a while, but at last they brought out all, saying, the Prince did bid us, bid Captain Boanerges, and Captain Conviction bring the Prisoners down to him to morrow, and that Captain Judgment, and Captain Execution should take charge of the Castle and Town till they should hear further from him. They said also, That when the Prince had commanded them thus to do, he immediately turned his Back upon them, and went into his Royal Pavilion.

Vol. II.

But, O how this return, and specially this last clause of it, that the Prisoners must go out to the Prince into the Camp, brake all their loins in pieces! Wherefore with one Voice they set up a Cry that reached up to the Heavens. This done, each of the three prepared himself to die, (and the [†] Conscience. Recorder said unto them, This was the thing that I feared;) for they concluded that to morrow by that the Sun went down, they should be tumbled out of the World. The whole Town also counted of no other, but that in their time and order they must all drink of the same Cup. Wherefore the Town of Mansoul spent that Night in Mourning and Sackcloth, and Ashes. The Prisoners also when the time was come for them to go down before the Prince, dressed themselves in Mourning Attire, with Ropes upon their Head. The whole Town of Mansoul also, shewed themselves upon the Wall, all clad in mourning Weeds, if perhaps the Prince with the sight thereof might be moved with Compassion. But Oh how the || Busy-bodies that were in the || Vain thoughts. Town of Mansoul, did now concern themselves! They ran here and there thro' the Streets of the Town by Companies, crying out as they run in tumultuous wise, one after one manner, and another the quite contrary, to the almost utter distraction of Mansoul.

Well, the time is come that the prisoners must go down to the Camp, and appear before the Prince. And thus was the manner of their going down: Captain Boanerges went with a guard before them, and Captain Conviction came behind, and the prisoners went down bound in chains in the midst; so I say (the prisoners went in the midst, and) the Guard went with flying Colours behind and before, but the prisoners went with drooping Spirits.

Or more particularly thus:

How they went.

The prisoners went down all in Mourning, they put ropes upon themselves; they went on smiting of themselves on the breasts, but durst not lift up their Eyes to Heaven. Thus they went out at the Gate of Mansoul, till they came into the midst of the Prince's army, the Sight and Glory of which did greatly heighten their affliction. Nor could they now longer forbear, but cry out aloud, O unhappy men! O wretched men of Mansoul! Their Chains still mixing their dolorous notes, with the cries of the prisoners, made the noise more lamentable.

They fall down prostrate before him.

So when they were come to the door of the Prince's Pavilion, they cast themselves prostrate upon the place; then one went in and told his Lord that the prisoners were come down. The Prince then ascended a Throne of State, and sent for the prisoners in; who when they came, did tremble before fore him, also they covered their faces with shame. Now as they drew near to the place where he sat, they threw themselves down before him; then said the Prince to the Captain Boanerges, Bid the prisoners stand upon their feet: then they stood trembling before him, and he said, Are you the men that heretofore were the Servants of Shaddai! And they said, Yes, Lord, yes.

The are upon their tryal.

Then said the Prince again, Are you the men that did suffer yourselves to be corrupted, and defiled by that abominable one Diabolus? And they said, We did more than suffer it, Lord; for we chose it of our own mind. The Prince asked further, saying, Could you have been content that your slavery should have continued under his tyranny as long as you had lived? Then said the prisoners, Yes, Lord, yes; for his ways were pleasing to our flesh, and we were grown aliens to a better state.

And did you, said he, when I came up against this Town of Mansoul, heartily wish that I might not have the victory over you? Yes, Lord, yes, said they. Then said the Prince, And what Punishment is it, think you, that you deserve at my hand for these and other your high and mighty sins? And they said, Both Death and the deep, Lord; for we have deserved no less. He asked again, If they had ought to say for themselves, why the sentence that they confessed that they had deserved, should not be passed upon them? And they said, We can say nothing, Lord; thou art just, for we have sinned. Then said the Prince, And for what are those ropes on your heads? The prisoners answered, These

They condemn themselves.

* Sins. Prov. 5. 22.

* Powers of the Soul. † Corruptions and lusts.

* A victory proclaimed.

*ropes are to bind us withal to the place of Execution, if mercy be not pleasing in thy sight. So he further asked, If all the men in the Town of Mansoul were in this confession, as they? And they answered, All the natives, but for the † Diabolonians that came into our Town when the Tyrant got possession of us, we can say nothing for them.

Then the Prince commanded that an * Herald should be called, and that he should in the midst, and throughout the Camp of Emanuel proclaim, and that with sound of Trumpet, that the Prince, the Son of Shaddai, had in his Father's name, and for his Father's glory, gotten a perfect conquest and victory over Mansoul, and that the prisoners should follow him and say, Amen. So this was done as he had commanded. And presently the * Musick that was in the upper region sounded melodiously. The Captains that were in the Camp shouted, and the Souldiers did sing Songs of Triumph to the Prince, the Colours waved in the wind, and great joy was every where, only it was wanting as yet in the hearts of the Men of Mansoul.

* Joy for the victory.

They are pardoned and are commanded to proclaim it to morrow in Mansoul.

Then the Prince called for the prisoners to come and to stand again before him, and they came and stood trembling. And he said unto them, The Sins, Trespasses, Iniqui- ties, that you with the whole Town of Mansoul, have from time to time committed against my Father and me, I have power and commandment from my Father to forgive to the Town of Mansoul; and do forgive you accordingly. And having so said, he gave them written in Parchment, and sealed with seven Seals, a large and general pardon, commanding both my Lord Mayor, my Lord Wilbewill, and Mr. Recorder, to proclaim, and cause it to be proclaimed to morrow by that the Sun is up, throughout the whole Town of Mansoul.

Moreover the Prince stript the Prisoners of their mourning weeds, and gave them beauty for ashes, the oyl of joy for mourning, and the Garment of Praise for the Spirit of Heaviness. Their rags are taken from them Isa. 61. 3.

Then he gave to each of the three, Jewels of Gold, and precious Stones, and took away their ropes, and put chains of Gold about their necks, and Ear-rings in their Ears. Now the prisoners when they did hear the gracious words of Prince Emanuel, and had beheld all that was done unto them, fainted almost quite away; for the Grace, the Benefit, the Pardon, was sudden, glorious, and so big, that they were not able without staggering to stand up under it. Yea, my Lord Wilbewill swooned out-right, but the Prince stepped to him, put his everlasting arms under him, imbraced him, kissed him, and bid him be of good cheer, for all should be performed according to his Word. He also did kiss and imbrace, and smile upon the other two that were Wilbewill's companions, saying, take these as further tokens of my Love, Favour and Compassions to you: and I charge you, that you Mr. Recorder tell in the Town of Mansoul what you have heard and seen. A strange Alteration

Then were their Fetters broken to pieces before their Faces, and cast into the Air, and their Steps were enlarged under them. Then they fell down at the feet of the Prince, and kissed his Feet, and wetted them with Tears; also they cried out with a mighty strong voice, saying, Blessed be the Glory of the Lord from this place. So they were bid rise up, and go to the Town, and tell to Mansoul what the Prince had done. He commanded also that one with a Pipe and Tabor should go and play before them all the way into the Town of Mansoul. Then was fulfilled what they never looked for, and they were made to possess that which they never dreamt of. The Prince also called for the noble Captain Credence, and commanded that he and some of his Officers should march before the Noble men of Mansoul with flying Colours into the Town. He gave also unto Captain Credence a Charge that about that time that the Recorder did read the general pardon in the Town of Mansoul, that at that very time he should with flying Colours march in at Eye-gate with his ten thousands at his feet, and that he Their guilt. They are sent home with Pipe and Tabor. Captain Credence guards them home. When Faith and Pardon meet together, Judgment and Execution depart from the heart.

he should so go until he came by the high street of the Town, up to the Castle Gates, and that himself should take possession thereof against his Lord came thither. He commanded moreover that he should bid Captain Judgment, and Captain Execution to leave the strong hold to him, and to withdraw from Mansoul, and to return into the Camp with speed unto the Prince.

And now was the Town of Mansoul also delivered from the terrour of the first four Captains and their Men.

Well, I told you before how the prisoners were entertained by the noble Prince Emanuel, and how they behaved themselves before him, and how he sent them away to their home with Pipe and Tabor going before them. And now you must think that those of the Town that had all this while waited to hear of their Death, could not but be exercised with Sadness of Mind, and with thoughts that pricked like thorns. Nor could their thoughts be kept to any one point: the wind blew with them all this while at great uncertainties, yea their Hearts were like a Balance that had been disquieted with shaking hand. But at last as they with many a long look looked over the wall of Mansoul, they thought that they saw some returning to the Town; and thought again, who should they be too, who should they be! At last they discerned that they were the Prisoners; but can you imagine how their Hearts were surprized with wonder! specially when they perceived also in what Equipage, and with what Honour they were sent home! They went down to the Camp in Black, but they came back to the Town in White; they went down to the Camp in Ropes, they came back in Chains of Gold; they went down to the Camp with their Feet in Fetters, but came back with their Steps enlarged under them; they went also to the Camp, looking for Death, but they came back from thence with Assurance of Life; they went down to the Camp with heavy Hearts, but came back again with Pipe and Tabor playing before them. So, as soon as they were come to Eye-gate, the poor and tottering Town of Mansoul, adventured to give a Shout; and they gave such a Shout as made the Captains in the Prince's Army leap at the sound thereof.

Alas! for them poor hearts, who could blame them, since their dead friends were come to life again? for 'twas to them as Life from the Dead, to see the ancients of the Town of Mansoul to shine in such splendour. They looked for nothing but the Ax and the Block; but behold! Joy and Gladness, Comfort and Consolation, and such melodious Notes attending of them that was sufficient to make a Sick-man well. So when they came up, they saluted each other with welcome, welcome, and blessed be he that has spared you. They added also, We see it is well with you, but how must it go with the Town of Mansoul, and will it go well with the Town of Mansoul, said they? Then answered them the Recorder, and my Lord Mayor, Oh! Tidings! glad tidings! good tidings of good! and of great joy to poor Mansoul! Then they gave another shout that made the Earth to ring again. After this they enquired yet more particularly how things went in the Camp, and what message they had from Emanuel to the Town. So they told them all passages that had happened to them at the Camp, and every thing that the Prince did to them. This made Mansoul wonder at the Wisdom and Grace of the Prince Emanuel; then they told them what they had received at his hands for the whole Town of Mansoul; and the Recorder delivered it in these words, PARDON, PARDON, PARDON for Mansoul; and this shall Mansoul know to morrow. Then he commanded, and they went and summoned Mansoul to meet together in the Market-place to morrow, there to hear their general Pardon read.

But who can think what a turn, what a change, what an Alteration this hint of things did make in the Countenance of the Town of Mansoul! no Man of Mansoul could sleep that night for Joy; in every House there was joy and musick, singing and making merry, telling and hearing of Mansoul's Happiness, was then all that Mansoul had to do: and this was the burden of all their Song: Oh! more of this at the rising of the Sun! more of this to morrow! Who thought yesterday, would one say, that this day would have been such a day to us? And who thought, that saw our Prisoners go down in Irons, that they would have returned in chains of gold! yea, they that judged themselves as they went to be judged of their Judge, were by his mouth acquitted, not for that they were innocent, but of the Prince's mercy, and sent home with Pipe and Tabor.

But is this the common Custom of Princes, do they use to shew such kind of favours to Traytors? No! this is only peculiar to Shaddai, and unto Emanuel his Son.

Now morning drew on apace, wherefore the Lord Mayor, the Lord Willbewill, and Mr. Recorder came down to the Market-place at the time that the Prince had appointed, where the Townsfolk were waiting for them; and when they came, they came in that attire, and in that glory that the Prince had put them into the Day before, and the street was lightened with their Glory: so the Mayor, Recorder, and my Lord Willbewill, drew down to Mouth-gate, which was at the lower end of the Market-place, because that of old time was the Place where they used to read publick matters. Thither therefore they came in their their Robes, and their Tabret went before them. Now the Eagerness of the People, to know the full of the matter, was great.

The manner of reading the Pardon.

Then the Recorder stood up upon his Feet, and first beckoning with his Hand for a silence, he read out with a loud Voice the Pardon. But when he came to these words, The Lord, the Lord God merciful and gracious, pardoning Iniquity, Transgressions and Sins; and to them, all manner of Sin and Blasphemy shall be forgiven, &c. they could not forbear but leap for joy. For this you must know, that there was conjoined herewith every Man's Name in Mansoul; also the seals of the Pardon made a brave shew.

Exod. 34. Mar. 3.

Now they tread upon the flesh.

Lively and warm thoughts.

When the Recorder had made an end of reading the Pardon, the Townsmen ran up upon the Walls of the Town, and leaped and skipped thereon for joy, and bowed themselves seven times with their Faces towards Emanuel's Pavillion, and shouted out aloud for joy, and said, Let Emanuel live for ever. Then order was given to the young Men in Mansoul, that they should ring the Bells for joy. (So the Bells did ring, and the People sing, and the musick go in every house in Mansoul.)

The carriage of the Camp.

When the Prince had sent home the three Prisoners of Mansoul with Joy, and Pipe and Tabor; he commanded his Captains with all the Field-Officers and Soldiers throughout his Army to be ready in that morning, that the Recorder should read the Pardon in Mansoul, to do his further pleasure. So the morning as I have shewed, being come, just as the Recorder had made an end of reading the Pardon, Emanuel commanded that all the Trumpets in the Camp should sound, that the Colours should be displayed, half of them upon mount Gracious, and half of them upon mount Justice. He commanded also that all the Captains should shew themselves in all their Harness, and that the Soldiers should shout for joy. Nor was Captain Credence, though in the Castle, silent in such a Day, but he from the Top of the Hold shewed himself with sound of Trumpet to Mansoul, and to the Prince's Camp.

Faith will not be silent when Mansoul is saved.

Thus have I shewed you the Manner, and Way that Emanuel took to recover the Town of Mansoul from under the Hand and Power of the Tyrant Diabolus.

The Prince displays his Graces before Mansoul.

Now when the Prince had compleated these, the outward Ceremonies of his Joy, He again commanded that his Captains and Soldiers should shew unto Mansoul some feats of War. So they presently addressed themselves to this Work. But Oh! with what Agility, Nimbleness, Dexterity and Bravery did these Military-men discover their skill in feats of War to the now gazing Town of Mansoul!

They marched, they counter marched, they opened to the right and left, they divided and subdivided, they closed, they wheeled, made good their front and rear with their right and left wings, and twenty things more, with that aptness, and then were all as they were again, that they took, yea ravished the Hearts that were in Mansoul to behold it. But add to this, the handling of their Arms, the managing of their Weapons of War, were marvellous taking to Mansoul and me.

They are ravished at the sight of them.

When this Action was over, the whole Town of Mansoul came out as one Man to the Prince in the Camp to thank him, and praise him for his abundant favour, and to beg that it would please his Grace to come unto Mansoul with his Men, and there to take up their quarters for ever. And this they did in most humble manner, bowing themselves seven times to the ground before him. Then said he, All peace be to you: so the Town came nigh and touched with the Hand the top of his Golden Scepter, and they said, 'Oh! that the Prince Emanuel with his Captains and Men of War would dwell in Mansoul for ever; and that his battering Rams and Slings might be lodged in her for the use and service of the Prince, and for the help and strength of Mansoul. For said they, we have room for thee, we have room for thy Men, we have also room for thy Weapons of War, and a Place to make a Magazine for thy Carriages. Do it, Emanuel, and thou shalt be King and Captain in Mansoul for ever. Yea, govern thou also according to all the desire of thy Soul, and make thou Governours and Princes under thee of thy Captains and Men of War, and we will become thy servants, and thy Laws shall be our direction.

They beg that the Prince and his Men will dwell with them for ever.

Say and hold to it Mansoul.

They added moreover, and prayed his Majesty to consider thereof, for said they, if now after all this grace bestowed upon us thy miserable Town of Mansoul, thou shouldest withdraw, thou and thy Captains from us, the Town of Mansoul will die. Yea, said they, our blessed Emanuel, if thou shouldest depart from us now, thou hast done so much good for us, and shewed so much Mercy unto us; What will follow but that our joy will be as if it had not been, and our enemies will a second time come upon us with more rage than at the first? Wherefore we beseech thee, O thou the Desire of our Eyes, and the Strength and Life of our poor Town, accept of this motion that now we have made unto our Lord, and come and dwell in the midst of us, and let us be thy People. Besides, their Lord, we do not know but that to this Day many Diabolonians may be yet lurking in the Town of Mansoul, and they will betray us when thou shalt leave us, into the Hand of Diabolus again; and who knows what Designs, Plots, or Contrivances have passed betwixt them about these these things already; loth we are to fall again into his horrible Hands. Wherefore let it please thee to accept of our Palace for thy place of Residence, and of the Houses of the best Men in our Town for the Reception of thy Soldiers, and their Furniture.

The Prince's Question to Mansoul

Then said the Prince, 'If I come to your Town, will you suffer me further to procure that which is in mine Heart against mine Enemies and yours: Yea, will you help me in such undertakings?'

Their Answer.

They answered, We know not what we shall do, we did not think once that we should have been such Traytors to Shaddai, as we have proved to be: What then shall we say to our Lord? Let him put no trust in his Saints, let the Prince dwell in our Castle, and make of our Town a Garrison, let him set his noble Captains, and his warlike Soldiers over us. Yea, let him conquer us with his Love, and overcome us with his Grace, and then surely shall he be but with us, and help us, as he was, and did that Morning that our Pardon was read unto us, we shall comply with this our Lord, and with his ways, and fall in with his word against the mighty.

One Word more, and thy Servants have done, and in this will trouble our Lord no more. 'We know not the depth of the Wisdom of thee our Prince. Who could have thought that had been ruled by his Reason, that so much sweet as we do now enjoy, should have come out of those bitter Trials wherewith we were tried at the first? But, Lord, let Light go before, and let Love come after: Yea, take us by the Hand, and lead us by thy Counsels, and let this always abide upon us, that all things shall be for the best for thy Servants, and come to our Mansoul, and do as it pleaseth thee. Or, Lord, come to our Mansoul, do what thou wilt, so thou keepest us from sinning, and makest us serviceable to thy Majesty.'

He consenteth to dwell in Mansoul, and promiseth to come in to morrow.

Then said the Prince to the Town of Mansoul again, 'Go, return to your Houses in Peace, I will willingly in this comply with your desires. I will remove my Royal Pavilion, I will draw up my Forces before Eye-gate to morrow, and so will march forwards into the Town of Mansoul. I will possess my self of your Castle of Mansoul, and will set my Soldiers over you; yea, I will yet do things in Mansoul that cannot be paralleled in any Nation, Country and Kingdom under Heaven.'

Then did the Men of Mansoul give a Shout, and returned unto their Houses in peace; they also told to their Kindred and Friends the good that Emanuel had promised to Mansoul. And to morrow, said they, he will march into our Town, and take up his dwelling, he and his Men in Mansoul.

Then went out the Inhabitants of the Town of Mansoul with haste to the green

Trees, and to the Meadows to gather Boughs and Flowers, therewith to strew the Streets against their Prince, the Son of Shaddai, should come; they also made Garlands, and other fine Works to betoken how joyful they were, and should be to receive their Emanuel into Mansoul; yea, they strewed the Street quite from Eye-gate to the Castle-gate, the place where the Prince should be. They also prepared for his coming what Musick the Town of Mansoul would afford, that they might play before him to the Palace his Habitation.

Mansoul's Preparation for his Reception.

So at the time appointed he makes his approach to Mansoul, and the Gates were set open for him, there also the Ancients and Elders of Mansoul met him to salute him with a thousand welcomes. Then he arose and entred Mansoul, he and all his Servants. The Elders of Mansoul did also go dancing before him till he came to the Castle-gates. And this was the manner of his going up thither. He was clad in his Golden Armour, he rode in his Royal Chariot, the Trumpets sounded about him, the Colours were displayed, his ten thousands went up at his feet, and the Elders of Mansoul danced before him. And now were the Walls of the famous Town of Mansoul filled with the trappings of the Inhabitants thereof, who went up thither to view the approach of the blessed Prince, and his Royal Army. Also the Casements, Windows, Balconies and Tops of the Houses were all now filled with Persons of all sorts to behold how their Town was to be filled with good.

He enters the Town of Mansoul and how.

Now when he was come so far into the Town as to the Recorder's House, he commanded that one should go to Captain Credence, to know whether the Castle of Mansoul was prepared to entertain his Royal Presence (for the preparation of that was left to that Captain) and word was brought that it was. Then was Captain Credence commanded also to come forth with his Power to meet the Prince, the which was as he had commanded, done, and he conducted him into the Castle. This done, the Prince that Night did lodge in the Castle with his mighty Captains and Men of War, to the joy of the Town of Mansoul.

Act. 15. 9.

Eph. 3. 17.

Now the next care of the Townsfolk was how the Captains and Soldiers of the Princes Army should be quartered among them, and the care was not how they should shut their Hands of them, but how they should fill their Houses with them; for every Man in Mansoul now had that esteem of Emanuel and his Men, that nothing grieved them more, than because they were not enlarged enough, every one of them to receive the whole Army of the Prince, yea they counted it their Glory to be waiting upon them, and would in those Days run at their bidding like Lacquies. At last they came to this result:

The Townsmen covet who shall have most of the Soldiers that belong to the Prince.

1. That Captain Innocency should quarter at Mr. Reason's.

2. That Captain Patience should quarter at Mr. Mind's. This Mr. Mind was formerly the Lord Willbewill's Clerk in time of the late Rebellion.

How they were quartered in the Town of Mansoul.

3. It was ordered that Captain Charity should quarter at Mr. Affection's House.

4. That Captain Goodhope should quarter at my Lord Mayor's. Now for the House of the Recorder, himself desired, because his House was next to the Castle, and because from him it was ordered by the Prince, that if need be, the alarm should be given to Mansoul; it was, I say, desired by him that Captain Boanerges, and Captain Conviction should take up their quarters with him, even they and all their Men.

5. As for Captain Judgment, and Captain Execution, my Lord Willbewill took them, and their Men to him, because he was to rule under the Prince for the good of the Town of Mansoul now, as he had before under the Tyrant Diabolus for the hurt and damage thereof.

6. And throughout the rest of the Town were quartered Emanuel's Forces, but Captain Credence with his Men abode still in the Castle. So the Prince, his Captains, and his Soldiers were lodged in the Town of Mansoul.

Mansoul inflamed with their Prince Emanuel.

Now the Ancients and Elders of the Town of Mansoul thought that they never should have enough of the Prince Emanuel; his Person, his Actions, his Words and Behaviour, were so pleasing, so taking, so desirable to them. Wherefore they prayed him, that though the Castle of Mansoul was his place of Residence (and they desired that he might dwell there for ever) yet that he would often visit the Streets, Houses, and People of Mansoul. For, said they, Dread Sovereign, thy Presence, thy Looks, thy Smiles, thy Words, are the Life, and Strength, and Sinews of the Town of Mansoul.

They have access unto him.

Besides this, they craved that they might have without Difficulty or Interruption, continual access unto him, (so for that very purpose he commanded that the Gates should stand open) that they might there see the manner of his doings, the Fortifications of the place, and the Royal Mansion-house of the Prince.

They learn of him.

When he spake, they all stopped their Mouths, and gave Audience; and when he walked, it was their delight to imitate him in his goings.

Now upon a time Emanuel made a Feast for the Town of Mansoul, and upon the Feasting-day the Townsfolk were come to the Castle to partake of his Banquet. And he feasted them with all manner of outlandish-food, food that grew not in the Fields of Mansoul, nor in all the whole Kingdom of Universe. It was food that came from his Father's Court, and so there was dish after dish set before them, and they were commanded freely to eat. But still when a fresh dish was set before them, they would whisperingly say to each other, What is it? for they wist not what to call it. They drank also of the Water that was made Wine; and were very merry with him. There was Musick also all the while at the Table, and Man did eat Angels food, and had Honey given him out of the Rock; so Mansoul did eat the food that was peculiar to the Court, yea they had now thereof to the full.

I must not forget to tell you, that as at this Table there were Musicians; so they were not those of the Country, nor yet of the Town of Mansoul; but they were the Masters of the Songs that were sung at the Court of Shaddai.

Now after the Feast was over, Emanuel was for entertaining the Town of Mansoul with some curious Riddles of Secrets drawn up by his Father's Secretary, by the Skill and Wisdom of Shaddai; the like to these there is not in any Kingdom. These Riddles were made upon the King Shaddai himself, and upon Emanuel his Son, and upon his Wars and Doings with Mansoul.

Emanuel also expounded unto them some of those Riddles himself, but Oh how they were lightened! They saw what they never saw, they could not have thought that such Rarities could have been couched in so few and such ordinary Words. I told you before whom these Riddles did concern; and as they were opened, the People did evidently see it was so. Yea, they did gather that the things themselves were a kind of a Portraicture, and that of Emanuel himself; for when they read in the Scheme where the Riddles were writ, and looked in the Face of the Prince, things looked so like the one to the other, that Mansoul could not forbear but say, This is the Lamb, this is the Sacrifice, this is the Rock, this is the Red-Cow, this is the Door, and this is the Way; with a great many other things more.

And thus he dismissed the Town of Mansoul. But can you imagine how the People of the Corporation were taken with this Entertainment? Oh they were transported with Joy, they were drowned with wonderment, while they saw and understood, and considered what their Emanuel entertained them withal, and what Mysteries he opened to them; and when they were at home in their Houses, and in their most retired places they could not but sing of him, and of his Actions. Yea, so taken were the Townsfolk now with their Prince, that they would sing of him in their sleep.

Now it was in the Heart of the Prince Emanuel to new model the Town of Mansoul, and to put it into such a Condition as might be more pleasing to him, and that might best stand with the Profit and Security of the now flourishing Town of Mansoul. He provided also against Insurrections at home, and Invasions from abroad; such Love had he for the famous Town of Mansoul.

The instruments of War mounted. Wherefore he first of all commanded that the great slings that were brought from his Father's Court when he came to the War of Mansoul, should be mounted, some upon the Battlements of the Castle, some upon the Towers, for there were Towers in the Town of Mansoul, Towers new built by Emanuel since he came thither. There was also an Instrument invented by Emanuel, that was to throw Stones from the Castle of Mansoul, out at Mouth-gate; an instrument that could not be resisted, nor that would miss of Execution; wherefore for the wonderful exploits that it did when used, it went without a Name, and it was committed to the care of, and to be managed by the brave Captain, the Captain Credence, in case of War.

Wilbewill promoted. This done, Emanuel called the Lord Wilbewill to him, and gave him in commandment to take care of the Gates, the Wall and Towers in Mansoul; Also the Prince gave him the Militia into his hand, and a special charge to withstand all Insurrections and Tumults that might be made in Mansoul against the peace of our Lord the King, and the peace and tranquillity of the Town of Mansoul. He also gave him in Commission, that if he found any of the Diabolonians lurking in any corner in the famous Town of Mansoul, he should forthwith apprehend them, and stay them, or commit them to safe custody, that they may be proceeded against according to Law.

My Lord Mayor put into place. Then he called unto him the Lord Under-standing, who was the old Lord Mayor, he that was put out of place when Diabolus took the Town, and put him into his former Office again, and it became his place for his Life-time. He bid him also that he should build him a Palace near Eye-gate, and that he should build it in Fashion like a Tower for defence. He bid him also that he should read in the Revelation of Mysteries all the Days of his Life, that he might know how to perform his Office aright.

Mr. Knowledge made Recorder. He also made Mr. Knowledge the Recorder, not of contempt to old Mr. Conscience, who had been Recorder before; but for that it was in his Princely mind to confer upon Mr. Conscience another imploy; of which he told the old Gentleman he should know more hereafter.

The image of the Prince and his Father set up again in Mansoul. Rev. 22. 4. Then he commanded that the Image of Diabolus should be taken down from the place where it was set up; and that they should destroy it utterly, beating of it into powder, and casting it into the wind, without the Town-wall. And that the Image of Shaddai his Father should be set up again, with his own, upon the Castle-gates.

And that it should be more fairly drawn than ever; for as much as both his Father and himself were come to Mansoul in more grace and mercy than heretofore. He would also that his name should be fairly ingraven upon the front of the Town, and that it should be done in the best of Gold for the honour of the Town of Mansoul.

After this was done, Emanuel gave out a Commandment that those three great Diabolonians should be apprehended, namely the two late Lord Mayors, to wit, Mr. Incredulity, Mr. Lustings, and Mr. Forget-good the Recorder. Besides these, there were some of them, that Diabolus made Burges-
Some Diabolonians committed to prison under the hand of Mr. True-man the Keepers. ses and Aldermen in Mansoul, that were committed to Ward by the hand of the now valiant, and now right noble, the brave Lord Wilbewill.

And these were their names, Alderman Atbeism, Alderman Hard-heart, and Alderman False-peace. The Burgeses were Mr. No-truth, Mr. Pitiless, Mr. Haughty, with the like. These were committed to close custody; and the Gaoler's name was Mr. True-man; this True-man was one of those that Emanuel brought with him from his Father's Court, when at the first he made a War upon Diabolus in the Town of Mansoul.

After this the Prince gave a charge that the three strong holds that at the command of Diabolus the Diabolonians built in Mansoul, should be demolished, and utterly pulled down; of which Holds and their Names, with their Captains and Governours, you read a little before. But this was long in doing, because of the Largeness of the Places, and because the Stones, the Timber, the Iron, and all Rubbish was to be carried without the Town.

When this was done, the Prince gave order that the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of Mansoul, should call a Court of Judicature for the Tryal and Execution of the Diabolonians in the Corporation now under the charge of Mr. True-man the Gaoler.
A Court to be called to try the Diabolonians

Now when the time was come, and the Court set, Commandment was sent to Mr. True-man the Gaoler to bring the Prisoners down to the Barr. Then were the Prisoners brought down, pinioned, and chained together as the custom of the Town of Mansoul was. So when they were presented before the Lord Mayor, the Recorder, and the rest of the Honourable Bench, First, the Jury was impanelled, and then the Witnesses sworn. The names of the Jury were these, Mr. Belief, Mr. True-heart, Mr. Upright, Mr. Hatebad, Mr. Love-God, Mr. See-truth, Mr. Heavenly-mind, Mr. Moderate, Mr. Thankful, Mr. Good-work, Mr. Zeal for God, and Mr. Humble.
The Prisoners brought to the Bar. The Jury impanelled, and Witnesses sworn.

The names of the Witnesses were Mr. Knowall, Mr. Tell-true, Mr. Hate-lies, with my Lord Wilbewill and his man if need were.

So the prisoners were set to the Bar, then said Mr. Doright (for he was the Town-Clerk), set Atheism to the Bar, Gaoler. So he was set to the Bar. Then said the Clerk, Atheism, hold up thy hand. Thou art here indicted by the Name of Atheism, (an intruder upon the Town of Mansoul) for that thou hast perniciously and doulitishly taught and maintained that there is no God, and so no heed to be taken to Religion. Thisthou hast done against the Being, Honour, and Glory of the King, and against the peace and safety of the Town of Mansoul. What saist thou, art thou Guilty of this Indictment, or not?

So they were called, and they appeared.

Know. Then said Mr. Know-all. Yes, my Lord, we know him, his Name is Atheism, he has been a very pestilent fellow for many years in the miserable Town of Mansoul.

Cler. You are sure you know him.

Know. Know him! Yes, my Lord: I have heretofore too often been in his Company, to be at this time Ignorant of him. He is a Diabolonian, the Son of a Diabolonian, I knew his Grand-father, and his Father.

Cler. Well said: He standeth here indicted by the Name of Atheism, &c. and is charged that he hath maintained and taught that there is no God, and so no heed need be taken to any Religion. What say you the King's Witnesses, to this? is he Guilty or not?

Know. My Lord, I and he were once in Villains Lane together, and he at that time did briskly talk of divers Opinions, and then and there I heard him say, That for his part he did believe that there was no God. But, said he, I can profess one, and be as Religious too, if the Company I am in, and the circumstances of other things, said he, shall put me upon it.

Cler. You are sure you heard him say thus.

Know. Upon mine Oath I heard him say thus.

Then said the Clerk, Mr. Tell-true, What say you to the King's Judges, touching the Prisoner at the Bar?

Tell. My Lord, I formerly was a great Companion of his, (for the which I now repent me) and I have often heard him say, and that with very great Stomachfulness, that he believed there was neither God, Angel, nor Spirit.

Cler. Where did you hear him say so?

Tell. In Blackmouth-lane, and in Blasphe-mers row, and in many other places besides.

Cler. Have you much Knowledge of him?

Tell. I know him to be a Diabolonian, the Son of a Diabolonian, and an horrible man to deny a Deity; his Father's Name was Never-be-good, and he had more Children than this Atheism. I have no more to say.

Cler. Mr. Hate-lies look upon the Prisoner at the Bar, do you know him?

Hate. My Lord, this Atheism is one of the vilest Wretches that ever I came near, or had to do with in my Life. I have heard him say that there is no God; I have heard him say that there is no World to come, no Sin, nor Punishment hereafter; and moreover, I have heard him say that it was as good to go to a Whore-house as to go to hear a Sermon.

Cler. Where did you hear him say these Things?

Hate. In Drunkards Row, just at Raskal Lanes-end, at a House in which Mr. Impiety lived.

Cler. Set him by Gaoler, and set Mr. Lustings to the Bar.

Mr. Lustings, thou art here indicted by the Name of Lustings, (an intruder upon the Town of Mansoul) for that thou hast devilishly and traiterously taught by practice and filthy Words, that it is lawful and profitable to Man to give way to his carnal desires, and that thou for thy part hast not, nor never wilt deny thy self of any sinful delight as long as thy Name is Lustings. How say thou, art thou guilty of this Indictment or not?

Lust. Then said Mr. Lustings, My Lord, I am a Man of high Birth, and have been used to pleasures and pastimes of greatness. I have not been wont to be snub'd for my doings, but have been left to follow my Will as if it were Law. And it seems strange to me that I should this Day be called into question for that, that not only I, but also all Men do either secretly or openly countenance, love, and approve of.

Cler. Sir, we concern not our selves with your greatness (though the higher the better you should have been) but we are concerned, and so are you now, about an Indictment preferred against you. How say you, are you guilty of it, or not?

Lust. Not guilty.

Cler. Cryer, call upon the Witnesses to stand forth, and give their Evidence.

Cry. Gentlemen, you the Witnesses for the King, come in and give in your Evidence for our Lord the King against the prisoner at the Bar.

Cler. Come, Mr. Know-all, look upon the prisoner at the Bar, do you know him?

Know. Yes, my Lord, I know him.

Clerk. What's his Name?

Know. His Name is Lustings, he was the Son of one Beastly, and his Mother bare him in Flesh-street; she was one Evil-concupiscence's Daughter. I knew all the Generation of them.

Cler.

Cler. Well said, You have here heard his Indictment, what say you to it, is he guilty of the things charged against him, or not?

Know. My Lord, he has, as he saith, been a great Man indeed; and greater in Wickedness than by Pedigree, more than a thousand fold.

Cler. But what do you know of his particular Actions, and especially with reference to his Indictment?

Know. I know him to be a Swearer, a Lier, a Sabbath-breaker; I know him to be a Fornicator, and an unclean Person; I know him to be guilty of abundance of Evils. He has been to my Knowledge a very filthy Man.

Cler. But where did he use to commit his Wickednesses, in some private Corners, or more open and shamelessly?

Know. All the Town over, my Lord.

Cler. Come, Mr. Tell-true, what have you to say for our Lord the King against the prisoner at the Bar?

Tell. My Lord, all that the first Witness has said I know to be true, and a great deal more besides.

Cler. Mr. Lustings, do you hear what these Gentlemen say?

Lust. I was ever of opinion that the happiest Life that a Man could live on Earth, was to keep himself back from nothing that he desired in the World; nor have I been false at any time to this opinion of mine, but have lived in the Love of my Notions all my Days. Nor was I ever so churlish, having found such sweetness in them my self, as to keep the Commendations of them from others.

Court. Then said the Court, There hath proceeded enough from his own Mouth to lay him open to Condemnation, wherefore set him by, Goaler, and set Mr. Incredulity to the Bar.

Incredulity set to the Bar.

Cler. Mr. Incredulity, Thou art here indicted by the Name of Incredulity, (an intruder upon the Town of Mansoul) for that thou hast feloniously and wickedly, and that when thou wert an Officer in the Town of Mansoul, made head against the Captains of the great King Shaddai, when they came and demanded possession of Mansoul; yea thou didst bid defiance to the Name, Forces and Cause of the King, and didst also, as did Diabolus thy Captain, stir up and encourage the Town of Mansoul to make head against, and resist the said force of the King. What sayst thou to this Indictment? Art thou guilty of it, or not?

Then said Incredulity, I know not Shaddai, I love my old Prince, I thought it my duty to be true to my trust, and to do what I could to possess the minds of the men of Mansoul to do their utmost to resist Strangers and Foreigners, and with might to fight against them. Nor have I, nor shall I change my Opinion for fear of trouble, though you at present are possessed of place and power.

Court. Then said the Court, the man as you see is incorrigible, he is for maintaining his Villanies by stoutness of Words, and his Rebellion with impudent Confidence. And therefore set him by Goaler, and set Mr. Forget-good to the Bar.

Forget-good set to the Bar.

Cler. Mr. Forgetgood, thou art here indicted by the Name of Forgetgood (an intruder upon the Town of Mansoul) for that thou when the whole Affairs of the Town of Mansoul were in thy Hand, didst utterly forget to serve them in what was good, and didst fall in with the Tyrant Diabolus against Shaddai the King, against his Captains, and all his host, to the dishonour of Shaddai, the breach of his Law, and the endangering of the Destruction of the famous Town of Mansoul. What sayst thou to this Indictment, art thou guilty, or not guilty?

Then said Forget-good, Gentlemen, and at this time my Judges, as to the Indictment by which I stand of several Crimes accused before you, pray attribute my forgetfulness to mine Age, and not to my Wilfulness; to the craziness of my Brain, and not to the carelessness of my Mind, and then I hope I may by your Charity be excused from great Punishment, though I be guilty.

Then said the Court, Forgetgood, Forget-good, Thy forgetfulness of good was not simply of frailty, but of purpose, and for that thou didst loth to keep vertuous things in thy Mind. What was bad thou couldst retain, but what was good thou couldst not abide to think of, thy Age therefore, and thy pretended craziness, thou makest use of to blind the Court withal, and as a cloak to cover thy Knavery. But let us hear what the Witnesses have to say for the King against the Prisoner at the Bar, is he guilty of this Indictment, or not?

Hate. My Lord, I have heard this Forget-good say, That he could never abide to think of Goodness, no not for a quarter of an Hour.

Cler. Where did you hear him say so?

Hate. In All-base Lane, at a House next door to the Sign of the Conscience seared with an hot Iron.

Cler. Mr. Know-all, what can you say for our Lord the King against the Prisoner at the Bar?

Kno. My Lord, I know this man well, he is a Diabolonian, the Son of a Diabolonian, his Father's Name was Love-naught, and for him I have often heard him say, that he counted the very thoughts of Goodness the most burthensome thing in the World.

Cler. Where have you heard him say these Words?

Know.

Know. In Flesh Lane right opposite to the Church.

Then said the Clerk, Come, Mr. Tell-true, give in your Evidence concerning the Prisoner at the Bar about that for which he stands here, as you see, indicted before this honourable Court.

Tell. My Lord, I have heard him often say, he had rather think of the vilest thing than of what is contained in the Holy Scriptures.

Cler. Where did you hear him say such grievous Words?

Tell. Where? in a great many places? particularly in Nauseous Street in the House of one Shameless, and in Filth Lane, at the Sign of the Reprobate, next door to the Descent into the Pit.

Court. Gentlemen, you have heard the Indictment, his Plea, and the Testimony of the Witnesses. Goaler, set Mr. Hard-heart to the Bar.

He is set to the Bar.

Cler. Mr. Hard-heart, thou art here Indicted by the Name of Hard-heart, (an intruder upon the Town of Mansoul) for that thou didst most desperately and wickedly possess the Town of Mansoul with impenitency and obdurateness, and didst keep them from remorse and sorrow for their Evils, all the time of their Apostacy from, and Rebellion against the blessed King Shaddai. What sayst thou to this Indictment, art thou guilty, or not guilty?

Hard. My Lord, I never knew what remorse or sorrow meant in all my Life: I am impenetrable, I care for no man; nor can I be pierced with men's griefs, their groans will not enter into my Heart; whomever I mischief, whomever I wrong, to me it is musick, when to others mourning.

Court. You see the man is a right Diablonian, and has convicted himself. Set him by Goaler, and set Mr. False-peace to the Bar.

False-peace set to the Bar.

Mr. False-peace, Thou art here indicted by the Name of False-peace, (an intruder upon the Town of Mansoul) for that thou didst most wickedly and satanically bring, hold, and keep the Town of Mansoul, both in her Apostacy, and in her hellish Rebellion, in a false, groundless and dangerous Peace, and damnable Security, to the dishonour of the King, the transgression of his Law, and the great damage of the Town of Mansoul. What sayst thou, art thou guilty of this Indictment, or not?

His Plea. Then said Mr. False-peace, Gentlemen, and you now appointed to be my Judges, I acknowledge that my Name is Mr. Peace, but that my Name is False-peace, I utterly deny. If your Honours will please to send for any that do intimately know me, or for the Midwife that laid my Mother of me, or for the Gossips that were at my Christening, they will any, or all of them prove that my Name is not False-peace, but Peace. Wherefore I cannot plead to this Indictment, for as much as my Name is not inserted therein, and as is my true Name, so also are my Conditions. I was always a Man that loved to live at quiet, and what I loved my self, that I thought others might love also. Wherefore when I saw any of my Neighbours to labour under a disquieted Mind, I endeavoured to help them what I could, and Instances of this good Temper of mine, many I could give:

As,

First, when at the beginning our Town of Mansoul did decline the ways of Shaddai, they, some of them afterwards began to have disquieting Reflections upon themselves for what they had done; but I, as one troubled to see them disquieted, presently sought out means to get them quiet again.

2. When the ways of the old World, and of Sodom, were in fashion; if any thing happened to molest those that were for the customs of the present times, I laboured to make them quiet again, and to cause them to act without molestation.

3. To come nearer home, when the Wars fell out between Shaddai and Diabolus, if at any time I saw any of the Town of Mansoul afraid of Destruction, I often used by some way, device, invention, or other, to labour to bring them to peace again.

Wherefore since I have always been a Man of so vertuous a Temper, as some say a peace-maker is, and if a peace-maker be so deserving a Man as some have been bold to attest he is: Then let me, Gentlemen, be accounted by you, who have a great Name for Justice and Equity in Mansoul, for a Man that deserveth not this inhumane way of treatment, but liberty, and also a licence to seek damage of those that have been my accusers.

Then said the Clerk, Cryer, make Proclamation.

Cryer, O Yes, for as much as the Prisoner at the Bar hath denied his Name to be that which is mentioned in the Indictment, the Court requireth, that if there be any in this place that can give Information to the Court of the original and right Name of the Prisoner, they would come forth and give in their Evidence, for the Prisoner stands upon his own Innocency.

Then came two into the Court and desired that they might have leave to speak what they knew concerning the Prisoner at the Bar; the Name of the one was Search-truth, and the Name of the other Vouch-truth: So the Court demanded of these Men, if they knew the Prisoner, and what they could say concerning him, for he stands, said they, upon his own Vindication?

Then said Mr. Search-truth, My Lord, I Court. Hold, give him his Oath, then they Pleads his Goodness.

Hard-heart set to the Bar.

False-peace set to the Bar.

His Plea.

He denies his Name.

New Witnesses come in against him.

they fware him. So he proceeded.

Search. My Lord, I know, and have known this Man from a Child, and can attest that his Name is False-peace. I knew his Father, his Name was Mr. Flatter, and his Mother before she was married was called by the Name of Mrs. Sooth-up; and these two when they came together, lived not long without this Son, and when he was born, they called his Name False-peace. I was his play-fellow, only I was somewhat older than he; and when his Mother did use to call him home from his play, she used to say, False-peace, False-peace, come home quick, or I'll fetch you. Yea, I knew him when he sucked; and though I was then but little, yet I can remember that when his Mother did use to sit at the Door with him, or did play with him in her Arms, she would call him twenty times together, My little False-peace, my pretty False-peace, and O my sweet Rogue, False-peace; and again, O my little bird, False-peace; and how do I love my child! The Gossips also know it is thus, though he has had the Face to deny it in open Court.

Then Mr. Vouch-truth was called upon to speak what he knew of him. So they fware him.

Then said Mr. Vouch-truth, My Lord, all that the former Witness hath said is true; his Name is False-peace, the Son of Mr. Flatterer, and of Mrs. Sooth-up his mother. And I have in former times seen him angry with those who have called him any thing else but False-peace, for he would say that all such did mock and nick-name him, but this was in the Time when Mr. False-peace was a great Man, and when the Diabolians were the brave Men in Mansoul.

Court. 'Gentlemen, you have heard what these two men have sworn against the Prisoner at the Bar: and now Mr. False-peace to you, you have denied your Name to be False-peace, yet you see that these honest men have sworn that this is your name. As to your Plea, in that you are quite besides the matter of your Indictment, you are not by it charged for evil doing, because you are a man of peace, or a peace-maker among your neighbours; but for that you did wickedly, and satanically bring, keep, and hold the Town of Mansoul both under its apostacy from, and in its rebellion against its King, in a false, lying, and damnable peace, contrary to the Law of Shaddai, and to the hazard of the Destruction of the then miserable Town of Mansoul. All that you have pleaded for your self is, that you have denied your name, &c. but here you see we have Witnesses to prove that you are the man.

'For the Peace that you so much boast of making among your Neighbours, know that Peace that is not a Companion of Truth and Holiness, but which is without this Foundation, is grounded upon a Lye, and is both deceitful and damnable; as also the great Shaddai hath said: thy Plea therefore has not delivered thee from what by the Indictment thou art charged with, but rather it doth fasten all upon thee. But thou shalt have very fair play, let us call the Witnesses that are to testify, as to matter of fact, and see what they have to say for our Lord the King against the Prisoner at the Bar.

Cler. Mr. Know-all, what say you for our Lord the King against the Prisoner at the Bar?

Know. My Lord, this Man hath of a long time made it, to my Knowledge, his business to keep the Town of Mansoul in a sinful quietness in the midst of all her leudness, filthiness and turmoils, and hath said, and that in my hearing, Come, come, let us fly from all trouble, on what ground soever it comes, and let us be for a quiet and peaceable Life, though it wanteth a good Foundation.

Cler. Come, Mr. Hate-lies, what have you to say?

Hate. My Lord, I have heard him say, that Peace, though in a way of Unrighteousness, is better than Trouble with Truth.

Cler. Where did you hear him say this?

Hate. I heard him say it in Folly-yard, at the House of one Mr. Simple, next door to the Sign of the Self-deceiver. Yea, he hath said this to my Knowledge twenty times in that place.

Cler. We may spare further Witness, this Evidence is plain and full. Set him by, ^{set to the Bar.} Gaoler, and set Mr. No-truth to the Bar.

Mr. No-truth, thou art here indicted by ^{His Indictment.} the Name of No-truth, (an intruder upon the Town of Mansoul) for that thou hast always to the dishonour of Shaddai, and the endangering of the utter ruin of the famous Town of Mansoul, set thy self to deface, and utterly to spoil all the remainders of the Law and Image of Shaddai that have been found in Mansoul after her deep Apostacy from her King to Diabolus the envious Tyrant. What sayst thou, art thou guilty of this Indictment, or not?

No. Not guilty, my Lord.

His Plea.

Then the Witnesses were called, and Mr. Know-all did first give in his Evidence against him.

Know. My Lord, this Man was at the pulling down of the Image of Shaddai; yea, this is he that did it with his own Hands. I my self stood by and saw him do it, and he did it at the Commandment of Diabolus. Yea, this Mr. No-truth did more than this, he did also set up the horned Image of the Beast Diabolus in the same place. This also is he that at the bidding of Diabolus did rent and tear, and cause to be consumed all that he could of the remainders of the Law of the King, even whatever Witnesses.

whatever he could lay his hands on in Mansoul.

Clerk. Who saw him do this besides yourself?

Hate. I did, my Lord, and so did many more besides; for this was not done by Stealth, or in a corner, but in the open view of all, yea he chose himself to do it publickly, for he delighted in the doing of it.

Clerk. Mr. No-truth, how could you have the Face to plead not Guilty, when you were so manifestly the doer of all this Wickedness?

Not. Sir, I thought I must say something, and as my Name is, so I speak: I have been advantaged thereby before now, and did not know but by speaking No-truth, I might have reaped the same benefit now.

Clerk. 'Set him by, Gaoler, and set Mr. Pityless to the Bar: Mr. Pityless, thou art here indicted by the Name of Pityless, (an intruder upon the Town of Mansoul) for that thou didst most trayterously and wickedly shut up all Bowels of Compassion, and wouldest not suffer poor Mansoul to condole her own misery when she had apostatized from her rightful King, but didst evade, and at all times turn her mind awry from those thoughts that had in them a Tendency to lead her to Repentance. What saist thou to this Indictment? Guilty, or not guilty?

Not guilty of Pitylessness: all I did was to cheer-up, according to my Name, for my Name is not Pityless, but Cheer-up; and I could not abide to see Mansoul incline to Melancholy.

Clerk. How! do you deny your Name, and say it is not Pityless but Cheer-up? Call for the Witnesses: What say you the Witnesses to this Plea?

Know. My Lord, his Name is Pityless; so he hath writ himself in all Papers of concern wherein he has had to do. But these Diabolonians love to counterfeit their Names: Mr. Covetousness covers himself with the Name of good Husbandry, or the like; Mr. Pride can when need is, call himself Mr. Neat, Mr. Handsome, or the like, and so of all the rest of them.

Clerk. Mr. Tell-true what say you?

Tel. His Name is Pityless, my Lord; I have known him from a Child, and he hath done all that Wickedness whereof he stands charged in the Indictment; but there is a company of them that are not acquainted with the danger of damning, therefore they call all those melancholy that have serious thoughts how that state should be shunned by them.

Clerk. Set Mr. Haughty to the Bar, Gaoler. Mr. Haughty, Thou art here indicted by the Name of Haughty, (an intruder upon the Town of Mansoul) for that thou didst most Trayterously and Devillishly teach the Town of Mansoul to carry it Loftily and Stoutly against the Summons that was given them by the Captains of the King Shaddai. Thou didst also teach the Town of Mansoul to speak contemptuously, and vilifyingly of their great King Shaddai; and didst moreover encourage, both by Words and Examples, Mansoul, to take up Arms both against the King and his Son Emanuel. How saist thou, art thou Guilty of this Indictment, or not?

Haugh. Gentlemen, I have always been a man of courage and valour, and have not used when under the greatest clouds, to Sneak or Hang down the head like a Bulrush; nor did it at all at any time please me to see men veil their Bonnets to those that have opposed them. Yea, though their adversaries seemed to have ten times the advantage of them.

I did not use to consider who was my foe, nor what the cause was in which I was engaged. 'Twas enough to me if I carried it bravely, fought like a man, and came off a Victor.

Court. Mr. Haughty, you are not here Indicted for that you have been a valiant Man, nor for your Courage and Stoutness in times of Distress, but for that you have made use of this your pretended valour to draw the Town of Mansoul into Acts of Rebellion both against the great King and Emanuel his Son. This is the crime and the thing wherewith thou art charged in and by the Indictment. But he made no answer to that.

Now when the Court had thus far proceeded against the Prisoners at the Bar, then they put them over to the verdict of their Jury, to whom they did apply themselves after this manner:

Gentlemen of the Jury, you have been here, and have seen these men, you have heard their Indictments, their Pleas, and what the Witnesses have testified against them: Now what remains, is, that you do forthwith withdraw yourselves to some place, where without Confusion you may consider of what Verdict in a way of Truth and Righteousness you ought to bring in for the King against them, and so bring it in accordingly.

Then the Jury, to wit, Mr. Belief, Mr. Trueheart, Mr. Upright, Mr. Hatebad, Mr. Lovegod, Mr. Seetruth, Mr. Heavenlimind, Mr. Moderate, Mr. Thankful, Mr. Humble, Mr. Goodwork, and Mr. Zealforgod, withdrew themselves in order to their work: Now when they were shut up by themselves they fell to discourse among themselves in order to the drawing up of their Verdict.

And thus Mr. Belief, for he was the Foreman, began: Gentlemen, quoth he, for the men, the Prisoners at the Bar, for my part I believe that they all deserve Death. Very right, said Mr. Trueheart, I am wholly wholly of your Opinion: O what a mercy is it, said Mr. Hatebad, that such Villains as these are apprehended! Ay, Ay, said Mr. Lovegod, this is one of the joyfulest Days that ever I saw in my Life. Then said Mr. Seetruth, I know that if we judge them to Death, our Verdict shall stand before Shaddai himself. Nor do I at all question it, said Mr. Heavenlimind; he said moreover, When all such beasts as these are cast out of Mansoul, what a goodly Town will it be then! Then said Mr. Moderate, it is not my manner to pass my Judgment with Rashness, but for these their crimes are so notorious, and the Witness so palpable, that that man must be wilfully blind who saith the Prisoners ought not to die. Blessed be God, said Mr. Thankful, that the Traytors are in safe Custody. And I join with you in this upon my bare knees, said Mr. Humble. I am glad also said Mr. Goodwork. Then said the warm man, and true hearted Mr. Zeal-for-God, Cut them off, they have been the Plague, and have sought the Destruction of Mansoul.

Thus therefore being all agreed in their Verdict, they came instantly into the Court.

They are agreed of their Verdict, and bring them in guilty.

Clerk. Gentlemen of the Jury answer all to your Names: Mr. Belief, one: Mr. True-heart, two: Mr. Upright, three: Mr. Hatebad, four: Mr. Lovegod, five: Mr. Seetruth six: Mr. Heavenlymind, seven: Mr. Moderate, eight: Mr. Thankful, nine: Mr. Humble, ten: Mr. Goodwork, eleven: and Mr. Zeal-for-god, twelve: Good men and true, stand together in your Verdict: are you all agreed?

Jury. Yes, my Lord.

Clerk. Who shall speak for you?

Jury. Our Foreman.

Clerk. You the Gentlemen of the Jury being impannelled for our Lord the King to serve here in a matter of Life and Death, have heard the trials of each of these men the Prisoners at the Bar, What say you, are they Guilty of that, and those Crimes for which they stand here Indicted, or are they not Guilty?

Foreman. Guilty, my Lord.

Clerk. Look to your Prisoners, Gaoler.

This was done in the morning, and in the Afternoon they received the Sentence of Death according to the Law.

The Gaoler therefore having received such a Charge, put them all in the inward Prison, to preserve them there till the Day of Execution, which was to be the next Day in the morning.

But now to see how it happened, one of the Prisoners, Incredulity by Name, in the interim betwixt the Sentence and time of Execution, brake Prison, and made his escape, and gets him away quite out of the Town of Mansoul, and lay lurking in such places and Holds as he might, until he should again have opportunity to do the Town of Mansoul a mischief for their thus handling of him as they did.

Now when Mr. Trueman the Gaoler perceived that he had lost his Prisoner, he was in a heavy taking, because that Prisoner was, to speak on, the very worst of all the Gang: Wherefore first he goes and acquaints my Lord Mayor, Mr. Recorder, and my Lord Willbewill with the Matter, and to get of them an Order to make search for him throughout the Town of Mansoul. So an Order he got, and Search was made, but no such Man could now be found in all the Town of Mansoul.

No Incredulity found in Mansoul.

All that could be gathered was, that he had lurked a while about the out-side of the Town, and that here and there one or other had a glimpse of him as he did make his escape out of Mansoul, one or two also did affirm that they saw him without the Town, going a-pace quite over the Plain. Now when he was quite gone, it was affirmed by one Mr. Didsee, that he ranged all over dry places, till he met with Diabolus his Friend; and where should they meet one another but just upon Hell-gate-hill.

He is gone to Diabolus.

But Oh! what a lamentable Story did the old Gentleman tell to Diabolus concerning what sad alteration Emanuel had made in Mansoul.

As first, how Mansoul had, after some delays received a general Pardon at the Hands of Emanuel, and that they had invited him into the Town, and that they had given him the Castle for his possession. He said moreover, that they had called his Soldiers into the Town, coveted who should quarter the most of them; they also entertained him with the Timbrel, Song and Dance. But that, said Incredulity, that is the forest Vexation to me is, that he hath pulled down, O Father, thy Image, and set up his own, pulled down thy Officers, and set up his own. Yea, and Willbewill, that Rebel, who, one would have thought, should never have turned from us, he is now in as great favour with Emanuel, as ever he was with thee. But besides all this, this Willbewill has received a special Commission from his Master to search for, to apprehend, and to put to Death all, and all manner of Diabolonians that he shall find in Mansoul: Yea, and this Willbewill has taken and committed to Prison already eight of my Lord's most trusty Friends in Mansoul. Nay further, my Lord, with grief I speak it, they have been all arraigned, condemned, and I doubt before this executed in Mansoul. I told my Lord of eight, and my self was the ninth, who should assuredly have drunk of the same Cup, but that through craft, I, as thou seest, have made mine escape from them.

He tells Diabolus what Emanuel now is doing in Mansoul.

When Diabolus had heard this lamentable Story he yelled, and snuffed up the Wind like a Dragon, and made the Sky to look Diabolus yells at the News.

Incredulity breaks Prison.

look dark with his roaring : He also swore that he would try to be revenged on Mansoul for this. So they, both he and his old Friend Incredulity concluded to enter into Consultation, how they might get the Town of Mansoul again.

Rom. 8. 13, 14. Now before this time the Day was come in which the Prisoners in Mansoul were to be executed : so they were brought to the Cross, and that by Mansoul, in most solemn manner ; for the Prince said that this should be done by the hand of the Town of Mansoul, that I may see, said he, the forwardness of my now redeemed Mansoul to keep my Word, and to do my Commandments ; and that I may bless Mansoul in doing this deed. Proof of Sincerity pleases me well, let Mansoul therefore first lay their hands upon these Diabolonians to destroy them.

Gal. 5. 24. So the Town of Mansoul slew them according to the word of their Prince ; but when the Prisoners were brought to the Cross to die, you can hardly believe what troublesome work Mansoul had of it to put the Diabolonians to Death, (for the Men knowing that they must die, and every of them having implacable enmity in their Heart to Mansoul) what did they but took courage at the Cross, and there resisted the Men of the Town of Mansoul ? Wherefore the Men of Mansoul were forced to cry out for help to the Captains and Men of War. Now the great Shaddai had a Secretary in the Town, and he was a great lover of the Men of Mansoul, and he was at the place of Execution also ; so he hearing the Men of Mansoul cry out against the Strugglings and Unruliness of the Prisoners, rose up from his place, and came and put his hands upon the hands of the Men of Mansoul. So they crucified the Diabolonians that had been a plague, a grief, and an offence to the Town of Mansoul.

The Prince comes down to congratulate them. Now when this good work was done, the Prince came down to see, to visit, and to speak comfortably to the Men of Mansoul, and to strengthen their hands in such work. And he said to them, that by this Act of theirs he had proved them, and found them to be lovers of his Person, observers of his Laws, and such as had also respect to his Honour. He said moreover, (to shew them that they by this should not be losers, nor their Town weakened by the loss of them) that he would make them another Captain, and that of one of themselves. And that this Captain should be the Ruler of a thousand, for the good and benefit of the now flourishing Town of Mansoul.

Experience must be the new Captain. So he called one to him whose Name was Waiting, and bid him go quickly up to the Castle-gate, and enquire there for one Mr. Experience that waiteth upon that noble Captain, the Captain Credence, and bid him come hither to me. So the Messenger that waited upon the good Prince Emanuel, went and said as he was commanded. Now the young Gentleman was waiting to see the Captain train and muster his Men in the Castle-yard. Then said Mr. Waiting to him, Sir, the Prince would that you should come down to his Highness forthwith. So he brought him down to Emanuel, and he came and made obeisance before him. Now the Men of the Town knew Mr. Experience well, for he was born and bred in Mansoul ; they also knew him to be a Man of Conduct, of Valour, and a Person prudent in Matters ; he was also a comely Person, well spoken, and very successful in his Undertakings.

Wherefore the hearts of the Townsmen were transported with Joy, when they saw that the Prince himself was so taken with Mr. Experience ; that he would needs make him a Captain over a band of men.

So with one consent they bowed the Knee before Emanuel, and with a shout said, Let Emanuel live for ever. Then said the Prince to the young Gentleman, whose Name was Mr. Experience, I have thought good to confer upon thee a Place of Trust and Honour in this my Town of Mansoul, (then the young man bowed his head and worshipped,) it is, said Emanuel, that thou shouldest be a Captain, a Captain over a thousand men in my beloved Town of Mansoul. Then said the Captain, Let the King live. So the Prince gave out Orders forthwith to the King's Secretary, that he should draw up for Mr. Experience a Commission to make him a Captain over a thousand men, and let it be brought to me, said he, that I may set to my seal. So it was done as it was commanded. The Commission was drawn up, brought to Emanuel, and he set his Seal thereto. Then by the hand of Mr. Waiting he sent it away to the Captain.

Now so soon as the Captain had received his Commission, he foundeth his Trumpet for Volunteers, and young men come to him apace ; yea the greatest and chiefest men in the Town sent their Sons to be listed under his Command. Thus Captain Experience came under command to Emanuel, for the good of the Town of Mansoul. He had for his Lieutenant one Mr. Skilful, and for his Cornet one Mr. Memory. His under Officers I need not name. His Colours were the White Colours for the Town of Mansoul ; and his Scutcheon was the dead Lion, and dead Bear. So the Prince returned to his Royal Palace again.

Now when he was returned thither, the Elders of the Town of Mansoul, to wit, the Lord Mayor, the Recorder, and the Lord Willberwill went to congratulate him, and in special way to thank him for his Love, Care, and the tender Compassion which he shewed to his ever obliged Town of Mansoul. So after a while, and some sweet Communion between them, the Townsmen

The Elders of Mansoul congratulate him.

Townsmen having solemnly ended their Ceremony, returned to their place again.

Emanuel also at this time appointed them a Day wherein he would renew their Charter, yea wherein he would renew and enlarge it, mending several faults therein, that Mansoul's Yoke might be yet more easy. And this he did without any desire of theirs, even of his own frankness, and noble Mind. So when he had sent for and seen their old one, he laid it by, and said, Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away. He said moreover, the Town of Mansoul shall have another, a better, a new one, more steady and firm by far. An Epitome hereof take as follows.

Emanuel Prince of Peace, and a great lover of the Town of Mansoul, I do in the Name of my Father, and of mine own Clemency, give, grant, and bequeath to my beloved Town of Mansoul.

First, free, full, and everlasting forgiveness of all Wrongs, Injuries, and Offences done by them against my Father, me, their Neighbour, or themselves.

Secondly, I do give them the holy Law, and my Testament, with all that therein is contained, for their everlasting Comfort and Consolation.

Thirdly, I do also give them a Portion of the self same Grace and Goodness that dwells in my Father's Heart and mine.

Fourthly, I do give, grant and bestow upon them freely the World, and what is therein for their good, and they shall have that Power over them, as shall stand with the Honour of my Father, my Glory, and their Comfort, yea, I grant them the benefits of Life and Death, and of things present, and things to come. This Privilege, no other City, Town or Corporation shall have but my Mansoul only.

Fifthly, I do give and grant them leave, and free access to me in my Palace at all Seasons (to my Palace above or below) there to make known their wants to me, and I give them moreover a Promise that I will hear and redress all their Grievances.

Sixthly, I do give, grant to, and invest the Town of Mansoul with full power and authority to seek out, take, enslave, and destroy all, and all manner of Diabolonians that at any time from whence soever shall be found straggling in, or about the Town of Mansoul.

Seventhly, I do further grant to my beloved Town of Mansoul that they shall have authority not to suffer any foreigner or stranger, or their seed, to be free in, and of the blessed Town of Mansoul, nor to share in the excellent Privileges thereof. But that all the Grants, Privileges, and Immunities that I bestow upon the famous Town of Mansoul, shall be for those the old Natives, and true inhabitants thereof, to them I say, and to their right seed after them.

But all Diabolonians of what sort, birth, Country, or Kingdom soever, shall be debarred a share therein.

So when the Town of Mansoul had received at the hand of Emanuel their gracious Charter, (which in it self is infinitely more large than by this lean Epitome is set before you) they carried it to audience, that is to the Market-place, and there Mr. Recorder read it in the presence of all the People. This being done, it was had back to the Castle gates, and there fairly engraven upon the Doors thereof, and laid in Letters of Gold, to the end that the Town of Mansoul, with all the People thereof, might have it always in their view, or might go where they might see what a blessed Freedom their Prince had bestowed upon them, that their joy might be increased in themselves, and their love renewed to their great and good Emanuel.

But what Joy! what Comfort! what Consolation think you, did now possess the Hearts of the Men of Mansoul; the Bells ringed, the Minstrels played, the People danced, the Captains shouted, the Colours waved in the Wind, and the silver Trumpets sounded, and the Diabolonians now were glad to hide their Heads, for they looked like them that had been long dead.

When this was over, the Prince sent again for the Elders of the Town of Mansoul, and communed with them about a Ministry that he intended to establish among them; such a Ministry that might open unto them, and that might instruct them in the Things that did concern their present and future state.

For said he, You of your selves, without you have Teachers and Guides, will not be able to know, and if not to know, to be sure, not to do the Will of my Father.

At this news when the Elders of Mansoul brought it to the People, the whole Town came running together, (for it pleased them well, as whatever the Prince now did, pleased the People) and all with one consent implored his Majesty that he would forthwith establish such a Ministry among them as might teach them both Law and Judgment, Statute and Commandment; that they might be documented in all good and wholesome Things. So he told them that he would grant them their requests; and would establish two among them; one that was of his Father's Court, and one that was a Native of Mansoul.

He that is from the Court, said he, is a Person of no less quality and dignity than is my Father and I, and he is the Lord chief Secretary of my Father's house, for he is, and always has been the chief Dictator of all my Father's Laws, a Person altogether well skill'd in all mysteries, and knowledge.

And this is he, said the Prince, that must be your chief Teacher: for 'tis he, and he only that can teach you clearly in all high and supernatural Things. He and he only it is that knows the Ways and Methods of my Father at Court, nor can any like him shew how the Heart of my Father is at all times, in all things, upon all Occasions towards Mansoul, (for as no Man knows the Things of a Man but that spirit of a Man which is in him: so the Things of my Father knows no Man but this his high and mighty Secretary. (Nor can any as he tell Mansoul, how and what they shall do to keep themselves in the Love of my Father.) He also it is that can bring lost things to your remembrance, and that can tell you things to come. This Teacher therefore must of necessity have preheminance (both in your affections and judgment) before your other Teacher; his personal dignity, the excellency of his teaching, also the great dexterity that he hath to help you to make and draw up Petitions to my Father for your help, and to his pleasing, must lay obligations upon you to love him, fear him, and to take heed that you grieve him not.

Take heed, I say, that you do not grieve this Minister, for if you do, he may fight against you; and should he once be moved by you, to set himself against you, against you in battel array, that will distress you more than if twelve legions should from my Father's Court be sent to make War upon you.

But, as I said, if you shall hearken unto him, and shall love him; if you shall devote yourselves to his teaching, and shall seek to have Converse, and to maintain Communion with him, you shall find him ten times better than is the whole World to any: yea, he will shed abroad the Love of my Father in your Hearts, and Mansoul will be the wisest and most blessed of all People.

Conscience, made a Minister.
Then did the Prince call unto him the Old Gentleman, who before had been the Recorder of Mansoul, Mr. Conscience by Name, and told him, That for as much as he was well skilled in the Law and Government of the Town of Mansoul, and was also well spoken, and could pertinently deliver to them his Master's Will in all terrene and domestick matters, therefore he would also make him a Minister for, in, and to the goodly Town of Mansoul, in all the Laws, Statutes, and Judgments of the famous Town of Mansoul. And thou must, said the Prince, confine thyself to the teaching of moral Virtues, to Civil and Natural Duties, but thou must not attempt to presume to be a Revealer of those high and supernatural mysteries that are kept close in the Bosom of Shaddai my Father: for those things know no Man, nor can any reveal them but my Father's Secretary only. His limits.

Thou art a Native of the Town of Mansoul, but the Lord Secretary is a Native with my Father, wherefore as thou hast Knowledge of the Laws and Customs of the Corporation, so he of the things and will of my Father. Wherefore, Oh! Mr. Conscience, although I have made thee a Minister and a Preacher in the Town of Mansoul, yet as to the Things which the Lord Secretary knoweth, and shall teach to this People, there thou must be his Scholar, and a Learner, even as the rest of Mansoul are. His caution.

Thou must therefore in all high and supernatural things, go to him for Information and Knowledge; for though there be a Spirit in Man, this Person's Inspiration must give him Understanding. Wherefore, Oh thou Mr. Recorder, keep low and be humble, and remember that the Diabolonians that kept not their first Charge, but left their own Standing, are now made prisoners in the pit; be therefore content with thy Station. Job 33. 8

I have made thee my Father's Vicegerent on Earth, in such Things of which I have made mention before: and thou, take thou power to teach them to Mansoul, yea, and to impose them with Whips and Chastisements, if they shall not willingly hearken to do thy Commandments. His Power in Mansoul

And, Mr. Recorder, because thou art old, and through many Abuses made feeble; therefore I give thee leave and license to go when thou wilt to my Fountain, my Conduit, and there to drink freely of the Blood of my Grape, for my conduit doth always run Wine. Thus doing, thou shalt drive from thy Heart and Stomach all foul, gross, and hurtful humours. It will also lighten thine eyes, and will strengthen thy memory for the Reception and keeping of all that the King's most noble Secretary teacheth. His Liberty

When the Prince had thus put Mr. Recorder (that once so was) into the place and office of a Minister to Mansoul; and the man had thankfully accepted thereof: then did Emanuel address himself in a particular speech to the Townsmen themselves.

'Eehold, (said the Prince to Mansoul) my love and care towards you, I have added

‘ added to all that is past, this mercy, to ‘ appoint you Preachers: the most noble
 ‘ Secretary to teach you in all high and sub‘ lime Mysteries; and this Gentleman
 ‘ (pointing to Mr. Conscience) is to teach
 ‘ you in all things humane and domestick,
 ‘ for therein lyeth his work. He is not by ‘ what I have said, debarred of telling to ‘ Mansoul any thing that he hath heard,
 ‘ and received at the mouth of the ‘ Lord high Secretary; only he shall not at‘ tempt to presume to pretend to be a re-‘ vealer of those high mysteries himself;
 ‘ for the breaking of them up, and the ‘ discovery of them to Mansoul lyeth only ‘ in the power, authority and skill of the ‘ Lord high Secretary himself. Talk of ‘ them he may, and so may the rest of the ‘ Town of Mansoul; yea, and may as oc‘ casion gives them opportunity, press them ‘ upon each other for the benefit of the ‘ whole. These things therefore I would ‘ have you observe and do, for it is for ‘ life and the lengthening of your days.

Alliance to Mansoul.

A World

 promised to *Man-
 soul*.

‘ And one thing more to my beloved ‘ Mr. Recorder, and to all the Town of ‘ Mansoul, you must not dwell in, nor stay ‘ upon any thing of that which he hath in ‘ Commission to teach you, as to your ‘ trust and expectation of the next World;
 ‘ of the next World (I say) for I purpose
 ‘ to give another to Mansoul, when this
 ‘ with them is worn out) but for that you ‘ must wholly and solely have recourse to,
 ‘ and make stay upon his Doctrine, that
 ‘ is your teacher after the first order. Yea,
 ‘ Mr. Recorder himself must not look for life
 ‘ from that which he himself revealeth, his ‘ dependance for that must be founded in ‘ the Doctrine of the other Preacher. Let ‘ Mr. Recorder also take heed that he re‘ ceive not any Doctrine, or point of ‘ Doctrine, that are not communicated to ‘ him by his superior Teacher, nor yet ‘ within the Precincts of his own formal ‘ Knowledge.’

He gives

 tion about the Captains.

Now after the Prince had thus settled things in the famous Town of Mansoul, he proceeded to give to the Elders of the Corporation a necessary caution, to wit, how they should carry it to the high and noble
 Captains that he had, from his Father’s Court, sent or brought with him to the famous Town of Mansoul.

‘ These Captains, said he, do love the ‘ Men, pickt out of abundance, as Men

 ‘ that best suit, and that will most faith‘ fully serve in the Wars of Shaddai against ‘ the Diablonians, for the preservation of ‘ the Town of Mansoul. I charge you ‘ therefore, said he, O ye Inhabitants of the ‘ now flourishing Town of Mansoul, that ‘ you carry it not ruggedly, or untowardly
 ‘ to my Captains, or their Men; since, as ‘ I said, they are pickt and choice Men, ‘ Men chosen out of many for the good of

Vol. II.

‘ the Town of Mansoul. I say, I charge
 ‘ you that you carry it not untowardly to ‘ them; for though they have the Hearts
 ‘ and Faces of Lions, when at any time
 ‘ they shall be called forth to engage and ‘ fight with the King’s Foes, and the En-‘ mies of the Town of Mansoul; yet a little ‘ discountenance cast upon them from the ‘ Town of Mansoul, will deject and cast ‘ down their Faces, will weaken and take ‘ away their Courage. Do not therefore,
 ‘ O my beloved, carry it unkindly to my ‘ valiant Captains, and courageous Men of ‘ War, but love them, nourish them, suc-
 ‘ cour them, and lay them in your bosoms,
 ‘ and they will not only fight for you, but ‘ cause to fly from you all those the Diabo‘ lonians that seek, and will if possible be ‘ your utter destruction.

‘ If therefore any of them should at any ‘ time be sick or weak, and so not able to ‘ perform that office of love, which with ‘ all their Hearts they are willing to do,
 ‘ (and will do also when well and in health)
 ‘ flight them not, nor despise them, but ra‘ ther strengthen them, and encourage them ‘ though weak and ready to die, for they ‘ are your fence, and your guard, your ‘ wall, your gates, your locks, and your ‘ bars. And although when they are weak,
 ‘ they can do but little, but rather need to ‘ be helped by you, (than that you should ‘ then expect great things from them) yet
 ‘ when well, you know what Exploits,
 ‘ what Fears and warlike Achievements
 ‘ they are able to do, and will perform for ‘ you.

‘ Besides, if they be weak, the Town
 ‘ of Mansoul cannot be strong; if they be ‘ strong, then Mansoul cannot be weak:
 ‘ your safety therefore doth lie in their ‘ health, and in your countenancing of ‘ them. Remember also that if they be sick,
 ‘ they catch that disease of the Town of ‘ Mansoul it self.

‘ These things I have said unto you, be‘ cause I love your welfare, and your ho‘ nour: Observe therefore O my Mansoul, ‘ to be punctual in all things that I have ‘ given in charge unto you, and that not ‘ only as a Town corporate, and so to your ‘ Officers and Guard, and Guides in chief,
 ‘ but to you as you are a People whose ‘ well-being, as single Persons, depends on ‘ the observation of the Orders and Com‘ mandments of their Lord.

‘ Next, O my Mansoul, I do warn you of
 ‘ that of which notwithstanding that Re‘ formation that at present is wrought
 ‘ among you, you have need to be warned ‘ about: wherefore hearken diligently unto ‘ me. I am now sure, and you will know
 ‘ hereafter that there are yet of the *Diabo-

A Caution about the Diablonians that yet remain in
Mansoul.

Mar. 7. 21. 22. I am from you, study, plot, contrive, invent, and jointly attempt to bring you to desolation, and so to a State far worse than that of the Egyptian Bondage; they are the avowed Friends of Diabolus, therefore look about you; they used heretofore to lodge with their Prince in the Castle, when Incredulity was the Lord Mayor of this Town, but since my coming hither, they lie more in the outsidings, and walls, and have made themselves dens, and caves, and holes, and strong holds therein. Wherefore, O Mansoul! Thy work as to this, will be so much the more difficult and hard. That is, to take, mortify, and put them to Death according to the will of my Father. Nor can you utterly rid your selves of them, unless you should pull down the Walls of your Town, the which I am by no means willing you should. Do you ask me, What shall we do then? Why, be you diligent, and quit you like Men, observe their holds, find out their haunts, assault them, and make no peace with them. Where ever they haunt, lurk, or abide, and what terms of Peace soever they offer you abhor, and all shall be well betwixt you and me. And that you may the better know them from those that are the Natives of Mansoul, I will give you this brief Schedule of the Names of the chief of them; and they are these that follow:

The Names of some of the Diabolonians in Mansoul: The Lord Fornification, the Lord Adultery, the Lord Murder, the Lord Anger, the Lord Lasciviousness, the Lord Deceit, the Lord Evil-eye, Mr. Drunkennes, Mr. Reveling, Mr. Idolatry, Mr. Witchcraft, Mr. Variance, Mr. Emulation, Mr. Wrath, Mr. Strife, Mr. Sedition, and Mr. Heresy. These are some of the chief, O Mansoul! of those that will seek to overthrow thee for ever: These I say are the Sucklers in Mansoul, but look thou well into the Law of thy King, and there thou shalt find their Physiognomy, and such other characteristic Notes of them, by which they certainly may be known.

These, O my Mansoul, (and I would gladly that you should certainly know it) if they be suffered to run and range about the Town as they would, will quickly like Vipers eat out your Bowels, yea poison your Captains, cut the Sinews of your Soldiers, break the bar and bolts of your Gates, and turn your now most flourishing Mansoul into a barren and desolate Wilderness, and ruinous heap. Wherefore that you may take courage to your selves to apprehend these Villains where ever you find them, I give to you my Lord Mayor, my Lord Willbewill, and Mr. Recorder, with all the Inhabitants of the Town of Mansoul, full Power and Commission to seek out, to take, and to cause to be put to Death by the Cross, all, and all manner of Diabolonians, when and where ever you shall find them to lurk within, or to range without the Walls of the Town of Mansoul.

I told you before, that I had placed a standing Ministry among you, not that you have but these with you, for my four ^{More Preachers if need be for Mansoul.} first Captains who came against the Master and Lord of the Diabolonians that was in Mansoul, they can, and (if need be, and) if they be required, will not only privately inform, but publicly preach to the Corporation both good and wholesome Doctrine, and such as shall lead you in the way. Yea, they will set up a weekly, yea, if need be a daily Lecture in thee, O Mansoul! and will instruct thee in such profitable Lessons, that if heeded will do thee good at the end. And take good heed that you spare not the men that you have a Commission to take and crucify.

Now as I have set out before your Eyes the Vagrants and Runnagates by Name, so I will tell you that among your selves some of them shall creep in to beguile you, even such as would seem, and that in appearance are, very rife and hot for Religion. And they if you watch ^{A Caution.} not, will do you a mischief, such an one as at present you cannot think of.

These, as I said, will shew themselves to you in another hue than those under description before. Wherefore Mansoul watch and be sober, and suffer not thy self to be betrayed.

When the Prince had thus far new modelled the Town of Mansoul, and had instructed them in such matters as were profitable for them to know; then he appointed another Day in which he intended when the Townsfolk came together to bestow a further Badge of Honour upon the Town of Mansoul. A Badge that should ^{Another privilege for Mansoul.} distinguish them from all the People, Kindsreds and Tongues that dwell in the Kingdom of Universe. Now it was not long before the Day appointed was come, and the Prince and his People met in the King's Palace, where first Emanuel made a short Speech unto them, and then did for them as he had said, and unto them as he had promised.

My Mansoul, said he, that which I ^{His Speech to Mansoul} now am about to do is to make you known to the World to be mine, and to distinguish you also in your own eyes, from all false Traytors that may creep in among you.

Then he commanded that those that waited upon him should go and bring forth out of his Treasury those white and glistering Robes that I, said he, have provided and laid up in Store for my Mansoul. So ^{Rev. 19. 8.} the white Garments were fetched out of his Treasury, and laid forth to the eyes of the People. Moreover, it was granted to them that they should take them and put them them on, according, said he, to your Size and Stature. So the people were put into white, into fine linnen, white and clean.

A Commission to destroy the Diabolonians in Mansoul.

White Robes.

Then said the Prince unto them, 'This, O Mansoul, is my Livery, and the badge by which mine are known from the Servants of others. Yea, it is that which I grant to all that are mine, and without which no man is permitted to see my face. Wear them therefore for my sake who gave them unto you; and also if you would be known by the World to be mine.

But now! can you think how Mansoul shone? it was fair as the Sun, clear as the Moon, and terrible as an Army with banners.

The Prince added further, and said, 'No Prince, Potentate, or mighty one of Universe, giveth this Livery but myself: Behold therefore, as I said before, you shall be known by it to be mine.

'And now, said he, I have given you my Livery, let me give you also in Commandment concerning them: and be sure that you take good heed to my words.

First, Wear them daily, Day by Day, lest you should at sometimes appear to others, as if you were none of mine.

Secondly, Keep them always white, for if they be soiled, 'tis dishonour to me.

Thirdly, Wherefore gird them up from the Ground, and let them not lag with dust and dirt.

Fourthly, Take heed that you lose them not, lest you walk Naked, and they see your shame.

Fifthly, But if you should sulley them, if you should defile them (the which I am greatly unwilling you should, and the Prince Diabolus will be glad if you would) then speed you to do that which is written in my Law, that yet you may stand, and not fall before me, and before my Throne. Also this is the way to cause that I may not leave you nor forsake you while here, but may dwell in this Town of Mansoul for ever.

And now was Mansoul, and the Inhabitants of it as the signet upon Emanuel's right hand; where was there now a Town, a City, a Corporation that could compare with Mansoul! A Town redeemed from the hand and from the power of Diabolus! A Town that the King Shaddai loved, and that he sent Emanuel to regain from the Prince of the Infernal Cave: yea, a Town that Emanuel loved to dwell in, and that he chose for his Royal Habitation; a Town that he fortified for himself, and made strong by the force of his Army. What shall I say, Mansoul has now a most excellent Prince, Golden Captains and Men of War, Weapons proved, and Garments as white as Snow. Nor are these benefits to be counted little but great; can the Town of Mansoul esteem them so, and improve them to that end and purpose for which they are bestowed upon them?

When the Prince had thus compleated the modelling of the Town, to shew that he had great delight in the work of his hands, and took pleasure in the good that he had wrought for the famous and flourishing Mansoul, he commanded, and they set his standard upon the Battlements of the Castle. And then,

First, He gave them frequent visits, not a Day now but the Elders of Mansoul must come to him (or he to them) into his Palace. Now they must walk and talk together of all the great things that he had done, and yet further promised to do for the Town of Mansoul. Thus would he often do with the Lord Mayor, my Lord Wilbewill, and the honest subordinate Preacher Mr. Conscience, and Mr. Recorder. But Oh! how graciously! how lovingly! how courteously! and tenderly did this blessed Prince now carry it towards the Town of Mansoul! in all the Streets, Gardens, Orchards, and other places where he came, to be sure the Poor should have his blessing and Benediction; yea, he would kiss them, and if they were ill, he would lay hands on them, and make them well. The Captains also he would daily, yea sometimes hourly encourage with his presence and goodly words. For you must know that a Smile from him upon them would put more Vigour, more Life and Stoutness into them, than would any thing else under Heaven.

The Prince would now also feast them, and with them continually: hardly a week would pass but a Banquet must be had betwixt him and them. You may remember that some Pages before we make mention of one feast that they had together, but now to feast them was a thing more common, every Day with Mansoul was a Feast-day now. Nor did he when they returned to their places, send them empty away, either they must have a Ring, a Gold-chain, a Bracelet, a white Stone, or something; so dear was Mansoul to him now; so lovely was Mansoul in his Eyes.

Secondly, When the Elders and Townsmen did not come to him, he would send in much plenty of provision unto them, meat that came from Court, wine and bread that were prepared for his Father's Table: yea, such delicacies would he send unto them, and therewith would so cover their Table, that whoever saw it confessed that the like could not be seen in any Kingdom.

Thirdly, If Mansoul did not frequently visit him as he desired they should, he would walk out to them, knock at their doors and desire entrance, that amity might be maintained betwixt them and him, if they did hear and open to him, as commonly they would if they were at home, then would he renew renew his former love, and confirm it to with some new tokens, and signs of continued favour.

And was it not now amazing to behold, that in that very Place where sometimes Diabolus had his abode, and entertained his Diabolonians to the almost utter destruction of Mansoul, the Prince of Princes should sit Eating and Drinking with them, while all his mighty Captains, men of War, Trumpeters, with the Singing-men and Singing-women of his Father stood round about to wait upon them! Now did Mansoul's cup run over, now did her Conduits run sweet Wine, now did she eat the finest of the Wheat, and drink Milk and Honey out of the Rock! Now she said, how great is his Goodness! for since I found favour in his Eyes, how honourable have I been!

The blessed Prince did also ordain a new Officer in the Town, and a goodly Person he was, his Name was Mr. God's peace; this Man was set over my Lord Willbewill, my Lord Mayor, Mr. Recorder, the Subordinate Preacher, Mr. Mind, and over all the Natives of the Town of Mansoul. Himself was not a Native of it, but came with the Prince Emanuel from the Court. He was a great acquaintance of Captain Credence, and Captain Goodhope; some say they were Kin, and I am of that Opinion too. This man, as I said, was made Governour of the Town in General, specially over the Castle, and Captain Credence was to help him there. And I made great Observation of it, that so long as all things went in Mansoul as this sweet natured Gentleman would, the Town was in most happy Condition. Now there were no jars, no chiding, no interferences, no unfaithful doings in all the Town of Mansoul, every man in Mansoul kept close to his own Employment. The Gentry, the Officers, the Soldiers, and all in place observed their order. And as for the Women and Children of the Town, they followed their Business joyfully; they would Work and Sing, Work and Sing from Morning till Night; so that quite through the Town of Mansoul now, nothing was to be found but Harmony, Quietness, Joy and Health. And this lasted all that Summer.

Holy Conceptions.
Good Thoughts.

The story of Mr. Carnal Security.

But there was a Man in the Town of Mansoul, and his Name was Mr. Carnal Security, this Man did after all this Mercy bestowed on this Corporation, bring the Town of Mansoul into great and grievous Slavery and Bondage. A brief account of him and of his doings take as followeth.

Mr. Self-conceit.

When Diabolus at first took possession of the Town of Mansoul, he brought thither with himself, a great Number of Diabolonians, men of his own Conditions. Now among these there was one whose Name was Mr. Self-conceit, and a notable brisk Man he was, as any that in those Days did possess the Town of Mansoul. Diabolus then perceiving this Man to be active and bold, sent him upon many desperate Designs, the which he managed better, and more to the pleasing of his Lord than most that came with him from the Dens could do. Wherefore finding of him so fit for his purpose he preferred him, and made him next to the great Lord Willbewill, of whom we have written so much before. Now the Lord Willbewill being in those Days very well pleased with him, and with his Achievements, gave him his Daughter, the Lady Fear-nothing, to Wife. Now of my Lady Fear-nothing did this Mr. Self-conceit beget this Gentleman Mr. Carnal Security. Wherefore there being then in Mansoul those strange kinds of mixtures, it was hard for them in some cases to find out who were Natives, who not; for Mr. Carnal Security sprang from my Lord Willbewill by Mother's Side, though he had for his Father a Diabolonian by Nature.

Carnal Security's Original.

Well, this Carnal Security took much after his Father and Mother, he was Self-conceited, he feared nothing, he was also a very busy man; nothing of News, nothing of Doctrine, nothing of Alteration, or talk of Alteration could at any time be on foot in Mansoul, but be sure Mr. Carnal Security would be at the Head or Tail of it; but to be sure he would decline those that he deemed the weakest, and stood always with them (in his way of standing) that he supposed was the strongest Side.

His Qualities.

He is always for the strongest Side.

Now when Shaddai the mighty, and Emanuel his Son made War upon Mansoul to take it, this Mr. Carnal Security was then in Town, and was a great doer among the People, encouraging them in their Rebellion, putting of them upon hardning of themselves in their resisting of the King's Forces; but when he saw that the Town of Mansoul was taken and converted to the use of the glorious Prince Emanuel; and when he also saw what was become of Diabolus, and how he was unrooted, and made to quit the Castle in the greatest contempt and scorn, and that the Town of Mansoul was well lined with Captains, Engines of War, and men, and also Provision, what doth he but slyly wheel about also; and as he had served Diabolus against the good Prince, so he feigned that he would serve the Prince against his Foes.

And having got some little smattering of Emanuel's things by the End (being bold) he ventures himself into the Company of the Townsmen, and attempts also to chat among them. Now he knew that the power and Strength of the Town of Mansoul was great, and that it could not but be pleasing to the People if he cried up their might and their glory. Wherefore he beginneth his Tale with the power and strength of Mansoul, and affirmed that it was impregnable. Now magnifying their Captains, and their Slings,

How Mr. Carnal Security begins the Misery of Mansoul.

Slings, and their Rams; then crying up their Fortifications, and Strong-holds; and lastly, the Assurances that they had from their Prince, that Mansoul should be happy for ever. But when he saw that some of the Men of the Town were tickled and taken with his Discourse, he makes it his business, and walking from Street to Street, House to House, and Man to Man, he at last brought Mansoul to dance after his Pipe, and to grow almost as carnally secure as himself; so from talking they went to feasting, and from feasting to sporting; and so to some other matters (now Emanuel was yet in the Town of Mansoul, and he wisely observed their doings) My Lord Mayor, my Lord Willbewill, and Mr. Recorder, were also all taken with the words of this tatling Diabolonian Gentleman; forgetting that their Prince had given them warning before to take heed that they were not beguiled with any Diabolonian sleight: He had further told them that the Security of the now flourishing Town of Mansoul did not so much lie in her present Fortifications and Force, as in her so using of what she had, as might oblige her Emanuel to abide within her Castle. For the right Doctrine of Emanuel was, that the Town of Mansoul should take heed that they forget not his Father's Love and his; also that they should so demean themselves as to continue to keep themselves therein. Now this was not the way to do it, namely, to fall in Love with one of the Diabolonians, and with such an one too as Mr. Carnal Security was, and to be led up and down by the Nose by him: They should have heard their Prince, feared their Prince, loved their Prince, and have stoned this naughty-pack to Death, and took care to have walked in the ways of their Prince's prescribing, for then should their Peace have been as a River, when their Righteousness had been like the Waves of the Sea.

Now when Emanuel perceived that through the policy of Mr. Carnal Security, the Hearts of the Men of Mansoul were chill'd and abated in their practical Love to him:

Emanuel
bemoans
Mansoul.

First, he bemoans them, and condoles their State with the Secretary, saying, Oh that my People had hearkened unto me, and that Mansoul had walked in my ways! I would have fed them with the finest of the Wheat, and with Honey out of the Rock would I have sustained them. This done, he said in his Heart, I will return to the Court and go to my place till Mansoul shall consider and acknowledge their Offence. And he did so, and the Cause and Manner of his going away from them was thus:

The Cause was for that,

First, Mansoul declined him, as is manifest in these Particulars.

1. They left off their former way of visiting of him, they came not to his Royal Palace as afore.

2. They did not regard, nor yet take notice that he came, or came not to visit them.

3. The Love-feasts that had wont to be between their Prince and them, though he made them still, and called them to them, yet they neglected to come at them, or to be delighted with them.

4. They waited not for his Counsels, but began to be head-strong and confident in themselves, concluding that now they were strong and invincible, and that Mansoul was secure, and beyond all reach of the Foe, and that her state must needs be unalterable for ever.

Now, as was said, Emanuel perceiving that by the craft of Mr. Carnal Security, the Town of Mansoul was taken off from their dependence upon him, and upon his Father by him, and set upon what by them was bestowed upon it; He first, as I said, bemoaned their State, then he used means to make them understand that the way that they went on in was dangerous. For he sent my Lord High Secretary to them, to forbid them such ways; but twice when he came to them he found them at dinner in Mr. Carnal Security's Parlour, and perceiving also that they were not willing to reason about matters concerning their good, he took grief and went his way. The which when he had told to the Prince Emanuel, he took offence, and was grieved also, and so made Provision to return to his Father's Court.

Now the methods of his withdrawing, as I was saying before, were thus:

1. Even while he was yet with them in Mansoul he kept himself close, and more retired than formerly.

2. His Speech was not now, if he came in their Company, so pleasant and familiar as formerly.

3. Nor did he in times past, send to Mansoul from his Table, those dainty bits which he was wont to do.

4. Nor when they came to visit him, as now and then they would, would he be so easily spoken with as they found him to be in times past. They might now knock once, yea twice, but he would seem not at all to regard them; whereas formerly at the found of their feet he would up and run, and meet them half way, and take them too, and lay them in his bosom.

But thus Emanuel carried it now, and by this his carriage he sought to make them bethink themselves and return to him. But alas they did not consider, they did not know his ways, they regarded not, they were not touched with these, nor with the true remembrance of former favours. Wherefore what does he but in private manner withdraw himself, first from his Palace, then to the Gate of the Town, and so away from Mansoul he goes, till they should acknowledge their offence, and more earnestly seek his Face. Mr. Gods-peace also laid down his Commission, and would for the present act no longer in the Town of Mansoul.

Jer. 2. 32. Thus they walked contrary to him, and he again by way of Retaliation, walked contrary to them. But alas by this time they were so hardened in their way, and had so drunk in the Doctrine of Mr. Carnal Security, that the departing of their Prince touched them not, nor was he remembered by them when gone; and so of consequence his absence not condoled by them.

A trick put upon Mr. Godly-fear, he goes to the Feast and sits there like a Stranger. Now there was a Day wherein this old Gentleman Mr. Carnal Security did again make a Feast for the Town of Mansoul, and there was at that time in the Town one Mr. Godly-fear, one now but little set by, though formerly one of great Request. This Man old Carnal Security had a Mind, if possible, to gull and debauch, and abuse as he did the rest, and therefore he now bids him to the Feast with his Neighbours; so the Day being come they prepare, and he goes and appears with the rest of the Guests; and being all set at the Table, they did eat and drink, and were merry even all but this one Man. For Mr. Godly-fear sat like a Stranger, and did neither eat, nor was merry. The which when Mr. Carnal Security perceived, he presently addressed himself in a Speech thus to him:

Talk betwixt Mr. Carnal Security and Mr. Godly-fear. Carn. Mr. Godly-fear, are you not well? you seem to be ill of Body or Mind, or both. I have a Cordial of Mr. Forgetgood's making, the which, Sir, if you will take a dram of, I hope, it may make you bonny and blith, and so make you more fit for we feasting Companions.

Godly. Unto whom the good old Gentleman discreetly replied, Sir, I thank you for all things courteous and civil, but for your Cordial I have no list thereto. But a word to the Natives of Mansoul: You the Elders and Chief of Mansoul, to me it is strange to see you so jocund and merry, when the Town of Mansoul is in such woful case.

Carn. Then said Mr. Carnal Security, You want Sleep, good Sir, I doubt. If you please lie down and take a nap, and we mean while will be merry.

God. Then said the good Man as follows, Sir, if you were not destitute of an honest Heart, you could not do as you have done, and do.

Carn. Then said Mr. Carnal Security, Why?

Godly. Nay pray interrupt me not. 'Tis true, the Town of Mansoul was strong, and (with a proviso) impregnable; but you, the Townsmen have weakned it, and it now lies obnoxious to its Foes; nor is it a time to flatter, or be silent, 'tis you Mr. Carnal

Security that have wilily stripped Mansoul, and driven her Glory from her; you have pulled down her Towers, you have broken down her Gates, you have spoiled her Locks and Bars.

And now to explain my self, from that time that my Lords of Mansoul and you, Sir, grew so great, from that time the strength of Mansoul has been offended, and now he is arisen and is gone. If any shall question the Truth of my Words, I will answer him by this, and such like Questions. Where is the Prince Emanuel? When did a Man or Woman in Mansoul see him? When did you hear from him, or taste any of his dainty bits? You are now a feasting with this Diabolonian monster, but he is not your Prince. I say therefore, though Enemies from without, had you taken heed, could not have made a prey of you, yet since you have sinned against your Prince, your Enemies within have been too hard for you.

Carn. Then said Mr. Carnal Security, Fy, fy, Mr. Godly-fear, fy; will you never shake off your Timorousness? are you afraid of being sparrow-blasted? Who hath hurt you? Behold I am on your Side, only you are for doubting, and I am for being confident. Besides, is this a time to be sad in? A Feast is made for mirth, why then do ye now, to your shame, and our trouble, break out into such passionate melancholy Language when you should eat and drink, and be merry?

Godly. Then said Mr. Godly-fear again, I may well be sad, for Emanuel is gone from Mansoul. I say again he is gone, and you, Sir, are the man that has driven him away; yea, he is gone without so much as acquainting the Nobles of Mansoul with his going, and if that is not a sign of his Anger, I am not acquainted with the methods of Godliness.

And now my Lords and Gentlemen, His speech for my Speech is still to you, your gradual declining from him did provoke him to the Elders of Mansoul. 'gradually to depart from you, the which he did for some time, if perhaps you would have been made sensible thereby, and have been renewed by humbling of your selves; but when he saw that none would regard, nor lay these fearful beginnings of his Anger and Judgment to Heart, he went away from this place, and this I saw with mine Eye. Wherefore now while you boast, your Strength is gone, you are like the man that had lost his Locks that before did wave about his Shoulders. You may with this Lord of your Feast shake your selves, and conclude to do as at other times; but since without him you can do nothing, and he is departed from you, turn your Feast into a Sigh, and your Mirth into Lamentation.'

Then the Subordinate Preacher, old Mr. Conscience Conscience started.

Conscience by name, he that of old was Recorder of Mansoul, being startled at what was said, began to second it thus.

Con. Indeed, my Brethren, quoth he, I fear that Mr. Godlyfear tells us true: I, for my part, have not seen my Prince a long Season. I cannot remember the Day for my part. Nor can I answer Mr. Godlyfear's question. I doubt, I am afraid that all is naught with Mansoul.

Godly. Nay, I know that you shall not find him in Mansoul, for he is departed and gone; yea, and gone for the Faults of the Elders, and for that they rewarded his grace with unsufferable unkindnesses.

They are all agast.

Then did the Subordinate Preacher look as if he would fall down dead at the Table, also all there present, except the man of the house, began to look pale and wan. But having a little recovered themselves, and jointly agreeing to believe Mr. Godlyfear and his sayings, they began to consult what was best to be done (now Mr. Carnal Security was gone into his with-drawing room; for he liked not such dumpish doings) both to the man of the House for drawing them into evil, and also to recover Emanuel's love.

They consult and burn their Feast-master.

And with that, that saying of their Prince came very hot into their minds, which he had bidden them do to such as were false Prophets that should arise to delude the Town of Mansoul. So they took Mr. Carnal Security (concluding that he must be he) and burned his house upon him with fire, for he also was a Diabolonian by nature.

Cant. 5. 6

So when this was past and over, they bespied themselves to look for Emanuel their Prince, and they sought him, but they found him not; then were they more confirmed in the truth of Mr. Godlyfear's sayings, and began also severely to reflect upon themselves for their so vile and ungodly doings; for they concluded now that it was through them that their Prince had left them.

They apply themselves to the Holy Ghost, but he is grieved, &c. Isa. 63. 10. Eph. 4. 30. 1 Thess. 5. 19.

Then they agreed and went to my Lord Secretary, (him whom before they refused to hear, him whom they had grieved with their doings) to know of him, for he was a Seer, and could tell where Emanuel was, and how they might direct a Petition to him. But the Lord Secretary would not admit them to a Conference about this matter, nor would admit them to his Royal place of abode, nor come out to them to shew them his face, or intelligence.

And now was it a day gloomy and dark, a day of Clouds and of thick Darkness with Mansoul. Now they saw that they had been foolish, and began to perceive what the company and prattle of Mr. Carnal Security had done, and what desperate damage his swaggering words had brought poor Mansoul into. But what further it was like to cost them, that they were ignorant of. Now Mr. Godlyfear began again to be in repute with the men of the Town: yea, they were ready to look upon him as a Prophet.

Well, when the Sabbath-day was come, they went to hear their Subordinate Preacher; but Oh how he did Thunder and Lighten this Day! His Text was that in the Prophet Jonab, They that observe lying vanities, forsake their own mercies. But there was then such power and authority in that Sermon, and such a dejection seen in the countenances of the people that day, that the like hath seldom been heard or seen. The people when Sermon was done, were scarce able to go to their homes, or to betake themselves to their imployes the week after, they were so Sermon smitten, and also so Sermon-sick by being smitten, that they knew not what to do.

Jon. 2. 9.

Hof. 6. 13.

He did not only shew to Mansoul their Sin, but did tremble before them, under the sense of his own, still crying out of himself, as he Preached to them, Unhappy man that I am! that I should do so wicked a thing! That I! a Preacher! whom the Prince did set up to teach to Mansoul his Law, should myself live senseless, and foolishly here, and be one of the first found in Transgression. This Transgression also fell within my precincts, I should have cried out against the Wickedness, but I let Mansoul lye wallowing in it, until it had driven Emanuel from its borders. With these things he also charged all the Lord's and Gentry of Mansoul, to the almost distracting of them.

The Subordinate Preacher doth acknowledge his fault, and bewails his compliance with Mr. Carnal Security.

About this time also there was a great Sickness in the Town of Mansoul; and most of the Inhabitants were greatly afflicted. Yea the Captains also, and men of War were brought thereby to a languishing condition, and that for a long time together; so that in case of an invasion, nothing could to purpose now have been done, either by the Townsmen, or Field-Officers. Oh how many pale Faces, weak Hands, feeble Knees, and staggering men were now seen to walk the streets of Mansoul. Here were groans, there pants, and yonder lay those that were ready to faint.

A great sickness in Mansoul.

The garments too which Emanuel had given them were but in a sorry case; some were Rent, some were Torn, and all in a Nasty condition; some also did hang so loosely upon them, that the next bush they came at was ready to pluck them off.

Heb. 12. 12, 13. Rev. 3. 2. Isa. 3. 24. Sin doth cause to be weak, both body, and soul, and graces.

After some time spent in this sad and desolate Condition, the Subordinate Preacher called for a Day of Fasting, and to humble themselves for being so wicked against the great Shaddai, and his Son. And he desired that Captain Boanerges would Preach. So he consented to do it, and the Day was come, and his Text was this, Cut it down, why cumbereth it the ground? And a very smart Sermon he made upon the place. First, he shewed what was the occasion of the words, to wit, because the fig-tree was barren;

Boanerges doth Preach to Mansoul.

barren; then he shewed what was contained in the sentence, to wit, Repentance, or utter Desolation. He then shewed also by whose authority this sentence was pronounced, and that was by Shaddai himself. And lastly, he shewed the Reasons of the Point, and then concluded his Sermon. But he was very pertinent in the Application, insomuch that he made poor Mansoul tremble. For this Sermon as well as the former wrought much upon the hearts of the men of Mansoul; yea it greatly helped to keep awake those that wereroused by the Preaching that went before. So that now throughout the whole Town there was little or nothing to be heard or seen but Sorrow and Mourning, and Wo.

The men of Mansoul much affected.

They consulted what to do.

Now after Sermon they got together and consulted what was best to be done. But said the Subordinate Preacher, I will do nothing of mine own head, without advising with my neighbour Mr. Godlyfear.

For if he had afore, and understood more of the mind of our Prince than we, I do not know but he also may have it now, even now we are turning again to vertue. So they called and sent for Mr. Godlyfear, and he forthwith appeared; then they desired that he would further shew his Opinion about what they had best to do. Then said the old Gentleman as followeth, It is my Opinion that this Town of Mansoul should in this Day of her distress draw up and send an humble Petition to their offended Prince Emanuel, that he in his Favour and Grace will turn again unto you, and not keep anger for ever.

Mr. Godlyfear's advice.

They send the Lord Mayor to Court.

Lam. 3. 8. 44.

When the Townsmen had heard this Speech, they did with one Consent agree to his Advice; so they did presently draw up their Request, and the next was, But who shall carry it? At last they did all agree to send it by my Lord Mayor. So he accepted of the Service, and addressed himself to his Journey; and went and came to the Court of Shaddai, whither Emanuel the Prince of Mansoul was gone. But the Gate was shut, and a strict Watch kept thereat, so that the Petitioner was forced to stand without for a great while together. Then he desired that some would go in to the Prince and tell him who stood at the Gate, and what his Business was. So one went and told to Shaddai, and to Emanuel his Son, that the Lord Mayor of the Town of Mansoul stood without at the Gate of the King's Court, desiring to be admitted into the Presence of the Prince, the King's Son. He also told what was the Lord Mayor's Errand, both to the King and his Son Emanuel. But the Prince would not come down, nor admit that the Gate should be opened to him, but sent him an answer to this Effect: They have turned the Back unto me, and not their Face, but now in the Time of their Trouble they say to me, Arise and save us. But can they not now go to Mr.

Jer. 2. 27. 28.

Carnal Security to whom they went when they turned from me, and make him their Leader, their Lord, and their Protection now in their Trouble; why now in their trouble do they visit me, since in their Prosperity they went astray?

A dreadful Answer.

This Answer made my Lord Mayor look black in the Face; it troubled, it perplexed, it rent him fore. And now he began again to see what it was to be familiar with Diabolonians, such as Mr. Carnal Security was. When he saw that at Court (as yet) there was little Help to be expected, either for himself, or Friends in Mansoul; he smote upon his Breast and returned weeping, and all the Way bewailing the lamentable State of Mansoul.

Lam. 4. 7, 8.

The Lord Mayor returns, and how.

Well, when he was come within Sight of the Town, the Elders, and chief of the People of Mansoul went out at the Gate to meet him, and to salute him, and to know how he sped at Court. But he told them his Tale in so doleful a Manner, that they all cried out, and mourned, and wept. Wherefore they threw Ashes and Dust upon their Heads, and put Sackcloth upon their Loins, and went crying out through the Town of Mansoul; the which when the rest of the Townsfolk saw, they all mourned and wept. This therefore was a Day of Rebuke and Trouble, and of Anguish to the Town of Mansoul, and also of great Distress.

The state of Mansoul now.

The whole Town cast down.

After some Time, when they had somewhat refrained themselves, they came together to consult again what by them was yet to be done; and they asked Advice, as they did before of that Reverend Mr. Godlyfear, who told them that there was no Way better than to do as they had done, nor would he that they should be discouraged at all with that they had met with at Court: yea, though several of their Petitions should be answered with nought but Silence or Rebuke: For, said he, it is the Way of the wise Shaddai to make men wait and to exercise Patience, and it should be the Way of them in want, to be willing to stay his Leisure.

They consult again Mr. Godlyfear's Advice.

Then they took Courage, and sent again, and again, and again; for there was not now one Day, nor an Hour that went over Mansoul's Head, wherein a Man might not have met upon the Road one or other riding Post, founding the Horn from Mansoul to the Court of the King Shaddai; and all with Letters petitionary in behalf of (and for the Prince's Return, to) Mansoul.

See now what's the Work of a backsliding Saint awakened.

Groaning Desires.

The Road, I say, was now full of Messengers, going and returning, and meeting one another; some from the Court, and some from Mansoul, and this was the Work of the miserable Town of Mansoul, all that long, that sharp, that cold and tedious Winter.

Now if you have not forgot, you may yet

yet remember that I told you before, that after Emanuel had taken Mansoul, yea, and after that he had new modelled the Town, there remained in several lurking Places of the Corporation many of the old Diabolonians, that either came with the Tyrant when he invaded and took the Town, or that had there by Reason of unlawful mixtures, their Birth and Breeding, and bringing up. And their Holes, Dens, and lurking Places were in, under, or about the Wall of the Town. Some of their names are the Lord Fornication, the Lord Adultery, the Lord Murder, the Lord Anger, the Lord Lasciviousness, the Lord Deceit, the Lord Evileye, the Lord Blasphemy, and that horrible Villain the old and dangerous Lord Covetousness. These, as I told you, with many more, had yet their Abode in the Town of Mansoul, and that after that Emanuel had driven their Prince Diabolus out of the Castle.

Mansoul heeded not her Prince's Caution, nor put his Commission into execution.

Against these the good Prince did grant a Commission to the Lord Wilbewill and others, yea, to the whole Town of Mansoul, to seek, take, secure, and destroy any, or all that they could lay Hands of, for that they were Diabolonians by Nature, Enemies to the Prince, and those that sought to ruin the blessed Town of Mansoul. But the Town of Mansoul did not pursue this Warrant, but neglected to look after, to apprehend, to secure, and to destroy these Diabolonians. Wherefore what do these Villains but by Degrees take Courage to put forth their Heads, and to shew themselves to the Inhabitants of the Town. Yea, and as I was told, some of the Men of the Town of Mansoul grew too familiar with some of them, to the Sorrow of the Corporation, as you yet will hear more of in time and place.

The Diabolonians Plot.

Well, when the Diabolonian Lords that were left, perceived that Mansoul had through sinning offended Emanuel their Prince, and that he had withdrawn himself and was gone, what do they but plot the Ruin of the Town of Mansoul. So upon a Time they met together at the Hold of one Mr. Mischief, who also was a Diabolonian, and there consulted how they might deliver up Mansoul into the Hands of Diabolus again. Now some advised one way, and some another, every Man according to his own Liking. At last my Lord Lasciviousness propounded, whether it might not be best in the first place for some of those that were Diabolonians in Mansoul to adventure to offer themselves for Servants to some of the Natives of the Town. For, said he, if they so do, and Mansoul shall accept of them, they may for us, and for Diabolus our Lord, make the taking of the Town of Mansoul more easy than otherwise it will be. But then stood up the Lord Murder, and said, This may not be done at this Time, for Mansoul is now in a kind of a Rage, because by our Friend Mr. Carnal Security she hath been once insnared already and made to offend against her Prince, and how shall she reconcile herself unto her Lord again, but by the Heads of these Men? Besides we know that they have in Commission to take and slay us where ever they shall find us, let us therefore be wise as Foxes, when we are dead we can do them no Hurt, but while we live we may. Thus when they had tossed the Matter to and fro, they jointly agreed that a Letter should forthwith be sent away to Diabolus in their Name, by which the State of the Town of Mansoul should be shewed him, and how much it is under the Frowns of their Prince; we may also, said some, let him know our Intentions, and ask of him his Advice in the Case.

So a Letter was presently fram'd, the Contents of which was this.

To our great Lord, the Prince Diabolus, dwelling below in the Infernal Cave.

O Great Father, and mighty Prince Diabolus, we, the true Diabolonians, yet remaining in the rebellious Town of Mansoul, having received our Beings from thee, and our Nourishment at thy Hands, cannot with Content and Quiet endure to behold, as we do this Day, how thou art dispraised, disgrac'd, and reproached among the Inhabitants of this Town; nor is thy long Absence at all delightful to us, because greatly to our Detriment.

The Copy of their Letter.

The Reason of this our writing unto our Lord, is for that we are not altogether without Hope that this Town may become thy Habitation again; for it is greatly declined from its Prince Emanuel, and he is up-risen, and is departed from them; yea, and though they send, and send, and send, and send after him to return to them, yet can they not prevail, nor get good Words from him.

There has been also of late, and is yet remaining a very great Sickness and Faintings among them, and that not only upon the poorer Sort of the Town, but upon the Lords, Captains, and chief Gentry of the Place (we only who are of the Diabolonians by Nature remain well, lively and strong) so that through their great Transgression on the one Hand, and their dangerous Sickness on the other, we judge they lay open to thy Hand and Power. If therefore it shall stand with thy horrible Cunning, and with the Cunning of the rest of the Princes with thee, to come and make an Attempt to take Mansoul again, send us Word, and we shall to our utmost Power be ready to deliver it into thy Hand. Or if what we have said shall not by thy Fatherhood be thought best, and most meet to be done, send

'send us thy Mind in a few Words, and
'we are all ready to follow thy Counsel
'to the hazarding of our Lives, and what 'else we have.

'Given under our Hands the day and
'date above written, after a close
'Consultation at the house of Mr.
'Mischief, who yet is alive, and hath 'his Place in our desireable Town of
'Mansoul.'

Mr. Profane is Carrier, he brings the Letter to Hell-gate-bill, and there presents it to Cer-berus the Porter.

When Mr. Profane (for he was the Carrier) was come with his Letter to Hellgatebill, he knocked at the Brazen Gates for Entrance. Then did Cerberus the Porter, for he is the Keeper of that Gate, open to Mr. Profane, to whom he delivered his Letter, which he had brought from the Diablonians in Mansoul. So he carried it in and presented it to Diabolus his Lord;
and said, Tidings my Lord, from Mansoul;
from our trusty Friends in Mansoul.

Dead-man's bell, and how it went.

Then came together from all Places of the Den Beelzebub, Lucifer, Apollyon, with the rest of the Rabblement there, to hear what News from Mansoul. So the Letter was broken up and read, and Cerberus he stood by. When the Letter was openly read, and the Contents thereof spread into all the Corners of the Den, Command was given that without Let or Stop, Deadman's Bell should be rung for Joy. So the Bell was rung, and the Princes rejoiced that Mansoul was like to come to Ruin. Now the Clapper of the Bell went, The Town of Mansoul is coming to dwell with us, make room for the Town of Mansoul. This Bell therefore they did ring, because they did hope that they should have Mansoul again.

Now when they had performed this their horrible Ceremony, they got together again to consult what Answer to send to their Friends in Mansoul, and some advised one thing, and some another, but at length because the business required haste, they left the whole business to the Prince Diabolus, judging him the most proper Lord of the place. So he drew up a Letter as he thought fit, in answer to what Mr. Profane had brought, and sent it to the Diabolonians that did dwell in Mansoul, by the same hand that had brought theirs to him:
And this was the Contents thereof,

'To our Off-spring the high and mighty
'Diablonians, that yet dwell in the 'Town of Mansoul, Diabolus the great
'Prince of Mansoul, wisheth a prof-
'perous Issue and Conclusion of those
'many brave Enterprizes, Conspira-
'cies, and Designs that you of your 'Love and Respect to our Honour,
'have in your Hearts to attempt to do
'against Mansoul.

Beloved Children and Disciples, my Lord Fornication, Adultery, and the rest, we have here in our desolate Den received to our highest Joy and Content, your welcome Letter, by the Hand of our trusty Mr. Profane, and to shew how acceptable your Tydings were, we rang out our Bell for gladness; for we rejoiced as much as we could, when we perceived that yet we had Friends in Mansoul, and such as sought our Honour and Revenge in the ruin of the Town of Mansoul. We also rejoiced to hear that they are in a degenerate Condition, and that they have offended their Prince, and that he is gone. Their Sickness also pleaseth us, as doth also your Health, Might and Strength. Glad also would we be, right horribly beloved, could we get this Town into our clutches again.
Nor will we be sparing of spending our
Wit, our Cunning, our Craft, and hellish Inventions to bring to a wished Conclusion this your brave beginning in order thereto.

'And take this for your comfort, (our Birth, and our Off-spring) that shall we again surprize it and take it, we will attempt to put all your Foes to the Sword, and will make you the great Lords and Captains of the place. Nor need you fear (if ever we get it again) that we after that shall be cast out any more; for we will come with more Strength, and so lay far more fast hold than at the first we did. Besides, it is the Law of that Prince that now they own, that if we get them a second time they shall be ours for ever. Mat. 12.
43, 44, 45.

'Do you therefore our trusty Diabolonians, yet more pry into, and endeavour to spy out the weakness of the Town of Mansoul. We also would that you your selves do attempt to weaken them more and more. Send us word also by what means you think we had best to attempt the regaining thereof: to wit, whether by perswasion to a vain and loose Life; or, whether by attempting them to doubt and despair; or, whether by blowing up of the Town by the Gun-powder of pride, and self-conceit. Do you also, O ye brave Diablonians, and true Sons of the Pit, be always in a readiness to make a most hideous assault within, when we shall be ready to storm it without. Now speed you in your project, and we in our desires, to the utmost power of our Gates, which is the wish of your great Diabolus, Mansoul's Enemy, and him that trembles when he thinks of Judgment to come, all the Blessings of the Pit be upon you, and so we close up our Letter.

'Given at the Pit's Mouth by the 'joint consent of all the Princes of 'Darkness to be sent (to the Force
'and

‘and Power that we have yet remaining in Mansoul) by the Hand of Mr. Profane.

By me Diabolus?

Flesh.

Profane comes home again.

This Letter, as was said, was sent to Mansoul, to the Diabolonians that yet remained there, and that yet inhabited the Wall, from the dark Dungeon of Diabolus, by the Hand of Mr. Profane, by whom they also in Mansoul sent theirs to the Pit. Now when this Mr. Profane had made his return, and was come to Mansoul again, he went and came as he was wont to the House of Mr. Mischief, for there was the Conclave, and the place where the Contrivers were met. Now when they saw that their Messenger was returned safe and found, they were great'y glad thereat. Then he presented them with his Letter which he had brought from Diabolus for them; the which when they had read and considered, did much augment their gladness. They asked him after the welfare of their Friends, as how their Lord Diabolus, Lucifer, and Beelzebub did, with the rest of those of the Den. To which this Profane made answer, Well, well, my Lords, they are well, even as well as can be in their place. They also, said he, did ring for Joy at the reading of your Letter, as you will perceive by this when you read it.

Now, as was said, when they had read their Letter, and perceived that it encouraged them in their work, they fell to their way of contriving again, to wit, how they might compleat their Diabolonian design upon Mansoul. And the first thing that they agreed upon was to keep all things from Mansoul as close as they could. Let it not be known, let not Mansoul be acquainted with what we design against it. The next thing was, how, or by what means they should try to bring to pass the ruin and overthrow of Mansoul, and one said after this manner, and another said after that. Then stood up Mr. Deceit, and said, My right Diabolonian Friends, our Lords, and the high ones of the deep Dungeon, do propound unto us these three ways.

1. Whether we had best to seek its ruin by making of Mansoul loose and vain.

2. Or whether by driving them to doubt and despair.

3. Or whether by endeavouring to blow them up by the Gun-power of pride and self conceit.

Take heed Mansoul.

Now I think if we shall tempt them to pride, that may do something; and if we tempt them to wantonness, that may help. But in my Mind, if we could drive them into desperation, that would knock the Nail on the Head; for then we should have them in the first place question the Truth of the Love of the Heart of their Prince towards them, and that will disgust him much. This if it works well, will make them leave off quickly their way of sending Petitions to him; then farewell earnest Sollicitations for help and supply; for then this Conclusion lies naturally before them, As good do nothing as do to no purpose. So to Mr. Deceit they unanimously did consent.

Then the next question was, but how shall we do to bring this our Project to pass? And it was answered by the same Gentleman, That this might be the best way to do it, even let, quoth he, so many of our Friends as are willing to venture themselves for the promoting of their Princes Cause, disguise themselves with Apparel, change their Names, and go into the Market like far Countrymen, and proffer to let themselves for Servants to the famous Town of Mansoul, and let them pretend to do for their Masters as beneficially as may be; for by so doing they may, if Mansoul shall hire them, in little time so corrupt and defile the Corporation, that her now Prince shall be not only further offended with them, but in Conclusion shall spue them out of his Mouth. And when this is done, our Prince Diabolus shall prey upon them with ease: Yea, of themselves they shall fall into the mouth of the eater.

Take heed Mansoul.

Take heed Mansoul.

This Project was no sooner propounded, but was as highly accepted, and forward were all Diabolonians now to engage in so delicate an Enterprize; but it was not thought fit that all should do thus, wherefore they pitched upon two or three, namely, the Lord Covetousness, the Lord Lasciviousness, and the Lord Anger. The Lord Covetousness called himself by the Name of Prudent Thrifty; the Lord Lasciviousness called himself by the Name of Harmless-mirth; and the Lord Anger called himself by the Name of Good-zeal.

Take heed Mansoul.

So upon a Market-day they came into the Market-place, three lusty Fellows they were to look on, and they were clothed in Sheeps-ruffet, which was also now in a manner as white as were the white robes of the Men of Mansoul. Now the Men could speak the Language of Mansoul well. So when they were come into the Market-place, and had offered to let themselves to the Townsmen, they were presently taken up, for they asked but little Wages, and promised to do their Masters great Service.

Take heed Mansoul.

Mr. Mind hired Prudent-thrifty, and Mr. Godly-fear hired Good-zeal. True, this Fellow Harmless-mirth did hang a little in Hand, and could not so soon get him a Master as the other did, because the Town of Mansoul was now in Lent, but after a while because Lent was almost out, the Lord Willbewill hired Harmless-mirth to be both his Waiting-man and his Lacquey, and thus they got them Masters.

Take heed Mansoul.

These

These Villains now being got thus far into the Houses of the Men of Mansoul, quickly began to do great Mischief therein; for being filthy, arch and sly, they quickly corrupted the Families where they were; yea, they tainted their Masters much, especially this Prudent-thrifty, and him they call Harmless-mirth. True, he that went under the Vizard of Good-zeal, was not so well liked of his Master, for he quickly found that he was but a counterfeit Rascal; the which when the Fellow perceived, with speed he made his escape from the House, or I doubt not but his Master had hanged him.

A day of worldly cumber.

Take heed
Mansoul.

Well, when these Vagabonds had thus far carried on their design, and had corrupted the Town as much as they could, in the next place they considered with themselves at what time their Prince Diabolus without, and themselves within the Town should make an attempt to seize upon Mansoul; and they all agreed upon this, that a Market-day should be best for that work; for why? Then will the Townfolk be busy in their ways: and always take this for a Rule, When People are most busy in the World, they least fear a Surprise. We also then, said they, shall be able with less Suspicion to gather our selves together for the work of our Friends, and Lords; yea, and in such a Day, if we shall attempt our work, and miss it, we may when they shall give us the rout, the better hide our selves in the croud and escape.

These things being thus far agreed upon by them, they wrote another Letter to Diabolus, and sent it by the Hand of Mr. Profane, the Content of which was this:

Look to it
Mansoul.

'The Lords of Loosness send to the great
'and high Diabolus from our Dens;
'Caves, Holes, and Strong-holds, in,
'and about the Wall of the Town of
'Mansoul, Greeting:

Rom. 7.

21.

Gal. 5. 17.

'OUR great Lord, and the nourisher
'of our Lives, Diabolus; how glad
'we were when we heard of your father-
'hoods readiness to comply with us, and 'help forward our design in our attempts 'to ruin Mansoul! none can tell but those 'who as we do set themselves against all 'appearance of good when and wheresoever
'we find it.

'Touching the Incouragement that your 'Greatness is pleased to give us to continue 'to devise, contrive, and study the utter 'Desolation of Mansoul, that we are not
'solicitous about, for we know right well
'that it cannot but be pleasing and profitable
'to us, to see our Enemies and them that 'seek our Lives, to Die at our Feet, or fly
'before us. We therefore are still contri-
'ving, and that to the best of our cunning,

'to make this work most facile and easie to
'your Lordships, and to us.

Look to it
Mansoul.

'First we considered of that most hel-
'lishly, cunning compacted, three-fold pro'ject, that by you was propounded to us
'in your last; and have concluded, that 'though to blow them up with the Gun'powder of pride would do well, and to 'do it by tempting them to be loose and
'vain will help on, yet to contrive to bring 'them into the gulf of Desperation, we 'think will do best of all. Now we who 'are at your beck, have thought of two 'Ways to do this: First, we for our parts
'will make them as vile as we can, and 'then you with us, at a time appointed,
'shall be ready to fall upon them with the 'utmost force. And of all the Nations that 'are at your whistle, we think that an army
'of Doubters may be the most likely to at'tack and overcome the Town of Mansoul.
'Thus shall we overcome these Enemies,
'else the Pit shall open her Mouth upon 'them, and desperation shall thrust them 'down into it. We have also, to effect
'this so much by us desired design, sent al'ready three of our trusty Diabolonians
'among them, they are disguised in Garb,
'they have changed their Names, and are
'now accepted of them, to wit, Covetous-
'ness, Lasciviousness and Anger. The Name
'of Covetousness is changed to Prudent-
'thrifty; and him Mr. Mind has hired, and 'is almost become as bad as our Friend.
'Lasciviousness has changed his Name to 'Harmless-mirth, and he is got to be the 'Lord Willberwill's Lacquey, but he has 'made his Master very wanton. Anger
'changed his Name into Good-zeal, and 'was entertained by Mr. Godly-fear, but
'the peevish old Gentleman took Pepper in 'his Nose, and turned our Companion out 'of his House. Nay, he has informed us
'since, that he ran away from him, or else
'his old master had hanged him up for his 'labour.

'Now these have much helped forward
'our work and design upon Mansoul, for 'notwithstanding the Spite and quarrel-
'some Temper of the old Gentleman last
'mentioned, the other two ply their Busi'ness well, and are like to ripen the work
'apace.

Look to it
Mansoul.

'Our next project is, that it be concluded
'that you come upon the Town upon a 'Market day, and that when they are upon 'the heat of their Business; for then to be-'sure they will be most secure, and least
'think that an assault will be made upon 'them. They will also at such a time be 'less able to defend themselves, and to of'fend you in the Prosecution of our design.
'And we your trusty, (and we are sure 'your beloved) ones shall when you shall 'make your furious assault without, be 'ready to second the Business within. So
'shall

' shall we in all likelihood be able to put
' Mansoul to utter Confusion, and to swal' low them up before they can come to ' themselves. If your Serpentine heads,
' most subtil Dragons, and our highly e' steemed Lords can find out a better way
' than this, let us quickly know your ' minds:

' To the Monsters of the Infernal Cave,
' from the house of Mr. Mischief in
' Mansoul, by the Hand of Mr. Pro-
' fane.

The sad state of
Mansoul.

Now all the while that the raging run-nagates, and hellish Diabolonians were thus contriving the ruin of the Town of Man- soul, they, to wit, the poor Town itself, was in a sad and woful case, partly because they had so grievously offended Shaddai and his Son, and partly because that the Enemies thereby got strength within them afresh, and also because though they had by many Petitions made suit to the Prince Emanuel, and to his Father Shaddai by him for their Pardon and Favour, yet hitherto obtained they not one smile; but contrariwise through the craft and subtilty of the Domestick Di- abolonians, their cloud was made to grow blacker and blacker, and their Emanuel to stand at further distance.

The sickness also did still greatly rage in Mansoul, both among the Captains and the inhabitants of the Town their enemies, and their enemies only were now lively and strong, and like to become the head, whilst Mansoul was made the tail.

Profane arrives at Hellgate-
hill.

By this time the Letter last mentioned, that was written by the Diabolonians that yet lurked in the Town of Mansoul, was conveyed to Diabolus in the Black-den, by the hand of Mr. Profane. He carried the Letter by Hell-gate-hill as afore, and conveyed it by Cerberus to his Lord.

But when Cerberus and Mr. Profane did meet, they were presently as great as beg-gers, and thus they fell into discourse about Mansoul, and about the project against her.

Cerb. Ah! old friend, quoth Cerberus, art thou come to Hellgate-hill again! By St.
Mary, I am glad to see thee.

Talk between him and Cerbe- rus.

Prof. Yes, my Lord, I am come again about the concerns of the Town of Man-
soul.

Cerb. Prithee tell me what Condition is that Town of Mansoul in at present?

Prof. In a brave Condition, my Lord, for us, and for my Lords, the Lords of this place I trow, for they are greatly decayed as to Godliness, and that's as well as our Heart can wish; their Lord is greatly out with them, and that doth also please us well. We have already also a foot in their dish, for our Diabolonian friends are laid in their bosoms, and what do we lack but to be masters of the place.

N^o XXVII. Vol. II.

Besides, our trusty friends in Mansoul are daily plotting to betray it to the Lords of this Town, also the Sickness rages bitterly among them, and that which makes up all, we hope at last to prevail.

Cerb. Then said the Dog of Hellgate, no time like this to assault them, I wish that the enterprize be followed close, and that the success desired may be soon effected:
Yea, I wish it for the poor Diabolonians sakes, that live in the continual fear of their lives in that Trayterous Town of Mansoul.

Prof. The contrivance is almost finished;
the Lords in Mansoul that are Diabolonians are at it Day and Night, and the other are like silly Doves, they want heart to be concerned with their State, and to consider that ruin is at hand. Besides, you may, yea must think, when you put all things together, that there are many Reasons that prevail with Diabolus to make what hast he can.

Cerb. Thou hast said as it is, I am glad things are at this pass. Go in my brave Profane to my Lords, they will give thee for thy welcome as good a Coranto as the whole of this Kingdom will afford. I have sent thy Letter in already.

Then Mr. Profane went into the Den, Profane's and his Lord Diabolus met him, and saluted Entertain- him with Welcome my trusty servant. I ment.
have been made glad with thy Letter. The rest of the Lords of the Pit, gave him also their Salutations. Then Profane after obei-sance made to them all, said, let Mansoul be given to my Lord Diabolus, and let him be her King for ever. And with that the hollow belly, and yawning gorge of Hell gave so loud and hideous a groan (for that is the musick of that place) that it made the mountains about it totter, as if they would fall in pieces.

Now after they had read and considered the Letter, they consulted what answer to return, and the first that did speak to it was Lucifer.

Lucif. Then said he, The first project of They con- the Diabolonians in Mansoul is like to be sult what lucky, and to take; to wit, that they will answer to by all the ways and means they can, make give to the Mansoul yet more vile and filthy; no way Letter.
to destroy a Soul like this; this is Probatum
est, our old Friend Balaam went this way and prospered many years ago, let this Lucifer.
therefore stand with us for a Maxim, and Numb. 31.
be to Diabolonians for a general Rule in all Rev. 2. 14

Ages, for no hing can make this to fail but Grace, in which I would hope that this Town has no share. But whether to fall Cumber- upon them on a Market-day, because of ments are their cumber in business; that I would danger- should be under debate. And there is more ous.
reason why this Head should be debated, than why some other should; because upon this will turn the whole of what we shall attempt. If we time not our Business well, our whole project may fail. Our Friends

They had need do it.

Friends the Diabolonians say, that a Market-day is best, for then will Mansoul be most busy, and have fewest thoughts of a surprize. But what if also they should double their Guards on those Days, (and methinks Nature and Reason would teach them to do it) and what if they should keep such a watch on those Days as the necessity of their present case doth require: yea, what if their Men should be always in Arms on those Days? Then you may, my Lords, be disappointed in your attempts, and may bring our Friends in the Town to utter danger of unavoidable ruin.

Beel. Then said the great Beelzebub, There is something in what my Lord hath said, but his conjecture may, or may not fall out. Nor hath my Lord laid it down as that which must not be receded from, for I know that he said it only to provoke to a warm debate thereabout. Therefore we must understand, if we can, whether the Town of Mansoul has such Sense and Knowledge of her decayed State, and of the design that we have on foot against her, as doth provoke her to set watch and ward at her Gates, and to double them on Market-days. But if after Enquiry made, it shall be found that they are asleep, then any Day will do, but a Market-day is best; and this is my Judgment in this case.

Diab. Then quoth Diabolus, how should we know this? And 'twas answered, enquire about it at the Mouth of Mr. Profane. So Profane was called in and asked the Question, and he made his answer as follows.

A Lesson for Christians.

Prof. My Lords, so far as I can gather, this is at present the Condition of the Town of Mansoul, they are decayed in their Faith and Love, Emanuel their Prince has given them the back; they send often by Petition to fetch him again, but he maketh not hast to answer their Request, nor is there much Reformation among them.

Diab. I am glad that they are backward to a Reformation, but yet I am afraid of their Petitioning. However their looseness of Life is a Sign that there is not much Heart in what they do, and without the Heart things are little worth. But go on my Matters, I will divert you, my Lords, no longer.

Beel. If the case be so with Mansoul, as Mr. Profane has described it to be, 'twill be no great matter what Day we assault it, not their Prayers, nor their Power will do them much Service.

Apoll. When Beelzebub had ended his Oration, then Apollyon did begin. My Opinion said he concerning this matter, is, that we go on fair and softly, not doing things in an hurry. Let our Friends in Mansoul go on still to pollute and defile it, by seeking to draw it yet more into Sin (for there is nothing like Sin to devour Mansoul.) If this be done, and it takes effect, Mansoul of it self will leave off to watch, to petition, or any thing else that should tend to her Security and Safety; for she will forget her Emanuel, she will not desire his Company, and can she be gotten thus to live, her Prince will not come to her in haste. Our trusty Friend Mr. Carnal Security, with one of his Tricks, did drive him out of the Town, and why may not my Lord Covetousness, and my Lord Lasciviousness, by what they may do, keep him out of the Town? And this I will tell you (not because you know it not) that two or three Diabolonians, if entertained and countenanced by the Town of Mansoul, will do more to the keeping of Emanuel from them, and towards making of the Town of Mansoul your own, than can an Army of a Legion that should be sent out from us to withstand him.

Let therefore this first project that our Friends in Mansoul have set on foot, be strongly and diligently carried on with all cunning and craft imaginable; and let them send continually under one guise or another, more and other of their Men to play with the People of Mansoul; and then perhaps we shall not need to be at the charge of making a War upon them; or if that must of Necessity be done, yet the more sinful they are, the more unable, to be sure, they will be to resist us, and then the more easily we shall overcome them. And besides, suppose (and that is the worst that can be supposed) that Emanuel should come to them again, why may not the same means (or the like) drive him from them once more! Yea, why may he not by their lapse into that Sin again be driven from them for ever, for the sake of which he was at the first driven from them for a Season? And if this should happen, then away go with him his Rams, his Slings, his Captains, his Soldiers, and he leaveth Mansoul naked and bare. Yea, will not this Town, when she sees herself utterly forsaken of her Prince, of her own accord open her Gates again unto you, and make of you as in the Days of old? But this must be done by time, a few Days will not effect so great a work as this.

Dreadful
Advice against Mansoul.

Dreadful
Advice against
Mansoul.

So soon as Apollyon had made an end of speaking, Diabolus began to blow out his own Malice, and to plead his own Cause, and he said, My Lords and Powers of the Cave, my true and trusty Friends, I have with much Impatience, as becomes me, given Ear to your long and tedious Orations. But my furious gorge, and empty paunch, so lusteth after a re-possession of my famous Town of Mansoul, that whatever comes out I can wait no longer to see the events of lingering Projects. I must, and that without further delay, seek by all means I can to fill my unsatiable gulf with the Soul and Body of the Town of Mansoul.

Look to soul. Therefore lend me your Heads it Mansoul. your Hearts, and your Help, now I am going to recover my Town of Mansoul.

When the Lords and Princes of the Pit saw the flaming desire that was in Diabolus to devour the miserable Town of Mansoul, they left off to raise any more Objections, but consented to lend him what Strength they could: Though had Apollyon's advice been taken, they had far more fearfully distressed the Town of Mansoul. But, I say, they were willing to lend him what Strength they could, not knowing what need they might have of him, when they should engage for themselves, as he. Wherefore they fell to advising about the next thing propounded, to wit, what Soldiers they were, and also how many, with whom Diabolus should go against the Town of Mansoul to take it; and after some debate it was concluded, according as in the Letter the Diabolonians had suggested, that none was more fit for that Expedition than an Army of terrible Doubters. They therefore concluded to send against Mansoul an Army of sturdy Doubters. The Number thought fit to be employed in that Service, was between twenty and thirty thousand.
So then the result of that great counsel of those high and mighty Lords was, That Diabolus should even now out of Hand beat up his Drum for Men in the Land of Doubting, (which Land lieth upon the Confines of the place called Hell-gate-hill) for Men that might be employed by him against the miserable Town of Mansoul. It was also concluded that these Lords themselves should help him in the War, and that they would to that end head and manage his Men. So they drew up a Letter and sent back to the Diabolonians that lurked in Mansoul, and that waited for the back-coming of Mr. Profane, to signify to them into what Method and Forwardness they at present had put their design. The Contents whereof now followeth.

An Army
of Doubters raised to go against the Town of Mansoul.

The Princes of the Pit go with them.

*From the dark and horrible Dungeon of Hell, Diabolus with all the Society of the Princes of Darkness, sends to our trusty ones, in and about the Walls of the Town of Mansoul, now impatiently waiting for our most Devilish Answer, to their venomous and most poisonous
Design against the Town of Mansoul.*

Another Letter from Diabolus to the Diabolonians in
Mansoul.
OUR native ones, in whom from Day to Day we boast, and in whose Actions all the Year long we do greatly delight our selves: we received your welcome, because highly esteemed Letter, at the Hand of our trusty and greatly beloved the old Gentleman Mr. Profane.
And do give you to understand, that when we had broken it up, and had read the Contents thereof (to your amazing Memory be it spoken) our yawning hollow bellied place, where we are, made so hedious and yelling a Noise for Joy, that the Mountains that stand round about Hell-gate-hill, had like to have been shaken to pieces at the sound thereof.

We could also do no less than admire your Faithfulness to us, with the greatness of that subtilty that now hath shewed it self to be in your Heads to serve against the Town of Mansoul. For you have invented for us so excellent a Method for proceeding against that rebellious People, a more effectual cannot be thought of by all the Wits of Hell. The Proposals therefore which now at last you have sent us, since we saw them, we have done little else but highly approved and admired
them.

Nay, we shall to encourage you in the profundity of your craft, let you know, that at a full Assembly and Conclave of our Princes, and Principalities of this place, your project was discoursed and tossed from one side of our Cave to the other by their Mightinesses, but a better, and as was by themselves judged a more fit and proper way by all their Wits could not be invented to surprize, take, and make our own, the rebellious Town of Mansoul.

Wherefore in fine, all that was said that varied from what you had in your Letter propounded, fell of it self to the ground, and yours only was stuck to by Diabolus the Prince; yea, his gaping gorge, and yawning paunch was on fire to put your Invention into execution.

We therefore give you to understand that our stout, furious, and unmerciful Diabolus, is raising for your relief, and the ruin of the rebellious Town of Mansoul, more than twenty thousand Doubters to come against that People. They are all stout and sturdy Men, and Men that of old have been accustomed to War, and that can therefore well endure the Drum,
I say he is doing of this work of his with all the possible speed he can; for his Heart and Spirit is engaged in it. We desire therefore that as you have hitherto stuck to us, and given us both Advice and In-couragement thus far; that you still will prosecute our design, nor shall you lose but be gainers thereby; yea, we intend to make you the Lords of Mansoul.

One thing may not by any means be omitted, that is, those with us do desire that every one of you that are in Mansoul would still use all your power, cunning and skill, with delusive persuasions, yet to draw the Town of Mansoul into more Sin and Wickedness, even that Sin may be finished and bring forth Death.

For thus it is concluded with us, that the more vile, sinful, and debauched the Town of Mansoul is, the more backward will be their Emanuel to come to their help,

Take heed
Mansoul.

' help, either by presence, or other relief;
' yea, the more sinful, the more weak,
' and so the more unable will they be to ' make resistance when we shall make our ' assault upon them to swallow them up.
' Yea, that may cause that their mighty
' Shaddai himself may cast them out of his ' Protection; yea, and send for his Cap' tains and Soldiers home, with his Slings
' and Rams, and leave them naked and ' bare, and then the Town of Mansoul will
' of its self open to us, and fall as the Fig
' into the Mouth of the Eater. Yea, to ' be sure that we then with a great deal of ' ease shall come upon her and overcome
' her.

1 Pet. 5.
8.

' As to the time of our coming upon
' Mansoul, we as yet have not fully resolv' ed upon that, though at present some of ' us think as you, that a Market-day, or a ' Market-day at night will certainly be the ' best. However do you be ready, and ' when you shall hear our roaring Drum
' without, do you be as busy to make the ' most horrible confusion within. So shall
' Mansoul certainly be distressed before and ' behind, and shall not know which way
' to betake her self for help. My Lord
' Lucifer, my Lord Beelzebub, my Lord
' Apollyon, my Lord Legion, with the rest
' salute you, as does also my Lord Diabo-
' lus, and we wish both you, with all ' that you do or shall possess, the very self-
' same fruit and success for their doing, as
' we our selves at present enjoy for ours.

*From our dreadful Confinement in the most fearful Pit, we salute you, and so do those many Legions here with us, wishing you may be as Hellishly prosperous as we desire to be our selves. By the Letter-Carrier Mr.
Profane.*

More talk between Profane
and Cerberus.

Then Mr. Profane addressed himself for his return to Mansoul, with his Errand from the horrible Pit to the Diabolonians that dwelt in that Town. So he came up the Stairs from the Deep to the Mouth of the Cave where Cerberus was. Now when Cerberus saw him, he asked how matters did go below, about, and against the Town of Mansoul.

Prof. Things go as well as we can expect. The Letter that I carried thither was highly approved, and well liked by all my Lords, and I am returning to tell our Diabolonians so. I have an answer to it here in my bosom, that I am sure will make our masters that sent me glad; for the Contents thereof is to encourage them to pursue their design to the utmost, and to be ready also to fall on within, when they shall see my Lord Diabolus beleaguering of the Town of Mansoul.

Cerb. But does he intend to go against them himself?

Prof. Does he! Ay, and he will take along with him more than twenty thousand, all sturdy Doubters, and Men of War, pickt Men, from the Land of Doubting, to serve him in the Expedition. The land from the which the Doubters
come.

Cerb. Then was Cerberus glad, and said,
And is there such brave preparations a making to go against the miserable Town of Mansoul; and would I might be put at the head of a thousand of them, that I might also shew my valour against the famous Town of Mansoul.

Prof. Your wish may come to pass, you look like one that has mettle enough, and my Lord will have with him those that are valiant and stout. But my business requires hast.

Cerb. Ay, so it does. Speed thee to the Town of Mansoul, with all the deepest mischiefs that this place can afford thee.
And when thou shalt come to the house of
Mr. Mischief, the place where the Diabo- lonians meet to plot, tell them that Cer- berus doth wish them his service, and that if he may, he will with the army come up against the famous Town of Man-
soul.

Prof. That I will. And I know that my Lords that are there, will be glad to hear it, and to see you also.

So after a few more such kind of Compliments, Mr. Profane took his leave of his friend Cerberus, and Cerberus again with a thousand of their Pit-wishes, bid him hast with all speed to his Masters.
The which when he had heard, he made obeisance, and began to gather up his heels to run.

Thus therefore he returned, and went and came to Mansoul, and going as aforeto the house of Mr. Mischief, there he found the Diabolonians assembled, and waiting for his return. Now when he was come and had presented himself, he also delivered to them his Letter, and adjoined this Compliment to them therewith: My Lords from the Confinement of the Pit, the high and mighty Principalities and Powers of the Den salute you here, the true Diabo- lonians of the Town of Mansoul. Wishing Profane returned again to
Mansoul.
you always the most proper of their benedictions, for the great service, high attempts, and brave achievements that you have put your selves upon, for the restoring to our Prince Diabolus the famous Town
of Mansoul.

This was therefore the present state of the miserable Town of Mansoul: she had offended her Prince, and he was gone; she had encouraged the Powers of Hell by her foolishness, to come against her to seek her utter Destruction.

True, the Town of Mansoul was somewhat made sensible of her Sin, but the Diabolonians were gotten into her bowels;
she cried, but Emanuel was gone, and her cries did not fetch him as yet again. Besides

sides she knew not now whether ever or never, he would return and come to his Mansoul again, nor did they know the Power and Industry of the Enemy, nor how forward they were to put in Execution that plot of Hell that they had devised against her.

They did indeed still send Petition after Petition to the Prince, but he answered all with silence. They did neglect reformation, and that was as Diabolus would have it, for he knew, if they regarded iniquity in their heart, their King would not hear their Prayer; they therefore did still grow weaker and weaker, and were as a rousing thing before the whirlwind. They cried to their King for help, and laid Diabolonians in their bosoms, what therefore should a King do to them? Yea, there seemed now to be a mixture in Mansoul, the Diabolonians and the *Mansoul*ians would walk the Streets together. Yea, they began to seek their peace, for they thought that since the Sickness had been so mortal in Mansoul, 'twas in vain to go to handgripes with them. Besides, the weakness of Mansoul was the strength of their Enemies; and the Sins of Mansoul the advantage of the Diabolonians. The foes of Mansoul did also now begin to promise themselves the Town for a Possession, there was no great difference now betwixt *Mansoul*ians and Diabolonians, both seemed to be Masters of Mansoul. Yea, the Diabolonians increased and grew, but the Town of Mansoul diminished greatly. There was more than eleven thousand of Men, Women and Children that died by the sickness in Mansoul.

Good Thoughts, Good conceptions, and good desires.

The story of Mr. Prywell.

The Diabolonian plot discovered, and by whom.

But now as Shaddai would have it, there was one whose name was Mr. Prywell, a great lover of the people of Mansoul. And he as his manner was did go listening up and down in Mansoul to see, and to hear, if at any time he might, whether there was any design against it or no. For he was always a jealous Man, and feared some mischief sometime would befall it, either from the Diabolonians within, or from some power without. Now upon a time it so happened as Mr. Prywell went listening here and there, that he lighted upon a place called Vile-hill in Mansoul, where Diabolonians used to meet; so hearing a muttering (you must know that it was in the night) he softly drew near to hear; nor had he stood long under the house-end, (for there stood a house there) but he heard one confidently affirm, That it was not, or would not be long before Diabolus should possess himself again of Mansoul, and that then the Diabolonians did intend to put all *Mansoul*ians to the Sword, and would kill and destroy the King's Captains, and drive all his Soldiers out of the Town.

He said moreover, That he knew there were about twenty thousand fighting Men prepared by Diabolus for the accomplishing of this design, and that it would not be months before they all should see it. When Mr. Prywell had heard this story, he did quickly believe it was true, wherefore he went forthwith to my Lord Mayor's house, and acquainted him therewith; ^{Understandings, Conscience,} who sending for the Subordinate Preacher, ^{The Subordinate Preacher awakened} brake the business to him, and he as soon gave the alarm to the Town, for he was now the chief Preacher in Mansoul, because as yet my Lord Secretary was ill at ease. And this was the Way that the Subordinate Preacher did take to alarm the Town therewith: The same hour he caused the Lecture-bell to be rung, so the People came together, he gave them then a short Exhortation to watchfulness, and made Mr. Prywell's news the argument thereof. For, said he, an horrible plot is contrived against Mansoul, even to massacre us all in a day; nor is this story to be slighted, for Mr. Prywell is the author thereof. Mr. Prywell was always a lover of Mansoul, a sober and judicious Man, a Man that is no tatter, nor raiser of false reports, but one that loves to look into the very bottom of matters, and talks nothing of news but by very solid arguments.

I will call him, and you shall hear him ^{Prywell tells his news to Mansoul} your own selves; so he called him, and he came and told his tale so punctually, and affirmed its truth with such ample grounds, that Mansoul fell presently under a Conviction of the truth of what he said. The Preacher did also back him, saying, Sirs, it is not irrational for us to believe it, for we have provoked Shaddai to anger, and have sinned Emanuel out of the Town; we have had too much correspondence with Diabolonians, and have forsaken our former mercies; no marvel then if the Enemy both within and without should design and plot our ruin; and what time like this to do it? The sickness is now in the Town, and we have been made weak thereby. Many a good meaning man is dead, and the Diabolonians of late grow ^{Good desires.} stronger and stronger.

Besides, quoth the Subordinate Preacher, I have received from this good Truth-teller this one inkling further, that he understood by those that he over-heard, that several Letters have lately passed between the Furies and the Diabolonians in order to our Destruction. When Mansoul heard all this, and not being able to gain-say it, they lift up their voice and wept. Mr. Prywell did also in the presence of the Townsmen, confirm all that their Subordinate Preacher had said. Wherefore they now set afresh to bewail their folly, and to a doubling of Petitions to Shaddai and his Son. They also brake the Business to the Captains, high Commanders, and Men of War in the Town of Mansoul, entreating of them to ^{They tell the thing to the Captains} use use the means to be strong, and to take good courage, and that they would look after their harness, and make themselves ready to give Diabolus battel, by night and by day, shall he come, as they were inform'd he will, to beleaguer the Town of Mansoul.

When the Captains heard this, they being always true lovers of the Town of Mansoul, what do they but like so many Sampsons, they shake themselves, and come together to consult and contrive how to defeat those bold and hellish contrivances that were upon the wheel by the means of Diabolus and his friends, against the now sickly, weakly, and much impoverished Town of Mansoul; and they agreed upon these following Particulars.

They come together to consult.

Their agreement.
1 Cor. 16. 13.

Lam. 3. 40.

Heb. 12. 15, 16.

Jer. 2. 34.
Chap. 5.
26.
Ezek. 16. 52.

Joel 1. 14.
Chap. 2.
15, 16.

Jer. 37. 4.

1. That the Gates of Mansoul should be kept shut, and made fast with bars and locks, and that all persons that went out, or came in, should be very strictly examined by the Captains of the Guards. To the end, said they, that those that are managers of the Plot amongst us, may either coming or going be taken; and that we may also find out who are the great contrivers (amongst us) of our ruin.

2. The next thing was, that a strict search should be made for all kind of Diabolonians throughout the whole Town of Mansoul; and every Man's house from top to bottom should be looked into, and that too, house by house, that if possible a further discovery might be made of all such among them as had a hand in these designs.

3. It was further concluded upon, that wheresoever or with whomsoever any of the Diabolonians were found, that even those of the Town of Mansoul that had given them house and harbour, should to their shame, and the warning of others, take penance in the open place.

4. It was moreover resolved by the famous Town of Mansoul, that a publick fast, and a day of humiliation should be kept throughout the whole Corporation, to the justifying of their Prince, the abasing of themselves before him for their transgressions against him, and against Shaddai his Father. It was further resolved, that all such in Mansoul as did not on that day endeavour to keep that Fast, and to humble themselves for their faults, but that should mind their worldly imploy, or be found wandering up and down the Streets, should be taken for Diabolonians, and should suffer as Diabolonians for such their wicked doings.

5. It was further concluded then, that with what speed, and with what warmth of mind they could, they would renew their humiliation for Sin, and their Petitions to Shaddai for help; they also resolved to send tidings to the Court of all that Mr. Prywell had told them.

6. It was also determined that thanks should be given by the Town of Mansoul to Mr. Prywell for his diligent seeking of the welfare of their Town; and further, that forasmuch as he was so naturally inclined to seek their good, and also to undermine their foes, they gave him a Commission of Scout-master-general, for the good of the Town of Mansoul.

When the Corporation with their Captains had thus concluded, they did as they had said, they shut up their Gates, they made for Diabolonians strict search, they made those with whom any was found to take penance in the open place. They kept their Fast, and renewed their Petitions to their Prince, and Mr. Prywell managed his charge, and the trust that Mansoul had put in his hands with great Conscience, and good Fidelity; for he gave himself wholly up to his employ, and that not only within the Town, but he went out to pry, to see, and to hear.

And not many days after he provided for his Journey, and went towards Hellgate-Hill, into the Country where the Doubters were, where he heard of all that had been talked of in Mansoul, and he perceived also that Diabolus was almost ready for his march, &c. so he came back with speed, and calling the Captains and Elders of Mansoul together, he told them where he had been, what he had heard, and what he had seen.

Particularly he told them that Diabolus was almost ready for his march, and that he had made old Mr. Incredulity that once brake prison in Mansoul, the General of his Army; that his Army consisted all of Doubters, and that their number was above twenty thousand. He told moreover, that Diabolus did intend to bring with him the chief Princes of the Infernal Pit, and that he would make them chief Captains over his Doubters. He told them moreover, that it was certainly true that several of the Black-den would with Diabolus ride Reformades to reduce the Town of Mansoul to the obedience of Diabolus their Prince.

He said moreover that he understood by the Doubters among whom he had been, that the reason why old Incredulity was made General of the whole Army, was because none truer than he to the Tyrant; and because he had an implacable spite against the welfare of the Town of Mansoul. Besides, said he, he remembers the affronts that Mansoul has given, and he is resolved to be revenged of them.

But the Black Princes shall be made high Commanders, only Incredulity shall be over them all, because (which I had almost forgot) he can more easily, and more dextrously beleaguer the Town of Mansoul, than can any of the Princes besides.

Now when the Captains of Mansoul, with the Elders of the Town, had heard the tidings

Mr. Prywell is made Scout-master General.

Mr. Prywell goes a scouting.

He returns with great news.

Heb. 12. 1.

dings that Mr. Prywell did bring, they thought it expedient without further delay to put into execution the Laws that against the Diabolonians, their Prince had made for them, and given them in Commandment to manage against them. Wherefore forthwith a diligent and impartial search was made in all houses in Mansoul for all and all manner of Diabolonians. Now in the house of Mr. Mind, and in the house of the great Lord Wilbewill were two Diabolonians found. In Mr. Mind's house was one Lord Covetousness found, but he had changed his name to Prudent Thrifty. In my Lord Wilbewill's house, one Lasciviousness was found; but he had changed his name to Harmless mirth. These two the Captains and Elders of the Town of Mansoul took, and committed them to custody under the hand of Mr. Trueman the Gaoler; and this man handled them so severely, and loaded them so well with Irons, that in time they both fell into a very deep Consumption, and died in the Prison-house; their masters also according to the agreement of the Captains and Elders, were brought to take penance in the open place to their shame, and for a warning to the rest of the Town of Mansoul.

Now this was the manner of penance in those days. The persons offending being made sensible of the evil of their doings, were enjoined open Confession of their faults, and a strict amendment of their lives.

After this the Captains and Elders of Mansoul sought yet to find out more Diabolonians, where ever they lurked, whether in Dens, Caves, Holes, Vaults, or where else they could, in, or about the Wall, or Town of Mansoul. But though they could plainly see their footing, and so follow them by their tract and smell to their holds, even to the mouths of their Caves and Dens, yet take them, hold them, and do justice upon them they could not, their ways were so crooked, their holds so strong, and they so quick to take sanctuary there.

But Mansoul did now with so stiff an hand rule over the Diabolonians that were left, that they were glad to shrink into corners: time was when they durst walk openly, and in the Day, but now they were forced to imbrace privacy and the night time was when a *Mansoul*ian was their Companion, but now they counted them deadly enemies. This good change did Mr. Prywell's intelligence make in the famous Town of Mansoul.

By this time Diabolus had finished his Army which he intended to bring with him for the ruin of Mansoul, and had set over them Captains, and other Field-officers, such as liked his furious stomach best, himself was Lord paramount, Incredulity was General of his Army. Their highest Captains shall be named afterwards, but now for their Officers, Colours and Scutcheons.

1. Their first Captain was Captain Rage, Diabolus's Army. he was Captain over the Election-doubters, Rev. 1. 2. 3 his were the Red Colours, his Standard-bearer was Mr. Destructive, and the great 4. 13. 15. Red Dragon he had for his Scutcheon.

2. The second Captain was Captain Fury, Num. 21. he was Captain over the Vocation-doubters; 6. his Standard bearer was Mr. Darkness, his Colours were those that were pale, and he had for his Scutcheon the fiery flying Serpent.

3. The third Captain was Captain Damnation, Mat. 3. 22. he was Captain over the Grace-doubters, 13. Revel. 9. 1. his were the Red Colours, Mr. No-life bare them, and he had for his Scutcheon the Black-den.

4. The fourth Captain was the Captain Insatiable, Pro. 27. 20 he was Captain over the Faith-doubters, his were the Red Colours, Mr. Devourer bare them, and he had for a Scutcheon the yawning Jaws.

5. The fifth Captain was Captain Brimstone, Psal. 11. 6 he was Captain over the Perseverance-doubters, Rev. 14. his also were the Red Colours, Mr. Burning bare them, and his Scutcheon was the Blue and stinking flame.

6. The sixth Captain was Captain Torment, Mar. 9. 44. he was Captain over the Resurrection-doubters, 46. 48. his Colours were those that were pale, Mr. Gnaw was his Ancient bearer, and he had the Black worm for his Scutcheon.

7. The seventh Captain was Captain No-ease, Rev. 4. 11 he was Captain over the Salvation-doubters, Chap. 6. 8 his were the Red Colours, Mr. Restless bare them, and his Scutcheon was the ghastly picture of death.

8. The eighth Captain was the Captain Sepulchre, Jer. 5. 16 he was Captain over the Glory-doubters, Ch. 2. 25. his also were the pale Colours, Mr. Corruption was his Ancient-Bearer, and he had for his Scutcheon a Scull, and dead mens bones.

9. The ninth Captain was Captain Past-hope, 1 Tim. 4. 2 he was Captain of those that are Rom. 2. 5. called the Felicity-doubters, his Ancient-bearer was Mr. Despair; his also were the Red Colours, and his Scutcheon was the hot iron, and the hard heart.

These were his Captains, and these were their Forces, these were their Ancients, these were their Colours, and these were their Scutcheons. Now over these did the great Diabolus make superiour Captains, and they were in number seven: as namely the Lord Beelzebub, the Lord Lucifer, the Lord Legion, the Lord Apollyon, the Lord Python, the Lord Cerberus, and the Lord Belial; these seven he set over the Captains, and Incredulity was Lord General, and Diabolus was King.

The Reformades also, such as were like themselves, were made some of them Captains of hundreds, and some of them Captains of more: and thus was the army of Diabolus compleated.

So they set out at Hellgate-hill (for there they had their Rendezvous) from whence they came with a straight course upon their march toward the Town of Mansoul. Now as was hinted before, the Town had, as Shaddai would have it, received from the mouth of Mr. Prywell the alarm of their coming before. Wherefore they set a strong watch at the Gates, and had also doubled their guards, they also mounted their slings in good places, where they might conveniently cast out their great stones to the annoyance of the furious enemy.

Nor could those Diablonians that were in the Town do that hurt as was designed they should; for Mansoul was now awake. But alas poor People, they were sorely affrighted at the first appearance of their Foes, and at their sitting down before the Town, especially when they heard the roaring of their DRUM. This, to speak Truth, was amazingly hideous to hear, it frightened all Men seven Miles round if they were but awake and heard it. The streaming of their Colours were also terrible, and dejecting to behold.

When Diabolus was come up against the Town, first he made his approach to Eargate, and gave it a furious assault, supposing as it seems that his Friends in Mansoul had been ready to do the work within; but care was taken of that before, by the vigilance of the Captains. Wherefore missing of the help that he expected from them, and finding of his Army warmly attended with the Stones that the Slingers did sling (for that I will say for the Captains, that considering the weakness that yet was upon them by reason of the long Sickness that had annoyed the Town of Mansoul, they did gallantly behave themselves,) he was forced to make some retreat from Mansoul, and to intrench himself and his Men in the Field without the reach of the Slings of the Town.

Now having intrenched himself, he did cast up four Mounts before the Town; the first he called Mount Diabolus, putting his own Name thereon, the more to affright the Town of Mansoul; the other three he called thus, Mount Alecto, Mount Megara, and Mount Tisiphone; for these are the Names of the dreadful Furies of Hell. Thus he began to play his game with Mansoul, and to serve it as it doth the Lion his prey, even to make it fall before his terror. But, as I said, the Captains and Soldiers resisted so stoutly, and did so much Execution with their Stones, that they made him, though against Stomach to retreat: wherefore Mansoul began to take Courage.

Now upon Mount Diabolus, which was raised on the North-side of the Town, there did the Tyrant set up his Standard, and a fearful thing it was to behold, for he had wrought in it by Devillish art, after the manner of a Scutcheon, a flaming Flame fearful to behold, and the Picture of Mansoul burning in it.

When Diabolus had thus done, he commanded that his Drummer should every Night approach the Walls of the Town of Mansoul, and so to beat a Parley; the Command was to do it a Nights, for in Day time they annoyed him with their Slings; for the Tyrant said, that he had a mind to parley with the now trembling Town of Mansoul, and he commanded that the Drums should beat every Night, that through weariness they might at last (if possibly at the first they were unwilling, yet) be forced to do it.

So this Drummer did as commanded, he arose and did beat his Drum. But when his Drum did go, if one looked toward the Town of Mansoul, Behold Darknes and Sorrow, and the Light was darkened in the Heaven thereof. No noise was ever heard upon Earth more terrible, except the Voice of Shaddai when he speaketh. But how did Mansoul tremble! It now looked for nothing but forthwith to be swallowed up.

When this Drummer had beaten for a Parley, he made this Speech to Mansoul, My master has bid me tell you, That if you will willingly submit, you shall have the good of the Earth, but if you shall be stubborn, he is resolved to take you by force. But by that the fugitive had done beating of his Drum, the People of Mansoul had betaken themselves to the Captains that were in the Castle, so that there was none to regard, nor to give this Drummer an answer; so he proceeded no further that Night, but returned again to his Master to the Camp.

When Diabolus saw that by Drumming he could not work out Mansoul to his will, the next Night he sendeth his Drummer without his Drum still to let the Townsmen know, that he had a mind to Parley with them. But when all came to all, his Parley was turned into a Summons to the Town to deliver up themselves; but they gave him neither heed nor hearing, for they remembred what at first it cost them to hear him a few Words.

The next Night he sends again, and then who should be his Messenger to Mansoul but the terrible Captain Sepulcher; so Captain Sepulcher came up to the Walls of Mansoul, and made this Oration to the Town.

O ye Inhabitants of the rebellious Town of Mansoul? I summon you in the Name of the Prince Diabolus, that without any more ado, you set open the Gates of your Town, and admit the great Lord to come in. But if you shall still rebel, when we have taken to us the Town by Force, we will swallow you up as the Grave; wherefore if you will hearken to my Summons, say so, and if not, then let me know.

The reason of this my Summons, quoth he, is, for that my Lord is your undoubted

He bids his Drummer to beat his Drum.

Mansoul trembles at the noise of his Drum. Isa. 5. 30.

Diabolus calls back his Drum.

Mansoul summoned by Captain Sepulcher.

'doubted Prince and Lord, as you yourselves have formerly owned. Nor shall that assault that was given to my Lord, when Emanuel dealt so dishonourably by him, prevail with him to lose his right, and to forbear to attempt to recover his own. Consider then, O Mansoul, with thy self, wilt thou shew thy self peaceable, or no? If thou shalt quietly yield up thy self, then our old Friendship shall be renewed; but if thou shalt yet refuse and rebel, then expect nothing but Fire and Sword.'

They answer him not a Word.

When the languishing Town of Mansoul had heard this Summoner, and his Summons, they were yet more put to their dumps, but made the Captain no answer at all, so away he went as he came.

They address themselves to their good Lord Secretary.

But after some Consultation among themselves, as also with some of their Captains, they applied themselves afresh to the Lord Secretary for Counsel and Advice from him; for this Lord Secretary was their chief Preacher (as also is mentioned some Pages before) only now he was ill at ease; and of him they begged favour in these two or three things.

1. That he would look comfortably upon them, and not keep himself so much retired from them as formerly. Also that he would be prevailed with to give them a hearing while they should make known their miserable Condition to him. But to this he told them as before, That as yet he was but ill at ease, and therefore could not do as he had formerly done.

2. The second thing that they desired, was, that he would be pleased to give them his Advice about their now so important Affairs, for that Diabolus was come and set down before the Town with no less than twenty thousand Doubters. They said moreover, that both he and his Captains were cruel Men, and that they were afraid of them. But to this he said, You must look to the Law of your Prince, and there see what is laid upon you to do.

3. Then they desired that his Highness would help them to frame a Petition to Shaddai, and unto Emanuel his Son, and that he would set his own hand thereto as a Token that he was one with them in it: For, said they, my Lord, many a one have we sent, but can get no Answer of Peace; but now surely one with thy Hand unto it, may obtain good for Mansoul.

The cause of his being ill at ease.

But all the Answer that he gave to this, was, That they had offended their Emanuel, and had also grieved himself, and that therefore they must as yet partake of their own devices.

This Answer of the Lord Secretary fell like a Millstone upon them; yea, it crushed them so that they could not tell what to do, yet they durst not comply with the demands of Diabolus, nor with the demands of his Captain. So then here were the Straights that the Town of Mansoul was betwixt, when the Enemy came upon her: Her Foes were ready to swallow her up, and her Friends did forbear to help her.

Lam. 1. 34
The sad Straights of Mansoul.

Then stood up my Lord Mayor, whose Name was my Lord Understanding, and he began to pick and pick, until he had pickt comfort out of that seemingly bitter saying of the Lord Secretary; for thus he disanted upon it: First, said he, This unavoidably follows upon the Saying of my Lord, That we must yet suffer for our Sins.

A Comfortment upon the Lord Secretary's Speech.

2. But, quoth he, the Words yet sound as if at last we should be saved from our Enemies, and that after a few more Sorrows Emanuel will come and be our help. Now the Lord Mayor was the more critical in his dealing with the Secretary's Words, because my Lord was more than a Prophet, and because none of his Words were such, but that at all times they were most exactly significant, and the Townsmen were allowed to pry into them, and to expound them to their best Advantage.

So they took their leaves of my Lord, and returned, and went, and came to the Captains, to whom they did tell what my Lord High Secretary had said, who when they had heard it, was all of the same Opinion as my Lord Mayor himself; the Captains therefore began to take some Courage unto them, and to prepare to make some brave attempt upon the Camp of the Enemy, and to destroy all that were Diabolonians, with the roving Doubters that the Tyrant had brought with him to destroy the poor Town of Mansoul.

So all betook themselves forthwith to their places, the Captains to theirs, the Lord Mayor to his, the Subordinate Preacher to his, and my Lord Willbewill to his. The Captains longed to be at some work for their Prince, for they delighted in war-like Achievements. The next Day therefore they came together and consulted, and after consultation had, they resolved to give an answer to the Captain of Diabolus with Slings, and so they did at the rising of the Sun on the Morrow; for Diabolus had adventured to come nearer again, but the Sling-stones were to him and his like Hornets. For as there is nothing to the Town of Mansoul so terrible as the roaring of Diabolus's Drum; so there is nothing to Diabolus so terrible as the well playing of Emanuel's Slings. Wherefore Diabolus was forced to make another retreat, yet further off from the famous Town of Mansoul. Then did the Lord Mayor of Mansoul cause the Bells to be rung, and that thanks should be sent to the Lord High Secretary by the mouth of the Subordinate Preacher; for that by his Words the Captains and Elders of Mansoul had been strengthened against Diabolus.

Words applied against him by Faith. Zach. 9. 15

When Diabolus saw that his Captains and and Soldiers, high Lords, and renowned, were frightened, and beaten down by the Stones that came from the Golden Slings of the Prince of the Town of Mansoul, he be-thought himself, and said, I will try to catch them by fawning, I will try to flatter them into my Net.

Wherefore after a while he came down again to the Wall, not now with his Drum, nor with Captain Sepulcher, but having all be sugared his Lips, he seemed to be a very sweet-mouthed, peaceable Prince, designing nothing for humours sake, nor to be revenged on Mansoul for Injuries by them done to him, but the welfare, and good, and advantage of the Town and People therein, was now, as he said, his only design. Wherefore after he had called for Audience, and desired that the Townsfolk would give it to him, he proceeded in his Oration: And said,

'O! the desire of my Heart, the famous Town of Mansoul! How many Nights have I watched, and how many weary Steps have I taken, if perhaps I might do thee good: Far be it, far be it from me to desire to make a War upon you; if ye will but willingly and quietly deliver up your selves unto me. You know that you were mine of old. Remember also, that so long as you enjoyed me for your Lord, and that I enjoyed you for my Subjects, you wanted for nothing of all the delights of the Earth, that I your Lord and Prince could get for you; or that I could invent to make you bonny and blith withal. Consider, you never had so many hard, dark, troublesome and heart-afflicting Hours, while you were mine, as you have had since you revolted from me; nor shall you ever have peace again until you and I become one as before. Be but prevailed with to embrace me again, and I will grant, yea enlarge your old Charter with abundance of Privileges; so that your Licence and Liberty shall be to take, hold, enjoy, and make your own all that is pleasant from the East to the West. Nor shall any of those Incivilities wherewith you have offended me, be ever charged upon you by me, so long as the Sun and Moon endureth. Nor shall any of those dear Friends of mine that now for the fear of you, lie lurking in dens, and holes, and caves in Mansoul, be hurtful to you any more, yea, they shall be your Servants, and shall minister unto you of their Substance, and of whatever shall come to hand. I need speak no more, you know them, and have some time since been much delighted in their Company, why then should we abide at such odds? Let us renew our old Acquaintance and Friendship again.

'Bear with your Friend, I take the Liberty at this time to speak thus freely unto you. The Love that I have to you presses me to do it, as also does the zeal of my Heart for my Friends with you; put me not therefore to further trouble, nor your selves to further fears and frights. Have you I will in a way of Peace or War; nor do you flatter your selves with the Power and Force of your Captains, or that your Emanuel will shortly come in to your help; for such Strength will do you no pleasure.

'I am come against you with a stout and valiant Army, and all the chief Princes of the Den, are even at the Head of it. Besides, my Captains are swifter than Eagles, stronger than Lions, and more greedy of prey than are the Evening-wolves. What is Og of Bashan! What's Goliath of Gath! And what's an hundred more of them to one of the least of my Captains! How then shall Mansoul think to escape my Hand and Force?

Diabolus having thus ended his flattering, fawning, deceitful and lying Speech to the famous Town of Mansoul, the Lord Mayor replied unto him as follows.

'O Diabolus, Prince of Darkness, and Master of all deceit; thy lying Flatteries we have had and made sufficient probation of, and have tasted too deeply of that destructive Cup already; should we therefore again hearken unto thee, and so break the Commandments of our great Shaddai, to join in Affinity with thee; would not our Prince reject us, and cast us off for ever; and being cast off by him, can the place that he has prepared for thee be a place of rest for us! Besides, O thou that art empty and void of all Truth, we are rather ready to die by that Hand than to fall in with thy flattering and lying de-cits.'

The Lord
Mayor's Answer.

When the Tyrant saw that there was little to be got by parleying with my Lord Mayor, he fell into an hellish Rage, and resolved that again with his Army of Doubters, he would another time assault the Town of Mansoul.

So he called for his Drummer, who beat up for his Men (and while he did beat, Mansoul did shake) to be in a readiness to give Battle to the Corporation; then Diabolus drew near with his Army, and thus disposed of his Men. Captain Cruel, and Captain Torment, these he drew up and placed against Feel-gate, and commanded them to sit down there for the War. And he also appointed, that if need were, Captain No-ease should come in to their relief. At Nose-gate he placed the Captain Brimstone, and Captain Sepulcher, and bid them look well to their Ward, on that Side of the Town of Mansoul. But at Eye-gate he placed that grim-faced one the Captain Past-hope, and there also now he did set up his terrible Standard.

Feel-gate.

Nose-gate.

Eye-gate.

Now Captain Insatiable he was to look to the Carriages of Diabolus, and was also appointed appointed to take into custody, that, or those Persons and Things that should at any time as prey be taken from the Enemy.

Mouth-gate.

Now Mouth-gate the Inhabitants of Mansoul kept for a Sally-port, wherefore that they kept strong, for that was it, by, and out at which the Townsfolk did send their Petitions to Emanuel their Prince, that also was the Gate from the Top of which the Captains did play their Slings at the Enemies, for that Gate stood somewhat ascending, so that the placing of them there, and the letting of them fly from that place did much execution against the Tyrant's Army; wherefore for these causes with others, Diabolus sought, if possible, to land up Mouth-gate with dirt.

The use of Mouth-gate.

Now as Diabolus was busy and industrious in preparing to make his assault upon the Town of Mansoul without, so the Captains and Soldiers in the Corporation were as busy in preparing within; they mounted their Slings, they set up their Banners, they founded their Trumpets, and put themselves in such order as was judged most for the annoyance of the Enemy, and for the advantage of Mansoul, and gave to their Soldiers orders to be ready at the sound of the Trumpet for War. The Lord Willbewill also, he took the charge of watching against the Rebels within, and to do what he could to take them while without, or to stifle them within their caves, dens and holes in the Town-wall of Mansoul. And to speak the Truth of him, ever since he took penance for his fault, he has shewed as much honesty and bravery of Spirit as any he in Mansoul; for he took one Jolley, and his Brother Grigish, the two Sons of his Servant Harmless-mirth (for to that Day, though the Father was committed to Ward, the Sons had a dwelling in the House of my Lord) I say he took them, and with his own Hands put them to the Cross. And this was the reason why he hanged them up, after their Father was put into the Hands of Mr. Trueman the Gaoler; they his Sons began to play his pranks, and to be ticking and toying with the Daughters of their Lord; nay, it was jealousied that they were too familiar with them, the which was brought to his Lordship's Ear. Now his Lordship being unwilling unadvisedly to put any Man to Death, did not suddenly fall upon them, but set watch and spies to see if the thing was true; of the which he was soon informed, for his two Servants, whose Names were Find-out, and Tell-all, caught them together in uncivil manner more than once or twice, and went and told their Lord. So when my Lord Willbewill had sufficient ground to believe the thing was true, he takes the two young Diabolonians, for such they were (for their Father was a Diabolonian born) and has them to Eye-gate, where he raised a very high Cross just in the Face of the Army of Diabolus, and of his Army, and there he hanged the young Villians in defiance to Captain Pasthope, and of the horrible standard of the Tyrant.

The place of their Execution

Now this Christian act of the brave Lord Willbewill did greatly abash Captain Pasthope, discourage the army of Diabolus, put fear into the Diabolonian runnagates in Mansoul, and put strength and courage into the Captains that belonged to Emanuel the Prince; for they without did gather, and that by this very act of my Lord, that Mansoul was resolved to fight, and that the Diabolonians within the Town could not do such things as Diabolus had hopes they would. Nor was this the only proof of the brave Lord Willbewill's honesty to the Town, nor of his loyalty to his Prince, as will afterwards appear.

Mortification of sin is a sign of hope of life.

Now when the children of Prudent-thrift who dwelt with Mr. Mind, (for Thrift left children with Mr. Mind, when he was also committed to prison, and their names were Gripe and Rake-all, these he begat of Mr. Mind's Bastard-daughter, whose name was Mrs. Holdfastbad) I say when his children perceived how the Lord Willbewill had served them that dwelt with him, what do they but (lest they should drink of the same cup) endeavour to make their escape? But Mr. Mind being wary of it, took them and put them in hold in his house till morning (for this was done over night) and remembering that by the Law of Mansoul all Diabolonians were to die, and to be sure they were at least by father's side such, and some say by mother's side too; what does he but takes them and puts them in chains, and carries them to the self-same place where my Lord hanged his two before, and there he hanged them.

Mr. Mind plays the Man.

The Townsmen also took great encouragement at this act of Mr. Mind, and did what they could to have taken some more of these Diabolonian troublers of Mansoul; but at that time the rest lay so quat and close that they could not be apprehended; so they set against them a diligent watch, and went every Man to his place.

Mansoul set against the Diabolonians.

I told you a little before that Diabolus and his army were somewhat abashed and discouraged at the sight of what my Lord Willbewill did, when he hanged up those two young Diabolonians; but his discouragement quickly turned it self into furious madness and rage against the Town of Mansoul, and fight it he would. Also the Townsmen, and Captains within, they had their hopes and their expectations heightened, believing at last the day would be theirs, so they feared them the less. Their Subordinate Preacher too made a Sermon about it, and he took that Theme for his Text, Gad, a troop shall overcome him, but he shall overcome at the last.

Diabolus his kindness turned into furious madness.

Gen. 49. 19.

last. Whence he shewed that though Mansoul should be sorely put to it at the first, yet the victory should most certainly be Mansoul's at the last.

So Diabolus commanded that his Drummer should beat a Charge against the Town, and the Captains also that were in the Town sounded a Charge against them, but they had no Drum, they were Trumpets of Silver with which they sounded against them. Then they which were of the Camp of Diabolus came down to the Town to take it, and the Captains in the Castle, with the slingers at Mouthgate played upon them again. And now there was nothing heard in the Camp of Diabolus but horrible rage and blasphemy; but in the Town good Words, Prayer and singing of Psalms: the Enemy replied with horrible objections, and the terribleness of their Drum; but the Town made answer with flapping of their slings, and the melodious noise of their Trumpets. And thus the fight lasted for several days together, only now and then they had some small intermission, in the which the Townsmen refreshed themselves, and the Captains made ready for another assault.

The Captains of Emanuel were clad in Silver armour, and the Soldiers in that which was of Proof; the Soldiers of Diabolus were clad in Iron, which was made to give place to Emanuel's Engine-shot. In the Town some were hurt, and some were greatly wounded. Now the worst on't was, a Surgeon was scarce in Mansoul, for that Emanuel at present was absent. Howbeit, with the leaves of a tree the wounded were kept from dying; yet their wounds did greatly putrify, and some did grievously stink. Of the Townsmen these were wounded, to wit,

My Lord Reason, he was wounded in the Head.

Another that was wounded was the brave Lord Mayor, he was wounded in the Eye.

Another that was wounded was Mr. Mind, he received his wound about the Stomach.

The honest Subordinate Preacher also, he received a shot not far off the heart, but none of these were mortal.

Many also of the inferiour sort, were not only wounded, but slain out-right.

Now in the Camp of Diabolus were wounded, and slain a considerable number. For instance.

Captain Rage he was wounded, and so was Captain Cruel.

Captain Damnation was made to retreat, and to intrench himself further off of Mansoul; the standard also of Diabolus was beaten down, and his standard bearer Capt. Much-hurt, had his brains beat out with a sling stone, to the no little grief and shame of his Prince Diabolus.

Many also of the Doubters were slain out-right, though enough of them are left alive to make Mansoul shake and totter. Now the Victory that day being turned to Mansoul, did put great valour into the Townsmen and Captains, and did cover Diabolus's Camp with a Cloud, but withal it made them far more furious. So the next day Mansoul rested, and commanded that the Bells should be rung; the Trumpets also joyfully sounded, and the Captains shouted round the Town.

My Lord Wilberwill also was not idle, but did notable service within against the Domesticks, or the Diabolonians that were in the Town, not only by keeping of them in awe, for he lighted on one at last whose name was Mr. Any-thing, a fellow of whom mention was made before; for 'twas he, if you remember, that brought the three fellows to Diabolus, whom the Diabolonians took out of Captain Boanerges Companies; and that persuaded them to list themselves under the Tyrant, to fight against the army of Shaddai; my Lord Wilberwill did also take a notable Diabolonian whose name was Loosefoot; this Loosefoot was a scout to the vagabonds in Mansoul, and that did use to carry tidings out of Mansoul to the Camp, and out of the Camp to those of the Enemies in Mansoul; both these my Lord sent away safe to Mr. Trueman the Goaler, with a commandment to keep them in irons; for he intended then to have them out to be crucified, when 'twould be for the best to the Corporation, and most for the discouragement of the Camp of the Enemies.

My Lord Mayor also, though he could not stir about so much as formerly, because of the wound that he lately received, yet gave he out orders to all that were the Natives in Mansoul, to look to their watch, and stand upon their guard, and as occasion should offer to prove themselves Men.

Mr. Conscience the Preacher, he also did his utmost to keep all his good documents alive upon the hearts of the People of Mansoul.

Well, a while after the Captains and stout ones of the Town of Mansoul agreed, and resolved upon a time to make a sally out upon the Camp of Diabolus, and this must be done in the night, and there was the folly of Mansoul (for the night is always the best for the Enemy, but the worst for Mansoul to fight in) but yet they would do it, their courage was so high; their last victory also still stuck in their memories.

So the night appointed being come, the Princes brave Captains cast lots who should lead the Van in this new and desperate Expedition against Diabolus, and against his Diabolonian Army, and the Lot fell to Captain Credence, to Captain Experience, and to Captain Goodhope to lead the Forlorn hope hope. (This Captain Experience the Prince created such when himself did reside in the Town of Manfoul); so as I said, they made their Salley out upon the army that lay in the siege against them; and their hap was to fall in with the main body of their enemies. Now Diabolus and his men being expertly accustomed to night-work, took the alarm presently, and were as ready to give them battle, as if they had sent him word of their coming. Wherefore to it they went amain, and blows were hard on every side; the Hell-drum also was beat most furiously, while the Trumpets of the Prince most sweetly sounded. And thus the battle was joined, and Captain Insatiable looked to the enemies carriages, and waited when he should receive some prey.

The Prince's Captains fought it stoutly, beyond what indeed could be expected they should; they wounded many; they made the whole army of Diabolus to make a retreat. But I cannot tell how, but the brave Captain Credence, Captain Goodhope, and Captain Experience, as they were upon the pursuit, cutting down, and following hard after the enemy in the Rear, Captain Credence stumbled and fell, by which fall he caught so great a Hurt that he could not rise till Captain Experience did help him up, at which their Men were put in disorder; the Captain also was so full of pain that he could not forbear but aloud to cry out; at this the other two Captains fainted, supposing that Captain Credence had received his mortal wound: their men also were more disordered, and had no list to fight. Now Diabolus being very observing, though at this time as yet he was put to the worst, perceiving that an halt was made among the men that were the pursuers, what does he but taking it for granted that the Captains were either wounded or dead, he therefore makes at first a stand, then faces about, and so comes up upon the Prince's army with as much of his fury as Hell could help him to, and his hap was to fall in just among the three Captains, Captain Credence, Captain Goodhope, and Captain Experience, and did cut, wound, and pierce them so dreadfully, that what through discouragement, what through disorder, and what through the wounds that now they had received, and also the loss of much blood, they scarce were able, though they had for their power the three best bands in Manfoul, to get safe into the hold again.

Now when the body of the Prince's army saw how these three Captains were put to the worst, they thought it their wisdom to make as safe and good a retreat as they could, and so returned by the Salley port again, and so there was an end of this present action. But Diabolus was so flusht with this night's-work, that he promised himself in few days, an easy and compleat conquest over the Town of Manfoul; wherefore on the day following he comes up to the sides thereof with great Boldness, and demands entrance, and that forthwith they deliver themselves up to his Government. (The Diabolonians too that were within, they began to be somewhat brisk, as we shall shew afterward.)

But the valiant Lord Mayor replied, 'That what he got he must get by force, for as long as Emanuel their Prince was alive (though he at present was not so with them as they wisht) they should never consent to yield Manfoul up to another.'

'And with that the Lord Willberwill stood up and said, Diabolus, thou master of the Den, and enemy to all that is good, we poor inhabitants of the Town of Manfoul, are too well acquainted with thy Rule and Government, and with the end of those things that for certain will follow submitting to thee, to do it. Wherefore though while we were without knowledge we suffered thee to take us (as the Bird that saw not the Snare, fell into the hands of the Fowler) yet since we have been turned from Darknes to Light; we have also been turned from the power of Satan to God. And though through thy Subtilty, and also the Subtilty of the Diabolonians within, we have sustained much loss, and also plunged our selves into much perplexity, yet give up our selves, lay down our arms, and yield to so horrid a Tyrant as thou, we shall not; die upon the place we chuse rather to do. Besides, we have hopes that in time deliverance will come from Court unto us, and therefore we yet will maintain a War against thee.'

This brave Speech of the Lord Willberwill, with that also of the Lord Mayor, did somewhat abate the Boldness of Diabolus, though it kindled the fury of his rage. It also encouraged the Townsmen and Captains; yea, it was as a Plaister to the brave Captain Credence his wound: for you must know that a brave speech now, when the Captains of the Town with their men of War came home routed, and when the enemy took Courage and Boldness at the success that he had obtained, to draw up to the walls, and demand entrance, as he did, was in season, and also advantageous.

The Lord Willberwill also did play the man within, for while the Captains and Soldiers were in the field, he was in arms in the Town, and wherever by him there was a Diabolonian found, they were forced to feel the weight of his heavy hand, and also the edge of his penetrating sword; many therefore of the Diabolonians he wounded, as the Lord Cavil, the Lord Brisk, the Lord Pragmatick, and the Lord Murmur; several also of the meaner sort he did sorely maim; though there cannot at this time an account be given you of any that he slew outright. The cause, or rather the advantage that will's Ga-

that my Lord Willbewill had at this time to do thus, was for that the Captains were gone out to fight the enemy in the field. For now, thought the Diabolonians within, is our time to stir and make an uproar in the Town; what do they therefore but quickly get themselves into a Body, and fall forthwith to hurricaneing in Mansoul, as if now nothing but Whirlwind and Tempest should be there; wherefore, as I said, he takes this Opportunity to fall in among them with his Men, cutting and flashing with Courage that was undaunted; at which the Diabolonians with all haste dispersed themselves to their holds, and my Lord to his place as before.

Nothing like Faith to crush
Diabolus.

This brave act of my Lord did somewhat revenge the wrongs done by Diabolus to the Captains, and also did let them know that Mansoul was not to be parted with, for the loss of a Victory or two; wherefore the Wing of the Tyrant was clapt again, as to boasting, I mean in comparison of what he would have done if the Diabolonians had put the Town to the same plight, to which he had put the Captains.

the Christian.

Well, Diabolus yet resolves to have the other bout with Mansoul; for thought he, since I beat them once, I may beat them twice: wherefore he commanded his Men to be ready at such an Hour of the Night to make a fresh assault upon the Town, and he gave out in special that they should bend all their Force against Feel-gate, and attempt to break into the Town through that: The Word that then he did give to his Officers and Soldiers was Hell-fire. And, said he, if we break in upon them, as I wish we do, either with some, or with all our Force, let them that break in look to it, that they forget not the Word. And let nothing be heard in the Town of Mansoul but Hell-fire, Hell-fire, Hell-fire. The Drummer was also to beat without ceasing, and the Standard Bearers were to display their Colours; the Soldiers too were to put on what Courage they could, and to see that they played manfully their parts against the Town.

Feel-gate
but weak.

So the Night was come, and all things by the Tyrant made ready for the work, he suddenly makes his assault upon Feel-gate, and after he had a while struggled there, he throws the Gates wide open. For the Truth is, those Gates were but weak, and so most easily made to yield. When Diabolus had thus far made his attempt, he placed his Captains, to wit, Torment and No-ease there; so he attempted to press forward, but the Prince's Captains came down upon him and made his entrance more difficult than he desired. And to speak truth, they made what resistance they could; but the three of their best and most valiant Captains being wounded, and by their Wounds made much incapable of doing the Town that Service they would

(and all the rest having more than their Hands full of Doubters, and their Captains that did follow Diabolus) they were overpowered with Force, nor could they keep them out of the Town. Wherefore the Prince's Men and their Captains betook themselves to the Castle, as to the Stronghold of the Town; and this they did partly for their own Security, partly for the Security of the Town, and partly, or rather chiefly to preserve to Emanuel the Prerogative-royal of Mansoul, for so was the Castle of Mansoul.

The Captains therefore being fled into the Castle, the Enemy without much Resistance, possess themselves of the rest of the Town, and spreading themselves as they went into every corner, they cried out as they marched according to the command of the Tyrant, Hell-fire, Hell-fire, Hell-fire, so that nothing for a while throughout the Town of Mansoul could be heard but the dreadful noise of Hell-fire; together with the roaring of Diabolus's Drum. And now did the Clouds hang black over Mansoul, nor to Reason did any thing but ruin seem to attend it. Diabolus also quartered his Soldiers in the Houses of the Inhabitants of the Town of Mansoul. Yea, the Subordinate Preacher's House was as full of these out-landish Doubters as ever it could hold; and so was my Lord Mayor's, and my Lord Willbewill's also. Yea, where was there a Corner, a Cottage, a Barn, or a Hog-sty, that now were not full of these Vermin? Yea, they turned the Men of the Town out of their Houses, and would lie in their Beds, and sit at their Tables themselves. Ah poor Mansoul! Now thou seekest the Fruits of Sin, and what Venom was in the flattering Words of Mr. Carnal Security! They made great havock of what ever they laid their Hands on; yea, they fired the Town in several places; many young Children also were by them dashed in pieces; yea, those that were yet unborn they destroyed in their Mother's Wombs; for you must needs think that it could not now be otherwise; for what Conscience, what Pity, what Bowels or Compassion can any expect at the Hands of out-landish Doubters? Many in Mansoul that were Women, both young and old, they forced, ravished, and beast like abused, so that they swooned, miscarried, and many of them died, and so lay at the Top of every Street, and in all by places of the Town.

And now did Mansoul seem to be nothing but a den of Dragons, an emblem of Hell, and a place of total Darkness. Now did Mansoul lie (almost) like the barren Wilderness; nothing but nettles, briars, thorns, weeds and stinking things seemed now to cover the face of Mansoul. I told you before, how that these Diabolonian Doubters turned the Men of Mansoul out of their Beds, and now I will add, they wounded

Rest. wounded them, they mauled them, yea, and almost brained many of them. Many, did I say, yea most, if not all of them. Mr. Conscience they so wounded, yea, and his Wounds so festred, that he could have no ease Day nor Night, but lay as if continually upon a rack, (but that Shaddai rules all, certainly they had slain him outright) Mr. Lord Mayor they so abused that they almost put out his Eyes; and had not my Lord Willbewill got into the Castle, they intended to have chopt him all to pieces, for they did look upon him (as his Heart now stood) to be one of the very worst that was in Mansoul against Diabolus and his crew. And indeed he hath shewed himself a Man, and more of his Exploits you will hear of afterwards.

The Soul
full of idle Thoughts and Blasphemies.

Now a Man might have walked for Days together in Mansoul, and scarce have seen one in the Town that lookt like a Religious Man. Oh the fearful state of Mansoul now! Now every Corner swarmed with out-landish Doubters; Red-coats, and Black-coats, walked the Town by clusters, and filled up all the Houses with hideous Noises, vain Songs, lying Stories, and blasphemous Language against Shaddai and his Son. Now also those Diabolonians that lurked in the Walls and Dens, and Holes that were in the Town of Mansoul, came forth and shewed themselves; yea, walked with open face in Company with the Doubters that were in Mansoul. Yea, they had more boldness now to walk the Streets, to haunt the Houses, and to shew themselves abroad, than had any of the honest Inhabitants of the now woful Town of Mansoul.

But Diabolus and his out-landish Men were not at peace in Mansoul, for they were not there entertained as were the Captains and Forces of Emanuel; the Townsmen did brow-beat them what they could: nor did they partake or make stroy of any of the Necessaries of Mansoul, but that which they seized on against the Townsmen's Will; what they could they hid from them, and what they could not, they had with an ill Will. They, poor Hearts, had rather have had their room than their company, but they were at present their Captives, and their Captives for the present they were forced to be. But, I say, they discountenanced them as much as they were able, and shewed them all the dislike that they could.

Rom. 7.

The Captains also from the Castle did hold them in continual play with their Slings, to the chasing and fretting of the Minds of the Enemies. True, Diabolus made a great many attempts to have broken open the Gates of the Castle, but Mr. Godly-fear was made the Keeper of that; and he was a Man of that Courage, Conduct and Valour, that it was in vain as long as Life lasted within him, to think to do that work though mostly desired, wherefore all the attempts that Diabolus made against him were fruitless; (I have wished sometimes that that Man had had the whole rule of the Town of Mansoul.)

Well, this was the Condition of the Town of Mansoul for about two Years and an half; the Body of the Town was the seat of War; the People of the Town were driven into Holes, and the Glory of Mansoul was laid in the Dust; what rest then could be to the Inhabitants, what peace could Mansoul have, and what Sun could shine upon it? Had the Enemy lain so long without in the Plain against the Town, it had been enough to have famished them; but now when they shall be within, when the Town shall be their Tent, their Trench, and Fort against the Castle that was in the Town, when the Town shall be against the Town, and shall serve to be a Defence to the Enemies of her Strength and Life: I say when they shall make use of the Forts, and Town-holds, to secure themselves in, even till they shall take, spoil, and demolish the Castle, this was terrible; and yet this was now the State of the Town of Mansoul.

Heart.

After the Town of Mansoul had been in this sad and lamentable Condition for so long a time as I have told you, and no Petitions that they presented their Prince with (all this while) could prevail; the Inhabitants of the Town, to wit, the Elders and Chief of Mansoul gathered together, and after some time spent in condoling their miserable State, and this miserable Judgment coming upon them, they agreed together to draw up yet another Petition, and to send it away to Emanuel for relief.

But Mr. Godly-fear stood up, and answered, that he knew that his Lord the Prince never did, nor ever would receive a Petition for these Matters from the Hand of any whoever, unless the Lord Secretary's Hand was to it, (and this, quoth he, is the reason that you prevailed not all this while.) Then they said, they would draw up one, and get the Lord Secretary's Hand to it. But Mr. Godly-fear answered again, that he knew also that the Lord Secretary would not set his Hand to any Petition that himself had not an hand in composing and drawing up; and besides, said he, the Prince doth know my Lord Secretary's Hand from all the Hands in the World; wherefore he cannot be deceived by any pretence whatever; wherefore my advice is, that you go to my Lord, and implore him to lend you his Aid (now he did yet abide in the Castle where all the Captains and Men at Arms were.)

Petition
to the Prince.

So they heartily thanked Mr. Godly-fear, took his Counsel, and did as he had bidden them; so they went and came to my Lord, and made known the cause of their coming to him; to wit, that since Mansoul was in so deplorable a Condition, his Highness would be pleased to undertake to draw up a Petition for them to Emanuel, the Son of the mighty Shaddai, and to their King and his Father by him.

The Secretary im-ployed to draw up a Petition for Man-
soul.

Then said the Secretary to them, What Petition is it that you would have me draw up for you? But they said, Our Lord knows best the State and Condition of the Town of Mansoul; and how we are back-sliden and degenerated from the Prince; thou also knowest who is come up to war against us, and how Mansoul is now the seat of War. My Lord knows moreover what barbarous usages our Men, Women and Children have suffered at their Hands, and how our home-bred Diabolonians do walk now with more boldness than dare the Townsmen in the Streets of Mansoul. Let our Lord therefore according to the Wisdom of God that is in him, draw up a Petition for his poor Servants to our Prince Emanuel. Well, said the Lord Secretary, I will draw up a Petition for you, and will also set my Hand thereto. Then said they, But when shall we call for it at the Hands of our Lord? But he answered, Your selves must be present at the doing of it. Yea, you must put your desires to it. True, the Hand and Pen shall be mine, but the Ink and Paper must be yours, else how can you say it is your Petition? Nor have I need to Petition for my self, because I have not offended.

He also addeth as followeth, No Petition goes from me in my Name to the Prince, and so to his Father by him, but when the People that are chiefly concerned therein do join in Heart and Soul in the matter, for that must be inserted therein.

So they did heartily agree with the Sentence of the Lord, and a Petition was forthwith drawn up for them. But now who should carry in, that was next. But the Secretary advised that Captain Credence should carry it, for he was a well-spoken Man. They therefore called for him, and propounded to him the Business. Well, said the Captain, I gladly accept of the motion; and though I am lame, I will do this Business for you, with as much speed, and as well as I can.

The Contents of the Petition were to this purpose:

The Contents of their Petition.

'O our Lord, and Sovereign Prince Emanuel, the potent, the long-suffering Prince: Grace is poured into thy Lips, and to thee belongs Mercy and Forgiveness, though we have rebelled against thee. We who are no more worthy to be called thy Mansoul, nor yet fit to partake of common Benefits, do beseech thee, and thy Father by thee to do away our Transgressions. We confess that thou mightest cast us away for them, but do it not for thy Names sake; let the Lord rather take an opportunity at our miserable Condition, to let out his Bowels and Compassi-ons to us; we are compassed on every Side, Lord, our own back-slidings reprove us; our Diabolonians within our Town fright us, and the Army of the Angel of the bottomless Pit distresses us. Thy Grace can be our Salvation, and whether to go but to thee we know not.

'Furthermore, O Gracious Prince, we have weakened our Captains, and they are discouraged, sick, and of late some of them grievously worsted and beaten out of the Field by the Power and Force of the Tyrant. Yea, even those of our Captains in whose Valour we did formerly use to put most of our Confidence, they are as wounded Men. Besides, Lord, our Enemies are lively, and they are strong, they vaunt and boast themselves, and do threaten to part us among themselves for a booty. They are fallen also upon us, Lord, with many thousand Doubters, such as with whom we cannot tell what to do; they are all grim-looking, and unmerciful ones, and they bid defiance to us and thee.

'Our Wisdom is gone, our Power is gone, because thou art departed from us, nor have we what we may call ours but Sin, Shame and Confusion of Face for Sin. Take pity upon us, O Lord, take pity upon us thy miserable Town of Mansoul, and save us out of the Hands of our Enemies.' Amen.

This Petition as was touched afore, was handed by the Lord Secretary, and carried to the Court by the brave and most stout Captain Credence. Now he carried it out at Mouth-gate, for that, as I said, was the Sally-port of the Town; and he went and came to Emanuel with it. Now how it came out, I do not know, but for certain it did, and that so far as to reach the Ears of Diabolus. Thus I conclude, because that the Tyrant had it presently by the End, and charged the Town of Mansoul with it, saying, Thou rebellious and stubborn-hearted Mansoul, I will make thee to leave off Petitioning; art thou yet for Petitioning? I will make thee to leave. Yea, he also knew who the Messenger was that carried the Petition to the Prince, and it made him both to fear and rage.

Satan cannot abide Prayer.

Wherefore he commanded that his Drum should be beat again, a thing that Mansoul could not abide to hear; but when Diabolus will have his Drum beat, Mansoul must abide the Noise. Well, the Drum was beat, and the Diabolonians were gathered together.

Then said Diabolus, 'O ye stout Diabolonians, be it known unto you, that there is Treachery hatcht against us in the rebellious Town of Mansoul; for albeit the Town is in our possession, as you see, yet these miserable *Mansoul*ians have attempted to dare, and have been so hardy as yet to send to the Court to Emanuel for help.

'This

Poor Man-soul. ' This I give you to understand, that ye
' may yet know how to carry it to the ' wretched Town of Mansoul. Wherefore,
' O my trusty Diabolonians, I command
' that yet more and more ye distress this ' Town of Mansoul, and vex it with your ' wiles, ravish their Women, deflower their ' Virgins, slay their Children, brain their ' Ancients, fire their Town, and what other
' Mischief you can; and let this be the re' ward of the *Mansoul*ians from me, for ' their desperate Rebellions against me.'

This you see was the Charge, but something slept in betwixt that and Execution, for as yet there was but little more done than to rage.

Moreover, when Diabolus had done thus, he went the next way up to the Castle-gates, and demanded that upon pain of Death, the Gates should be opened to him, and that entrance should be given him and his Men that followed after. To whom Mr. Godly-fear replied, (for he it was that had the charge of that Gate,) ' That the ' Gate should not be opened unto him, nor ' to the Men that followed after him.' He said moreover, ' That Mansoul when she ' had suffered a while should be made per' fect, strengthened, settled.'

Satan cannot abide
Faith. ' Then said Diabolus, ' Deliver me then
' the Men that have petitioned against me,
' especially Captain Credence that carried it
' to your Prince, deliver that Varlet into ' my Hands, and I will depart from the
' Town.'

Mr. Fool-
ing. ' Then up starts a Diabolonian, whose Name was Mr. Fooling, and said, ' My ' Lord offereth you fair, 'tis better for you ' that one Man perish, than that your ' whole Mansoul should be undone.'

But Mr. Godly-fear made him this reply, ' How long will Mansoul be kept ' out of the Dungeon, when she hath given ' up her Faith to Diabolus? As good lose
' the Town as lose Captain Credence; for
' if one be gone, the other must follow.'
But to that Mr. Fooling said nothing.

Then did my Lord Mayor reply, and said, ' O thou devouring Tyrant, be it ' known unto thee, we shall hearken to ' none of thy Words, we are resolved to ' resist thee as long as a Captain, a Man,
' a Sling, and a Stone to throw at thee,
' shall be found in the Town of Mansoul.'

Diabolus
rages. ' But Diabolus answered, ' Do you hope, do
' you wait, do you look for Help and De' liverance? You have sent to Emanuel,
' but your Wickedness sticks too close in ' your skirts, to let innocent Prayers come ' out of your Lips. Think you, that you ' shall be prevailers and prosper in this de' sign? You will fail in your wish, you will ' fail in your attempts; for 'tis not only I,
' but your Emanuel is against you. Yea, it ' is he that hath sent me against you to sub-
' due you; for what then do you hope, or
' by what means will you escape?'

Vol. II.

Then said the Lord Mayor, ' We have ' sinned indeed, but that shall be no
' help to thee, for our Emanuel hath said it,
' and that in great faithfulness. And him
' that cometh to me I will in no wise cast
' out. He hath also told us (O our Enemy) The Lord
' that all manner of Sin and Blasphemy Mayor's ' shall be forgiven to the Sons of Men. Speech
' Therefore we dare not despair, but will just at the ' look for, wait for, and hope for Delive- time of rance still.' the return of Captain
Credence.

Now by this time Captain Credence was returned and come from the Court from Emanuel to the Castle of Mansoul, and he returned to them with a Pacquet. So my Lord Mayor hearing that Captain Credence was come, withdrew himself from the noise of the roaring of the Tyrant, and left him to yell at the Wall of the Town, or against the Gates of the Castle. So he came up to the Captain's Lodgings, and saluting him, he asked him of his welfare, and what was the best news at Court? but when he asked Captain Credence that, the water stood in his eyes. Then said the Captain, ' Cheer up, my Lord, for all will be well in time. And with that he first produced his Pacquet, and laid it by, but that the Lord Mayor, A sign of and the rest of the Captains took for a sign Goodness.
of good Tidings. (Now a Season of Grace being come, he sent for all the Captains and Elders of the Town that were here and there in their Lodgings in the Castle, and upon their Guard, to let them know that Captain Credence was returned from the Court, and that he had something in general, and something in special to communicate to them.) So they all came up to him, and saluted him, and asked him concerning his journey, and what was the best news at the Court? And he answered them as he had done the Lord Mayor before, that all would be well at last. Now when the Captains had thus saluted them, he opened his Pacquet, and thence did draw out his The Pac-several Notes for those that he had sent quet opened.
for. And the first Note was for my Lord
Mayor, wherein was signified:

' That the Prince Emanuel had taken it A Note
' well that my Lord Mayor had been so for my ' true and trusty in his office, and the great Lord
' concerns that lay upon him for the Town Mayor.
' and people of Mansoul. Also he bid him
' to know, that he took it well that he had ' been so bold for his Prince Emanuel, and ' had engaged so faithfully in his cause a' gainst Diabolus. He also signified at the ' close of his Letter, that he should shortly
' receive his reward.

' The second note that came out, was A Note
' for the noble Lord Willbewill, wherein Lord Will-
' there was signified, That his Prince Ema- bewill.
' nuel did well understand how valiant and ' courageous he had been for the honour
' of his Lord, now in his absence, and when
' his name was under contempt by Diabolus.
' There was signified also that his Prince had

‘ had taken it well that he had been so faithful to the Town of Mansoul in his keeping of so strict a Hand and Eye over, and so strict a rein upon the necks of the Diabolians that did still lye lurking in their several Holes in the famous Town of Mansoul.

‘ He signified moreover, how that he understood that my Lord had with his own hand done great Execution upon some of the chief of the rebels there, to the great Discouragement of the adverse party, and to the good example of the whole Town of Mansoul, and that shortly his Lordship should have his reward.

A Note for the Subordinate Preacher.

‘ The third Note came out for the Subordinate Preacher, wherein was signified, That his Prince took it well from him that he had so honestly, and so faithfully performed his office, and executed the trust committed to him by his Lord, while he exhorted, rebuked, and fore-warned Mansoul according to the Laws of the Town. He signified moreover, that he took well at his hand that he called to fasting, to sackcloth and ashes, when Mansoul was under her revolt. Also that he called for the aid of the Captain Boanerges to help in so weighty a Work, and that shortly he also should receive his reward.

A Note for Mr. Godlyfear.

‘ The fourth Note came out for Mr. Godlyfear, wherein his Lord thus signified, That his Lordship observed that he was the first of all the Men in Mansoul, that detected Mr. Carnal Security, as the only one that through his subtilty and cunning had obtained for Diabolus a Defection and Decay of Goodness in the blessed Town of Mansoul. Moreover, his Lord gave him to understand that he still remembered his Tears and Mourning for the state of Mansoul. It was also observed by the same Note, that his Lord took notice of his detecting of this Mr. Carnal Security, at his own table among the Guests, in his own House, and that in the midst of his Jolliness, even while he was seeking to perfect his Villanies against the Town of Mansoul. Emanuel also took notice that this reverend person, Mr. Godlyfear, stood stoutly to it at the Gates of the Castle, against all the threats and attempts of the Tyrant, and that he had put the Townsmen in a Way, to make their Petition to their Prince, so as that he might accept thereof, and as that they might obtain an answer of peace; and that therefore shortly he should receive his reward.

A Note for the Town of Mansoul.

‘ After all this, there was yet produced a Note which was written to the whole Town of Mansoul, whereby they perceived that their Lord took notice of their so often repeating of Petitions to him, and that they should see more of the fruits of such their doings in time to come. Their Prince did also therein tell them, That he ‘ took it well, that their heart and mind now at last, abode fixed upon him and his ways, though Diabolus had made such inroads upon them, and that neither flatteries on the one hand, nor hardships on the other, could make them yield to serve his cruel designs. There was also inserted at the bottom of this Note, That his Lordship had left the Town of Mansoul in the hands of the Lord Secretary, and under the conduct of Captain Credence, saying, Beware that you yet yield your selves unto their governance, and in due time you shall receive your reward.

So after the brave Captain Credence had delivered his Notes to those to whom they belonged, he retired himself to my Lord Secretary's Lodgings, and there spends time in conversing with him; for they two were very great one with another, and did indeed know more how things would go with Mansoul than did all the Townsmen besides. The Lord Secretary also loved the Captain Credence dearly; yea, many a good bit was sent him from my Lord's table; also he might have a shew of countenance when the rest of Mansoul lay under the clouds; so after some time for converse was spent, the Captain betook himself to his Chambers to rest. But it was not long after but my Lord did send for the Captain again: so the Captain came to him, and they greeted one another with usual Salutations. Then said the Captain to the Lord Secretary, What hath my Lord to say to his Servant? So the Lord Secretary took him, and had him aside, and after a sign or two of more favour, he said, I have made thee the Lord's Lieutenant over all the forces in Mansoul; so that from this Day forward, all men in Mansoul shall be at thy word, and thou shalt be he that shall lead in, and that shalt lead out Mansoul. Thou shalt therefore manage according to thy place, the War for thy Prince, and for the Town of Mansoul, against the force and power of Diabolus, and at thy command shall the rest of the Captains be.

Now the Townsmen began to perceive what interest the Captain had, both with the Court, and also with the Lord Secretary in Mansoul; for no man before could speed when sent, nor bring such good news from Emanuel as he. Wherefore what do they, after some lamentation that they made no more use of him in their distresses, but send by their Subordinate Preacher to the Lord Secretary, to desire him that all that ever they were and had, might be put under the Government, Care, Custody, and Conduct of Captain Credence.

So their Preacher went and did his Errand, and received this answer from the mouth of his Lord, that Captain Credence should be the great doer in all the King's Army, against the King's enemies, and also for the Welfare of Mansoul. So he bowed to

to the Ground, and thanked his Lordship, and returned and told his News to the Townsfolk. But all this was done with all imaginable Secrecy, because the Foes had yet great Strength in the Town. But, rages.

To return to our Story again: When Diabolus saw himself thus boldly confronted by the Lord Mayor, and perceived the Stoutness of Mr. Godlyfear, he fell into a Rage, and forthwith called a Council of war that he might be revenged on Mansoul. So all the Princes of the Pit came together, and old Incredulity at the Head of them, with all the Captains of his Army. So they consult what to do, now the Effect and Conclusion of the Council that day, was how they might take the Castle, because they could not conclude themselves Masters of the Town, so long as that was in the possession of their Enemies. So one advised this Way, and another advised that; but when they could not agree in their Verdict, Apollyon that President of the Council stood up, and thus he began: 'My Brotherhood, quoth he, I have two things to propound unto you; and my first is this, let us withdraw ourselves from the Town into the Plain again, for our presence here will do us no good, because the Castle is yet in our Enemies Hands; nor is it possible that we should take that so long as so many brave Captains are in it, and that this bold Fellow Godlyfear is made the Keeper of the Gates of it.'

Look to it

Now when we have withdrawn ourselves into the plain, they of their own accord will be glad of some little Ease, and it may be of their own accord they again may begin to be remiss, and even their so being will give them a bigger blow than we can possibly give them ourselves. But if that should fail, our going forth of the Town, may draw the Captains out after us, and you know what it cost them when we fought them in the Field before. Besides, can we but draw them out into the Field, we may lay an Ambush behind the Town, which shall, when they are come forth abroad, rush in and take possession of the Castle. But Beelzebub stood up, and replied, saying, 'Tis impossible to draw them all off from the Castle; some you may be sure will lye there to keep that: wherefore it will be but in vain thus to attempt, unless we were sure that they will all come out. He therefore concluded that what was done, must be done by some other Means. And the most likely Means that the greatest of their Heads could invent, was that which Apollyon had advised to before, to wit, to get the Townsmen again to sin. For, said he, it is not our being in the Town, nor in the Field, nor our fighting, nor our killing of their men, that can make us the Masters of Mansoul; for so long as one in the Town is able to lift up his Finger against us, Emanuel will take their Parts, and if he shall take their Parts, we know what time a day it will be with us. Wherefore, for my Part, quoth he, there is in my Judgment, no Way to bring them into bondage to us, like inventing a Way to make them sin. Had we, said he, left all our Doubters at home, we had done as well as we had done now, unless we could have made them the Masters and Governours of the Castle; for Doubters at a distance are but like Objections refell'd with Arguments. Indeed can we but get them into the hold, and make them Possessors of that, the day will be our own. Let us therefore withdraw ourselves into the Plain (not expecting that the Captains in Mansoul should follow us) but yet I say, let us do this, and before we so do, let us advise again with our trusty Diabolonians that are yet in their holds of Mansoul, and set them to work to betray the Town to us; for they indeed must do it, or it will be left undone for ever. By these Sayings of Beelzebub (for I think 'twas he that gave this Counsel) the whole Conclave was forced to be of his Opinion, to wit, that the Way to get the Castle was to get the Town to sin. Then they fell to inventing by what means they might do this Thing. 2 Pet. 2.

Then Lucifer stood up and said, 'The counsel of Beelzebub is pertinent; now the Way to bring this to pass, in mine Opinion is this: Let us withdraw our Force from the Town of Mansoul, let us do this and let us terrify them no more, either with Summons or Threats, or with the noise of our Drum, or any other awakening means. Only let us lie in the Field at a distance, and be as if we regarded them not (for Frights I see do but awaken them, and make them more stand to their Arms.) I have also another Stratagem in my Head, you know Mansoul is a Market Town, and a Town that delights in commerce, what therefore if some of our Diabolonians shall feign themselves far-country-men, and shall go out and bring to the Market of Mansoul some of our Wares to sell; and what matter at what Rates they sell their Wares, though it be but for half the Worth. Now let those that thus shall trade in their Market, be those that are witty and true to us, and I will lay my crown to pawn, it will do. There are two that are come to my Thoughts already, that I think will be arch at this Work, and they are Mr. Pennyrise-Pound-foolish, and Mr. Get it's hundred-and lose it's shire; nor is this Man with the long Name at all inferior to the other. What also if you join with them Mr. Sweet-world, and Mr. Present-good, they are Men that are civil and cunning, but our true Friends and Helpers. Let these with as many more engage

'gage in this Business for us, and let Mansoul be taken up in much Business, and let them grow full and rich, and this is the Way to get Ground of them; remember ye not that thus we prevailed upon Laodicea, and how many at present do we hold in this Snare? Now when they begin to grow full they will forget their Misery, and if we shall not affright them they may happen to fall asleep, and so be got to neglect their Town-watch, their Castle-watch, as well as their Watch at the Gates.

'Yea, may we not by this means, so cumber Mansoul with abundance, that they shall be forced to make of their Castle a Warehouse instead of a Garrison fortified against us, and a Receptacle for Men of War. Thus if we get our Goods, and Commodities thither, I reckon that the Castle is more than half ours. Besides, could we so order it that it should be filled with such Kind of Wares, then if we made a sudden Assault upon them, it would be hard for the Captains to take Shelter there. Do you know that of the Parable, The deceitfulness of riches choak the word; and again, When the heart is overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and the Cares of this Life, all mischief comes upon them at unawares.

Look to it
Mansoul.

'Furthermore, my Lords, quoth he, you very well know that it is not easy for a People to be filled with our things, and not to have some of our Diabolonians as Retainers to their Houses and Services. Where is a Mansoul that is full of this World that has not for his Servants, and Waiting-men, Mr. Profuse, or Mr. Prodigality, or some other of our Diabolonian Gang, as Mr. Voluptuous, Mr. Pragmatical, Mr. Ostentation, or the like? Now these can take the Castle of Mansoul, or blow it up, or make it unfit for a Garrison for Emanuel; and any of these will do. Yea, these for ought I know may do it for us sooner than an army of twenty thousand Men. Wherefore to end as I began, my advice is that we quietly withdraw our selves, not offering any further Force, or forcible Attempts upon the Castle, at least at this Time, and let us set on foot our new project, and let's see if that will not make them destroy themselves.

Captain
Credence receives that from his Prince which he under-standeth
not.

This Advice was highly applauded by them all, and was accounted the very masterpiece of Hell, to wit, to choak Mansoul with a Fulness of this World, and to surfeit her Heart with the good Tidings thereof. But see how Things meet together, just as this Diabolonian Counsel was broken up, Captain Credence received a Letter from Emanuel, the contents of which was this, That upon the third day he would meet him in the field in the Plains about Mansoul. Meet me in the Field, quoth the captain? what meaneth my Lord by this? I know not what he meaneth by meeting of me in the Field. So he took the Note in his Hand, and did carry it to my Lord Secretary, to ask his Thoughts thereupon, (for my Lord was a Seer in all matters concerning the King, and also for the good and comfort of the Town of Mansoul.) So he shewed my Lord the Note, and desired his opinion thereof: For my Part, quoth Captain Credence, I know not the meaning thereof. So my Lord did take and read it, and after a little Pause he said, 'The Diabolonians have had against Mansoul a great consultation to day, they have I say, this day been contriving the utter Ruin of the Town; and the result of their counsel is, to set Mansoul into such a Way, which if taken, will, surely make her destroy herself. And to this End they are making ready for their own Departure out of the Town intending to betake themselves to the Field again, and there to lye till they shall see whether this their Project will take or no. But be thou ready with the men of thy Lord (for on the third Day they will be in the Plain) there to fall upon the Diabolonians; for the Prince will by that Time be in the Field: yea, by that it is break of day, Sun-rising, before, and that with a mighty Force against them. So he shall be before them, and thou shalt be behind them, and betwixt you both their Army shall be destroyed.'

The Rid-

to Captain
Credence.

When Captain Credence heard this, away goes he to the rest of the Captains, and tells them what a Note he had a while since received from the hand of Emanuel. And, said he, that which was dark therein has my Lord the Lord Secretary expounded unto me. He told them moreover, what by himself and by them must be done to answer the Mind of their Lord. Then were the Captains glad, and Captain Credence commanded that all the King's Trumpeters should ascend to the Battlements of the Castle, and there in the Audience of Diabolus, and of the whole Town of Mansoul, make the best Musick that Heart could invent. The Trumpeters then did as they were commanded. They got themselves up to the top of the Castle, and thus they began to sound; then did Diabolus start, and said, What can be the meaning of this, they neither sound Boot and Saddle, nor Horse and away, nor a Charge. What do these mad Men mean, that yet they should be so merry and glad? Then answered him one of themselves and said, this is for Joy that their Prince Emanuel is coming to relieve the Town of Mansoul; that to this end he is at the head of an Army, and that this relief is near.

The Men of Mansoul were also greatly concerned at this melodious charm of the Trumpets;

Diabolus with-draws from the Town, and why. Trumpets; they said, yea, they answered one another saying, This can be no harm to us; surely this can be no harm to us. Then said the Diabolonians, what had we best to do? And it was answered, It was best to quit the Town; and that said one, Ye may do in pursuance of your last Counsel, and by so doing also be better able to give the Enemy battle, should an Army from without come upon us. So on the second Day they withdrew themselves from Manfoul, and abode in the Plains without, but they incamped themselves before Eye-gate, in what terrene and terrible manner they could. The reason why they would not abide in the Town (besides the reasons that were debated in their last Conclave, was, for that they were not possessed of the Strong-hold, and because, said they, we shall have more convenience to fight, and also to fly if need be when we are incamped in the open Plains. Besides, the Town would have been a Pit for them rather than a place of Defence, had the Prince come up and enclosed them fast therein. Therefore they betook themselves to the Field, that they might also be out of the reach of the Slings, by which they were much annoyed all the while that they were in the Town.

The time come for the Captains to fight them. Well, the time that the Captains were to fall upon the Diabolonians being come, they eagerly prepared themselves for Action, for Captain Credence had told the Captains over Night, that they should meet their Prince in the Field to morrow. This therefore made them yet far more desirous to be engaging the Enemy; for you shall see the Prince in the Field to morrow, was like Oil to a flaming Fire; for of a long time they had been at a distance; they therefore were for this the more earnest and desirous of the Work. So, as I said, the Hour being come, Captain Credence with the rest of the Men of War, drew out their Forces before it were Day by the Sally-port of the Town. And being all ready, Captain Credence went up to the Head of the Army, and gave to the rest of the Captains the Word, and so they to their under Officers and Soldiers, the Word was, The Sword of the Prince Emanuel, and the Shield of Captain Credence, which is in the *Manfoul*ian Tongue, The Word of God and Faith. Then the Captains fell on and began roundly to front, and flank, and rere Diabolus's Camp.

Captain Experience will fight for his Prince upon his Crutches. Now they left Captain Experience in the Town because he was yet ill of his Wounds which the Diabolonians had given him in the last Fight. But when he perceived that the Captains were at it, what does he but calling for his Crutches with haste, gets up, and away he goes to the Battle, saying, Shall I lye here when my Brethren are in the Fight, and when Emanuel the Prince will shew himself in the Field to his Servants? But when the Enemy saw the Man come with his Crutches they were daunted yet the more, for thought they, what Spirit has possessed these *Manfoul*ians that they fight us upon their Crutches. Well, the Captains as I said fell on, and did bravely handle their Weapons, still crying out, and shouting as they laid on blows, The Sword of the Prince Emanuel, and the Shield of Captain Credence.

Now when Diabolus saw that the Captains were come out, and that so valiantly they furrounded his Men, he concluded (that for the present) nothing from them was to be looked for but blows, and the dints of their two-edged Sword.

Wherefore he also falls on upon the Prince's Army, with all his deadly Force. The Battle joined. So the Battle was joined. Now who was it that at first Diabolus met with in the fight, but Captain Credence on the one hand, and the Lord Willbewill on the other; now Willbewill's Blows were like the Blows of a Giant, for that Man had a strong Arm, and he fell in upon the Electi-on-doubters, for they were the Life-guard of Diabolus, and he kept them in play a good while, cutting and battering shrewdly. Now when Captain Credence saw my Lord engaged, he did stoutly fall on, on the other hand, upon the same Company also; so they put them to great disorder.

Now Captain Good-hope had engaged the Vocation-doubters, and they were sturdy Men; but the Captain was a valiant Man: Captain Experience did also send him some Aid, so he made the Vocation-doubters to retreat. The rest of the Armies were hotly engaged, and that on every Side, and the Diabolonians did fight stoutly. Then did my Lord Secretary command that the Slings from the Castle should be plaid, and his Men could throw Stones at an Hair's breadth. But after a while those that were made to fly before the Captains of the Prince, did begin to rally again, and they came up stoutly upon the Rear of the Prince's Army: wherefore the Prince's Army began to faint; but remembering that they should see the Face of their Prince by and by, they took Courage, and a very fierce Battle was fought. Then shouted the Captains, saying, The Sword of the Prince Emanuel, and the Shield of Captain Credence; and with that Diabolus gave back, thinking that more Aid had been come. But no Emanuel as yet appeared.

Moreover the Battle did hang in doubt; and they made a little retreat on both Sides. Now in the time of respite Captain Credence bravely encouraged his Men to stand to it, and Diabolus did the like as well as he could. But Captain Credence made a brave Speech to his Soldiers, the Contents whereof here follow:

Gentlemen Soldiers, and my Brethren in this design, it rejoiceth me much to see in the Field

Field for our Prince this day, so stout and so valiant an Army, and such faithful lovers of Mansoul. You have hitherto, as hath become you, shewn your selves men of Truth and Courage against the Diabolonian Forces, so that for all their boast, they have not yet much cause to boast of their gettings. Now take to your selves your wonted Courage, and shew your selves men even this once only; for in a few minutes after the next Engagement this time, you shall see your Prince shew himself in the Field; for we must make this second assault upon this Tyrant Diabolus, and then Emanuel comes.

No sooner had the Captain made this Speech to his Soldiers, but one Mr. Speedy came post to the Captain from the Prince, to tell him that Emanuel was at hand. This News when the Captain had received, he communicated to the other Field-officers, and they again to their Soldiers and Men of War. Wherefore like Men raised from the dead, so the Captains and their Men arose, made up to the Enemy, and cried as before, The Sword of the Prince Emanuel, and the Shield of Captain Credence.

The Diabolonians also bestirred themselves, and made Resistance as well as they could, but in this last Engagement the Diabolonians lost their Courage, and many of the Doubters fell down dead to the ground. Now when they had been in heat of Battle about an Hour or more, Captain Credence lift up his Eyes and saw, and behold Emanuel came, and he came with Colours flying, Trumpets sounding, and the Feet of his Men scarce toucht the Ground, they hasted with that Celerity towards the Captains that were engaged. Then did Credence winde with his Men to the Townward, and gave to Diabolus the Field. So Emanuel came upon him on the one Side, and the Enemies place was betwixt them both; then again they fell to it afresh, and now it was but a little while more but Emanuel and Captain Credence met, still trampling down the slain as they came.

But when the Captains saw that the Prince was come, and that he fell upon the Diabolonians on the other Side, and that Captain Credence and his Highness had got them up betwixt them, they shouted, (they so shouted that the Ground rent again) saying, The Sword of Emanuel, and the Shield of Captain Credence. Now when Diabolus saw that he and his Forces were so hard beset by the Prince and his Princely Army, what does he and the Lords of the Pit that were with him, but make their escape, and forsake their Army, and leave them to fall by the Hand of Emanuel, and of his noble Captain Credence: So they fell all down slain before them, before the Prince, and before his Royal Army; there was not left so much as one Doubter alive, they lay spread upon the Ground dead Men, as one would spread Dung upon the Land.

When the Battle was over, all things came into order in the Camp, then the Captains and Elders of Mansoul came together to salute Emanuel, while without the Corporation; so they saluted him, and welcomed him, and that with a thousand welcomes, for that he was come to the Borders of Mansoul again: So he smiled upon them, and said, Peace be to you. Then they addressed themselves to go to the Town; they went then to go up to Mansoul, they, the Prince with all the new Forces that now he had brought with him to the War. Also all the Gates of the Town were set open for his Reception, so glad were they of his blessed return. And this was the manner and order of this going of his into Mansoul.

First, (as I said) all the Gates of the Town were set open, yea the Gates of the Castle also; the Elders too of the Town of Mansoul placed themselves at the Gates of the Town to salute him at his entrance thither: And so they did, for as he drew near, and approached towards the Gates, they said, Lift up your Heads, O ye Gates, and be ye lift up ye everlasting doors, and the King of Glory shall come in. And they answered again, Who is the King of Glory? And they made return to themselves, The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in Battle. Lift up your Heads, O ye Gates, even lift them up ye everlasting doors, &c.

Secondly, It was ordered also by those of Mansoul, that all the way from the Town-gates to those of the Castle his blessed Majesty should be entertained with the Song, by them that could best skill in Musick in all the Town of Mansoul; then did the Elders, and the rest of the Men of Mansoul answer one another as Emanuel entered the Town, till he came at the Castle-gates with Songs and Sound of Trumpets, saying, They have seen thy goings O God, even the goings of my God, my King in the Sanctuary. So the Singers went before, the Players on Instruments followed after, and among them were the Damsels playing on Timbrels.

Thirdly, Then the Captains (for I would speak a Word of them) they in their order waited on the Prince as he entred into the Gates of Mansoul. Captain Credence went before, and Captain Goodhope with him; Captain Charity came behind with other of his Companions, and Captain Patience followed after all, and the rest of the Captains, some on the right Hand, and some on the left, accompanied Emanuel into Mansoul. And all the while the Colours were displayed, the Trumpets sounded, and continual Shoutings were among the Soldiers. The Prince himself rode into the Town in his Armour, which was all of beaten Gold, and in his Chariot, the Pillars of it were of Silver,

When the Enemy is betwixt Christ and Faith, then down they go to be sure.

The Victory falls to Emanuel, and to his Men, who slay all.

Mansoul salutes the Prince without, he addresses himself to go into the Town.

The manner of his going in.

ver, the Bottom thereof of Gold, the covering of it were of Purple; the midst thereof being paved with Love for the Daughters of the Town of Mansoul.

Fourthly, When the Prince was come to the entrance of Mansoul, he found all the Streets strewed with Lillies and Flowers, curiously decked with Boughs and Branches from the green Trees that stood round about the Town. Every Door also was filled with Persons who had adorned every one their fore-part against their House with something of Variety, and singular Excellency to entertain him withal as he passed in the Streets; they also themselves as Emanuel passed by, did welcome him with Shouts and Acclamations of Joy, saying, Blessed be the Prince that cometh in the Name of his Father Shaddai.

Fifthly, At the Castle-gates the Elders of Mansoul, to wit, the Lord Mayor, the Lord Willbewill, the Subordinate Preacher, Mr. Knowledge, and Mr. Mind, with other of the Gentry of the place saluted Emanuel again. They bowed before him, they kissed the Dust of his Feet, they thanked, they blessed, and praised his Highness for not taking Advantage against them for their Sins, but rather had pity upon them in their Misery, and returned to them with Mercies, and to build up their Mansoul for ever. Thus was he had up straightway to the Castle; for that was the Royal Palace, and the place where his Honour was to dwell; the which was ready prepared for his Highness by the presence of the Lord Secretary, and the work of Captain Credence. So he entred in.

Sixthly, Then the People and Commonalty of the Town of Mansoul came to him into the Castle to mourn, and to weep, and to lament for their Wickedness, by which they had forced him out of the Town. So they when they were come, bowed themselves to the Ground seven times; they also wept, they wept aloud, and asked Forgiveness of the Prince, and prayed that he would again, as of old, confirm his love to Mansoul.

To the which the great Prince replied, Weep not, but go your way, eat the Fat, and drink the Sweet, and send Portions to them for whom nought is prepared, for the Joy of your Lord is your Strength. I am returned to Mansoul with Mercies, and my Name shall be set up, exalted and magnified by it. He also took these Inhabitants and kissed them, and laid them in his Bosom.

Moreover, he gave to the Elders of Mansoul, and to each Town-officer a Chain of Gold, and a Signet. He also sent to their Wives Ear-rings and Jewels, and Bracelets, and other things. He also bestowed upon the true born Children of Mansoul, many precious things.

When Emanuel the Prince had done all these things for the famous Town of Mansoul, then he said unto them, first, Wash your Garments, then put on your Ornaments, and then come to me into the Castle of Mansoul. So they went to the Fountain that was set open for Judah and Jerusalem to wash in; and there they washed, and there they made their Garments white, and came again to the Prince into the Castle, and thus they stood before him.

And now there was Musick and Dancing throughout the whole Town of Mansoul; and that because their Prince had again granted to them his Presence, and the Light of his Countenance; the Bells also did ring, and the Sun shone comfortably upon them for a great while together.

The Town of Mansoul did also now more thoroughly seek the destruction and ruin of all remaining Diabolonians that abode in the Walls, and the Dens (that they had) in the Town of Mansoul; for there was of them that had to this Day escaped with Life and Limb from the Hand of their Suppressors in the famous Town of Mansoul.

But the Lord Willbewill was a greater terror to them now than ever he had been before; forasmuch as his Heart was yet more fully bent to seek, contrive, and pursue them to the Death; he pursued them Night and Day, and did put them now to sore distress, as will afterwards appear.

After things were thus far put into Order in the famous Town of Mansoul, care was taken, and Orders given by the blessed Prince Emanuel, That the Townsmen should without further Delay appoint some to go forth into the Plain to bury the dead that were there; the dead that fell by the Sword of Emanuel, and by the Shield of the Captain Credence, lest the Fumes and ill Savours that would arise from them, might infect the Air, and so annoy the famous Town of Mansoul. This also was a Reason of this Order, to wit, that as much as in Mansoul lay, they might cut off the Name and Being, and Remembrance of those Enemies from the Thought of the famous Town of Mansoul, and its Inhabitants.

So Order was given out by the Lord Mayor, that wise and trusty Friend of the Town of Mansoul, that Persons should be employed about this necessary Business; and Mr. Godlyfear, and one Mr. Upright were to be Overseers about this Matter; so persons were put under them to work in the fields; and to bury the Slain that lay dead in the Plains. And these were their Places of Employment, some were to make the Graves, some to bury the Dead, and some were to go to and fro in the Plains, and also round about the Borders of Mansoul.

soul to see if a Skull or a Bone, or a piece of a Bone of a Doubter, was yet to be found above Ground any where near the Corporation; and if any were found, it was ordered that the Searchers that searched should set up a mark thereby, and a sign, that those that were appointed to bury them might find it, and bury it out of sight, that the name and remembrance of a Diabolonian Doubter might be blotted out from under Heaven. And that the Children, and they that were to be born in Mansoul might not know (if possible) what a Skull, what a Bone, or a piece of a Bone of a Doubter was.

So the Buriers, and those that were appointed for that Purpose, did as they were commanded, they buried the Doubters, and all the Skulls and Bones, and pieces of Bones of Doubters where ever they found them, and so they cleansed the Plains. Now also Mr. Godspeace took up his Commission, and acted again as in former Days.

Thus they buried in the Plains about Mansoul, the Election-doubters, the Vocation-doubters, the Grace-doubters, the Perseverance-doubters, the Resurrection-doubters, the Salvation-doubters, and the Glory-doubters, whose Captains were Captain Rage, Captain Cruel, Captain Damnation, Captain Insatiable, Captain Brimstone, Captain Torment, Captain Noease, Captain Sepulcher, and Captain Past-hope; and old Incredulity was under Diabolus their General: there were also the seven heads of their Army, and they were the Lord Beelzebub, the Lord Lucifer, the Lord Legion, the Lord Apollyon, the Lord Python, the Lord Cerberus, and the Lord Belial. But the Princes and the Captains, with old Incredulity their General, did all of them make their Escape; so their men fell down slain by the Power of the Prince's Forces, and by the Hands of the Men of the Town of Mansoul. They also were buried as is afore related, to the exceeding great Joy of the now famous Town of Mansoul. They that buried them, buried also with them their Arms, which were cruel Instruments of Death, (their Weapons were Arrows, Darts, Mauls, Firebrands, and the like) they buried also their Armour, their Colours, Banners, with the Standard of Diabolus, and what else soever they could find that did but smell of a Diabolonian Doubter.

Now when the Tyrant had arrived at Hellgate Hill, with his old Friend Incredulity, they immediately descended the Den, and having there with their Fellows for a while condoled their Misfortune, and great Loss that they sustained against the Town of Mansoul, they fell at length into a Passion, and revenged they would be for the Loss that they sustained before the Town of Mansoul; wherefore they presently call a Council to contrive yet further what was to be done against the famous Town of Mansoul; for their yawning Paunches could not wait to see the result of their Lord Lucifer's and their Lord Apollyon's Counsel that they had given before, (for their raging Gorge thought every day even as long as a short-for-ever, until they were filled with the Body and Soul, with the Flesh and Bones, and with all the delicacies of Mansoul. They therefore resolve to make another Attempt upon the Town of Mansoul, and that by an Army mixed, and made up, partly of Doubters, and partly of Blood-men. A more particular Account now take of both.

The Doubters are such as have their name from their nature, as well as from the Lord and Kingdom where they are born; their Nature is to put a Question upon every one of the Truths of Emanuel, and their Country is called the land of Doubting, and that land lyeth off, and furthest remote to the North, between the land of Darkness, and that called the Valley of the Shadow of Death. For though the land of Darkness, and that called the Valley of the Shadow of Death, be sometimes called as if they were one and the self same place; yet indeed they are two, lying but a little Way asunder, and the land of Doubting points in, and lyeth between them. This is the Land of Doubting, and these that came with Diabolus to ruin the Town of Mansoul are the Natives of that Country.

An army

ers and Bloodmen.

Country of the Doubters,
and of the Bloodmen
where they lye.

The Bloodmen are a People that have their name derived from the malignity of their Nature, and from the Fury that is in them to execute it upon the Town of Mansoul; their Land lyeth under the Dogstar, and by that they are governed as to their Intellectuals.

The name of their Country is the Province of Loath-good, the remote Parts of it are far distant from the Land of Doubting, yet they do both butt and bound upon the Hill called Hellgate Hill. These People are always in league with the Doubters: for they jointly do make question of the Faith and Fidelity of the Men of the Town of Mansoul, and so are both alike qualified for the Service of their Prince.

Now of these two Countries did Diabolus, by the beating of his Drum, raise another Army against the Town of Mansoul, of five and twenty thousand strong. There were ten thousand Doubters, and fifteen thousand Bloodmen, and they were put under several Captains for the War; and old Incredulity was again made General of the Army.

As for the Doubters, their Captains were five of the seven that were Heads of the last Diabolonian Army, and these are their Names, Captain Beelzebub, Captain Lucifer, Captain Apollyon, Captain Legion

The number of his new army.

Legion, and Captain Cerberus; and the Captains that they had before, were some of them made Lieutenants, and some Ensigns of the Army.

But Diabolus did not count that in this Expedition of his, these Doubters would prove his principal men, for their manhood had been tried before, also the *Mansoul*ians had put them to the worst, only he did bring them to multiply a number, and to help if need was at a pinch, but his trust he put in his Bloodmen; for that they were all rugged Villains, and he knew that they had done feats heretofore.

His chief strength lyes in the Bloodmen.

The Captains of the Bloodmen.

As for the Bloodmen they also were under command, and the names of their Captains were Captain Cain, Captain Nimrod, Captain Ismael, Captain Esau, Captain Saul, Captain Abfalom, Captain Judas, and Captain Pope.

1. Captain Cain was over two bands, to wit, the zealous and the angry Bloodmen; his Standard-bearer bare the Red-colours, and his Scutcheon was the Murdering Club.

2. Captain Nimrod was Captain over two bands, to wit, the Tyrannical and In-croaching Bloodmen; his Standard-bearer bare the Red-colours, and his Scutcheon was the Great Blood-bound.

3. Captain Ismael was Captain over two bands, to wit, over the Mocking and Scorning Bloodmen; his Standard-bearer bare the Red-colours, and his Scutcheon was one mocking at Abraham's Isaac.

4. Captain Esau was Captain over two bands, to wit, the Bloodmen that grudged that another should have the blessing; also over the Bloodmen that are for executing their private revenge upon others; his Standard-bearer bare the Red-colours; and his Scutcheon was one privately lurking to murder Jacob.

under him; his Standard-bearer bare the Red-colours, and his Scutcheon was the stake, the flame, and the good man in it.

Now the reason why Diabolus did so soon rally another force after he had been beaten out of the field, was for that he put mighty confidence in this army of Bloodmen, for he put a great deal of more trust in them, than he did before in his army of Doubters; though they had also often done great service for him in the strengthening of him in his Kingdom. But these Bloodmen, he had proved them often, and their sword did seldom return empty. Besides, he knew that these like Mastiffs, would fasten upon any; upon Father, Mother, Brother, Sister, Prince, or Governour, yea, upon the Prince of Princes. And that which encouraged him the more, was for that they once did force Emanuel out of the Kingdom of Universe, and why thought he, may they not also drive him from the Town of Mansoul.

The conditions of the Bloodmen, their stoutness and valour.

So this army of five and twenty thousand strong, was by their General the great Lord Incredulity, led up against the Town of Mansoul. Now Mr. Prywell the Scout-master-general, did himself go out to spy, and he did bring Mansoul tidings of their coming: wherefore they shut up their Gates, and put themselves in a posture of defence against these new Diabolonians that came up against the Town.

They fit down before Mansoul.

So Diabolus brought up his Army, and beleaguered the Town of Mansoul; the Doubters were placed about Feet-gate, and the Bloodmen set down before Eye-gate and Ear-gate.

How they dispose of themselves

Now when this Army had thus incamped themselves, Incredulity did in the name of Diabolus, his own name, and in the name of the Bloodmen, and the rest that were with him, send a Summons as hot as a red hot Iron to Mansoul, to yield to their demands; threatening that if they still stood it out against them, they would presently burn down Mansoul with fire. For you must know that as for the Bloodmen, they were not so much that Mansoul should be surrendered, as that Mansoul should be destroyed, and cut off out of the land of the living. True, they send to them to surrender, but should they so do, that would not stench or quench the thirsts of these men. They must have Blood, the Blood of Mansoul, else they die; and it is from hence that they have their name. Wherefore these Bloodmen he reserved while now that they might when all his Engines proved ineffectual, as his last and sure card be played against the Town of Mansoul.

They's in the Town, with a threatening.

the Prince, the which they did when they Pfal. 59.2. had writ at the bottom of it, Lord save
Mansoul from bloody men.

So he took it, and looked upon it, and
Heb. 6.12. considered it, and took notice also of that
Ver. 15. short Petition that the Men of Mansoul had written at the Bottom of it, and called to him the noble Captain Credence, and bid him go and take Captain Patience with him, and go and take care of that Side of Mansoul that was beleaguered by the Blood- men. So they went and did as they were commanded, the Captain Credence went and took Captain Patience, and they both secured that Side of Mansoul that was besieged by the Bloodmen.

Then he commanded that Captain Good- hope and Captain Charity, and my Lord Willbewill, should take charge of the other Side of the Town; and I, said the Prince, will set my Standard upon the Battlements of your Castle, and do you three watch against the Doubters. This done, he again commanded that the brave Captain the Captain Experience should draw up his Men in the Market-place, and that there he should exercise them Day by Day before the People of the Town of Mansoul.
 Now this Siege was long, and many a fierce Attempt did the Enemy, especially those called the Bloodmen, make upon the Town of Mansoul, and many a shrewd brush did some of the Townsmen meet with from them; especially Captain Self-denial; who,
 I should have told you before, was commanded to take the care of Ear-gate and Eye-gate now against the Bloodmen. This Captain Self-denial was a young Man, but stout, and a Townsman in Mansoul, as Captain Experience also was. And E- manuel at his second return to Mansoul, made him a Captain over a thousand of the *Mansoul*ians, for the good of the Corporation. This Captain therefore being an hardy Man, and a Man of great Courage, and willing to venture himself for the good of the Town of Mansoul, would now and then fall out upon the Bloodmen, and give them many notable Alarms, and entered several brisk skirmishes with them, and also did some execution upon them, but you must think that this could not easily be done, but he must meet with brushes himself, for he carried several of their Marks in his Face; yea, and some in some other Parts of his Body.

So after some time spent for the Trial of the Faith, and Hope, and Love of the Town of Mansoul; the Prince Emanuel upon a Day calls his Captains and Men of War together, and divides them into two Companies; this done, he commands them at a time appointed, and that in the Morning very early to fall out upon the En-my; saying, Let half of you fall upon the Doubters, and half of you fall upon the Bloodmen. Those of you that go out against the Doubters, kill and slay, and cause to perish so many of them as by any means you can lay hands on; but for you that go out against the Bloodmen, slay them not,

 but take them alive.

So at the time appointed, betimes in the Morning the Captains went out as they were commanded against the Enemies:
 Captain Goodhope, Captain Charity, and those that were joined with them, as Captain Innocent, and Captain Experience, went out against the Doubters; and Captain Cre- dence, and Captain Patience, with Captain Self-denial, and the rest that were to join with them, went out against the Blood- men.

Now those that went out against the Doubters, drew up into a Body before the Plain, and marched on to bid them Battle:
 But the Doubters remembring their last Success, made a retreat, not daring to stand the shock, but fled from the Prince's Men, wherefore they pursued them, and in their pursuit slew many, but they could not catch them all. Now those that escaped went some of them home, and the rest by fives, nines, and seventeens, like wanderers, went straggling up and down the Country, where they upon the barbarous
 People shewed and exercised many of their Diabolonian Actions; nor did these People rise up in Arms against them, but suffered themselves to be enslaved by them. They would also after this shew themselves in Companies before the Town of Mansoul, but never to abide it; for if Captain Cre- dence, Captain Goodhope, or Captain Expe- rience did but shew themselves, they fled.

Those that went out against the Blood- men, did as they were commanded, they forbore to slay any, but sought to compass them about. But the Bloodmen when they saw that no Emanuel was in the Field, concluded also that no Emanuel was in Man- soul; wherefore they looking upon what the Captains did, to be, as they called it, a fruit of the extravagancy of their wild and foolish fancies, rather despised them, than feared them, but the Captains minding their Business, at last did compass them round, they also that had routed the Doubt- ers came in again to their Aid; so in fine, after some little struggling, for the Blood- men also would have run for it, only now it was too late, (for though they are mischievous and cruel, where they can overcome, yet all Bloodmen are chicken-hearted Men, when they once come to see themselves matcht and equal'd) so the Captains took them, and brought them to the Prince.

Now when they were taken, had before the Prince, and examined, he found them to be of three several Countries, though they all came out of one land.

They are brought to the Prince and found to be of three
 1. One forts.

1. One fort of them came out of Blindmanshire, and they were such as did ignorantly what they did.

2. Another fort of them came out of Blindzealsbire, and they did superstitiously what they did.

1 Tim. 1. 13, 14, 15. Mat. 5. 44. Luk. 6. 22. Joh. 16. 1, 2. Act. 9. 5, 6. Rev. 9. 20, 21. Joh. 8. 40, 41, 42, 43, &c. 3. The third fort of them came out of the Town of Malice in the County of Envy, and they did what they did out of spite and implacableness.

For the first of these, to wit, they that came out of Blindmanshire, when they saw where they were, and against whom they had fought, they trembled, and cried as they stood before him; and as many of these as asked him Mercy, he touched their Lips with his Golden Scepter.

They that came out of Blindzealsbire, they did not as their fellows did, for they pleaded that they had right to do what they did, because Mansoul was a Town whose Laws and Customs were diverse from all that dwelt thereabouts; very few of these could be brought to see their Evil; but those that did, and asked Mercy, they also obtained Favour.

Now they that came out of the Town of Malice, that is in the County of Envy, they neither wept, nor disputed, nor repented, but stood gnawing of their Tongues before him for Anguish and Madnels, because they could not have their will upon Mansoul.

The Blood-men are bound over to answer for what they have done at the Assizes. The Day of Judgment. Now these last, with all those of the other two forts that did not unfeignedly ask pardon for their faults: Those he made to enter into sufficient bond to answer for what they had done against Mansoul, and against her King, at the great and general Assizes to be holden for our Lord the King, where he himself should appoint for the Country and Kingdom of Universe.

So they became bound each Man for himself to come in when called upon to answer before our Lord the King for what they had done as before.

And thus much concerning this second Army that were sent by Diabolus to overthrow Mansoul.

Three or four of the Doubters go in to Mansoul, are entertained, and by whom. But there were three of those that came from the Land of Doubting, who after they had wandred and ranged the Country a while, and perceived that they had escaped, were so hardy as to thrust themselves, knowing that yet there were in the Town Diabolonians, I say they were so hardy as to thrust themselves into Mansoul among them. (Three did I say, I think there were four.) Now to whose House should these Diabolonian Doubters go, but to the House of an old Diabolonian in Mansoul, whose Name was Evil questioning, a very great Enemy he was to Mansoul, and a great doer among the Diabolonians there. Well, to this Evil-questioning's House, as was said, did these Diabolonians come, (you may be sure that they had directions how to find the way thither) so he made them welcome, pitied their Misfortune, and succoured them with the best that he had in his House. Now after a little Acquaintance, and it was not long before they had that, this old Evil-questioning asked the Doubters if they were all of a Town, (he knew that they were all of one Kingdom?) and they answered no, nor not of one Shire neither; for I, said one, am an Electi-on-doubter. I, said another, am a Vocation-doubter; then said the third, I am a Salvation-doubter; and the fourth said he was a Grace-doubter. Well, quoth the old Gentleman, be of what Shire you will, I am perswaded that you are down Boys, you have the very length of my Foot, are one with my Heart, and shall be welcome to me. So they thanked him, and were glad that they had found themselves an harbour in Mansoul. Then said Evil-questioning to them, How many of your Company might there be that came with you to the Siege of Mansoul? and they answered, there were but ten thousand Doubters in all, for the rest of the Army consisted of fifteen thousand Blood-men: These Blood men, quoth they, border upon our Country, but poor Men, as we hear, they were every one taken by Emanuel's Forces. Ten thousand! quoth the old Gentleman, I'll promise you that's a round Company. But how came it to pass since you were so mighty a Number that you fainted, and durst not fight your Foes? Our General, said they, was the first Man that did run for't. Pray, quoth their Landlord, who was that your cowardly General? He was once the Lord Mayor of Mansoul, said they. But pray call him not a cowardly General, for whether any from the East to the West has done more service for our Prince Diabolus, than has my Lord Incredulity, will be a hard question for you to answer. But had they caught him they would for certain have hanged him, and we promise you hanging is but a bad business. Then said the old Gentleman, I would that all the ten thousand Doubters were now well armed in Mansoul, and my self at the head of them, I would see what I could do. Ay, said they, that would be well if we could see that: But Wishes, alas! what are they! and these Words were spoken aloud. Well, said old Evil-questioning, take heed that you talk not too loud, you must be quat and close, and must take care of your selves while you are here, or I'll assure you, you will be snapt.

Why? quoth the Doubters.

Why? quoth the old Gentleman, why, because both the Prince, and Lord Secretary, and their Captains and Soldiers are all at present in Town; yea, the Town is as full of them as ever it can hold. And besides, there is one whose Name is Willberwill, a most cruel Enemy of ours, and him the Prince has made Keeper of the Gates,

What sort of Doubters they are.

Talk betwixt the Doubters and old Evil-questioning.

Gates, and has commanded him that with all the diligence he can, he should look for, search out, and destroy all, and all manner of Diabolonians.

And if he lighteth upon you, down you go though your Heads were made of Gold.

They are overheard.

And now to see how it happened, one of the Lord Willbewill's faithful Soldiers, whose Name was Mr. Diligence, stood all this while listning under old Evil-questioning's Eaves, and heard all the talk that had been betwixt him and the Doubters that he entertained under his roof.

The Soldier was a Man that my Lord had much Confidence in, and that he loved dearly, and that both because he was a Man of Courage, and also a Man that was unwearied in seeking after Diabolonians to apprehend them.

They are discovered

Now this Man, as I told you, heard all the talk that was between old Evil-questioning, and these Diabolonians; wherefore what does he but goes to his Lord, and tells him what he had heard. And saist thou so my trusty, quoth my Lord? Ay, quoth Diligence, that I do, and if your Lord will be pleased to go with me, you shall find it as I have said. And are they there, quoth my Lord? I know Evil-questioning well, for he and I were great in the time of our Apostacy. But I know not now where he dwells. But I do, said his Man, and if your Lordship will go, I will lead you the way to his Den. Go! quoth my Lord, that I will. Come my Diligence, let's go find them out. So my Lord and his Man went together the direct way to his House. Now his Man went before to shew him his way, and they went till they came even under old Mr. Evil-questioning's Wall: Then said Diligence, Hark! my Lord do you know the old Gentleman's Tongue when you hear it? Yes, said my Lord, I know it well, but I have not seen him many a Day. This I know, he is cunning, I wish he doth not give us the slip. Let me alone for that, said his Servant Diligence. But how shall we find the Door, quoth my Lord? Let me alone for that too, said his Man. So he had my Lord Willbewill about, and shewed him the way to the Door. Then my Lord without more ado, broke open the Door, rushed into the House, and caught them all five together, even as Diligence his Man had told him. So my Lord apprehended them, and led them away, and committed them to the Hand of Mr. Trueman the Gaoler, and commanded, and he did put them in Ward. This done, my Lord Mayor was acquainted in the Morning with what my Lord Willbewill had done over Night, and his Lordship rejoiced much at the News, not only because there were Doubters apprehended, but because that old Evil-questioning was taken; for he had been a very great trouble to Mansoul, and much Affliction to my Lord Mayor himself. He had also been sought for often, but no hand could ever be laid upon him till now.

They are apprehended, and committed to Prison.

The Lord Mayor is glad at it.

Well, the next thing was to make preparation to try these five that by my Lord had been apprehended, and that were in the Hands of Mr. Trueman the Gaoler. So the Day was set, and the Court called and come together, and the Prisoners brought to the Bar. My Lord Willbewill had Power to have slain them when at first he took them, and that without any more ado, but he thought it at this time more for the honour of the Prince, the comfort of Mansoul, and the discouragement of the Enemy, to bring them forth to publick Judgment.

They are brought to Trial.

But I say, Mr. Trueman brought them in Chains to the Bar, to the Town-hall, for that was the place of Judgment. So to be short, the Jury was pannelled, the Witnesses sworn, and the Prisoners tried for their Lives, the Jury was the same that tried Mr. No-truth, Pitiless, Haughty, and the rest of their Companions.

And first old Questioning himself was set to the Bar; for he was the Receiver, the Entertainer and Comforter of these Doubters, that by Nation were out-landish Men; then he was bid to hearken to his Charge, and was told that he had liberty to object, if he had ought to say for himself. So his Indictment was read, the manner and form here follows.

Mr. Questioning, 'Thou art here indicted by the Name of Evil-questioning, an Intruder upon the Town of Mansoul, for that thou art a Diabolonian by Nature, and also a hater of the Prince Emanuel, and one that hast studied the ruin of the Town of Mansoul. Thou art also here indicted for countenancing the King's Enemies, after wholesome Laws made to the contrary: For, 1. Thou hast questioned the Truth of her Doctrine and State. 2. In wishing that ten thousand Doubters were in her. 3. In receiving, in entertaining and encouraging of her Enemies, that came from their Army unto thee. What saist thou to this Indictment, art thou guilty or not guilty?' His Indictment.

My Lord, quoth he, I know not the meaning of this Indictment, forasmuch as I am not the Man concerned in it; the Man that standeth by this Charge accused before this Bench, is called by the Name of Evil-questioning, which Name I deny to be mine, mine being Honest-enquiring. The one indeed sounds like the other, but I trow, your Lordships know that between these two there is a wide difference; for I hope that a Man even in the worst of times, and that too amongst the worst of Men, may make an honest Enquiry after things, without running the danger of Death.

His Plea.

Will. Then spake my Lord Willbewill, for

The Lord
Willbe-will's Testimony.

for he was one of the Witnesses: 'My Lord, and you the Honourable Bench, and Magistrates of the Town of Mansoul, you all have heard with your Ears that the Prisoner at the Bar has denied his Name, and so thinks to shift from the Charge of the Indictment. But I know him to be the Man concerned, and that his proper Name is Evil-questioning. I have known him (my Lord) above this thirty Years, for he and I (a Shame it is for me to speak it) were great Acquaintance, when Diabolus that Tyrant had the Government of Mansoul; and I testify that he is a Diabolonian by Nature, an Enemy to our Prince, and an hater of the blessed Town of Mansoul. He has in times of Rebellion been at, and lain in my House, my Lord, not so little as twenty Nights together, and we did use to talk then (for the substance of talk) as he, and his Doubters have talked of late; true, I have not seen him many a Day. I suppose that the coming of Emanuel to Mansoul, has made him to change his Lodgings, as this Indictment has driven him to change his Name; but this is the Man, my Lord.'

The Court.

His Plea.

Then said the Court unto him, hast thou any more to say?

Evil. Yes, quoth the old Gentleman, that I have; for all that as yet has been said against me, is but by the Mouth of one Witness, and it is not lawful for the famous Town of Mansoul, at the Mouth of one Witness to put any Man to Death.

Mr. Dili-gence's Testimony.

Dilig. Then stood forth Mr. Diligence, and said, 'My Lord, as I was upon my watch such a Night at the head of Badstreet in this Town, I chanced to hear a muttering within this Gentleman's House; then thought I, what's to do here? so I went up close, but very softly to the Side of the House to listen, thinking, as indeed it fell out, that there I might light upon some Diabolonian Conventicle. So, as I said, I drew nearer and nearer, and when I was got up close to the Wall, it was but a while before I perceived that there were out-landish Men in the House (but I did well understand their Speech, for I have been a Traveller myself) now hearing such Language in such a tottering Cottage as this old Gentleman dwelt in, I clapt mine Ear to a hole in the Window, and there heard them talk as followeth. This old Mr. Questioning asked these Doubters what they were, whence they came, and what was their Business in these Parts? And they told him to all these Questions, yet he did entertain them. He also asked what Numbers there were of them, and they told him ten thousand Men. He then asked them why they made no more manly assault upon Mansoul? And they told him; so he called their General Coward for marching off when he should have fought for his Prince. Further, this old Evil-questioning wish'd, and I heard him wish, would all the ten thousand Doubters were now in Mansoul, and himself at the head of them. He bid them also to take heed and lye quat, for if they were taken they must die, although they had heads of Gold.

Then said the Court, Mr. Evil-questioning The Court here is now another Witness against you, and his Testimony is full: 1. He swears that you did receive these men into your house, and that you did nourish them there, though you knew that they were Diabolonians, and the King's enemies. 2. He swears that you did wish ten thousand of them in Mansoul. 3. He swears that you did give them Advice to be quat and close lest they were taken by the King's Servants. All which manifesteth that thou art a Diabolonian; for hadst thou been a Friend to the King, thou wouldest have apprehended them.

Evil. Then said Evil-questioning, To the His Plea first of these I answer, the men that came into mine house were strangers, and I took them in, and is it now become a crime in Mansoul for a man to entertain strangers? That I did also nourish them is true, and why should my charity be blamed. As for the Reason why I wished ten thousand of them in Mansoul, I never told it to the Witnesses, nor to themselves. I might wish them to be taken, and so my Wish might mean well to Mansoul, for ought that any yet knows. I did also bid them take heed that they fell not into the Captains hands, but that might be because I am unwilling that any man should be slain, and not because I would have the King's enemies as such escape.

My Lord Mayor then replied, That though it was a Virtue to entertain strangers, yet it was Treason to entertain the King's enemies. And for what else thou hast said, thou dost by words but labour to evade, and defer the Execution of Judgment. But could there be no more proved against thee but that thou art a Diabolonian, thou must for that die the Death by the Law; but to be a Receiver, a Nourisher, a Countenancer, and a Harboured of others of them, yea, of outlandish Diabolonians; yea, of them that came from far on purpose to cut off and destroy our Mansoul: this must not be born.

Then said Evil-questioning, I see how the His Con game will go: I must die for my name, elusion. and for my charity. And so he held his peace.

Then they called the outlandish Doubters to the Bar, and the first of them that was arraigned, was the Election-doubter; so his Indictment was read, and because he was an outlandishman, the substance of it was told him by an Interpreter: to wit, That The Ele-
Dion-Doubter
ried. he was there charged with being an enemy of of Emanuel the Prince, a hater of the Town of Mansoul; and an opposer of her most wholesome Doctrine.

His Plea.

Then the Judge asked him if he would plead? But he said only this, That he confessed that he was an Election-doubter, and that that was the Religion that he had ever been brought up in. And said moreover, if I must die for my Religion, I trow, I shall die a Martyr, and so I care the less.

The Court.

Judge. Then it was replied, To question Election is to overthrow a great Doctrine of the Gospel; to wit, the Omniscience, and Power, and Will of God, to take away the liberty of God with his Creature, to stumble the Faith of the Town of Mansoul, and to make Salvation to depend upon Works, and not upon Grace. It also belyed the Word, and disquieted the minds of the men of Mansoul, therefore by the best of Laws he must die.

The Vocation-doubter tried.

Then was the Vocation-doubter called, and set to the Bar; and his Indictment for substance was the same with the other, only he was particularly charged with denying the Calling of Mansoul.

The Judge asked him also what he had to say for himself?

So he replied, That he never believed that there was any such thing as a distinct and powerful Call of God to Mansoul; otherwise than by the general voice of the Word; nor by that neither, otherwise than as it exhorted them to forbear evil, and to do that which is good, and in so doing a promise of Happiness is annexed.

Then said the Judge, Thou art a Diablonian, and hast denied a great part of one of the most experimental truths of the Prince of the Town of Mansoul; for he has called, and she has heard a most distinct and powerful Call of her Emanuel, by which she has been quickened, awakened and possessed with Heavenly Grace to desire to have Communion with her Prince, to serve him, and do his Will, and to look for her Happiness meerly of his good Pleasure. And for thine Abhorrence of this good Doctrine, thou must die the Death.

The Grace-doubter tried.

Then the Grace-doubter was called, and his Indictment was read, and he replied thereto, That though he was of the land of Doubting, his Father was the off-spring of a Pharisee, and lived in good Fashion among his Neighbours, and that he taught him to believe, and believe it I do, and will, that Mansoul shall never be saved freely by Grace.

Rom. 3.
Eph. 2.

Then said the Judge, Why, the Law of the Prince is plain: 1. Negatively, Not of works: 2. Positively, By grace you are saved. And thy Religion setteth in and upon the works of the flesh; for the works of the Law are the works of the flesh. Besides, in saying (as thou hast done) thou hast robbed God of his Glory, and given it to a sinful man; thou hast robbed Christ of the necessity of his undertaking, and the sufficiency thereof, and hast given both these to the works of the flesh. Thou hast despised the work of the Holy Ghost, and hast magnified the will of the flesh, and of the Legal mind. Thou art a Diablonian, the Son of a Diablonian; and for thy Diablonian principles thou must die.

The Court then having proceeded thus far with them, sent out the Jury, who forthwith brought them in guilty of Death. Then stood up the Recorder, and addressed himself to the Prisoner: You the Prisoners at the Bar, you have been here indicted, and proved guilty of high crimes against Emanuel our Prince, and against the welfare of the famous Town of Mansoul: Crimes for which you must be put to death; and die ye accordingly.

So they were sentenced to the Death of the Cross: The place assigned them for Execution was that where Diabolus drew up his last Army against Mansoul; save only that old Evil-questioning was hanged at the top of Bad-street, just over against his own door.

When the Town of Mansoul had thus far rid themselves of their enemies, and of the troublers of their peace; in the next place a strict Commandment was given out, that yet my Lord Willberwill should with Diligence his man, search for and do his best to apprehend what Town-Diablonians were yet left alive in Mansoul. The names of several of them were Mr. Fooling, Mr. Letgoodship, Mr. Slavishfear, Mr. Nolove, Mr. Mistrust, Mr. Flesh, and Mr. Sloth. It was also commanded that he should apprehend Mr. Evil-questioning's children, that he left behind him, and that they should demolish his House. The children that he left behind him were these, Mr. Doubt, and he was his eldest Son; the next to him was Legal Life, Unbelief, Wrong thoughts of Christ, Clip-promise, Carnal-Sense, Live by feeling, Self-love. All these he had by one wife, and her name was Nohope, she was the Kinswoman of old Incredulity, for he was her Uncle, and when her Father old Dark was Dead, he took her and brought her up, and when she was marriageable he gave her to this old Evil-questioning to wife.

Now the Lord Willberwill did put into Execution his Commission with great Diligence his man. He took Fooling in the streets, and hanged him up in Wantwit-alley, over against his own house. This Fooling was he that would have had the Town of Mansoul deliver up Captain Credence into the hands of Diabolus, provided that then he would have withdrawn his force out of the Town. He also took Mr. Letgoodship one day as he was busie in the Market, and executed him according to Law; now there was an honest poor man in Mansoul, and his name was Mr. Meditation, one of no great great account in the days of Apostacy, but now of repute with the best of the Town. This man therefore they were willing to prefer; now Mr. Letgoodship had a great deal of wealth heretofore in Mansoul, and at Emanuel's coming it was sequestred to the use of the Prince; this therefore was now given to Mr. Meditation, to improve for the common good, and after him to his Son Mr. Thinkwell; this Thinkwell he had by Mrs. Piety his wife, and she was the daughter of Mr. Recorder.

Clip-promise
misetaken

After this my Lord apprehended Clip-promise, now because he was a notorious Villain, for by his doings much of the King's Coin was abused, therefore he was made a publick example. He was arraigned and judged to be first set in the Pillory, then to be whipt by all the Children and Servants in Mansoul, and then to be hanged till he was dead. Some may wonder at the Severity of this man's Punishment, but those that are honest Traders in Mansoul, are sensible of the great abuse that one Clipper of Promises in little time may do to the Town of Mansoul. And truly my Judgment is, that all those of his Name and Life should be served even as he.

Carnal-sense
setaken.

He also apprehended Carnal-sense, and put him in hold, but how it came about I cannot tell, but he brake Prison and made his escape. Yea, and the bold Villain will not yet quit the Town, but lurks in the Diabolonian Dens a Days, and haunts like a Ghost honest mens Houses a Nights. Wherefore there was a Proclamation set up in the Market-place in Mansoul, signifying that whosoever could discover Carnal-sense, and apprehend him and slay him, should be admitted daily to the Prince's Table, and should be made keeper of the Treasure of Mansoul. Many therefore did bend themselves to do this thing, but take him and slay him they could not, though often he was discovered.

Wrong-thoughts of Christ taken.
Self love
taken.

But my Lord took Mr. Wrong thoughts of Christ, and put him in Prison, and he died there, though it was long first, for he died of a lingering Consumption.

Self-love was also taken and committed to custody, but there were many that were allied to him in Mansoul, so his Judgment was deferred, but at last Mr. Self-denial stood up and said, if such Villains as these may be winked at in Mansoul, I will lay down my Commission. He also took him from the croud, and had him among his Souldiers, and there he was brained. But some in Mansoul muttered at it, though none durst speak plainly, because Emanuel was in Town. But this brave act of Captain Self-denial came to the Prince's ears, so he sent for him, and made him a Lord in Mansoul. My Lord Willbewill also obtained great commendations of Emanuel for what he had done for the Town of Mansoul.

Captain
Self-denial made a
Lord.

Then my Lord Self-denial took courage, and set to the pursuing of the Diabolonians with my Lord Willbewill; and they took Live by feeling, and they took Legal life, ^{Live by feeling taken.} and put them in hold till they died. But Mr. Unbelief was a nimble Jack, him they could never lay hold of, though they attempted to do it often. He therefore, and some few more of the subtlest of the Diabolonian tribe, did yet remain in Mansoul, to the time that Mansoul left off to dwell any longer in the Kingdom of Universe. But they kept them to their Dens and Holes; if one of them did appear or happen to be seen in any of the streets of the Town of Mansoul, the whole Town would be up in arms after them, yea the very children in Mansoul would cry out after them as after a Thief, and would wish that they might stone them to death with stones. And now did Mansoul arrive to some good degree of peace and quiet, her Prince also did abide within her borders, her Captains also, and her Souldiers did their duties, and Mansoul minded her trade that she had with the Countrey that was a far off; also she was busie in her Manufacture.

Isa. 33. 17
Phil. 3. 20
Prov. 31.

When the Town of Mansoul had thus far rid themselves of so many of their enemies, and the troublers of their peace; the Prince sent to them, and appointed a Day wherein he would at the Market-place meet the whole people, and there give them in charge concerning some further matters, that if observed would tend to their further safety and comfort, and to the Condemnation and Destruction of their home-bred Diabolonians. So the day appointed was come, and the Townsmen met together; Emanuel also came down in his Chariot, and all his Captains in their state attending of him on the right hand, and on the left. Then was an Oyes made for Silence, and after some mutual Carriages of Love, the Prince began, and thus proceeded.

' You my Mansoul, and the beloved of mine heart, many and great are the privileges that I have bestowed upon you; I have singled you out from others, and have chosen you to myself, not for your Worthiness, but for mine own sake. I have also redeemed you, not only from the dread of my Father's Law, but from the hand of Diabolus. This I have done because I loved you, and because I have set my heart upon you to do you good. I have also, that all things that might hinder thy way to the pleasures of Paradise might be taken out of the way, laid down for thee for thy Soul, a plenary Satisfaction, and have bought thee to myself; A price not of corruptible things as of Silver and Gold, but a price of Blood, mine own Blood, which I have freely spilt upon the ground to make thee mine. So I have reconciled thee, O my Mansoul, to my Father, and interested thee in the Mansion

Emanuel's
Speech to
Mansoul.

'Mansion-houses that are with my Father in the Royal City, where things are, O my Mansoul, that Eye hath not seen, nor hath entred into the Heart of Man to conceive.

'Besides, O my Mansoul, thou see'st what I have done, and how I have taken thee out of the Hands of thine Enemies; unto whom thou had'st deeply revolted from my Father, and by whom thou wast content to be possessed, and also to be destroyed. I came to thee first by my Law, then by my Gospel to awaken thee, and shew thee my Glory. And thou knowest what thou wast, what thou said'st, what thou did'st, and how many times thou rebelled'st against my Father and me; yet I left thee not; as thou see'st this Day, but came to thee, have born thy Manners, have waited upon thee, and after all accepted of thee, even of my meer Grace and Favour; and would not suffer thee to be lost, as thou most willingly would'st have been. I also compassed thee about, and afflicted thee on every Side, that I might make thee weary of thy ways, and bring down thy Heart with Molestation to a willingness to close with thy good and happiness. And when I had gotten a compleat Conquest over thee, I turned it to thy Advantage.

'Thou see'st also what a Company of my Father's Host I have lodged within thy Borders, Captains and Rulers, Soldiers and Men of War, Engines and excellent Devices to subdue and bring down thy Foes; thou knowest my meaning, O Mansoul. And they are my Servants, and thine too, Mansoul. Yea, my design of possessing of thee with them, and the natural Tendency of each of them is to defend, purge, strengthen, and sweeten thee for my self, O Mansoul, and to make thee meet for my Father's Presence, Blessing and Glory; for thou, my Mansoul, art created to be prepared unto these.

'Thou see'st moreover, my Mansoul, how I have passed by thy back-slidings, and have healed thee. Indeed I was angry with thee, but I have turned mine Anger away from thee, because I loved thee still, and mine Anger and thine Indignation is ceased in the Destruction of thine Enemies, O Mansoul. Nor did thy Goodness fetch me again unto thee, after that I for thy Transgressions have hid my Face, and withdrawn my Presence from thee. The way of back-sliding was thine, but the way and means of thy recovery was mine. I invented the means of thy return; it was I that made an Hedge and a Wall, when thou wast beginning to turn to things in which I delighted not. 'Twas I that made thy sweet, bitter; thy day, night; thy smooth way, thorny; and that also confounded all that fought thy Destruction. 'Twas I that set Mr. Godly-fear to work in Mansoul. 'Twas I that stirred up thy Conscience and Understanding, thy Will and thy Affections, after thy great and woful decay. 'Twas I that put Life into thee, O Mansoul, to seek me, that thou mightest find me, and in thy finding, find thine own Health, Happiness and Salvation. 'Twas I that fetched the second time the Diabolonians out of Mansoul; and 'twas I that overcame them, and that destroyed them before thy Face.

'And now, my Mansoul, I am returned to thee in Peace, and thy Transgressions against me, are as if they had not been. Nor shall it be with thee as in former Days, but I will do better for thee than at thy beginning. For yet a little while, O my Mansoul, even after a few more times are gone over thy head,^{1 Chr. 29. 30.}

I will (but be not thou troubled at what I say) take down this famous Town of Mansoul, Stick and Stone to the Ground. And will carry the Stones thereof, and the Timber thereof, and the Walls thereof, and the Dust thereof, and the Inhabitants thereof, into mine own Country, even into a Kingdom of my Father; and will there set it up in such Strength and Glory, as it never did see in the Kingdom where now it is placed. I will even there set it up for my Father's Habitation, for, for that purpose it was at first erected in the Kingdom of Universe; and there will I make it a Spectacle of Wonder, a Monument of Mercy, and the Admirer of its own Mercy. There shall the Natives of Mansoul see all that of which they have seen nothing here; there shall they be equal to those unto whom they have been inferior here. And there shalt thou, O my Mansoul, have such Communion with me, with my Father, and with your Lord Secretary, as is not possible here to be enjoyed. Nor ever could be, shouldest thou live in Universe the space of a thousand Years.

'And there, O my Mansoul, thou shalt be afraid of Murderers no more; of Diabolonians, and their threats, no more. There, there shall be no more Plots, nor Contrivances, nor Designs against thee, O my Mansoul. There thou shalt no more hear the evil Tidings, or the Noise of the Diabolonian Drum. There thou shalt not see the Diabolonian Standard-bearers, nor yet behold Diabolus his Standard. No Diabolonian Mount shall be cast up against thee there, nor shall there the Diabolonian Standard be set up to make thee afraid. There thou shalt not need Captains, Engines, Soldiers, and Men of War. There thou shalt meet with no Sorrow, nor Grief, nor shall it be possible that any Diabolonian should again (for ever) be able to creep into thy Skirts, burrow in thy Walls, or be seen again within thy Borders

' Borders all the Days of Eternity. Life
' shall there last longer, than here you are ' able to desire it should, and yet it shall ' always be sweet and new, nor shall any
' Impediment attend it for ever.

' There, O Mansoul, thou shalt meet
' with many of those that have been like
' thee, and that have been partakers of thy ' Sorrows; even such as I have chosen, and ' redeemed and set apart as thou for my ' Father's Court and City Royal. All they ' will be glad in thee, and thou when thou
' see'st them, shall be glad in thine Heart.

' There are things, O Mansoul, even ' things of thy Father's providing and mine,
' that never were seen since the Beginning ' of the World, and they are laid up with my ' Father, and sealed up among his Treas' ures for thee, till thou shalt come thither
' to enjoy them. I told you before that I ' would remove my Mansoul, and set it up
' elsewhere, and where I will set it, there ' are those that love thee, and those that ' rejoice in thee now, but how much more
' when they shall see thee exalted to Ho' nour. My Father will then send them for ' you to fetch you; and their Bosoms are Psal. 68. 17 ' Chariots to put you in. And you, O my ' Mansoul, shall ride upon the Wings of the ' Wind. They will come to convey, con' duct, and bring you to that, when your ' Eyes see more, that will be your desired
' Haven.

' And thus, O my Mansoul, I have shew-
' ed unto thee what shall be done to thee
' hereafter, if thou canst hear, if thou canst
' understand; and now I will tell thee what
' at present must be thy Duty and Practice,
' until I come and fetch thee to my self,
' according as is related in the Scriptures
' of Truth.

' First, I charge thee that thou dost
' hereafter keep more white and clean the ' Liveries which I gave thee before my last ' withdrawing from thee. Do it, I say,
' for this will be thy Wisdom. They are ' in themselves fine Linnen, but thou must ' keep them white and clean. This will be ' your Wisdom, your Honour, and will be ' greatly for my Glory. When your Gar' ments are white, the World will count
' you mine. Also when your Garments are ' white, than I am delighted in your ways;
' for then your goings to and fro will be ' like a Flash of Lightning, that those that ' are present must take notice of, also their ' Eyes will be made to dazzle thereat. Deck
' thy self therefore according to my bid' ding, and make thy self by my Law
' straight Steps for thy Feet, so shall thy ' King greatly desire thy Beauty, for he is ' thy Lord, and worship thou him.

' Now that thou maist keep them as I ' bid thee, I have, as I before did tell thee,
' provided for thee an open Fountain to ' wash thy Garments in. Look therefore

Vol. II.

' that thou wash often in my Fountain, and ' go not in defiled Garments; for as it is to ' my dishonour and my disgrace, so it will ' be to my discomfort, when you shall walk

' in filthy Garments. Let not therefore my Jude 23
' Garments, your Garments, the Garments
' that I gave thee, be defiled or spotted by
' the Flesh. Keep thy Garments always
' white, and let thy Head lack no Oint' ment.

' My Mansoul, I have oft-times delivered
' thee from the Designs, Plots, Attempts,
' and Conspiracies of Diabolus, and for all
' this I ask thee nothing, but that thou ' render not to me evil for my good, but ' that thou bear in mind my love, and the ' continuation of my kindness to my be' loved Mansoul, so as to provoke thee to ' walk, in thy measure, according to the ' Benefit bestowed on thee. Of old the ' Sacrifices were bound with Cords to the ' Horns of the Golden Altar. Consider ' what is said to thee, O my blessed *Man-
' soul*.

' O my Mansoul, I have lived, I have ' died, I live, and will die no more for thee.
' I live that thou maist not die. Because I ' live thou shalt live also. I reconciled
' thee to my Father by the Blood of my
' Cross, and being reconciled thou shalt ' live through me. I will pray for thee, I ' will fight for thee, I will yet do thee
' good.

' Nothing can hurt thee but Sin; no' thing can grieve me but Sin; nothing can ' make thee base before thy Foes but Sin:
' Take heed of Sin, my Mansoul.

' And dost thou know why I at first, and ' do still suffer Diabolonians to dwell in thy ' Walls, O Mansoul? It is to keep thee
' wakening, to try thy Love, to make thee
' watchful, and to cause thee yet to prize
' my noble Captains, their Soldiers, and my
' Mercy.

' It is also that yet thou maist be made
' to remember what a deplorable Condi' tion thou once wast in. I mean when,
' not some, but all did dwell, not in thy ' Walls, but in thy Castle, and in thy
' Strong-hold, O Mansoul.

' O my Mansoul, should I slay all them ' within, many there be without that would ' bring thee into bondage; for were all ' those within cut off, those without would ' find thee sleeping, and then as in a Mo' ment they would swallow up my Man-' soul. I therefore let them in thee, not to ' do thee hurt, (the which they yet will,
' if thou hearken to them, and serve them)
' but to do thee good, the which they ' must if thou watch and fight against ' them. Know therefore that whatever ' they shall tempt thee to, my design is that ' they should drive thee, not further off,
' but nearer to my Father, to learn the ' War, to make Petitioning desirable to ' thee

7 P

'thee, and to make thee little in thine own 'Eyes. Harken diligently to this my
'Mansoul.

'Shew me then thy love my Mansoul,
'and let not those that are within thy Walls,
'take thy Affections off from him that hath 'redeemed thy Soul. Yea, let the sight of 'a Diabolonian heighten thy love to me.
'I came once and twice, and thrice to save
'thee from the poison of those Arrows that 'would have wrought thy Death; stand
'for me, thy Friend, my Mansoul, against 'the Diabolonians, and I will stand for thee
'before my Father, and all his Court.
'Love me against Temptation, and I will 'love thee notwithstanding thine Infir-
'mities.

'O my Mansoul, remember what my
'Captains, my Soldiers, and mine Engines
'have done for thee. They have fought 'for thee, they have suffered by thee, they 'have born much at thy Hands to do thee
'good, O Mansoul. Hadst thou not had 'them to help thee, Diabolus had certainly 'made a Hand of thee. Nourish them

'therefore my Mansoul. When thou dost
'well, they will be well, when thou dost
'ill, they will be ill, and sick, and weak.
'Make not my Captains sick, O Mansoul,
'for if they be sick, thou canst not be well;
'if they be weak, thou canst not be strong;
'if they be faint, thou canst not be stout
'and valiant for thy King, O Mansoul.
'Nor must thou think always to live by 'Sense, thou must live upon my Word.
'Thou must believe, O my Mansoul, when 'I am from thee, that yet I love thee, and 'bear thee upon mine Heart for ever.

'Remember therefore, O my Mansoul,
'that thou art beloved of me; as I have
'therefore taught thee to watch, to fight,
'to pray, and to make War against my
'Foes, so now I command thee to believe 'that my Love is constant to thee. O my 'Mansoul, how have I set my Heart, my 'Love upon thee, watch.' Behold, I lay none other Burden upon thee, than what thou hast already, hold fast till I come.

Come and Welcome, to Jesus Christ:

Or, a Plain and Profitable

DISCOURSE on John VI. Verse xxxvii.

S H E W I N G

The Cause, Truth, and Manner of the Coming of a Sinner to Jesus Christ; with his Happy Reception, and Blessed Entertainment.

And they shall come which were ready to perish, Isa. XXVII. Verse xiii.

J O H N VI. 37.

All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me; and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

A Little before, in this Chapter, you may read that the Lord Jesus walked on the Sea to go to Caper-naum, having sent his Disciples before in a Ship; but the Wind was contrary: By which Means the Ship was hindred in her Passage. Now about the fourth

Watch of the Night, Jesus came walking on the Sea, and overtook them; at the Sight of whom they were afraid.

Note, When Providences are Black and Terrible to God's People, the Lord Jesus shews himself to them in wonderful Manner; the which, sometimes they can as little

tle bear, as they can the Things that were before terrible to them. They were afraid of the Wind and Water; they were also afraid of their Lord and Saviour, when he appeared to them in that State.

But he said, Be not afraid, it is I.

Note, That the End of the appearing of the Lord Jesus unto his People (though the Manner of his Appearance be never so terrible) is to allay their Fears and Perplexities.

Then they received him into the Ship, and immediately the Ship was at Land whither it went.

Note, When Christ is absent from his People, they go on but slowly, and with great Difficulty; but when he joineth himself unto them, Oh! how fast they steer their Course; how soon are they at their Journey's End.

The People now among whom he last preached, when they saw that both Jesus was gone, and his Disciples, they also took shipping, and came to Capernaum, seeking for Jesus. And when they had found him, they wonderingly asked him, Rabbi, when camest thou hither? But the Lord Jesus flighting their Compliment, answered, Verily, verily ye seek me, not because ye saw the Miracles, but because ye did eat of the Loaves and were filled.

Note, A People may follow Christ far for base Ends, as these went after him beyond Sea for Loaves; A Man's Belly will carry him a great Way in Religion: Yea, a Man's Belly will make him venture far for Christ.

Note again, They are not feigning Compliments, but gracious Intentions, that Crown the Work in the Eye of Christ: Or thus, It is not the Toil and Business of Professors, but their Love to him, that makes him approve of them.

Note again, When Men shall look for friendly Entertainment at Christ's Hand (if their Hearts be rotten) even then will they meet with a Check and Rebuke: Ye seek me not because ye saw the Miracles, but because ye did eat of the Loaves, and were filled.

Yet observe again, He doth not refuse to give, even to these, good Counsel; He bids them labour for the Meat that endureth to Eternal Life. O how willing would Jesus Christ have even those Professors that come to him with Pretences only, come to him sincerely that they may be saved.

The Text, you will find, is, after much more Discourse, with and about this People; and it is uttered by the Lord Jesus, as the Conclusion of the Whole; and intimateth, that since they were Professors in Pretence only, and therefore such as his Soul could not delight in, as such, that he would content himself with a Remnant that his Father had bestowed upon him. As who should say, I am not like to be ho- noured in your Salvation; but the Father hath bestowed upon me a People, and they shall come to me in Truth, and in them will I be satisfied. The Text before may be called Christ's Repose; in the Fulfilling whereof he resteth himself content, after much Labour and many Sermons spent, as it were in vain. As he saith by the Prophet, I have laboured in vain, I have spent my Strength for nought, and in vain, Isa. 49. 4.

But as there he saith, My Judgment is with the Lord, and my Work with my God; so in the Text he saith, All the Father giveth me, shall come to me; and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. By these Words therefore, the Lord Jesus comforteth himself under the Consideration of the Dissimulation of some of his Followers. He also thus betook himself to Rest under the Consideration of the little Effect that his Ministry had in Capernaum, Corazin, and Bethsaida; I thank thee, O Father, said he, Lord of Heaven and Earth, because thou hast hid these Things from the Wise and Prudent, and hast revealed them to Babes; even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy Sight, Mat. 11. 25. Luke 10. 21.

The Text, in the General, consists of two Parts, and hath special Respect to the Father and the Son; as also their joint Management of the Salvation of the People. All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me; and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

The first Part of the Text (as is evident) respecteth the Father and his Gift; the other Part, the Son and his Reception of that Gift.

First, For the Gift of the Father there is this to be considered; to wit,

The Gift it self; and that is a Gift of certain Persons to the Son. The Father giveth, and that Gift shall come: And him that cometh: The Gift then is of Persons; the Father giveth Persons to Jesus Christ.

Secondly, Next you have the Son's Reception of this Gift, and that sheweth itself in these Particulars:

1. In his hearty Acknowledgment of it to be a Gift, The Father giveth me.

2. In his taking notice after a solemn Manner, of All, and every Part of the Gift: All that the Father giveth me.

3. In his Resolution to bring them to himself. All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me.

4. And in his determining, that not any thing shall make him dislike them in their coming. And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

These things might be spoken to at large, as they are in this Method presented to View: But I shall chuse to speak to the Words,

1. By way of Explication.

2. By way of Observation.

First, By way of Explication, (All) that the

the Father giveth me. This Word All, is often used in Scripture, and is to be taken more largely, or more strictly, even as the Truth or Argument, for the sake of which it is made use of, will bear: Wherefore that we may better understand the Mind of Christ, in the Use of it here, we must consider, that it is limited and restrained only to those that shall be saved, to wit, to those that shall come to Christ; even to those whom he will in no wise cast out. Thus also the Words All Israel, is sometimes to be taken (tho' sometimes it is taken for the whole Family of Jacob.) And so All Israel shall be saved, Rom. 11. By All Israel, here he intendeth, not All of Israel, in the largest Sense; for they are not All Israel which are of Israel; neither because they are the Seed of Abraham, are they All Children; but in Isaac shall thy Seed be called; that is, They who are the Children of the Flesh; these are not the Children of God, but the Children of the Promise are counted for the Seed, Rom. 9. 6, 7, 8.

This Word All, therefore must be limited, and enlarged, as the Truth and Argument, for the sake of which it is used, will bear; else we shall abuse Scriptures and Readers, and our Selves, and All. And I, if I be lifted up from the Earth, said Christ, will draw All Men after me, John 12. 32. Can any one imagine, that by All, in this Place, he should mean All, and every individual Man in the World; and not rather, that All, that is consonant to the Scope of the Place? And if by being Lift up from the Earth, he means, as he should seem, his being taken up into Heaven; and if by Drawing All Men after him, he meant a Drawing them into the Place of Glory; then must he mean by all Men, those, and only those, that shall in Truth be eternally saved from the Wrath to come: For God hath concluded them All in Unbelief, that he might have Mercy upon All, Rom. 11. 32. Here again you have All and All, two Alls; but yet a greater disparity between the All made mention of in the first Place, and that All made mention of in the Second. Those intended in this Text, are the Jews, even All of them, by the First (All) that you find in the Words. The second All doth also intend the same People; but yet only so many of them as God will have Mercy upon. He hath concluded them All in Unbelief, that he might have Mercy upon All. The All also in the Text, is likewise to be limited and restrained to the Saved, and them only. But again,

The Word (Giveth) or, bath given, must be restrained after the same Manner, to the same limited Number, All that the Father giveth me. Not all that are given. If you take the Gift of the Father to the Son, in the largest Sense; for in that Sense, there are many given to him that shall never come unto him: Yea, many are given unto him, that He will cast out. I shall therefore first shew you the Truth of this, and then in what Sense the Gift in the Text must be taken.

First, That All that are given to Christ, if you take the Gift of the Father to him, in the largest Sense, cannot be intended in the Text, is evident,

1. Because then all the Men, yea, all the Things in the World must be saved. All Things, said he, are delivered unto me by the Father, Mat. 11. 27. This, I think, no Rational Man in the World will conclude. Therefore the Gift intended in the Text, must be restrained to some, to a Gift that's given by way of Speciality by the Father to the Son.

2. It must not be taken for All, that in any Sense are given by the Father to him, because the Father hath given some, yea, many to him, to be dashed in Pieces by him. Ask of me, said the Father to him, and I will give thee the Heathen for thine Inheritance, and the uttermost Parts of the Earth for thy Possession: But what must be done with them? Must he save them all? No, Thou shalt break them with a Rod of Iron, thou shalt dash them in Pieces like a Potters Vessel, Psal. 2. This method he useth not with them that he saveth by his Grace, but with those that himself and Saints shall rule over in Justice and Severity, Rev. 2. 26, 27. Yet, as you see, They are given to him. Therefore the Gift intended in the Text, must be restrained to Some; to a Gift that is given by way of Speciality by the Father to the Son.

In Psal. 18. he saith plainly, that some are given to him that he might destroy them; Thou hast given me the Necks of mine Enemies, that I might destroy them that hate me, Verse 40. These therefore cannot be of the Number of those that are said to be given in the Text; for those, even all of them shall come to him, and he will in no wise cast them out.

3. Some are given to Christ, that he by them might bring about some for his high and deep Designs in the World. Thus Judas was given to Christ, to wit, that by him, even as he was determined before, he might bring about his Death, and so the Salvation of his Elect by his Blood. Yea, and Judas must so manage this Business, as that he must lose himself for ever in bringing it to pass. Therefore the Lord Jesus, even in his losing of Judas, applies himself to the Judgment of his Father, if he had not in that Thing done that which was right, even in suffering of Judas so to bring about his Master's Death, as that he might by so doing bring about his own Eternal Damnation also.

Those, said he, that thou gavest me, have I kept, and none of them is lost, but the Son of Perdition, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, John 17. 12. Let us then grant that

Judas

Judas was given to Christ, but not as others are given to him, nor as those made mention of in the Text; for then he should not have failed to have been so received by Christ, and kept to eternal Life. Indeed he was given to Christ, but he was given to him to lose him, in the Way that I have mentioned before; he was given to Christ, that he by him might bring about his own Death, as was before determined; and that in the Overthrow of him that did it. Yea, he must bring about his own Death, as was before determined; and that in the Overthrow of him that did it. Yea, he must bring about his Dying for us in the Loss of the Instrument that betrayed him, that he might even fulfil the Scripture in his Destruction, as well as in the Salvation of the rest. And none of them is lost, but the Son of Perdition, that the Scripture might be fulfilled.

The Gift therefore in the Text, must not be taken in the largest Sense, but even as the Words will bear, to wit, for such a Gift as he accepteth, and promiseth to be an effectual Means of Eternal Salvation to. All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me; and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. Mark! They shall come that are in special given to me; and they shall by no means be rejected: For this is the Substance of the Text.

Those therefore intended, as the Gift in the Text, are those that are given by Covenant to the Son; those that in other Places are called the Elect, the Chosen, the Sheep and the Children of the Promise, &c.

These be they that the Father hath given to Christ to keep them; those that Christ hath promised Eternal Life unto; those, to whom he hath given his Word, and that he will have with him in his Kingdom to behold his Glory.

This is the Will of the Father that hath sent me, that of all that he hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last Day. And I give unto them Eternal Life, and they shall never perish; neither shall any Man pluck them out of my Hand. My Father that gave them me, is greater than All: And no Man is able to pluck them out of my Father's Hand. As thou hast given him Power over all Flesh, that he should give Eternal Life to as many as thou hast given him. Thine they were, and thou gavest them me, and they have kept thy Word, I pray for them, I pray not for the World, but for those that thou hast given me; for they are thine. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine; and I am glorified in them.

Keep through thine own Name, those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one as we are. Father, I will, that those whom thou hast given me, may be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me; for thou lovest me before the Foundation of the World, John 6. 39.

Vol. II.

Chap. 10. 28. Chap. 17. 1, 6, 9, 10, 24.

All these Sentences are of the same Import with the Text; and the Alls and Manies, Those, they, &c. In these several Sayings of Christ, are the same with all the given in the Text. All that the Father giveth.

So that (as I said before) the Word all, as also other Words, must not be taken in such Sort as our foolish Fancies or groundless Opinions will prompt us to, but do admit of an Enlargement or a Restrictions according to the true Meaning and Intent of the Text. We must therefore diligently consult the Meaning of the Text, by comparing it with other the sayings of God; so shall we be better able to find out the Mind of the Lord, in the Word which he has given us to know it by.

All that the (Father) giveth.

By this Word (Father) Christ describeth the Person giving; by which we may learn several useful Things: 1. That the Lord God, and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, is concerned with the Son in the Salvation of his People. True, his Acts, as to our Salvation, are diverse from those of the Son, he was not capable of doing that, or those things for us, as did the Son; he died not, he spilt not Blood for our Redemption, as the Son; but yet he hath a Hand, a great Hand in our Salvation too: As Christ saith, The Father himself loveth you, and his Love is manifest in chusing of us, in giving of us to his Son; yea, and in giving his Son also to be a Ransom for us. Hence he is called, The Father of Mercies, and the God of all Comfort. For here even the Father hath himself found out and made Way for his Grace to come to us through the Sides, and the Heart-blood of his well-beloved Son, Col. 1. 12. The Father therefore is to be remembered and adored as one having a chief Hand in the Salvation of Sinners, we ought to give Thanks to the Father, who hath made us meet to be Partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light; for the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the World, 1 John 4. 14. Col. 1. 12. As also we see in the Text, the Father giveth the Sinner to Christ to save him.

Secondly, Christ Jesus the Lord by this Word Father, would familiarize this Giver to us. Naturally the Name of God is dreadful to us, especially when he is discovered to us by those Names that declare his Justice, Holiness, Power and Glory; but now this Word Father, is a familiar Word, it frighteth not the Sinner, but rather inclineth his Heart to Love, and be pleased with the Remembrance of him. Hence Christ also when he would have us to pray with godly Boldness, puts this Word Father into our Mouths, saying, when ye pray, say, Our Father which art in Heaven; concluding thereby, that by the Familiarity that by such a Word is intimated, the the Children of God may take more Boldness to pray for, and ask great Things. I my self have often found, that when I can say but this Word Father, it doth me more good than when I call him by any other Scripture-name; it is worth your noting, that to call God by his Relative Title, was rare among the Saints in Old Testament-times; seldom do you find him called by this Name, no, sometimes, not in three or four Books; but now in New Testament-times, he is called by no Name so often as this, both by the Lord Jesus himself, and by the Apostles afterwards. Indeed the Lord Jesus was he that first made this Name common among the Saints, and that taught them, both in their Discourses, their Prayers, and in their Writings, so much to use it; it being more pleasing to, and discovering more plainly our Interest in God, than any other Expression; for by this one Name we are made to understand, that all our Mercies are the Off-spring of God, and that we also that are called, are his Children by Adoption.

All that the Father (giveth.)

This Word (giveth) is out of Christ's ordinary Dialect, and seemeth to intimate, at the first Sound, as if the Father's Gift to the Son, was not an Act that is past, but one that is present and continuing; when indeed this Gift was bestowed upon Christ, when the Covenant, the Eternal Covenant was made between them, before all Worlds. Wherefore in those other Places, when this Gift is mentioned, it is still spoken of as of an Act that is past: As All that he hath given me; to as many as thou hast given me: Thou gavest them me, and these which thou hast given me. Therefore of necessity this must be the first and chief Sense of the Text. I mean of this Word (giveth) otherwise the Doctrine of Election, and of the Eternal Covenant which was made between the Father and the Son (in which Covenant this Gift of the Father is most certainly comprized) will be shaken, or at leastwise questionable by erroneous and wicked Men: For they may say, That the Father gave not all those to Christ that shall be saved, before the World was made; for that this Act of giving is an Act of Continuation.

But again, this word (giveth) is not to be rejected; for it hath its proper Use, and may signify to us,

First, That though the Act of giving among Men doth admit of the time past, or the time to come, and is to be spoken of with Reference to such time; yet with God it is not so. Things past, or Things to come, are always present with God, and with his Son Jesus Christ: He calleth Things that are not (that is, to us) as though they were. And again, Known unto God are all his Works from the Foundation of the World. All Things to God are present, and so the Gift of the Father to the Son, although to us, as is manifest by the Word, it is an Act that is past, Rom. 4. 17. Acts 15. 10.

Secondly, Christ may express himself thus, to shew, that the Father hath not only given him this Portion in the Lump, before the World was; but that those that he had so given, he will give him again; that is, will bring them to him at the Time of their Conversion; for the Father bringeth them to Christ, John 6. 44.

As it is said, She shall be brought unto the King in Raiment of Needle-work; that is, in the Righteousness of Christ, for it is God imputeth that, to those that are saved, Psal. 45. 14. 1 Cor. 1.

A Man giveth his Daughter to such Man, first in order to Marriage, and this respects the time past, and he giveth her again at the Day appointed, in Marriage: And in this last Sense, perhaps, the Text may have a Meaning; that is, that all that the Father hath (before the World was) given to Jesus Christ, he giveth them again to him, in the Day of their Espousals.

Things that are given among Men, are oft-times best at first, to wit, when they are new; and the Reason is, because all Earthly Things wax Old; but with Christ it is not so: This Gift of the Father is not old and deformed, and unpleasant in his Eyes; and therefore to him 'tis always new. When the Lord spake of giving the Land of Canaan to the Israelites, he saith not, that he had given, or would give it to them; but thus: The Lord thy God giveth thee this good Land, Deut. 9. 6. Not but that he had given it to them, while they were in the Loins of their Fathers, Hundreds of Years before. Yet he saith now, he giveth it to them; as if they were now also in the very Act of taking Possession, when as yet they were on the other side Jordan. What then should be the Meaning? Why, I take it to be this: That the Land should be to them always as new; as new, as if they were taking Possession thereof but now. And so is the Gift of the Father mentioned in the Text to the Son; it is always new, as if it were always new.

All that the Father giveth (Me.)

In these Words, you find mention made of two Persons, the Father, and the Son; the Father Giving, and the Son Receiving, or Accepting of this Gift. This then in the first Place, clearly demonstrateth, That the Father and the Son, though they, with the Holy Ghost, are One and the same Eternal God; yet as to their Personality, are distinct. The Father is One, the Son is One, the Holy Spirit is One. But because there is in this Text mention made but of two of the three, therefore a Word about these two. The Giver and Receiver cannot be the same Person in a proper Sense, in the same Act of Giving, and Receiving. He that giveth, giveth not to himself, but to another; the Father giveth not to the Father, to wit, to Himself; but to the Son: The Son receiveth not of the Son, to wit, of Himself; but of the Father: So when the Father giveth Commandment, he giveth it not to himself, but to another; as Christ saith, He hath given Me a Commandment, John 12. 49. So again, I am one that beareth Witness of my self, and the Father that sent me, beareth Witness of me, John 10. 18.

Further, here is something implied that is not expressed, to wit, that the Father hath not given all Men to Christ; that is, in that Sense as is intended in the Text, though in a larger, as was said before, he hath given him every one of them; for then all should be saved: He hath therefore disposed of some another Way. He gives some up to Idolatry; he gives some up to Uncleaness, to vile Affections, and to a reprobate Mind. Now these he disposeth of in his Anger, for their Destruction, (Acts 7. 42. Rom. 1. 24, 26, 28.) that they may reap the Fruit of their Doings, and be filled with the Reward of their own Ways. But neither hath he thus disposed of all Men; he hath even of Mercy reserved some from these Judgments, and those are they that he will pardon, as he saith, For I will pardon them whom I reserve, Jer. 50. 20. Now these he hath given to Jesus Christ by Will, as a Legacy and Portion. Hence the Lord Jesus says, This is the Father's Will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last Day, John 36. 29.

The Father therefore in giving of them to him to save them, must needs declare unto us these following Things:

1. That he is able to answer this Design of God, to wit, to save them to the uttermost Sin, the uttermost Temptation, &c. Heb. 7. 25. Hence he is said to lay Help on one that is Mighty, Mighty to save: And hence it is again, that God did even of Old promise to send his People a Saviour a great One, Psal. 89. 19. Isa. 63. 1. To save is a great Work, and calls for Almightyness in the Undertaker: Hence he is called the Mighty God, the Wonderful Counsellor, &c. Sin is strong, Satan is also strong, Death and the Grave are strong, and so is the Curse of the Law; therefore it follows, that this Jesus must needs be by God the Father accounted Almighty, in that he hath given his Elect to him to save them, and deliver them from these, and that in despite of all their Force and Power.

And he gave us Testimony of this his Might, when he was employed in that Part of our Deliverance that called for a Declaration of it. He abolished Death; he destroyed him that had the Power of Death; he was the destruction of the Grave; he hath finished Sin, and made an End of it, as to its damning Effects upon the Persons that the Father hath given him; he hath vanquished the Curse of the Law, nailed it to his Cross, triumphed over them upon his Cross, and made a Shew of these Things openly, 2 Tim. 1. 10. Heb. 2. 14, 15. Hos. 13. 14. Dan. 9. 24. Gal. 3. 13. Col. 2. 14, 15.

Yea, and even now, as a Sign of his Triumph and Conquest, he is alive from the Dead, and hath the Keys of Hell and Death in his own keeping, Rev. 1. 18.

2. The Father's giving of them to him to save them, declares unto us that he is and will be faithful in his Office of Mediator, and that therefore they shall be secured from the Fruit and Wages of their Sins, which is Eternal Damnation, by his faithful Execution of it. And indeed it is said, even by the Holy Ghost himself, That he is faithful to him that appointed him; that is, to this Work of saving those that the Father hath given him for that Purpose; as Moses was faithful in all his House: Yea, and more faithful too, for Moses was faithful in God's House, but as a Servant; but Christ as a Son, over his own House, Heb. 3.

And therefore this Man is counted worthy of more Glory than Moses, even upon this Account, because more faithful than he, as well as because of the Dignity of his Person. Therefore in him, and in his Truth and Faithfulness, God rested well-pleased, and hath put all the Government of his People upon his Shoulders. Knowing, that nothing shall be wanting in him, that may any way perfect the Design. And of this, He, to wit, the Son, hath already given a Proof: For when the Time was come, that his Blood was by Divine Justice required for their Redemption, Washing and Cleansing, He as freely poured it out of his Heart, as if it had been Water out of a Vessel; not sticking to part with his own Life, that the Life which was laid up for his People in Heaven, might not fail to be bestowed upon them. And upon this account (as well as upon any other) it is that God calleth him the Righteous Servant, Isa. 53. For his Righteousness could never have been compleat, if he had not been to the uttermost Faithful to the Work he undertook: It is also, because he is faithful and true, that in Righteousness he doth judge and make Work for his People's Deliverance. He will faithfully perform this Trust reposed in him: The Father knows this, and hath therefore given his Elect unto him.

Thirdly, The Father giving of them, to him, to save them, declares that he is, and will be gentle and patient towards them, under all their Provocations and Miscarriages. It is not to be imagined, the Trials and Provocations that the Son of God hath all along had with these People that have been given to him to save: Indeed he

he is said to be a Tryed Stone; for he has been tryed, not only by the Devil, Guilt of Sin, Death, and the Curse of the Law, but also by his People's Ignorance, Unruliness, Falls into Sin, and declining to Errors in Life and Doctrine. Were we but capable of seeing how this Lord Jesus has been tryed even by his People, ever since there was one of them in the World, we should be amazed at his Patience and gentle Carriages to them. It is said, indeed, The Lord is very Pitiful, slow to Anger, and of great Mercy: And indeed, if he had not been so, he could never have endured their Manners as he has done from Adam hitherto. Therefore is his Pity and Bowels towards his Church, preferred above the Pity and Bowels of a Mother towards her Child. Can a Woman forget her sucking Child, that she should not have Compassion on the Son of her Womb? Yea, they may forget, yet I will not forget thee, saith the Lord, Isa. 49. 15.

God did once give Moses, as Christ's Servant, an handful of his People, to carry them in his Bosom, but no farther than from Egypt to Canaan; and this Moses, as is said of him by the Holy Ghost, was the meekest Man that was then to be found on the Earth: yea, and he loved the People at a very great Rate, yet neither would his Meekness nor Love hold out in this Work; he failed and grew passionate, even to provoking his God to Anger under this Work. And Moses said unto the Lord, Wherefore hast thou afflicted thy Servant? But what was the Affliction? Why the Lord had said unto him, Carry this People in thy Bosom as a Nursing Father beareth his Suckling Child, unto the Land that he swore unto their Fathers. And how then? Not I, says Moses, I am not able to bear all this People, because it is too heavy for me: If thou deal thus with me, kill me, I pray thee, out of Hand, and let me not see my Wretchedness, Numb. 11. 11, 12, 13, 14. God gave them to Moses, that he might carry them in his Bosom, that he might shew Gentleness and Patience towards them, under all the Provocations wherewith they would provoke him from that Time, till he had brought them to their Land; but he failed in the Work; he could not exercise it, because he had not that Sufficiency of Patience towards them: But now it is said of the Person speaking in the Text, That he shall gather his Lambs with his Arm, shall carry them in his Bosom, and shall gently lead them that are with Young, Isa. 40. 10, 11. Intimating that this was one of the Qualifications that God looked for, and knew was in him, when he gave his Elect to him to save them.

Fourthly, The Father giving of them to him to save them, declares that he hath a Sufficiency of Wisdom to wage with all those Difficulties that would attend him in his bringing of his Sons and Daughters unto

Glory, 1 Cor. 1. 30. He hath made him to us to be Wisdom; yea, he is called Wisdom it self: And God saith moreover, That he shall deal prudently, Isa. 52. 13. And, indeed, he that shall take upon him to be the Saviour of the People, had need be wise, because their Adversaries are subtle above any. Here they are to encounter with the Serpent, who for his Subtilty outwitted our Father and Mother, when their Wisdom was at highest (Gen. 3.) But if we talk of Wisdom, our Jesus is wise, wiser than Solomon, wiser than all Men, wiser than all Angels; he is even the Wisdom of God. Christ is the Wisdom of God, (Col. 1. 1.) And hence it is, that he turneth Sin, Temptations, Persecutions, Falls, and all Things, for good unto his People, (Rom. 8.)

Now these Things thus concluded on, do shew us also the great and wonderful Love of the Father, in that he should chuse out One every way so well prepared for the Work of Man's Salvation.

Herein indeed perceive we the Love of God. Huram gathered, that God loved Israel, because he had given them such a King as Solomon, (2 Chron. 2. 11.) But how much more may we behold the Love that God hath bestowed upon us, in that he hath given us to his Son, and also given his Son for us.

All that the Father giveth me (shall come.)

In these last Words, there is closely inserted an Answer unto the Father's End in giving of his Elect to Jesus Christ. The Father's End was, that they might come to him, and be saved by him; and that, says the Son, shall be done; neither Sin nor Satan, neither Flesh nor World, neither Wisdom nor Folly, shall hinder their Coming to me. They shall come to me, and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

Here therefore the Lord Jesus positively determineth to put forth such a Sufficiency of all Grace, as shall effectually perform this Promise. They shall come: That is, he will cause them to come, by infusing of an effectual Blessing into all the Means that shall be used to that End. As was said to the evil Spirit that was sent to perswade Ahab to go and fall at Ramoth Gilead; Go: Thou shalt perswade him and prevail also; go forth, and do so, 1 Kings 22. 22. So will Jesus Christ say to the Means that shall be used for the bringing of those to him that the Father hath given him. I say, he will bless it effectually to this very End; it shall perswade them, and shall prevail also. Else, as I said, the Father's End would be frustrate: For the Father's Will is, That, Of all that he hath given him, he should lose nothing, but should raise it up at the last Day; in order next unto himself, Christ the First-fruits, afterwards those that are his, at his Coming, (1 Cor. 15.) But this cannot be done, if there should fail to be a Work of Grace effectually wrought, though though but in any one of them. But this shall not fail to be wrought in them, even in all the Father hath given him to save. All that the Father hath given me shall come to me, &c. But to speak more distinctly to the Words, They shall come. Two Things I would shew you from these Words :

First, What it is to come to Christ.

Secondly, What Force there is in this Promise, to make them come to him.

First, I would shew you what it is to come to Christ. This word Come, must be understood spiritually, not carnally; for many come to him carnally, or bodily, that had no saving Advantage by him: Multitudes did thus come unto him in the Days of his Flesh; yea innumerable Companies. There is also at this Day a formal customary Coming to his Ordinances, and Ways of Worship, which availeth not any thing; but with them I shall not now meddle: For they are not intended in the Text. The Coming then intended in the Text, is to be understood of the Coming of the Mind to him, even the Moving of the Heart towards him. I say, the Moving of the Heart towards him, from a sound Sense of the absolute Want that a Man hath of him for his Justification and Salvation.

This Description of Coming to Christ, divideth it self into two Heads.

First, That Coming to Christ is a Moving of the Mind towards him.

Secondly, That it is a Moving of the Mind towards him from a sound Sense of the absolute Want that a Man hath of him for his Justification and Salvation.

To speak to the First, That it is a Moving of the Mind towards him. This is evident, because Coming hither or thither, if it be voluntary, is by an Act of the Mind or Will; so coming to Christ, is through the inclining of the Will. Thy People shall be willing, Psal. 110. 3. This willingness of Heart, is it which sets the Mind a moving after, or towards him. The Church expresseth this moving of her Mind towards Christ, by the moving of her Bowels. My Beloved put in his Hand by the Hole of the Door, and my Bowels were moved for him, Song 5. 4. My Bowels; the Passions of my Mind and Affections; which Passions of the Affections are expressed by the yearning and founding of the Bowels, the yearning and passionate working of them, the founding of them, or their making a Noise for him, Gen. 43. 30. 1 Kings 3. 26. Isa. 16. 11.

This then is the Coming to Christ, even a Moving towards him with the Mind. And it shall come to pass, That every Thing that liveth, which moveth whithersoever the Water shall come, shall live, Ezek. 47. 9.

The Water in this Text, is the Grace of God in the Doctrine of it: The living Things are the Children of Men, to whom the Grace of God, by the Gospel is preach-

Vol. II.

ed. Now, saith he, Every living Thing which moveth whithersoever the Water shall come, shall live. And see how this Word (Moveth) is expounded by Christ himself in the Book of the Revelations. The Spirit and the Bride say, Come, and let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst, Come. And whosoever will, that is willing, let him take the Water of Life freely, Rev. 22. 17.

So that to move in thy Mind and Will after Christ, is to be coming to him. There are many poor Souls that are coming to Christ, that yet cannot tell how to believe it; because they think that coming to him, is some strange and wonderful Thing; and indeed so it is: But I mean they overlook the Inclination of their Will, the moving of their Mind, and the founding of their Bowels after him; and count these none of this strange and wonderful Thing; when indeed it is a Work of greatest Wonder in this World, to see a Man who was sometimes dead in Sin, possessed of the Devil, an Enemy to Christ, and to all Things spiritually good: I say, to see this Man moving with his Mind after the Lord Jesus Christ, is one of the highest Wonders in the World.

Secondly, It is a moving of the Mind towards him, from a second Sense of the absolute Want that a Man hath of him for his Justification and Salvation. Indeed, without this Sense of a lost Condition without him, there will be no moving of the Mind towards him: A moving of their Mouth there may be; With their Mouth they shew much Love, Ezek. 33. 31. Such a People as this will come as the true People cometh; that is, in Shew and outward Appearance: And they will sit before God's Ministers, as his People sit before them; and they will hear his Words too, but they will not do them; that is, will not come inwardly with their Minds; For with their Mouth they shew much Love, but their Heart (or Mind) goeth after their Covetousness. Now all this is, because they want an effectual Sense of the Misery of their State by Nature; for not till they have that, will they in their Mind move after him. Therefore thus it is said concerning the true Comers, at that Day the great Trumpet shall be blown, and They shall come which were ready to perish in the Land of Assyria, and the Outcasts of the Land of Egypt, and shall worship the Lord in his holy Mountain at Jerusalem, (Isa. 27. 13.) They are then (as you see) the Outcasts, and those that are ready to perish, that indeed have their Minds effectually moved to come to Jesus Christ. This Sense of Things, was that which made the three Thousand come, that made Saul come, that made the Jailors come, and that indeed makes all others come, that come effectually, Acts 2. 8, 16.

Of the true Coming to Christ, the three
7 R Lepers

Lepers were a famous Semblance; of whom you read, 2 Kings 7. 3, &c. The Famine in those Days was sore in the Land, there was no Bread for the People; and as for that Sustenance that was, which was Asses Flesh, and Doves Dung, that was only in Samaria, and of these the Lepers had no Share, for they were thrust without the City. Well, now they fate in the Gate of the City, and Hunger was, as I may say, making his last Meal of them; and being therefore half dead already, what do they think of doing? Why, first they display the dismal Colours of Death before each others Faces, and then resolve what to do, saying, If we say we will go into the City, then the Famine is in the City, and we shall die there; if we sit still here, we die also; Now therefore come, let us fall into the Host of the Syrians; if they save us alive we shall live; if they kill us we shall but die. Here now was Necessity at Work, and this Necessity drove them to go thither for Life, whither else they would never have gone for it. Thus it is with them that in Truth come to Jesus Christ: Death is before them, they see it, and feel it; he is feeling upon them, and will eat them quite up, if they come not to Jesus Christ; and therefore they come, even of Necessity, being forced thereto by that Sense they have of their being utterly and everlastingly Undone, if they find not Safety in him.

These are they that will come: Indeed these are they that are invited to come. Come unto me all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you Rest, Mat. 11. 21.

Take two or three Things to make this more plain; to wit, That Coming to Christ, floweth from a sound Sense of the absolute need that a Man hath of him, as afore.

1. They shall come with Weeping, and with Supplication will I lead them; I will cause them to walk by Rivers of Waters in a plain Way wherein they shall not stumble, Jer. 31. 9. Mind it! they come with Weeping and Supplication; they come with Prayers and Tears. Now Prayers and Tears are the effects of a right Sense of the need of Mercy. Thus a senseless Sinner cannot come, he cannot pray, he cannot cry, he cannot come sensible of what he sees not, nor feels. In those Days, and at that time, the Children of Israel shall come; they and the Children of Judah together, going and weeping: they shall seek the Lord their God; they shall ask their way to Zion, with their Faces thitherward, saying, Come, and let us joyn our selves to the Lord in a perpetual Covenant that shall not be forgotten, Jer. 50. 4, 5.

Secondly, This coming to Christ, it is called a running to him, as flying to him; a flying to him from Wrath to come. By all which terms, is set forth the Sense of the Man that comes; to wit, That he is affected with the Sense of his Sin, and the Death due thereto; that he is sensible that the Avenger of Blood pursues him, and that therefore he is cut off, if he makes not speed to the Son of God for Life, Mat. 3. 7. Psal. 143. 9. Flying is the last work of a Man in danger, all that are in danger do not fly; no, not all that see themselves in danger; all that hear of danger will not fly. Men will consider if there be no other way of escape before they fly. Therefore, as I said, flying is the last thing. When all Refuge fails, and a Man is made to see that there is nothing left him but Sin, Death, and Damnation, unless he flies to Christ for Life; then he flies, and not till then.

Thirdly, That the true coming is from a Sense of an absolute need of Jesus Christ to save, &c. is evident by the Out-cry that is made by them to come, even as they are coming to him, Mat. 14. 30. Acts 2. 37. Acts 16. 30. Lord save me or I perish; Men and Brethren, what shall we do; Sirs, what must I do to be saved (and the like.) This Language doth sufficiently discover that the truly coming Souls, are Souls sensible of their need of Salvation by Jesus Christ; and moreover, that there is nothing else that can help them but Christ.

Fourthly, It is yet farther evident by these few things that follow; It is said that such are pricked in their Hearts, that is, with the Sentence of Death by the Law; and the least prick in the Heart kills a Man, Acts 2. 37. Such are said, as I said before, to Weep, to Tremble, and to be Astonished in themselves at the evident and unavoidable danger that attends them, unless they fly to Jesus Christ, Acts 9. 16.

Fifthly, Coming to Christ is attended with an honest and sincere forsaking all for him. If any Man come unto me and hateth not his Father and Mother, and Wife and Children, and Brethren and Sisters, yea, and his own Life also, he cannot be my Disciple; and whosoever doth not bear his Cross, and come after me, cannot be my Disciple, Luke 14. 26, 27.

By these and the like Expressions elsewhere, Christ describeth the true Comer, or the Man that indeed is coming to him; he is one that casteth all behind his back; he leaveth all, he forsaketh all, he hateth all things that would stand in his Way to hinder his coming to Jesus Christ. There are a great many pretended comers to Jesus Christ in the World. And they are much like to the Man that you read of in Mat. 21. 30. that said to his Father's bidding, I go, Sir, and went not. I say, there are a great many such comers to Jesus Christ; they say, when Christ calls by his Gospel, I come Sir, but still they abide by their Pleasure, and carnal Delights. They come not all, only they give him a courtly Compliment; but he takes notice of it, and will will not let it pass for any more than a Lye. He said, I go Sir, and went not; he dissembled and lied. Take heed of this, you that flatter your selves with your own Deceivings; Words will not do with Jesus Christ: Coming is Coming, and nothing else will go for coming with him.

Before I speak to the other Head, I shall answer some Objections that usually lie in the Way of those that in truth are coming to Jesus Christ.

Objection 1.

Though I cannot deny, but my Mind runs after Christ, and that too as being moved thereto from a Sight and Consideration of my lost Condition, (for I see without him I perish) yet I fear my Ends are not right in coming to him.

Quest. Why, what is thine End in coming to Christ?

Ans. My End is, that I might have Life, and be saved by Jesus Christ.

This is the Objection; well, let me tell thee, that to come to Christ for Life, and to be saved, although at present thou hast no other End, is a lawful and good coming to Jesus Christ. This is evident, because Christ propoundeth Life, as the only Argument to prevail with Sinners to come to him, and so also blameth them because they come not to him for Life: And ye will not come to me that ye might have Life, John 5. 3. Besides, there are many other Scriptures whereby he allureth Sinners to come to him, in which he propoundeth nothing to them but their Safety. As, He that believeth in him shall not perish; he that believeth is passed from Death to Life. He that believeth shall be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned. And believing and coming are all one. So that you see to come to Christ for Life, is a lawful coming, and good.

1. In that he believeth, that he alone hath made Atonement for Sin, Rom. 2.

And let me add over and above, that for a Man to come to Christ for Life, tho' he come to him for nothing else but Life, it is to give much Honour to him.

First, He honoureth the Word of Christ, and consenteth to the Truth of it; and that in these two general Heads.

1. He consenteth to the Truth of all those Sayings that testify, that Sin is most abominable in itself, dishonourable to God, and damnable to the Soul of Man; for thus saith the Man that cometh to Jesus Christ, Jer. 44. 4. Rom. 2. 23. chap. 6. 23. 2 Thess. 2. 12.

2. In that he believeth, as the Word hath said, that there is in the World's best Things, Righteousness and all, nothing but Death and Damnation; for so also says the Man that comes to Jesus Christ for Life. Rom. 7. 24, 25. chap. 8. 2, 3. 2 Cor. 3. 6, 7, 8.

Secondly, He honoureth Christ's Person, in that he believeth that there is Life in him, and that he is able to save him from Death, Hell, the Devil, and Damnation; for unless a Man believes this, he will not come to Christ for Life, Heb. 7. 24, 25.

Thirdly, He honoureth him, in that he believeth that he is authorized of the Father to give Life to those that come to him for it, John 5. 11, 12. chap. 17. 1, 2, 3.

Fourthly, He honoureth the Priesthood of Jesus Christ.

2. In that he believeth that Christ hath more Power to save from Sin by the Sacrifice that he hath offered for it, than hath all Law, Devils, Death, or Sin to condemn: He that believes not this, will not come to Jesus Christ for Life, Acts 13. 38. Heb. 2. 14, 15. Rev. 1. 17, 18.

Thirdly, In that he believeth that Christ, according to his Office, will be most faithful and merciful in the Discharge of his Office. This must be included in the Faith of him that comes for Life to Jesus Christ, 1 John 2. 1, 2, 3. Heb. 2. 17, 18.

Fourthly, Further, He that cometh to Jesus Christ for Life, taketh part with him against Sin, and against the ragged and imperfect Righteousness of the World; yea, and against false Christs, and damnable Errors that set themselves against the worthiness of his Merits and Sufficiency: This is evident, for that such a Soul singeth Christ out from them all, as the Only that can save.

Fifthly, Therefore as Noah, at God's Command, thou preparest this Ark, for the saving of thyself, by which also thou condemnest the World, and art become Heir of the Righteousness which is by Faith, (Heb. 11. 7.) wherefore coming Sinner be content; he that cometh to Jesus Christ believeth too that he is willing to shew Mercy to, and have Compassion upon him (tho' unworthy) that comes to him for Life. And therefore thy Soul lieth not only under a special Invitation to come, but under a Promise too of being accepted and forgiven, Matt. 11. 28.

All these particular parts and qualities of Faith, are in that Soul that comes to Jesus Christ for Life, as is evident to any indifferent Judgment.

For, will he that believeth not the Testimony of Christ concerning the Baseness of Sin, and the insufficiency of the Righteousness of the World, come to Christ for Life? No.

He that believeth not the Testimony of the Word, comes not; He that believeth that there is Life any where else, comes not; He that questions whether the Father hath given Christ Power to forgive, comes not; He that thinketh that there is more in Sin, in the Law, in Death, and the Devil, to destroy, than there is in Christ to save, comes not; He also that questions his faithful ful Management of his Priesthood for the Salvation of Sinners, comes not.

Thou then that art indeed the coming Sinner, believest all this: True, perhaps thou dost not believe with that full Assurance, nor hast thou Leisure to take Notice of thy Faith as to these distinct Acts of it; but yet all this Faith is in him coming to Christ for Life. And the Faith that thus worketh, is the Faith of the best and purest kind; because this Man comes alone as a Sinner, and as seeing that Life is to be had only in Jesus Christ.

Before I conclude my Answer to this Objection, take into thy Consideration these Two Things:

First, That the Cities of Refuge were erected for those that were dead in the Law, and that yet would live by Grace, even for those that were to fly thither for Life from the Avenger of Blood that pursueth after them. And it is worth your noting, that those that were upon their flight thither, are in a peculiar manner called the People of God. Cast ye up, Cast ye up, saith God, prepare ye the way; take up the Stumbling-block out of the Way of my People, Isa. 57. 14. This is meant of preparing the Way to the City of Refuge, that the Slayers might escape thither; which flying Slayers are here by way of Specialty, called the People of God; even those of them that escaped thither for Life.

Secondly, Consider that of Ahab, when Benhadad sent to him for Life, saying, Thus saith thy Servant Benhadad, I pray thee let me live. Though Benhadad had sought the Crown, Kingdom, yea, and also the Life of Ahab, yet how effectually doth Benhadad prevail with him. Is Benhadad yet alive? Saith Ahab, He is my Brother; yea, go ye, bring him to me: So he made him ride in his Chariot, 1 Kings 20.

Coming Sinner, what thinkest thou? If Jesus Christ had as little Goodness in him as Ahab, he might grant an humble Benhadad Life; thou neither beggest of him his Crown, and Dignity: Life, eternal Life will serve thy turn: How much more then shalt thou have it, since thou hast to deal with him who is Goodness and Mercy itself! yea, since thou art also called upon, yea, greatly encouraged by a Promise of Life to come unto him for Life? Read also these Scriptures, Numb. 35. 11, 14, 15. Josh. 20. 1, to 6. Heb. 6. 16, to 21.

Object. 2.

When I say I only seek myself, I mean I do not find that I do design God's Glory in mine own Salvation by Christ, and that makes me fear, I do not come aright.

Ans. Where doth Christ Jesus require such a Qualification of those that are coming to him for Life? Come thou for Life, and trouble not thy Head with such Objections against thyself, and let God and Christ alone to Glorifie themselves in the Salvation of such a Worm as thou art. The Father saith to the Son, Thou art my Servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified. God propoundeth Life to Sinners, as the Argument to prevail with them to come to him for Life; and Christ says plainly, I am come that ye might have Life, John 12. 10. He hath no need of thy Designs, though thou hast need of his Eternal Life, Pardon of Sin, and Deliverance from Wrath to come, Christ propounds to thee, and these be the things that thou hast need of: Besides, God will be Gracious and Merciful to worthless, undeserving Wretches; come then as such an one, and lay no stumbling-block in the Way to him, but come to him for Life, and live, John 5. 34. Ch. 10. 10. Ch. 3. 36. Mat. 1. 21. Prov. 8. 36, 37. 1 Thes. 11. John 11. 25, 26.

When the Gaoler said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved? Paul did not so much as once ask him, what is your End in this Question; do you design the Glory of God in the Salvation of your Soul? He had more wit; He knew that such Questions as these would have been but Fools Baubles, about, instead of a sufficient Salve to so weighty a Question as this. Wherefore, since this poor Wretch lacked Salvation by Jesus Christ, I mean to be saved from Hell and Death, which he knew (now) was due to him for the Sins that he had committed: Paul bids him, like a poor condemned Sinner as he was, to proceed still in this his Way of self-seeking, saying, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, Acts 16. 30, 31, 32. I know, that afterwards, thou wilt desire to glorifie Christ, by walking in the Way of his Precepts; but at present thou wantest Life: the Avenger of Blood is behind thee, and the Devil like a roaring Lion is behind thee; Well, come now, and obtain Life from these; and when thou hast obtained some comfortable perswasion that thou art made Partaker of Life by Christ, then, and not till then, thou wilt say, Bless the Lord, O my Soul, and all that is within me bless his holy Name. Bless the Lord, O my Soul, and forget not all his Benefits; who forgiveth all thine Iniquities, and healeth all thy Diseases; who redeemeth thy Life from Destruction, and crowneth thee with loving Kindness and tender Mercies, Psal. 103. 1, to 6.

Objection 3.

But I cannot believe that I am come to Christ aright, because sometimes I am apt to question his very Being and Office to save.

Thus to do is horrible; but may't thou not judge amiss in this matter.

How can I judge amiss, when I judge as I feel? Poor Soul! Thou may't judge amiss for all that. Why, saith the Sinner, I think that these Questionings come from my Heart.

Ans. Let me answer: That which comes from thy Heart, comes from thy Will

Will and Affections, from thy Understanding, Judgment and Conscience, for these must acquiesce in thy questioning, if thy questioning be with thy Heart. And how say'st thou (for to name no more) dost thou with the Affection and Conscience thus question?

Ans. No, my Conscience trembles when such Thoughts comes into my Mind; and my Affections are otherwise inclined.

Then I conclude, that these things are either suddenly injected by the Devil, or else are the Fruits of that Body of Sin and Death that yet dwells within thee, or perhaps from both together.

If they come wholly from the Devil, as they seem, because thy Conscience and Affections are against them, or if they come from that Body of Death that is in thee, (and be not thou curious in enquiring from whither of them they come, the safest way is to lay enough at thy own door) nothing of this should hinder thy coming, nor make thee conclude thou comest not a-right.

And before I leave thee, let me a little query with thee about this matter.

First, Dost thou like these wicked Blasphemies?

Ans. No, no, their Presence and Working kills me.

Secondly, Dost thou mourn for them, pray against them, and hate thy self because of them?

Ans. Yes, yes, but that which afflicts me is, I do not prevail against them.

Thirdly, Dost thou sincerely chuse (mightest thou have thy choice) that thy Heart might be affected and taken with the things that are best, most Heavenly and Holy?

Ans. With all my Heart, and Death the next Hour (if it were God's Will) rather than thus to Sin against him.

Well then, thy not liking of them, thy mourning for them, thy praying against them, and thy loathing thy self because of them, with thy sincere chusing of those thoughts for thy delectation that are heavenly and holy; clearly declares that these things are not countenanced either with thy Will, Affections, Understanding, Judgment, or Conscience; and so, that thy Heart is not in them, but that rather they come immediately from the Devil, or arise from the Body of Death that is in thy Flesh; of which thou oughtest thus to say, Now then it's no more I that doth it, but Sin that dwells in me, Rom. 7. 16. 17.

I will give thee a pertinent Instance: In Deut. 22. thou may'st read of a betrothed Damsel, one betrothed to her Beloved, one that had given him her Heart and Mouth, as thou hast given thy self to Christ, yet she was met with as she walked in the Field, by one that forced her, because he was stronger than she. Well, what Judgment now doth God, the righteous Judge, pass upon the Damsel for this? The Man only that lay with her, saith God, shall die? But unto the Damsel thou shalt do nothing; there is in the Damsel no Sin worthy of Death. For, as when a Man riseth against his Neighbour, and slayeth him, even so is this Matter; he found her in the Field, and the betrothed Damsel cried, and there was none to save her, Deut. 22. 26, 27.

Vol. II.

Thou art this Damsel, the Man that forced thee with these blasphemous thoughts, is the Devil; and he lighteth upon thee in a fit Place, even in the Fields, as thou art wandring after Jesus Christ; but thou criest out, and by the Cry, did shew, that thou abhorrest such wicked Lewdness. Well, the Judge of all the Earth will do right; he will not lay the Sin at thy Door, but at his that offered the Violence: And for thy comfort, take this into consideration, That he comes to heal them that were oppressed with the Devil, Acts 10. 38.

Objection 4.

But, saith another, I am so heartless, so slow, and, as I think, so indifferent in my coming, that to speak Truth, I know not whether my kind of coming ought to be called a coming to Christ.

Ans. You know that I told you at first, that coming to Christ is a moving of the Heart and Affections towards him.

But, saith the Soul, My Dulness and Indifferency in all holy Duties, demonstrate my heartlessness in coming: and to come, and not with the Heart, signifies nothing at all.

Ans. The moving of the Heart after Christ, is not to be discerned (at all times) by thy sensible affectionate performance of Duties; but rather by those secret Groanings and Complaints which thy Soul makes to God against that Sloth that attends thee in Duties.

Secondly, But grant it be even as thou say'st it is, that thou comest so slowly, &c. yet, since Christ bids them come, that come not at all; surely they may be accepted that come, though attended with those Infirmities, which thou at present groanest under. He saith, And him that cometh: He saith not, If they come sensible, so fast: But, And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. He saith also in the eighth of Proverbs, As for him that wanteth Understanding, that is, an Heart; for oftentimes the Understanding is taken for the Heart: Come eat of my Bread, and drink of the Wine that I have mingled.

Thirdly, Thou may'st be vehement in thy Spirit in coming to Jesus Christ, and yet be plagued with sensible Sloth. So was the Church, when she cried, Draw me, we will run after thee; and Paul, when he said, When I would do Good, Evil is present with Me: (Song 14. Rom. 7. Gal. 5. 19.) The Works, Strugglings and Oppositions of the Flesh are more manifest than are the works of the Spirit in our Hearts, and so are sooner felt than they. What then? Let us not be discouraged at the sight and feeling of our own Infirmities, but run the faster to Jesus Christ for Salvation.

Fourthly, Get thy Heart warmed with the sweet Promise of Christ's Acceptance of the coming Sinner, and that will make thee make more haste unto him. Discouraging Thoughts, they are like unto cold Weather, they benumb the Senses, and make us go ungainly about our Business; but the sweet and warm Gleads of Promise, are like the comfortable Beams of the Sun, which enliveneth and refresheth. You see how little the Bee and the Fly do play in the Air in Winter; why the Cold hinders them from doing it; but when the Wind and Sun is warm, who so busy as they?

Fifthly, But again, he that comes to Christ, flies for his Life: now there is no Man that flies for his Life, that thinks he speeds fast enough on his Journey; no, could he, he would willingly take a Mile at a Step. Oh my sloth and heartlessness, say'st thou! Oh that I had Wings like a Dove, for then would I flee away and be at rest! I would hasten my escape from the windy Storm and Tempest, Psal. 55. 6, 8.

Poor coming Soul, thou art like the Man that would ride full Gallop, whose Horse will hardly Trot; now the desire of his Mind is not to be judged of by the slow Pace of the dull Jade he rides on, but by the Hitching, and Kicking and Spurring, as he sits on his Back. Thy Flesh is like this dull Jade, it will not gallop after Christ; it will be backward, though thy Soul and Heaven lie at stake: but be of good comfort, Christ judgeth not according to the fierceness of outward Motion, Mark 10. 17. but according to the sincerity of the Heart and inward Parts, John 1. 47. Psal. 51. 6. Mat. 16. 41.

Sixthly, Ziba in appearance came to David much faster than did Mephibosheth; but yet his Heart was not so upright in him to David, as was his. 'Tis true, Mephibosheth had a check from David; for, said he, Why wentest not thou with me, Mephibosheth? But when David came to remember that Mephibosheth was Lame, (for that was his Plea) Thy Servant is Lame, 2 Sam. 19. he was content, and concluded he would have come after him faster than he did: And Mephibosheth appealed to David, who was in those Days as an Angel of God, to know all things that are done in the Earth, if he did not believe that the reason of his backwardness lay in his Lameness, and not in his Mind. Why, poor coming Sinner, thou canst not come to Christ with that outward swiftness of Career, as many others do: but doth the reason of thy backwardness lie in thy Mind and Will, or in the Sluggishness of the Flesh? Canst thou say sincerely, The Spirit truly is willing, but the Flesh is weak, Mat. 26. 41. Yea, canst thou appeal to the Lord Jesus, who knoweth perfectly the very inmost thought of thy Heart, that this is true? Then take this for thy comfort; he hath said, I will assemble her that halteth, I will make her that halteth a Remnant, and I will save her that halteth, Micah 4. 6, 7. Zeph. 3. 19. What canst thou have more from the sweet Lips of the Son of God? But,

Seventhly, I read of some that are to follow Christ in Chains; I say, to come after him in Chains; Thus saith the Lord, the Labour of Egypt, and the Merchandize of Ethiopia, and the Sabeans, Men of Stature, shall come over unto thee, and they shall be thine: They shall come after thee: In Chains shall they come over, and they shall fall down unto thee: They shall make Supplication unto thee, saying, Surely there is none else to save, Isa. 45. 14. Surely they that come after Christ in Chains, come to him in great Difficulty, because their Steps by the Chains are straitned.

And what Chain so heavy, as those that discourage thee? Thy Chain which is made up of Guilt and Filth, is heavy; it is a wretched Band about thy Neck, by which thy Strength doth fail, Lam. 1. 14. Chap. 3. 17. But come, though thou comest in Chains; 'Tis Glory to Christ, that a Sinner comes after him in Chains. The chinking of thy Chains, though troublesome to thee, are not, nor can be Obstruction to thy Salvation; 'tis Christ's Work and Glory to save thee from thy Chains, to enlarge thy Steps, and set thee at Liberty. The blind Man though called, surely could not come apace to Jesus Christ, but Christ could stand still, and stay for him. True, He rideth upon the Wings of the Wind; but yet he is Long-suffering, and his Long-suffering is Salvation to him that cometh to him, Mat. 19. 49. 2 Pet. 3. 9.

Eighthly, Hadst thou seen those that came to the Lord Jesus in the Days of his Flesh, how slowly, how hobblingly they came to him, by reason of their Infirmities; and also how friendly, and kindly, and graciously he received them, and gave them the desire of their Hearts, thou wouldest not, as thou dost, make such Objections against thy self, in thy coming to Jesus Christ.

Objection 5.

But (says another) I fear I come too late; I doubt I have staid too long; I am afraid the Door is shut.

Ans. Thou canst never come too late to Jesus Christ, if thou dost come. This is manifest by two Instances.

First, By the Man that came to him at the eleventh Hour. This Man was idle all the Day long: He had a whole Gospel-day to come in, and he play'd it all away save only the last Hour thereof: But at last, at the eleventh Hour he came, and goes in to the Vineyard to work with the rest of the the Labourers, that had born the Burden and Heat of the Day. Well, but how was he received by the Lord of the Vineyard? Why, when Pay-day came, he had even as much as the rest; yea, had his Money first. True, the others murmured at him; but what did the Lord Jesus answer them? Is thine Eye evil because mine is good? I will give unto this last even as unto thee, Mat. 20.

Secondly, The other Instance is, The Thief upon the Cross; he came late also, even as at an hour before his Death; yea he stayed from Jesus Christ as long as he had liberty to be a Thief, and longer too; for could he have deluded the Judge, and by lying words escaped his just condemnation, for ought I know, he had not come as yet to his Saviour: but being convicted, and condemned to die, yea, fastned to the Cross, that he might die like a Rogue, as he was in his Life; behold the Lord Jesus, when this wicked one, even now, desireth Mercy at his hands, tells him, and that without the least reflection upon him, for his former mispent Life; To day thou shalt be with me in Paradise, Luke 23. 43.

Let no Man turn this Grace of God into Wantonness; my Design is now to encourage the coming Soul.

Objection.

But is not the Door of Mercy shut against some before they die?

Ans. Yea; and God forbids that Prayers should be made to him for them, Jer. 7. 16. Jud. 22.

Quest. Then, why may not I doubt that I may be one of these?

Ans. By no means, if thou art coming to Jesus Christ: because when God shuts the Door upon Men, he gives them no heart to come to Jesus Christ. None comes but those to whom it is given of the Father: But thou comest, therefore it is given to thee of the Father.

Be sure therefore, if the Father hath given thee an heart to come to Jesus Christ, the Gate of Mercy yet stands open to thee: For it stands not with the Wisdom of God to give strength to come to the Birth, and yet to shut up the Womb, Isa. 66. 9. To give Grace to come to Jesus Christ, and yet shut up the Door of his Mercy upon thee. Incline thine ear, saith he, and come unto me. Hear, and your Souls shall live, and I will make an everlasting Covenant with you, even the sure Mercies of David, Isa. 55. 3.

Objection.

But it is said, that some knocked when the Door was shut.

Ans. Yes; But the Texts in which these Knockers are mentioned, are to be referred unto the Day of Judgment, and not to the coming of the Sinner to Christ in this Life. See the Texts, Mat. 25. 11. Luke 13. 24, 25.

These therefore concern thee nothing at all, that art coming to Jesus Christ, thou art coming Now! Now is the acceptable time, behold now is the Day of Salvation, 2 Cor. 6. 2. Now God is upon the Mercy-seat; now Christ Jesus sits by, continually pleading the Victory of his Blood for Sinners: and now, even as long as this World lasts, this word of the Text shall still be free, and fully fulfilled; And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

Sinner, the greater Sinner thou art, the greater need of Mercy thou hast, and the more will Christ be glorified thereby: Come then, come and try: Come taste and see how good the Lord is to an Undeserving Sinner.

Objection 6.

But (says another) I am fallen since I began to come to Christ; therefore I fear I did not come aright, and so consequently, that Christ will not receive me.

Ans. Falls are dangerous; for they dishonour Christ, wound the Conscience, and cause the Enemies of God to speak reproachfully. But it is no good Argument, I am fallen, therefore I was not coming aright to Jesus Christ. If David, and Solomon, and Peter had thus objected against themselves, they had added to their Grievings; and yet at least, as much cause as thou. A Man whose Steps are ordered by the Lord, and whose Goings the Lord delights in, may yet be overtaken with a Temptation that may cause him to fall, Psal. 37. 23, 24. Did not Aaron fall; yea, and Moses himself? What shall we say of Hezekiah and Jehosaphat? There are therefore Falls and Falls; Falls pardonable, and Falls unpardonable: Falls unpardonable, are Falls against Light, from the Faith, to the despising of, and trampling upon Jesus Christ and his blessed Undertakings, (Heb. 6. 2, 3, 4, 5. Chap. 10. 28, 29.) Now, as for such, there remains no more Sacrifice for Sin: Indeed, they have no Heart, no Mind, no Desire to come to Jesus Christ for Life, therefore they must perish: Nay, says the Holy Ghost, 'Tis impossible that they should be renewed again unto Repentance. Therefore, These God hath no compassion for, neither ought we; but for other Falls, though they be dreadful (and God will chastise his People for them) they do not prove thee a graceless Man, one not come to Jesus Christ for Life.

It is said of the Child in the Gospel, That, while he was yet a coming, the Devil threw him down, and tore him, Luke 9. 4.

Dejected Sinner, it is no wonder that thou hast caught a Fall in coming to Jesus Christ: Is it not rather to be wondred at, that thou hast not caught before this, a Thousand times a Thousand Falls? considering:

1. What Fools we are by Nature.
2. What Weaknesses are in us.

3. What

3. What mighty Powers the fallen Angels, our implacable Enemies, are.

4. Considering also how often the Coming-man is benighted in his Journey, and also what Stumbling-blocks do lie in his Way.

5. Also his Familiars (that were so before) now watch for his Halting, and seek by what means they may, to cause him to fall by the Hand of their strong ones.

What then? Must we, because of these Temptations, incline to Fall? No; Must we not fear Falls? Yes, Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall, 1 Cor. 10. 12. Yet let him not utterly be cast down; The Lord upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up those that are bowed down. Make not light of Falls: Yet hast thou fallen? Ye have, said Samuel, done all this Wickedness; yet turn not aside from following the Lord, but serve him with a perfect Heart, and turn not aside, for the Lord will not forsake his People (and he counted the coming Sinner one of them) because it hath pleased the Lord to make you his People, 1 Sam. 12. 20, 21, 22.

(Shall come to me.)

Now we come to shew what force there is in this Promise to make them come to him. All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me.

I will speak to this Promise;

First, In General.

Secondly, In Particular.

In General. This Word (Shall) is confined to These (All) that are given to Christ. All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me. Hence I conclude,

First, That coming to Jesus Christ aright, is an effect of their being (of God) given to Christ before. Mark, They shall come; Who? Those that are given: They come then, because they were given: Thine they were, and thou gavest them me. Now, this is, indeed, a singular Comfort to them that are coming in Truth to Christ, to think that the Reason why they come, is, Because they were given of the Father before to him. Thus then may the coming Soul reason with himself as he comes. Am I coming indeed to Jesus Christ? This coming of mine is not to be attributed to me, or my Goodness, but to the Grace and Gift of God to Christ; God gave first my Person to him, and therefore hath now given me a Heart to come.

Secondly, This Word shall come, maketh thy coming, not only the Fruit of the Gift of the Father, but also of the Purpose of the Son; for these Words are a divine Purpose; they shew us the Heavenly Determination of the Son. The Father hath given them to me, and they shall; yea, they shall come to me. Christ is as full in his Resolution to save those given to him, as is the Father in given of them. Christ prized the Gift of his Father, he will lose nothing of it; he is resolved to save it every whit by his Blood, and to raise it up again at the last Day: and thus he fulfils his Father's Will, and accomplisheth his own Desires, John 6. 39.

Thirdly, These words, shall come, make thy coming to be also the effect of an absolute Promise; coming Sinner, thou art concluded in a Promise: thy coming is the Fruit of the Faithfulness of an absolute Promise. 'Twas this Promise, by the Virtue of which thou at first receivedst strength to come: And this is the Promise, by the Virtue of which thou shalt be effectually brought to him. 'It was said to Abraham, At this time I will come, and Sarah shall have a Son. This Son was Isaac. Mark! Sarah shall have a Son: There is the Promise; and Sarah had a Son: There was the fulfilling of the Promise: And therefore was Isaac called, the Child of the Promise, Gen. 17. 19. chap. 18. 10. Rom. 9. 9.

Sarah shall have a Son: But how if Sarah be past Age? why still the Promise continues to say, Sarah shall have a Son: But how if Sarah be Barren? Why still the Promise says, Sarah shall have a Son. But Abraham's Body is now dead; why the Promise is still the same: Sarah shall have a Son. Thus you see what Virtue there is in an absolute Promise: It carrieth enough in its own Bowels to accomplish the Thing promised, whether there be means or no in us to effect it. Wherefore this Promise in the Text, being an absolute Promise, by Virtue of it, not by Virtue of our selves, or by our own Inducements do we come to Jesus Christ, for so are the words of the Text; All that the Father giveth me shall to me.

Therefore is every sincere Comer to Jesus Christ called also a Child of the Promise. Now we Brethren, as Isaac was, are the Children of the Promise, Gal. 4. 28. That is, We are the Children that God hath promised to Jesus Christ, and given to him; yea, the Children that Jesus Christ hath promised shall come to him. All that the Father giveth me shall come.

Fourthly, This word (shall come) engageth Christ to communicate all manner of Grace to those thus given him to make them effectually come to him. They shall come; that is, not if they will, but if Grace all Grace, if Power, Wisdom, a new Heart, and the Holy Spirit, and all joining together can make them come. I say, This word (shall come) being absolute, hath no dependance upon our own Will or Power, or Goodness; but it engageth for us even God himself; Christ himself, the Spirit himself. When God had made the absolute Promise to Abraham, That Sarah should have a Son, Abraham did not at all look at any Qualifications in himself, because the Promise looked at none; but as God had by the Promise absolutely promised him a Son; so he considered now not his own Body now dead, dead, nor yet the Barrenness of Sarah's Womb. He staggered not at the Promise of God through Unbelief, but was strong in Faith giving Glory to God, being fully persuaded that what he had promised, he was able to perform, Rom. 4. He had promised, and had promised absolutely, Sarah shall have a Son: Therefore Abraham looks that He, to wit, God, must fulfil the Condition of it. Neither is this Expectation of Abraham disapproved by the Holy Ghost, but accounted good and laudable; it being that by which he gives Glory to God. The Father also hath given to Christ a certain Number of Souls for him to save; and he himself hath said, They shall come to him. Let the Church of God then live in a joyful Expectation of the utmost Accomplishment of this Promise; for assuredly it shall be fulfilled, and not one Thousandth part of a Tittle thereof shall fail: They shall come to me.

And now, before I go any farther, I will more particularly enquire into the Nature of an absolute Promise.

First, We call that an absolute Promise, that is made without any Condition: or more fully, thus; That is an absolute Promise of God, or of Christ, which maketh over to this or that Man any Saving Spiritual Blessing, without a Condition to be done on our part for the obtaining thereof. And this we have in Hand is such an one: Let the best Master of Arts on Earth shew me, if he can, any Condition in this Text depending upon any Qualification in us, which is not by the same Promise concluded, shall be by the Lord Jesus effected in us.

Secondly, An absolute Promise therefore is, as we say, without if or and; that is, it requireth nothing of us, that itself might be accomplished. It saith not, They shall, if they will; but, They shall: not, they shall if they use the means; but, they shall. You may say, That a Will, and the Use of the Means is supposed, though not expressed. But I answer, No, by no means; that is as a Condition of this Promise; If they be at all included in the Promise, they are included there as the Fruit of the absolute Promise, not as if it expected the Qualification to arise from us. Thy People shall be willing in the Day of thy Power, Psal. 110. 3. That is another absolute Promise: But doth that Promise suppose a Willingness in us, as a Condition of God's making us willing? They shall be willing, if they are willing; or, they shall be willing, if they will be willing. This is ridiculous; there is nothing of this supposed. The Promise is absolute, as to us; all that it engageth for its own Accomplishment is, the mighty Power of Christ, and his Faithfulness to accomplish.

The difference therefore betwixt the absolute and conditional Promise is this.

First, They differ in their Terms. The absolute Promises say, I will, and you shall: The other, I will, if you will; or do this, and thou shalt live, Jer. 31. 31, 32, 33. Ezek. 36. 24, to 34. Heb. 8. 7. to 13. Jer. 4. 1. Ezek. 18. 30, 31, 32, Mat. 19. 21.

Secondly, They differ in their Way of communicating of good Things to Men; the absolute ones communicate Things freely, only of Grace; the other, if there be that Qualification in us, that the Promise calls for, not else.

Thirdly, The absolute Promises therefore engage God, the other engage us: I mean God only, us only.

Fourthly, Absolute Promises must be fulfilled: conditional may, or may not be fulfilled. The absolute ones must be fulfilled, because of the Faithfulness of God, the other may not, because of the Unfaithfulness of Men.

Fifthly, Absolute Promises have therefore a Sufficiency in themselves to bring about their own fulfillings; the conditional have not so. The absolute Promise is therefore a Beg-Bellied Promise, because it hath in itself a Fulness of all desired Things for us; and will, when the Time of that Promise is come, yield to us Mortals that which will verily save us; yea, and make us capable of answering of the Demands of the Promise that is conditional. Wherefore, though there be a Real, yea, an Eternal Difference in these Things (with others) betwixt the conditional and absolute Promise; yet again, in other respects, there is a blessed Harmony betwixt them; as may be seen in these Particulars.

First, The conditional Promise calls for Repentance, the absolute gives it, Acts 5. 30, 31.

Secondly, The conditional Promise calls for Faith, the absolute Promise gives it, Zeph. 3. 12. Rom. 15. 12.

Thirdly, The conditional Promise calls for a new Heart, the absolute Promise gives it, Ezek. 36.

Fourthly, The conditional Promise calleth for Holy Obedience, the absolute Promise giveth it, or causeth it, Ezek. 36. 27.

And as they harmoniously agree in this; so again the conditional Promise blesteth the Man, who by the absolute Promise is endowed with its Fruit: As for Instance;

First, The absolute Promise maketh Men upright, and then the conditional follows, saying, Blessed are the Undeiled in the Way, who walk in the Way of the Lord, Psal. 119. 1.

Secondly, The absolute Promise giveth to this Man the Fear of the Lord, and then the conditional followeth, saying, Blessed is everyone that feareth the Lord, Psal. 128. 1.

Thirdly, The absolutely Promise giveth Faith, and then this conditional follows, saying, saying, Blessed is he that believeth, Zeph. 3. 12. Luke. 1. 45.

Fourthly, The absolute Promise brings free Forgiveness of Sins; and then says the conditional, Blessed are they whose Transgressions are forgiven, and whose Sin is covered, Rom. 4. 7, 8.

Fifthly, The absolute Promise says, That God's Elect should hold out to the End; then the conditional follows with his Blessings; He that shall endure to the End, the same shall be saved, 1 Pet. 1. 4, 5, 6. Mat. 24.

Thus do the Promises gloriously serve one another and us, in this their harmonious Agreement.

Now the Promise under Consideration, is an absolute Promise: All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me.

This Promise therefore is, as is said, a Big-bellied Promise, and hath in it self all those things to bestow upon us, that the conditional calleth for at our Hands. They shall come! Shall they come? Yes, They shall come. But how if they want those Things, those Graces, Power, and Heart, without which they cannot come? Why, Shall come answereth all this, and all things else that may in this Matter be objected. And here I will take the liberty to amplify Things.

Objection 1.

But they are dead, dead in Trespasses and Sins, how shall they then come?

Ans. Why, shall-come can raise them from this Death. The Hour is coming, and now is, That the Dead shall hear the Voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live. Thus therefore is this impediment by shall-come removed out of the way. They shall Heal, they shall Live.

Objection 2.

But they are Satan's Captives; he takes them Captives at his Will, and he is stronger than they: How then can they come?

Ans. Why, shall-come hath also provided an help for this. Satan hath bound that Daughter of Abraham so, that she could by no means lift up her self; but yet shall-come set her free both in Body and Soul. Christ will have them turned from the Power of Satan to God. But what! Must it be, if they turn themselves, or do somewhat to merit of him to turn them? No, he will do it freely, of his own good will. Alas! Man whose Soul is possessed by the Devil! Is turned whithersoever that Governour listeth, is taken Captive by him, notwithstanding its natural Powers at his Will; but what will he do? Will he hold him when shall-come puts forth it self (will he then let him) for coming to Jesus Christ? No, that cannot be! His Power is but the Power of a fallen Angel, but shall-come is the Word of God: Therefore shall-come must be fulfilled; and the Gates of Hell shall not prevail against him.

There were seven Devils in Mary Mag-aalen, too many for her to get from under the Power of; but when the time was come, that shall-come was to be fulfilled upon her, they gave place, fly from her, and she comes (indeed) to Jesus Christ, according as it is written; All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me.

The Man that was possessed with a Legion, Mark 5. was too much by them captivated, for him by humane Force to come; yea had he had (to boot) all the Men under Heaven to help him, had he that said, He shall come, with-held his mighty Power: but when this Promise was to be fulfilled upon him, then he comes; nor could all their Power hinder his coming. It was also this (shall come) that preserved him from Death; when by these Evil Spirits he was hurled hither and thither; and it was by the vertue of (shall come) that at last he was set at Liberty from them, and enabled indeed to come to Christ. All that the Father giveth me shall come to me.

Objection 3.

They shall (you say;) but how if they will not; and if so, than what can shall come do?

Ans. True, there are some Men say, We are Lords, we will come no more under thee, Jer. 2. 31. But as God says in another case, (if they are concerned in Shall-come to me) They shall know those Words shall stand, mine or theirs, Jer. 44. 28. Here then is the case, we must now see who will be the Liar; he that saith, I will not, or he that saith, He shall come to me. You shall come, says God: I will not come, saith the Sinner. Now as sure as he is concerned in this Shall come, God will make that Man eat his own Words; for I will not, is the unadvised conclusion of a crazy-headed Sinner: but Shall come, was spoken by him that is of Power to perform his Word. Son, go work to day in my Vineyard, said the Father: But he answered, and said, I will not come. What now? Will he be able to stand to his Refusal? Will he pursue his desperate denial? No, he afterwards repented and went. But how came he by that Repentance? Why, it was wrapped up for him in the absolute Promise; and therefore notwithstanding he said, I will not, he afterwards repented and went: By this Parable Jesus Christ sets forth the Obstinacy of the Sinners of the World, as touching their coming to him; they will not come, though threatned; yea, though Life be offered them upon condition of coming.

But now, when shall-come, the Absolute Promise of God, comes to be fulfilled upon them, then they come; because by that Promise a Cure is provided against the Rebellion of their Will: Thy People shall be willing in the Day of thy Power, Psal. 110. 3. Thy People, What People? Why the People that the Father hath given thee. The Obstinacy

Obstinacy and Plague that is in the Will of that People, shall be taken away: And they shall be made willing, shall-come will make them willing to come to thee.

He that had seen Paul in the midst of his Outrages against Christ, his Gospel, and People, would hardly have thought that he would ever have been a Follower of Jesus Christ, especially since he went not against his Conscience in his persecuting of them. He thought verily that he ought to do what he did. But we may see what (shall-come) can do, when it comes to be fulfilled upon the Soul of a Rebellious Sinner, he was a chosen Vessel, given by the Father to the Son; and now the time being come, that (shall-come) was to take him in hand, behold he is over-mastered, astonished, and with trembling and reverence, in a Moment becomes willing to be obedient to the Heavenly Call, Acts 9.

And were not they far gone (that you read of, Acts 2.) who had their Hands and Hearts in the Murder of the Son of God; and to shew their resolvedness never to repent of that horrid Fact, said, His Blood be on us and our Children? But must their Obstinacy rule? Must they be bound to their own Ruin by the Rebellion of their stubborn Wills: No, not Those of These the Father gave to Christ; wherefore at the Times appointed, shall-come breaks in among them; the absolute Promise takes them in Hand; and then they come indeed, crying out to Peter and the rest of the Apostles, Men and Brethren what shall we do? No stubbornness of Men's Will can stand, when God hath absolutely said the contrary; shall-come can make them come as Doves to their Windows, that had afore resolved never to come to him.

The Lord spake unto Manasseth, and to his People (by the Prophets) but would he hear? No, he would not: But shall Manasseth come off thus? No, he shall not. Therefore, he being also one of those whom the Father had given to the Son, and so falling within the bounds and reach of shall-come; at last shall-come takes him in Hand, and then he comes indeed. He comes bowing and bending; he humbles himself greatly and made Supplication to the Lord, and prayed unto him, and he was entreated of him, and had Mercy upon him, 2 Chron. 3. 33.

The Thief upon the Cross, at first, did rail with his Fellow, upon Jesus Christ; but he was one that the Father had given to him, and therefore, shall-come must handle him and his rebellious Will. And behold, so soon as he is dealt withal, by virtue of that Absolute Promise, how soon he buckleth, leaves his railing, falls to supplicating of the Son of God for Mercy; Lord, saith he, Remember me when thou comest into thy Kingdom, Mat. 27. 44. Luke 23. 40, 41, 42.

Objection 4.

They shall come, say you, but how if they be blind, and see not the Way? For some are kept off from Christ, not only by the Obstinacy of their Will, but by the Blindness of their Mind: Now, if they be Blind, how shall they come?

Ans. The Question is not, Are they blind? But are they within the reach and power of shall-come? If so, that Christ that said, They shall come, will find them Eyes, or a Guide, or both, to bring them to himself. Must, is for the King. If they shall come, they shall come: No Impediment shall hinder.

The Thessalonians darkness did not hinder them from being the Children of Light; I am come, said Christ, that they that see not, might see. And if he saith, See ye blind that have Eyes; Who shall hinder it? Eph. 5. 8. John 9. 39. Isa. 39. 18. Chap. 43. 8.

This Promise therefore is, as I said, a Big-bellied Promise, having in the Bowels of it, all Things that shall occur to the compleat fulfilling of it self, They shall come. But 'tis objected, that they are blind: Well, Shall come is still the same, and continueth to say, They shall come to me. Therefore he saith again, I will bring the Blind by a way that they know not, I will lead them in Paths that they know not. I will make Darkness Light before them, and crooked Things straight; these Things will I do unto them, and not forsake them, Isa. 42. 16.

Mark, I will bring them, though they be blind; I will bring them by a way they know not; I will, I will; and therefore, they shall come to me.

Objection 5.

But how if they have exceeded many in Sin, and so made themselves far more abominable? They are the Ring-leading Sinners in the Country, the Town or Family.

Ans. What then? Shall that hinder the Execution of shall-come? It is not Transgressions, nor Sins, nor all their Transgression in all their Sins (if they by the Father are given to Christ to save them) that shall hinder this Promise, that it should not be fulfilled upon them. In those Days, and at that Time, saith the Lord, the Iniquities of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the Sins of Judah, and they shall not be found, Jer. 32. 30. Not that they had none (for they abounded in Transgression, 2 Chron. 33. 9. Ezek. 16. 48.) but God would pardon, cover, hide, and put them away, by virtue of his absolute Promise, by which they are given to Christ to save them. And I will cleanse them from all their Iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will pardon all their Iniquity, whereby they have transgressed against me. And it shall be to me for a Name of Joy, a Praise, and an Honour before all the Nations of the Earth, which shall hear of all the good I do unto them; and they shall fear and and tremble for all the Goodnoys and all the Prosperity that I procure in it, Jer. 33. 8, 9.

Objection 6.

But how if they have not Faith and Repentance? How shall they come then?

Ans. Why, he that saith, They shall come, shall he not make it good? If they shall come, they shall come; and he that hath said, they shall come, if Faith and Repentance be the way to come, as indeed they are, then Faith and Repentance shall be given to them; for shall come must be fulfilled on them.

First, Faith shall be given them: I will also leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor People, and they shall trust in the Name of the Lord. There shall be a Root of Jesse, and he shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; and in him shall the Gentiles trust, Zeph. 3. 12. Rom. 15. 12.

Secondly, They shall have Repentance: He is exalted to give Repentance; They shall come weeping, and seeking the Lord their God: And again, with weeping and supplication will I lead them, Acts 5. 30, 31. Jer. 31. 9.

I told you before, that an absolute Promise hath all conditional ones in the Belly of it, and also provision to answer all those Qualifications that they propound to him that seeketh for their Benefit: And it must be so; for if shall come be an absolute Promise, as indeed it is, then it must be fulfilled, upon every of those concerned therein. I say, it must be fulfilled, if God can by Grace, and his absolute Will, fulfil it. Besides, since coming and believing is all one, (according to Joh. 6. 35.) He that cometh to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth in me shall never thirst.

Then, when he saith, they shall come, 'tis as much as to say, they shall believe, and consequently repent to the saving of the Soul. So then the present want of Faith and Repentance, cannot make the Promise of God of none effect; because that this Promise hath in it to give, what others call for and expect. I will give them an Heart, I will give them my Spirit, I will give them Repentance, I will give them Faith. Mark these Words! If any Man be in Christ, he is a new Creature. But how came he to be a New Creature, since none can create but God? Why, God indeed doth make them New Creatures. Behold, saith he, I make all Things new. And hence it follows even after he had said, they are New Creatures; And all Things are of God: that is, all these new Creatures standeth in the several Operations, and special Workings of the Spirit of Grace, who is God, 2 Cor. 5. 17, 18.

Objection 7.

But how shall they escape all those dangerous and damnable Opinions, that like Rocks and Quicksands are in the way in which they are going?

Ans. Indeed this Age is an Age of Errors, if ever there was an Age of Errors in the World; but yet the Gift of the Father, laid claim to by the Son in the Text, must needs escape them, and in conclusion come to him. There are a Company of Shall comes in the Bible that doth secure them. Not but that they may be assaulted by them; yea, and also for the time intangled and detained by them from the Bishop of their Souls; but these Shall comes will break those Chains and Fetters, that those given to Christ are intangled in, and they shall come, because he hath said they shall come to him.

Indeed, Errors are like that Whore, of whom you read in the Proverbs, that sitteth in her Seat in the High Places of the City, To call Passengers who go right on their way, (Prov. 9. 13, 14, 15, 16.) But the Persons, as I said, that by the Father are given to the Son to save them, are fit one time or other, secured by shall come to me.

And therefore, of such it is said, God will guide them with his Eye, with his Counsel, by his Spirit, and that in the way of Peace, by the Springs of Water, and into all Truth, Psal. 32. 8. Psal. 73. 24. Joh. 16. 13. Luk. 1. 79. Isa. 47. 10. So then, he that hath such a Guide (and all that the Father giveth to Christ, shall have it) he shall escape those dangers, he shall not err in the way; yea, though he be a Fool, he shall not err therein, (Isa. 35.) for of every such an one it is said, Thine Ears shall hear a Word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk in it, when ye turn to the right Hand, and when ye turn to the Left, Isa. 30. 21.

There were Thieves and Robbers before Christ's coming, as there are also now, But faith he, The Sheep did not hear them.

And why did they not hear them, but because they were under the power of shall come; that absolute Promise, that had that Grace in it self to bestow upon them, as could make them able rightly to distinguish of Voices, My Sheep hear my Voice, But how came they to hear it? Why, to them it is given to know and to hear, and that distinguishingly, Joh. 10. 8, 16. Chap. 5. 25. Eph. 5. 14.

Further, The very plain Sentence of the Text makes Provision against all these things; for, saith it, All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me; that is, shall not be stopped, or be allured to take up any where short of Me, nor shall they turn aside, to abide with any besides Me.

Shall come (to Me.)

To me!] By these Words there is further insinuated (though not expressed) a double cause of their coming to him.

First, There is in Christ a fulness of All-sufficiency of that, even of all that which is needful to make us happy.

Secondly, Those that indeed come to him, do do therefore come to him, that they may receive it at his Hand.

For the first of these, There is in Christ a fulness of All-sufficiency of all that, even of all that which is needful to make us happy. Hence it is said, For it pleased the Father, that in him should all fulness dwell. And again, Of his fulness, all we have received, and Grace for Grace, Col. 1. 19. Joh. 1. 16. It is also said of him, that his Riches are unsearchable, The unsearchable Riches of Christ, Eph. 3. 8. Hear what he saith of himself, Riches and Honour are with Me, even durable Riches and Righteousness: My Fruit is better than Gold, yea, than fine Gold, and My Revenue than choice Silver: I lead in the way of Righteousness, in the midst of the Paths of Judgment, that I may cause them that love Me to inherit Substance. And I will fill their Treasures, Prov. 18. 19, 20, 21.

This in general. But more particularly:

First, There is that Light in Christ, that is sufficient to lead them out of, and from all that Darknes, in the midst of which all others, but them that come to him, stumble, and fall, and perish: I am the Light of the World, saith he, he that followeth Me, shall not abide in Darknes, but shall have the Light of Life, John 8. 12. Man by Nature is in Darknes, and walketh in Darknes, and knows not whither he goes, for Darknes hath blinded his Eyes; neither can any thing but Jesus Christ lead Men out of this Darknes; Natural Conscience cannot do it; the Ten Commandments though in the Hearts of Men, cannot do it: This Prerogative belongs only to Jesus Christ.

Secondly, There is Life in Christ, that is to be found no where else, Joh. 5. 40. Life as a Principle in the Soul, by which it shall be acted and enabled to do that which through him is pleasing to God. He that believeth in, or cometh to Me, saith he, as the Scriptures have said, Out of his Belly shall flow Rivers of living Water, Joh. 7. 38. Without this Life a Man is dead, whether he be bad, or whether he be good; that is, good in his own, and other Men's esteem. There is no true and eternal Life, but what is in the Me that speaketh in the Text.

There is also Life, for those that come to him, to be had by Faith in his Flesh and Blood. He that Eateth Me, shall live by Me, Joh. 6. 57.

And this is a Life against that Death that comes by the Guilt of Sin, and the Course of the Law, under which all Men are, and for ever must be, unless they eat Me, that speaks in the Text. Whofo findeth Me, saith he, findeth Life; Deliverance from the Everlasting Death and Destruction, that without Me he shall be devoured by, Prov. 8.

Nothing is more desirable than Life, to him that hath in himself the Sentence of Condemnation; and here only is Life to be found. This Life, to wit, Eternal Life, this Life is in his Son; that is, in him that saith in the Text, All that the Father hath given Me, shall come to Me, 1 John. 5. 10.

Thirdly, The Person speaking in the Text, is he alone by whom poor Sinners have Admittance to, and Acceptance with the Father, because of the Glory of his Righteousness, by, and in which he presenteth them amiable and spotless in his Sight; neither is there any way besides him, so to come to the Father; I am the Way, says he, the Truth and the Life, no Man cometh to the Father, but by Me, John 14. 6. All other ways to God are dead and damnable, the destroying Cherubims stand with flaming Swords, turning every way to keep all others from his presence, (Gen. 3. 24.) I say, all others but them that come by him.

I am the Door, by Me, saith he, if any Man enter in, he shall be saved, John 10. 1, 2.

The Person speaking in the Text is He; and only He, that can give stable and everlasting Peace, therefore, saith he, My Peace I give unto you. My Peace, which is a Peace with God, Peace of Conscience, and that of an everlasting duration. My Peace, Peace that cannot be matched, not as the World giveth, give I unto you; for the World's Peace is but carnal, and transitory, but mine is Divine and Eternal. Hence it is called the Peace of God, that passeth all Understanding.

Fourthly, The Person speaking in the Text, hath enough of all Things truly spiritually good, to satisfy the desire of every longing Soul. And Jesus stood, and cried, saying, If any Man Thirst, let him come to Me and Drink. And to him that is a thirst, I will give of the Fountain of the Water of Life freely, John 7. 37. Rev. 21. 6.

Fifthly, With the Person speaking in the Text, is power to Perfect and defend, and deliver those that come to him for safeguard. All Power, saith he, in Heaven and Earth are given unto me, Mat. 28. 18.

Thus might I multiply Instances in this nature in abundance. But,

Secondly, They that in Truth do come to him, do therefore come to him, that they may receive it at his Hand. They come for Light, they come for Life, they come for Reconciliation with God; they also come for Peace, they come that their Souls may be satisfied with spiritual Good, and that they may be protected by him against all Spiritual and Eternal Damnation; and he alone is able to give them all this, to the fulfilling of their Joy to the full, as they also find when they come to him.

This is evident,

First, From the plain Declaration of those that already are come to him. Being justified by Faith, we have Peace with God through through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom also we have access with boldness into this Grace, wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the Glory of God, Rom. 5.

Secondly, 'Tis evident also, in that while they keep their Eyes upon him, they never desire to change him for another, or to add to themselves some other thing, together with him to make up their Spiritual Joy. God forbid, said Paul, that I should Glory, save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ. Yea, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the Knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things; and do count them but Dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in him: Not having mine own Righteousness, which is of the Law, but that which is through the Faith of Christ, the Righteousness which is of God by Faith, Phil. 3. 7, 8, 9.

Thirdly, 'Tis evident also by their earnest desires, that others might be made partakers of their Blessedness. Brethren, said Paul, My Heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel, is, That they might be saved; that is, that way that he expected to be saved himself: As he saith also to the Galatians, Brethren, saith he, I beseech you, be as I am, for I am as ye are; that is, I am a Sinner as ye are. Now I beseech you seek for Life, as I am seeking of it: As who should say, For there is a Sufficiency in the Lord Jesus both for me and you.

Fourthly, 'Tis evident also, by the Triumph that such Men make over all their Enemies, both Bodily and Ghostly: Now thanks be to God, said Paul, who causeth us always to Triumph in Jesus Christ. And who shall separate us from the Love of Christ our Lord? And again, O Death, where is thy Sting? O Grave, where is thy Victory? The Sting of Death is Sin, and the Strength of Sin is the Law; but thanks be to God, who giveth us the Victory through our Lord Jesus Christ, 2 Cor. 2. 14. Rom. 8. 35. 1 Cor. 15. 55, 56.

Fifthly, 'Tis evident also, for that they are made by the Glory of that which they have found in him, to suffer and endure what the Devil and Hell it self hath or could invent, as a means to separate them from him. Again, Who shall separate us from the Love of Christ? Shall Tribulation, or Distress, or Persecution, or Famine, or Nakedness, or Peril, or Sword, (as it is written, For thy Sake we are killed all the Day long, we are accounted as Sheep for the Slaughter.) Nay, in all these things we are more than Conquerors, through him that loved us: For I am perswaded, that neither Death, nor Life, nor Angels, nor Principalities, nor Powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor Height, nor Depth, nor any other Creature shall be able to separate us from the Love of God which is in Christ Jesus, Rom. 8.

Shall come (to Me) O the Heart-attracting Glory that is in Jesus Christ, (when he is discovered) to draw those to him that are given to him of the Father. Therefore those that came of Old, rendered this as the cause of their coming to him. And we behold the Glory, as of the only begotten of the Father, John 1. 14. And the Reason why others come not, but perish in their Sins, is for want of a Sight of his Glory. If our Gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost, in whom the God of this World hath blinded the Minds of them that believe not, lest the glorious Light of the Gospel of Christ, who is the Image of God, should shine unto them, 2 Cor. 4.

There is therefore Heart-pulsing Glory in Jesus Christ, which when discovered, draws the Men to him; wherefore, by shall come to Me, Christ may mean, when his Glory is discovered, then they must come, then they shall come to Me. Therefore as the true Comers come with Weeping and Relenting, as being sensible of their own Vileness; so again, it is said, That the Ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion, with Singing and everlasting Joy upon their Heads, they shall obtain Joy and Gladness, and Sorrow and Sighing shall fly away: That is, at the Sight of the Glory of that Grace, that shews itself to them now, in the Face of our Lord Jesus Christ, and in the hopes that they now have, of being with him in the Heavenly Tabernacles. Therefore it saith again, With Gladness and Rejoicing shall they be brought; they shall enter into the King's Palace, Isa. 35. 10. Ch. 51. 11. Psal. 45. 15.

There is therefore Heart-attracting Glory in the Lord Jesus Christ; which, when discovered, subjects the Heart to the Word, and makes us come to him.

'Tis said of Abraham; That when he dwelt in Mesopotamia, the God of Glory appeared unto him, (Acts 7. 2.) saying, Get thee out of thy Country. And what then? Why, away he went from his House and Friends, and all the World could not stay him. Now, as the Psalmist says, Who is the King of Glory? He answers, The Lord, mighty in Battle: And who was that, but he that spoiled Principalities and Powers, when he did hang upon the Tree, triumphing over them thereon? And who was that but Jesus Christ, even the Person speaking in the Text? Therefore he said of Abraham, He saw his Day. Yea, saith he to the Jews, your Father Abraham rejoiced to see my Day, and he saw it, and was glad, Psal. 24. 8. Col. 2. 14, 15. Jam. 1. 1. Joh. 8. 56.

Indeed, The carnal Man says (at last) in his Heart, Isa. 53. 1, 2, 3. There is no Form or Comeliness in Christ, and when we shall see him, There is no Beauty that we should desire him; but he lies: This he speaks, as having never seen him. But they that stand in his House, and look upon him through through the Glass of his Word, by the help of his Holy Spirit, they will tell you other Things. But we, say they, all with open Face, beholding, as in a Glass, the Glory of the Lord, are changed into the same Image, from Glory to Glory, 2 Cor. 3. 17, 18. They see Glory in his Person, Glory in his Understanding, Glory in the Merit of his Blood, and Glory in the Perfection of his Righteousness; yea, Heart-affecting, Heart-sweetening, and Heart-changing Glory!

Indeed, his Glory is veiled, and cannot be seen; but as discovered by the Father (Mat. 11. 27.) It is veiled with Flesh, with Meanness of Descent from the Flesh, and with that Ignominy and Shame that attended him in the Flesh; but they that can, in God's Light, see through these Things, they shall see Glory in him; yea, such Glory as will draw and pull their Hearts unto him.

Moses was the adopted Son of Pharaoh's Daughter; and for ought I know, had been King at last, had he conformed to the present Vanities that was there at Court, but he could not, he would not do it: Why? What was the Matter? Why? he saw more in the Worst of Christ (bear with the Expression) than he saw in the Best of all the Treasures of the Land of Egypt. He refused to be called the Son of Pharaoh's Daughter; chusing rather to suffer Affliction with the People of God, than to enjoy the Pleasures of Sin for a Season: Esteeming the reproach of Christ, greater Riches than the Treasures in Egypt; for he had respect to the Recompence of Reward. He forsook Egypt, not fearing the Wrath of the King: But what emboldned him thus to do? Why, he endured; for he had a Sight of the Person speaking in the Text: He endured as seeing him who is invisible. But I say? Would a Sight of Jesus have thus taken away Moses's Heart from a Crown, and a Kingdom, &c. had he not by that Sight seen more in Him, than was to be seen in Them? Heb. 11. 24, 25, 26.

Therefore, when he saith, shall come to me, he means, they shall have a Discovery of the Glory of the Grace that is in him; and the Beauty and Glory of that is of such Vertue, that it constraineth, and forceth with a blessed Violence, the Hearts of those that are given to him.

Moses, of whom we spake before, was no Child when he was thus taken with the beauteous Glory of this Lord: He was Forty Years Old, and so consequently was able, being a Man of that Wisdom and Opportunity as he was, to make the best Judgment of the Things, and of the Goodness of them that was before him in the Land of Egypt. But he, even he it was, that set that low esteem upon the Glory of Egypt, as to count it not worth the meddling with, when he had a Sight of this Lord Jesus Christ. This wicked World thinks, that the Fancies of a Heaven and a Happiness hereafter, may serve well enough to take the Heart of such, as either have not the Worlds good Things to delight in; or that are Fools, and know not how to delight themselves therein: But let them know again, that we have had Men of all Ranks and Qualities, that have been taken with the Glory of our Lord Jesus, and have left all to follow him: As Abel, Seth, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Samuel, David, Solomon: and who not, that had either Wit or Grace, to favour heavenly Things? Indeed none can stand off from Him, nor any longer hold out against Him, to whom he reveals the Glory of his Grace.

And him that cometh to me (I will in no wise cast out.)

By these Words our Lord Jesus doth set forth (yet more amply) the great Goodness of his Nature toward the coming Sinner. Before he said, They shall come; and he declareth, That with Heart and Affections he will receive them. But by the Way, let me speak one Word or two, to the seeming Conditionality of this Promise, with which now I have to do. And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. Where it is evident, (may some say) that Christ's Receiving us to Mercy, depends upon our Coming, and so our Salvation by Christ is conditional: If we come we shall be received; if not, we shall not: For that is fully intimated by the Words. The Promise of Reception is only to him that cometh: And him that cometh. I answer, that the Coming in these Words mentioned, as a condition of being received to Life, is that which is promised, yea, concluded to be effected in us by the Promise going before. In those latter Words, coming to Christ, is implicitly required of us; and in the Words before, that Grace that can make us come is positively promised to us. All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me, and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out thence. We come to Christ, because it is said, We shall come; because it is given to us to come: So that the Condition, which is expressed by Christ in these latter Words, is absolutely promised in the Words before. And indeed, the coming here intended, is nothing else but the effect of shall come to me. They shall come, and I will not cast them out.

(And him that cometh)

He saith not, and him that is come, but him that cometh.

To speak to these Words,

1. In General.

2. More particularly.

In general; They suggest unto us these Four Things;

First, That Jesus Christ doth build upon it; that since the Father gave his People to him, they shall be enabled to come unto him.

him. And him that cometh: As who should say, I know that since they are given to me, they shall be enabled to come unto me. He saith not, If they come, or I suppose they will come; but, and him that cometh. By these Words therefore he shews us, that he addresseth himself to the Receiving of them whom the Father gave to him, to save them: I say, he addresseth himself, or prepareth himself to receive them: By which, as I said, he concludeth or buildeth upon it, that they shall indeed come to him. He looketh that the Father should bring them into his Bosom, and so stands ready to embrace them.

Secondly, Christ also suggesteth by these Words, that he very well knoweth who are given to him: Not by their coming to him, but by their being given to him. All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me: And him that cometh, &c. This Him he knoweth to be one of them that the Father hath given him; and therefore he receiveth him, even because the Father hath given him to him, John 10. I know my Sheep, saith he, Not only those that already have Knowledge of him, but those two, that yet are ignorant of him. Other Sheep have I, said he, which are not of this Fold: Not of the Jewish Church; but those that lie in their Sins, even the rude and barbarous Gentiles. Therefore, when Paul was afraid to stay at Corinth, from a Supposition, that some Mischief might befall him there: Be not afraid, (said the Lord Jesus to him) but speak, and hold not thy Peace, for I have much People in this City, Joh. 10. 16. Acts 18. 9, 10. The People that the Lord here speaks of, were not at this time accounted his, by Reason of a Work of Conversion that already had passed upon them, but by virtue of the Gift of the Father, for he had given them unto him: Therefore was Paul to stay here, to speak the Word of the Lord to them, that by his speaking, the Holy Ghost might effectually work over their Souls; to the causing them to come to him, who was also ready with Heart and Soul to receive them.

Thirdly, Christ by these Words also suggesteth; That no more come unto him than indeed are given him of the Father: For the Him in this place, is one of the All, that by Christ was mentioned before, All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me; and every Him, of that All, I will in no wise cast out. This the Apostle insinuateth, where he saith, He gave some Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and some Pastors and Teachers; for the perfecting of the Saints, for the Work of the Ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ: Till we all come in the Unity of Faith, and of the Knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect Man, unto the measure of the Stature of the Fulness of Christ, Ephes. 4. 11, 12, 13.

Mark, as in the Text, so here he speaketh of All; Until we all come. We All! All who? Doubtless, All that the Father giveth to Christ. This is farther insinuated, because he calleth this All, The Body of Christ; the Measure of the Stature of the Fulness of Christ: By which he means, the Universal Number given, to wit, The true Elect Church; which is said to be his Body and Fulness, Ephes. 1. 22, 23.

Fourthly, Christ Jesus by these Words farther suggesteth, that he is well content with this Gift of the Father to him. All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me; and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. I will heartily, willingly, and with great content of Mind receive him.

They shew us also, That Christ's Love in receiving, is as large as his Father's Love in giving, and no larger. Hence he thanks him for his Gift; and also thanks him for hiding of him, and his Things from the rest of the Wicked, Mat. 11. 25. Luke 10. 21.

But Secondly, and more particularly, And (him) that cometh. And (him!) This Word him; by it Christ looketh back to the Gift of the Father, not only to the Lump and Whole of the Gift; but to the every him of that Lump. As who should say, I do not only accept of the Gift of my Father in the general, but have a special Regard to every of them in particular; and will secure not only some, or the greatest Part, but every him, every Dust: Not an Hoof of all shall be lost, or left behind. And indeed, in this he consenteth to his Father's Will; which is, That of All that that he hath given him, he should lose Nothing, John 6. 39.

(And him) Christ Jesus also, by his thus dividing the Gift of his Father into Hims, and by his speaking of them in the Singular Number, shews, what a particular Work shall be wrought in each one, at the Time appointed of the Father. And it shall come to pass in that Day, saith the Prophet, that the Lord shall beat off from the Channel of the River, to the Stream of Egypt; and ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye Children of Israel. Here are the Hims one lby one to be gathered to him by the Father, Isa. 27. 12.

He shews also hereby, that no Lineage, Kindred, or Relation, can at all be profited by any outward or carnal Union, with the Person that the Father hath given to Christ. 'Tis only Him, the given Him, the coming Him, that he intends absolutely to secure. Men make great ado with the Children of Believers; and Oh the Children of Believers: But if the Child of the Believer is not the Him concerned in this absolute Promise, it is not these Mens great Cry; nor yet what the Parent or Child can do, that can interest him in this Promise of the Lord Christ; this absolute Promise.

And

And him.) There are divers sorts of Persons, that the Father hath given to Jesus Christ; they are not all of one Rank, of one Quality. Some are High, some are Low; some are Wise, some Fools; some are more civil, and complying with the Law; some more prophane, and averse to him and his Gospel. Now, since those that are given to him, are in some sense so diverse; and again, since he yet saith, And him that cometh, &c. He by that doth give us to understand, that he is not, as Men, for picking and chusing to take a Best, and leave a Worst, but he is for him that the Father hath given him, and that cometh to him. He will not alter nor change it; a Good for a Bad, or a Bad for a Good, (Lev. 27. 9, 10.) But will take him as he is, and will save his Soul.

There is many a sad Wretch given by the Father to Jesus Christ; but not one of them all is despised, or slighted by him.

It is said of those that the Father hath given to Christ, that they have done worse than the Heathen; that they were Murderers, Thieves, Drunkards, Unclean Persons, and what not? But he has received them, washed them, and saved them. A fit Emblem of this sort, is that wretched Instance mentioned in the sixteenth of Ezekiel, that was cast out in a stinking Condition, to the loathing of its Person in the Day that it was born; A Creature in such a wretched Condition, that no Eye pitied, to do any of the things there mentioned unto it, or to have Compassion upon it: No Eye, but his that speaketh in the Text.

And him.) Let him be as red as Blood, let him be as red as Crimson: Some Men are Blood-red Sinners, Crimson Sinners, Sinners of a double Dye; dipt and dipt again, before they come to Jesus Christ. Art thou that readest these Lines such a one? Speak out, Man; Art thou such a one? and art thou now coming to Jesus Christ for the Mercy of Justification, that thou mightest be made white in his Blood, and be covered with his Righteousness? Fear not; for as much as this thy coming betokeneth, that thou art of the number of them that the Father hath given to Christ; for he will in no wise cast thee out. Come now, saith Christ, and let us reason together; though your Sins be as Scarlet, they shall be as white as Snow; though they be as Red as Crimson, they shall be as Wool, Isa. 1. 18.

And him.) There was many a strange him came to Jesus Christ, in the Days of his Flesh; but he received them all, without turning any way. Speaking unto them of the Kingdom of God, and healing such as had need of healing, Luke 9. 11. ch. 4. 40. These words, and him, are therefore Words to be wondered at: That not one of them, who by virtue of the Father's Gift, and drawing, are coming to Jesus

Vol. II.

Christ: I say, That not one of them, whatever they have been, whatever they have done, should be rejected, or set by, but admitted to a share in his saving Grace. 'Tis said in Luke, that the People wondered at the Gracious Words that proceeded out of his Mouth, Luke 4. 22. Now this is one of his Gracious Words; these Words are like drops of Honey, as it is said, Prov. 16. 24. Pleasant Words are as an Honey-comb, sweet to the Soul, and Health to the Bones. These are Gracious Words indeed, even as full as a faithful and merciful High-priest could speak them. Luther saith, When Christ speaketh, he hath a Mouth as wide as Heaven and Earth: That is, to speak fully to the encouragement of every sinful him that is coming to Jesus Christ. And that this Word is certain, hear how himself confirms it: Heaven and Earth, saith he, shall pass away; but my Words shall not pass away, Isa. 63. 1. Mat. 24. 35.

It is also confirmed by the Testimony of the four Evangelists, who gave faithful relation of his loving reception of all sorts of Coming-Sinners, whether they were Publicans, Harlots, Thieves, possessed of Devils, Bedlams, and what not? Luke 19. 1. to 10. Mat. 21. 21. Luke 15. & chap. 23. 41, 42. Mark 19. 9. chap. 5. 1, 2, 3, to 9.

This then shews us,

First, The greatness of the Merits of Christ.

Secondly, The willingness of his Heart to impute them for Life to the great, if coming Sinners.

First, This shews us the greatness of the Merits of Christ; for it must not be supposed, that his Words are bigger than his Worthiness. He is strong to execute his Word; He can do, as well as speak. He can do exceeding abundantly more than we ask or think, even to the uttermost, and out-side of his Word, (Ephes. 3. 20.)

Now then, since he concludeth any coming-Him; it must be concluded, that he can save to the uttermost Sin, any coming-Him.

Do you think, I say, that the Lord Jesus did not think before he spake? He speaks all in Righteousness, and therefore by his Word we are to judge how mighty he is to save, Isa. 63. 1.

He speaketh in Righteousness, in very Faithfulness, when he began to build this Blessed Gospel-Fabrick; he first sat down, and counted the Cost; and knew he was able to finish it! What, Lord, Any him! Any him that cometh to thee! This is a Christ worth looking after, this is a Christ worth coming to.

This then should learn us diligently to consider the natural Force of every Word of God; and to judge of Christ's Ability to save, not by our Sins, or by our shallow Apprehensions of his Grace; but by his Word, which is the true Measure of Grace.

7 X

And

And if we do not judge thus, we shall dishonour his Grace, lose the benefit of his Word, and needlessly fright our selves into many Discouragements, through coming to Jesus Christ. Him, Any him that cometh, hath sufficient from this Word of Christ, to feed himself with hopes of Salvation. As thou art therefore coming, O thou coming Sinner, judge thou, whether Christ can save thee, by the true sense of his Words: Judge coming Sinner, of the efficacy of his Blood, of the perfection of his Righteousness, and of the prevalency of his Intercession by his Word. And him, saith he, that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. In no wise, that is, for no Sin: Judge therefore by his Word, how able he is to save thee: It is said of God's Sayings to the Children of Israel, There failed not ought of any good Thing which the Lord had spoken to the House of Israel; all came to pass. And again, Not one Thing hath failed of all the good Things which the Lord your God spake concerning you, all are come to pass unto you; and not One Thing hath failed thereof, Josh. 21. 45. Chap. 23. 14.

Coming Sinner, what Promise thou findest in the Word of Christ, strain it whether thou canst, so thou dost not corrupt it, and his Blood and Merits will answer all, what the Word saith, or any true Consequence that is drawn therefrom, that we may boldly venture upon: As here in the Text, he saith, And Him that cometh, indefinitely; without the least Intimation of the Rejection of any, though never so great, if he be a coming Sinner. Take it then for granted that thou, whoever thou art, if coming, art intended in these Words; neither shall it injure Christ at all, if, as Benhadad's Servants served Ahab, thou shalt catch him at his Word. Now, saith the Text, the Man did diligently observe whether any Thing would come from him, to wit, any Word of Grace; And did hastily catch it. And it happened that Ahab had called Benhadad his Brother. The Man replied therefore, Thy Brother Benhadad! Catching him at his Word, 1 Kings 20. ver. 33. Sinner, coming Sinner, serve Jesus Christ thus, and he will take it kindly at thy Hands. When he in his Argument called the Canaanitish Woman Dog, she caught him at it, and said, Truth, Lord, yet the Dogs eat of the Crumbs that fall from their Master's Table. I say, she caught him thus in his Words, and he took it kindly, saying, O Woman, great is thy Faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt, Mat. 15. 16. Catch him, coming Sinner, catch him in his Words, surely he will take it kindly, and will not be offended at thee.

Secondly, The other Thing that I told you is shewed from these Words, is this; The willingness of Christ's Heart, to impute his Mercies for Life, to the great, if coming Sinner. And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

The awakened coming Sinner doth not so easily question the Power of Christ, as his Willingness to save him: Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst, said one, Mark 1. 40. He did not put the If upon his Power, but upon his Will: He concluded he could, but he was not as fully of perswasion that he would. But we have the same ground to believe he will, as we have to believe he can; and indeed, ground for both, is the Word of God. If he was not willing, Why did he promise? Why did he say, he would receive the coming Sinner? Coming Sinner, take notice of this, we use to plead Practices with Men, and why not with God likewise? I am sure we have no more Ground for one than the other; for we have to plead the Promise of a faithful God. Jacob took him there: Thou saidst, said he, I will surely do thee good, Gen. 32. 12. For, from this Promise he concluded, that it followed in reason, He must be willing.

The Text also gives some Ground for us to draw the same Conclusion. And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. Here is his Willingness asserted, as well as his Power suggested. It is worth your Observation, that Abraham's Faith considered rather God's Power, than his Willingness; that is, he drew his Conclusion, I shall have a Child, from the Power that was in God to fulfil the Promise to him: For he concluded he was willing to give him one, else he would not have promised one. He staggered not at the Promise of God through Unbelief, but was strong in Faith, giving Glory to God; being fully perswaded that what he had promised he was able to perform, Rom. 4. 20. 21. But was not his Faith exercised or tried, about his Willingness to? No, there was no shew of Reason for that, because he had promised it: Indeed, had he not promised it, he might lawfully have doubted it; but since he had promised it, there was left no ground at all for doubting, because his willingness to give a Son was demonstrated in his promising him a Son. These Words therefore are sufficient Ground to encourage any coming Sinner, that Christ is willing to his Power to receive him; and since he hath Power also to do what he will, there is no Ground at all left to the coming Sinner, any more to doubt; but to come in full hope of Acceptance, and of being received unto Grace and Mercy. And him that (cometh.) He saith not, And him that is come; but, And him that cometh; that is, and him whose Heart begins to move after me, who is leaving all for my sake; him, who is looking out, who is on his Journey to me. We must therefore distinguish betwixt coming, and being come to Jesus Christ. He that is come to him, has attained tained of him more sensibly what he felt before he wanted, than he has that but yet is coming to him.

A Man that is come to Christ, hath the Advantage of him that is but coming to him; and that in Seven Things.

First, He that is come to Christ, is nearer to him than he that is but coming to him: For he that is but coming to him, is yet, in some Sense, at a distance from him; as it is said of the coming Prodigal, And while he was yet a great Way off, Luk. 15. Now he that is nearer to him, hath the best Sight of him; and so is able to make the best Judgment of his wonderful Grace and Beauty, as God saith, Let them come near, and let them speak. And as the Apostle John saith, And we have seen, and do testify, that God sent his Son to be the Saviour of the World, Isa. 41. 1, 1. John 4. 14. He that is not yet come, though he is coming, is not fit, not being indeed capable to make that Judgment of the Worth and Glory of the Grace of Christ, as he is that is come to him, and hath seen and beheld it. Therefore, Sinner, suspend thy Judgment till thou art come nearer.

Secondly, He that is come to Christ has the Advantage of him that is but coming, in that he is eased of his Burthen: For he that is but coming, is not eased of his Burthen, Mat. 11. 28. He that is come, has cast his Burthen upon the Lord: By Faith he hath seen himself released thereof; but he that is but coming, hath it yet as to Sense and Feeling, upon his own Shoulders. Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, implies, that their Burthen, though they are coming, is yet upon them, and so will be till indeed they are come to him.

Thirdly, He that is come to Christ, has the Advantage of him that is but coming, in this also, namely, He hath drank of the Sweet and Soul-refreshing Water of Life: But he that is but coming hath not: If any Man thirst, let him come unto me and drink.

Mark, He must come to him before he drinks; according to that of the Prophet, Ho! Every one that thirsteth, come ye to the Waters. He drinketh not as he cometh, but when he is come to the Waters, Joh. 7. 37. Isa. 45. 1.

Fourthly, He that is come to Christ hath the Advantage of him that as yet is but coming, in this also, to wit, He is not terrified with the Noise, and as I may call it, Hue and Cry, which the Avenger of Blood makes at the Heels of him that yet is but coming to him. When the Slayer was upon his Flight to the City of his Refuge, he had the Noise or Fear of the Avenger of Blood at his Heels; but when he was come to the City, and was entered thereinto, the Noise ceased: Even so it is with him that is coming to Jesus Christ: He heareth many a dreadful Sound in his Ear; Sounds of Death and Damnation, which he that is come, is at present freed from. Therefore he saith, Come, and I will give you Rest: And so he saith again, We that have believed, do enter into Rest, as he said, Eccl. Heb. 4.

Fifthly, He therefore that is come to Christ, is not so subject to those Dejections, and Castings down, by reason of the Rage and Assaults of the Evil One, as is the Man that is but coming to Jesus Christ (though he has Temptations too) (And while he was yet coming the Devil threw him down, and tore him, Luke 9. 42.) For he has (though Satan still roareth upon him) those experimental Comforts and Refreshments, to wit, in his Treasury, to present himself with, in Times of Temptation and Conflict; which he that is but coming, has not.

Sixthly, He that is come to Christ, has the Advantage of him that is but coming to him, in this also, to wit, he hath upon him the Wedding-Garment, Eccl. But he that is coming has not. The Prodigal, when coming home to his Father, was cloathed with nothing but Rags, and was tormented with an empty Belly: But when he was come, the best Robe is brought out; also the Gold Ring and the Shoes, yea, they are put upon him, to his great Rejoicing. The fatted Calf was killed for him; the Musick was struck up to make him merry: And thus also the Father himself sang of him, This my Son was dead, and is alive again; was lost, and is found, Luke 15. 18, 19, 20, 21, Eccl.

Seventhly, In a Word, he that is come to Christ, his Groans and Tears, his Doubts and Fears, are turned into Songs and Praises: For that he hath now received the Atonement, and the Earnest of his Inheritance: But he that is but yet a coming, hath not those Praises, nor Songs of Deliverance with him, nor has he as yet received the Atonement and Earnest of his Inheritance, which is the sealing Testimony of the Holy Ghost, through the sprinkling of the Blood of Christ upon his Conscience; for he is not come, Rom. 5. 11. Eph. 1. 13. Heb. 12. 22, 23, 24.

And him that (Cometh.)

There is further to be gathered from this Word (cometh) these following Particulars.

First, That Jesus Christ hath his Eye upon, and takes Notice of the first moving of the Heart of a Sinner after him: Coming Sinner, thou canst not move with Desires after Christ, but he sees the working of those Desires in thy Heart. All my Desires, said David, are before thee, and my Groanings are not hid from thee, Psal. 38. 9. This he spake, as he was coming (after he had back-slidden) to the Lord Jesus Christ. 'Tis said of the Prodigal, That while he was was yet a great Way off, his Father saw him, had his Eye upon him, and upon the going out of his Heart after him, Luke 15. 20.

When Nathanael was come to Jesus Christ, the Lord said to them that stood before him, Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom there is no Guile. But Nathanael answered him, Whence knowest thou me? Jesus answered, Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the Fig-Tree, I saw thee. There I suppose, Nathanael was pouring out of his Soul to God for Mercy, or that he would give him good understanding about the Messias to come: And Jesus saw all the workings of his honest Heart at that time, John 1. 47, 48.

Zacheus also had some secret movings of Heart, such as they were towards Jesus Christ, when he ran before, and climbed up the Tree to see him; and the Lord Jesus Christ had his Eye upon him: Therefore when he was come to the place, he looked up to him, bids him come down; For to Day, (said he) I must abide at thy House: To wit, in order to the further compleating the Work of Grace in his Soul, Luke 19. 1, to 9. Remember this, Coming Sinner.

Secondly, As Jesus Christ hath his Eye upon, so he hath his Heart open to receive the Coming Sinner. This is verified by the Text: And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. This is also discovered by his preparing of the Way, in his making of it easie (as it may be) to the Coming Sinner; which Preparation is manifest by them blessed Words, I will in no wise cast out: Of which more when we come to the Place. And while he was yet a great Way off, his Father saw him, and had Compassion on him; and ran and fell on his Neck and kissed him, (Luke 15. 20.) All these Expressions do strongly prove, that the Heart of Christ is open to receive the Coming Sinner.

Thirdly, As Jesus Christ has his Eye upon, and his Heart open to receive; so he hath resolved already, that nothing shall alienate his Heart from receiving the coming Sinner. No Sins of the coming Sinner, nor the length of the Time that he hath abode in them, shall by any Means prevail with Jesus Christ to reject him. Coming Sinner, thou art coming to a loving Lord Jesus.

Fourthly, These Words therefore drop'd from his blessed Mouth, on Purpose that the Coming Sinner might take Encouragement to continue on his Journey, until he be come indeed to Jesus Christ. It was doubtless a great Encouragement to blind Bartimeus, that Jesus Christ stood still and called him, when he was crying, Jesus thou Son of David have Mercy on me: Therefore 'tis said he cast away his Garment, Rose up, and came to Jesus, Mark 10. 46.

&c. Now, if a Call to come, hath such Encouragement in it, what is a Promise of receiving such, but an Encouragement much more? And observe it, though he had a Call to come, yet not having a Promise, his Faith was forced to work upon a meer Consequence, saying, He calls me; and surely since he calls me, he will grant me my Desire. Ah! but coming Sinner, thou hast no need to go so far about, as to draw (in this Matter) Consequences, because thou hast plain Promises; And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. Here is full, plain, yea, what Encouragement one can desire: For, suppose thou wert admitted to make a Promise thy self, and Christ should attest, that he would fulfil it upon the Sinner that cometh to him? Could'st thou make a better Promise? Could'st thou invent a more full, free, or larger Promise? A Promise that looks at the first moving of the Heart after Jesus Christ! A Promise that declares; yea, that engageth Christ Jesus to open his Heart, to receive the coming Sinner: Yea, farther, a Promise that demonstrateth that the Lord Jesus is resolved freely to receive, and will in no wise cast out, nor means to reject the Soul of the coming Sinner. For all this lieth fully in this Promise, and doth naturally flow therefrom. Here thou needest not make use of far-fetched Consequences, nor strain thy Wits, to force encouraging Arguments from the Text. Coming Sinners, the Words are plain: And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

And Him that (Cometh.)

There are two sorts of Sinners that are coming to Jesus Christ.

First, Him that hath never, while of late, at all began to come.

Secondly, Him that came formerly, and after that went back, but hath since be-thought himself; and is now coming again.

Both these sorts of Sinners are intended by the Him in the Text, as is evident; because, Both are now the coming Sinners.

And Him that Cometh, &c.

For the first of these; the Sinner that hath never while of late, began to come, his Way is more easy: I do not say, more plain and open, to come to Christ, than is the other, (those last not having the Clod of a guilty Conscience for the Sin of Back-sliding, hanging at their Heels.) But all the Encouragement of the Gospel, with what Invitations are therein contained to coming Sinners, are as free and as open to the one as to the other; so that they may with the same Freedom and Liberty, as from the Word, both alike claim Interest in the Promise. All Things are ready: All Things for the coming Back-sliders, as well as for the others: Come to the Wedding: And let him that is a thirst come, Mat. 22. 1, 2, 3, 4. Rev. 22. 17.

But,

But, having spoke to the First of these already, I shall here pass it by; and shall speak a Word or two to him that is coming, after Back-sliding to Jesus Christ for Life.

Thy Way, O thou Sinner of a double Dye, thy Way is open to come to Jesus Christ: I mean thee, whose Heart, after long back-sliding doth think of turning to him again. Thy Way, I say, is open to him, as is the Way of the other sorts of Comers; as appears by what follows.

First, Because the Text makes no exception against thee: It doth not say, And any him, but a Back-slider; any Him, but Him. The Text doth not thus object, but indefinitely openeth wide its Golden Arms to every coming Soul, without the least Exception: Therefore thou may'st come. And take heed that thou shut not that Door against thy Soul by Unbelief, which God has opened by his Grace.

Secondly, Nay, the Text is so far from excepting against thy coming, that it strongly suggesteth, that thou art one of the Souls intended, O thou coming Back-slider; else what need that Clause have been so inserted, I will in no wise cast out: As who should say, Though those that come now, are such as have formerly back-slidden: I will in no wise cast away the Fornicator, the Covetous, the Railer, the Drunkard, or other common Sinners, nor yet the Back-slider neither.

Thirdly, That the Back-slider is intended, is evident.

First, For that he is sent to by Name, Go, tell his Disciples, and Peter, Mark 16. 7. But Peter was a godly Man. True, but he was also a Back-slider, yea, a desperate Back-slider: He had denied his Master once, twice, thrice, Cursing and Swearing, that he knew him not. If this was not Back-sliding, if this was not an high and eminent Back-sliding, yea, a higher Back-sliding than thou art capable of, I have thought amiss.

Again, when David had Back-slidden, and had committed Adultery and Murder in his Back-sliding, he must be sent to by Name. And, saith the Text, The Lord sent Nathan to David. And he sent him to tell him, after he had brought him to unfeigned Acknowledgment, The Lord hath also put away, or forgiven thy Sins, 2 Sam. 12. 1.

This Man also was far gone: He took a Man's Wife, and killed her Husband, and endeavoured to cover all with wicked Disimulation. He did this, I say, after God had exalted him, and shewed him great Favour: wherefore his Transgression was greatned also by the Prophet with mighty Aggravations: Yet he was accepted, and that with Gladness, at the first Step he took in his returning to Christ; for the first Step of the Back-slider's return, is to say, sensibly and unfeignedly, I have sinned: But he had no sooner said thus, but a Pardon was produced, yea, thrust into his Bosom. And Nathan said unto David, The Lord hath also put away thy Sin.

Secondly, As the Person of the Back-slider is mentioned by Name, so also is his Sin, that if possible, thy Objections against thy returning to Christ, may be taken out of the Way; I say, thy Sin also is mentioned by Name, and mixed, as mentioned with Words of Grace and Favour. I will heal their Back-sliding, and love them freely, (Hos. 14. 4.) What say'st thou now, Back-slider?

Thirdly, Nay farther, thou art not only mentioned by Name, and thy Sin by the Nature of it; but thou thy self, who art a returning Back-slider, put.

First, Amongst God's Israel, Return, O Back-sliding Israel, saith the Lord, and I will not cause mine Anger to fall upon you; for I am merciful, saith the Lord, and will not keep Anger for ever, Jer. 3. 12.

Secondly, Thou art put among his Children; among his Children to whom he is Married. Turn O Back-sliding Children, for I am Married unto you, verse 14.

Thirdly, Yea, after all this, as if his Heart was so full of Grace for them, that he was pressed until he had uttered it before them; he adds, Return ye Back-sliding Children, and I will heal your Back-sliding.

Fourthly, Nay farther, the Lord hath considered, that the Shame of thy Sin hath stopped thy Mouth, and made thee almost a Prayerless Man; and therefore he saith unto thee, Take with you Words and turn unto the Lord, and say unto him, Take away all Iniquity, and receive us graciously: See his Grace, that himself should put Words of Encouragement into the Heart of a Back-slider; as he saith in another Place, I taught Ephraim to go, taking him by the Arms. This is teaching him to go indeed, to hold him up by the Arms, by the Chin, as we say, Hos. 14. 1, 2, 3, 4. Chap. 11. 3.

From what hath been said, I conclude, even as I said before, that the Him in the Text, and him that cometh, includeth both these sorts of Sinners, and therefore both should freely come.

Quest. But where doth Jesus Christ, in all the Words of the New Testament, expressly speak to a returning Back-slider with Words of Grace and Peace? For what you have urged as yet, from the New Testament, is nothing but Consequences drawn from this Text. Indeed it is a full Text for carnal ignorant Sinners that come, but to me who am a Back-slider, it yieldeth but little Relief.

Ans. First, How! but little Encouragement from the Text, when it is said, I will in no wise cast out. What more could have been said? What is here omitted that might have been inserted, to make the Promise more full and free? Nay, take all the Promises in the Bible, all the freest Promises, mises, with all the Variety of Expressions of what Nature or Extent soever, and they can but amount to the Expressions of this very Promise, I will in no wise cast out: I will for nothing, by no means, upon no account, however they have sinned, however they have back-slidden, however they have provoked, cast out the coming Sinner. But,

Secondly, Thou say'st, Where doth Jesus Christ, in all the Words of the New Testament, speak to a returning Back-slider with Words of Grace and Peace? that is, under the Name of a Back-slider?

Answer. Where there is such plenty of Examples in receiving Back-sliders, there is the less need for express Words to that Intent: One Promise, as the Text is, with those Examples that are annexed, are instead of many Promises. And besides, I reckon that the Act of receiving is of as much, if not of more Encouragement, than is a bare Promise to receive; for receiving is as the Promise, and the fulfilling of it too: So that in the Old Testament thou hast the Promise, and in the New, the fulfilling of it; and that in divers Examples.

First, In Peter. Peter denied his Master, once, twice, thrice, and that with an open Oath; yet Christ receives him again without any the least Hesitation or Stick. Yea, he slips, stumbles, falls again, in downright Dissimulation, and that to the Hurt and Fall of many others; but neither of this doth Christ make a Bar to his Salvation, but receives him again at his Return, as if he knew nothing of the Fault, Gal. 2.

Secondly, The rest of his Disciples, even all of them, did back-slide, and leave the Lord Jesus in his greatest Straights: Then all the Disciples forsook him, and fled; they returned (as he had foretold) every one to his own, and left him alone; but this also he passes over as a very light Matter: Not that it was so indeed in it self, but the abundance of Grace that was in him did lightly roll it away; for after his Resurrection, when at first he appeared unto them, he gives them not the least Check for their perfidious Dealings with him, but salutes them with Words of Grace, saying, All hail, be not afraid, Peace be to you; All Power in Heaven and Earth is given unto me. True, he rebuked them for their Unbelief, for the which also thou deservest the same: For it is Unbelief that alone puts Christ and his Benefits from us, Mat. 26. 56. John 16. 52. Mat. 28. 9, 10, 11. Luke 24. 39. Mark 16. 14.

Thirdly, The Man that after a large Profession, lay with his Father's Wife, committed a high Transgression, even such an one that at that Day was not heard of, no, not among the Gentiles. Wherefore this was a desperate Back-sliding; yet, at his return he was received, and accepted again to Mercy, 1 Cor. 5. 1, 2. 2 Cor. 2. 6, 7. 8.

Fourthly, The Thief that stole was bid to steal no more; not at all doubting, but that Christ was ready to forgive him this Act of Back-sliding, Eph. 4. 28.

Now all these are Examples, particular Instances of Christ's readiness to receive the Back-sliders to Mercy; and, observe it, Examples and Proofs that he hath done so, are to our unbelieving Hearts, stronger Encouragements than bare Promises, that so he will do. But again, the Lord Jesus hath added to these, for the Encouragement of returning Back-sliders, to come to him:

First, A Call to come, and he will receive them, Rev. 2. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 14, 15, 16, 20, 21, 22. Chap. 3. 1, 2, 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22. Wherefore New Testament Back-sliders have Encouragement to come.

Secondly, A Declaration of readiness to receive them that come, as here in the Text, and in many other places, is plain: Therefore, Set thee up these Marks, make thee those high Heaps, (of the Golden Grace of the Gospel) set thine Heart towards the high Way, even the Way that thou wentest (when thou didst back-slide) turn again, O Virgin of Israel; turn again to these thy Cities, Jer. 31. 21.

And him that (cometh) He saith not, And him that talketh, that professeth, that maketh a Show, a Noise, or the like, but him that cometh. Christ will take leave to judge, who, among the many that make a Noise, they be that indeed are coming to him. It is not him that saith he comes, nor him of whom others affirm that he comes: But him that Christ himself shall say doth come; that is concerned in this Text. When the Woman that had the Bloody Issue came to him for Cure, there were others as well as she, that made a great Buffle about him, that touched, yea, thronged him; Ah, but Christ could distinguish this Woman from them all. And he looked round about upon them all, to see her that had done this Thing, Mar. 25. 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32.

He was not concerned with the thronging, or touching of the rest; for theirs were but accidental, or at best, void of that which made her touch acceptable. Wherefore Christ must be Judge who they be that in Truth are coming to him; Every Man's Ways is right in his own Eyes, but the Lord weigheth the Spirits: It standeth therefore every one in Hand to be certain of their coming to Jesus Christ; for as thy Coming is, so shall thy Salvation be: If thou comest indeed, thy Salvation shall be indeed; but if thou comest but in outward Appearance, so shall thy Salvation be: But of Coming, see before, as also afterwards in the Use and Application.

And him that cometh (to me.)

These Words (to me) are also to be well heeded; for by them, as he secureth those that that come to him, so also he shews himself unconcerned with those that in their coming rest short, to turn aside to others: For you must know, that every one that comes, comes not to Jesus Christ; some that come, come to Moses, and to his Law, and there take up for Life; with these Christ is not concerned: With these this Promise hath not to do. Christ is become of none Effect unto you: whose of you are justified by the Law, ye are fallen from Grace, Gal. 5. 3, 4. Again, some that came, came no farther than the Gospel-Ordinances, and there stay; they came not through them to Christ: With these neither is he concerned; nor will their Lord, Lord, avail them any Thing in the great and dismal Day. A Man may come to, and also go from the Place and Ordinances of Worship, and yet not be remembered by Christ. So I saw the Wicked buried, said Solomon, who had come and gone from the Place of the Holy, and they were forgotten in the City, where they had so done; this is also Vanity, Eccl. 8. 10.

To me.) These words therefore are by Jesus Christ very warily put in, and serve for Caution and Encouragement; For Caution, lest we take up in our coming any Thing short of Christ; and for Encouragement to those that shall in their coming, come past all, till they come to Jesus Christ: And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

Reader, if thou lovest thy Soul, take this Caution kindly at the Hands of Jesus Christ. Thou seest thy Sicknes, thy Wound, thy Necessity of Salvation: Well, go not to King Jareb, for he cannot heal thee, nor cure thee of thy Wound, Hos. 5. 13. Take the Caution, I say, lest Christ, instead of being a Saviour unto thee, becomes a Lion, a young Lion to tear thee, and go away, verse 4.

There is a coming, but not to the most High: There is a coming, but not with the whole Heart, but as it were feignedly; therefore take the Caution kindly, Jer. 30. 10. Hos. 7. 16.

And him that cometh (To me.) Christ, as a Saviour, will stand alone, because his own Arm alone hath brought Salvation unto him: He will not be joined with Moses, nor suffer John Baptist to be tabernacled by him: I say they must vanish, for Christ will stand alone, (Luke 9. 28, 36.) yea, God the Father will have it so; therefore they must be parted from him, and a Voice from Heaven must come to bid the Disciples hear, only the Beloved Son. Christ will not suffer any Law, Ordinance, Statute, or Judgment to be Partners with him in the Salvation of the Sinner. Nay, he saith not, And him that cometh to my WORD, but, and him that cometh to ME. The Words of Christ, even his most blessed and free Promises, such as this in the Text, are not the Saviour of the World; for that is Christ himself, Christ himself only. The Promises therefore are but to encourage the coming Sinner to come to Jesus Christ, and not to rest in them short of Salvation by him.

And him that cometh (to me,) the Man therefore that comes aright, casts all Things behind his Back, and looketh at (nor hath his Expectation from ought but) the Son of God alone, and David said, My Soul wait thou only upon God; for my Expectation is from him: He only is my Rock, and my Salvation; he is my Defence; I shall not be moved, Psal. 92. 5. His Eye is to Christ, his Heart is to Christ, and his Expectation is from him, from him only:

Therefore the Man that comes to Christ, is one that hath had deep Considerations of his own Sins, slighting Thoughts of his own Righteousness, and high Thoughts of the Blood and Righteousness of Jesus Christ; yea, he sees, as I have said, more Virtue in the Blood of Christ to save him, than there is in all his Sins to damn him. He therefore setteth Christ before his Eyes, there is nothing in Heaven or Earth, he knows, that can save his Soul and secure him from the Wrath of God, but Christ; that is, nothing but his personal Righteousness, and Blood.

And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. In no wise: By these Words there is something expressed; and something implied. That which is expressed is Jesus Christ his unchangeable Resolution to save the coming Sinner; I will in no wise reject him, or deny him the Benefit of my Death and Righteousness. This Word therefore is like that which he speaks of the everlasting Damnation of the Sinner in Hell-fire, he shall by no means depart thence; that is, never, never come out again; no, not to all Eternity, Mat. 5. 25. Chap. 25. 26. So that as he that is condemned into Hell-fire, hath no ground of Hope for his Deliverance thence; so him that cometh to Christ, hath no ground to fear he shall ever be cast in thither.

Thus saith the Lord; If Heaven above can be measured, or the Foundation of the Earth searched out beneath, I will also cast away all the Seed of Israel, for all that they have done, saith the Lord, Jer. 31. 37.

Thus saith the Lord, If my Covenant be not with Day and Night, and if I have not appointed the Ordinances of Heaven and Earth, then will I cast away the Seed of Jacob. But Heaven cannot be measured, nor the Foundations of the Earth searched out beneath; his Covenant is also with Day and Night, and he hath appointed the Ordinances of Heaven; therefore he will not cast away the Seed of Jacob, who are the coming Ones; but will certainly save them from the dreadful Wrath to come, Jer. 33. 25, 26. Chap. 50. 4, 5. By this this therefore it is manifest, that it was not the greatness of Sin, nor the long continuance in it, no nor yet the Backsliding, nor the Pollution of thy Nature, that can put a Bar in against, or be an hindrance of the Salvation of the coming Sinner: For, if indeed this could be, then would this solemn and absolute Determination of the Lord Jesus, of it self fall to the Ground, and be made of none effect: But his Counsel shall stand, and he will do all his Pleasure: That is, his Pleasure in this; for his Promise, as to this irreverfible Conclusion arifeth of his Pleasure; he will stand to it, and will fulfil it, because it is his Pleasure.

Suppose that one Man had the Sins, or as many Sins as an hundred; and another should have an hundred Times as many as he; yet if they come, this Word, I will in no wise cast out, secures them both alike.

Suppose a Man hath a Desire to be faved, and for that Purpose is coming in Truth to Jesus Christ, but he, by his debauched Life, has damned many in Hell; Why the Door of Hope is by these Words fet as open for him, as it is for him that hath not the thousandth part of his Transgressions: And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

Suppose a Man is coming to Christ to be faved, and hath nothing but Sin, and an ill-spent Life to bring with him: Why, let him come, and welcome to Jesus Christ, And he will in no wise cast him out, Luke 7. 41. Is not this Love that passeth knowledge? Is not this Love the Wonderment of Angels? And is not this Love worthy of all Acceptation at the Hands and Hearts of all coming Sinners?

Secondly, That which is implied in the Words, is,

First, The coming Souls have those that continually lie at Jesus Christ, to cast them off.

Secondly, The coming Souls are afraid that those will prevail with Christ to cast them off.

For these Words are spoken to satisfy us, and to stay up our Spirits against these two Dangers: I will in no wise cast out.

First, For the first, Coming Souls have those that continually lie at Jesus Christ to cast them off.

And there are three Things that thus bend themselves against the coming Sinner.

First, There is the Devil, the Accuser of the Brethren, that accuses them before God, Day and Night, Revel. 12. 10. This Prince of Darkness is unwearied in this Work; he doth it, as you see, Day and Night; that is, without ceasing: He continually puts in his Caveats against thee, if so be he may prevail. How did he play it against that good Man Job, if possible he might have obtained his Destruction in Hell-fire? He objected against him that he served not God for Nought, and tempted God to put forth his Hand against him; urging, that if he did it, he would curse him to his Face; and all this as God witnesseth, He did without a Cause, Job 1. 9, 10, 11. Chap. 2. 4, 5. How did he play it with Christ against Joshua the High-Priest? And he shewed me Joshua, said the Prophet, the High-Priest, standing before the Angel of the Lord, and Satan standing at his right Hand to resist him, Zech. 3.

To resist him; that is, to prevail with the Lord Jesus Christ to resist him: Objecting, the Uncleannefs and Unlawful Marriage of his Sons with the Gentiles; for that was the Crime that Satan laid against them, Ezra 10. 18. Yea, and for ought I know, Joshua was also guilty of the Fact; but if not of that, of Crimes no whit inferior; for he was clothed with filthy Garments, as he stood before the Angel: Neither had he One Word to say in Vindication of himself, against all that this wicked One had to say against him. But notwithstanding that, he came off well; but he might for it, thank a good Lord Jesus, because he did not resist him; but contrariwise took up his Cause, pleaded against the Devil, excusing his Infirmary, and put justifying Robes upon him before his Adversaries Face.

And the Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee, O Satan, even the Lord that hath chosen Jerusalem, rebuke thee. Is not this a Brand pluckt out of the Fire? And he answered and spoke to those that stood before him, saying, Take away the filthy Garment from him; and to him he said, Behold, I have caused thine iniquities to pass from thee, and will cloath thee with a Change of Raiment.

Again, how did Satan ply in against Peter, when he desired to have him, that he might sift him as Wheat? That is, if possible, sever all Grace from his Heart, and leave him nothing but Flesh and Filth, to the end that he might make the Lord Jesus loath and abhor him: Simon, Simon, said Christ, Satan hath desired to have you, that he might sift you as Wheat. But did he prevail against him? No, But I have prayed for thee that thy Faith fail not. As who should say, Simon, Satan hath desired me that I would give thee up to him, and not only thee, but all the rest of thy Brethren, (for that the Word you imports;) but I will not leave thee in his hand, I have prayed for thee, thy Faith shall not fail: I will secure thee to the heavenly Inheritance, Luke 22. 30, 31, 32.

Secondly, As Satan, so every Sin of the coming Sinner, comes in with a Voice against him, if perhaps they may prevail with Christ to cast off the Soul. When Israel was coming out of Egypt to Canaan, how many Times had their Sins thrown them out of the Mercy of God, had not Moses,

Moses, as a Type of Christ, stood in the Breach to turn away his Wrath from them, Psal. 106. 23. Our Iniquities testify against us, and would certainly prevail against us, to our utter Rejection and Damnation, had we not an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous, 1 John 2. 1, 2.

The Sins of the Old World cryed them down to Hell; the Sins of Sodom fetched upon them Fire from Heaven, which devoured them; the Sins of the Egyptians cryed them down to Hell, because they came not to Jesus Christ for Life. Coming Sinner, thy Sins are no whit less than any; nay, perhaps they are as big as all theirs: Why is it then that thou livest when they are dead, and that thou hast a Promise of Pardon when they had not: Why, thou art coming to Jesus Christ, and therefore Sin shall not be thy Ruine.

Thirdly, As Satan and Sin, so the Law of Moses, as it is a perfect holy Law, hath a Voice against you before the Face of God. There is one that accuseth you, even Moses's Law, John 5. Yea, it accuseth all Men of Transgression, that have sinned against it; for as long as Sin is Sin, there will be a Law to accuse for Sin: But this Accusation shall not prevail against the coming Sinner; because 'tis Christ that died, and that ever lives, to make Intercession for them that Come to God by him, Rom. 8. Heb. 7. 25.

These Things, I say, do accuse us before Christ Jesus; yea, and also to our own Faces, if perhaps they might prevail against us. But these Words, I will in no wise cast out, secureth the coming Sinner from them all.

The Coming Sinner is not saved because there is none that comes in against him; but because the Lord Jesus will not hear their Accusations; will not cast out the Coming Sinner.

When Shimei came down to meet King David, and to ask Pardon for his Rebellion; up starts Abishai, and puts in his Caveat, saying, Shall not Shimei die for this? This is the Case of him that comes to Christ; He hath this Abishai, and that Abishai that presently steps in against him, saying, Shall not this Rebel's Sin destroy him in Hell? Read farther; But David answered, What have I to do with you, ye Sons of Zerviah, that you should this Day be Adversaries to me? Shall there any Man be put to Death this Day in Israel, for do not I know that I am King this Day over Israel, 2 Sam. 19. 16 to 23.

That is Christ's Answer by the Text, to all that accuse the coming Shimei's; What have I to do with you, that accuse the coming Sinners to me? I count you Adversaries, that are against my shewing Mercy to them. Do not I know, that I am exalted this Day to be King of Righteousness, and King of Peace? I will in no wise cast them out.

teousness, and King of Peace? I will in no wise cast them out.

Secondly, But again, these Words do closely imply, that the coming Souls are afraid, that these Accusers will prevail against them, as is evident, because the Text is spoken for their Relief and Succour: For that need not be, if they that are coming, were not subject to Fear, and despond upon this Account: Alas; there is a Guilt, and the Curse lies upon the Conscience of the coming Sinner!

Besides, he is conscious to himself, what a Villain, what a Wretch he hath been against God and Christ. Also he now knows, by woful Experience, how he hath been at Satan's Beck, and at the Motion of every Lust. He hath now also new Thoughts of the Holiness and Justice of God: Also, he feels, that he cannot forbear sinning against him: For the Motions of Sin, which are by the Law, doth still work in his Members, to bring forth Fruit unto Death, (Rom. 7.) But none of this need discourage, since we have so Good, so tender-hearted, and so faithful a Jesus to come to; who will rather overthrow Heaven and Earth, than suffer a Tittle of this Text to fail: And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

Now, We have yet to enquire into two Things that lie in the Words, to which there hath been nothing said: As

1. What it is to cast out.

2. How it appears that Christ hath Power to save or cast out.

For the first of these, What it is to cast out. To this I will speak,

1. Generally.

2. More particularly.

More generally;

First, To cast out, is to slight and despise, and contemn; as it is said of Saul's Shield, it was vilely cast away; that is, slighted and contemned. Thus it is with the Sinners that come not to Jesus Christ: He slights, despises and contemns them; that is, Casts them away, 2 Sam. 1. 2.

Secondly, Things cast away are reputed as menstruous Cloaths, and as the Dirt of the Street, Isa. 3. 22. Psal. 18. 42. Mat. 5. 13. Chap. 15. 17. And thus it shall be with the Men that come not to Jesus Christ, they shall be counted as Menstruous, and as the Dirt in the Streets.

Thirdly, To be cast out, or off; it is to be abhorred, not to be pitied; but to be put to a perpetual Shame, Psal. 44. 9. Psal. 89. 38. Amos 1. 11.

But more particularly, To come to the Text: The casting out here mentioned, is not limited to this, or the other Evil: Therefore it must be extended to the most extrem and utmost Misery; Or thus,

He that cometh to Christ, shall not want any Thing that may make him Gospelly-happy happy in this World, or that which is to come; Nor shall he want any Thing, that cometh not, that may make him spiritually and eternally miserable.

But further, As it is to be generally taken, so it respecteth Things that shall be hereafter.

For the Things that are now, they are either,

1. More General.

2. Or more Particular.

First, More general, thus,

It is To be cast out of the Presence and Favour of God.

Thus was Cain cast out, thou hast driven (or cast) me out this Day, from thy Face (that is, from thy Favour) shall I be hid. A dreadful Complaint! But the Effect of a more dreadful Judgment! Gen. 4. 13, 14. Jer. 23. 39. Chron. 28. 9.

Secondly, To be cast out, is to be cast out of God's Sight; God will look after them no more, care for them no more; nor will he watch over them any more for Good, (2 Kings 17. 20. Jer. 7. 15.) Now they that are so, are left like Blind Men, to wander and fall into the Pit of Hell. This therefore is also a sad Judgment! Therefore, here is the Mercy of him that Cometh to Christ. He shall not be left to wander at Uncertainties. The Lord Jesus Christ will keep him, as a Shepherd doth his Sheep, Psal. 23. Him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

Thirdly, To be cast out, is to be denied a Place in God's House, and to be left as Fugitives and Vagabonds, to pass a little Time away in this miserable Life, and after that to go down to the Dead, Gal. 4. 30. Gen. 4. 13, 14. Chap. 21. 10. Therefore here is the Benefit of him that cometh to Christ, he shall not be denied a Place in God's House. They shall not be left like Vagabonds in the World, Him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. See Prov. 14. 26. Isa. 56. 3, 4, 5. Ephes. 2. 19, 20, 21, 22. 1 Cor. 3. 21, 22, 23.

Fourthly, In a Word, To be cast out, is to be rejected as are the fallen Angels: For their eternal Damnation began at their being cast down from Heaven to Hell. So then, Not to be cast out, is to have a Place, a House and Habitation there; and to have a Share in the Privileges of elect Angels.

These Words therefore, I will not cast out, will prove great Words One Day, to them that come to Jesus Christ, 2 Pet. 2. 4. John 21. 31. Luke 20. 35.

Secondly, and more particularly.

First, Christ hath everlasting Life for him that cometh to him, and he shall never perish; For he will in no wise cast him out: But for the rest, they are rejected, cast out, and must be damned, John 10. 27, 28.

Secondly, Christ hath everlasting Righteousness, to cloath them with, that come to him, and they shall be covered with it, as with a Garment, but the rest shall be found in the filthy Rags of their own stinking Pollutions, and shall be wrapt up in them, as in a Winding-Sheet, and so bear their Shame before the Lord, and also before the Angels, Dan. 9. 24. Isa. 57. 2. Rev. 3. 4, 18. Chap. 15, 16.

Thirdly, Christ hath precious Blood, that like an open Fountain, stands free for him to wash in, that comes to him for Life, And he will in no wise cast him out: But they that come not to him are rejected from a Share therein, and are left to ireful Vengeance for their Sins, Zech. 13. 1. 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. John 13. 8. Chap. 3. 36.

Fourthly, Christ hath precious Promises, and they shall have a Share in them, that come to him for Life. For he will in no wise cast them out: But they that come not, can have no share in them, because they are true only in him; For in him, and only in him, all the Promises are Yea and Amen. Wherefore they that come not to him, are no whit the better for them, Psal. 50. 16. 2 Cor. 1. 20, 21.

Fifthly, Christ hath also fulness of Grace in himself, for them that come to him for Life, And he will in no wise cast them out: But those that come not unto him, are left in their graceless State, and as Christ leaves them, Death, Hell and Judgment finds them. He that findeth me (saith Christ) findeth Life, and shall obtain Favour of the Lord: But he that sins against me wrongeth his own Soul. All that hate Me, love Death, Prov. 8. 33, 34, 36.

Sixthly, Christ is an Intercessor, and ever liveth to make Intercession for them that come to God by him: But their Sorrows shall be multiplied, that hasten after another (or other) Gods, (their Sins and Lusts:) Their Drink-Offerings will be not offer, nor take up their Names into his Lips, Psal. 16. 4. Heb. 7. 25.

Seventhly, Christ hath wonderful Love, Bowels, and Compassion for those that come to him: For, he will in no wise cast them out. But the rest will find him a Lion Rampant, he will one Day tear them all to pieces. Now consider this (saith he) ye that forget God, lest I tear you in Pieces, and there be none to deliver you, Psal. 50. 22.

Eighthly, Christ is known, by, and for his sake those that come to him, have their Persons and Performances accepted of the Father: And he will in no wise cast them out: But the rest must fly to the Rocks and Mountains for Shelter, but all in vain, to hide them from his Face, and Wrath, Rev. 6. 15, 16, 17.

But again, These words (cast out) have a special Look to what will be hereafter, even at the Day of Judgment: For then, and not till then, will be the great Anathema and Casting-out, made manifest, even manifest manifest by Execution. Therefore, here to speak to this, and that under these two Heads. As,

1. Of the casting out it self.
2. Of the Place into which they shall be cast, that shall then be cast out.

First, The Casting out it self, standeth in two Things :

1. In a Preparatory Work.
2. In the Manner of Executing the Act.

The Preparatory Work standeth in these three Things.

First, It standeth in their Separation, that have not come to him, from them that have, at that Day. Or thus, At the Day of the great Casting-out, those that have not (now) come to him, shall be separated from them that have; for them that have, he will not cast out. When the Son of Man shall come in his Glory, and all his Holy Angels with him, then he shall sit upon the Throne of his Glory, and before him shall be gathered all Nations, and he shall separate them one from another, as a Shepherd divideth the Sheep from the Goats, Mat. 25. 31, 32.

This dreadful Separation therefore shall then be made betwixt them that (now) come to Christ, and them that come not : And good Reason; for since they would not with us come to him, now they have Time; why should they stand with us, when Judgment is come.

Secondly, They shall be placed before him according to their Condition; they that have come to him in great Dignity, even at his Right-Hand, For he will in no wise cast them out: But the rest shall be set at his Left-Hand; the Place of Disgrace and Shame; for they did not come to him for Life.

Distinguished also shall they be by fit Terms : These that come to him he calleth the Sheep, but the rest are Frowish Goats, and he shall separate them one from another, as the Shepherd divideth the Sheep from the Goats; and the Sheep will be set on the Right-Hand, (next Heaven-Gate, for they came to him.) But the Goats on the Left, to go from him into Hell, because they are not of his Sheep.

Thirdly, Then will Christ proceed to Conviction of those that came not to him, and will say, I was a Stranger and ye took me not in, or did not come unto me. Their Excuse of themselves he will slight as Dirt, and proceed to their final Judgment. Now when these wretched Rejectors of Christ shall thus be set before him in their Sins and convicted; this is the Preparatory Work upon which follows the Manner of executing the Act which will be done.

First, In the Presence of all the Holy Angels.

Secondly, In the Presence of all them that in their Life-Time came to him, by saying unto them, Depart from me ye Cursed into everlasting Fire, prepared for the Devil and his Angels, with the Reason annexed to it: For you were cruel to me and mine, particularly discovered in these Words : For I was an hungred, and ye gave me no Meat; thirstily, and ye gave me no Drink; I was a Stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye cloathed me not; Sick and in Prison, and ye visited me not, Mat. 25. 41, 42, 43.

Lastly, Now it remains that we speak of the Place into which these shall be cast, which in the general you have heard already, to wit, the Fire prepared for the Devil and his Angels : But in particular, it is thus described :

First, It is called Tophet : For Tophet is ordained of old, yea, for the King (the Lucifer) it is prepared, he hath made it deep and large, the Pile thereof is Fire and much Wood, the Breath of the Lord like a Stream of Brimstone doth kindle it, Isa. 30. 32.

Secondly, It is called Hell. It is better for thee to enter into Life, halt or lame, than having two Feet to be cast into Hell, Mark 9. 45.

Thirdly, It is called the Wine-press of the Wrath of God : And the Angel thrust in his Sickle into the Earth, and gathered the Vine of the Earth (that is, them that did not come to Christ) and cast them out into that great Wine-press of the Wrath of God, Rev. 14. 19.

Fourthly, It is called a Lake of Fire. And whatsoever was not found written in the Book of Life, was cast into the Lake of Fire, Rev. 20. 15.

Fifthly, It is called a Pit. Thou hast said in thy Heart, I will ascend to Heaven, I will exalt my Throne above the Stars of God, I will sit also upon the Mount of the Congregation, in the Sides of the North— Yet thou shalt be brought down to Hell, to the Sides of the Pit, Isa. 14. 13, 14, 15.

Sixthly, It is called a bottomless Pit, out of which the Smoak and the Locusts came, and into which the great Dragon was cast; and it is called bottomless, to shew the endlessness of the Fall that they will have into it, that come not in the acceptable Time to Jesus Christ, Rev. 9. 1, 2. Chap. 20. 3.

Seventhly, It is called Outer Darknes, Bind him Hand and Foot, and cast him into Outer Darknes, and cast ye the unprofitable Servant into Outer Darknes, there shall be Weeping and Gnashing of Teeth, Mat. 22. 23. Chap. 25. 13.

Eighthly, It is called a Furnace of Fire. As therefore the Tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the End of this World : The Son of Man shall send forth his Angels, and he shall gather out of his Kingdom all Things that offend, and them that do Iniquity, and shall cast them into a Furnace of Fire, there shall be Weeping and Gnashing of Teeth : And again, So shall it be in the End of the World, the Angels shall come.

come forth and sever the Wicked from among the Just, and shall cast them into a Furnace of Fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of Teeth, Mat. 13. 41 to 51.

Lastly, It may not be amiss, if in the Conclusion of this, I shew in few Words, to what the Things that torment them in this State, are compared. Indeed some of them have been occasionally mentioned already; as that they are compared,

First, To Wood that burneth.

Secondly, To Fire.

Thirdly, To Fire and Brimstone: But,

Fourthly, It is compared to a Worm, a gnawing Worm, a never dying gnawing Worm: They are cast into Hell, where their Worm dieth not, Mark 9. 44.

Fifthly, It is called unquenchable Fire: He will gather his Wheat into his Garner; But will burn up the Chaff with unquenchable Fire, Mat. 3. 12. Luke 3. 17.

Sixthly, It is called everlasting Destruction. The Lord Jesus shall descend from Heaven with his mighty Angels in flaming Fire, taking Vengeance on them that know not God; and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall be punished with everlasting Destruction from the Presence of the Lord, and from the Glory of his Power, 2 Thes. 1. 7, 8, 9.

Seventhly, It is called, Wrath without Mixture, and is given them in the Cup of his Indignation. If any Man worship the Beast, and his Image, and receive his Mark in his Forehead, or in his Hand, the same shall drink of the Wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture, in the Cup of his Indignation, and he shall be tormented with Fire and Brimstone, in the Presence of the Holy Angels, and in the Presence of the Lamb, Rev. 14. 9, 10.

Eighthly, It is called the second Death. And Death and Hell were cast into the Lake of Fire, this is the second Death. Blessed and Holy is he that hath Part in the first Resurrection, on such the second Death hath no Power, Rev. 20. 14. Chap. 2. 6.

Ninthly, It is called Eternal Damnation. But he that shall Blaspheme against the Holy Ghost, hath never Forgiveness, but is in Danger of Eternal Damnation.

Oh! These three Words!

Everlasting Punishment!

Eternal Damnation!

And for Ever and Ever.

How will they gnaw and eat up all the Expectation of the End of the Misery of the Cast-away Sinners. And the Smoak of their Torment ascended up for Ever and Ever, and they have no Rest Day nor Night, &c. Rev. 14. 11.

Their Behaviour in Hell is set forth by four Things as I know of.

1. By calling for Help and Relief in vain.

2. By Weeping.

3. By Wailing.

4. By Gnashing of Teeth.

And now we come to the second Thing that is to be inquired into; namely,

How it appears that Christ hath Power to save, or to cast out: For by these Words, I will in no wise cast out, he declareth that he hath Power to do both.

Now this Inquiry admits us to search into two Things.

1. How it appears that he hath Power to save.

2. How it appears that he hath Power to cast out.

That he hath Power to save, appears by that which follows.

First, To speak only of him as he is Mediator: He was authorized to this blessed Work by his Father before the World began. Hence the Apostle said, He hath chosen us in him, before the Foundation of the World, with all those Things that effectually will produce our Salvation. Read the same Chapter with 2 Tim. 1. 9.

Secondly, He was promised to our first Parents, that he should, in the fulness of Time, bruise the Serpent's Head; and, as Paul expounds it, redeem them that were under the Law: Hence, since that Time, he hath been reckoned as slain for our Sins: By which Means all the Fathers under the first Testament were secured from the Wrath to come; hence he is called, The Lamb slain from the Foundation of the World, Rev. 13. 8. Gen. 3. 15. Gal. 4. 4, 5.

Thirdly, Moses gave Testimony of him by the Types and Shadows, and Bloody Sacrifices, that he commanded from the Mouth of God, to be in use to the Support of his Peoples Faith, until the Time of Reformation; which was the Time of this Jesus his Death, Heb. 9, and 10th Chapters.

Fourthly, At the Time of his Birth 'twas testified of him by the Angel, That he should save his People from their Sins, Mat. 1. 20, 21.

Fifthly, It is testified of him in the Days of his Flesh, that he had Power on Earth to forgive Sins, Mark 2. 5 to 11.

Sixthly, It is testified also of him by the Apostle Peter; that God had exalted him with his own right Hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, to give Repentance to Israel, and Forgiveness of Sins, Acts 30. 31.

Seventhly, In a Word, This is every where testified of him, both in the Old Testament and the New.

And good Reason that he should be acknowledged and trusted in as a Saviour.

1. He came down from Heaven to be a Saviour, John 6. 38, 39, 40.

2. He was anointed when on Earth to be a Saviour, Luke 3. 22.

3. He did the Works of a Saviour: As,

First,

First, He fulfilled the Law, and became the End of it for Righteousness, for them that believe in him, Rom. 10. 3, 4.

Secondly, He laid down his Life as a Saviour; He gave his Life as a Ransom for many, Matth. 20. 28. Mark 10. 45. 1 Tim. 2. 6.

Thirdly, He hath abolished Death, destroyed the Devil, put away Sin, got the Keys of Hell and Death, is ascended into Heaven; is there accepted of God, and did sit at the right Hand, as a Saviour; and that because his Sacrifice for Sins pleased God, 2 Tim. 1. 10. Heb. 2. 14, 15. Ephes. 4. 7, 8. John 16. 10, 11. Acts 5. 30, 31. Heb. 10. 12, 13.

Fourthly, God hath sent out and proclaimed him as a Saviour, and tells the World, that we have Redemption through his Blood, that he will justify us, if we believe in his Blood, and that he can faithfully and justly do it. Yea, God doth beseech us to be reconciled to him by his Son; which could not be, if he were not anointed by him to this very End, and also if his Works and Undertakings were not accepted of him considered as a Saviour, Rom. 3. 24, 25. 2 Cor. 5. 18, 19, 20, 21.

Fifthly, God hath already received Millions of Souls, into his Paradise, because they have received this Jesus for a Saviour; and is resolved to cut them off, and to cast them out of his Presence, that will not take him for a Saviour, Heb. 12. 22, 23, 24, 25, 26.

I intend brevity here; therefore a Word to the Second, and so conclude.

How it appears that he hath Power to cast out.

This appears also by what follows:

First, The Father (for the Service that he hath done him as a Saviour) hath made him Lord of all, even Lord of Quick and Dead. For to this End Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the Dead and Living, Rom. 14. 9.

Secondly, The Father hath left it with him to quicken whom he will, to wit, with saving Grace, and to cast out whom he will, for their Rebellion against him, John 5. 22.

Thirdly, The Father hath made him Judge of Quick and Dead, hath committed all Judgment unto the Son, and appointed that all should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father, John 22. 5.

Fourthly, God will judge the World by this Man; the Day is appointed for Judgment, and he is appointed for Judge. He hath appointed a Day in the which he will judge the World in Righteousness, by that Man, Acts 17. 31, 32.

Therefore we must all appear before the Judgment Seat of Christ, that every one may receive for the Things done in the Body, according to what they have done. If they have closed with him, Heaven and Salvation; if they have not, Hell and Damnation.

And for these Reasons he must be Judge.

First, Because of his Humiliation, because of his Father's Word he humbled himself, and he became obedient unto Death, even the Death of the Cross: Therefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a Name above every Name; that at the Name of Jesus every Knee should bow; both of Things in Heaven, and Things on Earth, and Things under the Earth; and that every Tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is the Lord, to the Glory of God the Father.

This hath respect to his being Judge, and his sitting in Judgment upon Angels and Men, Phil. 2. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11.

Secondly, That all Men might honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. For the Father judgeth no Man, but hath committed all Judgment unto the Son; that all Men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father, John 5. 22, 23.

Thirdly, Because of his righteous Judgment, this Work is fit for no Creature; it is only fit for the Son of God. For he will reward every Man according to his Ways, Rev. 2. 2.

Fourthly, Because he is the Son of Man. He hath given him Authority to execute Judgment also, because he is the Son of Man, John 5. 27.

Thus have I in brief passed through this Text by Way of Explication; my next Work is to speak to it by Way of Observation: But I shall be also as brief in that, as the Nature of the Thing will admit.

All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me; and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out; John 6. 37.

And now I come to some Observations, and a little briefly to speak to them, and then conclude the Whole.

The Words thus explained, afford us many, some of which are these.

First, That God the Father, and Christ his Son, are Two distinct Persons in the Godhead.

Secondly, That by them (not excluding the Holy Ghost) is contrived, and determined the Salvation of fallen Mankind.

Thirdly, That this Contrivance, resolved itself into a Covenant between these Persons in the Godhead, which standeth in Giving, on the Father's Part: and Receiving on the Son's. All that the Father giveth me, &c.

Fourthly, That every one that the Father hath given to Christ (according to the Mind of God in the Text) shall certainly come to him.

Fifthly, That coming to Jesus Christ, is therefore not by the Will, Wisdom or Power of of Man: But by the Gift, Promise, and Drawing of the Father. (All that the Father giveth me, shall come.)

Sixthly, That Jesus Christ will be careful to receive, and will not in any wise reject those that come, or are coming to him. (And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.)

There are, besides these, some other Truths implied in the Words. As, Seventhly, They that are coming to Jesus Christ, are oft-times heartily afraid that he will not receive them.

Eighthly, Jesus Christ would not have them, that in Truth are coming to him, once think that he will cast them out.

These Observations lie all of them in the Words, and are plentifully confirmed by the Scriptures of Truth; but I shall not at this Time speak to them all, but shall pass by the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Sixth, partly, because I design Brevity, and partly, because they are touched upon, in the Explicatory Part of the Text. I shall therefore begin with the Fifth Observation, and so make that the First in Order, in the following Discourse.

First then, Coming to Christ is not by the Will, Wisdom or Power of Man, but by the Gift, Promise and Drawing of the Father. This Observation standeth of Two Parts.

First, The coming to Christ is not by the Will, Wisdom or Power of Man.

Secondly, But by the Gift, Promise and Drawing of the Father.

That the Text carrieth this Truth in its Bosom, you will find if you look into the Explication of the first Part thereof before; I shall therefore here follow the Method propounded, viz. shew,

First, That coming to Christ is not by the Will, Wisdom or Power of Man: This is true, because the Word doth positively say it is not.

First, It denieth it to be by the Will of Man. Not of Blood, nor of the Will of the Flesh, nor of the Will of Man. And again, It is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, John 1. 13. Rom. 9. 16.

Secondly, It denieth it to be of the Wisdom of Man, as is manifest from these Considerations:

First, In the Wisdom of God it pleased him, that the World by Wisdom should not know him. Now if by their Wisdom they cannot know him, it follows, by that Wisdom, they cannot come unto him; for coming to him, is not before, but after some Knowledge of him, 1 Cor. 1. 21. Acts 13. 27. Psal. 9. 10.

Secondly, The Wisdom of Man, in God's Account, as to the Knowledge of Christ, is reckoned Foolishness. Hath not God made Foolish the Wisdom of this World: And again, The Wisdom of this World is Foolishness with God.

If God hath made Foolish the Wisdom of this World; and again, if the Wisdom of this World is Foolishness with him, then verily it is not likely, that by that, a Sinner should become so Prudent, as to come to Jesus Christ; especially if you consider,

Thirdly, That the Doctrine of a crucified Christ, and so of Salvation by him, is the very Thing that is counted Foolishness to the Wisdom of the World: Now, if the very Doctrine of a crucified Christ be counted Foolishness by the Wisdom of this World, it cannot be, that by that Wisdom a Man should be drawn out, in his Soul, to come to him, 1 Cor. 1. 20. Chap. 2. 14. Chap. 3. 19. Chap. 1. 18, 23.

Fourthly, God counted the Wisdom of this World one of his greatest Enemies, therefore by that Wisdom no Man can come to Jesus Christ. For it is not likely that one of God's greatest Enemies, should draw a Man to that which best of all pleaseth God, as coming to Christ doth. Now, that God counteth the Wisdom of this World one of his greatest Enemies, is evident,

First, For that it casteth the greatest Contempt upon his Son's Undertaking, as afore is proved, in that it counts his Crucifixion foolishness: Though that be one of the highest Demonstrations of Divine Wisdom, Ephes. 1. 7, 8.

Secondly, Because God hath threatned to destroy it, and bring it to nought, and cause it to perish; which surely he would not do, was it not an Enemy, would it direct Men to, and cause them to close with Jesus Christ. See Isa. 29. 14. 1 Cor. 1. 19.

Thirdly, He hath rejected it from helping in the Ministry of his Word, as a fruitless Business, and a Thing that comes to nought, 1 Cor. 2, 4, 6, 12, 13.

Fourthly, Because it causeth to perish those that seek it, and pursue it, 1 Cor. 1. 18, 19.

Fifthly, And God has proclaimed, That if any Man will be wise in this World, he must be a Fool in the Wisdom of this World, and that's the Way to be wise in the Wisdom of God. If any Man will be wise in this World, let him become a Fool, that he may be wise. For the Wisdom of this World is Foolishness with God, 1 Cor. 3. 18, 19, 20.

Thirdly, Coming to Christ, is not by the Power of Man. This is evident, partly,

First, From that which goeth before: For Man's Power, in the putting forth of it, in this Matter, is either stirred up with Love, or Sense of Necessity; but the Wisdom of this World neither gives Man Love to, or Sense of a Need of Jesus Christ; therefore his Power lieth still, as from that.

Secondly, What Power has he that is dead; as every natural Man spiritual is; even even dead in Trespases and Sins? Dead, even as dead to God's New Testament Things, as he that is in his Grave, is dead to the Things of this World. What Power hath he then, whereby to come to Jesus Christ, John 5. 25. Ephes. 2. 1. Col. 2. 13.

Thirdly, God forbids the mighty Man's Glory in his Strength, and says positively, By Strength shall no Man prevail: and again, Not by Might, nor by Power, but my Spirit, saith the Lord, Jer. 9. 23, 24. 1 Sam. 2. 9. Zech. 4. 6. 1 Cor. 27. 28, 29, 30, 31.

Fourthly, Paul acknowledgeth that Man, nay, converted Man of himself, hath not a Sufficiency of Power in himself to think a good Thought; if not to do that which is least, for to think is less than to come; then no Man by his own Power can come to Jesus Christ, 2 Cor. 3. 5.

Fifthly, Hence we are said to be made willing to come, by the Power of God; to be raised from a State of Sin, to a State of Grace, by the Power of God; and to believe, that is, to come, through the exceeding Working of his mighty Power, Psalm 110. 3. Col. 2. 12. Ephes. 1. 18, 20. See also, Job 46. 14.

But this needeth not, if either Man had Power or Will to come; or so much as graciously to think of being willing to come (of themselves) to Jesus Christ.

I should now come to the Power of the second Part of the Observation, but that is occasionally done already, in the Explanatory Part of the Text; to which I refer the Reader: For I shall here only give thee a Text or two more to the same Purpose, and so come to the Use and Application.

First, It is expressly said, No Man can come to me except the Father which hath sent me, draw him. By this Text, there is not only insinuated, that in Man is want of Power, but of Will, to come to Jesus Christ, they must be drawn, they come not if they be not drawn: And observe, it is not Man, no nor all the Angels of Heaven that can draw one Sinner to Jesus Christ. No Man cometh to me, except the Father, which hath sent me, draw him, John 6. 44.

Secondly, Again, No Man can come to me, except it were given him of my Father, Job. 6. 65. It is an Heavenly Gift that maketh Man come to Jesus Christ.

Thirdly, Again, It is written in the Prophets, they shall be all taught of God; every one therefore that hath heard and learned of the Father cometh to me, John 6. 45.

I shall not enlarge, but shall make some Use and Application, and so come to the next Observation.

First, Is it so, Is coming to Jesus Christ, not by the Will, Wisdom or Power of Man, but by the Gift, Promise, and Drawing of the Father? Then they are to blame that cry up the Will, Wisdom, and Power of Man; as Things sufficient to bring Men to Christ.

There are some Men who think they may not be contradicted, when they plead for the Will, Wisdom, and Power of Man, in reference to the Things that are of the Kingdom of Christ: But I will say to such a Man, he never yet came to understand, that himself is, what the Scripture teacheth concerning him: Neither did he ever know, what coming to Christ is, by the teaching Gift, and drawing of the Father. He is such a One that hath set up God's Enemy in Opposition to him, and that continueth in such Acts of Defiance; and what his End without a new Birth will be, the Scripture teacheth also: But we will pass this.

Secondly, Is it so? Is coming to Jesus Christ, by the Gift, Promise, and drawing of the Father, then let Saints here learn, to ascribe their coming to Christ, to the Gift, Promise, and drawing of the Father. Christian Man, bless God, who hath given thee to Jesus Christ, by Promise; and again, bless God for that he hath drawn thee to him. And why is it thee? Why not another? O that the Glory of Electing Love should rest upon thy Head, and that the Glory of the exceeding Grace of God should take hold of thy Heart, and bring thee to Jesus Christ.

Thirdly, Is it so? That coming to Christ is by the Father, as aforesaid? Then this should teach us to set a high Esteem upon them that are indeed coming to Jesus Christ: I say, an high Esteem on them, for the sake of him, by Virtue of whose Grace they are made to come to Jesus Christ.

We see, that when Men, by the Help of humane Abilities, do arrive at the Knowledge of, and bring to pass that which, when done, is a Wonder to the World; how he that did it, is esteemed and commended. Yea, how are his Wits, Parts, Industry, and Unweariedness in all, admired, and yet the Man, as to this is but of the World, and his Work the Effect of natural Ability: The Things also attained by him, end in Vanity and Vexation of Spirit. Further, perhaps in the Pursuit of these his Atchievements, he sins against God, wastes his Time vainly, and at long-run loses his Soul by neglecting of better Things: Yet he is admired! But I say, If this Man's Parts, Labour, Diligence, and the like, will bring him to such Applause and Esteem in the World; what Esteem should we have of such an One that is by the Gift, Promise, and Power of God, coming to Jesus Christ.

First, This is a Man with whom God is, in whom God works and walks; a Man whose Motion is governed and steered by the mighty Hand of God, and the effectual working of his Power, Here's a Man!

Secondly, This Man, by the Power of God's Might, which worketh in him, is able able to cast a whole World behind him, with all the Lusts, and Pleasures of it; and to charge through all the Difficulties that Men and Devils can set against him; Here's a Man.

Thirdly, This Man is travelling to Mount Zion, the Heavenly Jerusalem; the City of the living God, and to an innumerable Company of Angels; and the Spirits of Just Men made perfect, to God the Judge of all, and to Jesus; Here's a Man!

Fourthly, This Man can look upon Death with Comfort, can laugh at Destruction when it cometh; and long to hear the Sound of the last Trump; and to see the Judge coming in the Clouds of Heaven; Here's a Man indeed!

Let Christians then esteem each other as such: I know you do; but do it more and more. And that you may, consider these two or three Things.

First, These are the Objects of Christ's Esteem. Mat. 12. 48. Chap. 15. 22 to 29. Luke 7. 9.

Secondly, These are the Objects of the Esteem of Angels, Dan. 9. 12. Chap. 10, 11. Chap. 12. 4. Heb. 1. 14.

Thirdly, These have been the Objects of the Esteem of Heathens, when but convinced about them, Dan. 5. 10. Acts. 5. 15. 1 Cor. 14. 24, 25.

Let each of you then esteem each other better than themselves, Phil. 3. 2.

Fourthly, Again, Is it so, That no Man comes to Jesus Christ, by the Will, Wisdom and Power of Man; But by the Gift, Power, and Drawing of the Father? Then this shews us how horribly ignorant of this such are, who make the Men that is coming to Christ the Object of their Contempt and Rage. These are also unreasonable and wicked Men. Men in whom is no Faith, 1 Thes. 3. 2.

Sinners, did you but know what a blessed Thing it is, to come to Jesus Christ, and that by the Help and Drawing of the Father, they do indeed come to him: You would hang and burn in Hell a Thousand Years before you would turn your Spirits as you do, against him that God is drawing to Jesus Christ, and also against the God that draws him.

But faithless Sinner, let us a little expostulate the Matter. What hath this Man done against thee, that is coming to Jesus Christ? Why dost thou make him the Object of thy Scorn? Doth his coming to Jesus Christ offend thee? Doth his pursuing of his own Salvation offend thee? Doth his forsaking of his Sins and Pleasures offend thee?

Poor coming Man! Thou sacrificest the Abominations of the Egyptians before their Eyes, and will they not stone thee? Exod. 8. 26.

But I say, Why offended at this? Is he ever the worse, for coming to Jesus Christ, | or for his loving and serving of Jesus Christ? Or is he ever the more a Fool, for flying from that which will drown thee in Hell-Fire, and for seeking Eternal Life? Besides, Pray Sirs, consider it, this he doth not of himself, but by the Drawing of the Father. Come, let me tell thee in thine Ear, thou that will not come to him thy self, and him that would thou hinderest.

First, Thou shalt be judged for one that hath hated, maligned, and reproached Jesus Christ, to whom this poor Sinner is coming.

Secondly, Thou shalt be judged too, for one that hath hated the Father, by whose powerful Drawing the Sinner doth come.

Thirdly, Thou shalt be taken, and judged, for one that has done despite to the Spirit of Grace in him, that is by its Help, coming to Jesus Christ. What say'st thou now? Wilt thou stand by thy Doings? Wilt thou continue to contemn and reproach the Living God? Thinkest thou that thou shalt weather it out well enough at the Day of Judgment? Can thine Heart endure, or can thine hands be strong, in the Days that I shall deal with thee, saith the Lord? John 15. 18 to 27. Jude 14, 15. 1 Thes. 4. 8. Ezek. 22. 14.

Fifthly, Is it so, That no Man comes to Jesus Christ by the Will, Wisdom, and Power of Man, but by the Gift, Promise, and Drawing of the Father? Then this sheweth us, how it comes to pass, that weak Means are so powerful as to bring Men out of their Sins, to a hearty Pursuit after Jesus Christ: When God bid Moses speak to the People, he said, I will speak with thee, Exod. 19. When God speaks, when God works, who can let it? None, none, Then the Work goes on, Elias threw his Mantle upon the Shoulders of Elisha; and what a wonderful Work followed! When Jesus fell in with the Crowing of a Cock, what Work was there! O when God is in the Means, then shall that Means (be it never so weak, and contemptible in it self) work Wonders, 1 Kings 19. 19. Mat. 26. 74, 75. Mark 14. 71, 72. Luke 22. 60, 61, 62.

The World understood not, nor believed that the Walls of Jericho should fall at the Sound of Rams Horns; but when God will work, the Means must be effectual. A Word weakly spoken, spoken with difficulty, in Temptation, and in the midst of great contempt and scorn, works Wonders: If the Lord thy God will say so too.

Sixthly, Is it so? Doth no Man come to Jesus Christ, by the Will, Wisdom, and Power of Man; but by the Gift, Promise, and Drawing of the Father? Then here is Room for Christians to stand and wonder at the effectual working of God's Providences, that he hath made use of, as Means to bring them to Jesus Christ.

For

For although Men are drawn to Christ by the Power of the Father, yet that Power putteth forth it self in the Use of Means; and these Means are divers; sometimes this, sometimes that; for God is at Liberty to work, by which, and when, and how he will: but let the Means be what they will, and as contemptible as may be; yet God that commanded the Light to shine out of Darkness, and that out of Weakness can make strong; can, nay doth oft-times make Use of very unlikely Means to bring about the Conversion and Salvation of his People. Therefore, you that are come to Christ (and that by unlikely Means) stay your selves; and wonder, and wondering, magnify Almighty Power, by the Work of which, the Means hath been made effectual to bring you to Jesus Christ.

What was the Providence that God made Use of as a Means either more remote, or more near, to bring thee to Jesus Christ? Was it the removing of thy Habitation, the Change of thy Condition, the Loss of Relations, Estate, or the like? Was it the Casting of thine Eye upon some good Book, the hearing of thy Neighbours talk of Heavenly Things, the beholding of God's Judgments as executed upon others, or thine own Deliverance from them; or thy being strangely cast under the Ministry of some Godly Man? O take notice of such Providence or Providences! They were sent and managed by mighty Power to do thee Good. God himself, I say, hath joined himself to this Chariot: Yea, and so blessed it, that it failed not to accomplish the Thing for which he sent it.

God blesteth not to every one his Providences in this Manner: How many Thousands are there in this World, that pass every Day under the same Providences; but God is not in them, to do that Work by them, as he hath done for thy poor Soul, by his effectually working with them. O! That Jesus Christ should meet thee in this Providence, that Dispensation, or the other Ordinance! This is Grace indeed! At this therefore, it will be thy Wisdom to admire, and for this to bless God.

Give me leave to give you a Taste of some of those Providences that have been effectual, through the Management of God, to bring Salvation to the Souls of his People.

First, The first shall be that of the Woman of Samaria. It must happen, that she must needs go out of the City to draw Water (not before nor after, but) just when Jesus Christ her Saviour was come from far, and set to rest him (being weary) upon the Well: What a blessed Providence was this! Even a Providence managed by the Almighty Wisdom, and Almighty Power, to the Conversion and Salvation of this poor Creature. For by this Providence was this poor Creature, and her Saviour brought together; that a blessed Work might be fulfilled upon the Woman, according to the Purpose afore determined by the Father, John 4.

Secondly, What Providence was it, that there should be a Tree in the Way for Zachaeus to climb, thereby to give Jesus Opportunity to call that Chief of the Publicans home to himself, even before he came down therefrom, Luke 19.

Thirdly, Was it not also wonderful, that the Thief, which you read of in the Gospel, should by the Providence of God be cast into Prison, to be condemned, even at that Sessions that Christ himself was to die; nay, and that it should happen too, that they must be hanged together, that the Thief might be in hearing and observing of Jesus in his last Words, that he might be converted by him before his Death? Luke 23.

Fourthly, What a strange Providence was it, and as strangely managed by God, that Onesimus when he was run away from his Master, should be taken, and as I think; cast into that very Prison, where Paul lay bound for the Word of the Gospel; that he might there be by him converted, and then sent home again to his Master Philemon! Behold all Things work together for Good, to them that love God; to them who are the Called according to his Purpose, Rom. 8.

Nay, I have my self known some that have been made to go to hear the Word preached against their Wills; others have gone not to hear, but to see and to be seen; nay, to jeer and flout others; as also to catch and carp at Things. Some also to feed their Adulterous Eyes with the Sight of beautiful Objects; and yet God hath made use of even these Things, and even of the wicked and sinful Proposals of Sinners, to bring them under the Grace that might save their Souls.

Seventhly, Doth no Man come to Jesus Christ, but by the drawing, &c. of the Father? Then let me here caution those poor Sinners, that are Spectators of the Change that God hath wrought in them that are coming to Jesus Christ, not to attribute this Work and Change to other Things and Causes.

There are some poor Sinners in the World, that plainly see a Change, a mighty Change in their Neighbours and Relations that are coming to Jesus Christ: But as I said, they being ignorant, and not knowing whence it comes, and whether it goes, for so is every one that is born of the Spirit, John 3. 8.

Therefore, they attribute this Change to other Causes: As,

1. Melancholy.
2. To sitting alone.
3. To overmuch Reading.
4. To their going to too many Sermons.
5. To too much Studying, and Musing on what they hear.

Also, they conclude on the other Side :

First, That it is for want of merry Company.

Secondly, For want of Physick, and therefore they advise them to leave off Reading, going to Sermons, the Company of sober People, and to be merry, to go a gossiping, to busy themselves in the Things of this World; not to sit musing alone, &c.

But come poor ignorant Sinner, let me deal with thee, it seems thou art turned Counsellor for Satan: I tell thee, thou knowest not what thou doest. Take heed of spending thy Judgment after this Manner; thou judgest foolishly, And sayest in this to every one that passeth by, thou art a Fool.

What! Count Convictions for Sin, Mourning for Sin, and Repentance for Sin, Melancholy; this is like those that on the other Side said, These Men are drunk with new Wine, &c. Or, as he that said, Paul was mad, Acts 2. 23. Chap 26. 24.

Poor ignorant Sinner, canst thou judge no better? What! Is sitting alone, pensive under God's Hand; reading the Scriptures, and hearing of Sermons, &c. the Way to be undone? The Lord open thine Eyes, and make thee to see thine Error: Thou hast set thy self against God, thou hast despised the Operation of his Hands, thou attemptest to murder Souls. What! Canst thou give no better Counsel touching those whom God hath wounded, than to send them to the Ordinances of Hell for help? Thou bidst them be merry and lightsome: But dost thou not know that, The Heart of Fools is in the House of Laughter, Eccles. 7.

4. Thou biddest them shun the Hearing of thundring Preachers; But is it not better to hear the Rebuke of the Wise, than for a Man to hear the Song of Fools, ver. 5. Thou biddest them busy themselves in the Things of this World; but dost thou not know that the Lord bids, First seek the Kingdom of God, and the Righteousness thereof, Mat. 3. 36.

Poor ignorant Sinner, hear the Counsel of God to such, and learn thy self to be wiser, Is any afflicted, let him pray: Is any merry, let him sing Psalms. Blessed is he that beareth me; and hear for Time to come: Save your selves from this untoward Generation. Search the Scriptures, give Attendance to Reading. It is better to go to the House of Mourning, James 5. 13. Prov. 8. 32, 33. Acts 2. 40. John 5. 39. 1 Tim. 5. 13. Eccles. 7. 1, 2, 3.

And wilt thou judge him that doth thus? Art thou almost like Elimas, the Sorcerer, that sought to turn the Deputy from the Faith? Thou seekest to pervert the right Ways of the Lord; take heed lest some heavy Judgment overtake thee, Acts 13. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

What! Teach Men to quench Convictions, take Men off from a serious Consideration of the Evil of Sin, of the Terrors of the World to come, and how they shall escape the same. What! Teach Men to put God and his Word out of their Minds, by running to merry Company, by running to the World, by Gossiping, &c. This is as much as to bid them say to God, Depart from us; for we desire not the Knowledge of thy Ways; or, What's the Almighty, that we should serve him? or, What Profit have we, if we keep his Ways? Here's a Devil in grain! What, bid Man walk according to the Course of this World, according to the Prince of the Power of the Air, the Spirit that now worketh in the Children of Disobedience, Ephes. 2.

Objection.

But we do not know that such are coming to Jesus Christ, truly we wonder at them, and think they are Fools.

Ans. First, Do you not know that they are coming to Jesus Christ? Then they may be coming to him, for ought you know; and why will you be worse than the Brute, to speak evil of the Things you know not? What! Are ye made to be taken and destroyed, must ye utterly perish in your own Corruptions? 2 Pet. 2. 12.

Secondly, Do you not know them? Let them alone then. If you cannot speak good of them, speak not bad; Refrain from these Men, and let them alone, for if this Counsel, or this Work, be of Men, it will come to nought; but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it, lest happily ye be found even to fight against God, Acts 5. 38, 39.

Thirdly, But why do you wonder at a Work of Conviction and Conversion? Know you not that this is the Judgment of God upon you? Ye despisers, To behold and wonder, and perish, Acts 13. 40, 41.

Fourthly, But why wonder, and think they are Fools? Is the Way of the Just an Abomination to you? See that Passage and be ashamed, He that is upright in the Way, is an Abomination to the Wicked, Prov. 29. 27.

Fifthly, Your wondering at them, argues that you are Strangers to your selves, to Conviction for Sin, and to hearty Desires to be saved; as also coming to Jesus Christ.

Objection.

But how shall we know that such Men are coming to Jesus Christ?

Ans. Who can make them see that Christ has made blind? (Joh. 2. 3, 9.) Nevertheless, because I endeavour thy Conviction, Conversion and Salvation, consider.

1. Do they cry out of Sin, being burdened with it, as of an exceeding bitter Thing?

2. Do they fly from it, as from the Face of a deadly Serpent?

3. Do they cry out of the Insufficiency of their own Righteousness, as to Justification in the Sight of God?

4. Do

4. Do they cry out after the Lord Jesus, to save them?

5. Do they see more Worth and Merit in one Drop of Christ's Blood to save them, than in all the Sins of the World to damn them?

6. Are they tender of sinning against Jesus Christ.

7. Is his Name, Person, and Undertakings more precious to them, than is the Glory of the World?

8. Is this World more dear unto them?

9. Is Faith in Christ (of which they are convinced by God's Spirit of the want of, and that without it they can never close with Christ) precious to them?

10. Do they favour Christ in his Word, and do they leave all the World for his sake? And are they willing (God helping them) to run Hazards for his Name, for the Love they bear to him?

11. Are his Saints precious to them?

If these Things be so, whether thou feest them or no, these Men are coming to Jesus Christ, Rom. 7. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. Psal. 38. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. Heb. 6. 18, 19, 20. Isa. 64. 6. Phil. 3. 7, 8. Psal. 54. 1. Psal. 109. 26. Acts 16. 30. Psal. 51. 7, 8. 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. Rom. 7. 24. 2 Cor. 5. 2. Acts 5. 41. Ja. 2. 7. Phil. 3. 7, 8. Song 5. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. Psal. 119. Ephes. 4. 16. Phil. 7. 1 Cor. 16. 24.

The Second Observation.

I come now to the second Observation propounded to be spoken to; to wit,

That they that are coming to Jesus Christ, are oft-times heartily afraid that Jesus Christ will not receive them.

I told you that this Observation is implied in the Text, and I gather it from the largeness and openness of the Promise, (I will in no wise cast out.) For had there not been a Proneness in us to fear casting out, Christ needed not to have, as it were, way-laid our Fear, as he doth by this great and strange Expression, In no wise; (And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.) There needed not, as I may say, such a Promise to be invented by the Wisdom of Heaven, and worded at such a Rate, as it were on purpose to dash in Pieces at one Blow, all the Objections of coming Sinners; if they were not prone to admit of such Objections, to the discouraging of their own Souls. For this Word, in no wise, cutteth the Throat of all Objections; and it was dropt by the Lord Jesus for that very End; and to help the Faith that is mixed with Unbelief.

And it is, as it were, the Sum of all Promises: Neither can any Objection be made upon the Unworthiness that thou findest in thee, that this Promise will not avail.

But I am a great Sinner, say'st thou.

I will in no wise cast out, says Christ.

But I am an old Sinner, say'st thou.

I will in no wise cast out, says Christ.

But I am an hard-hearted Sinner, say'st thou.

I will in no wise cast out, says Christ.

But I am a Back-sliding Sinner, say'st thou.

I will in no wise cast out, says Christ.

But I have served Satan all my Days, say'st thou.

I will in no wise cast out, says Christ.

But I have sinned against Light, say'st thou.

I will in no wise cast out, say'st Christ.

But I have sinned against Mercy, say'st thou.

I will in no wise cast out, says Christ.

But I have no good Thing to bring with me, say'st thou.

I will in no wise cast out, say'st Christ.

Thus I might go on, to the End of Things, and shew you that still this Promise was provided to answer all Objections, and doth answer them. But I say, what need it be if they that are coming to Jesus Christ are not sometimes, yea, oftentimes heartily afraid, that Jesus Christ will cast them out.

I will give you now two Instances that seem to imply the Truth of this Observation.

In the Ninth of Matthew, at the Second Verse, you read of a Man that was sick of the Palsie; and he was coming to Jesus Christ, being born upon a Bed by his Friends: He also was coming himself, and that upon another Account than any of his Friends were aware of; even for the Pardon of Sins and the Salvation of his Soul. Now so soon as ever he was come into the Presence of Christ, Christ bids him be of good Cheer: It seems then, his Heart was fainting, but what was the Cause of his fainting? not his bodily Infirmary, for the Cure of which his Friends did bring him to Christ, but the Guilt and Burthen of his Sins? for the Pardon of which himself did come to him, therefore he proceeds, Be of good Cheer, thy Sins be forgiven thee.

I say, Christ saw him sinking in his Mind, about how it would go with his most noble Part; and therefore, first, he applies himself to him upon that account. For tho' his Friends had Faith enough as to the Cure of the Body, yet he himself had little enough as to the Cure of his Soul: Therefore, Christ takes him up as a Man falling down, saying, Son be of good Cheer, thy Sins are forgiven thee.

That about the Prodigal seems pertinent also to this Matter; When he was come to himself, he said, How many hired Servants of my Father hath Bread enough and to spare, and I perish for Hunger! I will arise now, and go to my Father. Heartily spoken,

But

But how did he perform his Promise? I think, not so well as he promised to do: And my Ground for my Thoughts is, because his Father, so soon as he was come to him, fell upon his Neck, and kissed him; implying, methinks, as if the Prodigal by this Time was dejected in his Mind; and therefore his Father gives him the most sudden and familiar Token of Reconciliation.

And Kisses were of Old-time often used to remove Doubts and Fears. Thus Laban and Esau kiss Jacob. Thus Joseph kissed his Brethren, and thus also David kissed Absalom, Gen. 31. 55. Ch. 33. 1 to 7. chap. 48. 9, 10. 2 Sam. 14. 33.

'Tis true, as I said, at first setting out, he spake heartily, as sometimes Sinners also do in their beginning to come to Jesus Christ; but might not he, yea, in all probability he had (between the first Step he took, and the last, by which he accomplished that Journey) many a Thought, both this Way and that; as whether his Father would receive him or no? As thus: I said, I would go to my Father: But how, If when I come at him he should ask me, Where I have all this while been? What shall I say then? Also, if he ask me, What is become of the Portion of Goods that he gave me? What shall I say then? If he ask me, Who have been my Companions? What shall I say then? If he also should ask me, What hath been my Preferment in all the Time of my Absence from him? What shall I say then? Yea, and if he ask me, Why I came home no sooner? What shall I say then? Thus I say, might he reason with himself; and being conscious to himself, that he could give but a bad Answer to any of these Interrogatories; no Marvel if he stood in need first of all, of a Kiss from his Father's Lips. For had he answered the first in Truth, he must say, I have been a haunter of Taverns and Ale-Houses; and as for my Portion, I spent it in Riotous Living; my Companions were Whores and Drabs: As for my Preferment, the highest was, That I became a Hogherd: and as for my not coming home till now, Could I have made Shift to stay abroad any longer, I had not been at thy Feet for Mercy now.

I say, these Things considered, and considering again, how prone poor Men are, to give Way, when truly awakened to deepondings, and heart-misgivings; no Marvel if he did sink in his Mind, between the Time of his first setting out, and that of his coming to his Father.

3. But Thirdly, methinks I have for the Confirmation of this Truth the Consent of all the Saints that are under Heaven, to wit, That they that are coming to Jesus Christ are oft-times heartily afraid that he will not receive them.

Quest. But what should be the Reason?

I will answer to this Question thus,

First, It is not for want of the revealed Will of God, that manifesteth Grounds for the contrary, for of that, there is a Sufficiency; yea, the Text it self hath laid a sufficient Foundation for Encouragement, for them that are coming to Jesus Christ.

And him that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out.

Secondly, It is not for want of any Invitation to come, for that is full and plain: Come unto me, all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you Rest, Mat. 11. 28.

Thirdly, Neither is it for want of Manifestation of Christ's Willingness to receive, as those Texts above-named, with that which follows, declareth, If any thirst, let him come unto me and drink, John 7. 3.

Fourthly, It is not for want of exceeding great and precious Promises, to receive them that come. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean Thing, and I will receive you, and I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my Sons and Daughters, saith the Lord Almighty, 2 Cor. 6. 17, 18.

Fifthly, It is not for want of solemn Oath and Engagement, to save them that come: For because he could swear by no Greater, he swore by himself--That by two immutable Things, in which it was impossible that God should lie, we might have strong Consolation, who have fled for Refuge, to lay hold on the Hope set before us, Heb. 6. 15 to 19.

Sixthly, Neither is it for want of great Examples of God's Mercy, that have come to Jesus Christ, of which we read most plentifully in the Word.

Therefore, it must be concluded, it is for want of that which follows.

First It is for want of the Knowledge of Christ. Thou knowest but little of the Grace and Kindness that is in the Heart of Christ: Thou knowest but little of the Virtue and Merit of his Blood; Thou knowest but little of the Willingness, that is in his Heart to save thee: And this is the Reason of the Fear that ariseth in thy Heart, and that causeth thee to doubt, that Christ will not receive thee. Unbelief is the Daughter of Ignorance. Therefore, Christ saith, O Fools, and slow of Heart to believe, Luke 24. 25.

Slowness of Heart to believe, flows from thy Foolishness in the Things of Christ; this is evident to all that are acquainted with themselves, and are seeking after Jesus Christ: The more ignorance, the more unbelief: The more knowledge of Christ, the more Faith. They that know thy Name, will put their trust in thee, Psal. 9. 10. He therefore that began to come to Christ but the other Day; and hath yet but little knowledge of him, he fears that Christ will not receive him. But he that hath been longer acquainted with him, he

he is strong, and hath overcome the wicked One, 1 John 2.

When Joseph's Brethren came into Egypt to buy Corn, it is said, Joseph knew his Brethren, but his Brethren knew not him. What follows? Why, great Mistrust of Heart about their speeding well: Especially, if Joseph did but answer them roughly, calling them Spies, and questioning their Truth, and the like. And observe it, so long as their Ignorance about their Brother remained with them, whatsoever Joseph did, still they put the worse Sense upon it: For Instance, Joseph upon a Time bids the Steward of his House bring them home, to dine with him, to dine even in Joseph's House; And how is this resented by them? Why, they are afraid: And the Men were afraid, because they were brought unto (their Brother) Joseph's House. And they said, He seeketh Occasion against us, and will fall upon us, and take us for Bondmen, and our Asses, Gen. 42. Chap. 43. What! Afraid to go to Joseph's House? He was their Brother; he intended to feast them; to feast them, and to feast with them. Ah! but they were ignorant, That he was their Brother: And so long as their Ignorance lasted, so long their Fear terrified them. Just thus it is with the Sinner that but of late is coming to Jesus Christ: He is ignorant of the Love and Pity that is in Christ to coming Sinners: Therefore he doubts, therefore he fears, therefore his Heart mis-gives him.

Coming Sinner, Christ inviteth thee to Dine and Sup with him: He inviteth thee to a Banquet of Wine, yea, to come into his Wine-Cellar, and his Banner over thee, shall be Love, Revel. 30. 20. Song 2. Chap. 5. But I doubt it, says the Sinner; but 'tis answered, He calls thee, invites thee to his Banquet, Flaggons, Apples, to his Wine, and to the Juice of his Pomegranate. O I fear, I doubt, I mistrust; I tremble in Expectation of the contrary! Come out of the Man thou dastardly Ignorance. Be not afraid Sinner, only believe, He that cometh to Christ, he will in no wise cast out.

Let the coming Sinner therefore seek after more of the good Knowledge of Jesus Christ: Press after it, seek it as Silver, and dig for it as for hid Treasure. This will embolden thee: This will make thee wax stronger and stronger. I know whom I have believed, I know him, said Paul: And what follows? Why, and I am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him, against that Day, 2 Tim. 1. 12.

What had Paul committed to Jesus Christ? The Answer is, He had committed to him his Soul. But why did he commit his Soul to him? Why, because he knew him: He knew him to be faithful, to be kind: He knew he would not fail him, nor forsake him: And therefore he laid his Soul down at his Feet, and committed it to him, to keep against that Day. But,

Secondly, Thy Fears that Christ will not receive thee, may be also a Consequent of thy earnest and strong Desires after thy Salvation by him. For this I observe, that strong Desires to have, are attended with strong Fears of missing. What Man most sets his Heart upon, and what his Desires are most after, he (oft-times) most fears he shall not obtain. So the Man, Ruler of the Synagogue, had a great Desire that his Daughter should live; and that Desire was attended with Fear, that she should not: Therefore Christ saith unto him, Be not afraid, Mark 5. 36.

Suppose a Young-Man should have his Heart much set upon a Virgin to have her to Wife, if ever he fears he shall not obtain her, it is when he begins to love; now thinks he, some Body will step in betwixt my Love and the Object of it; either they will find Fault with my Person, my Estate, my Condition, or something.

Now Thoughts begin to work, she doth not like me, or something. And thus it is with the Soul at first coming to Jesus Christ, thou lovest him, and thy Love produces Jealousy, and that Jealousy oft-times begets Fears.

Now thou fearest the Sins of thy Youth, the Sins of thine Old-Age, the Sins of thy Calling, the Sins of thy Christian Duties, the Sins of thine Heart, or something; thou thinkest something or other will alienate the Heart and Affections of Jesus Christ from thee; thou thinkest he sees something in thee, for the sake of which he will refuse thy Soul.

But be content, a little more Knowledge of him will make thee take better Heart; thy earnest Desires shall not be attended with such burning Fears; thou shalt hereafter say, This is my Infirmary, (Psal. 77.)

Thou art Sick of Love, a very sweet Disease, and yet every Disease has some Weakness attending of it; yet I wish this Distemper (if it be lawful to call it so) was more Epidemical. Die of this Disease, I would gladly do; 'tis better than Life it self though it be attended with Fears. But thou cryest out, I cannot obtain: Well, be not too hasty to make Conclusions: If Jesus Christ had not put his Finger in at the Hole of the Lock, thy Bowels would not have been troubled for him, (Song 5.) Mark how the Prophet hath it, They shall walk after the Lord, he shall roar like a Lion: When he shall roar, the Children shall tremble from the East, they shall tremble like a Bird out of Egypt, and as a Dove out of the Land of Assyria, Hos. 11. 10, 11.

When God roars (as oft-times the coming Soul hears him roar,) what Man that is coming, can do otherwise than tremble?

(Amos 3. 8.) But trembling he comes, He sprang in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas, Acts 16.

Should you ask him that we mentioned but now, How long is it since you began to fear you should miss of this Damsel you love so? The Answer will be, ever since I began to love her. But did you not fear it before? No, nor should I fear now, but that I vehemently love her. Come Sinner, let us apply it: How long is it since thou began to fear that Jesus Christ will not receive thee? Thy Answer is, Ever since I began to desire that he would save my Soul. I began to fear, when I began to come. And the more my Heart burns in Desires after him, the more I feel my Heart fear, I shall not be saved by him.

See now, Did not I tell thee, that thy Fears were but the Consequence of strong Desires? Well, fear not, coming Sinner, thousands of coming Souls are in thy Condition, and yet they will get safe into Christ's Bosom. Say (says Christ) to them that are of a fearful Heart, be strong, fear not: Your God will come and save you, Isa. 35. 4. Chap. 63. 1.

Thirdly, Thy Fear that Christ will not receive thee, may arise from a Sense of thy own Unworthiness. Thou seeest what a poor, forry, wretched, worthless Creature thou art. And seeing this, thou fearest Christ will not receive thee. Alas, say'st thou, I am the Vilest of all Men; a Town Sinner, a Ring-leading Sinner! I am not only a Sinner my self, but have made others two-fold worse the Children of Hell also. Besides, now I am under some Awakenings and Stirrings of Mind after Salvation, even now I find my Heart Rebellious, Carnal, Hard, Treacherous, Desperate, prone to Unbelief, to Despair: It forgetteth the Word; it wandereth, it runneth to the Ends of the Earth. There is not (I am perswaded) one in all the World, that hath such a desperate wicked Heart as mine is: My Soul is careless to do Good, but none more earnest to do that which is Evil.

Can such a One as I am live in Glory? Can an Holy, a Just, and a Righteous God once think (with Honour to his Name) of saving such a Vile Creature as I am? I fear it. Will he show Wonders to such a dead Dog as I am? I doubt it.

I am cast out, to the loathing of my Person, yea, I loath my self: I stink in mine own Nostrils. How can I then be accepted by a Holy and Sin-aborring God? (Psal. 38. 5, 6, 7. Ezek. 10. Chap. 20. 42, 43, 44.) Saved I would be; and who is there that would not, were they in my Condition? Indeed, I wonder at the Madnes and Folly of others, when I see them leap and skip so carelessly about the Mouth of Hell! Bold Sinner, How darest thou tempt God, by Laughing at the Breach of his Holy Law? But alas! They are not so bad one Way, but I am worse another: I wish my self were any Body but my self: And yet here again, I know not what to wish. When I see such, as I believe are coming to Jesus Christ; O I bless them! But am confounded in my self, to see how unlike (as I think) I am to a very good many in the World. They can hear, read, pray, remember, repent, be humble, and do every Thing better than so vile a Wretch as I.

I Vile Wretch, am good for nothing, but to burn in Hell Fire, and when I think of that, I am confounded too.

Thus the Sense of Unworthiness creates and heightens Fears in the Hearts of them that are coming to Jesus Christ; But indeed it should not: For who needs the Physician but the Sick? Or, who did Christ come into the World to save, but the Chief of Sinners? (Mark 1. 17. 1 Tim. 1. 15.) Wherefore, the more thou seeest thy Sins, the faster fly thou to Jesus Christ. And let the Sense of thine own Unworthiness, prevail with thee yet to go faster. As it is with the Man that carrieth his broken Arms in a Sling to the Bone-setter, still as he thinks of his broken Arm, and as he feels the Pain and Anguish, he hastens his Pace to the Man; and if Satan meets thee, and asketh, Whither goest thou? Tell him, thou art maimed, and art going to the Lord Jesus. If he objects thine own Unworthiness, Tell him, That even as the Sick seeketh the Physician; as he that hath broken Bones, seeks him that can set them: So thou art going to Jesus Christ for Cure and Healing, for thy Sin-sick Soul.

But it oft-times happeneth to him that flies for his Life; he despairs of Escaping, and therefore delivers himself up into the Hand of the Pursuer. But up, up, Sinner; be of good Cheer, Christ came to save the Unworthy One: Be not faithless, but believe. Come away, Man, the Lord Jesus calls thee, saying, And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

Fourthly, Thy Fear that Christ will not receive thee, may arise from a Sense of the exceeding Mercy of being saved: Sometimes Salvation is in the Eyes of him that desires so great, so huge, so wonderful a Thing, that the very Thoughts of the Excellency of it, ingenders Unbelief about obtaining it, in the Heart of those that unfeignedly desire it. Seemeth it to you (saith David) a light Thing to be a King's Son-in-law? 1 Sam. 18. 23. So the Thoughts of the Greatness and Glory of the Thing propounded; as Heaven, Eternal Life; Eternal Glory; to be with God and Christ, and Angels: These are great Things, Things too good, (saith the Soul that is little in his own Eyes.) Things too Rich (saith the Soul that is truly poor in Spirit) for me.

Besides, the Holy Ghost hath a Way to greaten Heavenly Things to the Understanding of the coming Sinner; yea, and at the

the same Time to greaten too the Sin and Unworthiness of that Sinner. Now the Soul staggeringly wonders, saying, What to be made like Angels, like Christ, to live in eternal Bliss, Joy and Felicity! This is for Angels, and for them that can walk like Angels!

If a Prince, a Duke, an Earl, should send (by the Hand of his Servant) for some poor, sorry, beggarly Scrub, to take her for his Master to Wife, and the Servant should come and say, My Lord and Master, such an One, hath sent me to thee, to take thee to him to Wife, he is Rich, Beautiful, and of Excellent Qualities, he is Loving, Meek, Humble, Well-spoken, &c. What now would this poor, sorry, beggarly Creature think? What would she say? or, How would she frame an answer? When King David sent to Abigail upon this Account, and though she was a rich Woman, yet she said, Behold let thine Hand-maid be a Servant to wash the Feet of the Servants of my Lord, (1 Sam. 25. 40, 41.) She was confounded, she could not well tell what to say, the Offer was so great, beyond what could in Reason be expected.

But suppose this great Person should second his Suit, and send to this sorry Creature again: What would she say now? Would she not say? You mock me? But what if he affirms, that he is in good Earnest, and that his Lord must have her to Wife; yea, suppose he should prevail upon her to credit his Message, and to address her self for her Journey: Yet behold, every Thought of her Pedigree confounds her; also her sense of want of Beauty makes her ashamed; and if she doth but think of being imbraced, the Unbelief that is mixed with that Thought, whirls her into tremblings: And now she calls her self Fool, for believing the Messenger, and thinks not to go: If she thinks of being bold, she blushes, and the least Thought that she shall be rejected, when she come at him, makes her look as if she would give up the Ghost.

And is it a Wonder then to see a Soul that is drowned in the Sense of Glory, and a Sense of its own nothingness, to be confounded in it self, and to fear that the Glory apprehended, is too great, too good, and too rich for such an one.

That Thing, Heaven and eternal Glory, is so great, and I that would have it so small, so sorry a Creature, that the Thoughts of obtaining confounds me.

Thus I say, doth the Greatness of the Things desired, quite dash and overthrow the Mind of the Desire: O, it is too big! it is too big! it is too great a Mercy.

But coming Sinner, let me reason with thee: Thou say'st it is too big, too great. Well, will Things that are less satisfy thy Soul? will a less Thing than Heaven, than Glory and eternal Life, answer thy Desires? No, nothing less: yet I fear they are too big, and too good for me, even to obtain. Well, as big and as good as they are, God giveth them to such as thou; they are not too big for God to give. No, not to big to give freely: Be content, let God give like Himself; he is that eternal God, and giveth like Himself. When Kings give, they do not use to give as poor Men do. Hence it is said, that Nabal made a Feast in his House, like the Feast of a King: And again, All these Things did Araunah, as a King, gave unto David, 1 Sam. 25. 2 Sam. 24. Now God is a great King, let him give like a King; nay, let him give like Himself, and do thou receive like thy self: He hath all, and thou hast nothing. God told his People of old, that he would save them in Truth and in Righteousness and that they should return to, and enjoy the Land, which before, for their Sins, had spued them out: and then adds, under the Supposition of their counting the Mercy too good, or too big: If it be marvellous in the Eyes of the Remnant of this People in these Days, should it also be marvellous in mine Eyes, saith the Lord of Hosts? Zech. 8. 6.

As who should say, They are now in Captivity and little in their own Eyes; therefore they think the Mercy of returning to Canaan, is a Mercy too marvellously big for them to enjoy; but if it be so in their Eyes, it is not so in mine: I will do for them like God, if they will but receive my Bounty like Sinners.

Coming Sinner, God can give his Heavenly Canaan and the Glory of it unto thee; yea, none ever had them, but as a Gift, a free Gift: He hath given us his Son, How shall he not then with him also freely give us all Things.

It was not the Worthiness of Abraham or Moses, or David, or Peter, or Paul; but the Mercy of God, that made them Inheritors of Heaven. If God thinks thee worthy, judge not thy self unworthy; but take it, and be thankful. And it is a good Sign, he intends to give thee, if he hath drawn out thy Heart to ask. O Lord, thou hast heard the Desire of the Humble, thou wilt prepare their Hearts, thou wilt incline thine Ear, Psal. 10. 17.

When God is said to incline his Ear, it implies an Intention to bestow the Mercy desired: Take it therefore, thy Wisdom will be to receive, not sticking at thy own Unworthiness. It is said, He raiseth up the Poor out of the Dust, and lifteth up the Beggar from the Dunghill, to set them among Princes, and to make them inherit the Throne of Glory. Again, He raiseth up the Poor out of the Dust, and lifteth some Needy out of the Dunghill, that he may set them with the Princes, even with the Princes of his People, 1 Sam. 2. 8. Psal. 113. 7, 8.

You

You see also, when God made a Wedding for his Son, he called not the Great, nor the Rich, nor the Mighty, but the Poor, the Maimed, the Halt, and the Blind, (Mat. 22. Luke 14.)

Fifthly, Thy Fears that Christ will not receive thee, may arise from the hideous Roaring of the Devil, who pursues thee. He that hears him roar, must be a mighty Christian, if he can at that Time deliver himself from Fear. He is called a roaring Lyon, and then to allude to that in Isaiah, If one look into them, they have Darknes and Sorrow, and the Light is Darknes in their very Heaven, 1 Pet. 58. Isa. 5. 30.

There are two things, among many, that Satan useth to roar out after them that are coming to Jesus Christ.

1. That they are not elected.
2. That they have sinned the Sin against the Holy Ghost.

To both these I answer briefly.

First, Touching Election, out of which thou fearest, thou art excluded. Why, coming Sinner, even the Text it self affordeth thee Help against this Doubt, and that by a double Argument.

First, That coming to Christ is, by Virtue of the Gift, Promise, and drawing of the Father; but thou art a coming, therefore God hath given thee, promised thee, and is drawing thee to Jesus Christ; coming Sinner, hold to this: And when Satan beginneth to roar again: answer, But I feel my Heart moving after Jesus Christ, but that would not be, if it were not given by Promise, and drawing to Christ by the Power of the Father.

Secondly, Jesus Christ hath promised, that him that cometh to him, he will in no wise cast out: And if he hath said it, will he not make it good, I mean even thy Salvation? For, as I have said already; not to cast out, is to receive and admit to the Benefit of Salvation: If then the Father hath given thee, as is manifest by thy Coming: and if Christ will receive thee, thou coming Soul; as 'tis plain he will, because he hath said, He will in no wise cast out. Then be confident, and let these Conclusions that as naturally flow from the Text, as Light from the Sun, or Water from the Fountain, stay thee.

If Satan therefore objecteth, But thou art not elected, answer, But I am coming, Satan, I am coming; and that I could not be, but that the Father draws me; and I am coming to such a Lord Jesus, as will in no wise cast me out. Further, Satan, were I not Elect, the Father would not draw me, nor would the Son so graciously open his Bosom to me. I am perswaded that not One of the Non-elect shall ever be able to say, no, not in the Day of Judgment; I did sincerely come to Jesus Christ. Come they may feignedly, as Judas and Simon Magus did; but that is not our Question. Therefore, O thou honest-hearted coming Sinner, be not afraid, but come!

As to the second Part of the Objection, about sinning the Sin against the holy Ghost: The same Argument overthrows that also. But I will argue thus:

First, Coming to Christ, is by Virtue of a special Gift of the Father; but the Father giveth no such Gift to them that have sinned that Sin, therefore thou that art coming, hast not committed that Sin. That the Father giveth no such Gift to them that have sinned that Sin, is evident,

1. Because they have sinned themselves out of God's Favour; They shall never have Forgiveness, Mat. 13. 32. But it is a special Favour of God to give unto a Man, to come unto Jesus Christ; because thereby he obtaineth Forgiveness. Therefore he that cometh, hath not sinned that Sin.

3. They that have sinned the Sin against the holy Ghost, have sinned themselves out of an Interest in the Sacrifice of Christ's Body and Blood; There remains for such no more Sacrifice for Sin: But God giveth not Grace to any of them to come to Christ, that have no share in the Sacrifice of his Body and Blood: Therefore, thou that art coming to him, hast not sinned that Sin, Heb. 10. 26.

Secondly, Coming to Christ is by the special drawing of the Father, No Man cometh to me, except the Father, which hath sent me, draw him: But the Father draweth not him to Christ, for whom he hath not allotted Forgiveness by his Blood. Therefore, they that are coming to Jesus Christ, have not committed that Sin, because he hath allotted them Forgiveness by his Blood, John 6. 44.

That the Father cannot draw them to Jesus Christ, for whom he hath not allotted Forgiveness of Sins, is manifest to Sense: For that would be a plain Mockery, a Flam; neither becoming his Wisdom, Justice, Holiness nor Goodness.

Thirdly, Coming to Jesus Christ, lays a Man under the Promise of Forgiveness and Salvation: But it is impossible, that he that hath sinned that Sin, should ever be put under a Promise of these. Therefore he that hath sinned that Sin, can never have Heart to come to Jesus Christ.

Fourthly, Coming to Jesus Christ, lays a Man under his Intercession; For he ever liveth to make Intercession for them that come, Heb. 7. 26. Therefore he that is coming to Jesus Christ cannot have sinned that Sin.

Christ has forbid his People to pray for them that have sinned that Sin; therefore, will not pray for them himself; but he prays for them that come.

Fifthly, He that hath sinned that Sin, Christ is to him of no more Worth, than is a Man that is dead; For he hath crucified to himself the Son of God: Yea, and hath also also counted his precious Blood, as the Blood of an unholy Thing, Heb. 6. 10. Now, he that hath this low Esteem of Christ, will never come to him for Life: But the coming Man has an high Esteem of his Person, Blood, and Merits. Therefore he that is coming has not committed that Sin.

Sixthly, If he that has sinned this Sin, might yet come to Jesus Christ, then must the Truth of God be overthrown: Which saith in one Place, He hath never Forgiveness; and in another, I will in no wise cast him out. Therefore, that he may never have Forgiveness, he shall never have Heart to come to Jesus Christ, It is impossible that such an one should be renewed either to, or by Repentance, Heb. 6. Wherefore, never trouble thy Head, nor Heart about this Matter: He that cometh to Jesus Christ, cannot have sinned against the Holy Ghost.

Seventhly, Thy Fears that Christ will not receive thee, may arise from thine own Folly, in inventing; yea, in thy chalking out to God a Way to bring thee home to Jesus Christ. Some Souls that are coming to Jesus Christ are great Tormentors of themselves upon this Account: They conclude, that if their coming to Jesus Christ is right, they must needs be brought home thus and thus: As to instance.

1. Says one, If God be bringing of me to Jesus Christ, then will he load me with the Guilt of Sin till he makes me roar again.

2. If God be indeed a bringing me home to Jesus Christ, then must I be assaulted with dreadful Temptations of the Devil.

3. If God be indeed a bringing me to Jesus Christ, then even when I come at him, I shall have wonderful Revelations of him.

This is the Way that some Sinners appoint for God: But perhaps he will not walk therein; yet will he bring them to Jesus Christ. But now, because they come not the Way of their own chalking out, therefore they are at a Loss. They look for heavy Load and Burthen; but perhaps God gives them a sight of their lost Condition, and addeth not that heavy Weight and Burthen. They look for fearful Temptations of Satan; but God sees that yet they are not fit for them: Nor is the Time come, that he should be honoured by them in such a Condition. They look for great and glorious Revelations of Christ, Grace and Mercy. But perhaps, God only takes the Yoke from off their Jaws, and lays Meat before them. And now again, they are at a Loss, yet a coming to Christ; I drew them (saith God) with the Cords of a Man, with the Bands of Love: I took the Yoke from off their Jaws, and laid Meat unto them, Hos. 11. 14.

Now I say, if God brings thee to Christ, and not by the Way that thou hast appointed, then thou art at a Loss; and for thy being at a Loss, Thou may'st thank thy self. God hath more Ways than thou knowest of, to bring a Sinner to Jesus Christ: But he will not give thee before hand an Account by which of them he will bring them to Christ, Isa. 40. 13. Job 33. 13.

Sometimes he hath his Ways in the Whirl-wind; but sometimes the Lord is not there, Neh. 13. 1 Kings 19. 1.

If God will deal more gently with thee, than with others of his Children, grudge not at it: refuse not the Waters that go softly, lest he bring up to thee the Waters of the Rivers, strong and many, even these two smoking Fire-brands, the Devil and Guilt of Sin, Isa. 8. 6, 7. He saith to Peter, follow me: And what Thunder did Zacheus hear or see? Zacheus, Come down, said Christ; and he came down (says Luke) and received him joyfully.

But had Peter or Zacheus made the Objection that thou hast made, and directed the Spirit of the Lord, as thou hast done; they might have looked long enough, before they had found themselves coming to Jesus Christ.

Besides, I will tell thee, that the greatness of Sense of Sin, the hideous Roaring of the Devil, yea, and abundance of Revelations, will not prove that God is bringing thy Soul to Jesus Christ: As Balaam, Cain, Judas, and others, can witness.

Further, Consider, that what thou hast not of these Things here, thou may'st have another time, and that, to thy Distraction. Wherefore, instead of being discontent, because thou art not in the Fire, because thou hearest not the Sound of the Trumpet, and Alarm of War; Pray that thou enter not into Temptation; Yea, come boldly to the Throne of Grace, and obtain Mercy, and find Grace to help in that Time of Need, Psal. 88. 15. Mat. 40. 41. Heb. 4. 16.

Poor Creature! Thou criest, If I were tempted, I could come faster, and with more Confidence to Jesus Christ: Thou say'st thou knowest not what. What says Job! Withdraw thy Hand from me, and let not thy Dread make me afraid: Then call thou, and I will answer; or let me speak, and answer thou me, Job 13. 21. It is not the over-heavy Load of Sin, but the Discovery of Mercy; not the Roaring of the Devil, but the drawing of the Father, that makes a Man come to Jesus Christ; I myself know all these Things.

True, sometimes, yea, most an end, they that come to Jesus Christ, come the Way that thou desirest; the loading, tempted Way; but the Lord also leads some by the Waters of Comfort. If I was to chuse, when to go a long Journey; to wit, Whether I would go it in the dead of Winter, or in the pleasant Spring, (though if it was a very profitable Journey, as that of coming to Christ is) I would chuse to go it through Fire and Water, before I would lose the Benefit :) But I say, if I might chuse the Time, I would chuse to go it in the pleasant Spring, because the Way would be more delightfome, the Days longer and warmer, the Nights shorter and not so cold. And it is observable, that that very Argument that thou usest to weaken thy Strength in the Way, that very Argument Christ Jesus useth to encourage his Beloved to come to him: Arise (saith he) my Love, my Fair One, and come away: (Why?) For loe, the Winter is past, the Rain is over and gone, the Flowers appear in the Earth, the Time of the Singing of Birds is come, and the Voice of the Turtle is heard in our Land. The Fig-tree putteth forth her green Figs, and the Vine, with her tender Grapes, give a good Smell: Arise, my Love, my Fair One, and come away, Song 2. 10, 11, 12, 13.

Trouble not thy self, coming Sinner: If thou seest thy lost Condition by original and actual Sin; If thou seest thy Need of the spotless Righteousness of Jesus Christ; If thou art willing to be found in him, and to take up thy Cross and follow him: Then pray for a fair Wind and good Weather, and come away. Stick no longer in a Muse and Doubt about Things, but come away to Jesus Christ: Do it, I say, lest thou tempt God to lay the Sorrows of a travelling Woman upon thee. Thy Folly in this Thing may make him do it. Mind what follows, The Sorrows of a travailing Woman shall come upon him: Why? He is an unwise Son; so he should not stay long in the Place of the breaking forth of Children, Hof. 13. 13.

Seventhly, Thy Fears that Christ will not receive thee, may rise from those Decays that thou findest in thy Soul, even while thou art coming to him: Some, even as they are coming to Jesus Christ, do find themselves grow worse and worse; and this is indeed, a fore Trial to the poor coming Sinner.

To explain my self: There is such an One a coming to Jesus Christ; who, when at first he began to look out after him, was sensible, affectionate and broken in Spirit: But now is grown dark, senseless, hard-hearted, and inclining to neglect spiritual Duties, &c. Besides, he now finds in himself Inclinations to Unbelief, Atheism, Blasphemy, and the like; Now he finds he cannot tremble at God's Word, his Judgments, nor at the Apprehension of Hell-fire: Neither can he, as he thinketh, be sorry for these Things. Now this is a sad Dispensation: The Man under the sixth Head, complaineth for want of Temptations, but thou hast enough of them; art thou glad of them, tempted, coming Sinner? They that never were exercised with them, may think it a fine thing to be within the Rage, but he that is there, is ready to sweat Blood for Sorrow of Heart, and to howl for Vexation of Spirit.

This Man is in the Wilderness among wild Beasts: Here he sees a Bear, there a Lion, yonder a Leopard, a Wolf, a Dragon: Devils of all sorts, Doubts of all sorts, Fears of all sorts, haunt and molest his Soul. Here he sees Smoak, yea, some Fire and Brimstone, scattered upon his secret Places, he hears the Sound of an horrible Tempest.

O! My Friends, even the Lord Jesus, that knew all Things, even he saw no Pleasure in Temptations, nor did he desire to be with them: Wherefore one Text saith, he was led; and another, he was driven of the Spirit into the Wilderness, to be tempted of the Devil, Mat. 4. 1. Mark 1. 12.

But to return, thus it happeneth sometimes to them that are coming to Jesus Christ. A sad Hap indeed: One would think, that he that is flying from Wrath to come, has little Need of such Clogs as these: And yet so it is, and woful Experience proves it: The Church of old complained, that her Enemies overtook her between the Straights: Just between Hope and Fear, Heaven and Hell, Lam. 1.

This Man feeleth the Infirmary of his Flesh; he findeth a Proneness in himself to be desperate: Now he chides with God, flings and tumbles like a wild Bull in a Net, and still the Guilt of all returns upon himself to the crushing of him to pieces: Yet he feeleth his Heart so hard, that he can find, as he thinks, no kind falling under any of his Miscarriages. How he is a Lump of Confusion in his own Eyes, whose Spirit and Actions are without Order.

Temptations serve the Christians, as the Shepherd's Dog serveth the silly Sheep, that is, coming behind the Flock, he runs upon it, pulls it down, worries it, wounds it, and grievously bedabbeth it with Dirt and Wet, in the lowest Places of the Furrows of the Field, and not leaving it, until it is half dead, nor then neither, except God rebuke.

Here is now room for Fears of being cast away. Now I see I am lost says the Sinner; This is not coming to Jesus Christ, says the Sinner; such a desperate hard and wretched Heart as mine is, cannot be a gracious One, saith the Sinner: And bid such an One be better, he says I cannot, no, I cannot.

Quest. But what will you say to a Soul in this Condition?

Answe. I will say, That Temptations have attended the best of God's People; I will say, that Temptations come to do us good; and I will say also, that there is a Difference betwixt growing worse and worse, and thy seeing more clearly how bad thou art.

There is a Man of an ill-favoured Countenance, tenance, who hath too high a conceit of his Beauty; and wanting the Benefit of a Glas he still stands in his own conceit; at last a Limner is sent unto him, who draweth his ill-favoured Face to the Life; now looking thereon, he begins to be convinced that he is not half so handsome as he thought he was. Coming sinner, thy Temptations are these Painters, they have drawn out thy ill-favoured Heart to the Life; and have set it before thine Eyes and now thou seest how ill-favoured thou art.

Hezekiah was a good Man, yet when he lay sick (for ought I know) he had somewhat too good an Opinion of his Heart; and for ought I know also, the Lord might upon his Recovery leave him to a Temptation, that he might better know all that was in his Heart. Compare Isa. 38. 1, 2, 3. with 2 Chron. 32. 31.

Alas! we are sinful out of measure, but see it not to the full, until an Hour of Temptation comes: But when it comes, it doth as the Painter doth, draweth out our Heart to the Life: yet the Sight of what we are, should not keep us from coming to Jesus Christ.

There are two Ways by which God lets a Man into a Sight of the Naughtiness of his Heart: One is, by the Light of the Word and Spirit of God; and the other is, by the Temptations of the Devil. But by the first, we see our Naughtiness one way, and by the second another. By the Light of the Word and Spirit of God, thou hast a Sight of thy Naughtiness, and by the Light of the Sun thou hast a Sight of the Spots and Defilements that are in thy House or Raiment. Which Light gives thee to see a Necessity of Cleansing, but maketh not the Blemishes to spread more abominably. But when Satan comes, when he tempts, he puts Life and Rage into our Sins, and turns them, as it were, into so many Devils within us. Now like Prisoners they attempt to break through the Prison of our Body; they will attempt to get out at our Eyes, Mouth, Ears, any ways: To the Scandal of the Gospel, and Reproach of Religion, to the darkening of our Evidences, and damning of our Souls.

But I shall say, as I said before, this hath oft-times been the Lot of God's People. And, No Temptation hath overtaken thee, but such as is common to Man; and God is faithful, who will not suffer thee to be tempted above what thou art able, 1 Cor. 10. 13. See the Book of Job, the Book of Psalms, and that of the Lamentations. And remember farther, that Christ himself was tempted to blaspheme, to worship the Devil, and to murder himself, Matth. 4. Luke 4. (Temptations worse than which thou canst hardly be overtaken with.) But he was sinless, that is true. And he is thy Saviour, and that is as true. Yea, it is as true also, that by his being tempted, he became the Conqueror of the Tempter, and a Succourer of those that are tempted, Col. 2. 14, 15. Heb. 2. 15. Chap. 4. 15, 16.

Quest. But what should be the Reason that some that are coming to Christ, should be so lamentably cast down, and buffeted with Temptations?

Ans. It may be for several Causes.

First, Some that are coming to Christ, cannot be persuaded, until the Temptation comes, that they are so vile as the Scripture saith they are. True, they see so much of their Wretchedness, as to drive them to Christ: But there is an Over and Above of Wickedness, which they see not. Peter little thought that he had had Cursing and Swearing, and Lying, and an Inclination in his Heart to deny his Master, before the Temptation came; but when that indeed came upon him, then he found it there to his Sorrow, John 13. 36, 37, 38. Mark 14. 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72.

Secondly, Some that are coming to Jesus Christ, are too much affected with their own Graces, and too little taken with Christ's Person; wherefore God, to take them off from doting on their own Jewels, and that they might look more to the Person, Undertaking and Merits of his Son, plunges them into the Ditch by Temptations. And this I take to be the Meaning of Job: If I wash me, said he, with Snow-water, and make my self never so clean, yet wilt thou plunge me in the Ditch, and mine own Cloaths shall abhor me, Job 9. 30. Job had been a little too much tampering with his own Graces, and setting his Excellencies a little too high; (as these Texts make manifest, Job 33. 8 to 13. Chap. 34. 5 to 10. Chap. 35. 2, 3. Chap. 38. 1, 2. Chap. 40. 1 to 5. Chap. 42. 3 to 7.) But by that the Temptations were ended, you find him better taught.

Yea, God doth oft-times, even for this Thing, as it were, take our Graces from us, and so leave us almost quite to our selves, and to the Tempter, that we may learn not to love the Picture more than the Person of his Son. See how he dealt with them in the 16th of Ezekiel, and the 2d of Hosea.

Thirdly, Perhaps thou hast been given too much, to judge thy Brother, to condemn thy Brother, because a poor tempted Man: And God, to bring down the Pride of thy Heart letteth the Tempter loose upon thee, that thou also may'st feel thy self weak. For Pride goeth before Destruction, and an haughty Spirit before a Fall, Prov. 16. 18.

Fourthly, It may be thou hast dealt a little too roughly with those that God hath this Way wounded; not considering thy self, lest thou also be tempted: And therefore God hath suffered it to come unto thee, Gal. 6. 1.

Fifthly,

Fifthly, It may be thou wast given to Slumber and Sleep, and therefore these Temptations were sent to awake thee. You know that Peter's Temptation came upon him, after his sleeping; then, instead of Watching and Praying; then he denied, and denied, and denied his Master, Mat. 26.

Sixthly, It may be thou hast presumed too far, and stood too much in thine own Strength, and therefore is a Time of Temptation come upon thee. This was also one Cause, why it came upon Peter: Though all Men forsake thee, yet will not I. Ah! that's the Way to be tempted indeed, John 13. 36, 37, 38.

Seventhly, It may be God intends to make thee wise, to speak a Word in Season to others that are afflicted; and therefore he suffereth thee to be tempted. Christ was tempted, that he might be able to succour them that are tempted, Heb. 2. 18.

Eighthly, It may be Satan hath dared God to suffer him to tempt thee; promising himself, that if he will but let him do it; Thou wilt curse him to his Face. Thus he obtained leave against Job; wherefore take heed, tempted Soul, lest thou provest the Devil's Sayings true, Job 1. Chap. 2.

Ninthly, It may be thy Graces must be tryed in the Fire, that that Rust that cleaveth to them, may be taken away, and themselves proved, both before Angels and Devils, to be far better than of Gold that perisheth; it may be also, that thy Graces are to receive special Praises and Honour and Glory, at the Coming of the Lord Jesus (to Judgment) for all the Exploits that thou hast acted by them against Hell, and its infernal Crew, in the Day of thy Temptation, 1 Pet. 1. 6, 7.

Tenthly, It may be God would have others learn by thy Sighs, Groans and Complaints under Temptations, to beware of those Sins; for the sake of which, thou art at present delivered to the Tormentors.

But to conclude this, put the Worst to the Worst, (and then Things will be bad enough) suppose that thou art to this Day without the Grace of God, yet thou art but a miserable Creature, a Sinner, that has need of a blessed Saviour; and the Text presents thee with One as good and kind, as Heart can wish; who also for thy encouragement saith, and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

To come therefore to a Word of Application.

IS it so, That they that are coming to Jesus Christ are oft-times heartily afraid, that Jesus Christ will not receive them? Then this teacheth us these Things:

First, That Faith and Doubting, may at the same Time have their Residence in the same Soul. O thou of little Faith, Wherefore didst thou doubt? Mat. 14. 31. He saith not, O! Thou of no Faith; but, O! Thou of little Faith. Because he had a little Faith in the midst of his many Doubts. The same is true, even of many that are coming to Jesus Christ: They come, and fear they come not, and doubt they come not. When they look upon the Promise, or a Word of Incouragement by Faith, then they come; but when they look upon themselves, or the Difficulties that lie before them, then they doubt. Bid me come, said Peter: Come, said Christ. So he went down out of the Ship to go to Jesus, but his hap was to go to him upon the Water; there was the Tryal. So it is with the poor desiring Soul: Bid me come, says the Sinner; Come says Christ, and I will in no wise cast thee out: So he comes, but his hap is to come upon the Water, upon drowning Difficulties; if therefore the Wind of Temptations blow, the Waves of Doubts and Fears will presently arise, and this coming Sinner will begin to sink, if he has but little Faith.

But you shall find here in Peter's little Faith, a two-fold Act; to wit, Coming and Crying: Little Faith cannot come all the Way without Crying: So long as its holy Boldness lasts, so long it can come with Peace; but when it's So, it can come no farther, it will go the rest of the Way with Crying. Peter went as far as his little Faith would carry him: He also cry'd as far as his little Faith would help, Lord, save me, I perish: And so with Coming and Crying he was kept from Sinking, though he had but a little Faith. Jesus stretched forth his Hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O! Thou of little Faith, wherefore didst thou doubt.

Secondly, Is it so, That they that are coming to Jesus Christ, are oft-times heartily afraid, that Jesus Christ will not receive them? Then this shews us a Reason of that Dejection, and those Castings down, that very often we perceive to be in them that are coming to Jesus Christ. Why, it is because they are afraid that Jesus Christ will not receive them. The poor World they mock us, because we are a dejected People; I mean, because we are sometimes so; but they do not know the Cause of our Dejection. Could we be perswaded, even then, when we are dejected, that Jesus Christ would indeed receive us, it would make us fly over their Heads, and would put more Gladness into our Hearts, than in the Time in which their Corn, Wine and Oil increases, Psal. 4. 6, 7.

Thirdly, Is it so, That they that are coming to Jesus Christ, are oft-times, heartily afraid that he will not receive them? Then this shews, that they that are coming to Jesus Christ, are an awakened, sensible considering People: For Fear cometh from Sense,

Sense, and Consideration of Things. They are sensible of Sin, sensible of the Curse due thereto; they are also sensible of the Glorious Majesty of God, and of what a blessed, blessed Thing it is to be received of Jesus Christ: The Glory of Heaven, and the Evil of Sin, these Things they consider, and are sensible of. When I remember, I am afraid; when I consider, I am afraid, Job 21. 6. Chap. 36. 15.

These Things dash their Spirits, being awake and sensible. Were they dead, like other Men, they would not be afflicted with Fear, as they are: For dead Men fear not, feel not, care not, but the living and sensible Man, he it is that is oft-times heartily afraid that Jesus Christ will not receive him. I say, the dead and senseless are not distressed: They presume they are groundlessly confident. Who so bold as blind Balaam? These indeed should fear, and be afraid, because they are not coming to Jesus Christ. O! the Hell, the Fire, the Pit, the Wrath of God, and Torment of Hell, that are prepared for poor neglecting Sinners! How shall we escape, if we neglect so great Salvation! Heb. 2. 3. But they want Sense of Things, and so cannot fear.

Fourthly, Is it so, That they that are coming to Jesus Christ, are oft-times heartily afraid that he will not receive them! Then this should teach old Christians to pity and pray for young Comers: You know the Heart of a Stranger; for you your selves were Strangers in the Land of Egypt. You know the Fears, and Doubts, and Terrors, that take hold of them; for that they sometimes took hold of you. Wherefore, pity them, pray for them, encourage them; they need all this: Guilt hath overtaken them, Fear of the Wrath of God, hath overtaken them: Perhaps they are within the Sight of Hell-fire; and the Fear of going thither, is burning hot within their Hearts. You may know, how strangely Satan is suggesting his Devilish Doubts unto them, if possible he may sink and drown them, with the Multitude and Weight of them. Old Christians mend up the Path for them, take the Stumbling-blocks out of the Way: Lest that which is feeble and weak be turned aside, but let it rather be healed, Heb. 12.

I come now to the next Observation, and shall speak a little to that; to wit,

THAT Jesus Christ would not have them, that in Truth are coming to him, Once think, that he will cast them out.

The Text is full of this: For he saith, And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. Now, if he saith, I will not; he would not have us think, He will.

This is yet farther manifest by these Considerations;

Vol. II.

First, Christ Jesus did forbid even them, that as yet were not coming to him: Once to think him such an One. Do not think (saith he) that I will accuse you to the Father, John 5. 45.

These (as I said) were such, that as yet, were not coming to him: For he saith of them a little before; And ye will not come to me: For the Respect they had to the Honour of Men kept them back. Yet, I say, Jesus Christ gives them to understand, that though he might justly reject them, yet he would not, but bids them not Once to think, that he would accuse them to the Father. Now, not to accuse (with Christ) is to plead for: For Christ in these Things, stands not Neuter between the Father and Sinners. So then, if Jesus Christ would not have them think, that Yet will not come to him, that he will accuse them; then he would not that they should think so, that in Truth are coming to him: And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

Secondly, When the Woman taken in Adultery (even in the very Act) was brought before Jesus Christ; so he carried it both by Words and Actions, that he evidently enough made it manifest, that Condemning and Casting out, were such Things, for the doing of which he came not into the World.

Wherefore, when they had set her before him, and had laid to her Charge her heinous Fact, he stooped down, and with his Finger wrote upon the Ground, as though he heard them not. Now what did he do by this his Carriage, but testify plainly that he was not for receiving Accusations against poor Sinners, whoever accused by? And observe, Though they continue asking, thinking at last to force him to condemn her; yet then he so answered, as that he drove all condemning Persons from her. And then he adds for her Encouragement to come to him; Neither do I condemn thee; go, and sin no more, John 8. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12.

Not but that he indeed abhorred the Fact, but he would not condemn the Woman for the Sin, because that was not his Office: He was not sent into the World, to condemn the World, but that the World thro' him might be saved, John 3. 17. Now, if Christ, though urged to it, would not condemn the guilty Woman, though she was far at present from coming to him, he would not that they should once think, that he will cast them out, that in truth are coming to him; And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

Thirdly, Christ plainly bids the turning Sinner, Come; and forbids him to entertain any such thought, as that He will cast him out. Let the Wicked forsake his Way, and the unrighteous Man his Thoughts; and let him turn unto the Lord, and he will have Mercy upon him: and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon, Isa. 55. 7.

The Lord, by bidding the Unrighteous forsake his Thoughts; doth in special forbid, as I have said, viz. Those Thoughts that hinder the coming Man in his Progress to Jesus Christ, His Unbelieving Thoughts.

Therefore, he bids him not only forsake his Ways, but his Thoughts; Let the Wicked forsake his Ways, and the Unrighteous Man his Thoughts. 'Tis not enough to forsake one, if thou wilt come to Jesus Christ; because the other will keep thee from him. Suppose a Man forsakes his wicked Ways, his debauched and filthy Life; yet if these Thoughts, That Jesus Christ will not receive him, be entertained and nourished in his Heart; these Thoughts will keep him from coming to Jesus Christ.

Sinner, coming Sinner; Art thou for coming to Jesus Christ: Yes; says the Sinner. Forsake thy wicked Ways then. So I do, says the Sinner. Why comest thou then so slowly? Because I am hindered. What hinders? Has God forbidden thee? No, Art thou not willing to come faster? Yes, yet I cannot. Well, prithee be plain with me, and tell me the Reason and Ground of thy Discouragement: Why (says the Sinner) though God forbids me not, and though I am willing to come faster; yet there naturally ariseth this, and that, and the other Thought in my Heart, that hinders my Speed to Jesus Christ. Sometimes I think I am not Chosen; sometimes I think I am not Called; sometimes I think I am come too Late; and sometimes I think I know not what it is to come. Also one while I think I have no Grace; and then again, that I cannot pray; and then again, I think that I am a very Hypocrite: And these Things keep me from coming to Jesus Christ.

Look ye now! Did not I tell ye so? There are Thoughts yet remaining in the Heart, even of those who have forsaken their wicked Ways; and with those Thoughts they are more plagued, than with any Thing else; because they hinder their coming to Jesus Christ; for the Sin of Unbelief, (which is the Original of all these Thoughts) is that which besets a coming Sinner more easily than doth his Ways, Heb. 12. 1, 2, 3, 4.

But now, since Jesus Christ commands thee to forsake these Thoughts; forsake them, coming Sinner: And if thou forsake them not, thou transgressest the Commands of Christ, and abidest thine own Tormentor, and keepest thy self from Establishment in Grace: If ye will not believe, ye shall not be established, Isa. 7. 9.

Thus you see, how Jesus Christ setteth himself against such Thoughts, that any Way discourage the coming Sinner; and thereby truly vindicates the Doctrine we have in Hand; to wit, That Jesus Christ would not have them, that in Truth are coming to him, once think, that he will cast them out. And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

I come now to the Reasons of the Observation.

I. IF Jesus Christ should allow thee Once to think, that he will cast thee out; he must allow thee to think, that he will falsify his Word: For he hath said, I will in no wise cast out. But Christ would not that thou shouldst count him as One, that will falsify his Word: For he saith of himself, I am the Truth: Therefore he would not, that any that in truth are coming to him, should Once think, that he will cast them out.

Secondly, If Jesus Christ should allow the Sinner, that in Truth is coming to him, Once to think, that he will cast him out; then he must allow, and so countenance the first Appearance of Unbelief; the which he counteth his greatest Enemy; and against which he has bent even his Holy Gospel. Therefore Jesus Christ would not, that they that in Truth are coming to him, should once think, that he will cast them out: See Mat. 14. 31. Chap. 21. 21. Mark 11. 23. Luke 24. 25.

Thirdly, If Jesus Christ should allow the coming Sinner Once to think that he will cast him out: Then he must allow him to make a Question, Whether he is willing to receive his Father's Gift; for the coming Sinner is his Father's Gift; as also says the Text; but he testifieth, All that the Father giveth him shall come to him: And him that cometh, he will in no wise cast out. Therefore, Jesus Christ would not have him, that in truth is coming to him, Once to think, that he will cast him out.

Fourthly, If Jesus Christ should allow them Once to think (that indeed are coming to him) that he will cast them out, he must allow them to think, that he will despise and reject the Drawing of his Father: For No Man can come to him, but whom the Father draweth. But it would be high Blasphemy, and damnable Wickedness Once to imagine thus. Therefore, Jesus Christ would not have him that cometh, Once think that he will cast him out.

Fifthly, If Jesus Christ should allow those that indeed are coming to him, Once to think, that he will cast them out; he must allow them to think, that he will be unfaithful to the Trust and Charge, that his Father hath committed to him; which is to Save, and not to Lose any thing of that which he hath given unto him to save, John 6. 36. But the Father hath given him a Charge, to save the coming Sinner; therefore therefore it cannot be, that he should allow, that such an One should Once think, that he will cast him out.

Sixthly, If Jesus Christ should allow, that they should Once think, that are coming to him, that he will cast them out; then he must allow them to think, that he will be unfaithful to his Office of Priesthood: For, as by the first Part of it, he paid Price for, and ransomed Souls; so by the second Part thereof, he continually maketh Intercession to God for them that come, Heb. 7. 25. But he cannot allow us to question his faithful Execution of his Priesthood; Therefore he cannot allow us Once to think, that the coming Sinner shall be cast out.

Seventhly, If Jesus Christ should allow us once to think, that the coming Sinner shall be cast out: Then he must allow us to question his Will, or Power, or Merit to save. But he cannot allow us Once to question any of these: Therefore not Once to think, that the coming Sinner shall be cast out.

1. He cannot allow us to question his Will: For he saith in the Text; I will in wise cast out.

2. He cannot allow us to question his Power: For the Holy Ghost saith, he is able to save to the utmost them that come.

3. He cannot allow us to question the Efficacy of his Merit: For the Blood of Christ cleanseth the Comer from all Sin, 1 John 1. Therefore he cannot allow, That he that is coming to him, should Once think, that he will cast them out.

Eighthly, If Jesus Christ should allow the coming Sinner once to think that he will cast him out; he must allow him to give the lie to the manifest Testimony of the Father, Son, and Spirit; yea, to the whole Gospel contained in Moses, the Prophets, the Book of Psalms; and that commonly called the New Testament. But he cannot allow of this; therefore, not that the coming Sinner should once think, that he will cast him out.

Ninthly, Lastly, If Jesus Christ should allow him that is coming to him, Once to think that he will cast him out. He must allow him to question his Father's Oath; which he in Truth and Righteousness hath taken; that they might have a strong Consolation, who have fled for Refuge to Jesus Christ: But he cannot allow this; therefore he cannot allow that the coming Sinner should once think, that he will cast him out, Heb. 6.

I come now to make some General Use and Application of the Whole, and so to draw towards a Conclusion.

THE first Use, A Use of Information: And it informeth us, That Men by Nature are far off from Christ.

Let me a little improve this Use, by speaking to these three Questions.

1. Where is he that is coming to Jesus Christ?

2. What is he that is coming to Jesus Christ?

3. Whither is he to go that cometh not to Jesus Christ?

First, Where is he?

Answer. He is far from God, he is without him, even alienate from him, both in his Understanding, Will, Affections, Judgment, and Conscience, Ephes. 2. 12. Chap. 4. 8.

2. He is far from Jesus Christ, who is the only Deliverer of Men from Hell-fire, Psal. 73. 27.

3. He is far from the Work of the Holy Ghost, the Work of Regeneration and a second Creation, without which no Man shall see the Kingdom of Heaven, John 3. 3.

4. He is far from being Righteous, that Righteousness that should make him acceptable in God's Sight, Isa. 46. 14.

5. He is under the Power and Dominion of Sin: Sin reigneth in and over him; it dwelleth in every Faculty of his Soul, and Member of his Body: So that from Head to Foot there is no Place clean, Isa. 1. 6.

Rom. 3. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18.

6. He is in the Pest-house with Uzziah; and excluded the Camp of Israel, with the Lepers, 2 Chron. 26. 21. Num. 5. 20.

7. His Life is among the Unclean; He is in the Gall of Bitterness, and in the Bond of Iniquity, Job 26. 14. Acts 8. 23.

8. He is in Sin, in the Flesh, in Death, in the Snare of the Devil, and is taken Captive by him at his Will, 1 Cor. 15. 17. Rom. 8. 8. 1 John 3. 14. 2 Tim. 2. 26.

9. He is under the Curse of the Law, and the Devils dwell in him, and hath the Maltory of him, Gal. 3. 13. Eph. 2. 2. 3. Acts 26. 18.

10. He is in Darkness, and walketh in Darkness, and knows not whither he goes; for Darkness has blinded his Eyes.

11. He is in the broad Way that leadeth to Destruction; and holding on, he will assuredly go in at the broad Gate, and so down the Stairs to Hell.

Secondly, What is he that cometh not to Jesus Christ?

1. He is counted one of God's Enemies, Luke 19. 14. Rom. 8. 7.

2. He is a Child of the Devil, and of Hell; for the Devil begat him, as to his sinful Nature; and Hell must swallow him at last, because he cometh not to Jesus Christ, John 8. 44. 1 John 3. 8. Mat. 23. 15. Psal. 9. 17.

3. He is a Child of Wrath, an Heir of it; 'tis his Portion, and God will repay it him to his Face, Ephes. 2. 1, 2, 3. John 21. 29, 30, 31.

4. He is a Self-Murderer; he wrongeth his his own Soul, and is one that loveth Death, Prov. 1. 18. Chap. 8. 35, 36.

5. He is a Companion for Devils, and damned Men, Prov. 21. 16. Mat. 25. 41.

Thirdly, Where is he like to go that cometh not to Jesus Christ?

1. He that cometh not to him, is like to go farther from him; for every Sin is a Step farther from Jesus Christ, Hos. 11.

2. As he is in Darknes, so he is like to go on in it: For Christ is the Light of the World, and he that comes not to him, walketh in Darknes, John 8. 12.

3. He is like to be removed at last, as far from God and Christ, and Heaven, and all Felicity, as an infinite God can remove him, Mat. 12. 41.

But Secondly, This Doctrine of coming to Christ, informeth us, Where poor destitute Sinners may find Life for their Souls, and that is in Christ: This Life is in his Son; he that hath the Son, hath Life: And again, Who so findeth me, findeth Life, and shall obtain Favour of the Lord, Prov. 8.

Now for farther Enlargement, I will also here propound three more Questions.

1. What Life is in Christ?

2. Who may have it?

3. Upon what Terms?

First, What Life is in Jesus Christ?

1. There is justifying Life in Christ. Man by Sin, is dead in Law: And Christ only can deliver him by his Righteousness and Blood, from this Death into a State of Life: For God sent his Son into the World, that we might live through him, 1 John 4. 9. That is, through the Righteousness which he should accomplish, and the Death that he should die.

2. There is Eternal Life in Christ: Life that's endless; Life for ever and ever. He hath given us Eternal Life, and this Life is in his Son, 1 John 5.

Now Justification and Eternal Salvation being both in Christ, and no where else to be had for Men, who would not come to Jesus Christ?

Secondly, Who may have this Life?

I answer, poor, helpless, miserable Sinners. Particularly,

1. Such as are willing to have it; Who so ever will, let him take the Water of Life, Rev. 22. 17.

2. He that thirsteth for it, I will give to him that is a thirst of the Fountain of the Water of Life, Rev. 21. 6.

3. He that is weary of his Sins. This is the Rest, whereby you may cause the Weary to rest; and this is the Refreshing, Isa. 28. 12.

4. He that is Poor and Needy, He shall spare the Poor and Needy, and shall save the Souls of the Needy.

5. He that followeth after him, crieth for Life. He that follows me shall not walk in Darknes, but shall have the Light of Life, John 8. 12.

Thirdly, Upon what Terms may he have this Life?

Ans. Freely. Sinner dost thou hear? Thou may'st have it freely. Let him take the Water of Life freely: I will give him of the Fountain of the Water of Life freely; And when they had nothing to pay, he freely forgave them both, Luke 7.

Freely, without Money, or without Price. Ho! Every one that thirsteth, come ye to the Waters: And he that hath no Money, come Buy and Eat: Yea, come, Buy Wine and Milk, without Money and without Price, Isa. 55. 1.

Sinner, Art thou Thirsty? Art thou Weary? Art thou Willing? Come then, and regard not your Stuff; for all the Good that is in Christ, is offered to the coming Sinner, without Money and without Price. He has Life to give away, to such as want it, and that have not a Penny to purchase it; and he will give it freely. Oh, what a blessed Condition is the coming Sinner in!

But Thirdly, This Doctrine of coming to Jesus Christ for Life, informeth us, That it is to be had no where else: Might it be had any where else, the Text, and him that spoke it, would be but little set by: For what great Matter is there in, I will in no wise cast out, If another stood by that would receive them? But here appears the Glory of Christ, that none but he can save. And here appears his Love, that though none can save but he, yet he is not Coy in Saving, But him that comes to me, (saith he) I will in no wise cast out.

That none can save but Jesus Christ, is evident from Acts 4. 12. Neither is there Salvation in any other; and he hath given us Eternal Life, and this Life is in his Son. If Life could have been had any where else, it should have been in the Law: But it is not in the Law; For by the Deeds of the Law, no Man living shall be justified; and if not justified, then no Life.

Therefore Life is no where to be had, but in Jesus Christ, Gal. 3.

Quest. But why would God so order it, that Life should be had no where else, but in Jesus Christ?

Ans. There is Reason for it; and that both with respect to God and Us.

First, with respect to God?

First, That it might be in a Way of Justice, as well as Mercy: And in a Way of Justice it could not have been, if it had not been by Christ; because He, and He only, was able to answer the demand of the Law; and give for Sin what the Justice thereof required. All Angels had been crushed down to Hell for ever, had that Curse been laid upon them for our Sins, which was laid upon Jesus Christ; But 'twas laid upon him, and he bare it: and answered the Penalty, and redeemed his People from under it, with that Satisfaction faction to divine Justice, that God himself doth now proclaim, that he is faithful and just to forgive us, if by Faith we shall venture to Jesus, and trust to what he has done for Life, Rom. 3. 24, 25, 26. John 1. 9.

Secondly, Life must be by Jesus Christ, that God might be adored and magnified, for finding out this Way. This is the Lord's Doings, that in all Things he might be glorified through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Thirdly, It must be by Jesus Christ, that Life might be at God's Dispose, who hath great Pity for the Poor, the Lowly, the Meek, the Broken in Heart; and for them that others care not for, Psal. 34. 6. Psal. 138. 6. Psal. 25. Psal. 51. 17. Psal. 147. 3.

Fourthly, Life must be in Christ, to cut off Boasting from the Lips of Men. This also is the Apostle's Reason, in Rom. 3. 20, 27. and Ephes. 2. 8, 9, 10.

Secondly, Life must be in Jesus Christ, with respect to Us.

First, That we might have it upon the easiest Terms, to wit, Freely; as a Gift, not as Wages: Was it in Moses's Hand, we should come hardly at it? was it in the People's Hand, we should pay soundly for it? But thanks be to God it is in Christ, laid up in him, and by him to be communicated to Sinners upon easy terms, even for receiving, accepting and embracing with Thanksgiving! As the Scriptures plainly declare, 1 John 1. 11, 12. 2 Cor. 11. 4. Heb. 11. 13. Col. 3. 13, 14, 15.

Secondly, Life is in Christ for Us, that it might not be upon so brittle a Foundation, as indeed it would, had it been any where else. The Law it self is weak because of us, as to this: But Christ is a tried Stone, a sure Foundation, one that will not fail to bear thy Burthen, and to receive thy Soul, Coming-sinner.

Thirdly, Life is in Christ, that it might be sure to all the Seed. Alas! the Best of us, was Life left in our Hands, to be sure we should forfeit it, over, and over, and over: Or, was it in any other Hand, we should by our often Backslidings so offend him, that at last he would shut up his Bowels in everlasting Displeasure against us. But now it is in Christ, it is with One that can pity, pray for, pardon, yea, multiply Pardons: It is with One that can have Compassion upon us, when we are out of the Way, with One that hath an Heart to fetch us again, when we are gone astray; with One that can pardon without upbraiding. Blessed be God, that Life is in Christ! For now 'tis sure to all the Seed.

But Fourthly, This Doctrine of coming to Jesus Christ for Life, informs us of the Evil of Unbelief; that wicked Thing that is the only, or chief hinderance to the coming Sinner. Doth the Text say, Come, Doth it say, And him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out? Then what an Evil is that, that keepeth Sinners from coming to Jesus Christ? And that Evil is Unbelief? For by Faith we come? by Unbelief we keep away. Therefore it is said to be that, by which a Soul is said to depart from God; because it was that which at first caused the World to go off from him, and that also that keeps them from him to this Day. And it doth it the more easily, because it doth it with a Wile.

Vol. II.

This Sin may be called The White Devil, for it oftentimes in its mischievous doing in the Soul, shews as if it was an Angel of Light: Yea, it acteth like a Counsellour of Heaven. Therefore, a little to discourse of this evil Disease.

First, It is that Sin, above all others, that hath some shew of Reason in its Attempts. For it keeps the Soul from Christ, by pretending its present Unfitness, and Unpreparedness; as want of more sense of Sin, want of more Repentance, want of more Humility, want of a more broken Heart.

Secondly, It is the Sin that most suiteth with the Conscience: the Conscience of the coming Sinner tells him, that he hath nothing good, that he stands inditible for ten thousand Talents; that he is a very ignorant, blind, and hard-hearted Sinner, unworthy to be once taken notice of by Jesus Christ: And will you (says Unbelief) in such a Case as you now are, presume to come to Jesus Christ.

Thirdly, It is the Sin that most suiteth with our Sense of Feeling. The coming Sinner feels the Workings of Sin, of all Manner of Sin and Wretchedness in his Flesh; he also feels the Wrath and Judgment of God due to Sin, and oft-times staggers under it. Now, says Unbelief, you may see you have no Grace, for that which works in you is Corruption! You may also perceive that God doth not love you, because the Sense of his Wrath abides upon you. Therefore, how can you bear the Face to come to Jesus Christ?

Fourthly, It is that Sin above all others, that most suiteth the Wisdom of our Flesh. The Wisdom of our Flesh thinks it Prudence to question a while, to stand back a while, to hearken to both sides a while; and not to be rash, sudden, or unadvised in too bold a presuming upon Jesus Christ. And this Wisdom, Unbelief falls in with.

Fifthly, It is the Sin above all other, that continually is whispering the Soul in the Ear with Mistrusts of the Faithfulness of God in keeping Promise to them that come to Jesus Christ for Life. It also suggests Mistrusts, about Christ's Willingness to receive it, and save it. And no Sin can do this so artificially, as Unbelief.

Sixthly, It is also that Sin which is always at Hand to enter an Objection against this, or that Promise, that by the Spirit of God is brought to our Heart to comfort us; And if the poor coming Sinner is not aware of it, it will by some Exaction, Slight, Trick, or Caviel, quickly wrest from him the Promise again, and he shall have but little Benefit of it.

Seventhly, It is that above all other Sins, that weakens our Prayers, our Faith, our Love, our Diligence, our Hope and Expectations: It even taketh the Heart away from God in Duty.

Eighthly, Lastly, This Sin, as I have said even now, it appears in the Soul with so many sweet Pretences to Safety and Security; that it is, as it were, Counsel sent from Heaven: Bidding the Soul be wise, wary, considerate, well advised, and to take heed of too rash a Venture upon believing. Be sure first, that God loves you; take hold of no Promise until you are forced by God unto it; neither be you sure of your Salvation, doubt it still, though the Testimony of the Lord has been often confirmed in you: Live not by Faith, but by Sense: And when you can neither see nor feel, then fear and mistrust, then doubt and question all. This is the Devilish Counsel of Unbelief, which is so covered over with specious Pretences, that the wisest Christian can hardly shake off these Reasonings.

But to be brief: Let me here give the Christian Reader, a more particular Description of the Qualities of Unbelief, by opposing Faith unto it, in these twenty five Particulars.

First, Faith believeth the Word of God, but Unbelief questioneth the Certainty of the same, Psal. 106. 24.

Secondly, Faith believeth the Word, because it is true, but Unbelief doubteth thereof, because it is true, 1 Tim. 4. 3. John 8. 45.

Thirdly, Faith sees more in a Promise of God to help, than in all other things to hinder. But Unbelief, notwithstanding God's Promise, saith, How can these things be? Rom. 4. 19, 20, 21. 2 Kings 7. 2. John 3. 11, 12.

Fourthly, Faith will make thee see Love in the Heart of Christ, when with his Mouth he giveth Reproofs. But Unbelief will imagine Wrath in his Heart, when with his Mouth and Word, he saith he loves us, Mat. 15, 22 to 29. Numb. 13. 2. 2 Chron. 14. 3.

Fifthly, Faith will help the Soul to wait, though God defers to give. But Unbelief will take Snuff and throw up all, if God makes any tarrying, Psal. 25. 5. Isa. 8. 17. 2 Kings 6. 33. Psal. 100. 13, 14.

Sixthly, Faith will give Comfort in the midst of Fears; but Unbelief causeth Fears in the midst of Comforts, 2 Chron. 20. 20, 21. Mat. 8. 26. Luke 24. 26, 27.

Seventhly, Faith will suck sweetness out of God's Rod; but Unbelief can find no Comfort in his greatest Mercies, Psal. 23. 4. Numb. 12.

Eighthly, Faith maketh great Burthens light; but Unbelief maketh light ones intolerable heavy, 2 Cor. 4. 14 to 19. Mal. 1. 12, 13.

Ninthly, Faith helpeth us when we are down; but Unbelief throws us down when we are up, Micah. 7. 8, 9, 10. Heb. 4. 11.

Tenthly, Faith bringeth us near to God, when we are far from him, but Unbelief puts us far from God when we are near to him, Heb. 10. 22. Chap. 3. 12, 13.

Eleventhly, Where Faith reigns, it declareth Men to be the Friends of God, but where Unbelief reigns, it declareth them to be his Enemies, James 5. 23. Heb. 3. 18. Rev. 21. 8.

Twelfthly, Faith putteth a Man under Grace; but Unbelief holdeth him under Wrath, Rom. 2. 24, 25, 26. Chap. 14. 16. Ephes. 2. 8. John 3. 36. 1 John 5. 10. Heb. 3. 17. Mark 16. 16.

Thirteenthly, Faith purifieth the Heart; but Unbelief keepeth it polluted and impure, Acts 15. 9. Tit. 1. 15, 16.

Fourteenthly, By Faith the Righteousness of Christ is imputed to us; but by Unbelief, we are shut up under the Law to perish, Rom. 4. 23, 24. Chap. 11. 32. Gal. 3. 23.

Fifteenthly, Faith maketh our Work acceptable to God through Christ, but whatsoever is of Unbelief is Sin: For without Faith it is impossible to please him, Heb. 11. 4. Rom. 14. 23. Heb. 11. 6.

Sixteenthly, Faith giveth us Peace and Comfort in our Souls; but Unbelief worketh Trouble and Tossings, like the restless Waves of the Sea, Rom. 5. 1. Jam. 6. 1.

Seventeenthly, Faith maketh us see Preciousness in Christ; but Unbelief sees no Form, Beauty or Comeliness in him, 1 Pet. 2. Isa. 53. 1, 2, 3.

Eighteenthly, By Faith we have our Life in Christ's Fullness; but by Unbelief we starve and pine away, Gal. 2. 20.

Nineteenthly, Faith gives us the Victory over the Law, Sin, Death, the Devil, and all Evils; but Unbelief layeth us obnoxious to them all, 1 John 5. 4, 5. Luke 12. 46.

Twentiethly, Faith will shew us more Excellency in Things not seen, than in them that are; but Unbelief sees more in Things that are, than in Things that will be hereafter, 2 Cor. 4. 18. Heb. 11. 24, 25, 26, 27. 1 Cor. 15. 32.

Twenty-firstly, Faith makes the Ways of God pleasant and admirable; but Unbelief maketh them heavy and hard, Gal. 5. 6. 1 Cor. 12. 10, 11. John 6. 60. Psal. 2. 3.

Twenty-secondly, By Faith, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, possessed the Land of Promise; but but because of Unbelief, neither Aaron, nor Moses, nor Miriam, could get thither, Heb. 11. 9. Chap. 3. 19.

Twenty-third, By Faith the Children of Israel passed through the Red Sea, but by Unbelief the generality of them perished in the Wilderness, Heb. 11. 29. Jude 5.

Twenty-fourth, By Faith, Gideon did more with Three Hundred Men, and a few empty Pitchers, than all the Twelve Tribes could do; because they believed not God, Judges 7. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22. Numb. 14. 11, 14.

Twenty-fifth, By Faith, Peter walked on the Water; but by Unbelief he began to sink, Matt. 14. 21, 22, 23, 24.

Thus might many more be added, which for brevity sake, I omit; beseeching every one that thinketh he hath a Soul to save, or be damned, to take heed of Unbelief. Lest seeing there is a Promise left us of entering into his Rest, any of us by Unbelief should indeed come short of it.

The Second Use; a Use of Examination.

WE come to a Use of Examination. Sinner, Thou hast heard of the Necessity of Coming to Christ; also, of the Willingness of Christ to receive the Coming Soul: Together with the Benefit that They by him shall have, that indeed come to him. Put thy self now upon this serious Enquiry, Am I indeed come to Jesus Christ?

Motives plenty I might here urge, to prevail with thee to a conscientious Performance of this Duty: As,

1. Thou art in Sin, in the Flesh, in Death, in the Snare of the Devil, and under the Curse of the Law; if you are not coming to Jesus Christ.

2. There is no Way to be delivered from these, but by coming to Jesus Christ.

3. If thou comest, Jesus Christ will receive thee, and will in no wise cast thee out.

4. Thou wilt not repent it in the Day of Judgment if now thou comest to Jesus Christ.

5. But thou wilt surely mourn at last, if now thou shalt refuse to come: And,

6. Lastly, Now thou hast been invited to come; now will thy Judgment be greater, and thy Damnation more fearful, if thou shalt yet refuse, than if thou hadst never heard of coming to Christ.

Object. But we hope we are come to Jesus Christ?

Ans. 'Tis well if it proves so. But lest thou shouldst speak without ground, and so fall unawares into Hell-fire; let us examine a little.

First, Art thou indeed coming to Jesus Christ? What hast thou left behind thee? What didst thou come away from, in thy coming to Jesus Christ?

When Lot came out of Sodom, he left the Sodomites behind him, Gen. 19.

When Abraham came out of Chaldea, he left his Country and Kindred behind him, Gen. 12. Acts 7.

When Ruth came to put her Trust under the Wings of the Lord God of Israel; she left her Father and Mother, her Gods, and the Land of her Nativity behind her, Ruth 1. 15, 16, 17. Chap. 2. 11, 12.

When Peter came to Christ, he left his Nets behind him, Matt. 4. 18.

When Zachaeus came to Christ, he left the Receipt of Custom behind him, Luke 18.

When Paul came to Christ, he left his own Righteousness behind him, Phil. 3. 7, 8.

When those that used curious Arts came to Jesus Christ, they took their curious Books and burned them, though in another Man's Eye, they were counted worth Fifty Thousand Pieces of Silver, Acts 19. 18, 19, 20.

What say'st thou, Man? Hast thou left thy darling Sins, thy Sodomitish Pleasures, thy Acquaintance and vain Companions; thy unlawful Gain, thy Idol Gods, thy Righteousness, and thy unlawful curious Arts behind thee? If any of these be with thee, and thou with them, in thy Heart and Life, thou art not yet come to Jesus Christ.

Secondly, Art thou come to Jesus Christ? Prithee tell me, what moved thee to come to Jesus Christ? Men do not usually come or go, to this or that Place before they have a Moving Cause: Or rather, a Cause moving them thereto: No more do they come to Jesus Christ: (I do not say) before they have a Cause, but before that Cause moveth them to come: What say'st thou? Hast thou a Cause moving thee to come? To be at present in a State of Condemnation, is Cause sufficient for Men to come to Jesus Christ for Life: But that will not do, except the Cause move them; the which it will never do until their Eyes be opened, to see themselves in that Condition. For it is not a Man's being under Wrath, but his seeing it, that moveth him to come to Jesus Christ: Alas! All Men by Sin, are under Wrath; yet but few of that All come to Jesus Christ: And the Reason is, because they do not see their Condition. Who hath warned you to flee from the Wrath to come, Matth. 3. 7. Until Men are warned, and also receive the Warning, they will not come to Jesus Christ.

Take Three or Four Instances for this.

1. Adam and Eve came not to Jesus Christ until they received the Alarm; the Conviction of their undone State by Sin, Gen. 3.

2. The

2. The Children of Israel cried not out for a Mediator, before they saw themselves in Danger of Death by the Law, Exod. 20. 18, 19.

3. Before the Publican came, he saw himself lost and undone, Luke 18. 13.

4. The Prodigal came not, until he saw Death at the Door ready to devour him, Luke 15. 17, 18.

5. The Three Thousand came not, until they knew not what to do to be saved, Acts 2. 37, 38, 39.

6. Paul came not, until he saw himself lost and undone, Acts 9. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 11.

7. Lastly, Before the Jaylor came, he saw himself undone, Acts 16. 29, 30, 31. And I tell thee it is an easier thing to persuade a Well-man to go to the Physician for Cure, or a Man without Hurt, to seek a Plaister to cure him, than it is to persuade a Man, that sees not his Soul-Disease, to come to Jesus Christ. The Whole have no need of a Physician: Then, why should they go to him? The full Pitcher can hold no more; then why should it go to the Fountain? And if thou comest full, thou comest not aright; and be sure Christ will send thee empty away: But he healeth the Broken in Heart, and bindeth up their Wounds, Mark 2. 17. Psal. 47. 3. Luke 1. 5, 3.

Thirdly, Art thou coming to Jesus Christ? Prithee tell me, What seeest thou in him to allure thee to forsake all the World, to come to him? I say, What hast thou seen in him? Men must see somewhat in Jesus Christ, else they will not come to him.

1. What Comeliness hast thou seen in his Person? thou comest not, if thou seeest no Form, nor Comeliness in him, Isa. 53. 1, 2, 3.

2. Until those mentioned in the Song, were convinced that there was more Beauty, Comeliness and Desirableness in Christ, than in Ten Thousand; they did not so much as ask, where he was, nor incline to turn aside after him, Song 5. Chap. 6.

There be many Things on this side Heaven, that can and do carry away the Heart; and so will do, so long as thou livest, if thou shalt be kept blind, and not be admitted to see the Beauty of the Lord Jesus.

Fourthly, Art thou come to the Lord Jesus; what hast thou found in him, since thou camest to him.

Peter found with him the Word of Eternal Life; John 6. 68.

They that Peter makes mention of, found him a living Stone, even such a living Stone, as communicated Life to them, 1 Pet. 2.

He saith himself, they that come to him, &c. shall find Rest unto their Souls; hast thou found Rest in him, for thy Soul? Mat. 11.

Let us go back to the Terms of the Old Testament.

First, Abraham found that in him, that made him leave his Country for him, and become for his sake a Pilgrim and Stranger in the Earth, Gen. 12. Heb. 11.

Secondly, Moses found that in him, that made him forsake a Crown, a Kingdom for him too.

Thirdly, David found so much in him, that he counted, to be in his House one Day, was better than a thousand; yea, to be a Door-keeper therein, was better in his Esteem, than to dwell in the Tents of Wickedness, Psal. 84. 10.

Fourthly, What did Daniel and the three Children find in him, to make them run the Hazards of the Fiery Furnace, and the Den of Lions, for his sake, Dan. 23. Chap. 6.

Let's come down to Martyrs.

First, Stephen found that in him, that made him joyful, and quietly yield up his Life for his Name, Acts 17.

Secondly, Ignatius found that in him, that made him Chuse to go through the Torments of the Devil and Hell itself; rather than not to have him, Acts and Monuments, Vol. 4. Pag. 25.

Thirdly, What saw Romanus in Christ, when he said to the raging Emperor, who threatned him with fearful Torments: Thy Sentence, O Emperor, I joyfully embrace, and refuse not to be sacrificed--by as cruel Torments as thou canst invent, Page 116.

Fourthly, What saw Menas the Egyptian in Christ, when he said under most cruel Torments; There is nothing in my Mind that can be compared to the Kingdom of Heaven; neither is all the World, if it was weighed in a Ballance, to be preferred with the Price of one Soul: Who is able to separate us from the Love of Jesus Christ our Lord? And I have learned of my Lord and King not to fear them that kill the Body, &c. pag. 117.

Fifthly, What did Eulalia see in Christ, when she said, as they were pulling her one Joint from another; Behold, O Lord, I will not forget thee: What a Pleasure is it for them, O Christ! that remembereth thy Triumphant Victory, pag. 121.

Sixthly, What think you did Agnus see in Christ, when rejoycingly she went to meet the Soldier, that was appointed to be her Executioner: I will willingly (said she) receive into my Paps the Length of this Sword, and into my Breast will draw the Force thereof, even to the Hilt; that thus I, being married to Christ my Spouse, may surmount and escape all the Darknes of this World, p. 122.

Seventhly, What do you think did Julitta see in Christ, when at the Emperor's telling of her; That except she would worship the Gods, she should never have Protection, tection, Laws, Judgments, nor Life: She replied, Farewel Life, Welcome Death; Farewel Riches, welcome Poverty. All that I have, if it were a thousand times more, would I give, rather than to speak one wicked and blasphemous Word against my Creator, p. 123.

Eighthly, What did Marcus Arethusius see in Christ, when after his Enemies did cut his Flesh, anointed it with Honey, and hanged him up in a Basket, for Flies and Bees to feed on, he would not give (to uphold Idolatry) one Half-penny to save his Life, pag. 119.

Ninthly, What did Constantine see in Christ, when he used to kiss the Wounds of them that suffered for him? pag. 135.

Tenthly, But what need I give thus particular Instances of Words and smaller Actions, when by their Lives, their Blood, their enduring Hunger, Sword, Fire, pulling asunder, and all Torments that the Devil and Hell could devise, they shewed their Love to Christ, after they were come to him.

What hast thou found in him Sinner!

What! come to Christ and find nothing in him, (when all Things that are worth looking for, are in him) or if any thing, yet not enough to wean thee from thy sinful Delights, and fleshly Lusts! Away; thou art not coming to Jesus Christ.

He that is come to Jesus Christ, hath found in him, that, as I said, That is not to be found any where else. As,

First, He that is come to Christ, hath found God in him reconciling the World unto himself; not imputing their Trespases to them: And so God is not to be found in Heaven and Earth besides, 2 Cor. 5. 19, 20.

Secondly, He that is come to Jesus Christ, hath found in him a Fountain of Grace, sufficient, not only to pardon Sin, but to sanctify the Soul, and to preserve it from falling in this evil World.

Thirdly, He that is come to Jesus Christ, hath found Vertue in him: That Vertue, that if he does but touch thee with his Words; or thou him by Faith; Life is forthwith conveyed into thy Soul: It makes thee wake as one that is waked out of his Sleep: It awakes all the Powers of the Soul, Psal. 30. 11, 12. Song. 6. 12.

Fourthly, Art thou come to Jesus Christ? Thou hast found Glory in him, Glory that surmounts and goes beyond. Thou art more glorious than the Mountains of Prey, Psal. 76. 4.

Fifthly, What shall I say? Thou hast found Righteousness in him; Thou hast found Rest, Peace, Delight; Heaven, Glory, and Eternal Life.

Sinner, be advised; ask thy Heart again: Saying, Am I come to Jesus Christ? For upon this one Question, Am I come, or, Am I not, hangs Heaven and Hell, as to thee.

Vol. II.

If thou canst say, I am come, and God shall approve that Saying; happy, happy, happy Man art thou! But if thou art not come, what can make thee happy? Yea, what can make that Man happy, that for his not coming to Jesus Christ for Life, must be damned in Hell?

The Third Use; A Use of Encouragement.

Coming Sinner I have now a Word for thee; be of good Comfort, He will in no wise cast out. Of all Men, thou art the blessed of the Lord; the Father hath prepared his Son to be a Sacrifice for thee, and Jesus Christ, thy Lord, is gone to prepare a Place for thee, John 1. 29. Heb. 10.

What shall I say to thee? Thou comest to a full Christ, thou canst not want any thing, for Soul, or Body, for this World, or that to come, but it is to be had in or by Jesus Christ.

As it is said of the Land that the Danites went to possess; so, and with much more Truth it may be said of Christ: He is such an One, with whom there is no want of any good Thing that is in Heaven or Earth.

A full Christ is thy Christ.

First, He is full of Grace. Grace is sometimes taken for Love; never any loved like Jesus Christ. Jonathan's Love went beyond the Love of Women; but the Love of Christ passes Knowledge. It is beyond the Love of all the Earth, of all Creatures, even of Men and Angels. His Love prevailed with him to lay aside his Glory, to leave the Heavenly Place, to cloath himself with Flesh, to be born in a Stable, to be laid in a Manger, to live a poor Life in the World, to take upon him our Sickneses, Infirmities, Sins, Curse, Death, and the Wrath that was due to Man. And all this he did, for a base, undeserving, unthankful People; yea, for a People that was at Enmity with him. For when we were yet without Strength, in due Time Christ died for the Ungodly. For scarcely for a righteous Man will One die, yet peradventure for a good Man, some would even dare to die. But God commended his Love towards us in that while we were yet Sinners, Christ died for us. Much more than being now justified by his Blood, we shall be saved by his Life. For if when we were Enemies, we were reconciled to God, by the Death of his Son; much more being reconciled, we shall be saved by his Life, Rom. 5. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

Secondly, He is full of Truth. Full of Grace and Truth. Truth, that is, Faithfulness in keeping Promise, even this of the Text, (with all other) I will in no wise cast out. Hence it is said, that his Words be true, and that he is the faithful God, that keepeth Covenants. And hence it is also that his Promise is called Truth, Thou wilt fulfill thy Truth unto Jacob, and thy Mercy unto Abraham, which thou hast sworn unto

our

our Fathers from the Days of Old. Therefore it is said again, that both Himself and Words are Truth, I am the Truth, the Scriptures of Truth, thy Word is Truth, thy Law is Truth, and my Mouth, saith he, shall speak Truth, John 14. 6. Dan. 10. 21. John 17. 17. 2 Sam. 7. 28. Prov. 8. 7. Psal. 119. 142. Eccles. 12. 10. Isa. 25. 1. Mal. 2. 6. Acts 26. 25. 2 Tim. 2. 12, 13.

Now I say, his Word is Truth, and he is full of Truth, to fulfil his Truth, even to a thousand Generations. Coming Sinner, he will not deceive thee, come boldly to Jesus Christ.

Thirdly, He is full of Wisdom; He is made unto us of God Wisdom: Wisdom to manage the Affairs of his Church in general, and the Affairs of every coming Sinner in particular. And upon this Account he is said to be Head over all Things, 1 Cor. 1. Ephes. 1. Because he manages all things that are in the World by his Wisdom, for the Good of his Church; all Men's Actions, all Satan's Temptations, all God's Providences, and Crosses, and Disappointments; all things whatever are under the Hand of Christ, (who is the Wisdom of God) and he ordereth them all for good to his Church: And can Christ help it (and be sure he can) nothing shall happen or fall out in the World, but it shall, in despite of all Opposition, have a good tendency to his Church and People.

Fourthly, He is full of the Spirit, to communicate it to the coming Sinner; he hath therefore received it without Measure, that he may communicate it to every Member of his Body, according as every Man's Measure thereof is allotted him by the Father. Wherefore he saith, that he that comes to him, Out of his Belly shall flow Rivers of Living Water, John 3. 34. Tit. 3. 5, 6. Acts 1. John 7. 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38.

Fifthly, He is indeed a Store-house full of all the Graces of the Spirit. Of his Fulness have all we received, and Grace for Grace. Here is more Faith, more Love, more Sincerity, more Humility, more of every Grace; and of this, even more of this he giveth to every lowly, humble, penitent, coming Sinner: Wherefore coming Soul, thou comest not to a barren Wilderness, when thou comest to Jesus Christ, John 1. 16.

Sixthly, He is full of Bowels and Compassion: And they shall feel and find it so that come to him for Life. He can bear with thy Weakness, he can pity thy Ignorance, he can be touched with the feeling of thy Infirmities, he can affectionately forgive thy Transgressions, he can heal thy Back-slidings, and love thee freely. His Compassions fail not: And he will not break a bruised Reed, nor quench the smoking Flax: He can pity them that no Eye pities, and be afflicted in all thy Afflictions, Mat.

26. 41. Heb. 5. 2. Chap. 2. 18, 19. Mat. 9. 2. Hos. 14. 4. Ezek. 16. 5, 6. Isa. 63. 9. Psal. 78. 38. Psal. 86. 15. Psal. 111. 4. Psal. 112. 4. Lam. 3. 22, 42. 3.

Seventhly, Coming Soul, the Jesus that thou art coming to, is full of Might and Terribleness for thy Advantage: He can suppress all thine Enemies. He is the Prince of the Kings of the Earth; he can bow all Men's Designs for thy help: He can break all Snares laid for thee in the Way: He can lift thee out of all Difficulties, where-with thou may'st be surrounded: He is wise in Heart, and mighty in Power. Every Life under Heaven is in his Hand: Yea, the fallen Angels trembled before him: And he will save thy Life, coming Sinner, 1 Cor. 1. 24. Rom. 8. 28. Mat. 28. 18. Rev. 15. Psal. 19. 3. Psal. 27. 5, 6. Job. 9. 4. Job. 17. 2. Mat. 8. 29. Luke 8. 24. James 2. 19.

Eighthly, Coming Sinner, the Jesus to whom thou art coming, is lowly in Heart; He despiseth not any. 'Tis not thy outward Meanness, nor thy inward Weakness; 'tis not because thou art poor, or base, or deformed, or a Fool, that he will despise thee. He hath chosen the Foolish, the Base, and despised Things of this World, to confound the Wise and Mighty. He will bow his Ear to thy stammering Prayers; he will pick out the Meaning of thy inexpressible Groans; He will respect thy weakest Offering, if there be in it but thy Heart, Mat. 11. 20. Luke 14. 21. Prov. 9. 4, 5, 6. Isa. 38. 14, 15. Song 5. 15. John 4. 27. Mark 12. 33, 34. James 5. 11.

Now is not this a Blessed Christ, coming Sinner? Art thou not like to fare well, when thou hast embraced him, coming Sinner! But,

Secondly, Thou hast yet another Advantage by Jesus Christ, thou art coming to him: For he is not only Full but Free. He is not sparing of what he has; he is open-hearted, and open-handed. Let me in a few Particulars shew thee this:

First, This is evident, because he calls thee: He calls upon thee to come unto him; the which he would not do, was he not free to give: Yea, he bids thee, when come; Ask, Seek, Knock: And for thy Encouragement adds to every command a Promise; Seek, and ye shall find; Ask, and ye shall have; Knock and it shall be opened unto you. If the rich Man should say thus to the Poor would not he be reckoned a Free-hearted Man? I say, should he say to the Poor, Come to my Door, Ask at my Door, Knock at my Door, and you shall find and have: Would he not be counted Liberal? Why thus doth Jesus Christ. Mind it Coming-sinner, Isa. 55. 3. Psal. 50. 15. Mat. 7. 7, 8, 9.

Secondly, He doth not only bid thee come, but tells thee, he will heartily do thee good; Yea, he will do it with Rejoicing: I will rejoyce over them to do them good with my whole whole Heart, and with my whole Soul, Jer. 32. 41.

Thirdly, It appears that he is free, because he giveth without Twitting: He gives to all Men liberally, and upbraideth not; James 1. 5. There are some that will not deny to do the Poor a Pleasure, but they will mix their Mercies with so many Twitts, that, the Persons on whom they bestow their Charity shall find but little sweetness it. But Christ doth not do so, Coming-sinner; He casteth all thine Iniquities behind his Back; thy Sins and Iniquities he will remember no more: Isa. 38. 17. Heb. 8. 12.

Fourthly, That Christ is free, is manifest by the Complaints that he makes against them that will not come to him for Mercy, I say, he complains; saying, O Jerusalem, Jerusalem! How often would I have gathered thy Children together, as a Hen gathereth her Chickens under her Wings, and ye would not; Mat. 23. 37. I say, he speaks it by way of Complaint. He saith also in another Place; But thou hast not called upon me, O Jacob, Isa. 43. 22. Coming-sinner, see here the Willingness of Christ to save; see here how free he is to communicate Life, and all good things, to such as thou art; He complains, if thou comest not; he is displeased, if thou callest not upon him.

Hark, Coming-sinner, once again; when Jerusalem would not come to him for safeguard. He beheld the City, and wept over it, saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in thy Day, the Things that belong to thy Peace, but now they are hid from thine Eyes, Luke 19. 41.

Fifthly, Lastly, He is open and free-hearted to do thee good, as is seen by the Joy and Rejoycing, that he manifesteth at the coming home of poor Prodigals; He receives the lost Sheep with Rejoycing; the lost Goat with Rejoycing: Yea, when the Prodigal came home, what Joy and Mirth, what Musick and Dancing was in his Father's House! Luke 15.

Thirdly, Coming-sinner, I will add another Encouragement for thy Help.

First, God hath prepared a Mercy-Seat, a Throne of Grace to Sit on: That thou may'st come thither to him, and that he may from Thence hear thee, and receive thee: I will commune with thee (saith he) from above the Mercy seat, Exod. 25. 22.

As who shall say; Sinner, When thou comest to me, thou shalt find me upon the Mercy-seat, where also I am always found of the Undone, Coming-sinner: Thither I bring my Pardon; there I hear and receive their Petitions, and accept them to my Favour.

Secondly, God hath also prepared a golden Altar for thee to offer thy Prayers and Tears upon: A golden Altar! It is called a golden Altar, to shew what Worth it is of in God's Account: For this golden Altar is Jesus Christ; this Altar sanctifies thy Gift, and makes thy Sacrifice acceptable. This Altar then makes thy Groans, golden Groans; thy Tears golden Tears, and thy Prayers, golden Prayers, in the Eye of that God thou comest to, Coming-sinner, Rev. 8. Mat. 23. 19. Heb. 10. 10. 1 Pet. 2. 5.

Thirdly, God hath strewn all the Way (from the Gate of Hell, where thou wast, to the Gate of Heaven, whither thou art going), with Flowers out of his own Garden: Behold! how the Promises, Invitations, Calls, and Encouragements, like Lillies, lie round about thee; (take heed that thou dost not tread them under Foot, Sinner!) with Promises did I say? Yea, he hath mixed all those with his own Name, his Son's Name; also, with the Name of Mercy, Goodness, Compassion, Love, Pity, Grace, Forgiveness, Pardon, and what not, that may encourage the Coming-Sinner.

Fourthly, He hath also for thy Encouragement, laid up the Names, and set forth the Sins of those that have been saved: In his Book they are fairly written, that thou through Patience and Comfort of the Scriptures mightest have Hope.

1. In this Book is recorded Noah's Maim and Sin; and how God had Mercy upon him.

2. In this Record is fairly written the Name of Lot, and the Nature of his Sin; and how the Lord had Mercy upon him.

3. In this Record thou hast also fairly written the Names of Moses, Aaron, Gideon, Sampson, David, Solomon, Peter, Paul; with the Nature of their Sins, and how God had Mercy upon them, and all to encourage thee, Coming-sinner.

Fourthly, I will add yet another Encouragement for the Man that is coming to Jesus Christ. Art thou coming? Art thou coming indeed? Why,

1. This thy coming is, By Vertue of God's Call, Thou art called; calling goes before coming: Coming is not of Works, but of him that calleth. He went up into a Mountain, and called to him whom he would, and they came to him, Mark 3. 13.

Secondly, Art thou coming? This is also by the Vertue of Illumination. God has made thee see, and therefore thou art coming. So long as thou wast Darkness, thou lovedst Darkness; and couldest not abide to come, because thy Deeds were Evil: But being now illuminated and made to see, what and where thou art: and also, what and where thy Saviour is: Now thou art coming to Jesus Christ, Blessed art thou Simon Barjona; for Flesh and Blood hath not revealed it unto thee, (saith Christ) but my Father which is in Heaven, Mat. 16. 15, 16.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, Art thou coming? This is because God has inclined thy Heart to come; God hath called thee, illuminated thee, and inclined thy Heart to come: And therefore thou comest to Jesus Christ. It is God that worketh in thee to will, and to come to Jesus Christ. Coming-sinner, bless God for that he hath given thee a Will to come to Jesus Christ. It is a Sign that thou belongest to Jesus Christ, because God has made thee willing to come to him, Psal. 110. 3. Bless God for slaying the Enemy of thy Mind, had he not done it, thou wouldst as yet have hated thine own Salvation.

Fourthly, Art thou coming to Jesus Christ? It is God that giveth thee Power; Power to pursue thy Will in matters of thy Salvation, is the Gift of God. 'Tis God that worketh in you both to will and to do, Phil. 2. 13. Not that God worketh Will to come, where he gives no Power; but that thou shouldest take Notice, that Power is an additional Mercy. The Church saw that Will and Power were two Things, when she cryed, Draw me, and we will run after thee, (Song 1. 4.) and so did David too, when he said, I will run the Ways of thy Commandments, when thou shalt enlarge my Heart. Will to come, and Power to pursue thy Will, is double Mercy, Coming-sinner.

Fifthly, All thy strange, passionate, sudden Rushings forward after Jesus Christ, (Coming-sinners know what I mean) they also are thy Helps from God. Perhaps thou feelest at sometimes more than at others, strong stirrings up of Heart to fly to Jesus Christ; now thou hast at this time a sweet and stiff gale of the Spirit of God, filling thy Sails with the fresh gales of his good Spirit; and thou ridest at those Times as upon the Wings of the Wind, being carried out beyond thy self, beyond the most of thy Prayers, and also above all thy Fears and Temptations.

Sixthly, Coming-sinner, hast thou not now and then a Kiss of the sweet Lips of Jesus Christ? I mean, some blessed Word dropping like a Honey-comb upon thy Soul to revive thee, when thou art in the midst of thy Dumps.

Seventhly, Does not Jesus Christ sometimes give thee a Glimpse of himself, though perhaps, thou seeest him not so long a time as while one may tell Twenty?

Eighthly, Hast thou not sometimes, as it were the very warmth of his Wings overshadowing the Face of thy Soul; that gives thee as it were a Gload upon thy Spirit, as the bright Beams of the Sun do upon thy Body, when it suddenly breaks out of a Cloud, though presently all is gone away?

Well, all these things are the good Hand of thy God upon thee, and they are upon thee to constrain, to provoke, and to make thee willing, and able to come (Coming-sinner,) that thou mightest in the End be saved.

*See how the Pharisee in the Temple Stands | Whilst the poor publican with downcast eyes
And Justifies himselfe with lifted hands; | Conscious of guilt, to God for mercy cries.*

DISCOURSE

UPON THE

Pharisee and Publican.

WHEREIN

Several Weighty Things are handled: As the Nature of Prayer, and of Obedience to the Law: Together with the Way and Method of God's Free Grace in pardoning Penitent Sinners; by imputing Christ's Righteousness to them.

To the READER.

Courteous Reader,

I Have made bold once again to present thee with some of my Meditations; and they are now about the Pharisee and the Publican: Two Men in whose Condition the whole is comprehended, both as to their State now, and Condition at the Judgment.

Wherefore in reading this little Book thou must needs read thy self. I do not say thou must understand thy Condition; for 'tis the Gift of God must make thee do that. Howbeit, if God will bless it to thee, it may be a Means to bring thee to see whose Steps thou art treading, and so at whose end thou art like to arrive.

And let me beg this at thy Hand, now thou art about to read; reserve thy Judgment or Sentence as to me, until thou hast passed thro' the Discourse.

Justification is treated of here, and the Way for Men to be saved.

I have also O Publican here, as my Skill hath served me, for thy Encouragement, set before thee the Pharisee and the Publican in their Colours, and shewed thee, that though the Publican seemed to be far behind, yet in running he got the Prize from the Lofty Pharisee. I say, art thou a Pharisee? Here is a Pharisee for thee. Art thou a Publican? Here is a Publican for thee.

God give thee the Publican's Heart, if thou art in the Publican's Sins, that thou mayest partake with the Publican, Mercy;

So wisbeth thy Friend,

John Bunyan.

DISCOURSE

UPON THE

Pharisee and Publican.

LUKE XVIII. 10, 11, 12, 13.

Two Men went up into the Temple to pray, the one a Pharisee, and the other a Publican: The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself; God, I thank thee, that I am not as other Men are, Extortioners, Unjust, Adulterers, or even as this Publican. I fast twice in a Week, I give Tithes of all that I possess. And the Publican standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven, but smote upon his Breast, saying, God be merciful to me a Sinner.

IN the Beginning of this Chapter you read of the Reason of the Parable of the unjust Judge and the poor Widow; namely, to encourage Men to pray. He spake a Parable to this END, that Men ought always to pray and not to faint. And a most sweet Parable for that purpose it is: For if thro' Importunity, a poor Widow-woman may prevail with an unjust Judge; and so consequently with an unmerciful and hard-hearted Tyrant, how much more shall the poor, afflicted, distressed, and tempted People of God, prevail with, and obtain Mercy at the Hands of a loving, just and merciful God? The unjust Judge would not hearken to, nor regard the Cry of the poor Widow for a while: But afterwards he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard Man; yet because this Widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me. Hark, saith Christ, what the unjust Judge saith. And shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry unto him Day and Night? I tell you, he will avenge them speedily.

This is therefore a very comfortable Parable to such of the Saints that are under hard Usages by reason of evil Men, their Might, and Tyranny. For by it we are taught to believe and expect, that God, though for a while he seemeth not to regard, yet will, in due time, and season, arise and set such in safety from them that puff at them, Psal. 12. 5.

Let the good Christian pray always; let him pray and not faint at seeming Delays; for if the Widow by Importunity prevailed with the unjust Judge, how much more shall he with his heavenly Father. I tell you, says Christ, he will avenge them speedily.

But now, forasmuch as this Parable reacheth not (so directly) the poor Publican in the Text, therefore our Lord begins again, and adds to that other Parable, this Parable, which I have chosen for my Text. By which he designeth two Things: First, The Conviction of the proud and self-conceited Pharisee: Secondly, The Raising up and healing of the cast-down and dejected Publican. And observe it, as by the first Parable he chiefly designeth the Relief of those that are under the Hand of cruel Tyrants: So by this he designeth the Relief of those that lie under the Load and Burden of a guilty and disquieted Conscience.

This therefore is a Parable, that is full of of singular Comfort to such of the Sinners in the World, that are clogged with Guilt, and Sense of Sin; and that lie under the Apprehensions of, and that are driven to God by, the Sense of the Judgment, that for Sin is due unto them.

In my handling of this Text, I shall have respect to these things.

1. To the Persons in the Text.

2. To the Condition of the Persons in the Text.

3. To the Conclusion that Christ makes upon them both.

First, For the Persons. They were, as you see, far one from another in their own Apprehension of themselves; one good, the other bad; but yet in the Judgment of the Law, both alike, both the same, both Sinners; for they both stood in need of Mercy. True, the first mentioned did not see it, as the other poor Sinner did; but that altereth not the Case: He that is in the Judgment of the Law a Sinner, is in the Judgment of the Law for Sin condemned, though in his own Judgment he be never so righteous.

Men must not be judged, or justified, according to what themselves do think, but according to the Verdict and Sentence that cometh out of the Mouth of God about them. Now the Sentence of God is, All have sinned: There is none righteous, no, not one, Rom. 3. 'Tis no matter then what the Pharisee did think of himself, God by his Word hath proclaimed him a Sinner. A Sinner, by reason of Original Sin: A Sinner by reason of actual Transgression. Personally therefore, with reference to the true Nature of their State, they both were Sinners, and both by the Law under Condemnation. True, the Publican's Leprosy was outward; but the Pharisee's Leprosy was inward: His Heart, his Soul, his Spirit, was as foul, and had as much the Plague of Sin, as had the other in his Life or Conversation.

Secondly, As to their Conditions, (I do not mean by Condition, so much a Habit of Mind, as the State that they had each of them put themselves into by that Mind) The one, says the Text, was a Pharisee, the other a Publican. A Pharisee: That is, one that hath chosen to himself such a Course of Life. A Publican: That is, one that hath chosen to himself such a Course of Life. These Terms therefore shew the divers Courses of Life that they had put themselves into. The Pharisee as he thought, had put himself into a Condition for Heaven and Glory; but the Publican was for this World, and his Lusts: Wherefore when the Pharisee stands in the Temple, he boasteth of himself and good Condition; but condemneth the Publican, and bitterly inveigheth against him. But, as I said, their personal State by the Law, was not at all changed. The Pharisee made himself never the better; the Publican also abode in his place.

Indeed the Publican is here found to recant, and repent of his Condition; and of the Condition that he had put himself into; and the Pharisee to boast of his: But the Publican's Repentance was not of himself, but of God; who can also, yea, and sometimes 'tis evident (Acts 9.) he doth make Pharisees also repent of that Condition that they have chosen to be in themselves. (Phil. 3. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.) The Pharisee therefore in commending of himself, makes himself never the better. The Publican also, in condemning of himself, makes himself never the worse. Nay, contrarywise, the Pharisee by commending of himself makes himself much the worse (v. 14.) And the Publican, by condemning of himself, makes himself much the better. I tell you, says Christ, THIS Man went down to his House justified rather than the other; For every one that exalteth himself shall be abased: And he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

But, I say, as to Mens commending of themselves, yea, though others should commend them also, that availeth, to Godward, nothing at all. For not he that commendeth himself, is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth. So then, Men in measuring of themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise, 1 Cor. 10. 12.

Now this was the Way of the Pharisee, I am not, saith he, as other Men; I am no Extortioner, nor unjust, no Adulterer, nor yet as this Publican.

[Two Men went into the Temple to pray.] And they two, as I said, as opposite one to the other, as any two Men that ever went thither to pray. One of them was over righteous, and the other wicked over much. Some would have thought, had they not by the Word of Christ been otherwise described, that they had been both of the same Religion; for they both went up into the Temple to pray; yea, both to pray, and that at the same time, as if they did it by Appointment, by Agreement, but there was no such thing. The one was a Pharisee, the other a Publican: for so saith the after Words: And therefore Persons as opposite as Light and Darkness, as Fire and Water; I mean as to their Apprehensions one of another. The Pharisee could not abide the Publican, nor could the Publican brook the Pharisee, and yet both went up into the Temple to pray. 'Tis strange to see, and yet it is seen, that Men cross in their Minds, cross in their Principles, cross in their Apprehensions; yea, and cross in their Prayers too, should yet meet together in the Temple to pray.

[Two Men] Men not of the middle sort, and and them too, pickt out of the best and worst that was: Two Men, a Pharisee and a Publican.

To be a Pharisee was in those Days counted honourable for Religion, and for Holiness of Life. A Pharisee was a Man of Esteem and Repute among the Jews, though it is a Term of Reproach with us. Else Paul would not at such a Time as he did it, have said, Men and Brethren, I am a Pharisee, the Son of a Pharisee (Acts 23. 6. Phil. 3. 5.) For now he stood upon his Purgation and Justification, especially it appears so by the place first named. And far be it from any to think, that Paul would make use of a colour of Wickedness, to save thereby himself from the fury of the People.

A Publican was in those Days counted one of the vilest of Men, as is manifest; because, when they are in the Word, by way of discrimination, made mention of, they are ranked with the most vile and base. Therefore they are joined with Sinners. He eateth with Publicans and Sinners; and with Harlots. Publicans and Harlots enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. Yea, when our Lord Christ would have the rebellious Professor stigmatized to purpose, he saith; Let him be to thee as an Heathen-man, and a Publican.

We therefore can make no Judgment of Men upon the outward Appearance of them. Who would have thought, but that the Pharisee had been a good Man, for he was righteous; for he prayed. And who could have thought, that the other had been a good Man? For he was a Publican: A Man, by good Men, and bad Men, joined with the worst of Men, to wit, with Sinners, Harlots, Heathens.

The Pharisee was a Sectarian; the Publican was an Officer. The Pharisee even because he was a Sectarian, was had the more in Esteem; and the Publican because he was an Officer, was had the more in Reproach. To speak a little to both these.

1. The Pharisee was a Sectarian, one that deviated, that turned aside in his Worshipping from the Way of God, both in matter and manner of Worship; for such an One I count a Sectarian. That he turn'd aside from the Matter, which is the Rule of Worship, to wit, the written Word, 'tis evident; For Christ saith, That they rejected the Commandments of God, and made them of no effect, that they might keep their own Traditions. That they turned aside also as to their manner of Worship, and became Sectarians, there is with no less Authority asserted; For all their Works they do for to be seen of Men, (Acts 26. 5. Mark 7. 9, to 14. Mat. 23. 5.)

Now this being none of the Order or Ordinance of Christ, and yet being chose by, and stuck to of these sort of Men, and also made a singular and necessary part of Worship, became a Sect, or Bottom for these hypocritical factious Men to adhere unto, and to make of others Disciples to themselves. And that they might be admired, and rendred venerable by the simple People to their Fellows, they loved to go in long Robes; they loved to pray in Markets, and in the Corners of the Streets; they shewed great Zeal for the small Things of the Law, but had only great Words for Things that were substantial. They made broad their Phylacteries, and enlarged the Borders of their Garments, Mat. 23. &c.

When I say the Pharisee was a Sectarian, I do not mean that every Sectarian is a Pharisee. There was the Sect of the Herodians, and of the Alexandrians, of the Sadducees, with many others; but to be a Pharisee, was to be of the straightest Sex: After the most straightest Sect of our Religion I lived a Pharisee; that therefore of all the Sects, was the most straight and strict. Therefore, saith he, in another place, I was taught according to the perfect manner of the Law of the Fathers. And again, Touching the Law a Pharisee. (Acts 22. 3. Ch. 26. 4, 5, 6. Phillip. 3. 5.) The Pharisees therefore did carry the Bell, and wear the Garland for Religion; for he out-did, he went beyond all other Sectarians in his Day. He was strictest, he was the most zealous; therefore Christ in his making of this Parable, waveth all other Sects then in Being, and pitched upon the Pharisee as the Man most meet, by whose Rejection he might shew forth, and demonstrate the Riches of his Mercy in its Extention to Sinners: Two Men went up into the Temple to pray, the one a Pharisee: such a brave Man as you have heard.

[The Publican also went up thither to pray.] The Publican, I told you before, was an Officer: An Officer that served the Romans and themselves too: for the Romans at that time were Possessors of the Land of Jury, (The Lot of Israel's Inheritance) and the Emperor Tiberius Caesar placed over that Land four Governors, to wit, Pilate, Herod, Phillip, and Lysanias; all these were Gentiles, Heathens, Infidels; and the Publicans were a sort of inferiour Men, to whom was let out to farm, and so Men that were employed by these to gather up the Taxes and Customs, that the Heathens had laid upon the Jews to be paid to the Emperor, Luke 2. 1. ch. 3. 1, 2. v. 12, 13.

But they were a Generation of Men that were very injurious in the Execution of their Office. They would exact and demand more than was due of the People; yea, and if their Demands were denied, they would falsely accuse those that so denied them to the Governor, and by false Accusation obtain the Money of the People, and so wickedly enrich themselves, (Luke 3. 13. ch. 19. 2, 8.) This was therefore grievous to the Jews, who always counted counted themselves a free People, and could never abide to be in Bondage to any. And this was something of the reason, that they were so generally by all the Jews counted so vile and base, and reckoned among the worst of Men, even as our Informers and Bumb-bailiffs are with us at this Day.

But that which heightned the Spirit of the People against them, and that made them so odious and filthy in their Eyes, was for that (at least so I think) these Publicans were not, as the other Officers, Aliens, Heathens, and Gentiles, but Men of their own Nation, Jews, and so the Brethren of those that they so abused. Had they been Gentiles, it had not been wondred at.

The Publican then was a Jew, a kind of a renegade Jew, that through the Love that he had to unjust Gains, fell off in his Affections from his Brethren, adhered to the Romans, and became a kind of Servant to them against their Brethren, farming the heathenish Taxations at the Hand of Strangers, and exacting of them upon their Brethren with much Cruelty, Falshood, and Extortion. And hence, as I said, it was, that to be a Publican, was to be so odious a Thing, so vile a Sinner, and so grievous a Man in the Eyes of the Jews. Why this was the Publican, he was a Jew, and so should have abode with them, and have been content to share with his Brethren in their Calamities; but contrary to Nature, to Law, to Religion, Reason, and Honesty, he fell in with the Heathen, and took the Advantage of their Tyranny to pole, to rob and impoverish his Brethren.

But for Proof that the Publican was a Jew.

1. They are, even then, when compared with, yet distinguished from the Heathen; Let him be to thee as an heathen Man and a Publican, Mat. 18. which two Terms, I think, must not here be applied to one and the self same Man, as if the Heathen was a Publican, or the Publican a Heathen, but to Men of two distinct Nations; as that Publican and Harlot, is to be understood of Sinners of both Sexes. The Publican is not an Harlot, for he is a Man, &c. and such a Man as has been described before. So by Publicans and Sinners, is meant by Publicans, and such Sinners as the Gentiles were; or such as, by the Text, the Publican is distinguished from: Where the Pharisee saith he was not an Extortioner, Unjust, Adulterer, or even as this Publican. Nor can he by [Heathen Man] intend the Person, and by the Term Publican, the Officer or place of the Heathen Man; but by Publican, is meant the renegade Jew, in such a Place, &c. as is yet further manifest by that which follows. For,

Secondly, Those Publicans, even every one of them that by Name are made mention of in the New Testament, have such Names put upon them; yea, and other Circumstances thereunto annexed, as doth demonstrate them to be Jews. I remember the Names of no more but three, to wit, Matthew, Levi, and Zaccheus, and they were all Jews.

1. Matthew was a Jew, and the same Matthew was a Publican; yea, and also afterward an Apostle. He was a Jew, and wrote his Gospel in Hebrew: he was an Apostle, and is therefore found among the twelve. That he was a Publican too, is as evident by his own Words: For though Mark and Luke in their mentioning of his Name and Apostleship, do forbear to call him a Publican, (Mark 3. 18. Luke 6. 15.) Yet when this Matthew comes to speak of himself, he calls himself Matthew the Publican, (Mat. 10. 3.) for I count this the self same Matthew that Mark and Luke maketh mention of, because I find no other Matthew among the Apostles but he: Matthew the Publican, Matthew the Man so deep in Apostacy, Matthew the Man of that ill fame among his Brethren. Love in Mark and Luke, when they counted him among the Apostles, did cover with Silence this his Publican State; (and 'tis meet for Peter to call Paul his beloved Brother, when Paul himself shall call himself the chief of Sinners) but Faithfulness to the World, and a desire to be abased, that Christ thereby, and Grace by him, might be advanced, made Matthew in his Evangelical Writings call himself by the Name of Matthew the Publican. Nor has he lost thereby; for Christ again to exalt him, (as he hath also done by the Apostle Paul) hath set, by his special Providence, the Testimony that this Matthew hath given of his Birth, Life, Death, Doctrine, and Miracles, in the Front of all the New Testament.

2. The next Publican that I find by the Testament of Christ, made mention of by Name, is Levi, another of the Apostles of Jesus Christ. This Levi also, by the Holy Ghost in Holy Writ, is called by the Name of James. Not James the Brother of John, for Zebedee was his Father; but James the Son of Alpheus. Now I take this Levi also to be another than Matthew; first, because Matthew is not called the Son of Alpheus; and because Matthew and Levi, or James the Son of Alpheus, are distinctly counted where the Names of the Apostles are mention'd, Mat. 10. 3. for two distinct Persons: And that this Levi, or James the Apostle was a Publican, as was the Apostle Matthew, whom we mentioned before, is evident; for both Mark and Luke do count him such. First, Mark saith, Christ found him when he called him, as he also found Matthew, sitting at the Receipt of Custom; yea, Luke words it thus: He went forth and saw a Publican named Levi, sitting at the receipt of custom, and he said unto him follow me, Mark 2. 14. Luke 5. 27.

Now that this Levi, or James the Son of Alpheus, was a Jew, his Name doth well make manifest. Besides, had there been among the Apostles any more Gentiles save Simon the Canaanite; or if this Levi James had been here, I think the Holy Ghost would, to distinguish him, have included him in the same discriminating Character as he did the other, when he called him Simon the Canaanite, Mat. 10. 4.

Matthew therefore, and Levi or James, were both Publicans, and as I think, called both at the same time; were both Publican-Jews, and made by Grace the Apostles of Jesus Christ.

3. The next Publican that I find by Name, made mention of in the Testament of Christ, is one Zaccheus. And he was a Publican; yea, for ought I know the Master of them all. There was a Man, saith Luke, named Zaccheus, which was the chief among the Publicans, and he was rich, Luke 19. 2. This Man, Christ saith, was a Son of Abraham, that is, as other Jews was; for he spake that to stop the Mouths of their Pharisaical Cavillations. Besides, the Publican shewed himself to be such an one, when under a Supposition of wronging any Man, he has respect to the Jewish Law of restoring four fold, Exod. 22. 1. 2 Sam. 12. 6.

'Tis further manifest that he was a Jew, because Christ puts him among the lost; to wit, among the lost Sheep of the House of Israel, v. 10. and Mat. 15. 24. for Zaccheus was one that might properly be said to be lost, and that in the Jews Account: Lost I say, and that not only in the most common Sense, by reason of Transgression against the Law, but for that he was an Apostate Jew, not with reference to heathenish Religion, but as to heathenish, cruel, and barbarous Actions; and therefore he was, as the other, by his Brethren counted as bad as Heathens, Gentiles and Harlots. But Salvation is come to this House, saith Christ, and that notwithstanding his Publican Practice, forasmuch as he also is the Son of Abraham.

Thirdly, Again, Christ by the Parable of the lost Sheep, doth plainly intimate, that the PUBLICAN was a Jew. Then drew near all the Publicans and Sinners for to hear him, and the Pharisees and Scribes murmured, saying, this Man receiveth Sinners, and eateth with them.

But by what Answer doth Christ repel their Objections? Why he saith, What Man of you having an hundred Sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the Wilderness, and go after that which is lost until he find it? Doth he not here, by the lost Sheep, mean the poor Publican? Plenty of whom, while he preached this Sermon, were there, as Objects of the Pharisees Scorn; but of the pity and compassion of Jesus Christ: he did without doubt mean them. For, pray, what was the Flock, and who Christ's Sheep under the Law, but the House and People of Israel? Ezek. 43. 30, 31. So then, who could be the lost Sheep of the House of Israel, but such as was Matthew, James, Zaccheus, and their Companions in their, and such like Transgressions.

Fourthly, Besides, had not the Publicans been of the Jews, how easy had it been for the Pharisees to have objected, that an Impertinency was couched in that most excellent Parable of the lost Sheep? They might have said, We are offended, because thou receivest the Publicans, and thou for Vindication of thy Practice propoudest a Parable of lost Sheep; but they are the Sinners of the House of Israel, and the Publicans are Aliens and Gentiles. I say, How easily might they thus have objected? But they knew full well, that the Parable was pertinent, for that the Publicans were of the Jews, and not of the Aliens. Yea, had they not been Jews, it cannot, it must not be thought, that Christ (in sum) should call them so; and yet he did do so, when he called them lost Sheep.

Now that these Publicans were Jews, what follows, but that for this they were a great deal the more abominated by their Brethren. And (as I have also hinted before) it is no marvel, that they were; for a treacherous Brother is worse than an open Enemy (Psal. 55. 12, 13.) For, if to be debauched in an open and common Transgression is odious, how odious is it for a Brother to be so; for a Brother in Nature and Religion to be so? I say again, all this they did, as both John insinuates, and Zaccheus confesses.

The Pharisee therefore was not so good, but the Publican was as bad: Indeed the Publican was a notorious Wretch, one that had a way of transgressing by himself; one that could not be sufficiently condemned by the Jews, nor coupled with a viler than himself. 'Tis true, you find him here in the Temple at Prayer; not because he retained in his Apostacy Conscience of the true Religion, but God had awakened him, shewn him his Sin, and bestowed upon him the Grace of Repentance, by which he was not only fetch'd back to the Temple, and Prayer, but to his God, and to the Salvation of his Soul.

The Pharisee then was a Man of another Complexion, and stood as to his own Thoughts of himself; yea, and in the Thoughts of others also, upon the highest and better Ground by far. The Publican was a notorious Sinner; the Pharisee was a reputed righteous Man. The Publican was a Sinner out of the ordinary way of sinning; and the Pharisee was a Man for Righteousness in a singular way also. The Publican

Publican pursued his Villanies, and the Pharisee pursued his Righteousness; and yet they both met in the Temple to pray: Yea, the Pharisee stuck to, and boasted in the Law of God; but the Publican did forsake it, and hardened his Heart against his Way.

Thus divers were they in their Appearances; the Pharisee very good, the Publican very bad: But as to the Law of God, which looked upon them with reference to the State of their Spirits, and the Nature of their Actions, by that they were both found Sinners; the Publican an open outside one, and the Pharisee a filthy inside one. This is evident, because the best of them was rejected, and the worst of them was received to Mercy. Mercy standeth not at the Publican's badness, nor is it enamour'd with the Pharisee's goodness: It suffereth not the Law to take place on both, though it findeth them both in Sin, but graciously embraceth the most unworthy, and leaveth the best to shift for himself. And good reason that both should be dealt with after this manner; to wit, that the word of Grace should be justified upon the Soul of the penitent, and that the other should stand or fall to that, which he had chosen to be his Master.

There are three Things that follow upon this Discourse.

1. That the Righteousness of Man is not of any esteem with God, as to Justification. It is passed by as a thing of Naughtiness, a thing not worth the taking notice of. There was not so much as notice taken of the Pharisee's Person, or Prayer, because he came into the Temple mantled up in his own good things.

2. That the Man that has nothing to commend him to God, but his own good doings, shall never be in favour with him. This also is evident from the Text: The Pharisee had his own Righteousness, but had nothing else to commend him to God; and therefore could not by that obtain favour with God, but abode still a rejected one, and in a state of Condemnation.

3. Wherefore, though we are bound by the Law of Charity to judge of Men, according as in appearance they present themselves unto us: yet withal, to wit, though we do so judge, we must leave room for the Judgment of God. Mercy may receive him, that we have doomed to Hell, and Justice may take hold on him, whom we have judged to be bound up in the bundle of Life. And both these things are apparent by the Persons under Consideration.

We, like Joseph, are for setting of Manasseh before Ephraim; but God, like Jacob, puts his Hands across, and lays his right Hand upon the worst Man's head, and his left Hand upon the best (Gen. 48.) to the amazement and wonderment even of the best of Men.

Two Men went up into the Temple to pray, the one a Pharisee, the other a Publican, (the Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as other Men are, Extortioners, Unjust, Adulterers, or even as this Publican; I fast twice in the Week, I give Tythes of all that I possess.)

In these Words many things are worth the noting. As,

1. The Pharisee's definition of Righteousness; the which standeth in two Things:

1. In Negatives.

2. In Positives.

1. In Negatives; to wit, what a Man that is righteous must not be: I am no Extortioner, no unjust Man, no Adulterer, nor yet as this Publican.

2. In Positives; to wit; what a Man that is righteous must be: I fast twice a Week, I give Tythes of all that I possess, &c.

That Righteousness standeth in negative and positive Holiness is true; but that the Pharisee's definition is notwithstanding false, will be manifest by and by. But I will first treat of Righteousness in the general, because the Text leadeth me to it.

First then, A Man that is righteous, must have negative Holiness; that is, he must not live in actual Transgressions: He must not be an Extortioner, Unjust, an Adulterer, or, as the Publican was. And this the Apostle intends, when he saith, Fly Fornication, fly youthful Lusts, fly from Idolatry; and little Children keep your selves from Idols. (1 Cor. 6. 18. & 10. 14. 2 Tim. 2. 22. & 1 John 5. 21.) For it is a vain thing to talk of Righteousness, and that our selves are righteous, when every observer shall find us in actual Transgression. Yea, though a Man shall mix his want of negative Holiness with some good Actions, that will not make him a righteous Man. As suppose, a Man that is a Swearer, a Drunkard, an Adulterer, or the like, should notwithstanding this, be open-handed to the Poor, be a greater Executer of Justice in his place, be exact in his buying, selling, keeping his Promise with his Friend, or the like: These things, yea, many more such, cannot make him a righteous Man; for the beginning of Righteousness is yet wanting in him, which is this negative Holiness: For except a Man leave off to do Evil he cannot be a righteous Man. Negative Holiness is therefore of absolute necessity to make one in ones self a righteous Man. This therefore condemns them, that count it sufficient if a Man have some Actions that in themselves, and by vertue of the Command are good, to make him a righteous Man, though Negative Holiness is wanting. This is as saying to the Wicked, Thou art righteous, and a perverting of the right way of the Lord: Negative Holiness therefore must be in a Man before he can be accounted righteous.

Secondly, As Negative Holiness is required

quired to declare one a righteous Man; so also Positive Holiness must be joined therewith, or the Man is unrighteous still. For it is not what a Man is not, but what a Man does, that declares him a righteous Man. Suppose a Man be no Thief, no Liar, no unjust Man; or, as the Pharisee saith, no Extortioner, nor Adulterer, &c. this will not make a righteous Man: But there must be joined to these, holy and good Actions, before he can be declared a righteous Man. Wherefore, as the Apostle, when he pressed the Christians to Righteousness, did put them first upon Negative Holiness, so he joineth thereto an Exhortation to Positive Holiness; knowing, that where Positive Holiness is wanting, all the Negative Holiness in the whole World cannot declare a Man a righteous Man. When therefore he had said, But thou, O Man of God, flee these things, (Sins and Wickedness) he adds, and follow after Righteousness, Godliness, Faith, Love, Patience, Meekness, &c. (1 Tim. 6. 11.) Here Timothy is exhorted to Negative Holiness, when he is bid to flee Sin. Here also he is exhorted to Positive Holiness, when he is bid to follow after Righteousness, &c. for Righteousness can neither stand in Negative nor Positive Holiness, as severed one from another. That Man then and that Man only, is, as to Actions, a righteous Man, that hath left off to do evil, and hath learnt to do well, (Isa. 1. 16. 17.) that hath cast off the Works of Darkness, and put on the Armour of Light. Flee youthful Lusts, said Paul, and follow after Righteousness, Faith, Charity, Peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure Heart, (2 Tim. 2. 22.)

The Pharisee therefore, as to the general description of Righteousness, made his definition right; but as to his Person and Personal Righteousness, he made his definition wrong. I do not mean, he defined his own Righteousness wrong; but I mean, his definition of true Righteousness, which standeth in Negative and Positive Holiness, he made to stoop to justify his own Righteousness, and therein he played the Hypocrite in his Prayer: For although it is true Righteousness, that standeth in Negative and Positive Holiness; yet that is not true Righteousness, that standeth but in some pieces and ragged Remnants of Negative and Positive Righteousness. If then the Pharisee would in his definition of personal Righteousness, have proved his own Righteousness to be good, he must have proved, that both his Negative and Positive Holiness had been universal: to wit, that he had left off to act in any Wickedness, and that he had given up himself to the duty enjoined in every Commandment. For so the righteous Man is described, (Job 1. 8. ch. 2. 3.) As it is said of Zacharias and Elizabeth his Wife, They were both righteous before God, walk- ing in all the Commandments and Ordinances of the Lord blameless, Luke 1. 5, 6. Here the Perfection, that is, the Universality of their Negative Holiness is implied, and the Universality of their Positive Holiness is expressed: They walked in all the Commandments of the Lord; but that they could not do, if they had lived in any unrighteous thing or way. They walked in all blamelessly, that is, sincerely with upright Hearts. The Pharisee's Righteousness therefore, even by his own implied definition of Righteousness, was not good, as is manifest these two Ways.

1. His Negative Holiness was not universal.

2. His Positive Holiness was rather Criminal than Moral.

1. His Negative Holiness was not universal. He saith indeed, he was not an Extortioner, nor Unjust, no Adulterer, nor yet as this Publican: But none of these Expressions apart, nor all, if put together, do prove him to be perfect as to Negative Holiness; that is, they do not prove him, should it be granted, that he was as holy with this kind of Holiness, as himself of himself had testified. For,

1. What! Though he was no Extortioner, he might yet be a covetous Man, Luke 16. 14.

2. What though, as to dealing, he was not unjust to others, yet he wanted Honesty to do Justice to his own Soul, Luke 16. 15.

3. What, though he was free from the Act of Adultery, he might yet be made guilty by an adulterous Eye, against which, the Pharisee did not watch, (Matth. 2. 28.) of which the Pharisee did not take cognizance.

4. What, though he was not like the Publican, yet he was like, yea, was a downright Hypocrite; he wanted in those things wherein he boasted himself Sincerity; but without Sincerity no Action can be good, or accounted of God as righteous. The Pharisee therefore, notwithstanding his Boasts, was deficient in his Righteousness, though he would fain have shrouded it under the right definition thereof.

Nor doth his Positive Holiness help him at all, forasmuch as 'tis grounded mostly, if not altogether in Ceremonial Holiness: Nay, I will recollect my self, it was grounded partly in Ceremonial, and partly in Superstitious Holiness, if there be such a thing as superstitious Holiness in the World, this paying of Tithes was Ceremonial, such as came in and went out with the typical Priesthood. But what is that to positive Holiness, when it was but a small pittance by the by. Had the Pharisee argued plainly and honestly; I mean, had he so dealt with that Law, by which now he sought to be justified, he should have brought forth positive Righteousness in in Morals, and should have said and proved it too, that, as he was no wicked Man with Reference to the Act of Wickedness, he was indeed a righteous Man in acts of Moral Vertues. He should, I say, have proved himself a true Lover of God, no Superstitious one, but a sincere Worshipper of him; for this is contained in the first Table, (Exod. 20.) and is so in sum expounded by the Lord Christ himself. (Mar. 12. 30.) He should also in the next place have proved himself truly kind, compassionate, liberal, and full of Love and Charity to his Neighbour; for that is the sum of the second Table, as our Lord doth expound it, saying, Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thy self, Mark 12. 31.

True, he says, he did them no hurt; but did he do them good? To do no hurt, is one thing; and to do good, is another; and 'tis possible for a Man to do neither hurt nor good to his Neighbour. What then, is he a righteous Man because he hath done him no hurt? No verily; unless, to his Power, he hath also done him good.

It is therefore a very fallacious and deceitful arguing of the Pharisee, thus to speak before God in his Prayers: I am righteous, because I have not hurt my Neighbour, and because I have acted in Ceremonial Duties. Nor will that help him at all to say, he gave TITHES of all that he possessed. It had been more modest to say, that he had PAYED them; for they, being commanded, were a due Debt; nor could they go before God for a free Gift, because by the Commandment they were made a Payment; but proud Men and Hypocrites, love so to word it both with God and Man, as at least to imply, that they are more forward to do, than God's Command is to require them to do.

The second part of his positive Holiness was superstitious; for God had appointed no such set Fasts, neither more nor less, but just twice a Week: I fast twice a Week. Ay, but who did command thee to do so? Other than by thy being put upon it by a superstitious and erroneous Conscience, doth not, nor canst thou make to appear. This part therefore of this positive Righteousness, was positive Superstition, an abuse of God's Law, and a Gratification of thy own erroneous Conscience. Hitherto therefore, thou art defective in thy so seemingly brave and glorious Righteousness.

Yet this let me say in commendation of the Pharisee: In my Conscience he was better than many of our English Christians; for many of them are so far off from being at all Partakers of positive Righteousness, that all their Ministers, Bibles and good Books, good Sermons, nor yet God's Judgments, can persuade them to become so much as Negatively Holy, that is, to leave off evil.

The second thing that I take notice of in this Prayer of the Pharisee, is, his manner of Delivery, as he stood praying in the Temple. God, I thank thee, said he, that I am not as other Men are. He seemed to be at this time, in more than an ordinary frame, while now he stood in the Presence of the Divine Majesty: For a Prayer made up of Praise, is a Prayer made up of the highest Order, and is most like the way of them that are now in a state beyond Prayer. Praise is the Work of Heaven; but we see here, that an Hypocrite may get into that vein, even while an Hypocrite, and while on Earth below. Nor do I think that this Prayer of his was a premeditated stilted Form, but a Prayer Ex tempore, made on a sudden according to what he felt, thought, or understood of himself.
Vol. II.

Here therefore, we may see, that even Prayer, as well as other Acts of Religious Worship, may be performed in great Hypocrisy; although, I think, that to perform Prayer in Hypocrisy, is one of the most daring Sins that are committed by the Sons of Men. For by Prayer, above all Duties, is our most direct, and immediate personal Approach into the Presence of God: and as there is an uttering of things before him, especially a giving of him thanks for things received, or a begging, that such and such things might be bestowed upon me. But now to do these things in Hypocrisy, (and 'tis easy to do them so, when we go up into the Temple to pray) must needs be intolerable Wickedness, and it argueth infinite Patience in God, that he should let such as do so, arise alive from their Knees, or that he should suffer them to go away from the place where they stand, without some Token or Mark of his Wrath upon them.

I also observe, That this Ex tempore Prayer of the Pharisee, was performed by himself, or in the Strength of his own Natural Parts; for so the Text implieth, The Pharisee, saith the Text, stood and prayed thus with himself, or by himself, and may signify, either that he spoke softly, or that he made this Prayer by reason of his Natural Parts. I will pray with the Spirit, said Paul, 1 Cor. 14. 15. The Pharisee prayed with himself, said Christ. It is at this Day wonderful common, for Men to pray Ex tempore also: To pray by a Book, by a premeditated set Form, is now out of fashion. He is counted no body now, that cannot at any time, at a Minutes Warning, make a Prayer of half an Hour long. I am not against Ex tempore Prayer, for I believe it to be the best kind of praying; but yet I am jealous, that there are a great many such Prayers made, especially in Pulpits and Publick Meetings, without the breathing of the Holy Ghost in them: For if a Pharisee of old could do so, Why may not a Pharisee do the same? Now Wit,
8 K and

and Reason, and Notion is not screwed up to a very great height; nor do Men want Words, or Fancies, or Pride, to make them do this thing. Great is the Formality of Religion this Day, and little the Power thereof. Now where there is a great Form and little Power (and such there was also among the Jews, in the time of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ) there Men are most strangely under the Temptation to be Hypocrites; for nothing doth so properly and directly oppose Hypocrisy, as the Power and Glory of the things we profess. And so on the contrary, nothing is a greater Temptation to Hypocrisy, than a Form of Knowledge of things without the Savour thereof. Nor can much of the Power and Savour of the things of the Gospel be seen at this day upon Professors, (I speak not now of all) if their Notions and Conversations be compared together. How proud, how covetous, how like the World in Garb and Guise, in Words and Actions, are most of the great Professors of this our Day! But when they come to Divine Worship, especially to pray, by their Words and Carriage there, one would almost judge them to be Angels in Heaven. But such things must be done in Hypocrisy, as also the Pharisee's was.

The Pharisee stood and prayed [thus with himself.]

And, in that it is said, he prayed with himself; it may signify, that he went in his Prayer no further than his Sense and Reason, Feeling and carnal Apprehensions went. True, Christian Prayer, oft-times leaves Sense and Reason, Feeling, and carnal Apprehensions behind it, and it goeth forth with Faith, Hope, and Desires to know what at present we are ignorant of, and that unto which our Sense, Feeling, Reason, &c. are Strangers. The Apostle indeed doth say, I will pray with the Understanding, 1 Cor. 14. 15. but then it must be taken for an Understanding spiritually enlightened. I say, it must be so understood, because the natural Understanding, as such, receiveth not the things of God, therefore cannot pray for them; for they to such are foolish things, 1 Cor. 2. 24.

Now a spiritually enlightened Understanding may be officious in Prayer these ways.

1. As it has received Conviction of the Truth of the Being of the Spirit of God; For to receive Conviction of the Truth and Being of such Things, comes from the Spirit of God, not from the Law, Sense, or Reason (1 Cor. 2. 10, 11, 12.) Now the Understanding, having, by the Holy Ghost, received Conviction of the Truth of Things, draweth out the Heart to cry in Prayer to God for them. Therefore he saith, he would pray with the Understanding.

2. Spiritually enlightened Understanding, hath also received by the Holy Ghost, Conviction of the Excellency and Glory of the Things that are of the Spirit of God, and so enflameth the Heart with more fervent Desires in this Duty of Prayer; for there is a supernatural Excellency in the Things that are of the Spirit; For if the Ministration of Death (to which the Pharisee adhered) written and engraven in Stones, was glorious, so that the Children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the Face of Moses, for the Glory of his Countenance, which Glory was to be done away. How shall not the Ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious. For if the Ministration of Condemnation be Glory, much more doth the Ministration of Righteousness exceed in Glory: For even that which was made glorious, hath no Glory in this respect, by reason of the Glory that excelleth, 2 Cor. 3. 7, 8, 9, 10. and the Spirit of God sheweth, at least, some Things of that Excellent Glory of them to the Understanding that it enlighteneth, (Eph. 1. 17, 18, 19.)

3. The spiritually-enlightened Understanding hath also thereby received Knowledge, that these Excellent supernatural things of the Spirit, are given by Covenant in Christ to those that love God, and are beloved of him. Now we have received, says Paul, not the Spirit of the World, (that the Pharisee had) but the Spirit which is of God, that we may know the Things that are freely given to us of God, 1 Cor. 2. 12. And this Knowledge, that the Things of the Spirit of God are freely given to us of God, puts yet a greater Edge, more Vigour, and yet further Confidence into the Heart to ask for what is mine by Gift, by a free Gift of God in his Son. But all these Things the poor Pharisee was an utter Stranger to; he knew not the Spirit, nor the Things of the Spirit, and therefore must neglect Faith, Judgment, and the Love of God, Matt. 23. 23. Luke 11. 42. and follow himself, only as to his Sense, Feeling, Reason, and carnal Imagination in Prayer.

He stood and prayed thus [with himself.] He prayed thus, talking to himself; for so also it may (I think) be understood. 'Tis said of the unjust Judge, he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard Man, &c. Luke 18. 4. That is, he said it to himself. So the Pharisee is said to pray with himself: God and the Pharisee were not together, there was only the Pharisee and himself. Paul knew not what to pray for without the Holy Ghost joined himself with him, and helped him with Groans unutterable; but the Pharisee had no need of that, 'Twas enough that HE and himself were together at this Work; for he thought without doubting that HE and himself together could do. How many times have I heard ancient Men, and ancient Women, at it, with themselves, when all alone in some private Room, or in some solitary Path; and in their Chat, they have been sometimes reasoning, sometimes chiding, sometimes sometimes pleading, sometimes praying, and sometimes singing; but yet all has been done by themselves when all alone: But yet so done, as one that has not seen them, must needs have concluded, that they were talking, singing, and praying with Company, when all that they had said, they did it with themselves, and had neither Auditor nor Regarder.

So the Pharisee was at it with himself, he and himself performed, at this time, the Duty of Prayer. Now I observe, that usually when Men do speak to or with themselves, they greatly strive to please themselves: Therefore it is said, there is a Man, That flattereth himself in his own Eyes, until his Iniquity be found to be hateful, (Psal. 36. 2.) He flattereth himself in his own Way according as his Sense and carnal Reason dictates to him; and he might do it as well in Prayer as in any other way. Some Men will so hear Sermons, and apply them that they may please themselves: And some Men will pray, but will refuse such Words and Thoughts in Prayer as will not please themselves.

Oh, how many Men speak all that they speak in Prayer, rather to themselves, or to their Auditor, than to God that dwelleth in Heaven! And this I take to be the manner, I mean something of the manner of the Pharisee's praying. Indeed, he made mention of God, as also others do; but he prayed with himself to himself, in his own Spirit, and to his own pleasing, as the matter of his Prayer doth manifest. For was it not pleasant to this Hypocrite, think you, to speak thus well of himself at this time? doubtless it was. Also Children and Fools are of the same Temper with Hypocrites, as to this; they also love without ground, as the Pharisee, to flatter themselves in their own Eyes: But not he that commendeth himself is approved.

God, I thank thee, I am not as other Men are, Extortioners, Unjust, Adulterers, or even as this Publican, &c.

Thus he begins his Prayer; and it is, as was hinted before, a Prayer of the highest Strain. For to make a Prayer all of Thanksgiving, and to urge in that Prayer the Cause of that Thanksgiving, is the highest manner of praying, and seems to be done in the strongest Faith, &c. in the greatest Sense of Things. And such was the Pharisee's Prayer, only he wanted substantial Ground for his Thanksgiving; to wit, he wanted proof of that he said, he was not as other Men were, except he had meant, as he did not, that he was even of the worst sort of Men: For even the best of Men by Nature, and the worst, are all alike. What are we better than they? said Paul, no, in no wise, (Rom. 3. 9.) So then, he failed in the Ground of his Thankfulness, and therefore his Thankfulness was grounded on Untruth, and so became feigned, and self-flattering, and could not be acceptable with the God of Heaven.

Besides, in this high Prayer of the Pharisee, he father'd that upon God which he could by no means own; to wit, that he being so good as he thought himself to be, was, through distinguishing Love and Favour of God, God, I thank thee, I am not as other Men are. I thank thee, that thou hast made me better than others. I thank thee that my Condition is so good, and that I am so far advanced above my Neighbour.

There are several things flow from this Prayer of the Pharisee, that are worth our Observation. As,

First, That the Pharisees and Hypocrites, do not love to count themselves Sinners, when they stand before God. They chuse rather to commend themselves before him for vertuous and holy Persons, sometimes saying, and oftner thinking that they are more righteous than others. Yea, it seems by the Word, to be natural, hereditary, and so common for Hypocrites to trust to themselves that they are righteous, and then to condemn others; this is the Foundation upon which this very Parable is built: He spake this Parable, saith Luke, unto certain, that trusted in themselves as being righteous; or that they were so, and despised others, ver. 9.

I say, Hypocrites love not to think of their Sins, when they stand in the Presence of God; but rather to muster up, and to present him with their several good Deeds, and to venture a standing or falling by them.

Secondly, This Carriage of the Pharisee before God informs us, that Moral Vertues, and the Ground of them, which is the Law, if trusted to, blinds the Mind of Man, that he cannot for them perceive the Way to Happiness. While Moses is read, (and his Law and the Righteousness thereof trusted to) the Vail is upon their Heart. And even unto this Day, said Paul, the same Vail remaineth untaken away in the reading of the Old Testament, which Vail is done away in Christ. But even unto this Day, when Moses is read, the Vail is over their Heart, 2 Cor. 3. 14. 15. And this is the reason so many moral Men, that are adorned with civil and moral Righteousness, are yet so ignorant of themselves, and the way of Life by Christ.

The Law of Works, and the Righteousness of the Flesh, which is the Righteousness of the Law, blinds their Minds, shuts up their Eyes, and causeth them to miss of the Righteousness that they are so hotly in the pursuit of. Their Minds were blinded, saith the Text; Whose Minds? Why those that adhered to, that stood by, and that sought Righteousness of the Law. Now,

The Pharisee was such an one, he rested in the Law, he made his Boasts of God, and and trusted to himself that he was righteous; all this proceeded of that Blindness and Ignorance that the Law had possessed his Mind withal; for it is not granted to the Law to be the Ministration of Life and Light, but to be the Ministration of Death, when it speaks; and of Darknes, when trusted unto, that the Son of God might have the Preheminence in all things: Therefore 'tis said, when the Heart shall turn to him, the Vail shall be taken away, 2 Cor. 3. 16.

Thirdly, We may see by this Prayer, the Strength of vain Confidence; it will embolden a Man to stand in a Lye before God; it will embolden a Man to trust to himself; and to what he hath done; yea, to plead his own Goodness instead of God's Mercy before him. For the Pharisee was not only a Man that justified himself before Men, but that justified himself before God: And what was the cause of his so justifying of himself before God; but that vain Confidence that he had in himself and his Works, which were both a Cheat and a Lye to himself. But I say, the Boldness of the Man was wonderful, for he stood to the Lye that was in his Right Hand, and pleaded the Goodness of it before him. But, besides these Things, there are four Things more that are couched in this Prayer of the Pharisee.

First, By this Prayer the Pharisee doth appropriate to himself Conversion, he challengeth it to himself and to his Fellows. I am not, saith he, as other Men; that is, in Unconversion, in a State of Sin, Wrath, and Death: And this must be his meaning; for the Religion of the Pharisee was not grounded upon any particular, natural Privilege: I mean not singly, not only upon that, but upon a falling in with those Principles, Notions, Opinions, Decrees, Traditions, and Doctrines, that they taught distinct from the true and holy Doctrines of the Prophets. And they made to themselves Disciples by such Doctrine, Men, that they could captivate by those Principles, Laws, Doctrines, and Traditions: And therefore such are said to be of the Sect of the Pharisees; that is, the Scholars, and Disciples of them, converted to them and to their Doctrine. Oh! it is easy for Souls to appropriate Conversion to themselves, that know not what Conversion is. It is easy, I say, for Men to lay Conversion to God, on a legal, or ceremonial, or delusive Bottom, on such a Bottom that will sink under the Burden that is laid upon it; on such a Bottom that will not stand when it is brought under the Touchstone of God, nor against the Rain, Wind, and Floods that are ordained to put it to the Trial, whether it is true or false. The Pharisee here stands upon a supposed Conversion to God; I am not as other Men; but both he, and his Conversion are rejected by the sequel of the Parable: That which is highly esteemed among Men (Luke 16. 15.) is abomination in the Sight of God. That is, that Conversion, that Men, as Men flatter themselves, that they have is such. But the Pharisee will be a converted Man, he will have more to shew for Heaven than his Neighbour, I am not as other Men are; to wit, in a State of Sin and Condemnation, but in a State of Conversion and Salvation. But see how grievously this Sect, this Religion beguiled Men. It made them two-fold worse the Children of Hell then they were before: And then their Teachers were, Mat. 23. 15. that is, their Doctrine begat such Blindness, such vain Confidence, and groundless Boldness in their Disciples, as to involve them in that conceit of Conversion that was false, and so if trusted to damnable.

Secondly, By these Words, we find the Pharisee, not only appropriating Conversion to himself, but rejoicing in that Conversion: God, I thank thee, saith he, that I am not as other Men; which saying of his, gives us to see that he glorified in his Conversion; he made no doubt at all of his State, but lived in the Joy of the Safety that he supposed his Soul by his Conversion to be in. Oh! thanks to God, says he, I am not in the State of Sin, Death, and Damnation, as the unjust, and this Publican is. But a strong Delusion! to trust to the Spider's Web, and to think, that a few of the most fine of the Works of the Flesh, would be sufficient to bear up the Soul in, at, and under the Judgment of God. There is a Generation that are pure in their own Eyes, and yet are not washed from their Filthiness. This Text can be so fitly applied to none, as the Pharisee, and to those that tread in the Pharisee's Steps, and that are swallowed up with his Conceits, and with the Glory of his own Righteousness.

So again, There is a way (a way to Heaven) which seemeth right to a Man, but the end thereof are the Ways of Death, Prov. 30. 12. ch. 14. 12. This also is fulfilled in these kind of Men; at the end of their Way is Death and Hell, notwithstanding their Confidence in the Goodness of their State.

Again, There is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing, Prov. 13. 7. What can be more plain from all these Texts, than that some Men, that are out of the way think themselves in it; and that some Men think themselves clean that are yet in their Filthiness, and that think themselves rich for the next World, and yet are poor, and miserable, and wretched, and blind, and naked. Thus the poor, blind, naked, hypocritical Pharisee thought of himself, when God threatned to abase him: Yea, he thought himself thus, and joyed therein, when indeed he was going down to the Chambers of Death.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, By these Words, the Pharisee seems to put the Goodness of his Condition upon the Goodness of God. I am not as other Men are, and I thank God for it. God, saith he, I thank thee, that I am not as other Men are. He thanked God, when God had done nothing for him. He thanked God, when the Way that he was in was not of God's prescribing, but of his own inventing. So the Prosecutor thanks God that he was put into that way of Roguery that the Devil had put him into, when he fell to rending and tearing of the Church of God; Their Possessors slay them, saith the Prophet, and hold themselves not guilty: and they that sell them, say, blessed be the Lord, for I am rich, Zech. 11. 5. I remember that Luther used to say, In the Name of God begins all Mischief. All must be fathered upon God; the Pharisee's Conversion must be father'd upon God; the right or rather the Villany of the outrageous Persecution against God's People, must be father'd upon God. God, I thank thee, and blessed be God must be the Burthen of the Heretick's Song. So again, the Freewiller, he will ascribe all to God; the Quaker, the Ranter, the Socinian, &c. will ascribe all to God. God, I thank thee, is in every Man's Mouth, and must be intailed to every Error, Delusion, and damnable Doctrine that is in the World: But the Name of God, and their Doctrine, Worship, and Way, hangeth together, and the Pharisee's Doctrine; that is to say, nothing at all; for God hath not proposed their Principles, nor doth he own them, nor hath he commanded them, nor doth he convey by them the least Grace or Mercy to them; but rather rejecteth them, and holdeth them for his Enemies, and for the Destroyers of the World.

Fourthly, We come in the next place to the Ground of all this; and that is, to what the Pharisee had attained. To wit, that he was no Extortioner, no unjust Man, no Adulterer, nor even as this Publican, and for that he fasted twice a Week, and paid Tythes of all that he possessed. So that you see he pretended to a double Foundation for his Salvation, a Moral and a Ceremonial one; but both very lean, weak, and feeble: For the first of his Foundation, what is it more, if all be true that he saith, but a being removed a few Inches from the vilest Men in their vilest Actions, a very slender matter to build my Confidence for Heaven upon.

And for the second part of his Ground for Life, What is it but a Couple of Ceremonies, if so good? The first is questioned as a Thing not founded in God's Law; and the second is such, as is of the remotest sort of Ceremonies, that reach and preach the Lord Jesus. But suppose them to be the best, and his Conformity to them the thoroughest, they never were ordained to get to Heaven by, and so are become but a sandy Foundation. But any thing will serve some Men for a Foundation and Support for their Souls, and to build their Hopes of Heaven upon. I am not a Drunkard, says one, nor a Liar, nor a Swearer, nor a Thief, and therefore, I thank God, I have Hopes of Heaven and Glory. I am not an Extortioner, nor an Adulterer, not Unjust, nor yet as this Publican; and therefore do hope I shall go to Heaven. Alas! poor Men! will your being furnished with these things, save you from the thundring Claps and vehement Batteries, that the Wrath of God will make upon Sin and Sinners in the Day that shall burn like an Oven? No, no, nothing at that Day can shroud a Man from the hot rebukes of that Vengeance, but the very Righteousness of God, which is not the Righteousness of the Law, however christened, named, or garnished with all the Righteousness of Man.

But, O thou blind Pharisee, since thou art so confident that thy State is good, and thy Righteousness is that will stand, when it shall be tried with Fire, (1 Cor. 3. 13.) let me now reason with thee of Righteousness. My Terror shall not make thee afraid; I am not God, but a Man as thou art, we both are formed out of the Clay.

First, Prithee when didst thou begin to be righteous? was it before or after thou hadst been a Sinner? Not afore, I dare say; but if after, then the Sins that thou pollutest thy self withal before, have made thee incapable of acting legal Righteousness: For Sin, where it is, pollutes, defiles, and makes vile the whole Man; therefore thou canst not by after-acts of Obedience make thy self just in the Sight of that God thou pretendest now to stand praying unto. Indeed, thou mayest cover thy Dirt, and paint thy Sepulchre; for that Acts of after-obedience will do, though Sin has gone before. But Pharisee, God can see through the white of this Wall, even to the Dirt that is within: God can also see through the Paint and Garnish of thy beauteous Sepulchre, to the dead Mens Bones that are within; nor can any of thy most holy Duties, nor all, when put together, blind the Eye of the all-seeing Majesty from beholding all the Uncleaness of thy Soul. (Mat. 23. 27.) Stand not therefore so stoutly to it, now thou art before God; Sin is with thee, and Judgment and Justice is before him. It becomes thee, therefore, rather to despise and abhor this Life, and to count all thy Doings but dross and dung, and to be content to be justified with another's Righteousness instead of thy own. This is the way to be secured. I say, blind Pharisee, this is the way to be secured from the Wrath which is to come.

There is nothing more certain than this, that as to Justification from the Curse of the Law, God has rejected Man's Righteousness, teousness, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof; and hath accepted in the room of that the Glorious Righteousness of his Son; because indeed, that, and that only, is universal, perfect, and equal with his Justice and Holiness. This is in a manner the Contents of the whole Bible, and therefore must needs be most certainly true. Now then, Mr. Pharisee, methinks, what if thou didst this, and that while thou art at thy Prayers; to wit, cast in thy Mind what doth God love most, and the Resolve will be at Hand. The best Righteousness, surely the best Righteousness; for that thy Reason will tell thee: This done, even while thou art at thy Devotion, ask thy self again, But who has the best Righteousness? And that Resolve will be at hand also; to wit, He that in Person is equal with God; and that is his Son Jesus Christ. He that is separate from Sinners, and made higher than the Heavens; and that is his Son Jesus Christ, He that did no Sin, nor had any Guile found in his Mouth; and there never was any such He in all the World, but the Son of God, Jesus Christ.

Now Pharisee, when thou hast done this, then as thou art at thy Devotion, ask again, But what is this best Righteousness, the Righteousness of Christ, to do? And the Answer will be ready. It is to be made by an Act of the Sovereign Grace of God over to the Sinner, that shall dare to trust thereto for Justification from the Curse of the Law. He is made unto us of God, Righteousness. He hath made him to be Sin for us, who knew no Sin, that we might be made the Righteousness of God in him. For Christ is the end of the Law for Righteousness to every one that believeth, 1 Cor. 1. 30. 2 Cor. 5. 21. Rom. 10. 4.

This done, and concluded on, then turn again Pharisee, and say thus with thy self; Is it most safe for me to trust in this Righteousness of God? This Righteousness of God-man, this Righteousness of Christ? Certainly it is. Since, by the Text, it is counted the best, and that which is best pleaseth God; since it is that which God hath appointed, that Sinners shall be justified withal. For in the Lord have we Righteousness if we believe: And, in the Lord we are justified, and do glory, Isa. 45. 24, 25.

Nay Pharisee, suppose thine own Righteousness should be as long, as broad, as high, as deep, as perfect, as good, even every way as good, as the Righteousness of Christ. Yet since God has chose by Christ, to reconcile us to himself, canst thou attempt to seek by thy own Righteousness, to reconcile thy self to God, and not attempt (at least) to confront this Righteousness of Christ before God: Yea, to challenge by it, Acceptance of thy Person contrary to God's Design.

Suppose, that when the King has chosen one to be Judge in the Land, and has determined that he shall be Judge in all Cases, and that by his Verdict every Man's Judgment shall stand. I say, suppose, after this another should arise, and of his own Head resolve to do his own Business himself. Now, though he should be every whit as able, yea, and suppose he should do it as justly and righteously too, yet his making of himself a Judge, would be an Affront to the King, and an Act of Rebellion, and so a Transgression worthy of Punishment.

Why Pharisee, God hath appointed, that by the Righteousness of his Son, and by that Righteousness only, Men shall be justified in his Sight from the Curse of the Law. Wherefore, take heed, and at thy Peril, whatever thy Righteousness is, confront not the Righteousness of Christ therewith. I say, bring it not in, let it not plead for thee at the Bar of God, nor do thou plead for that in his Court of Justice; for thou canst not do this and be innocent. If he trusts to his Righteousness, he hath sinned, says Ezekiel. Mark the Text, When I shall say to the Righteous, he shall surely live; if he trusts to his own Righteousness, and commits Iniquity, all his Righteousness shall not be remembered: but for the Iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it, Ezek. 33. 13.

Observe a few things from this Text, and they are these that follow.

First, Here is a righteous Man; a Man, with whom [we do not hear] that the God of Heaven finds fault.

Secondly, Here is a Promise made to this Man, that he shall surely live; but on THIS Condition, that he trusts not to his own Righteousness. Whence 'tis manifest, that the Promise of Life to this righteous Man, is not for the sake of his Righteousness, but for the sake of something else, to wit, the Righteousness of Christ.

1. Not for the sake of his own Righteousness. This is evident, because we are admitted, yea, commanded, to trust in the Righteousness that saveth us. The Righteousness of God is unto us all, and upon all that believe; that is, trust IN it, and trust TO it for Justification. Now therefore, if thy Righteousness, when most perfect, could save thee, thou mightest, yea oughtest most boldly to trust therein. But since thou art forbidden to trust to it, 'tis evident it cannot save, nor is it for the sake of that, that the righteous Man is saved, Rom. 3. 21, 22.

2. But for the sake of something else; to wit, for the sake of the Righteousness of Christ, whom God hath set forth to be a Propitiation through Faith in his Blood, to declare his Righteousness for the Remission of Sins, that are past through the Forbearance of God. To declare (I say) at this time his Righteousness, that he might might be just, and the Justifier of him that believeth in Jesus, Rom. 3. 24, 25. See Phil. 3. 6, 7, 8.

If he trusts to his own Righteousness, and commit Iniquity, all his Righteousness shall not be remembered; but for his Iniquity that he hath committed [in trusting to his own Righteousness] he shall die for it.

Note hence further.

1. That there is more Vertue in one Sin to destroy, than in all thy Righteousness to save thee alive. If he trust, if he trust never so little, if he do at all trust to his own Righteousness, all his Righteousness shall be forgotten; and by, and for, and in, the Sin that he hath committed in trusting to it, he shall die.

2. Take notice also, that there are more damnable Sins than those, that are against the moral Law. By which of the Ten Commandments is trusting to our own Righteousness forbidden? Yet it is a Sin. It is a Sin therefore forbidden by the Gospel, and is included, lurketh close in, yea, is the, or a Root of Unbelief it self; He that believes not shall be damned. But he that trusteth in his own Righteousness doth not believe, neither in the Truth, or Sufficiency of the Righteousness of Christ to save him, therefore he shall be damned.

But how is it manifest, that he that trusteth to his own Righteousness, doth it through a Doubt, or Unbelief of the Truth or Sufficiency of the Righteousness of Christ?

I answer, Because he trusteth to his own. A Man will never willingly chuse to trust to the worst of Helps, when he believes there is a better as near, and to be had as soon, and that too, upon as easy, if not more easy Terms. If he that trusteth to his own Righteousness for Life, did believe, that there is indeed such a thing as the Righteousness of Christ to justify; and that this Righteousness of Christ has in it A L L Sufficiency to do that blessed Work, be sure he would chuse THAT, thereon to lay, lean, and venture his Soul, that he saw was the best, and most sufficient to save; especially when he saw also, [and see that he must when he sees the Righteousness of Christ] to wit, that that is to be obtained as soon, because as near, and to be had on as easy Terms; nay, upon easier than Man's own Righteousness. I say, he would sooner chuse it, because of the weight of Salvation, of the worth of Salvation, and of the fearful Sorrow, that to Eternity will overtake him, that in this thing shall miscarry. It is for Heaven, it is to escape Hell, Wrath, and Damnation, saith the Soul; and therefore I will, I must, I dare not but chuse that, and that only, that I believe to be the best and most sufficient help in so great a Concern, as Soul-Concern is. So then he that trusteth to his own Righteousness, does it of Unbelief of the Sufficiency of the Righteousness of Christ to save him.

Wherefore this Sin of trusting to his own Righteousness is a most high Transgression; because it contemneth the Righteousness of Christ, which is the only Righteousness that is sufficient to save from the Curse of the Law. It also disalloweth the Design of Heaven, and the Excellency of the Mystery of the Wisdom of God, in designing this Way of Salvation for Man. What shall I say, It also seeketh to rob God of the Honour of the Salvation of Man. It seeketh to take the Crown from the Head of Christ, and to set it upon the Hypocrite's Head; therefore, no marvel, that this one Sin be of that Weight, Vertue and Power, as to sink that Man and his Righteousness into Hell, that leapeth thereon, or trusteth unto it.

But Pharisee, I need not talk thus unto thee, for thou art not the Man that hath that Righteousness, that God findeth not fault withal; nor is it to be found, but with him that is ordained to be the Saviour of Mankind; nor is there any such one besides Jesus, who is called Christ. What Madness then has brought thee into the Temple, there in an audacious manner to stand and vaunt before God; saying, God, I thank thee, I am not as other Men are, &c.

Dost thou not know, that he that breaks one, breaks all the Commandments of God; and consequently, that he that keeps not all, keeps none at all of the Commandments of God. Saith not the Scripture the same? For whosoever shall keep the whole Law, and yet offend in one point, is guilty of all, Jam. 2. 10. Be confounded then, be confounded.

Dost thou know, the God with whom now thou hast to do? He is a God that cannot, (as he is just) accept of an half Righteousness for an whole; of a lame Righteousness for a sound; of a sick Righteousness for a well and healthy one, Mal. 1. 7, 8. And if so, how should he then accept of that which is no Righteousness? I say, how should he accept of that which is none at all, [for thine is only such.] And if Christ said, when you have done all, say, We are unprofitable, How camest thou to say before, thou hadst done one thing well, I am better, more righteous than other Men?

Didst thou believe, when thou saidst it, That God knew thy Heart? Hadst thou said this to the Publican, it had been a high and rampant Expression; but to say this before God, to the Face of God, when he knew that thou wast vile, and a Sinner from the Womb, and from the Conception, spoils all. It was spoken to put a Check to thy Arrogancy, when Christ said, Ye are they, that justify your selves before Men, but God knows your Hearts, Luke 16. 15.

Hast

Hast thou taken notice of this, that God judgeth the Fruit by the Heart from whence it comes? A good Man, out of the good Treasure of his Heart, bringeth forth that which is good, Luke 6. 45. and an evil Man, out of the evil Treasure of his Heart, bringeth forth that which is evil. Nor can it be otherwise concluded, but that thou art an evil Man, and so that all thy supposed good is nought but badness. For that thou hast made it to stand in the room of Jesus, and hast dared to commend thyself to the living God thereby: For thou hast trusted in thy shadow of Righteousness, and committed Iniquity. Thy Sin hath melted away thy Righteousness, and turned it to nothing but Dross; or, if you will, to the early Dew, like to which it goeth away, and so can by no Means do thee good, when thou shalt stand in need of Salvation and Eternal Life of God.

But further, thou sayst thou art righteous, but they are but vain Words. Knowest thou not that thy Zeal, which is the Life of thy Righteousness, is preposterous in many things. What else means thy Madness, and the Rage thereof, against Men as good as thyself. True, thy being ignorant that they are good, may save thee from the Commission of the Sin that is unpardonable, but it will never keep thee from Spot in God's Sight, but will make both thee and thy Righteousness culpable.

Paul, who was once as brave a Pharisee as thou canst be, calleth much of that Zeal, which he in that Estate was possessed with; and lived in the Exercise of Madness; yea, exceeding Madness, Acts 20. 9, 13, 11. Phil. 3. 5. 6. and of the same sort is much of thine, and it must be so; for a Lawyer, a Man for the Law, and that resteth in it, must be a Persecutor; yea, a Persecutor of righteous Men, and that of Zeal to God; because by the Law is begotten through the Weakness that it meeteth with in thee, Soweriness, Bitterness of Spirit, and Anger, against him that rightfully condemneth thee of Folly, for chusing to trust to thy own Righteousness, when a better is provided of God to save us, Gal. 4. 28, 29, 30, 31. Thy Righteousness therefore is deficient, yea, thy Zeal for the Law, and the Men of the Law has joined Madness with thy moral Virtues, and made thy Righteousness Unrighteousness; how then canst thou be upright before the Lord?

Further, Has not the Pride of thy Spirit in this hot-headed Zeal for thy Pharisaical Notions run thee upon thinking, that thou art able to do more than God hath enjoined thee, and so able to make thyself more righteous, than God requireth thou shouldest be. What else is the Cause of thy adding Laws to God's Laws, Precepts to God's Precepts, and Traditions to God's Appointment? Mark 7. Nay, hast thou not by thus doing condemned the Law of want of Perfection, and so the God that gave it of want of Wisdom, and Faithfulness to himself and thee?

Nay, I say again, hath not thy thus doing charged God with being ignorant of knowing, what Rules there needed to be imposed on his Creatures to make their Obedience compleat? And doth not this Madness of thine intimate, moreover, that if thou hadst not slept in with the Bundle of thy Traditions, Righteousness had been imperfect, not through Man's Weakness, but through Impediment in God, or in his ministring Rules of Righteousness unto us.

Now, when thou hast thought on these Things fairly, answer thyself these few Questions: Is not this Arrogancy? Is not this Blasphemy? Is not this to condemn God, that thou mightest be righteous? And dost thou think, this is, indeed, the way to be righteous?

But again, what means thy preferring of thine own Rules, Laws, Statutes, Ordinances and Appointments, before the Rules, Laws, Statutes and Appointments of God? Thinkest thou this to be right? Whither will thy Zeal, thy Pride, and thy Folly carry thee? Is there more Reason, more Equity, more Holiness in thy Traditions, than in the holy, and just, and good Commandments of God? Rom. 7. 12. Why then, I say, dost thou reject the Commandment of God, to keep thine own Tradition? Yea, Why dost thou rage, and rail, and cry out when Men keep not thy Law, or the Rule of thine Order, and Tradition of thine Elders; and yet shut thine Eyes, or wink with them, when thou thyself shalt live in the Breach of the Law of God? Yea, why wilt thou condemn Men, when they keep not thy Law, but study for an Excuse, yea, plead for them that live in the Breach of God's (Mark 7. 10, 11, 12, 13.) Will this go for Righteousness in the Day of God Almighty? Nay rather, will not this, like a Mill-stone about thy Neck, drown thee in the Depths of Hell? Oh, the Blindness, the Madness, the Pride, that dwells in the Hearts of these pretended righteous Men.

Again, What kind of Righteousness of thine, is this, that standeth in a misesteeming of God's Commands? Some thou settest too high, and some too low; as in the Text, thou hast set a Ceremony above Faith, above Love, and above Hope in the Mercy of God: When, as 'tis evident, the Things last mentioned, are the Things of the first rate, the weightier Matters, Mat. 23. 23.

Again, thou hast preferred the Gold above the Temple that sanctifieth the Gold, and the Gift upon the Altar, above the Altar that sanctifies the Gift, Matth. 23. 17.

I say again, What kind of Righteousness shall shall this be called? What Back will such a Suit of Apparel fit, that is set together to what it should be? Nor can other Righteousness proceed where a wrong Judgment preceedeth it.

This misplacing of God's Laws cannot, I say, but produce misplaced Obedience. It indeed produceth a Monster, an ill-shap'd thing, unclean, and an Abomination to the Lord. For see, saith he, (if thou wilt be making) that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed thee in the Mount. Set Faith, where Faith should stand, a Moral, where a Moral should stand; and a Ceremony, where a Ceremony should stand; for this turning of things up-side down shall be esteemed as the Potter's Clay: And wilt thou call this thy Righteousness; yea, wilt thou stand in this, wilt thou plead for this, and venture an Eternal Concern in such a Piece of Linsleywoolsey as this? O Fools, and blind!

But further, let us come a little closer to the Point. O blind Pharisee. Thou standest to thy Righteousness, What dost thou mean? Wouldest thou have Mercy for thy Righteousness, or Justice for thy Righteousness?

If Mercy, what Mercy? Temporal Things God giveth to the unthankful and unholy; nor doth he use to SELL the World to Man for Righteousness. The Earth hath he GIVEN to the Children of Men. But this is not the Thing; thou wouldest have eternal Mercy for thy Righteousness; thou wouldest have God think upon what an holy, what a good, what a righteous Man thou art, and hast been. But Christ died not for the good and righteous, nor did he come to call such to the Banquet, that Grace hath prepared for the World. I came not, I am not come, saith Christ, to call the Righteous, but Sinners to Repentance, Mark 2. Rom. 5. Yet this is thy Plea; Lord, God, I am a righteous Man, therefore grant me Mercy, and a share in thy Heavenly Kingdom. What else dost thou mean, when thou sayest, God I thank thee, that I am not as other Men are? Why dost thou rejoice, why art thou glad that thou art more Righteous (if indeed thou art) than thy Neighbour, if it is not because thou thinkest, that thou hast got the start of thy Neighbour, with reference to Mercy; and that by thy Righteousness thou hast insinuated thy self into God's Affections, and procured an Interest in his eternal Favour? But,

What, What hast thou done by thy Righteousness? I say, What hast thou given to God thereby? And what hath he received of thy Hand? Perhaps thou wilt say, Righteousness pleaseth God: But I answer, No, not thine with respect to Justification from the Curse of the Law, unless it be as perfect, as the Justice it is yielded to, and as the Law that doth command it. But thine is not such a Righteousness: no, thine is speckled, thine is spotted, thine makes thee to look like a speckled Bird in his Eye-sight.

Thy Righteousness has added Iniquity, because it has kept thee from a Belief of thy need of Repentance, and because it has emboldened thee to thrust thy self audaciously into the Presence of God, and made thee, even before his holy Eyes, which are so pure, that they cannot look on Iniquity, Heb. 1. 13. to vaunt, boast and brag of thy self, and of thy tottering, ragged, stinking Uncleaness; for all our Righteousnesses are as menstruous Rags, because they flow from a Thing, a Heart, a Man that is unclean. But,

Again, Wouldest thou have Mercy for thy Righteousness? For who wouldst thou have it; for another, or for thy self? if for another (and 'tis most proper, that a righteous Man should interceed for another by his Righteousness, rather than for himself) then thou thrustest Christ out of his Place and Office, and makest thy self to be a Saviour in his stead; for a Mediator there is already, even a Mediator between God and Man, and he is the Man Christ Jesus.

But dost thou plead by thy Righteousness, for Mercy for thy self? Why, in doing so thou impliest,

First, That thy Righteousness can prevail with God, more than can thy Sins. I say, that thy Righteousness can prevail with God to preserve thee from Death, more than thy Sins can prevail with him to condemn thee to it. And if so what follows? but that thy Righteousness is more, and has been done in a fuller Spirit than ever was thy Sins: but thus to insinuate is to insinuate a Lye; For there is no Man, but while he is a Sinner, sinneth with a more full Spirit, than a good Man can act Righteousness withal.

A Sinner when he sinneth, he doth it with all his Heart, and with all his Mind, and with all his Soul, and with all his Strength; nor hath he in his ordinary Course any thing that bindeth. But with a good Man it is not so; all, and every whit of himself, neither is, nor can be, in every good Duty that he doth. For when he would do good evil is present with him. And again, The Flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the Flesh, and these are contrary one to the other, so that ye cannot do the things that ye would, Gal. 5. 17.

Now if a good Man cannot do good Things with that Oneness and Universality of Mind, as a wicked Man doth sin with, then is his Sin heavier to weigh him down to Hell, then is his Righteousness to buoy him up to the Heavens.

And again, I say if the Righteousness of a good Man comes short of his Sin, both in Number, Weight and Measure, as it doth, (for a good Man shrinks and quakes at the

8 M

Thoughts

Thoughts of God's entering into Judgment with him, Psal. 143. 2.) then is his Iniquity more than his Righteousness. And I say again, if the Sin of one that is truly gracious, and so of one that hath the best of Principles, is heavier and mightier to destroy him, than is his Righteousness to save him, how can it be, that the Pharisee, that is no gracious, but a mere carnal Man, (somewhat reformed and painted over with a few lean and low Formalities) should with his empty, partial, hypocritical Righteousness counterpoise his great, mighty, and weighty Sins, that have cleaved to him in every State and Condition of his, to make him odious in the Sight of God?

Secondly, Dost thou plead by thy Righteousness for Mercy for thy self? Why in so doing thou impliest, that Mercy thou deservedst; and that is next door to, or almost as much as to say, God oweth me what I ask for. The best that can be put upon it, is, thou seekest Security from the direful Curse of God, as it were by the Works of the Law, Rom. 9. three last Verses; and to be sure betwixt Christ and the Law, thou wilt drop into Hell. For he that seeks for Mercy, as it were, and BUT as it were, by the Works of the Law, doth not altogether trust thereto. Nor doth he that seeks for that Righteousness, that should save him as it were by the Works of the Law, seek it only, wholly and solely at the Hands of Mercy.

So then, to seek for that that should save thee, neither at the Hands of the Law, nor at the Hands of Mercy, is, to be sure, to seek it where it is not to be found; for there is no medium betwixt the Righteousness of the Law, and the Mercy of God. Thou must have it either at the Door of the Law, or at the Door of Grace. But sayst thou, I am for having of it at the Hands of both. I will trust solely to neither. I love to have two Strings to my Bow. If one of them, as you think, can help me by it self, my reason tells me, that both can help me better. Therefore will I be righteous, and good, and will seek by my Goodness to be commended to the Mercy of God: For surely, he that hath something of his own to ingratiate himself into the favour of his Prince withal, shall sooner obtain his Mercy and Favour, than one that comes to him stript of all good.

I answer, But there are not two ways to Heaven, there is but one new and living Way, which Christ hath consecrated for us through the Vail, that is to say, his Flesh; and besides that one, there is no more, Heb. 10. 19, to 24. Why then dost thou talk of two Strings to thy Bow? What became of him that had, and would have, two Stools to sit on? Yea, the Text says plainly, that therefore they obtained not Righteousness, because they sought it not by Faith, but as it were by the Works of the Law. See here, they are disowned by the Gospel, because they sought it not by Faith; that is, by Faith only. Again, the Law, and the Righteousness thereof, flies from them, (nor could they attain it, though they follow after it) because they sought it not by Faith.

Mercy then is to be found alone in Jesus Christ! Again, the Righteousness of the Law is to be obtained only by Faith of Jesus Christ: That is, in the Son of God is the Righteousness of the Law to be found; for he by his Obedience to his Father, is become the End of the Law for Righteousness. And for the sake of his legal Righteousness, (which is also called the Righteousness of God, because it was God, in the Flesh of the Lord Jesus that did accomplish it) is Mercy and Grace from God extended to, whoever dependeth by Faith upon God by this Jesus his Righteousness for it. And hence it is, that we so often read, that this Jesus is the Way to the Father: That God for Christ's sake forgiveth us: That by the Obedience of one, many are made righteous, or justified: And that thorough this Man, is preached to us the Forgiveness of Sins; and that by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which they could not be justified by the Law of Moses.

Now, though I here do make mention of Righteousness and Mercy, yet I hold there is but one way, to wit, to eternal Life; which way, as I said, is Jesus Christ; for he is the new, the only new, and living Way to the Father of Mercies, for Mercy to make me capable of abiding with him in the Heavens for ever and ever.

But sayest thou, I will be righteous in my self that I may have wherewith to commend me to God, when I go to him for Mercy?

I answer, But thou blind Pharisee; I tell thee thou hast no Understanding of God's Design by the Gospel; which is, not to advance Man's Righteousness, as thou dreamest; but to advance the Righteousness of his Son, and his Grace by him. Indeed, if God's Design by the Gospel was to exalt and advance Man's Righteousness, than that, which thou hast said, would be to the purpose. For what greater Dignity can be put upon Man's Righteousness, than to admit it?

I say then, for God to admit it, to be an Advocate, an Intercessor, a Mediator; for all these are they which prevail with God to shew me Mercy. But this God never thought of, much less could he thus design by the Gospel: For the Text runs flat against it. Not of Works, not of Works of Righteousness, which we have done; not of Works, lest any one should boast, saying, Well, I may thank my own good Life for Mercy. It was partly for the sake of my own good Deeds that I obtained Mercy to be in Heaven ven and Glory. Shall this be the Burden of the Song of Heaven? Or is this that which is composed by that glittering heavenly Host, and which we have read of in the Holy Book of God! No, no, that Song runs upon other Feet, standeth in far better Strains, being composed of far higher, and truly heavenly Matter: For God has predestinated us unto the Adoption of Children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good Pleasure of his Will; to the Praise of the Glory of his Grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved. In whom we have Redemption through his Blood, the Forgiveness of Sins, according to the Riches of his Grace, Eph. 1. And 'tis requisite, that the Song be framed accordingly; wherefore he saith, that the heavenly Song runs thus: Thou art worthy to take the Book, and to open the Seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood, out of every Kindred, and Tongue, and People, and Nation: and hast made us Kings, and Priests unto our God, and we shall reign on the Earth, Rev. 5. 9, 13.

He saith not that they have redeemed, or helped to redeem and deliver themselves; but that the Lamb, the Lamb that was slain; the Lamb only was he that redeemed them. Nor saith he, that they had made themselves Kings and Priests unto God to offer any Oblation, Sacrifice, or Offering whatsoever; but that the same Lamb had made them such. For they, as is insinuated by the Text, were in, among, one with, and no better, than the Kindreds, Tongues, Nations, and People of the Earth. Better! No, in no wise, saith Paul, Rom. 3. 9. therefore their Separation from them was of meer Mercy, Free-grace, good Will, and distinguishing Love: not for, or because of Works of Righteousness which any of them have done; no, they were all alike. But these, because beloved, when in their Blood, (according to Ezek. 16.) were separated by Free Grace. And as another Scripture hath it, redeemed from the Earth, and from among Men by Blood, Rev. 14. 3, 4. Wherefore Deliverance from the ireful Wrath of God, must not, neither in whole nor in part, be ascribed to the whole Law, or to all the Righteousness that comes by it; but to this Lamb of God, Jesus, the Saviour of the World; for 'tis HE that delivered us from the Wrath to come. And that according to God's Appointment; For God hath not appointed us to Wrath, but to obtain Salvation by, or through our Lord Jesus Christ, 1 Thes. 1. 10. chap. 5. 9. Let every Man therefore take heed what he doth, and whereon he layeth the Stress of his Salvation, For other Foundations can no Man lay, than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ, 1 Cor. 3. 11.

But dost thou plead still as thou didst before, and wilt thou stand thereto? Why then, thy Design must overcome God, or God's Design must overcome thee. Thy Design is to give thy good Life, thy good Deeds, a part of the Glory of thy Justification from the Curse. And God's Design is to throw all thy Righteousness out into the Street, into the Dirt, and Dunghill, as to that Thou art for Glory, and for glorying here before God; yea, thou art sharing in the Glory of Justification, when that alone belongeth to God. And he hath said, My Glory will I not give to another. Thou wilt not trust wholly to God's Grace in Christ for Justification; and God will not take thy stinking Righteousness in, as a Partner in thy Acquittal from Sin, Death, Wrath, and Hell. Now the Question is, Who shall prevail, God, or the Pharisee? And whose Word shall stand, His, or the Pharisees?

Alas! the Pharisee here must needs come down, for God is greater than all. Also, he hath said, that no Flesh shall glory in his Presence; and that he will have Mercy, and not Sacrifice. And again, that it is not (nor shall be) in him that wills, nor in him that runs, but in God that sheweth Mercy. What Hope, Help, Stay, or Relief then is there left for the Merit-monger? What Twig, or Straw, or twined Thread is left to be a Stay for his Soul? This Besom will sweep away his Cobweb, the House that this Spider doth so lean upon, will now be overturned, and he in it to Hell-fire: For nothing less than everlasting Damnation is designed by God, and that for this fearful and unbelieving Pharisee; God will prevail against him for ever.

Thirdly, But wilt thou yet plead thy Righteousness for Mercy? Why, in so doing, thou takest away from God the Power of giving Mercy. For if it be thine as Wages, it is no longer his to dispose of at Pleasure; for that which another Man oweth me, is in Equity, not at his, but at my Dispose. Did I say, that by this thy Plea, thou takest away from God the Power of giving Mercy; I will add, yea, and also of disposing of Heaven and Life eternal. And then, I pray you, what is left unto God, and what can he call his own? Not Mercy, for that by thy good Deeds thou hast purchased. Not Heaven, for that by thy good Deeds thou hast purchased. Not Eternal Life, for that by thy good Deeds thou hast purchased. Thus Pharisee (O thou self-righteous Man) hast thou set up thy self above Grace, Mercy, Heaven, Glory; yea, above even God himself, for the Purchaser should in reason be esteemed above the Purchase.

Awake Man! What hast thou done? Thou hast blasphemed God, thou hast undervalued the Glory of his Grace; thou hast, what in thee lieth, opposed the glorious Design of Heaven! Thou hast sought to make thy filthy Rags to share in thy Justification.

Now,

Now, all these are mighty Sins, these have made thine Iniquity infinite. What wilt thou do? Thou hast created to thy self a World of needless Miseries, I call them needless, because thou hadst more than enough before. Thou hast set thy self against God in a way of contending; thou standest upon thy Points and Paptables: thou wilt not bate God an Ace, of what thy Righteousness is worth, and wilt also make it worth, what thy self shalt list. Thou wilt be thine own Judge, as to the worth of thy Righteousness; thou wilt neither hear what Verdict the Word has pass'd about it, nor wilt thou endure, that God should throw it out in the Matter of thy Justification, but quarrellest with the Doctrine of Free-Grace, or else dost wrest it out of its place to serve thy Pharisaical Designs: Saying, God, I thank thee, I am not as other Men; fathering upon thy self, yea, upon God and thy self, a stark Lie; for thou art as other Men are, though not in this, yet in that; yea, in a far worse Condition than the most of Men are. Nor will it help thee any thing, to attribute this thy Goodness to the God of Heaven: For that is but a meer toying; the Truth is, the God that thou intendest, is nothing but thy Righteousness; and the Grace that thou supposest, is nothing but thine own good and honest Intentions. So that,

Fourthly, In all that thou say'st, thou dost but play the downright Hypocrite. Thou pretendest indeed to Mercy, but thou intendest nothing but Merit. Thou seemest to give the Glory to God; but at the same time takest it all to thy self. Thou despisest others, and criest up thy self, and in Conclusion fatterest all upon God by word, and upon thy self in truth. Nor is there any thing more common among this sort of Men, than to make God, his Grace, and Kindness, the Stalking-Horse to their own Praise, saying, God, I thank thee, when they trust to themselves that they are righteous, and have not need of any Repentance; when the Truth is, they are the worst sort of Men in the World, because they put themselves into such a state as God hath not put them into, and then impute it to God, saying, God, I thank thee, that thou hast done it; for what greater Sin than to make God a Lyar, or then to father that upon God, which he never meant, intended, or did. And all this under a Colour to glorify God, when there is nothing else designed, but to take all Glory from him, and to wear it on thine own Head as a Crown, and a Diadem in the Face of the whole World.

A self-righteous Man therefore can come to God for Mercy no otherwise than flauntingly: For what need of Mercy hath a righteous Man? Let him then talk of Mercy, of Grace, and Goodness, and come in an hundred times with his, God, I thank thee, in his Mouth, all's but Words, there is no Sense, nor Saviour, nor Relish of Mercy, and Favour; nor doth he in truth, from his very Heart, understand the Nature of Mercy, nor what is an Object thereof; but when he thanks God, he praises himself; when he pleads for Mercy, he means his own Merit; and all this is manifest from what doth follow; for, saith he, I am not as this Publican: Thence clearly insinuating, that not the good, but the bad, should be rejected of the God of Heaven: That not the bad but the good; not the Sinner, but the Self-righteous, are the most proper Objects of God's Favour. The same thing is done by others in this our Day; Favour, Mercy, Grace, and God I thank thee, is in their Mouths, but their own Strength, Sufficiency, Free-will, and the like, they are the Things they mean, by all such high and glorious Expressions.

But, Secondly, If thy Plea be not for Mercy, but for Justice, then to speak a little to that. 1. Justice has Measures and Rules to go by; unto which Measures and Rules, if thou com'st not up, Justice can do thee no good. Come then, O thou blind Pharisee, let us pass away a few Minutes in some Discourse about this. Thou demandest Justice, because God hath said, that the Man that doth these things shall live in and by them: And again, the doers of the Law shall be justified, not in a way of Mercy, but in a way of Justice. He shall live by them. But what hast thou done, O blind Pharisee! What hast thou done, that thou art embolden'd to venture, to stand and fall to the most perfect Justice of God? Hast thou fulfilled the whole Law, and not offended in one Point? Hast thou purged thy self from the Pollutions, and Motions of Sin that dwell in thy Flesh, and work in thy own Members? Is the very Being of Sin rooted out of thy Tabernacle? And art thou now as perfectly innocent as ever was Jesus Christ? Hast thou, by suffering the uttermost Punishment, that Justice could justly lay upon thee for thy Sins, made fair and full Satisfaction to God, according to the Tenor of his Law for thy Transgressions? If thou hast done all these things, then thou may'st plead something, and yet but something, for thy self in a way of Justice. Nay, in this I will assert nothing, but will rather enquire, What hast thou gained by all this thy Righteousness (we will now suppose, what must not be granted) was not this thy State, when thou wast in thy first Parents? Wast thou not innocent, perfectly innocent and righteous? And if thou shouldst be so now, what hast thou gained thereby? Suppose that the Man, that had forty Years ago forty Pounds of his own, and had spent it all since, should yet be able now to shew his forty Pounds again? What has he got thereby, or now much richer richer is he at last, than he was, when he first set up for himself. Nay, doth not the blot of his ill living betwixt his first and his last, lie as a blemish upon him, unless he should redeem himself also by Works of Supererogation, from the Scandal that Justice may lay at his Door for that?

But, I say, suppose, O Pharisee, this should be thy Case, yet God is not bound to give thee in Justice that eternal Life, which by his Grace he bestoweth upon those, that have Redemption from Sin, by the Blood of his Son. In Justice therefore, when all comes to all, thou canst require no more than an endless Life in an earthly Paradise; for there thou wast set up at first; nor doth it appear from what hath been said, touching all that thou hast done or canst do, that thou deservedst a better Place.

Did I say, that thou may'st require justly an endless Life in an earthly Paradise. Why? I must add to that Saying this Proviso; If thou continuest in the Law, and in the Righteousness thereof, else not.

But how dost thou know that thou shalt continue therein? Thou hast no Promise from God's Mouth for that; nor is Grace or Strength ministered to Mankind by the Covenant that thou art under. So that still thou standest bound to thy good Behaviour, and in the Day that thou dost give the first, though never so little a trip, or stumble in thy Obedience, thou forfeitest thine Interest in Paradise (and in Justice) as to any Benefit there.

But alas, what need is there that we should thus talk of things, when 'tis manifest, that thou hast sinned, not only before thou wast a Pharisee, but when after the most strictest Sect of thy Religion thou livest also a Pharisee; yea, and now in the Temple, in thy Prayer there, thou shewest thy self to be full of Ignorance, Pride, Self-Conceit, and horrible Arrogancy, and desire of vain Glory, &c. which are none of them the Seat or Fruits of Righteousness, but the Seat of the Devil, and the Fruit of his Dwelling, even at this time in thy Heart.

Could it ever have been imagined, that such audacious Impudence could have put it self forth in any mortal Man, in his Approach unto God by Prayer, as has shewed it self in thee? I am not as other Men! say'st thou; but is this the way to go to God in Prayer? The Prayer of the upright is God's delight. But the upright Man glorifies God's Justice, by confessing to God the Vileness and Pollution of his State and Condition: He glorifies God's Mercy by acknowledging, that that, and that only, as communicated of God by Christ to Sinners, can save and deliver from the Curse of the Law.

This, I say, is the Sum of the Prayer of the just and upright Man, Job 1. 8. ch. 40.

Vol. II.

4. Acts 13. 22. Psal. 51. Psal. 38. 2 Sam. 6. 21, 22. and not as thou most vain-gloriously vauntest, with thy, God, I thank thee, I am not as other Men are.

True, when a Man is accused by his Neighbours, by a Brother, by an Enemy, and the like; if he be clear, (and he may be so, as to what they shall lay to his charge) then let him vindicate, justify, and acquit himself, to the utmost that in Justice and Truth he can; for his Name, the Preservation whereof is more to be chosen than Silver and Gold; also his Profession, yea, the Name of God too, and Religion, may now lie at Stake, by reason of such false Accusations, and perhaps can by no means (as to this Man) be covered, and vindicated from Reproach and Scandal; but by his justifying of himself. Wherefore in such a Work, a Man serveth God, and saves Religion from hurt; yea, as he that is a Professor, and has his Profession attended with a scandalous Life, hurteth Religion thereby: So he that has his Profession attended with a good Life, and shall suffer it notwithstanding, to lie under blame by false Accusations, when 'tis in the Power of his Hand to justify himself, hurteth Religion also. But the Case of the Pharisee is otherwise: He is not here a dealing with Men, but God; not seeking to stand clear in the Sight of the World, but in the Sight of Heaven it self; and that too, not with respect to what Men or Angels, but with respect to what God and his Law could charge him with, and justly lay at his Door.

This therefore mainly altereth the Case; for a Man here to stand thus upon his Points, it is Death; for he affronteth God, he giveth him the lie, he reproveth the Law, and in Sum, accuseth it of bearing false Witness against him; he doth this, I say, even by saying, God, I thank thee, I am not as other Men are; for God hath made none of this difference. The Law condemneth all Men as Sinners, testifieth, that every Imagination of the Thought of the Heart of the Sons of Men is only evil, and that continually. Wherefore they that do as the Pharisee did, to wit, seek to justify themselves before God from the Curse of the Law, by their own good Doings, though they also, as the Pharisee did, seem to give God the Thanks for all, yet do most horribly sin, even by their so doing, and shall receive a Pharisee's Reward at last. Wherefore, O thou Pharisee, it is a vain thing for thee either to think of, or to ask for, at God's Hand, either Mercy or Justice. Because Mercy thou canst not ask for, from Sense of want of Mercy, because thy Righteousness, which is by the Law, hath utterly blinded thine Eyes, and complimenting with God doth nothing. And as for Justice, that can do thee no good, but the more just God is, and the more more by that he acteth towards thee, the more miserable and fearful will be thy Condition, because of the Deficiency of thy so much, by thee, esteemed Righteousness.

What a deplorable Condition then is a poor Pharisee in! For Mercy he cannot pray, he cannot pray for it with all his Heart; for he seeth, indeed, no need thereof. True, the Pharisee, though he was impudent enough, yet would not take all from God; he would still count, that there was due to him a Tribute of Thanks: God, I thank thee, saith he, but yet not a bit of this, for Mercy; but for that he had let him live (for I know not for what he did thank himself) till he had made himself better than other Men; but that Betterment was a Betterment in none others Judgment than that of his own, and that was none other but such an one as was false. So then, the Pharisee is by this time quite out of Doors; his Righteousness is worth nothing, his Prayer is worth nothing, his Thanks to God are worth nothing; for that what he had was scanty, and imperfect, and 'twas his Pride that made him offer it to God for Acceptance; nor could his fawning Thanksgiving better his Case, or make his Matter at all good before God.

But I'll warrant you, the Pharisee was so far off from thinking thus of himself, and of his Righteousness, that he thought of nothing so much as of this, that he was a happy Man; yea, happier by far than other his fellow Rationals: Yea, he plainly declares it when he saith, God, I thank thee, I am not as other Men are.

O what a Fool's Paradise was the Heart of the Pharisee now in, while he stood in the Temple praying to God! God, I thank thee, saith he, for I am good and holy, I am a righteous Man; I have been full of good Works; I am no Extortioner, Unjust, nor Adulterer, nor yet as this wretched Publican. I have kept my self strictly to the Rule of mine Order, and my Order is the most strict of all Orders now in Being: I fast, I pray, I give Tithes of all that I possess. Yea, so forward am I to be a religious Man; so ready have I been to listen after my Duty, that I have asked both of God and Man the Ordinances of Judgment and Justice; I take delight in approaching to God. What less now can be mine than the Heavenly Kingdom and Glory.

Now the Pharisee, like Haman, saith in his Heart, To whom would the King delight to do Honour, more than to my self? Where is the Man that so pleaseth God, and consequently, that in Equity and Reason should be beloved of God like me? Thus like the Prodigal's Brother, he pleadeth, saying, Lo, these many Years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy Commandments, Luke 15. 29. O brave Pharisee! But go on in thine Oration: Nor yet as this Publican.

Poor Wretch, quoth the Pharisee to the Publican, What comest thou for? Dost think that such a Sinner as thou art shall be heard of God? God heareth not Sinners; but if any Man be a Worshipper of God (as I am, as I thank God I am) him he heareth. Thou, for thy part, hast been a Rebel all thy Days: I abhor to come nigh thee, or to touch thy Garments. Stand by thy self, come not near me, for I am more holy than thou, Isa. 65. 5.

Hold, stop there, go no further; fye Pharisee, fye; Dost thou know before whom thou standest, to whom thou speakest, and of what the matter of thy silly Oration is made! Thou art now before God, thou speakest now to God, and therefore in Justice and Honesty thou shouldest make mention of his Righteousness, not of thine; of his Righteousness, and of his only.

I am sure, Abraham, of whom thou sayest he is thy Father, never had the Face to do as thou hast done, though 'tis to be presumed he had more cause so to do, than thou hast, or canst have. Abraham had whereof to Glory, but not before God; yea, he was called God's Friend, and yet would not glory before him; but humbleth himself, was afraid, and trembled in himself, when he stood before him, acknowledging of himself to be but Dust and Ashes, Gen. 18. 28, 30, 32. Rom. 4. 1, 2. but thou, as thou hadst quite forgot, that thou wast framed of that matter, and after the manner of other Men, standest and pleadest thy goodness before him. Be ashamed Pharisee: Dost thou think, that God hath Eyes of Flesh, or that he seeth as Man sees? Is not the Secrets of thy Heart open unto him? Thinkest thou with thy self, that thou, with a few of thy defiled ways canst cover thy rotten Wall, that thou hast daubed with untempered Mortar, and so hide the Dirt thereof from his Eyes: Or that these fine, smooth, and oily Words, that come out of thy Mouth, will make him forget, that thy Throat is an open Sepulchre, and that thou within art full of dead Men's Bones and all Uncleaness? Thy thus cleansing of the outside of the Cup and Platter, and thy garnishing of the Sepulchres of the righteous, is nothing at all in God's Eyes, but things that manifest, that thou art an Hypocrite, and blind, because thou takest no notice of that which is within, which yet is that, which is most abominable to God. For the Fruit, alas, what is the Fruit of the Tree, or what are the Streams of the Fountain? Thy Fountain is defiled; yea, a Defiler, and so that which maketh the whole self, with thy Works unclean in God's Sight.

But Pharisee, how comes it to pass, that the poor Publican is now so much a Mote

in

in thine Eye, that thou canst not forbear, but must accuse him before the Judgment of God: for in that thou saist, that thou art not even as this Publican, thou bringest in an Accusation, a Charge, a Bill against him. What has he done? Has he concealed any of thy Righteousness, or has he secretly informed against thee that thou art an Hypocrite, and superstitious? I dare say, the poor Wretch has neither meddled nor made with thee in these Matters.

But what aileth the Pharisee? doth the poor Publican stand to vex thee? Doth he touch thee with his dirty Garments; or doth he annoy thee with his stinking Breath? Doth his Posture of standing so like a Man condemned offend thee? True, he now standeth with his Hand held up at God's Bar, he pleads guilty to all that is laid to his Charge.

He cannot strut, vapour, and swagger as thou dost? but why offended at this? Oh but he has been a naughty Man! and I have been righteous, saist thou. Well, Pharisee, well, his Naughtiness shall not be laid to thy Charge, if thou hast chose none of his Ways. But since thou wilt yet bear me down, that thou art righteous, shew now, even now, while thou standest before God with the Publican, some, though they be, but small, yea, though but very small Fruits of thy Righteousness. Let the Publican alone, since he is speaking for his Life before God. Or if thou canst not let him alone, yet do not speak against him; for thy so doing will but prove, that thou remembreth the Evil that the Man has done unto thee; yea, and that thou bearest him a Grudge for it too, and while you stand before God.

But Pharisee, the righteous Man is a merciful Man, and while he standeth praying he forgiveth; yea, and also cryeth to God that he will forgive him too, Mark 11. 25, 26. Acts 7. 60. Hitherto then thou hast shewed none of the Fruits of thy Righteousness. Pharisee, Righteousness would teach thee to love this Publican, but thou shewest that thou hatest him. Love covereth the Multitude of Sins; but Hatred and Unfaithfulness revealeth Secrets.

Pharisee, thou shouldest have remembered this thy Brother in this his Day of Adversity, and shouldest have shewed, that thou hadst Compassion on thy Brother in this his deplorable Condition; but thou, like the Proud, the Cruel, and arrogant Man, hast taken thy Neighbour at the Advantage, and that when he is even between the Straights, and standing upon the Pinnacle of Difficulty, betwixt Heaven and Hell, and hast done what thou couldest, what on thy part lay, to thrust him down to the Deep, saying, I am not even as this Publican.

What Cruelty can be greater; what Rage more furious; and what spite and hatred more damnable and implacable, than to follow, or take a Man while he is asking of Mercy at God's Hands, and to put in a Caveat against his obtaining of it, by exclaiming against him that he is a Sinner? The master of Righteousness doth not so: Do not think, saith he, that I will excuse you to the Father. The Scholars of Righteousness do not so. But as for me, said David, when they (mine Enemies) were sick, (and the Publican here was sick of the most malignant Disease) my clothing was of Sackcloth, I humbled my Soul with fasting, and my Prayer (to wit, that I made for them) returned into my Bosom. I behaved my self as though he had been my Friend and Brother: I bowed down heavily, as one that mourneth for his Mother, John 5. 45. Psal. 35. 13, 14.

Pharisee, Dost thou see here how contrary thou art to righteous Men? Now then, where shall we find out one to parallel thee, but by finding him out that is called the Dragon; for he it is that accuseth the poor Sinners before God, Zech. 3. Rev. 12.

I am not as this Publican; Modesty should have commanded thee to have bit thy Tongue as to this. What could the Angels think, but that Revenge was now in thine Heart, and but that thou comest up into the Temple, rather to boast of thy self and accuse thy Neighbour, than to pray to the God of Heaven: For what one Petition is there in all thy Prayer, that gives the least Intimation, that thou hast the Knowledge of God or thy self? Nay, what Petition of any kind is there in thy vain-glorious Oration from first to last? only an Accusation drawn up, and that against one helpless and forlorn; against a poor Man, because he is a Sinner; drawn up, I say, against him by thee, who canst not make proof of thy self that thou art Righteous: But come to proofs of Righteousness, and thou art wanting also. What, though thy Raiment is better than his, thy Skin may be full as black: Yea, what if thy Skin be whiter than his, thy Heart may be yet far blacker. Yea, it is so, for the Truth hath spoken it; for within you are full of Excess and all Uncleanness, Matth. 23.

Pharisee, there are Transgressions against the Second Table, and the Publican shall be guilty of them: But there are Sins also against the first Table, and thou thy self art guilty of them.

The Publican, in that he was an Extortioner, unjust, and an Adulterer, made it thereby manifest that he did not love his Neighbour; and thou by making a God, a Saviour, a Deliverer of thy filthy Righteousness, dost make it appear, that thou dost not love thy God; for as he that taketh, or that derogateth from his Neighbour in that which is his Neighbour's due, sinneth against against his Neighbour, so he that taketh or derogateth from God, sinneth against God.

Now then, though thou hast not, as thou dost imagine, play'd at that low Game as to derogate from thy Neighbour; yet thou hast play'd at that high Game as to derogate from thy God; for thou hast robbed God of the Glory of Salvation; yea, declared, that as to that there is no trust to be put in him. So this is the Man that made not God his Strength; but trusted to the abundance of his Riches, and strengthened himself in his Wickedness or Substance, Psal. 52. 7.

What else means this great Bundle of thy own Righteousness, which thou hast brought with thee into the Temple? yea, what means else thy commending of thy self because of that, and so thy implicit Prayer, that thou for that mightest find Acceptance with God;

All this, what does it argue, I say, but a Diffidence of God? and that thou countest Salvation safer in thine own Righteousness, than in the Righteousness of God; and that thy own Love to, and Care of thy own Soul, is far greater, and so much better, than is the Care and Love of God. And is this to keep the first Table; yea, the first branch of that Table, which saith, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God? for thy thus doing cannot stand with Love to God.

How can that Man say, I love God, who from his very Heart shrinketh to trust in him? Or, how can that Man say, I would glorify God, who in his very Heart refuseth to stand and fall by his Mercy?

Suppose a great Man should bid all the poor of the Parish to his House to Dinner, and should moreover send by the Mouth of his Servant, saying, My Lord hath killed his Fatlings, hath furnished his Table, and prepared his Wine, nor is there want of any Thing, come to the Banquet: Would it not be counted as an high Affront to, great Contempt of, and much Distrust in the Goodness of the Man of the House, if some of these Guests should take with them, out of their own poor Store, some of their mouldy Crusts, and carry them with them, lay them on their Trenchers upon the Table before the Lord of the Feast, and the rest of his Guests, out of Fear that he yet would not provide sufficiently for those he had bidden to the Dinner that he made?

Why Pharisee, this is the very Case, Thou hast been called to a Banquet, even to the Banquet of God's Grace, and thou hast been disposed to go; but behold, thou hast not believed, that he would of his own Cost make thee a Feast, when thou comest; wherefore of thy own Store thou hast brought with thee, and hast laid upon thy Trencher on his Table, thy mouldy Crusts in the Presence of the Angels, and of this poor Publican; yea, and have vauntingly said upon the whole, God, I thank thee, I am not as other Men are. I am no such needy Man, Luke 15. 7. I am no Extortioner, nor Unjust, nor Adulterer, nor even as this Publican. I am come indeed to thy Feast, for of Civility I could do no less; but for thy Dainties, I need them not, I have of such things enough of mine own, Luke 18. 9. I thank thee therefore for thy Offer of Kindness, but I am not as those that have, and stand in need thereof, nor yet as this Publican. And thus feeding upon thine own Fare, or by making a Composition of his and thine together, thou contemnest God, thou countest him insufficient or unfaithful; that is, either one that has not enough, or having it, will not bestow it upon the Poor and Needy, and therefore, of mere Pretence thou goest to his Banquet, but yet trustest to thy own, and to that only.

This is to break the first Table; and so to make thy self a Sinner of the highest Form: For the Sins against the first Table, are Sins of an higher Nature than are the Sins against the second. True, the Sins of the second Table are also Sins against God, because they are Sins against the Commandments of God: But the Sins that are against the first Table, are Sins not only against the Command, but against the very Love, Strength, Holiness, and Faithfulness of God: And herein stands thy Condition; thou hast not, thou saist thou hast not done Injury to thy Neighbour; but what of that, if thou hast reproached thy Maker?

Pharisee, I will assure thee, thou art besides the Saddle; thy State is not good, thy Righteousness is so far off from doing any good, that it maketh thee to be a greater Sinner, because it signifieth more immediately against the Mercy, the Love, the Grace, and Goodness of God, than the Sins of other Sinners, as to degree, does.

And as they are more odious and abominable in the Sight of God, (as they needs must, if what is said be true, as it is) so they are more dangerous to the Life and Soul of Man: For that they always appear unto him in whom they dwell, and to him that trusteth in them, not to be Sins and Transgressions, but Virtues and excellent Things. Not Things that set a Man further off, but the Things, that bring a Man nearer God, than those that want them are or can be.

This therefore is the dangerous Estate of those that go about to establish their own Righteousness, that neither have, nor can, while they are so doing, submit themselves to the Righteousness of God, Rom. 10. 3. It is far more easy to persuade a poor Wretch, whose Life is debauched, and Sins are written in his Forehead, to submit to the Righteousness of God, (that is, to the Righteousness that is of God's providing and giving) than it is to persuade a self-righteous self-righteous Man to do it: For the Prophane is sooner convinced of the Necessity of Righteousness to save him: As that he has none of his own, and accepteth of, and submitteth himself to the Help, and Salvation, that is, in the Righteousness and Obedience of another.

And upon this Account it is, that Christ saith, The Publicans and Harlots enter into the Kingdom of Heaven before the Scribes and Pharisees, (Mat. 21. 31.) Poor Pharisee, what a Loss art thou at? thou art not only a Sinner, but a Sinner of the highest Form. Not a Sinner by such Sins (by such Sins chiefly) as the second Table doth make manifest; but a Sinner chiefly in that way, as no self-righteous Man did ever dream of. For when the righteous Man or Pharisee shall hear that he is a Sinner, he replieth, I am not as other Men are.

And because the common and more ordinary Description of Sin, is the Transgression against the second Table, he presently replieth again, I am not as this Publican is; and so throwdeth himself under his own lame Endeavours, and ragged, partial Patches of moral or civil Righteousness. Wherefore when he heareth that his Righteousness is condemned, slighted, and accounted nothing worth, then he fretteth, and fumeth, and would kill the Man that so slighteth and disdaineth his goodly Righteousness; but Christ and the true Gospel-teacher still goeth on, and condemneth all his Righteousness as menstruous rags, an Abomination to God, and nothing but loss and dung.

Now menstruous Rags, things that are an Abomination, and Dung, are not fit matter to make a Garment of to wear, when I come to God for Life, much less to be made my Friend, my Advocate, my Mediator and Spokesman, when I stand betwixt Heaven and Hell, Isa. 64. 5. Luke 16. 15. Philip. 3. 6, 7, 8. to plead for me that I might be saved.

Perhaps some will blame me, and count me also worthy thereof, because I do not distinguish betwixt the matter and the manner of the Pharisee's Righteousness. And let them condemn me still; for, saving the holy Law, which is neither the matter nor manner of the Pharisee's Righteousness, but rather the Rules (if he will live thereby) up to which he should compleatly come in every thing that he doth. And I say again, that the whole of the Pharisee's Righteousness is sinful, though not with and to Men, yet with and before the God of Heaven. Sinful I say it is, and abominable, both in it self, and also in its effects.

First, In it self; for that it is imperfect, scanty, and short of the Rule by which Righteousness is enjoined, and EVEN with which every A& should be: For Shortness here, even every Shortness in these Duties, is Sin, and sinful Weakness; wherefore the Curse taketh hold of the Man for coming short, but that it could not justly do; if his coming short was not his Sin: Cursed is every one that doth not, and that continueth not to do all Things written in the Law; Deut. 27. 26. Gal. 3. 10.

Secondly, It is sinful, because it is wrought by sinful Flesh; for all legal Righteousness is a Work of the Flesh, Rom. 4. 1. Philip. 3. 3 to 8.

A Work, I say, of the Flesh; even of that Flesh, who, or which also committeth the greatest Enormities. For the Flesh is but one, though its workings are divers: Sometimes in a Way most notoriously sensual and devilish, causing the Soul to wallow in the Mire.

But these are not all the Works of the Flesh; the Flesh sometimes will attempt to be righteous, and set upon doing Actions, that in their Perfection would be very glorious and beautiful to behold. But because the Law is only commanding Words, and yieldeth no help to the Man that attempts to perform it; and because the Flesh is weak, and cannot do of it self that, therefore this most glorious Work of the Flesh faileth.

But, I say, as it is a Work of the Flesh, it cannot be good, forasmuch as the hand that worketh it, is defiled with Sin: For in a good Man, one spiritually good, that is, in his Flesh there dwells no good thing, but consequently that which is bad; how then can the Flesh of a carnal, graceless Man (and such a one is every Pharisee and self-righteous Man in the World) produce, though it joineth it self to the Law, to the righteous Law of God, that which is good in his Sight?

If any shall think that I pinch so hardly, because I call Man's Righteousness which is of the Law, of the righteous Law of God, Flesh, let them consider that which follows; to wit, That though Man by Sin, is said to be dead in Sin and Trespasses, yet not so dead, but that he can act still in his own Sphere. That is, to do, and chuse to do, either that which by all Men is counted base, or that which by some is counted good, though he is not, nor can all the World make him capable of doing any thing that may please his God.

Man by Nature, as dead as he is, can, and that with the Will of his Flesh, will his own Salvation. Man by Nature can, and that by the Power of his Flesh, pursue and follow after his own Salvation; but then he wills it, and pursues or follows after it, not in God's way, but his own. Not by Faith in Christ, but by the Law of Moses, see Rom. 9. 16. ver. 31. ch. 10. 3. 7.

Wherefore it is no Error to say, that a Man naturally has WILL, and a POWER to pursue his Will, and that as to his own Salvation. But it is a damnable Error to say, say, that he hath Will and Power to pursue it, and that in God's way. For then we must hold that the Mysteries of the Gospel are natural; for that natural Men, or Men by Nature, may apprehend and know them; yea, and know them to be the only means by which they must obtain eternal Life: For the Understanding must act before the Will; yea, a Man must approve of the way to Life by Jesus Christ, before his Mind will budge, or stir, or move that way: But the natural Man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, (of the Gospel) for they are foolishness to him, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.

He receiveth not these things; that is, his Mind and Will lie cross unto them, for he counts them Foolishness; nor can all the natural Wisdom in the World cause, that his Will should fall in with them, because it cannot discern them.

Nature discerneth the Law, and the Righteousness thereof; yea, it discerneth it, and approveth thereof; that is, that the Righteousness of it is the best and only way to Life, and therefore the natural Will and Power of the Flesh, as here you see in the Pharisee, do steer their Course by that to eternal Life, 1 Cor. 2. 24.

The Righteousness of the Law therefore is a Work of the Flesh, a Work of sinful Flesh, and therefore must needs be as Filth and Dung, and abominable as to that for which this Man hath produced it, and presented it in the Temple before God.

Nor is the Pharisee alone entangled in this Mischief; many Souls are by these Works of the Flesh flattered, as also the Pharisee was, into an Opinion, that their State is good; when there is nothing in it. The most that their Conversion amounteth to, is, the Publican is become a Pharisee; the open Sinner is become a self-righteous Man. Of the black side of the Flesh he hath had enough, now therefore with the white side of the Flesh he will recreate himself. And now, most wicked must he needs be, that questioneth the goodness of the State of such a Man. He, of a Drunkard, a Swearer, an unclean Person, a Sabbath-breaker, a Liar, and the like, is become reformed; a Lover of Righteousness, a strict Observer, Doer, and Trader in the Formalities of the Law, and a Herder with Men of his Complexion. And now he is become a great Exclaimer against Sin and Sinners, defying to acquaint with those that once were his Companions, saying, I am not even as this Publican.

To turn therefore from Sin to Man's Righteousness: yea, to rejoice in Confidence, that thy State is better than is that of the Publican: I mean, better in the Eyes of Divine Justice, and in the Judgment of the Law; and yet to be found by the Law, not in the Spirit, but in the Flesh; not in Christ, but under the Law; not in a State of Salvation, but of Damnation, is common among Men: For they, and they only, are the right Men, who worship God in the Spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no Confidence in the Flesh. Where by Flesh, must not be meant the horrible Transgressions against the Law, (though they are also called the Works of the Flesh, Gal. 5. 19.) for they minister no Occasion unto Men, to have Confidence in them towards God: But that is that, which is insinuated by Paul, where he saith, he had no Confidence in the Flesh, tho' he might have had it, as he said, Though I also might have Confidence in the Flesh. If any other Man, saith he, thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the Flesh, I more, Philip 3. 3, 4. And then he repeats a two-fold Privilege that he had by the Flesh.

First, That he was one of the Seed of Abraham, and of the Tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews, &c.

Secondly, That he had fallen in with the strictest Men of that Religion, which was such after the Flesh; to wit, to be a Pharisee, and was the Son of a Pharisee, had much fleshly Zeal for God, and touching the Righteousness which is of the Law blameless, Phil. 3. 3, 5, 6.

But, I say still, there is nothing but Flesh; fleshly Privileges, and fleshly Righteousness, and so consequently a fleshly Confidence, and trust for Heaven. This is manifest when the Man had his Eyes enlightened, he counted all Loss and Dung, that he might be found in Christ, not having his own Righteousness which is of the Law, but that which is through the Faith of Christ, the Righteousness which is of God by Faith.

And this leads me to another thing, and that is, to tell thee, O thou blind Pharisee, that thou canst not be in a safe Condition, because thou hast thy Confidence in the Flesh, that is, in the Righteousness of the Flesh. For all Flesh is Grass, and all the Glory of it as the Flower of the Field; and the Flesh and the Glory of that being as weak as the Grass, which to Day is, and to Morrow is cast into the Oven, is but a weak Business for a Man to venture his eternal Salvation upon. Wherefore, as I also hinted before, the godly-wise have been afraid to be found in their Righteousness, I mean their own personal Righteousness, though that is far better, than can be the Righteousness of any carnal Man: For the godly Man's Righteousness is wrought by the Spirit and Faith of Christ; but the ungodly Man's Righteousness is of the Flesh, and of the Law. Yet I say, this godly Man is afraid to stand by his Righteousness before the Tribunal of God, as is manifest in these following Particulars.

First,

First, He sees Sin in his Righteousness, for so the Prophet intimates, when he saith, All our Righteousnesses are as filthy Rags, Isa. 64. but there is nothing can make ones Righteousness filthy but Sin. 'Tis not the poor, the low, the mean, the sickly, the beggarly State of a Man, nor yet his being hated of Devils, persecuted of Men, broken under Necessities, Reproaches, Distresses, or any kind of Troubles of this Nature, that can make the godly Man's Righteousness filthy; nothing but Sin can do it, and that can, doth, hath, and will do it. Nor can any Man, be he who he will, and though he watches, prays, strives, denies himself, and puts his Body under what Chastisement or Hardships he can; yea, though he also get his Spirit and Soul hoisted up to the highest Peg, or Pin of Sanctity, and holy Contemplation, and so his Lusts to the greatest Degree of Mortification; but Sin will be with him in the best of his Performances: With him, I say, to pollute and defile his Duties, and to make his Righteousness speckled and spotted, filthy and menstruous.

I will give you two or three Instances for this.

1. Nehemiah was a Man (in his Day) one that was zealous, very zealous for God, for his House, for his People, and for his Ways; and so continued, and that from first to last, as they may see that please to read the Relation of his Actions; yet when he comes seriously to be concerned with God about his Duties, he relinquisheth a Standing by them. True, he mentioneth them to God, but confesseth that there is Imperfections in them, and prayeth that God will not wipe them away: Wipe not out my good deeds, O my God, that I have done for the House of my God, and for the Offices thereof. And again, Remember me, O my God, concerning this also (another good Deed) and spare me according to the greatness of thy Mercies; and remember me, O my God, for good, Neh. 13.

I do not think that by these Prayers he pleadeth for an Acceptation of his Person, as touching Justification from the Curse of the Law, (as the poor blind Pharisee doth) but that God would accept of his Service, as he was a Son, and not deny to give him a Reward of Grace for what he had done, since he was pleased to declare in his Testament, that he would reward the Labour of Love of his Saints with an exceeding Weight of Glory; and therefore prayeth, that God would not wipe away his good Deeds, but remember him for good, according to the greatness of his Mercy.

2. A second Instance is that of David, where he saith, Enter not into Judgment with thy Servant, O Lord; for in thy Sight shall no Man living be justified, Psal. 143. 2. David, as I also have hinted before, is said to be a Man after God's own Heart, Acts 13. and as here by the Spirit he acknowledges him for his Servant; yet behold how he shrinketh, how he draweth back, how he prayeth, and petitioneth, that God would vouchsafe so much as not to enter into Judgment with him. Lord, saith he, if thou enterest into Judgment with me, I die, because I shall be condemned; for in thy Sight I cannot be justified; to wit, by my own good Deeds. Lord, at the beginning of thy dealing with me, by the Law and my Works I die, therefore do not so much as enter into Judgment with me, O Lord. Nor is this my Case only, but it is the Condition of all the World: For in thy Sight shall no Man living be justified.

3. A third Instance is, that general Conclusion of the Apostle, But that no Man is justified by the Law in the Sight of God, is evident; for the just shall live by Faith. By this saying of St. Paul, as he taketh up the Sentence of the Prophet Habakkuk, Chap. 2. 4. so he taketh up this Sentence, yea, and the personal Justice of David also. No Man, saith he, is justified by the Law in the Sight of God; no, no just Man, no holy Man, not the strictest and most righteous Man. But why not? why? Because the Just shall live by Faith.

The just Man therefore must die, if he has not Faith in another Righteousness, than that which is of the Law, called his own: I say, he must die, if he has none other Righteousness than that, which is his own by the Law. Thus also Paul confesses of himself: I, saith he, know nothing by my self, either before Conversion or after; that is, I knew not, that I did any thing before Conversion, either against the Law, or against my Conscience; for I was then touching the Righteousness, which is of the Law blameless. Also, since my Conversion, I know nothing by my self; for I have walked in all good Conscience before God unto this Day.

A great saying, I promise you. Well, but yet, I am not hereby justified, Philip 3. 7. Acts 23. 1. 1 Cor. 4. 4. Nor will I dare to venture the eternal Salvation of my Soul upon mine own Justice, for he that judgeth me, is the Lord. That is, though I, through my dimightedness, cannot see the Imperfections of my Righteousness; yet the Lord, who is my Judge, and before whose Tribunal I must shortly stand, can and will; and if in his Sight there shall be found no more but one Spot in my Righteousness, I must, if I plead my Righteousness, fall for that.

Secondly, That the best of Men are afraid to stand before God's Tribunal, there to be judged by the Law as to Life and Death, according to the Sufficiency or Non-sufficiency of their Righteousness is evident, because by casting away their own
(in

(in this matter) they make all the means they can for this; that is, that his Mercy, by an Act of Grace, be made over to them, and that they in it may stand before God to be judged.

Hence David cries out so often, Lead me in thy Righteousness. Deliver me in thy Righteousness. Judge me according to thy Righteousness. Quicken me in thy Righteousness. O Lord, says he, give Ear to my Supplications: In thy Faithfulness answer me, and in thy Righteousness. And enter not in to Judgment with thy Servant, O Lord: For in thy Sight shall no Man living be justified. And David, What if God doth thus? Why then saith he, My Tongue shall speak of his Righteousness. My Tongue shall sing of thy Righteousness. My Mouth shall shew forth thy Righteousness. Yea, I will make mention of thy Righteousness, even of thine only, Psal. 58. Psal. 31. 1. Psal. 35. 24. Psal. 119. 40. Psal. 35. 28. Psal. 51. 14. Psal. 71. 15, 16.

Daniel also, when he comes to plead for himself and his People, he first casts away his and their Righteousness, saying, For we do not present our Supplications unto thee for our Righteousness: And pleads God's Righteousness, and that he might have a Share and Interest in that, saying, O Lord, Righteousness belongeth to thee, to wit, that Righteousness, for the sake of which, Mercy and Forgiveness, and so Heaven and Happiness is extended to us.

Righteousness belongeth to thee, and is thine, as nearly as Sin, Shame, and Confusion, is ours, and belongeth to us. Read the 16, 17, verses of the 9th of Daniel. O Lord, saith he, according to all thy Righteousness, I beseech thee, let thine Anger, and thy Fury be turned away from thy City Jerusalem, thy holy Mountain; because for our Sins, and for the Iniquities of our Fathers, Jerusalem, and thy People are become a reproach to all that are about us. Now therefore, O our God, hear the Prayer of thy Servant and his Supplication, and cause thy Face to shine upon thy Sanctuary that is desolate, for the Lord's Sake. For the sake of the Lord Jesus Christ; for on him Daniel now had his Eye, and through him to the Father he made his Supplication; yea, and the Answer was according to his Prayer, to wit, that God would have Mercy on Jerusalem, and that he would in his time send the Lord, the Messiah, to bring them in everlasting Righteousness for them.

Paul also, as I have hinted before, disclaims his own Righteousness, and layeth fast hold on the Righteousness of God; seeking to be found in that, not having his own Righteousness; for he knew, that when the Rain descends, the Winds blow, and the Floods come down on all Men, but they have that Righteousness they must fall, Phil. 3.

Now the earnest Desire of the Righteous to be found in God's Righteousness, ariseth from strong Conviction of the Imperfections of their own, and the Knowledge that was given them of the Terror, that will attend Men at the Day of the fiery Trial; to wit, the Day of Judgment. For although Men can now flatter themselves into a Fool's Paradise, and persuade themselves that all shall be well with them, then, for the sake of their own silly and vain-glorious Performances; yet when the Day comes that shall burn like an Oven, and when all that have done wickedly shall be as Stubble, (and so will all appear to be that are not found in Christ) then will their Righteousness vanish like Smoak, or be like Fuel for that burning Flame. And hence the Righteousness that the godly seek to be found in, is called the Name of the Lord, a strong Tower, a Rock, a Shield, a Fortress, a Buckler, a Rock of Defence, unto which they resort, and into which they run and are safe.

The godly therefore do not as this Pharisee, bring their own Righteousness into the Temple, and there buoy up themselves and Spirits by that into a Conceit, that for the sake of that, God will be merciful and good unto them: But throwing away their own, they make to God for his, because they certainly know, even by the Word of God, that in the Judgment none can stand the Trial, but those that are found in the Righteousness of God.

Thirdly, That the best of Men are afraid to stand before God's Tribunal by the Law, there to be judged to Life and Death, according to the sufficiency or non-sufficiency of their Righteousness, is evident: for they know, that it is a vain thing to seek by Acts of Righteousness to make themselves righteous Men, as is the way of all them that seek to be justified by the Deeds of the Law.

And herein lieth the great Difference between the Pharisee and the true Christian Man. The Pharisee thinks, by Acts of Righteousness he shall make himself a righteous Man, therefore he cometh into the Presence of God well furnished, as he thinks, with his Negative and Positive Righteousness.

Grace suffereth not a Man to boast it before God, whatever he saith before Men: His Soul that is lifted up, is not upright in him: And better is the poor in Spirit, than the proud in Spirit. The Pharisee was a very proud Man, a proud, ignorant Man, proud of his own Righteousness, and ignorant of God's: For had he not, he could not, as he did, have so condemned the Publican, and justified himself.

And I say again, that all this pride and vain-glorious shew of the Pharisee, did arise from his not being acquainted with this; that a Man must be good before he can do Good; he must be righteous, before he can do Righteousness. This is evident from Paul, who insinuateth this as the Reason,

Reason, why none do Good, even because, There is none that is righteous, no, not one. There is none righteous, saith he; and then follows, There is none that doth good, Rom. 3. 10, 11, 12. For it is not possible for a Man, that is not first made righteous by the God of Heaven, to do any thing that in a Gospel-Sense may be called Righteousness. To make himself a righteous Man, by his so meddling with them, he may design; but work Righteousness, and so by such Works of Righteousness, make himself a righteous Man, he cannot.

The Righteousness of a carnal Man, is indeed by God called Righteousness; but it must be understood, as spoken in the Dialect of the World. The World indeed calls it Righteousness; and it will do no harm, if it bear that term with reference to worldly matters. Hence worldly Civilians are called good and righteous Men, and so, such as Christ, under that Notion, neither died for, nor giveth his Grace unto, Rom. 5. 7, 8. But we are not now discoursing about any other Righteousness, than that which is so accounted either in a Law, or in a Gospel-Sense; and therefore let us a little more touch upon that.

A Man then must be righteous in a Law-Sense, before he can do Acts of Righteousness, I mean that are such, in a Gospel-Sense. Hence first, you have true Gospel-Righteousness made the Fruit of a second Birth. If ye know that Christ is righteous, know ye, that every one that doth Righteousness is born of him, 1 Joh. 2. 29. Not born of him by virtue of his own righteous Actions, but born of him by virtue of Christ's mighty working with his Work upon the Soul; who afterwards from a Principle of Life, acteth and worketh Righteousness.

And he saith again, Little Children, let no Man deceive you, he that doth Righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous. Upon this Scripture, I will a little comment, for the Proof of what is urged before; namely, that a Man must be righteous in a Law-Sense, before he can do such things that may be called Acts of Righteousness in a Gospel-Sense. And for this, this Scripture, (1 Joh. 3. 7.) ministreth to us two things to be considered by us.

The first is, that he that doth Righteousness is righteous.

The Second is, that he that doth Righteousness is righteous, as Christ is righteous.

First, He that doth Righteousness; that is, Righteousness which the Gospel calleth so, is righteous; that is precedent to, or before he doth that Righteousness. For he doth not say, he shall make his Person righteous by Acts of Righteousness that he shall do; for then an evil Tree may bear good Fruit: yea, and may make it self good by doing so: But he saith, he that doth Righteousness is righteous; as he saith, he that doth Righteousness is born of him.

Vol. II.

So then, a Man must be righteous before he can do Righteousness, before he can do Righteousness in a Gospel-Sense.

Our second thing then is to enquire, with what Righteousness a Man must be righteous, before he can do that which in a Gospel-Sense is called Righteousness?

And First, I answer, He must be righteous in a Law-Sense, that is, he must be righteous in the Judgment of the Law. This is evident, because he saith, He that doth Righteousness is righteous as he is righteous. That is, in a Law-Sense; for Christ in no Sense is righteous in the Judgment of Charity only; but in his meanest Acts, if it be lawful to make such comparison, he was righteous in a Law-Sense, or in the Judgment of the Law. Now the Apostle saith, That he that doth Righteousness is righteous, as he is righteous. They are the Words of God, and therefore I cannot err in quoting of them, though I may not so fully; as I would make the Glory of them shine in speaking to them.

But what Righteousness is that, with which a Man must stand righteous in the Judgment of the Law, before he shall or can be found to do Acts of Righteousness, that by the Gospel are so called?

I answer First, It is none of his own which is of the Law, you may be sure; for he hath his Righteousness before he doth any that can be called his own. He that doth Righteousness is righteous already, precedent to, or before he doth that Righteousness; yea, he is righteous, even as he is righteous.

Secondly, It cannot be his own which is of the Gospel; that is, that which floweth from a Principle of Grace in the Soul: For he is righteous before he doth this Righteousness. He that doth Righteousness, is righteous. He doth not say he that hath done it, but he that doth it, respecting the Act while it is in doing, he is righteous. He is righteous even then, when he is a doing of the very first Act of Righteousness; but an Act, while it is in doing, cannot, until it is done, be called an Act of Righteousness; yet, saith the Text, he is righteous.

But again, if an Act, while it is in doing, cannot be called an Act of Righteousness, to be sure it cannot have such Influences as to make the Actor righteous; to make him righteous, as the Son of God is righteous, and yet the Righteousness with which this Doer is made righteous, and that before he doth Righteousness, is such; for so saith the Text, that makes him righteous as he is righteous.

Besides, it cannot be his own, which is Gospel-righteousness, flowing from a Principle of Grace in the Soul; for that in its greatest Perfection in us, while we live in this World, is accompanied with some Imperfections, to wit, our Faith, Love, and whole course of Holiness is wanting, or hath something lacking in it. They neither are apart, nor when put all together, perfect, as to the Degree, the uttermost Degree of Perfection.

But the Righteousness under Consideration, with which the Man, in that of John, is made righteous, is a perfect Righteousness, not only with respect to the Nature of it, as a Penny is as perfect Silver as a Shilling; nor yet with respect to a comparative Degree; for so a Shilling arriveth more toward the Perfection of the Number Twenty, than doth a Two-penny or a Three-penny Piece: But it is a Righteousness so perfect, that nothing can be added to it, nor can any thing be taken from it: For so implieth the Words of the Text, he is righteous, as Christ is righteous. Yea, thus righteous before, and in order to his doing of Righteousness. And in this he is like unto the Son of God, who was also righteous, before he did Acts of Righteousness referring to a Law of Commandment. Wherefore it is said, that as he is, so are we in this World. As he is or was righteous before he did Acts of Righteousness among Men by a Law, so are his righteous before they act Righteousness among Men by a Law. He that doth Righteousness is righteous, as he is righteous.

Christ was righteous, before he did Righteousness, with a two-fold Righteousness. He had a Righteousness as he was God; his Godhead was perfectly righteous; yea, it was Righteousness it self. His human Nature was perfectly righteous, it was naturally spotless and undefiled. Thus his Person was righteous, and so qualified to do that Righteousness, that because he was born of Woman, and made under the Law, he was bound by the Law to perform.

Now, as he is, so are we: Not by way of natural Righteousness, but by way of resemblance thereunto. Had Christ in order to his working of Righteousness, a two-fold Righteousness inherent in himself, the Christian, in order to his working of Righteousness, hath belonging to him a two-fold Righteousness. Did Christ's two-fold Righteousness qualify him for that work of Righteousness, that was of God designed for him to do? Why the Christian's two-fold Righteousness doth qualify him for that Work of Righteousness, that God hath ordained, that he should do and walk in this World.

But you may ask, what is that Righteousness, with which a Christian is made righteous before he doth Righteousness?

I answer, 'Tis a two-fold Righteousness.

1. It is a Righteousness put upon him.
2. It is a Righteousness put into him.

For the First, It is Righteousness put upon him, with which also he is clothed as with a Coat or Mantle, Rom. 3. 22. and this is called the Robe of Righteousness; and this is called the Garment of Salvation, Isa. 61. 10. This Righteousness is none other but the Obedience of Christ, the which he performed in the Days of his Flesh, and can properly be called no Man's Righteousness, but the Righteousness of Christ; because no Man had a hand therein, but he compleated it himself. And hence it is said, That by the Obedience of one shall many be made righteous, Rom. 5. 19. By the Obedience of one, of one Man Jesus Christ, (as you have it in Verse 15.) for he came down into the World to this very End, that is, to make a Generation righteous, not by making of them Laws, and prescribing unto them Rules: (for this was the Work of Moses, who said, And it shall be our Righteousness if we observe to do all the Commandments before the Lord our God, as he hath commanded us, Deut. 6. 25. ch. 24. 13.) Nor yet by taking away by his Grace the Imperfections of their Righteousness, and so making of that perfect by Additions of his own; but he makes them righteous by his Obedience, not in them, but for them, while he personally subjected himself to his Father's Law on our behalf, that he might have a Righteousness to bestow upon us. And hence we are said to be made righteous, while we work not; and to be justified while ungodly, (Rom. 4. 5.) which can be done by no other Righteousness than that, which is the Righteousness of Christ by Performance, the Righteousness of God by Donation, and our Righteousness by Imputation. For, I say the Person, that wrought this Righteousness for us, is Jesus Christ, the Person that giveth it to us, is the Father who hath made Christ to be unto us Righteousness; and hath given him to us for this very End, that we might be made the Righteousness of God in him, (1 Cor. 1. 40. 2 Cor. 5. 21.) And hence it is often said, One shall say, surely in the Lord have I Righteousness, and Strength. And again, In the Lord shall all the Seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory. This is the Heritage of the Servants of the Lord, and their Righteousness is of me, saith the Lord, Isa. 45. 24, 25. ch. 54. 17.

This Righteousness is that which justifieth, and which secureth the Soul from the Curse of the Law, by hiding, through its Perfection, all the Sins and Imperfections of the Soul. Hence it follows, Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the Man, unto whom God imputeth Righteousness without Works, saying, Blessed are they whose Iniquities are forgiven, whose Sin is covered. Blessed is the Man unto whom the Lord will not impute Sin, Rom. 4.

And

And this it doth, even while the Person, that by Grace is made a Partaker, is without good Works, and so ungodly. This is the Righteousness of Christ, Christ's personal Performances, which he did when he was in this World; that is that, by which the Soul, while naked, is covered, and so hid, as to its Nakedness, from the divine Sentence of the Law: I spread my Skirt over thee, and covered thy Nakedness, Ezek. 16. 4 to 9.

Now this obediential Righteousness of Christ, consisteth of two Parts. 1. In a doing of that which the Law commanded us to do. 2. In a paying that Price for the Transgression thereof, which Justice hath said, shall be required at the Hand of Man; and that is the cursed Death. In the Day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die the Death; to wit, the Death that comes by the Curse of the Law. So then, Christ having brought in that part of Obedience for us, which consisteth in a doing of such obediential Acts of Righteousness which the Law commands; he adds thereto the spilling of his Blood, to be the Price of our Redemption from that cursed Death, that by Sin we had brought upon our Bodies and Souls. And thus are the Christians perfectly righteous; they have the whole Obedience of Christ made over to them; to wit, that Obedience that standeth in doing the Law, and that Obedience that standeth in paying of a Price for our Transgressions. So then, Doth the Law call for Righteousness? Here it is. Doth the Law call for Satisfaction for our Sins? Here it is. And what can the Law say any more to the Sinner but that which is good, when he findeth in the personal Obedience of Christ for him, that which answereth to what it can command, that which it can demand of us?

Herein then standeth a Christian's Safety, not in a Bundle of Actions of his own, but in a Righteousness which cometh to him by Grace and Gift; for this Righteousness is such as comes by Gift, by the Gift of God. Hence it is called the Gift of Righteousness, the Gift by Grace, the Gift of Righteousness by Grace, which is the Righteousness of one, to wit, the Obedience of Jesus Christ, Rom. 5. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19.

And this is the Righteousness by which, he that doth Righteousness, is righteous as he is righteous; because it is the very self same Righteousness, that the Son of God hath accomplished by himself. Nor has he any other or more excellent Righteousness, of which the Law taketh notice, or that it requireth, than this: For as for the Righteousness of his Godhead, the Law is not concerned with that; for as he is such, the Law is his Creature, and Servant, and may not meddle with him.

The Righteousness also of his human Nature, the Law hath nothing to do with that; for that is the Workmanship of God, and is as good, as pure, as holy and undefiled, as is the Law it self. All then, that the Law hath to do with, is to exact complete Obedience of him that is made under it, and a due Satisfaction for the Breach thereof, the which, if it hath, then Moses is content.

Now, this is the Righteousness, with which the Christian, as to Justification, is made righteous; to wit, a Righteousness, that is neither essential to his Godhead, nor to his Manhood; but such as standeth in that glorious Person (who was such) his Obedience to the Law. Which Righteousness himself had, with reference to himself, no need of at all, for his Godhead, yea, his Manhood was perfectly righteous without it. This Righteousness therefore was there, and there only necessary, where Christ was considered as God's Servant (and our Surety) to bring to God Jacob again, and to restore the preserved of Israel. For tho' Christ was a Son, yet he became a Servant to do, not for himself, for he had no need, but for us the whole Law, and so bring in everlasting Righteousness for us.

And hence it is said, that Christ did what he did for us: He became the End of the Law for Righteousness for us; he suffered for us; he died for us; he laid down his Life for us, and he gave himself for us. The Righteousness then that Christ did fulfil, when he was in the World, was not for himself simply considered, nor for himself personally considered, for he had no need thereof; but it was for the Elect, the Members of his Body.

Christ then did not fulfil the Law for himself, for he had no need thereof. Christ again did fulfil the Law for himself, for he had need of the Righteousness thereof; he had need thereof for the covering of his Body, and the several Members thereof; for they, in a good Sense, are himself, Members of his Body, of his Flesh, and of his Bones; and he owns them as Parts of himself in many Places of the holy Scripture, Eph. 5. 30. Acts 9. 4, 5. Mat. 25. 45. ch. 10. 40. Mark 9. 37. Luke 10. 16. 1 Cor. 12. 12, 27. This Righteousness then, even the whole of what Christ did in answer to the Law, it was for his, and God hath put it upon them, and they were righteous in it, even righteous as he is righteous. And this they have before they do Acts of Righteousness.

Secondly, There is Righteousness put into them, before they act righteous things. A Righteousness, I say, put into them; or I had rather that you should call it a Principle of Righteousness; for it is a Principle of Life to Righteousness. Before Man's Conversion, there is in him a Principle of Death to Sin; but when he is converted converted to Christ, there is put in him a Principle of Righteousness, that he may bring forth Fruit unto God, Rom. 7. 4, 5, 6.

Hence they are said to be quickened, to be made alive, to be risen from Death to Life, to have the Spirit of God dwelling in them; not only to make their Souls alive, but to quicken their mortal Bodies to that which is good, Rom. 8. 11.

Here, as I hinted before, they that do Righteousness are said to be born of him, that is, antecedent to their doing of Righteousness, 1 John 2. 29. born of him, that is, made alive with new spiritual and heavenly Life. Wherefore the Exhortation to them is, Neither yield ye your Members as Instruments of Unrighteousness unto Sin; but yield your selves unto God, as those that are alive from the Dead, and your Members as Instruments of Righteousness unto God, Rom. 6. 13.

Now this Principle must also be in Men, before they can do that which is spiritual: For whatever seeming good thing any Man doth, before he has bestowed upon him this heavenly Principle from God, it is accounted nothing, it is accounted Sin and Abomination in the Sight of God; for an evil Tree cannot bring forth good Fruit: Men do not gather Grapes of Thorns; neither of a Bramble gather Figs. 'Tis not the Fruit that makes the Tree, but the Tree that makes the Fruit. A Man must be good, before he can do Good, and evil before he can do Evil.

This is that which is asserted by the Son of God himself; and it lieth so level with Reason and the Nature of Things, that it cannot be contradicted, Matth. 7. 16, 17, 18. Luke 6. 43, 44, 55. A good Man out of the good Treasure of his Heart, bringeth forth that which is good: And an evil Man out of the evil Treasure of his Heart, bringeth forth that which is evil. But notwithstanding all that can be said, it seemeth very strange to the carnal World; for they will not be otherwise persuaded, but that they be good Deeds that make good Men, and evil ones that make evil Men: And so by such dotish Apprehensions do what in them lieth to fortify their Hearts with the Mists of Darkness against the clear shining of the Word, and Conviction of the Truth.

And thus it was from the beginning: Abel's first Services to God were from this principle of Righteousness; but Cain would have been made righteous by his Deed; but his Deeds not flowing from the same Root of Goodness, as did Abel's, notwithstanding he did it with the very best he had, is yet called evil: For he wanted, I say, the Principles, to wit, of Grace and Faith, without which no Action can be counted good in a Gospel-Sense.

These two things then that Man must have that will do Righteousness. He must have put upon him the perfect Righteousness of Christ; and he must have that dwelling in him, as a Fruit of the new Birth, a Principle of Righteousness. Then indeed he is a Tree of Righteousness, and God is like to be glorified in, and by him; but this the Pharisee was utterly ignorant of, and at the remotest Distance from.

You may ask me next, But which of these are first bestowed upon the Christian, the perfect Righteousness of Christ unto Justification, or this Gospel Principle of Righteousness unto Sanctification?

Ans. The perfect Righteousness of Christ unto Justification, must first be made over to him by an Act of Grace. This is evident,

1. Because, He is justified as ungodly; that is, whilst he is ungodly: But it must not be said of them, that have this Principle of Grace in them, that they are ungodly; for they are Saints and holy. But this Righteousness, by it God justifieth the ungodly, by imputing it to them, when, and while they, as to a Principle of Grace, are graceless.

This is further manifested thus: The Person must be accepted before his Performance can; And God had respect unto Abel, and to his Offering, Gen. 4. If he had respect to Abel's Person first, yet he must have respect unto it for the sake of some Righteousness; but Abel, as yet had no Righteousness; for that he acted, after God had a respect unto his Person. And God had respect unto Abel, and to his offering; but unto Cain, and to his offering, the Lord had no respect.

The Prophet Ezekiel also shews us this; where, by the Similitude of the wretched Infant, and of the manner of God's receiving it to Mercy, he shews, how he received the Jews to favour. First, saith he, I spread my Skirt over thee, and covered thy Nakedness. There is Justification; I covered thy Nakedness: But what manner of Nakedness was it? Yes, it was then as naked as naked could be, even as naked as in the Day that it was born, chap. 16. 4 to 9. And as thus naked, it was covered, not with any thing, but with the Skirt of Christ; that is, with his robe of Righteousness, with his Obedience, that he performed of himself for that very purpose: For by the Obedience of one, many are made righteous.

2. Righteousness unto Justification must be first, because the first Duty that a Christian performeth to God, must be accepted, not for the sake of the Principle from which in the Heart it flows, nor yet for the sake of the Person that acts it; but for the sake of Christ, whose Righteousness it is, by which the Sinner stands just before God. And hence hence it is said, By Faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent Sacrifice than Cain, Heb. 11. By Faith he did it; but Faith in respect to the Righteousness that justifies: For we are justified by Faith, not by Faith as it is an acting Grace; but the Righteousness of Faith; that is, by that Righteousness that Faith embraceth, layeth hold of, and helpeth the Soul to rest, and trust to, for Justification of Life, which is the Obedience of Christ. Besides, 'tis said, by Faith he offered; Faith then, in Christ, was precedent to his Offering.

Now since Faith was in act before his Offer, and since before his Offer, he had no personal Goodness of his own, Faith must look out from home: I say, to another for Righteousness; and finding the Righteousness of Christ to be the Righteousness, which by God was designed to be performed for the Justification of a Sinner, it embraces it, and through it offereth to God a more excellent Sacrifice than Cain.

Hence it follows, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous. By which, not by his Offering, but by his Faith: For his Offering, simply as an Offering, could not have made him righteous, if he had not been righteous before; for an evil Tree cannot bring forth good Fruit. Besides, if this be granted, why had not God respect to Cain's Offering, as well as to Abel's? For, did Abel offer? so did Cain. Did Abel offer his best? so did Cain his. And if with this, we shall take notice of the Order of their Offering, Cain seemed to offer first, and so with the frankest Will, and forwardest Mind; but yet, saith the Text, The Lord had respect to Abel and to his Offering. But why to Abel? Why, because his Person was made righteous before he offered his Gift: By which he obtained Witness that he was righteous. God testifying of his Gifts, that they were good and acceptable, because they declared Abel's Acceptation of the Righteousness of Christ, through the Riches of the Grace of God.

By Faith then, Abel offered to God a more excellent Sacrifice than Cain. He shrouded himself under the Righteousness of Christ, and so, of that Righteousness, he offered to God; God also looking and finding him there (where he could not have been, as to his own Apprehension, no otherwise than by Faith) accepted of his Gift; by which Acceptation (for so you may understand it also) God testifieth that he was righteous: For God receiveth not the Gifts and Offerings of those that are not righteous, for their Sacrifices are an Abomination unto him, Prov. 21. 27.

Abel then was, I say, made righteous first, as he stood ungodly in himself; God justifieth the ungodly, Rom. 4. Now being justified, he was righteous; and being righteous, he offered his Sacrifice of Praise to God, or other Offerings which God accepted, because he believed in his Son. But this our Pharisee understandeth not.

Thirdly, Righteousness by Imputation must be first, because we are made so, to wit, by another, By the Obedience of one shall many be made righteous. Now to be made righteous, implies a Passiveness in him that is so made, and the Activity of the Work to lie in some Body else; except he had said, they had made themselves righteous; but that it doth not, nor doth the Text leave to any the least Countenance so to insinuate: Nay, it plainly affirms the contrary, for it saith, by the Obedience of one, of one Man Jesus Christ, many are made righteous; by the Righteousness of one, Rom. 5. So then, if they be made righteous by the Righteousness of one: I say, if many be made righteous by the Righteousness of one, then are they that are so, as to themselves, passive and not active, with reference unto the working out of this Righteousness. They have no hand in that; for that is the Act of one, the Righteousness of one, the Obedience of one, the Workmanship of one, even of Christ Jesus.

Again, if they are made righteous by this Righteousness, then also they are passive, as to their first Privilege by it; for they are made righteous by it, they do not make themselves righteous by it.

Imputation is also the Act of God. Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the Man, unto whom God imputeth Righteousness. The Righteousness then is a Work of Christ, his own Obedience to his Father's Law; the making of it ours is the Act of his Father, and of his infinite Grace; For of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us Wisdom and Righteousness. For (God) hath made him to be Sin for us, who knew no Sin, that we might be made the Righteousness of God in him. And both these things God shewed to our first Parents, when he acted in Grace towards them after the Fall.

There 'tis said, the Lord God made unto Adam, and unto his Wife, Coats of Skins, and clothed them, Gen. 3. 21.

Whence note,

1. That Adam and his Wife were naked both in God's Eye, and in their own, v. 10, 11.
2. That the Lord God made Coats of Skins.
3. That in his making of them, he had respect to Adam and to his Wife, that is, he made them.
4. That when he had made them, he also clothed them therewith.

They made not the Coats, nor did God bid them make them; but God did make them himself to cover their Nakedness with. Yes, when he had made them, he did not bid them put them on, but he himself did cloath them with them: For thus runs the Text; Unto Adam also, and to his Wife, did the Lord God make Coats of Skins, and clothed them. O! It was the Lord God that made this Coat, with which a poor Sinner is made righteous! And it is also the Lord God that putteth it upon us. But this our Pharisee understandeth not.

But now, if a Man is not righteous before he is made so, before the Lord God has by the Righteousness of another made him so; then whether this Righteousness comes first or last, the Man is not righteous until it cometh, and if he be not righteous until it cometh, then what Works soever are done before it comes, they are not the Works of a righteous Man, nor the Fruits of a good Tree, but of a bad. And so again, this Righteousness must first come before a Man be righteous, and before a Man does Righteousness. Make the Tree good and its Fruit will be good.

Now, since a Man must be made righteous before he can do Righteousness, 'tis manifest his Works of Righteousness does not make him righteous, no more than the Fig makes its own Tree a Fig-tree, or than the Grape doth make its own Vine a Vine. Hence those Acts of Righteousness, that Christian Men do perform, are called the Fruits of Righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ to the Glory and Praise of God, Philip 1. 11.

The Fruits of Righteousness they are by Jesus Christ, as the Fruits of the Tree are by the Tree it self; For the Truth is, that Principle of Righteousness, of which mention has been made before, and concerning which I have said, it comes in, in the second Place; it is also originally to be found for us no where but in Christ.

Hence it is said to be by Jesus Christ, and again, of his Fulness have we all received, and Grace for Grace, Joh. 1. 16. A Man must then be united to Christ first, and so being united, he partaketh of this benefit, to wit, a Principle that is supernatural, spiritual, and heavenly. Now his being united to Christ, is not of, or from himself, but of, and from the Father, who, as to this Work, is the Husbandman; even as the Twig that is grafted into the Tree, officiateth not, that is, grafteth not it self thereunto, but is grafted in by some other, it self being utterly passive as to that. Now being united unto Christ, the Soul is first made Partaker of Justification, or of justifying Righteousness, and now no longer beareth the Name of an ungodly Man, for he is made righteous by the Obedience of Christ, he being also united to Christ, partaketh of the Root and Fatness of Christ; the Root, that is, his Divine Nature; the Fatness, that is, that Fulness of Grace that is laid up in him to be communicated unto us, even as the Branch that is grafted into the Olive-tree, partaketh of the Root and Fatness of the Olive-tree. Now partaking thereof, it quickeneth, it groweth, it buddeth, and yieldeth Fruit, to the Praise and Glory of God, Rom. 11. 17.

But these things, as I have often said, the poor Pharisee was ignorant of, when so swaggeringly he, with his, God I thank thee, came into the Temple to pray; and indeed, in that which hath been said, is something of the Mystery of God's Will in his way with his Elect; and such a Mystery it is, that it lieth hid for ever to Nature and natural Men; for they think of nothing less than of this, nor of nothing more, when they think of their Souls and of Salvation, than that something must be done by themselves to reconcile them to God. Yea, if through some common Convictions their Understandings should be swayed to a consenting to that, that Justification is of Grace by Christ, and not of Works by Men; yet Conscience, Reason, and the Law of Nature, not being as yet subdued by the Power and Glory of Grace unto the Obedience of Christ, will rise up in Rebellion against this Doctrine, and will over-rule and bow down the Soul again to the Law and Works thereof for Life.

Fourthly, Righteousness by Imputation must be first, because, else Faith, which is a part, yea, a greater part, of that which is called a Principle of Grace in the Soul, will have nothing to fix it self upon, nor a motive to work by. Let this therefore be considered by those that are on the contrary side.

1. Faith, so soon as it has Being in the Soul, is like the Child that has a Being in the Mother's Lap, it must have something to feed upon, not something at a Distance, afar off, to be purchased, (I speak now as to Justification from the Curse) but something by Promise made over of Grace to the Soul; something to feed upon to support from the Fears of perishing by the Curse for Sin. Nor can it rest content with all Duties and Performances, that other Graces shall put the Soul upon; nor with any of its own Works, until it reaches and takes hold of the Righteousness of Christ. Faith is like the Dove, found no rest any where until it returned to Noah into the Ark. But this our Pharisee understandeth not.

Perhaps some may object, That from this way of reasoning it is apparent, that Sanctification is first, since the Soul may have Faith, and so a Principle of Grace in it; and yet, as yet it cannot find Christ to feed and refresh the Soul withal.

Ans. From this way of reasoning it is not at all apparent, that Sanctification, or a Principle of Grace is in the Soul, before Righteousness is imputed, and the Soul made perfectly righteous thereby. And for the clearing up of this let me propose a few Things.

1. Justifying Righteousness, to wit, the Obedi-

Obedience of that one Man Christ is imputed to the Sinner to justify him in God's Sight. For his Law calls for perfect Righteousness, and before that be come to, and put upon the poor Sinner, God cannot bestow other spiritual Blessings upon him; because by the Law he has pronounced him accursed; by the which Curse, he is also so holden, until a Righteousness shall be found upon the Sinner, that the Law, and Divine Justice can approve of, and be contented with. So then, as to the Justification of the Sinner, there must be a Righteousness for God; I say, for the Sinner, and for God. For the Sinner to be cloathed with, and for God to look upon, that he may, for the sake thereof in a Way of Justice, bless the Sinner with Forgiveness of Sins: For Forgiveness of Sins is the next thing that followeth upon the Appearance of the Sinner before God in the Righteousness of Christ, Rom. 4. 6, 7.

Now, upon this Forgiveness, follows the second Blessing. Christ hath redeemed us from the Curse of the Law, being made a Curse for us. And so, consequently, hath obtained for us the Forgiveness of Sins: For he that is delivered from the Curse, hath received Forgiveness of Sins, or rather is made Partaker thereof; now being made a Partaker thereof, the second Blessing immediately follows; to wit, the Blessing of Abraham, that is, the Promise of the Spirit through Faith, Gal. 3. 13, 14. but this our Pharisee understandeth not.

But now, although it be of absolute Necessity that imputed Righteousness be first, to the Soul; that is, that perfect Righteousness be found upon the Sinner first by God, that he may bestow other Blessings in a way of Justice.

Let God then put the Righteousness of his Son upon me; and by virtue of that, let the second Blessing of God come into me; and by virtue of that, let me be made to see my self a Sinner, and Christ's Righteousness, and my need of it, in the Doctrine of it, as it is revealed in the Scriptures of Truth. Let me then believe this Doctrine to be true, and be brought by my Belief to Repentance for my Sins, to hungering and thirsting vehemently after this Righteousness; For this is the Kingdom of God and his Righteousness. Yea, let me pray, and cry, and sigh, and groan Day and Night to the God of this Righteousness, that he will of Grace make me a Partaker: And let me thus prostrate before my God, all the time that in Wisdom he shall think fit. And in his own time he shall shew me, that I am a justified Person, a pardoned Person, a Person in whom the Spirit of God hath dwelt for some time, though I knew it not.

So then Justification before God is one thing; and Justification in mine own Eyes is another: Not that these are two Justifications, but the same Righteousness by which I stand justified before God, may be seen of God, when I am ignorant of it; yea, for the sake of it I may be received, pardoned, and accounted righteous of him; and yet I may not understand it. Yea, further, he may proceed in the way of Blessing, to bless me with additional Blessings, and yet I be ignorant of it.

So that the question is not, Do I find that I am righteous? But am I so? Doth God find me so, when he seeth that the Righteousness of his Son is upon me, being made over to me by an Act of his Grace? For I am justified freely by his Grace, through the Redemption which is in Jesus Christ, whom God hath set forth to be a Propitiation through Faith in his Blood, to declare his Righteousness for the Redemption of Sins that are past, through the Forbearance of God, Rom. 3. 24. But this our Pharisee understandeth not.

I am then made righteous first by the Righteousness of another; and because I am thus righteous, God accepteth of my Person as such, and bestoweth upon me his Grace; the which, at first, for want of Skill and Experience in the word of Righteousness, I make use of but poorly, and have need to be certified that I am made righteous, and that I have eternal Life; not by Faith first and immediately, but by the written Word which is called the Word of Faith; which Word declareth unto me (to whom Grace, and so Faith in the Seed of it is given) that I have eternal Life; and that I should with Boldness, in Peace and Joy, believe on the Son of God, Heb. 5. 13. Rom. 15. 13. 1 Job. 5. 13. But,

Again, I, in the first Acts of my Faith, when I come at Christ, do not accept of him, because, I know, I am righteous, either with imputed Righteousness, or with that which is inherent: Both these, as to my present Privilege in them, may be hidden from mine Eyes, and I only put upon taking of Encouragement to close with Christ for Life and Righteousness, as he is set forth to be a Propitiation before mine Eyes, in the Word of the Truth of the Gospel; to which Word I adhere as, or because I find, I want Peace with God in my Soul, and because I am convinced, that the means of Peace is not to be found any where but in Jesus Christ. Now, by my thus adhering to him, I find stay for my Soul, and Peace to my Conscience, because the Word doth ascertain to me, that he that believeth on him hath Remission of Sins, hath eternal Life, and shall be saved from the Wrath to come.

But alas! who knows (the many Streights, and as I may say, the Strefs of Weather, I mean) the cold Blasts of Hell, with which the poor Soul is assaulted, betwixt its receiving of Grace, and its sensible closing with Jesus Christ? None, I dare say, say, but It and its Fellows. The Heart knows its own Bitterness, and a Stranger intermedleth not with his Joy, Prov. 14. 10. No sooner doth Satan perceive what God is doing with the Soul in a way of Grace and Mercy, but he endeavoureth what he may, to make the renewing thereof bitter and wearisome Work to the Sinner. O what Mists, what Mountains, what Clouds, what Darkness, what Objections, what false Apprehensions of God, of Christ, of Grace, of the Word, and of the Soul's Condition, doth he now lay before it, and haunt it with; whereby he dejecteth, casteth down, daunteth, distresth, and almost driveth it quite into Despair. Now by the reason of these things, Faith (and all the Grace that is in the Soul) is hard put to it to come at the Promise, and by the Promise to Christ, as 'tis said; when the Tempest and great Danger of Shipwreck lay upon the Vessel in which Paul was, They had much work to come by the boat, Acts 27. 16. For Satan's Design is; if he cannot keep the Soul from Christ, to make his coming to him, and closing with him, as hard, as difficult, and troublesome, as he by his Devices can. But Faith, true justifying Faith, is a Grace, is not weary by all that Satan can do; but meditateth upon the Word, and taketh Stomach and Courage, fighteth, and crieth, and by crying and fighting, by help from Heaven, its way is made through all the Oppositions that appear so mighty, and draweth up at last to Jesus Christ, into whose Bosom it putteth the Soul, where, for the time, it sweetly resteth, after its marvellous tossings to and fro.

And besides what hath been said, let me yet illustrate this truth unto you by this familiar similitude.

Suppose a Man, a Traitor, that by the Law should die for his Sin, is yet such an one, that the King hath exceeding Kindness for; may not the King pardon this Man of his Clemency; yea, order that his Pardon should be drawn up and sealed, and so in every sense be made sure, and yet, for the present, keep all this close enough from the Ears, or the Knowledge of the Person therein concerned. Yea, may not the King after all leave this Person, with others under the same Transgression, to sue for, and obtain this Pardon with great Expence and Difficulty, with many Tears and Heart-akings, with many Fears and dubious Cogitations.

Why this is the Case between God and the Soul that he saveth; he saveth him, pardoneth him, and secureth him from the Curse and Death that is due unto Sin, but yet doth not tell him so, but ascends in his great suit unto God for it. Only this Difference we must make between God and the Potentates of this World: God cannot pardon before the Sinner stands before him righteous by the Righteousness of Christ; because he has in Judgment, and Justice, the Righteousness threatned and concluded, that he that wants Righteousness shall die.

And I say again, because this Righteousness is God's, and at God's Disposal only; 'tis God that must make a Man righteous before he can forgive him his Sins, or bestow upon him of his secondary Blessings; to wit, his Spirit, and the Graces thereof. And I say again, it must be this Righteousness, for it can be no other, that justifies a Sinner from Sin in the Sight of God, and from the Sentence of the Law.

Secondly, This is, and must be the Way of God with the Sinner, that Faith may not only have an Object to work upon, but a Motive to work by.

1st, Here, as I said, Faith hath an Object to work upon, and that in the Person of Christ, and that personal Righteousness of his, which he in the Days of his Flesh did finish to justify Sinners withal. This is, I say, the Object of Faith for Justification, whereunto the Soul by it doth continually resort. Hence David said to Christ, Be thou my strong Habitation; or as you have it in the Margin, Be thou to me a Rock of Habitation whereunto I may continually resort, Psal. 71. 3. And two Things he infers by so saying.

The First is, That the Christian is a Man under continual Exercises, sometimes one way, and sometimes another; but all his Exercises have a Tendency in them more or less to spoil him; therefore he is rather for flying to Christ, than for grappling with them in and by his own Power.

The Second is, that Christ is of God, our Shelter as to this very Thing. Hence his Name is said to be a strong Tower, and that the Righteous run into it, and are safe, Prov. 18. 10. That also of David in the sixty first Psalm, is very pregnant to this Purpose; Mine Enemies, saith he, would daily swallow me up, for they be many that fight against me, O thou most high. And what then; Why, saith he, I will trust in thee. Thus you see, Faith hath an Object to work upon to carry the Soul unto, and to secure the Soul in times of Difficulty, and that Object is Jesus Christ and his Righteousness. But,

2^{dly}, Again, as Faith hath an Object to work upon, so it hath a Motive to work by; and that is the Love of God in giving of Christ to the Soul for Righteousness. Nor is there any Profession, Religion, or Duty and Performance, that is at all regarded, where this Faith, which by such means can work, is wanting. For in Jesus Christ, neither Circumcision availeth any thing, nor Uncircumcision, but Faith which worketh by Love. So Gal. 5. 6. acteth lovely, or by Faith, whose Fruit is Love, (though true Faith hath Love for its Offspring) but Faith

Faith which worketh by Love; that is true saving justifying Faith, as it beholdeth the Righteousness of Christ, as made over to the Soul for Justification, so it beholdeth Love, Love to be the cause of its so being made over. It beholdeth Love in the Father, in giving of his Son; and Love in the Son, in giving of himself to be made soul-saving Righteousness for me. And seeing, it worketh by it; that is, it is stirred up to an holy Boldness of venturing all eternal Concerns upon Christ, and also to an holy endeared, affecting Love of him for his sweet and blessed redeeming Love. Hence the Apostle saith, The love of Christ constraineth us that we thus judge, that if one died for all, then are all dead; and that he died for all, that they that live, should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him that died for them and rose again, 2 Cor. 5. 14.

Thus then is the Heart united in Affection and Love to the Father and the Son, for the Love that they have shewed to the poor Sinner, in their thus delivering him from the Wrath to come. For by this Love Faith worketh, in sweet Passions and Pangs of Love, to all that are thus reconciled, as this Sinner seeth he is. The Motive then, whereby Faith worketh, both as to Justification, and Sanctification, the great Motive to them, I say, is Love, the Love of God, and the Love of Christ: We love him because he first loved us. That is, when our Faith hath told us so; for so are the Words above, We have known and believed the Love that God hath to us. And then, We love him because he first loved us. And then, This Commandment have we from him, that he that loveth God, loveth his Brother also, 1 John 4. 16 to 22. But this our poor Pharisee understandeth not. But,

Fifthly, Righteousness by Imputation must be first, to cut off boasting from the heart, conceit and lips of Men. Wherefore he saith as before, That we are justified freely by the Grace of God, not through, or for the sake of an holy Gospel-Principle in us; but thorough the Redemption that is in Jesus Christ, &c. Where is boasting then? It is excluded. By what Law? of Works: nay but by the Law of Faith. And this is the Law of Faith that we are justified as before, Rom. 4. 24, 25.

Nor can any Man propound such an essential way to cut off boasting as this, which is of God's providing: For what has Man here to boast of? No Righteousness, nor yet of the Application of it to his Soul. The Righteousness is Christ's, not the Sinner's. The Imputation is God's, not the Sinner's. The Cause of Imputation is God's Grace and Love, not the Sinner's Works of Righteousness. The time of God's imputing Righteousness, is when the Sinner was a Sinner, wrapped up in Ignorance, and wallowing in his Vanity; not when he was good, or when he was seeking of it; for his inward Gospel-goodness is a Fruit of the Imputation of justifying Righteousness. Where is boasting then? Where is our Pharisee then, with his Brags of not being as other Men are? It is excluded, and he with it, and the poor Publican taken into favour, that boasting might be cut off. Nor of Works, lest any Man should boast. There is no Trust to be put in Men, those that seem most humble, and that to appearance, and farthest off from Pride, 'tis natural to them to boast; yea, now they have no cause to boast: For by Grace are we saved through Faith, and that not of our selves, it is the Gift of God. Not of Works, lest any Man should boast.

But if Man is so prone to boast, when yet there is no ground of boasting in him, nor yet in what he doth, how would he have boasted, had he been permitted by the God of Heaven to have done something, though that something had been but a very little something towards his Justification. But God has prevented boasting by doing as he has done, Eph. 2. 8, 9. Nay, the Apostle addeth further, (lest any Man should boast) that as to good Works, we are God's Workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good Works, which God hath before ordained, that we should walk in them, ver. 10. Can the Tree boast, since 'twas God that made it such: Where is boasting then? But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us Wisdom, and Righteousness, and Sanctification, and Redemption; that according as it is written, he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord, 1 Cor. 1. 30, 31. Where is boasting then? Where is our Pharisee then, with all his Works of Righteousness, and with his boasts of being better than his Neighbours?

It may be said, If we should be justified for the sake of our inherent Righteousness, since that Righteousness is the Gift of God, will it not follow that boasting is in the occasion thereof, cut off.

Ans. No, for although the Principle of inherent Righteousness be the Gift of God, yet it bringeth forth Fruits by Man, and through Man, and so Man having a hand therein, though he should have never so little, he has an occasion offered him to boast. Yea, if a Man should be justified before God by the Grace, or the working of the Grace of Faith in him, he would have ground of occasion to boast, because Faith, though it be the Gift of God, yet as it acteth in Man, takes Man along with it in its so acting; yea, the acting of Faith is as often attributed to the Man by whom it is acted, and oftner, than to the Grace it self; How then can it be, but that Man must have a hand therein, and so a ground therein, or thereof to boast.

But now ! since Justification from the Curse of the Law before God, lieth only and wholly in God's imputing of Christ's Righteousness to a Man, and that too, while the Man to whom it is imputed, is in himself wicked and ungodly, there is no room left for boasting before God, for that is the boasting intended; but rather an occasion given to Shame and Confusion of Face, and to stop the Mouth for ever, since Justification comes in a way so far above him, so vastly without him, his Skill, Help, or what else soever, Ezek. 16. 61, 62, 63.

Sixthly, Righteousness by Imputation must be first, that Justification may not be of Debt, but Mercy and Grace. This is evident from reason: It is meet, that God should therefore justify us by a Righteousness of his own, not of his own prescribing, for that he may do, and yet the Righteousness be ours; but of his own providing, that the Righteousness may be his. Now to him that worketh, is the Reward not reckoned of Grace but of Debt, Rom. 4. 2, 3, 4. If I work for justifying Righteousness, and that way get Righteousness, my Justification is not of Grace but of Debt, God giveth it not unto me, but he oweth it unto me; so then 'tis no longer his but mine: Mine not of Grace, but Debt: And if so then, I thank him not for his Remission of Sins, nor for the Kingdom of Heaven, nor for eternal Life, for it justifying Righteousness is of Debt, then when I have it, and what dependeth thereon, I have but mine own, that which God oweth to me.

Nor will it help at all to say, but I obtain it by God's Grace in me, because that doth not cut off my Work, nor prevent my having of an hand in my justifying Righteousness.

Suppose I give a Man Materials, even all Materials that are necessary to the completing of such or such a thing; yet if he worketh, though the Materials be mine, I am to him a Debtor, and he deserveth a Reward. Thou saist, God has given thee his Spirit, his Grace, and all other things that are necessary for the working up of a compleat Righteousness. Well, but is thy Work required to the finishing of this Righteousness? If so, this is not the Righteousness that justifieth, because 'tis such as has thy Hand, thy Workmanship therein, and so obtains a Reward. And observe it, Righteousness, justifying Righteousness, consisteth not in a Principle of Righteousness, but in Works of Righteousness; that is, in good Duties, in Obedience, in a walking in the Law to the pleasing of the Law, and the Content of the Justice of God.

I suppose again, that thou shalt conclude with me, that justifying Righteousness, I mean that which justifies from the Curse of the Law, resideth only in the Obedience of the Son of God; and that the Principle of Grace that is in thee, is none of that Righteousness, no, not then when thou hast to the utmost walked with God according to thy Gift and Grace: Yet if thou concludest that this Principle must be in thee, and these Works done by thee, before this justifying Righteousness is imputed to thee for Justification, thou layest in a Caveat against Justification by Grace; and also concludest, that though thou art not justified by thy Righteousness, but by Christ, yet thou art justified by Christ's Righteousness, for the sake of thine own, and so makest Justification to be still a Debt. But here the Scripture doth also cut thee off: Not for thy Righteousness, or for the Righteousness of thine Heart dost thou possess the Land; (which was but a Type of Heaven) and if our Righteousness cannot give us by its Excellency a Share in the Type, be sure, that for it, we shall never be Sharers in the Anti-type it self. Understand therefore, that the Lord thy God giveth thee not this good Land to possess it, for thy Righteousness; for thou art a stiff-necked People, Deut. 9. 5, 6.

Gospel-performances therefore are not first; that was first, for the sake of which, God did receive these People into favour with himself, and that was a Covenant Righteousness; and where could that Covenant Righteousness be found but in the Prince, Mediator, and High Priest of the Covenant? For 'twas he, and he only that was appointed of God, nor could any but himself bring in everlasting Righteousness, Dan. 9. 24, 25. This is evident from these Texts last mentioned; it was not for their Righteousness, that they possessed the Land.

Again, as it was not for their Righteousness, that they were made Possessors of the Land, so it was not for the sake of their Righteousness, that they were made Partakers of such a Righteousness that did make them possess the Land. This is plain to Reason; for personal Righteousness, when by us performed, is of no worth to obtain of God a justifying Righteousness. But if it be of no worth to obtain a justifying Righteousness, then it seems, it is more commodious to both Parties than justifying Righteousness. First, it is more commodious to him that worketh it, and Secondly, it is more commodious unto him that receiveth it, else why doth he for it give us a due Debt, and so put upon us the everlasting justifying Righteousness.

Perhaps it will be objected, that God doth all this of Grace; but I answer, that these are but fallacious Words, spake by the Tongue of the crafty. For we are not now discoursing of what Rewards God can give to the Operations of his own Grace in us, but whether he can in a way of Justice, (or (or how he will) bestow any spiritual Blessing upon sinful Creatures, against whom, for Sin, he has pronounced the Curse of the Law, before he hath found them in a Righteousness, that is proved to be as good Justice and Righteousness, as is the Justice and Righteousness of the Law, with whom we have to do.

I assert he cannot, because he cannot lie, because he cannot deny himself: For if he should first threaten the Transgression of the Law with Death, and yet afterwards receive the Transgressor to Grace, without a plenary Satisfaction, what is this but to lie, and to diminish his Truth, Righteousness, and Faithfulness: yea, and also to overthrow the Sanction and perfect Holiness of his Law. His Mercy therefore must act so towards this Sinner, that Justice may be satisfied, and that can never be, without a justifying Righteousness.

Now what this justifying Righteousness should be, and when imputed, that's the Question. I say, 'tis the Righteousness or the Obedience of the Son of God in the Flesh, which he assumed, and so his own, and the Righteousness of no body else otherwise than by Imputation.

I say again, that this Righteousness must be imputed first, that the Sinner may stand just in God's Sight from the Curse, that God might deal with him both in a way of Justice as well as Mercy, and yet do the Sinner no harm.

But you may ask, How did God deal with Sinners before his Righteousness was actually in being?

I answer, He did then deal with Sinners even as he dealeth with them now; he justified them by it, by virtue of the Suretiship of him that was to bring it in. Christ became Surety for us, and by his Suretiship laid himself under an Obligation for those for whom he became a Surety, to bring in this everlasting and justifying Righteousness, and by virtue of this those of his Elect, that came into and went out of the World, before he came to perform his Work, were saved through the forbearance of God. Wherefore, before the Lord came they were saved for the Lord's sake, and for the sake of his Name. And they that were spiritually wise understood it, and pleaded it as their Necessities required, and the Lord accepted them, Heb. 7. 22. Rom. 4. 24. Dan. 9. 17. Psal. 25. 11.

Seventhly, Righteousness by Imputation must be first: That Justification may be certain; therefore it is of Faith, (of the Righteousness that Faith layeth hold on) that it might be by Grace, to the End the Promise might be free to all the Seed, Rom. 4. 16. That the Promise, What Promise? The Promise of Remission of Sins, &c. might be sure.

Now a Promise of Remission of Sins supposeth a Righteousness, going before; for there is no Forgiveness of Sins, nor Promise of Forgiveness, not for the sake of Righteousness that shall be by us, but that already found in Christ as Head, and so imputed to the Elect for their Remission. God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you, Eph. 4. 32. and 5. 1. For Christ's sake; that is, for the sake of the Righteousness of Christ. Imputed Righteousness must be first; yea, it must be before Forgiveness, and Forgiveness is extended by God, then when we lie in our Blood, though to us 'tis manifested afterwards. Therefore it is of Faith, he saith not by it, respecting the Act of Faith; but of, respecting the Doctrine or Word which presenteth me with this blessed imputed Righteousness; They that are of Faith, are the Children of faithful Abraham. They that are of the Doctrine of Faith, for all the Elect are the Sons of that Doctrine in which is this Righteousness of Christ contained; yea, they are begotten by it of God to this Inheritance, to their comfortable Enjoyment of the Comfort of it by Faith.

That the Promise might be sure to all the Seed, to all them wrapped up in the Promise, and so begotten and born. That it might be sure, implying that there is no certain way of Salvation for the Elect but this, because God can never by other means reconcile us to himself; for his heavenly Eyes perceive, yea, they spy Faults in the best of our Gospel-performances. Yea, our Faith is faulty, and also imperfect, how then should Remission be extended to us for the sake of that? But now the Righteousness of Christ is perfect, perpetual and stable as the great Mountains, wherefore he is called the Rock of our Salvation, because a Man may as soon tumble the Mountains before him, as Sin can make invalid the Righteousness of Christ, when, and unto whom, God shall impute it for Justice, Psal. 36. In the Margin it is said to be like the Mountain of God; to wit, called Mount Zion, or that Moriah on which the Temple was built, and upon which it stood: All other Bottoms are fickle, all other Righteousnesses are so feeble, short, narrow, yea, so full of Imperfections; For what the Law could not do in that it was weak through the Flesh, Christ did for us in the Similitude of sinful Flesh. But what could not the Law do? Why it could not give us Righteousness, nor strengthen us to perform it. It could not give us any certain, solid, well-grounded Hope of Remission of Sin and Salvation.

Wherefore this Righteousness being imputed, Justice findeth no Fault therewith, but consenteth to the extending to the Sinner those Blessings that tend to perfect his Happiness in the Heavens.

Eighthly, Righteousness by Imputation must be first, That in all things Christ might have the Prebeminence. Christ is Head

Head of the Church, and therefore let him have the highest Honour in the Soul; but how can he have that, if any preceed as to Justification, before his perfect Righteousness be imputed? if it be said, Grace may be in the Soul, though the Soul doth not act it, 'till the Moment that justifying Righteousness shall be imputed.

I ask, What should it do there before, or to what purpose is it there, if it be not acted? And again, how came it thither, how got the Soul Possession of it, while it was unjustified? Or, How could God in Justice give it to a Person, that by the Law stood condemned, before they were quitted from that Condemnation? And I say, nothing can set the Soul free from that Curse, but the perfect Obedience of Christ; nor that either, if it be not imputed for that end to the Sinner by the Grace of God.

Imputed, that is, reckoned, or accounted to him: And why should it not be accounted to him for Righteousness? What did Christ bring it into the World for, for the Righteous, or for Sinners? no doubt for Sinners. And how must it be reckoned to them? not in Circumcision, but in Uncircumcision; not as Righteous, but as Sinners. And how are they to consider of themselves, even then when they first are apprehensive of their need of this Righteousness? Are they to think, that they are righteous or Sinners?

And again, How are they to believe concerning themselves, then when they put forth the first Act of Faith towards this Righteousness for Justification? Are they to think, that they are righteous or Sinners? Sinners, doubtless they are to reckon themselves, and as such to reckon themselves justified by this Righteousness. And this is according to the Sentence of God, as appeareth by such Sayings.

For when we were yet without Strength in due time Christ died for the Ungodly.

But God commended his Love towards us, in that while we were yet Sinners Christ died for us.

For if while we were Enemies we were reconciled to God by the Death of his Son, &c. Rom. 5.

Out of these Words I gather these three Things.

1. That Christ by God's Appointment died for us.

2. That by his Death he reconciled us to God.

3. That even then, when the very Act of Reconciliation was in performing, and also when performed, we were ungodly, Sinners, Enemies.

Now the Act, by which we are said to be reconciled to God while ungodly, while Sinners, and while Enemies, was Christ's offering himself a Sacrifice for us, which is, in the Words abovementioned, called his Death. Christ died for the ungodly, Christ died for us while Sinners. Christ reconciled us to God by his Death. And as Christ is said to die for us, so the Father is said to impute Righteousness to us; to wit, as we are without Works, as we are ungodly; Now to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his Faith is counted for Righteousness. He worketh not, but is ungodly, when this gracious Act of God, in imputing the Righteousness of Christ to him, is extended, when he shall believe, his Faith is counted to him for Righteousness. And why should we not have the benefit of the Righteousness, since 'twas compleated for us while we were yet ungodly? yea, we have the Benefit of it; For when we were Enemies, we were reconciled to God by the Death of his Son.

When I say, the Benefit, I mean that Benefit that we are capable of, and that is Justification before God; for that a Man may be capable of while he is in himself ungodly, because this comes to him by the Righteousness of another. True, was it to be his own Righteousness by which he was to be justified, he could not. But the Righteousness is Christ's, and that imputed by God, not as a reward for Work, or of Debt, but freely by his Grace, and therefore may be, and is so, while the Person concerned is without Works, ungodly, and a Sinner.

And he that denieth, that we are capable of this Benefit while we are Sinners and ungodly, may with the like reason deny that we are created Beings: For that, which is done for a Man without him, may be done for him, at any time which they that do it shall appoint. While a Man is a Beggar, may not I make him worth ten thousand a Year, if I can and will; and yet he may not know thereof in that Moment that I make him so? yet the Revenue of that Estate shall really be his from the Moment that I make him so, and he shall know it too at the rent-day.

This is the Case, we are Sinners and ungodly; there is a Righteousness wrought out by Jesus Christ, which God hath designed we shall be made righteous by; and by it, if he will impute it to us, we shall be righteous in his Sight, even then when we are yet ungodly in our selves; for he justifies the ungodly.

Now though it is irregular and blameworthy in Man to justify the wicked, because he cannot provide, and cloath him with a justifying Righteousness; yet it is glorious and for ever worthy of Praise for God to do it; because it is in his Power, not only to forgive, but to make a Man righteous, even then when he is a Sinner, and to justify him, while he is ungodly.

But it may be yet objected, That though God has received Satisfaction for Sin, and so so sufficient Terms of Reconciliation by the Obedience and Death of his Son, yet he imputeth it not unto us but upon Condition of our becoming good.

Ans. This must not be admitted: For,

First, The Scripture saith not so; but that we are reconciled to God by the Death of his Son, and justified too, and that while, or when we are Sinners and ungodly.

Secondly, If this Objection carrieth Truth in it, then it follows, that the Holy Ghost, Faith, and so all Grace, may be given to us, and we may have in dwelling in us, yea, acting in us, before we stand righteous in the Judgment of the Law before God, (for nothing can make us stand just before God in the Judgment of the Law, but the Obedience of the Son of God without us.) And if the Holy Ghost, Faith, and so consequently the Habit of every Grace, may be in us, acting in us, before Christ's Righteousness be by God imputed to us, then we are not justified as Sinners and ungodly; but as Persons inherently holy and righteous before.

But I have shewed you, that this cannot be, therefore Righteousness for Justification must be imputed first. And here let me present the Reader with two or three Things.

First, That Justification before God is one Thing; and Justification to the Understanding and Conscience is another. Now, I am treating of Justification before God, not of it as to Man's Understanding and Conscience: And I say, a Man may be justified before God, even then when himself knoweth nothing thereof, Isa. 40. 2. Mat. 9. 2. and while he hath not Faith about it, but is ungodly.

Secondly, There is a Justification by Faith, by Faith's applying of that Righteousness to the Understanding and Conscience, which God hath of his Grace imputed for Righteousness to the Soul for Justification in his Sight. And this is that by which we, as to Sense and Feeling, have Peace with God: Being justified by Faith we have Peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, Rom. 5. 1. And these two the Apostle keepeth distinct in the tenth Verse, that while we were Enemies we were reconciled to God by the Death of his Son: He addeth, And not only so, but we joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the Atonement, ver. 11. Here you see that to be reconciled to God by the Death of his Son is one thing; and for us actually to receive by Faith, this Reconciliation, is another. And not only so, but we have received the Atonement.

Thirdly, Men do not gather their Justification from God's single Act of imputing of Righteousness, that we might stand clear in his Sight from the Curse and Judgment of the Law; but from the Word of God which they understand not, till it is brought to their Understanding by the Light and Glory of the Holy Ghost.

We are not therefore in the Ministry of the Word to pronounce any Man justified, from a Supposition that God has imputed Righteousness to him; (since that Act is not known to us) until the Fruits that follow thereupon do break out before our Eyes; to wit, the Signs and Effects of the Holy Ghost in dwelling in our Souls. And then we may conclude it; that is, that such a one stands justified before God, yet not for the sake of his inherent Righteousness, nor yet for the Fruits thereof, and so not for the sake of the Act of Faith, but for the sake of Jesus Christ his doing and suffering for us.

Nor will it avail to object, That if at first we stand justified before God by his imputing of Christ's Righteousness unto us, though Faith be not in us to act, we may always stand justified so; and so what need of Faith? For therefore are we justified, first, by the Imputation of God, as we are ungodly, that thereby we may be made capable of receiving of the Holy Ghost, and his Graces in a way of Righteousness and Justice. Besides, God will have those that he shall justify by his Grace through the Redemption that is in Jesus Christ, to have the Holy Ghost, and so Faith, that they may know and believe the things not only that shall be, but that already are, freely given to us of God. Now, says Paul, we have received, not the Spirit of the World, but the Spirit which is of God, that we may know the things that are freely given to us of God, 1 Cor. 2. 12. To know, that is, to believe: It is given to you to believe, who believe according to the working of his mighty Power, and we have known and believed the Love that God hath to us, preceding to our believing, John 4. 16. He then that is justified by God's Imputation, shall believe by the Power of the Holy Ghost; for that must come, and work Faith, and strengthen the Soul to act it, because imputed Righteousness has gone before. He then that believeth shall be saved; for his believing is a Sign, not a Cause, of his being made Righteous before God by Imputation: And he that believeth not shall be damned.

And thus much for the Pharisee, and for his Information; and now I come to that part of the Text which remains, which respecteth the Publican.

And the Publican standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven, but smote upon his Breast, saying, God be merciful to me a Sinner.

What this Publican was, I have shewed you, both with respect to his Nation, Office, and Disposition. Wherefore I shall not here trouble the Reader as to that:

We now therefore come to his Repentance in the whole and in the Parts of it; concerning which I shall take notice of several things, some more remote, and some more near to the Matter and Life of it.

But first let us see how cross the Pharisee and the Publican did lie in the Temple one to another, while they both were presenting of their Prayers to God.

First, The Pharisee he goes in boldly, fears nothing, but trusteth in himself that his State is good, that God loves him, and that there was no doubt to be made but of his good speed in this his religious Enterprize. But alas! poor Publican, he sneaks, crawls into the Temple, and when he comes there, stands behind, a loof off, as one not worthy to approach the Divine Presence.

Secondly, The Pharisee at his approach hath his Mouth full of many fine things, whereby he stroaks himself over the Head, and in effect calls himself, one of God's white Boys, that always kept close to his Will, abode with him; or as the Prodigal's Brother said, Lo, these many Years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy Commandment, Luke 15. 29. But alas! poor Publican, thy guilt, as to these Pleas, stops thy Mouth, thou hast not one good Thing to say of thy self, not one rag of Righteousness; thy Conscience tells thee so; yea, and if thou shouldest now attempt to set a good Face on't, and for thy Credit say something after the Pharisee in way of thine own Commendations, yet here is God on the one side, the Pharisee on the other, together with thine own Heart to give thee a check, to rebuke thee, to condemn thee, and to lay thee even to the Ground for thy Insolence.

Thirdly, The Pharisee in his Approach to God, wipes his Fingers of the Publican's Enormities, will not come nigh him, lest he should defile himself with his beastly Rags: I am not as other Men are, nor yet as this Publican. But the poor Publican, alas for him, his Fingers are not clean, nor can he tell how to make them so; besides he meekly and quietly puts up this Reflection of the Pharisee upon him, and by silent Behaviour justifies the severe Sentence of that self-righteous Man, concluding with him, that for his part, he is wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked, and not worthy to come nigh, or to stand by, so good, so virtuous, so holy, and so deserving a Man as our sparkling Pharisee is.

Fourthly, The Pharisee, as at Feasts and Synagogues, chose the chief and first place for his Person, and for his Prayer, counting that the Publican was not meet, ought not to presume to let his stinking Breath once come out of his polluted Lips in the Temple, till he had made his holy Prayer. And poor Publican, how dost thou hear and put up this with all other Affronts, counting even as the Pharisee counted of thee, that thou wast but a Dog in comparison of him, and therefore not fit to go before, but to come, as in Chains, behind, and forbear to present thy mournful Supplication to the holy God, till he had presented his, in his own conceit, brave, gay, and fine Oration.

Fifthly, The Pharisee, as he is numerous in his repeating his good Deeds, so is stiff in standing to them, bearing up himself, that he hath now sufficient Foundation on which to bear up his Soul against all the Attempts of the Law, the Devil, Sin, and Hell. But alas, poor Publican! Thou standest naked; nay, worse than naked; for thou art cloathed with filthy Garments, thy Sins cover thy Face with Shame: Nor hast thou in, or of thy self, any Defence from, or shelter against the Attempts, Assaults, and Censures of thy ghostly Enemies, but art now in thine own Eyes (though in the Temple) cast forth into the open Field stark naked, to the loathing of thy Person, as in the Day that thou wast born, and there ready to be devoured and torn in pieces for thy Transgressions against thy God.

What wilt thou do Publican! What wilt thou do! Come, let's see, which way wilt thou begin to address thy self to God; bethink thy self, hast thou any thing to say, speak out Man, the Pharisee by this time has done and received his Sentence, Make an O Yes; let all the World be silent; yea, let the Angels of Heaven draw near and listen; for the Publican is come to have to do with God! Yea, is come from the Receipt of Custom into the Temple to pray to him.

And the Publican standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven; but smote upon his Breast, saying, God be merciful to me a Sinner. And is this thy way, poor Publican? O cunning Sinner! O crafty Publican! thy Wisdom has outdone the Pharisee, for it is better to apply our selves to God's Mercy, than to trust to our selves that we are righteous. But that the Publican did hit the Mark, yea, get nearer unto, and more in the Heart of God and his Son than the Pharisee, the Sequel will make manifest.

Take notice then of this profound Speech of the Publican, God be merciful to me a Sinner. Yea, the Son of God was so delighted with this Prayer, that for the sake of it, he, even as a Limner, draweth out the Publican in his manner of Standing, Behaviour, Gestures, &c. while he makes this Prayer to God: Wherefore we will take notice both of the one and of the other; for surely his Gestures put Lustre into his Prayer and Repentance.

1. His Prayer you see is this, God be merciful to me a Sinner.

His Gestures in his Prayer were in general three.

1. He stood afar off.

2. He

2. He would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven.

3. He smote upon his Breast, with his Fist, saying, God be merciful to me a Sinner.

To begin first with his Prayer. In this Prayer we have two things to consider of.

1. His Confession. I am a Sinner.

2. His imploring of Help against this Malady. God be merciful to me a Sinner.

In his Confession divers Things are to be taken notice of. As,

First, The Fairness and Simplicity of his Confession. A Sinner; I am a Sinner; God be merciful to me a Sinner. This indeed he was, and this indeed confesses; and this, I say, he doth of godly Simplicity. For, a Man to confess himself a Sinner, it is to speak all against himself that can be spoken. And Man, as degenerate, is too much an Hypocrite, and too much a Self-flatterer, thus to confess against himself, unless made simple and honest through the Power of Conviction upon his Heart. And it is worth your noting, that he doth not say he was, or had been, but that at that Time his State was such, to wit, a Sinner. God be merciful to me a Sinner, or who am, and now stand before thee a Sinner, in my Sins.

Now a little to shew you what it is to be a Sinner; for every one that sinneth may not in a proper Sense be called a Sinner. Saints, the sanctified in Christ Jesus, do often sin, but it is not proper to call them Sinners: But here the Publican calls himself a Sinner; and therefore in effect, calls himself an evil Tree, one that beareth no good Fruit: One whose Body and Soul is polluted, whose Mind and Conscience is defiled: One who hath walked according to the Course of this World, and after the Spirit that now worketh in the Children of Disobedience: They having their Minds at Enmity against God, and are taken Captive by the Devil at his Will. A Sinner, one whose Trade hath been in Sin, and the Works of Satan all his Days.

Thus he waves all Pleas, and sloops his Neck immediately to the Block. Though he was a base Man, yet he might have had Pleas; Pleas, I say, as well as the Pharisee, though not so many, yet as good. He was of the Stock of Abraham, a Jew, an Israelite of the Israelites, and so a privileged Man in the Religion of the Jews, else, what doth he do in the Temple? Yea, why did not the Pharisee, if he was a Heathen, lay that to his Charge while he stood before God? But the Truth is, he could not; for the Publican was a Jew as well as the Pharisee, and consequently might, had he been so disposed, have pleaded that before God. But he would not, he could not, for his Conscience was under Convictions, the Awakenings of God were upon him; wherefore his Privileges melt away like Grease, and fly from him like the Chaff of the Summer Threshing-floor, which the Wind taketh up and scattereth as the Dust; he therefore lets all Privileges fall, and pleads only that he is a Sinner.

Secondly, In this Confession he judges and condemns himself: For a Man to say, I am a Sinner, is as much as to say, I am contrary to the Holiness of God, a Transgressor of the Law, and consequently an Object of the Curse, and an Heir of Hell. The Publican therefore goeth very far in this his Confession; for in the Third Place, to confess, that there is nothing in him, done, or can be done by him, that should allure, or prevail with God to do any thing for him. For a Sinner cannot do Good; no, not work up his Heart unto one good Thought: No, though he should have Heaven it self, if he could, or was sure to burn in Hell Fire for ever and ever if he could not. For Sin, where it is in Possession, and bears Rule, as it doth in every one that we may properly call a Sinner, there it hath the Mastery of the Man, hath bound up his Senses in Cords and Chains, and made nothing so odious to the Soul as the Things that are of the Spirit of God. Wherefore it is said of such, that they are Enemies in their Minds; that the carnal Mind is enmity to God, and that Wickedness proceedeth of the wicked; and that the Ethiopian may as well change his Skin, or the Leopard his Spots, as they that are accustomed to do evil may learn to do well, Eph. 2. Rom. 8. 1 Sam. 24. 13. Jer. 13. 23.

Fourthly, In this Confession, he implicitly acknowledgeth, that Sin is the worst of things, forasmuch as it layeth the Soul out of the reach of all Remedy that can be found under Heaven. Nothing below, or short of the Mercy of God, can deliver a poor Soul from this fearful Malady. This the Pharisee did not see. Doubtless he did conclude, that at some time or other he had sinned; but he never in all his Life did arrive to a Sight of what Sin was: His Knowledge of it was but false and counterfeit, as is manifest by his Cure; to wit, his own Righteousness. For take this for a Truth undeniable, that he that thinks himself better before God, because of his Reformation, never yet had the true Knowledge of his Sin: But the poor Publican he had it, he had it in Truth, as is manifest, because it drives him to the only sovereign Remedy. For indeed, the right Knowledge of Sin, in the Filth and Guilt, and damning Power thereof, makes a Man to understand, that not any thing but Grace and Mercy by Christ, can secure him from the hellish Ruins thereof.

Suppose a Man sick of an Apoplexy unto Death, and should for his Remedy make use only of those things that are good against the second Ague, would not this demonstrate that this Man was not sensible of the Nature and Danger of this Disease. The same may be said of every Sinner, that shall make use only of those means to justify him before God, that can hardly make him go for a good Christian before judicious Men. But the poor Publican, he knew the Nature and the Danger of his Disease; and knew also, that nothing but Mercy, infinite Mercy could cure him thereof.

of

Fifthly, This Confession of the Publican, declareth that he himself was born up now, by an Almighty, though invisible Hand. For Sin, when seen in its Colours, and when appearing in its monstrous Shape, frighteth all away from God. This is manifest by Cain, Judas, Saul, and others, who could not stand up before God under the Sense and Appearance of their Sin, but fly before him, one to one Fruit of Despair, and one to another. But now this Publican, though he apprehends his Sin, that himself was one that was a Sinner, yet he beareth up, cometh into the Temple, approaches the Presence of an holy and Sin-revenging God, stands before him, and confesses that he is that Man, that Sin had defiled, and that had brought him into the Danger of Damnation thereby.

This therefore was a mighty Act of the Publican: He went against the Voice of Conscience, against Sense and Feeling, against the Curse and condemning Verdict of the Law; he went, as I may say, upon hot burning Coals to one, that to Sin and Sinners is a consuming Fire.

Now then, did the Publican this of his own Head, or from his own Mind? No verily, there was some supernatural Power within that did secretly prompt him on, and strengthen him to this more noble Venture. True, there is nothing more common among wicked Men, than to tick and toy, and play with this Saying of the Publican, God be merciful to me a Sinner; not at all being sensible either what Sin is, or of their need of Mercy. And such Sinners shall find their Speed in the Publican's Prayer, far otherwise than the Publican sped himself; it will happen unto them much as it happened unto the Vagabond Jews, Exorcists, who took upon them to call over them that had evil Spirits, the Name of the Lord Jesus; that were beaten by that Spirit and made fly out of that House naked and wounded, Acts 19. 13. poor Sinner, thou wilt say the Publican's Prayer, and make the Publican's Confession, and say, God be merciful to me a Sinner. But hold, dost thou do it with the Publican's Heart, Sense, Dread, and Simplicity? If not, thou dost but abuse the Publican and his Prayer, and thy self, and his God; and shalt find God rejecting of thee and thy Prayers, saying, The Publican I know, his Prayers, and godly Tears I know, but who, or what art thou? And will send thee away naked.

They are the hungry that he filleth with good things, but the rich (and the senseless) he sendeth empty away.

For my part, I find it one of the hardest things that I can put my Soul upon, even to come to God, when warmly sensible that I am a Sinner, for a Share in Grace and Mercy. Oh! methinks it seems to me as if the whole Face of the Heavens were set against me. Yea, the very thought of God strikes me through, I cannot bear up, I cannot stand before him, I cannot but with a thousand Tears say, God be merciful to me a Sinner, Ezra 9. 15.

At another time, when my Heart is more hard and stupid, and when his Terror doth not make me afraid, then I can come before him, and ask Mercy at his Hand, and scarce be sensible of Sin or Grace, or that indeed I am before God: But above all, they are the rare times, when I can go to God as the Publican, sensible of his glorious Majesty, sensible of my Misery, and bear up, and affectionately cry, God be merciful to me a Sinner.

But again, the Publican by his Confession, sheweth a piece of the highest Wisdom that a mortal Man can shew; because by so doing, he engageth as well as imploreth the Grace and Mercy of God to save him. You see by the Text he imploreth it; and now I will shew you that he engageth it, and makes himself a Sharer in it.

He that hideth his Sins shall not prosper; but he that confesseth and forsaketh them shall find Mercy. And again, if we confess our Sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our Sins, and to cleanse us from all Unrighteousness, Prov. 28. 13. 1 Joh. 1. 9.

First, In the Promise of Pardon, He shall find Mercy; he shall have his Sins forgiven. As also Solomon prays, that God will forgive them that know their own sore, and they are indeed, such as are sensible of the plague of their own Heart, 2 Chron. 6. 29. 30. 1 Kings 8. 37, 38. And the reason is, because the Sinner is now driven to the farthest Point; for Confession is the farthest point, and the utmost bound unto which God has appointed the Publican to go, with reference to his Work. As it is said of Saul to David, when he was about to give him Michab his Daughter to Wife, I desire not any Dowry, but an hundred foreskins of the Philistines, to be avenged of the King's Enemies.

So says God in this Matter, I desire no Sacrifices, nor legal Righteousness to make thee acceptable to me, only acknowledge and confess thine Iniquity that thou hast transgressed against me, 1 Sam. 18. 25. Jer. 3. 12. 13. And though this by some may be thought to be a very easy way to come at, and partake of, the Mercy of God; yet let the sensible Sinner try it, and he shall find it one of the hardest things in the World.

World. And there are two things, to which Man is prone, that makes Confession hard.

First, There is a great Incidency in us to be partial, and not thorough and plain in our Confessions. We are apt to make half Confessions; to confess some, and hide some; or else to make feigned Confessions, flattering both our selves, and also God, while we make Confession unto him; or else to confess Sin as our own Fancies apprehend, and not as the Word describes them. These things we are very incident to: Men can confess little Sins, while they hide great ones. Men can feign themselves sorry for Sin, when they are not, or else in their Confessions forget to judge of Sin by the Word. Hence it is said, They turned to God, not with their whole Hearts, but as it were feignedly. They spake not aright, saying, what have I done? They flatter him with their Lips, and lie unto him with their Tongues, and do their Wickedness in the Dark, and Sin against him with a high Hand, and then come to him and cover the Altar with their Tears. These things therefore, demonstrate the Difficulty of sincere Confession of Sin; and that to do it as it should, is no such easy thing.

To right Confession of Sin, several things must go. As,

First, There must be sound Conviction for Sin upon the Spirit: For before a Man shall be convinced of the Nature, Aggravation, and evil of Sin, how shall he make godly Confession of it? Now to convince the Soul of Sin, the Law must be set home upon the Conscience by the Spirit of God; For by the Law is the Knowledge of Sin. And again, I had not known Sin unless the Law had said, Thou shalt not covet, Rom. 7. Chap. 7. This Law, now, when it effectually ministreth Conviction of Sin to the Conscience, doth it by putting of Life, and Strength, and Terror into Sin. By its working on the Conscience, it makes Sin revive, and the Strength of Sin is the Law, Rom. 7. 1 Cor. 15. it also increaseth and multiplieth Sin, both by the Revelation of God's Anger against the Soul; and also by mustering up, and calling to view Sins committed, and forgotten time out of Mind. Sin seen in the Glass of the Law is a terrible thing, no Man can behold it and live: When the Commandment came, Sin revived, and I died; when it came from God to my Conscience, as managed by an Almighty Arm, then it slew me. And now is the time to confess Sin, because now a Soul knows what it is, and sees what it is, both in the Nature and Consequence of it.

Secondly, To a right Confession of Sin, there must be sound Knowledge of God, especially as to his Justice, Holiness, Righteousness, and Purity; wherefore the Publican here begins his Confession by calling upon, or by the Acknowledgment of his Majesty: God be merciful to me a Sinner; as if he should say, God, O God, O great God, O Sin-revenging God, I have sinned against thee, I have broken thy Law, I have opposed thy Holiness, thy Justice, thy Law, and thy righteous Will. O consuming Fire! (for our God is a consuming Fire) I have justly provoked thee to Wrath, and to take Vengeance of me for my Transgressions. But, alas! how few, that make Confession of Sin, have right Apprehension of God, unto whom Confession of Sin doth belong! Alas, 'tis easy for Men to entertain such Apprehensions of God, as shall please their own Humours, to bear up under the Sense of Sin, and that shall make their Confession rather facile, and fantastical, than solid and heart-breaking. The Sight and Knowledge of the great God is to sinful Man the most dreadful thing in the World; which makes Confession of Sin so rare. Most Men confess their Sins behind God's back, but few to his face; and you know there is oft-times a vast Difference in thus doing among Men.

Thirdly, To the right Confession of Sin, there must be a deep Conviction of the Terribleness of the Day of Judgment. This John the Baptist inserts, where he insinuates, that the Pharisees want of (Sense of, and) the true Confession of Sin, was because they had not been warned (or had not taken the Alarm) to flee from the Wrath to come. What Dread, Terror, or frightful Apprehension can there be, where there is no Sense of a Day of Judgment, and of our giving unto God an Account for it, Mat. 3. 7. Luke 3. 7.

I say therefore, to Confession of Sin there must be,

1. A deep Conviction of the Certainty of the Day of Judgment; namely, that such a Day is coming, that such a Day shall be. This the Apostle insinuates, where he saith, God commands all Men, every where, to repent, because he hath appointed a Day in which he will judge the World in Righteousness, by that Man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given Assurance unto all Men, in that he hath raised him from the dead, Acts 17. 30, 31.

This will give a Sense of what the Soul must expect at that Day for Sin, and so will drive to an hearty Acknowledgment of it, and strong Cries for a Deliverance from it. For thus will the Soul argue that expecteth the Judgment Day, and that believes that he must count for all. O my Heart! it is in vain now to dissemble, or to hide, or to lessen Transgressions; for there is a Judgment to come, a Day in which God will judge the Secrets of Men by his Son, and at that Day he will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will manifest the counsels of the heart. If it must be so then, to what End will it be now to seek to dissemble, 1 Cor. 4. 5. This also is in the Old Testament urged as an Argument to cause Youth, and Persons of all Sizes to recall themselves to Sobriety, and so to Confession of their Sin to God; where the Holy Ghost saith ironically, Rejoice, O young Man in thy Youth, and let thine Heart cheer thee in the Days of thy Youth, and walk in the ways of thine Heart, and in the sight of thine Eyes; but know that for all these things God will bring thee to Judgment. So again, God will bring every work to Judgment, with every secret thing, whether good, or whether evil, Eccles. 11. 9. and 12. 12. 14.

The certainty of this, I say, must go to the producing of a sincere Confession of Sin, and this is intimated by the Publican, who, with his Confession, addeth, God be merciful to me a Sinner. As if he should say, if thou art not merciful to me, thy Judgment shall swallow me up; without thy Mercy I shall not stand, but fall by the Judgment which thou hast appointed.

2. As there must be, for the producing of sincere Confession of Sin, a deep Conviction of the certainty, so of the Terribleness of the Day of Judgment. Wherefore the Apostle, to put Men on Repentance, which is sincere Confession of Sin, saith, For we must all appear before the Judgment-seat of Christ, that every one of us may receive the things done in his Body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad; knowing therefore the Terror of the Lord, we persuade Men, 2 Cor. 5. 10, 11. The Terror of the Lord, as we see here, he makes use of, to persuade Men to Confession of Sin, and Repentance to God for Mercy.

And I am persuaded, that one Reason that this Day doth so swarm with wanton Professors, is, because they have not found Conviction for, nor go to God with sincere Confession of Sin: And one Cause of that has been, that they did never seriously fall in with, nor yet sink under, either the Certainty or Terribleness of the Day of Judgment.

O! the Terrors of the Lord! the amazing Face that will be put upon all things before the Tribunal of God. Yea, the Terror that will then be read in the Face of God, of Christ, of Saints and Angels, against the ungodly; who so believes and understands it, cannot live without Confession of Sin to God, and a coming to him for Mercy.

Mountains fall upon us, and cover us, and hide us from the Face of him that sits upon the Throne, and from the Wrath of the Lamb; for the great Day of Wrath is come, and who is able to stand? This Terror is also signified where 'tis said, And I saw a great white Throne, and him that sat on it, from whose Face the (very) Earth and the Heaven fled away, and there was found no place for them. And I saw the Dead, small and great, stand before God: and the Books were opened; and another Book was opened, which is the Book of Life, and the Dead were judged out of those Things which were written in the Books according to their Works. And the Sea gave up the Dead which were in it; and Death and Hell delivered up the Dead that were in them, and they were judged every Man according to his Works. And Death and Hell were cast into the Lake of Fire; this is the second Death. And whosoever was not found written in the Book of Life was cast into the Lake of Fire, Rev. 20. Here is Terror, and this is revealed in the Word of God, that Sinners might hear and consider it, and so come and confess, and implore God's Mercy.

The Terror of the Lord, how will it appear, when he shall be revealed from Heaven with his mighty Angels in flaming Fire, taking Vengeance of them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, 2 Thess. 1. 7, 8, 9.

The Terror of the Lord, how will it appear, when his Wrath shall burn and flame out like an Oven, or a fiery Furnace before him, while the wicked stand in his Sight, Mat. 13. 50.

The Terror of the Lord, how will it appear, while the Angels at his Command shall gather the wicked to burn them! As the Tares are gathered and burned in the Fire, so shall it be in the end of the World. The Son of Man shall send forth his Angels, and they shall gather together out of his Kingdom all Things that offend, and them that do Iniquity, and shall cast them into a Furnace of Fire, where there shall be wailing and gnashing of Teeth, Mat. 13. 40, 41, 42. Who can conceive this Terror, much more unable are Men to express it with Tongue or Pen; yet the truly Penitent and Sin-confessing Publican hath Apprehension so far thereof, by the Word of the Testimony, that it driveth him to God, with a Confession of Sin for an Interest in God's Mercy. But,

Fourthly, To right and sincere Confession of Sin, there must be a Conviction of a Probability of Mercy: This also is intimated by the Publican in his Confession; God (saith he) be merciful to me a Sinner. He had some glimmerings of Mercy, some Conviction of a Probability of Mercy, or that he might obtain Mercy for his Pardon, if he went, and with unfeigned Lips did confess his Sins to God.

Despair of Mercy, shuts up the Mouth, makes the Heart hard, and drives a Man away from God; as is manifest in the Case of Adam and the fallen Angels. But the least Intimation of Mercy, if the Heart can but touch, feel, taste, or have the least Probability of it, that will open the Mouth, tend to soften the Heart, and to make a very Publican come up to God into into the Temple, and say, God be merciful to me a Sinner.

There must then be this holy Mixture of things in the Heart of a truly confessing Publican. There must be sound Sense of Sin, sound Knowledge of God: Deep Conviction of the Certainty and Terribleness of the Day of Judgment, as also of the Probability of obtaining Mercy.

But to come to that which remains; I told you that there were two Things that did make unfeigned Confession hard. The first I have touched upon.

Secondly, And now the Second follows. And that is, some private leaning to some Goodness, a Man shall conceit that he hath done before, or is doing now, or that he purposeth to prevail with God for the Pardon of Sins. This Man to be sure knows not Sin in the Nature and Evil of it, only he has some false Apprehensions about it. For where the right Knowledge of Sin is in the Heart, that Man sees so much Evil in the least Transgressions, as that it would break the Back of all the Angels of Heaven, should the great God impute it to them. And he that sees this is far enough off from thinking of doing to mitigate, or assuage the Rigour of the Law, or to make pardonable his own Transgressions thereby. But he that sees not this, cannot confess his Transgressions aright; for the Confession consisteth in the general, in a Man's taking to himself his Transgressions, with the Acknowledgment of them to be his, and that he cannot stir from under them, nor do any thing to make amends for them, or to palliate the Rigour of Justice against the Soul. And this the Publican did when he cried, God be merciful to me a Sinner.

He made his Sins own, he stood before God in them, accounting that he was surely undone for ever, if God did not extend Forgiveness unto him. And this is to do as the Prophet Jeremy bids; to wit, only to acknowledge our Iniquities, to acknowledge them at the terrible Bar of God's Justice, until Mercy takes them out of the way; not by doing, or promising to do, either this or that good Work. And the reason of this kind of Confession is,

First, Because this carrieth in it the true Nature of Confession, to confess, and abide under the Crimes confessed, without Shifts and Evasions, is the only real simple way of Confessions. I said, I would confess my Transgressions to the Lord; and what then, and thou forgavest the Iniquity of my Sin. Mark, nothing comes in betwixt Confession and Forgiveness of Sin, Psal. 32. 5. nothing of Works of Righteousness, nothing of legal Amendments, nothing but an outcry for Mercy; and that act is so far off from lessening the Offence, that it greatly heighteneth and aggravates it. That is the first Reason.

Secondly, A second Reason is, because God doth expect that the Penitent Confessors should not only confess, but bear their Shame on them; yea, saith God, be thou confounded and bear thine own Shame, when God takes away thine Iniquity, thou shalt be confounded and never open thy Mouth more because of thy Shame, Ezek. 16. 52, 54, 61, 63. We count it convenient that Men, when their Crimes and Transgressions are to be manifested, that they be set in some open Place, with a Paper, wherein their Transgressions are inserted, that they may not only confess, but bear their own Shame. At the penitential Confession of Sinners, God has something to do; if not before Men, yet before Angels, that they may behold, and be affected, and rejoice when they shall see, after the Revelation of Sin, the Sinner taken into the Favour and abundant Mercy of God, Luke 15.

Thirdly, A third Reason is, for that God will in the Forgiveness of Sin magnify the Riches of his Mercy; but this cannot be, if God shall suffer, or accept of such Confession of Sin, as is yet intermixed with those things that will darken the heinousness of the Offence.

That God in the Salvation, and so in the Confession of the Sinner, designs the magnifying of his Mercy, is apparent enough from the whole Current of Scripture, and that any of the things now mentioned will, if suffered to be done, darken and eclipse this thing, is evident to Reason it self.

Suppose a Man stand indicted for Treason, yet shall so order the matter, that it shall ring in the Country, that his Offences are but petty Crimes; though the King shall forgive this Man, much Glory shall not thereby redound to the Riches and Greatness of his Mercy. But let all things lie naked, let nothing lie hid or covered, let Sin be seen, shewn, and confessed, as it is in the Sinner himself, and then there will be in his Forgiveness a magnifying of Mercy.

Fourthly, A fourth Reason is, for else God cannot be justified in his Sayings, nor overcome when he is judged, Psal. 51. Rom. 3. God's Word hath told us what Sin is, both as to its Nature and evil Effects. God's Word hath told us, that the best of our Righteousnesses are no better than filthy Rags. God's Word has also told us, that Sin is forgiven us freely by Grace, and not for the sake of our Amendments: And all this God shews, not only in the Acts of his Mercy toward, but even in the Humiliations and Confessions of the Penitent: For God will have his Mercy to be displayed even there where the Sinner hath taken his first Step toward him; That like as Sin hath reigned unto Death, so Grace might reign through Righteousness unto eternal Life, by Jesus Christ our Lord, Rom.

Fifthly,

Fifthly, A fifth Reason is, Because God would have by the Publican's Conversion, others affected with the displays and discoveries of wonderful Grace; but not to cloud and cover it with lessening of Sin.

For what will such say when Sin begins to appear to Conscience, and when the Law shall follow it with a Voice of Words, each one like a Clap of Thunder? I say, what will such say when they shall read that the Publican did only acknowledge his Iniquity, and found Grace and Favour of God? That God is infinitely merciful; to those, or to such, as in truth stand in need of Mercy. Also that he sheweth Mercy of his own good Pleasure, nothing moving him thereto.

I say, this is the way to make others be affected with Mercy; as he saith by the Apostle Paul, But God who is rich in Mercy, for his great Love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in Sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by Grace ye are saved) and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly Places in Christ Jesus. That in the Ages to come he might shew the exceeding Riches of his Grace in his Kindness to us-ward (or towards us) through Christ Jesus, Ephes. 2. 4, 5, 6, 7. You may also see that 1 Tim. 1. 15, 16.

Sixthly, Another Reason of this is, because this is the way to heighten the Comfort and Consolation of the Soul; and that both here and hereafter. What tendeth more to this, than for Sinners to see, and with Guilt and Amazement to confess what Sin is, and so to have Pardon extended from God to the Sinner as such? This fills the Heart; all ravishes the Soul! puts Joy into the Thoughts of Salvation from Sin, and Deliverance from Wrath to come. Now they return and come to Zion with Songs, and everlasting Joy upon their Heads, they shall obtain Joy and Gladness, and Sorrow and Sighing shall fly away, Isa. 35. 10. Indeed the Belief of this makes Joy and Gladness endless.

Seventhly, Besides, it layeth upon the Soul the greatest Obligations to Holiness; what like the Apprehension of free Forgiveness, (and that Apprehension must come in thro' a Sight of the Greatness of Sin, and of Inability to do any thing towards Satisfaction) to engage the Heart of a Rebel to love his Prince, and to submit to his Laws.

When Elisha had taken the Syrians Captives, some were for using Severities towards them; but he said, Set Bread and Water before them, that they may eat and drink and go to their Master, and they did so. And what follows, So the Bands of Syria came no more into Israel. He conquered their Malice with his Compassion. And 'tis the love of Christ that constraineth to live to him, 2 Kings 6. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23. 2 Cor. 5. 14.

Many other things might possibly be urged, but at present let these be sufficient.

The second thing that we made mention of in the Publican's Prayer was, an imploring of Help against this Malady; God be merciful to me a Sinner. In which Petition I shall take notice of several things.

1. That a Man's help against Sin, doth not so absolutely lie in his personal Conquest, as in the Pardon of them. I suppose a Conquest, though there can indeed by Man be none, so long as he liveth in this World; I mean, a compleat Conquest and annihilation of Sin.

The Publican, and so every graciously awakened Sinner, is doubtless for the subduing of Sin; but yet he looketh that the chief help against it doth lie in the Pardon of it. Suppose a Man should stab his Neighbour with his Knife, and afterward burn his Knife to nothing in the Fire, would this give him help against his Murder? No verily, notwithstanding this, his Neck is obnoxious to the Halter, yea, and his Soul to Hell Fire. But a Pardon gives him absolute help: 'Tis God that justifies, who shall condemn, Rom. 8. Suppose a Man should live many Days in Rebellion against God, and after that leave off to live any longer so rebelliously, would this help him against the Guilt which he had contracted before? No verily, without Remission there is no help, but the Rebel is undone. Wherefore the first Blessedness, yea, and that without which all other Things cannot make one Blessed, it lies in Pardon. Blessed is he whose Transgressions are forgiven, whose Sin is covered. Blessed is the Man to whom the Lord will not impute Sin, Psal. 32. Rom. 4.

Suppose a Man greatly sanctified and made holy; I say, suppose it; yet if the Sins, before committed by him, be not pardoned, he cannot be a blessed Man.

Yet again, Suppose a Man should be caught up to Heaven, not having his Sins pardoned, Heaven it self cannot make him a blessed Man. I suppose these things, not that they can be, to illustrate my matter. There can be no Blessedness upon any Man, who yet remaineth unforgiven. You see therefore here, that there was much of the Wisdom of the Holy Ghost in this Prayer of the Publican. He was directed the right, the only, the next way to shelter where Blessedness begins even to Mercy for the Pardon of his Sins. Alas! What would it advantage a Traytor to be taken up into the King's Coach, to be clothed with the King's Royal Robe, to have put upon his Finger the King's Gold Ring, and to be made to wear, for the present, a Chain of Gold about his Neck, if after all this the King should say unto him, but I will not pardon thy Rebellion; thou shalt die for thy Treason? Pardon then, to him that loves Life, is better, and more to be preferred preferred and sought after, than all other things; yea, it is the highest Wisdom in any Sinner to seek after that first.

This therefore confuteth the Blindness of some, and the Hypocrisy of others. Some are so silly, and so blind, as quite to forget and look over the Pardon of Sin, and to lay their Happiness in some external Amendments; when alas poor Wretches, as they are, they abide under the Wrath of God. Or if they be not quite so foolish as utterly to forget the Forgiveness of Sin, yet they think of it, but in the second Place they are for setting of Sanctification before Justification, and so seek to confound the Order of God; and that which is worse unto them, they by so doing, do what they can to keep themselves indeed from being sharers in that great Blessing of Forgiveness of Sins by Grace.

But the Publican here was guided by the Wisdom of Heaven: He comes into the Temple, he confesseth himself a Sinner, and forthwith, without any delay, before he removeth his Foot from where he stands, craves help of Pardon; for he knew that all other things, if he remained in Guilt, would not help him against that Damnation that belonged to a vile and unforgiven Sinner.

This also confuteth the Hypocrites, such as is our Pharisee here in the Text, that glory in nothing so much, as that they are not as other Men, not Unjust, no Adulterer, no Extortioner, nor even as this Publican; and thus miss of the Forgiveness of Sin; and if they have missed of the beginning Good, they shall never, as so standing, receive the second, or the third; Justification, Sanctification, Glorification, they are the three things, but the Order of God must not be perverted. Justification must be first, because that comes to Man while he is ungodly and a Sinner.

Justification cannot be where God has not passed a Pardon. A Pardon then, is the first thing to be looked after by the Sinner; this the Pharisee did not, therefore he went down to his House unjustified; he set the Stumbling-block of his Iniquity before his Face when he went to enquire of the Lord; and as he neglected, slighted, scorned, because he thought that he had no need of Pardon; therefore it was given to the poor, needy, and miserable Publican, and he went away with the Blessing.

Publicans, since this is so weighty a Point, let me exhort you that you do not forget this Prayer of your wise and elder Brother, to wit, the Publican, that went up into the Temple to pray. I say, forget it not, neither suffer any vain-glorious or self-conceited Hypocrites with Arguments, to allure you with their silly and deceitful Tongues, from this wholesome Doctrine. Remember that you are Sinners as abominable as are the Publicans, wherefore do you, as you have him for your Pattern, go to God, confess in all simple, honest, and self-abasing, your numerous and abominable Sins, and be sure that in the very next Place you forget not to ask for Pardon, saying, God be merciful to me a Sinner. And remember that none but God can help you against, nor keep you from, the Damnation and Misery that comes by Sin.

Secondly, As the Publican imploreth help, so notwithstanding the Sentence of the Law that is gone out against him, he saith to God, be merciful to me; and also in that he concludes himself a Sinner: I say, he justifieth, he approveth of the Sentence of the Law, that was now gone out against him, and by which he now stood condemned in his own Conscience before the Tribunal of God's Justice. He saith not as the Hypocrite, Because I am innocent, surely his Anger shall turn from me; or what have we spoken so much against thee? No, he is none of these Murmurers or Complainers, but fairly falls before the Law, Witnesses, Judge and Jury, and consenteth to the Verdict, Sentence, and Testimony of each of them, Jer. 2. 35. Mal. 2. 13.

To illustrate this a little, suppose a Malefactor should be arraigned before a Judge, and that after the Witnesses, Jury, and Judge have all condemned him to Death for his Fact, the Judge again should ask him what he can say for himself why Sentence of Death should not pass upon him? Now if he saith nothing but Good my Lord Mercy, he confesseth the Indictment, approveth of the Verdict of the Jury, and consenteth to the Judgment of the Judge.

The Publican therefore in crying Mercy, justifieth the Sentence of the Law that was gone out against his Sins: He wrangleth not with the Law, saying, that was too severe though many Men do thus, saying, God forbid, for then Wo be to us. He wrangleth not with the Witness which was his own Conscience, though some will buffet, smite, and stop its Mouth, or command it to be silent. He wrangleth not with the Jury, which was the Prophets and Apostles, though some Men cannot abide to hear all that they say. He wrangleth not with the Judge, nor sheweth himself irreverently before him, but in all humble Gestures that could bespeak him acquiescing with the Sentence, he flieth to Mercy for Relief.

Nor is this alone the way of the Publican; but of other godly Men before his time: When David was condemned, he justified the Sentence and the Judge, out of whose Mouth it proceeded, and so fled for Succour to the Mercy of God, Psal. 51. When Shemaiah the Prophet pronounced God's Judgments against the Princes of Judah for their Sin, they said, The Lord is righteous. When the Church in the Lamentations mentations had reckoned up several of her grievous Afflictions wherewith she had been chastised, she instead of complaining doth justify the Lord, and approve of the Sentence that was passed upon her, saying, The Lord is righteous, for I have rebelled against his Commandment. So Daniel, after he had enumerated the Evils that befel the Church in his Day, addeth, Therefore hath the Lord brought it upon us; for the Lord our God is righteous in all his Works, which he doth, for we obeyed not his Voice, 2 Chron. 13. 6. Lam. 1. 18. Dan. 9. 14.

And this is the case with our Publican. He has transgressed a Law that is holy, just, and good: the Witness that accuseth him of this, is God and his Conscience; he is also cast by the Verdict of holy Men; and all this he knows, and implicitly confesses, even in that he directs his Prayer unto his Judge for Pardon. And 'tis one of the excellentest Sights in the World to see, or understand a Sinner thus honestly receiving the Sentence of the Law that is gone out against him; to see and hear a Publican thus to justify God. And this God would have done for these Reasons.

1. That it might be conspicuous to all, that the Publican has need of Mercy. This is for the Glory of the Justice of God, because it vindicates it in its goings out against the Publican. God loveth to do things in Justice and Righteousness, when he goeth out against Men, tho' it be but such a going out against them as only tendeth to their Conviction and Conversion. When he dealt with our Father Abraham in this Matter, he called him to his Foot, as here he doth the Publican. And Sinner, if God counts thee worthy to inherit the Throne of Glory he will bring thee hither. But,

2. The Publican by the Power of Conviction stoops to, and falleth under the righteous Sentence gone forth against him, that it might be also manifest that what afterward he shall receive is of the mere Grace and Sovereign Goodness of God. And indeed there is no way that doth more naturally tend to make this manifest than this. For thus; there is a Man proceeded against for Life, by the Law, and the Sentence of Death is in conclusion most justly and righteously passed upon him by the Judge. Suppose now that after this, this Man lives, and is exalted to Honour, enjoys great Things, and is put into Place of Trust and Power, and that by him that he has offended, even by him that did pass the Sentence upon him.

What will all say, or what will they conclude, even upon the very first hearing of this Story? Will they not say, well, whoever he was that found himself wrapped up in this strange Providence, must thank the Mercy of a gracious Prince; for all these things bespeaks Grace and Favour. But,

3. As the Publican falleth willingly under the Sentence, and justifieth the passing of it upon him; so by his flying to Mercy for help he declareth to all that he cannot deliver himself: He putteth help away from himself, or saith, it is not in me.

This, I say, is another thing included in this Prayer, and it is a thing distinct from that. For it is possible for a Man to justify and fall under the Sentence of the Judge, and yet retain that with himself that will certainly deliver him from that Sentence when it has done its worst. Many have held up their hand, and cried guilty at the Bar, and yet have fetched themselves off for all that; but then they have not pleaded Mercy, (for he that doth so, puts his Life altogether into the hands of another) but Privilege or good Deeds either done or to be done by them. But the Publican in our Text puts all out of his own hand; and in effect saith to that God before whom he went up into the Temple to pray; Lord, I stand here condemned at the Bar of thy Justice, and that worthily, for the Sentence is good, and hath in Righteousness gone out against me; nor can I deliver my self, I heartily and freely confess I cannot; wherefore I betake my self only to thy Mercy, and do pray thee to forgive the Transgressions of me a Sinner. O how few be there of such kind of Publicans! I mean of Publicans thus made sensible, that come unto God for Mercy.

Mercy with most, is rather a Compliment, I mean, while they plead it with God, than a Matter of absolute Necessity; they have not awfully and in Judgment and Conscience fallen under the Sentence, nor put themselves out of all Plea but the Plea of Mercy. Indeed, thus to do, is the effect of the Proof of the Vanity and Emptiness of all Experiments made use of before.

Now there is a two-fold proof of Experiments; the one is, the result of Practice; the other is, the result of Faith.

The Woman with her bloody Issue made her proof by Practice, when she had spent all that she had upon Physicians and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse, Mark 5. But our Publican here proves the Emptiness and Vanity of any other Helps, by one cast of Faith upon the Contents of the Bible, and by another look upon his present State of Condemnation; wherefore he presently, without any more ado, condemneth all other helps, ways, modes, or means of deliverance, and betakes himself only to the Mercy of God, saying, God be merciful to me a Sinner.

And herein he sheweth wonderful Wisdom. For,

First, By this, He thrusts himself under the Shelter and Blessing of the Promise: And I am sure it is better and safer to do so, than to rely upon the best of Excellencies that this World can afford, Hos. 14. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Secondly,

Secondly, He takes the ready way to please God; for God takes more delight in shewing of Mercy, than in any thing that we can do, Hos. 6. 6. Matth. 9. 13. and 12. 7. Yea and that also is the Man that pleaseth him, even he that hopes in his Mercy, Psal. 147. 11. The Publican therefore, whatever the Pharisee might think, stood all this while upon sure ground, and had by far the start of him for Heaven. Alas! his dull Head could look no further than to the Conceit of the pitiful Beauty and Splendor of his own stinking Righteousness. Nor durst he leave that to trust wholly to the Mercy of God; but the Publican comes out, though in his Sins, yet like an awakened, enlightned, resolved Man, and first abases himself, then gives God the Glory of his Justice, and after that the Glory of his Mercy, by saying, God be merciful to me a Sinner; and thus in the Ears of the Angels he did ring the Changes of Heaven. And,

Thirdly, The Publican, in his thus putting himself upon Mercy, sheweth, that in his Opinion there is more virtue in Mercy to save, than there is in the Law and Sin to condemn. And altho' this is not counted a great Matter to do, while Men are far from the Law, and while their Conscience is asleep within them; yet when the Law comes near, and Conscience is awake, who so tries it, will find it a laborious Work. Cain could not do thus for his Heart, no, nor Soul; nor Judas neither. This is another kind of thing than most Men think it to be, or shall find it, whenever they shall behold God's angry Face, and when they shall hear the Words of his Law.

However our Publican did it, and ventured his Body, Soul, and future Condition for ever in this Bottom, with other the Saints and Servants of God, leaving of the World to swim over the Sea of God's Wrath (if they will) in their weak and simple Vessels of Bull-rushes, or to lean upon their Cobweb-hold, when he shall arise to the Judgment that he hath appointed.

In the mean time pray God awaken us as he did the Publican; pray God enlighten us as he did the Publican; pray God grant us Boldness to come to him as the Publican did; and also in that trembling Spirit as he did, when he cried in the Temple before him, God be merciful to me a Sinner.

Thus having passed over his Prayer, we come in the next place to his Gestures; for in my Judgment the right Understanding of them will give us yet more Conviction of the Publican's Sense and awakening of Spirit under this present Action of his.

And I have observed many a poor Wretch that have readily had recourse to the Publican's Prayer, that never knew what the Publican's Gestures, in the Presence of God, while in Prayer before him, did mean. Nor must any Man be admitted to think, that those Gestures of his were in Custom, and a Formality among the Jews in those Days; for 'tis evident enough by the Carriage of the Pharisee, that it was below them and their Mode, when they came into the Temple, or when they prayed any where else; and they in those Days were counted for the best of Men, and in religious Matters they were to imitate and take their Examples at the hands of the best, not at the hands of the worst.

The Publican's Gestures then, were properly his own, caused by the guilt of Sin, and by that dread of the Majesty of God that was upon his Spirit. And a comely Posture it was, else Christ Jesus, the Son of God would never have taken that particular Notice thereof as he did, nor have smiled upon it so much as to take, and distinctly repeat it as that which made his Prayer the more weighty, also to be taken notice of. Yea, in mine Opinion, the Lord Jesus committed it to Record, for that he liked it, and for that it will pass for some kind of Touchstone of Prayer, that is made in good Sense of Sin and of God, and of need of his Goodness and Mercy. For verily, all these Postures signify Sense, Sight of a lost Condition, and a Heart in good earnest for Mercy.

I know that they may be counterfeited, and Christ Jesus knows who doth so too; but that will not hinder, or make weak or invalid what hath already been spoke about it. But to forbear to make a further Prologue, and to come to the handling of Particulars.

And the Publican standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven, but smote upon his Breast, &c.

Three things, as I told you already, we may perceive in these Words, by which his Publican Posture, or Gestures are set forth.

1. He stands afar off.
2. He would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven.
3. He smote upon his Breast, &c.

For the First of these, He stood afar off. And the Publican standing afar off. This is, I say, the first Thing, the first Posture of his with which we are acquainted, and it informeth us of several Things.

First, That he came not with Senselessness of the Majesty of God when he came to pray, as the Pharisee did, and as Sinners commonly do. For this standing back, or afar off, declares that the Majesty of God had an awe upon his Spirit: He saw whither, to whom, and for what, he was now approaching the Temple. It is said in the twentieth of Exodus, That when the People saw the Thundrings and Lightnings, and the Noise of the Trumpet, and the Mountain Smoaking, (and all these were Signs of God's terrible Presence, and dreadful Majesty) jeſty) they removed themſelves, and ſtood aſar off, Exod. 20. 18. This Behaviour therefore of the Publican did well become his preſent Action, eſpecially ſince, in his own Eyes, he was yet an unforgiven Sinner. Alas! what is God's Maſteſty to a ſinful Man, but a conſuming Fire? And what is a ſinful Man in himſelf, or in his Approach to God, but as Stubble fully dry.

How then could the Publican do otherwiſe (than what he did) than ſtand aſar off, if he either thought of God or himſelf. Indeed the People afore-named, before they ſaw God in his terrible Maſteſty, could ſcarce be kept off from the Mount with Words and Bounds, as it is now the Caſe of many: Their Blindneſs gives them Boldneſs; their Rudeneſs gives them Confidence; but when they ſhall ſee what the Publican ſaw, and felt, and underſtood as he, they will pray, and ſtand aſar off, even as theſe People did. They removed and ſtood aſar off, and then fell to praying of Moses that this dreadful Sight and Sound might be taken from them. And what if I ſhould ſay, he ſtood aſar off for fear of a blow, though he came for Mercy, as it is ſaid of them, They ſtood aſar off for fear of her Torments, Revel. 18. 10, 18.

I know what it is to go to God for Mercy, and ſtand all that while through fear aſar off, being poſſeſſed with this, will not God now ſmite me at once to the Ground for my Sins. David thought ſomething when he ſaid as he prayed, Caſt me not out from thy Preſence, and take not thy holy Spirit from me, Pſal. 51. 11.

There is none knows, but thoſe that have them, what Turns and Returns, what coming on and going off, there is in the Spirit of a Man that indeed is awakened, and that ſtands awakened before the glorious Maſteſty in Prayer. The Prodigal alſo made his Prayer to his Father intentionally, while he was yet a great way off. And ſo did the Lepers too; And as he entered into a certain village there met him ten Men that were Lepers, which ſtood aſar off. And they liſt up their voices and ſaid, Jeſus, Maſter, have mercy on us, Luke 17. 12, 13.

See here, it has been the Cuſtom of praying Men to keep their Diſtance, and not to be rudely bold in ruſhing into the Preſence of the holy and heavenly Maſteſty; eſpecially if they have been ſenſible of their own Vilenenſs, and Sins, as the Prodigal, the Lepers, and our Publican was. Yea, Peter himſelf, when upon a time he perceived more than commonly he did of the Maſteſty of Jeſus his Lord, what doth he do? When Simon Peter ſaw it, ſays the Text, he fell down at Jeſus knees, ſaying, Depart from me, for I am a ſinful Man, O Lord, Luke 5. 3, 8. Oh! when Men ſee God and themſelves, it fills them with holy Fear, of the Greatneſs of the Maſteſty of God, as well as with love to, and deſire after his Mercy.

Befides, by his ſtanding aſar off, it might be to intimate that he now had in mind, and with great weight upon his Conſcience, the infinite Diſtance that was betwixt God and him. Men ſhould know that, and tremble in the Thoughts of it, when they are about to approach the Omnipotent Preſence.

What is poor ſorry Man, poor Duſt and Aſhes, that he ſhould croud it up, and go joſſingly into the Preſence of the Great God? eſpecially ſince it is apparent, the Diſproportion that is betwixt God and him. Eſther, when ſhe went to ſuppllicate the King her Huſband for her People, made neither uſe of her Beauty, nor Relation, nor the Privileges of which ſhe might have had Temptation to make uſe, eſpecially at ſuch a time, and in ſuch Exigencies, as then did compaſs her about: But I ſay, ſhe made not uſe of them to thruſt herſelf into his Preſence, but knew, and kept her Diſtance, ſtanding in the inward Court of his Palace, until he held out the golden Scepter to her; Then Eſther drew near and touched the top thereof, Eſth. 5. 1, 2.

Men alſo when they come into the Preſence of God, ſhould know their Diſtance; yea, and ſhew that they know it too, by ſuch Geſtures and Carriages, and Behaviours that are ſeemly. A remarkable Saying is that of Solomon. Keep thy foot, ſaith he, when thou goeſt into the Houſe of God, and be more ready to hear, than to offer the Sacrifice of Fools; for they conſider not that they do evil. (And as they ſhould keep their Foot, ſo alſo he adds) Be not raſh with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be haſty to utter any thing before God: for God is in Heaven, and thou upon Earth, therefore let thy words be few, Eccleſ. 5. 1, 2.

Three things the Holy Ghoſt exhorteth to in this Text.

The one is, that we look to our Feet, and not be forward to croud into God's Preſence.

Another is, That we ſhould alſo look well to our Tongues, that they be not raſh in uttering any thing before God.

And the third is, because of the infinite Diſtance that is betwixt God and us, which is intimated by them Words, for God is in Heaven, and thou upon Earth.

The Publican therefore ſhewed great Wiſdom, holy Shame, and Humility, in this brave Geſture of his, namely, in his ſtanding aſar off, when he went up into the Temple to pray. But this is not all.

Secondly, The Publican in ſtanding aſar off, left room for an Advocate, an High Priest, a Days-Man to come betwixt, to make Peace between God and this poor Creature. Moses, the great Mediator of the Old Teſtament, was to go nigher to God

God than the rest of the Elders, or those of the People, Exod. 21. 1. Yea, the rest of the People were expressly commanded to worship, standing afar off, verse 1, 2. No Man of the Sons of Araon that hath a Blemish was to come nigh. No Man that hath a blemish of the seed of Aaron, shall come nigh to offer the offerings of the Lord made by fire. He shall not come nigh to offer the bread of his God, Levit. 21. 21.

The Publican durst not be his own Mediator, he knew he had a Blemish, and was infirm, and therefore he stands back; for he knew that 'twas none of him that his God had chosen to come near unto him, to offer the Fat and the Blood, Ezek. 44. 13, 14, 15. The Publican therefore was thus far right. He took not up the Room himself, neither with his Person, nor his Performances, but stood back, and gave place to the High Priest that was to be Intercessor.

We read, that when Zacharias went into the Temple to burn Incense, as at that time his Lot was, The whole multitude of the People was praying without, Luke 1. 9, 10. They left him where he was, near to God, between God and them, mediating for them; for the offering of Incense by the Chief Priest was a figurative making of Intercession for the People, and they maintained their Distance.

It is a great matter, in praying to God, not to go too far, nor come too short in that Duty. I mean in the Duty of Prayer, and a Man is very apt to do one or the other. The Pharisee went so far, he was too bold, he came into the Temple making such a Ruffle with his own Excellencies, that there was in his Thoughts no need of a Mediator. He also went up so nigh to God, that he took up the Room and Place of the Mediator himself; but this poor Publican, he knows his Distance, and keeps it, and leaves room for the High Priest to come and intercede for him with God. He stood afar off, not too far off; for that is the Room and Place of Unbelievers, and in that Sense this Saying is true, For lo, they that are far from thee shall perish, Psal. 73. 27. That is, they whose Unbelief hath set their Hearts and Affections more upon their Idols, and that have been made to cast God behind their Backs, to follow and go a whoring after them.

Hitherto therefore it appears, that tho' the Pharisee had more Righteousness than the Publican, yet the Publican had more spiritual Righteousness than the Pharisee: And that though the Publican had a baser, and more ugly outside than the Pharisee, yet the Publican knew how to prevail with God for Mercy better than he.

As for the Publican's Posture of standing in Prayer, it is excusable, and that by the very Father of the Faithful himself: For Abraham stood praying when he made Intercession for Sodom, Gen. 18. 22, 23. Christ also alloweth it where he saith, And when ye stand praying, forgive if ye have ought against any, that your Father also which is in Heaven may forgive you your Trespases, Mark 11. 25. Indeed there is no stinted Order prescribed for our thus behaving of our selves in Prayer, whether kneeling, or standing, or walking or lying, or sitting; for all these Postures have been used by the godly. Paul kneeled down and prayed, Acts 20. 36. Abraham and the Publican stood and prayed. David prayed as he walked, 2 Sam. 15. 30, 31. Abraham prayed lying upon his Face, Gen. 17. 17, 18. Moses prayed sitting, Exod. 17. 12. and indeed Prayer, effectual fervent Prayer, may be, and often is, made unto God, under all these Circumstances of Behaviour: For God has not tied us up to any of them; and he that shall tie himself, or his People, to any of these, doth more than he hath Warrant for from God; and let such take care of innovating, it is the next way to make Men Hypocrites and Dissemblers in those Duties, in which they should be sincere.

True, which of those soever a Man shall chuse to himself for the present, to perform this solemn Duty in, it is required of him, and God expects it, that he should pray to him in Truth, and with Desire, Affection, and Hunger, after those things, that with his Tongue he maketh mention of before the Throne of God. And indeed without this, all is nothing. But alas! how few be there in the World whose Heart and Mouth in Prayer shall go together? Dost thou, when thou askest for the Spirit, or Faith, or Love to God, to Holiness, to Saints, to the Word, and the like, ask for them with Love to them, Desire of them, hungering after them? Oh! this is a mighty thing! and yet Prayer is no more before God, than as it is seasoned with these blessed Qualifications. Wherefore it is said, that while Men are praying, God is searching of the Heart, to see what is the meaning of the Spirit, (or whether there be the Spirit and his Meaning in all that the Mouth hath uttered, either by Words, Sighs, or Groans) because it is by him, and through his help only that any make Prayers according to the Will of God, Rom. 8. 26, 27. Whatever thy Posture therefore shall be, see that thy Prayers be pertinent and fervent, not mocking of thine own Soul with Words, while thou wantest and are an utter Stranger to the very Vital and living Spirit of Prayer.

Now our Publican had, and did exercise, the very Spirit of Prayer in Prayer. He prayed sensibly, seriously, affectionately, hungering, thirsting, and with longing after that for which with his Mouth he implored the God of Heaven: His Heart and Soul was in his Words, and it was that which made his Prayer PRATER; even because he prayed in PRATER; he prayed inwardly, as well as outwardly.

David tells us, that God heard the Voice of his Supplication, the Voice of his Cry, the Voice of his Tears, and the Voice of his Roaring. For indeed are all these acceptable, Affection, and fervent Desire, make them sound well in the Ears of God. Tears, Supplications, Prayers, Cries, may be all of them done in Formality, Hypocrisy, and from other Causes, and to other Ends than that which is honest and right in God's Sight: For God would search and look after the Voice of his Tears, Supplications, Roarings, Prayers and Cries.

And if Men had less care to please Men, and more to please God, in the Matter and Manner of praying, the World would be at a better pass than it is. But this is not in Man's Power to help, and to amend: When the Holy Ghost comes upon Men with greater Conviction of their State and Condition, and of the Use and Excellency of the Grace of Sincerity and Humility in Prayer, then, and not till then, will the Grace of Prayer be more prized, and the spacious flouting, complementary Lips of Flatterers be more laid aside. I have said it already, and will say it again, that there is now a Days a great deal of Wickedness committed in the very Duty of Prayer; by Words, of which Men have no Sense, by reaching after such Conclusions and clenches therein, as may make their Persons be admired; by studying for, and labouring after such Enlargements as the Spirit accompanieth not the Heart in. O Lord God, make our Hearts upright in us, as in all Points and Parts of our Profession, so in this solemn Appointment of God, If I regard Iniquity in my Heart, said David, the Lord will not hear my Prayer. But if I be truly sincere he will, and then 'tis no matter whether I kneel, or stand, or sit, or lie, or walk, for I shall do none of these, nor put up my Prayers under any of these Circumstances, lightly, foolishly, and idly, but to beautify this Gesture with the inward working of my Mind and Spirit in Prayer; that whether I stand or sit, walk or lie down, Grace and Gravity, Humility and Sincerity shall make my Prayer profitable, and my outward Behaviour comely in his Eyes, with whom (in Prayer) I now have to do.

And had not our Publican been inwardly seasoned with these, Christ would have taken but little Pleasure in his Modes and outward Behaviour: But being so honest inwardly, and in the Matter of his Prayer, his Gestures by that were made beauteous also; and therefore it is that our Lord so delightfully dilateth upon them, and draweth them out at Length before the Eyes of others.

I have often observed, that which is natural, and so comely in one, looks odiously when imitated by another, I speak as to Gestures and Actions in Preaching and Prayer. Many, I doubt not, but will imitate the Publican, and that both in the Prayer and Gestures of the Publican, whose Persons and Actions will yet stink in the Nostrils of him that is holy and just, and that searcheth the Heart and the Reins.

Well, the Publican stood and prayed, he stood afar off, and prayed, and his Prayers came even to the Ears of God.

And the Publican standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven, &c.

We are now come to another of his postures. He would not, says the Text, so much as lift up his Eyes to Heaven. Here therefore was another Gesture added to that which went before; and a Gesture that a great while before had been condemned by the Holy Ghost himself. Is it such a fast that I have chosen a Day for a Man to afflict his Soul? Is it to bow down his Head like a Bulrush, Isai. 58. 5.

But why condemned then, and smiled upon now? Why! Because done in Hypocrisy then, and in Sincerity now. Hypocrisy and a Spirit of Error, that he shall take no Pleasure in them: But sincerity, and honesty in Duties, will make even them comely in the sight of Men. May I not say before God? the Recabites were not commanded of God, but of their Father, to do as they did; but because they were sincere in their Obedience thereto, even God himself maketh use of what they did to condemn the Disobedience of the Jews; and moreover doth tell the Recabites at last, that they should not want a Man to stand before him for ever. And Jeremiah said to the House of the Recabites, thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, because ye have obeyed the Commandment of Jonadab your Father, and kept all his Precepts, and done according to all that he hath commanded you; therefore, thus saith the Lord of Hosts the God of Israel, Jonadab the Son of Racab shall not want a Man to stand before me for ever.

He would not lift up his Eyes to Heaven. Why? surely because Shame had covered his Face. Shame will make a Man blush and hang his Head like a Bulrush, Shame for Sin is a Vertue, a comely thing; yea, a beauty-spot in the Face of a Sinner that cometh to God for Mercy.

God complains of the House of Israel, that they could sin, and that without Shame; yea, and threatneth them too with sore repeated Judgments, because they were not ashamed, it is in Jer. 8. Their crimes in general were, they turned every one to his course, as the Horse runneth into the Battle: In particular, they were such as rejected God's Word, they loved this World, and set themselves against the Prophet's crying crying Peace, Peace, when they cryed Judgment, Judgment. And were not ashamed when they had committed Abomination; nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush: Therefore shall they fall among them that fall, in the time of their Visitation, they shall be cast down saith the Lord, ver. 12. Oh! to stand, or sit, or lye, or kneel, or walk before God in Prayer, with blushing Cheeks for Sin, is one of the excellent sights that can be seen in the World. Wherefore the Church taketh some kind of heart to her self in that she could lye down in her shame; yea, and makes that a kind of an Argument with God to prove that her Prayers did come from her heart, and also that he would hear them, Jer. 3. 22, 23, 24, 25.

Shame for Sin argueth sense of Sin, yea, a right sense of Sin, a godly sense of Sin, Ephraim pleads this when under the hand of God, I was, saith he, ashamed, yea, even confounded because I did bear the Sins of my Youth. But what follows? Is Ephraim my dear Son, is he a pleasant Child? for since I spake against him I do earnestly remember him still, therefore my Bowels are troubled for him, I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the Lord, Jer. 31. 18, 19, 20.

I know that there is a Shame that is not the Spirit of an honest heart, but that rather floweth from sudden surprisal when the Sinner is unawares taken in the Act, in the very Manner. And thus sometimes the House of Israel was taken, and then when they blushed their shame is compared to the Shame of a Thief. As the Thief is ashamed when he is found, so is the House of Israel ashamed; they, their Kings, their Princes and Priests, and their Prophets.

But where was they taken, or about what were they found? Why they were found saying to a stock, thou art my Father; and to a stone, thou hast brought me forth. God catch'd them thus doing, and this made them ashamed, even as the Thief is ashamed when the Owner doth catch him stealing of his Horse.

But this was not the Publican's shame, this shame brings not a Man into the Temple to pray, to stand willingly, and to take shame before God in Prayer. This shame makes one rather to flie from his Face, and to count one's self most at ease when farthest off from God, Jer. 2. 26, 27.

The Publican's shame therefore which he demonstrateth by hanging down his Head, was godly and holy, and much like that of the Prodigal, when he said, Father, I have sinned against Heaven and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy Son, Luke 15. 21. I suppose that his Postures were much the same with the Publican's, as were his Prayers, for the substance of them. O however Grace did work in both to the same end, they were both of them after a godly manner ashamed of their Sins.

He would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven.

He could not, he would not; which yet more fully makes it appear that it was shame, not guilt only or chiefly (though 'tis manifest enough that he had guilt) by his crying, God be merciful to me a Sinner. I say, guilt was not the chief cause of hanging down his Head, because it saith, He would not; for when guilt is the cause of stooping it lieth not in the Will, or in the Power thereof, to help one up.

David tells us, that when he was under guilt, his Iniquities were gone over his head: As an heavy burthen, they were too heavy for him; and that with them he was bowed down greatly. Or, as he says in another place, Mine iniquities have taken hold upon me, so that I am not able to look up, Psal. 38. Psal. 40. I am not ABLE to do it; guilt disableth the Understanding and Conscience, shame makes all willingly fall at the feet of Christ.

He would not, he knew what he was, what he had been, and should be, if God had not Mercy upon him: Yea, he knew also that God knew what he was, had been, and would be, if Mercy prevented not; wherefore thought he, wherefore SHOULD I lift up the Head? I am no righteous Man, no godly Man; I have not served God, but Satan; this I know, this God knows, this Angels know, wherefore I will not lift up the Head. It is as much as to say, I will not be an Hypocrite, like the Pharisee: For lifting up of the Head signifies Innocency and Harmlessness of Life, or good Conscience, and the Testimony thereof, under, and in the midst of all Accusations. Wherefore this was the counsel of Zophar to Job: If, saith he, thou prepare thine heart, and stretch out thine Hand towards him: If iniquity be in thine Hand, put it far away, and let not Wickedness dwell in thy Tabernacle; for then shalt thou lift up thy face without spot; yea, thou shalt be steadfast, and shalt not fear, Job 11. 13, 14, 15.

This was not the Publican's state, he had lived in lewdness and villany all his Days; nor had he prepared his heart to seek the Lord God of his Fathers, he had not cleansed his Heart nor Hands from violence, nor done that which was lawful and right. He only had been convinced of his evil ways, and was come into the Temple as he was, all foul, and in his filthy Garments, and amidst his Pollutions; how then could he be innocent, holy or without Spot? and consequently how could he lift up his Face to God? I remember what Abner said to Asabel, Turn thee aside, said he, from following me, wherefore should I smite thee to the ground? how then should I hold up my face to Joab thy brother, 2 Sam. 2. 22.

As

As if he had said, if I kill thee, I shall blush, be ashamed, and hang my head like a Bulrush, the next time I come into the Company of thy Brother.

This was the Publican's case, he was guilty, he had sinned, he had committed a Trespass, and now being come into the Temple, into the presence of that God whose Laws he had broken, and against whom he had sinned, how could he lift up his Head? how could he do it? No, it better became him to take his shame, and to hang his Head in token of Guilt; and indeed he did, and did it to purpose too, for he would not lift up, no, not so much as his Eyes to Heaven.

True, some would have done it, the Pharisee did it; though if he had considered that Hypocrisy, and the leaning to his own Righteousness had been a Sin, he would have found as little cause to have done it, as did the Publican himself. But, I say, he did it, and sped therein; he went down to his House as he came up into the Temple, a poor unjustified Pharisee, whose Perion and Prayer were both rejected, because like the Whore of whom we read in the Proverbs, after he had practised all manner of Hypocrisy, he comes into the Temple and wipes his Mouth, and saith, I have done no Wickedness, Prov. 30. 20. He lifts up his Head, his Face, his Eyes to Heaven; he struts, he vaunts himself; he swaggers, he vapours, and cries up himself, saying, God, I thank thee, I am not as other men are.

True, had he come and stood before a Stock or Stone, he might have said thus, and not have been reprehended; for such are Gods, that see not, nor hear, neither do they understand. But to come before the true God, the living God, the God that fills Heaven and Earth by his Presence, and that knows the Things that come into the Mind of Man, even every one of them. I say, to come into his House, to stand before him, and thus to lift up his Head and Eyes in such hypocrisy before him: This was abominable, this was to tempt God, and to prove him; yea, to challenge him to know what was in Man if he could, even as those did who said, How can God (see) know? can he judge through the dark Cloud? Job 22. 13. Psal. 73. 11.

But the Publican, no, would not do thus: He would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven. As who should say, O Lord, I have been against thee, a Traitor and a Rebel, and like a Traitor and Rebel before thee will I stand. I will bear my shame before thee in the Presence of the Holy Angels; yea, I will prevent thy judging of me by judging my self in thy sight, and will stand as condemned before thee, before thou passest Sentence upon me.

This is now for a Sinner to go to the end of Things. For what is God's design in the Work of Conviction for Sin, and in his awakening of the Conscience about it? What is his end I say, but to make the Sinner sensible of what he hath done, and that he might unfeignedly judge himself for the same. Now this our Publican doth; his Will therefore is now subjected to the Word of God, and he justifies him in all his Ways and Works towards him. Blessed be God for any Experience of these Things.

He would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven. He knew by his deeds and deservings that he had no Portion there; nor would he divert his Mind from the remembering, and from being affected with the evil of his ways.

Some Men when they are under the Guilt and Conviction of their evil Life, will do what they can to look any ways, and that on purpose to divert their minds, and to call them off from thinking on what they have done; and by their thus doing, they bring many evils more upon their Souls: For this is a kind of striving with God, and a shewing a dislike to his Ways. Would not you think, if when you are shewing your Son or your Servant his faults, if he should do what he could to divert and take off his mind from what you are saying, that he striveth against you, and sheweth dislike of your doings. What else means the complaints of Masters and of Fathers in this matter? I have a Servant, I have a Son, that doth contrary to my Will. O but why do you not chide them for it? The Answer is, so I do; but they do not regard my Words; they do what they can, even while I am speaking, to divert their minds from my Words and Counsels. Why, all Men will cry out this is base, this is worthy of great rebuke; such a Son, such a Servant deserveth to be shut out of Doors, and so made to learn better breeding by want and hardship.

But the Publican would not divert his mind from what at present God was about to make him sensible of, no, not by a look on the choicest Object, he would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven. They are but bad Scholars, whose Eyes, when their Master is teaching of them, are wandring off of their books.

God saith unto Men, when he is a teaching them to know the evil of their Ways, as the Angel said to the Prophet, when he came to shew him the pattern of the Temple; Son of Man, says he, behold with thine Eyes and hear with thine Ears, and set thine heart upon all that I shew thee; for to the intent that I might shew them unto thee, art thou brought thither, Ezek. 40. 4. So to the intent that God might shew to the Publican the Evil of his Ways, therefore was he brought under the power of Convictions, and the Terrors of the Law; and he also like a good Learner gave good heed unto that Lesson

Lesson that now he was learning of God; for he would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven.

Looking downwards doth oft-times bespeak Men very ponderous and deep in their Cogitations; also that the matter about which in their Minds they are now concerned, hath taken great hold of their Spirits. The Publican hath now new things, great things, and long-liv'd things, to concern himself about: His Sins, the Curse, with Death, and Hell, began now to stare him in the Face; wherefore it was no time now to let his Heart, or his Eyes, or his Cogitations wander, but to be fixed, and to be vehemently applying of himself (as a Sinner) to the God of Heaven for Mercies.

Few know the weight of Sin, when the Guilt thereof takes hold of the Conscience, it commands homewards all the Faculties of the Soul. No Man can go out or off now: Now he is wind-bound, or as Paul says, caught: Now he is made to possess bitter Days, bitter Nights, bitter Hours, bitter Thoughts; nor can he shift them, for this Sin is ever before him. As David said, For I acknowledge my Transgressions, and my Sin is ever before me, in my Eye, and sticketh fast in every one of my Thoughts, Psal. 51. 3.

He would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven,

[But smote upon his Breast.] This was the third and last of his Gestures; He smote upon his Breast; to wit, with his Hand, or with his Fist. I read of several Gestures with the Hand and Foot, according to the Working and Passions of the Mind. 'Tis said Balak smote his Hands together, being angry because that Balaam had blessed and not cursed for him the Children of Israel.

God says also, that He had smitten his Hands together, at the Sins of the Children of Israel. God also bids the Prophet stamp with his Feet, and smite with his Hand upon his Thigh, Numb. 24. 10. Ezek. 22. 13. Chap. 6. 11. Chap. 21. 12. upon sundry occasions, and at several enormities, but the Publican here is said to smite upon his Breast. And,

First, Smiting upon the Breast betokeneth Sorrow for something done, this is an Experiment common among Men. And indeed, therefore (as I take it) doth our Lord Jesus put him under this Gesture in the act and exercise of his Repentance, because it is that which doth most lively set it forth.

Suppose a Man comes to great damage for some folly that he has wrought, and he be made sorrowful for (being and) doing such folly: There is nothing more common than for such a Man, (if he may) to walk too and fro in the room where he is, with Head hung down, fetching ever and anon a bitter sigh: and smiting himself upon the Breast in his dejected Condition; But smote upon his Breast saying, God be merciful to me a Sinner.

Vol. II.

Secondly, Smiting upon the Breast is sometimes a token of indignation and abhorrence of something thought upon. I read in Luke, that when Christ was crucified, those Spectators that stood to behold the barbarous usage that he endured at the hands of his Enemies, smote their Breasts and returned. And all the People (says Luke,) that came together to that sight, beholding the things that were done, smote their Breasts, and returned, Luke 23. 48. smote their breasts; that is, in token of indignation against, and abhorrence of the cruelty, that was used to the Son of God.

Here also we have our Publican smiting upon his breast, in token of indignation against, and abhorrence of his former Life. And indeed without indignation against, and abhorrence of his former Life, his Repentance had not been good. Wherefore the Apostle doth make indignation against Sin, and against our selves, one of the Signs of true Repentance, 2 Cor. 7. 11. and his indignation against Sin in general, and against his former Life in particular, was manifested by his smiting upon the Breast. Even as Ephraim's smiting upon the Thigh was a sign and token of his: Surely, says he, after that I was turned I repented, and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my Thigh: I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my Youth, Jer. 31. 19. Man when he vehemently dislikes a thing, is very apt to shew a dislike to that thing he hath, by this or another outward Gesture: As in snuffing or snorting at it, or in deriding; or, as some say, in blowing of their Noses at it, Ezek. 8. 17. Malac. 1. 13. Luke 16. 64. but the Publican here chuseth rather to use this most solemn Posture; for smiting upon the Breast, seems to imply a more serious, solemn, grave way or manner of dislike, than any of those last mentioned do.

Thirdly, Smiting upon the Breast, seems to intimate a quarrel with the Heart for beguiling, deluding, flattering, seducing, and enticing of him to Sin: For as conviction for Sin begets in Man (I mean if it be through) a sense of the sore and plague of the Heart. So Repentance (if it be right) begets in Man an outcry against the Heart; for as much as by that light, by which Repentance takes occasion, the Sinner is made to see, that the Heart is the Fountain, and Well-spring of Sin. For from within, out of the heart of Man proceeds evil thoughts, Adulteries, Covetousness, &c. Mark. 7. 21, 22, 23. And hence it is, that commonly young Converts do complain so of their Hearts, calling them wicked, treacherous, deceitful, desperate ones.

Indeed one difference betwixt true and false Repentance lieth in this. The Man that truly repents cryeth out of his Heart,

8 Y

but

but the other, as Eve upon the Serpent, or something else. And that the Publican perceived his Heart to be naught I conclude, by his smiting upon his Breast.

Fourthly, Smiting upon the Breast, seems to intimate one apprehensive of some new sudden, strange and amazing thing: As when a Man sees some strange sight in the Air, or heareth some sudden, or dismal sound in the Clouds: Why, as he is struck into a deep damp in his Mind, so 'tis a wonder if he can keep or hold back from smiting upon his Breast.

Now oftentimes a sight of God, and sense of Sin, comes to the sinner like a flash of Lightning, (not for short continuance, but) for suddenness, and so for surprisal; so that the Sinner is struck, taken, and captivated, to his own amazement, with what so unexpectedly is come upon him. It is said of Paul at his Conversion, that when Conviction of his bad Life took fast hold of his Conscience, he trembled, and was astonish'd, Acts 9. 6. and although we read not of any particular circumstance of his Behaviour under his Conviction outwardly, yet it is almost impossible but he must have some, and those of the most solid sort. For there is such a Sympathy betwixt the Soul and the Body, that the one cannot be in distress or comfort, but the other must partake of, and also signify the same. If it be comfort, then 'tis shewn; by leaping, skipping, cheerfulness of the Countenance, or some other outward Gesture: If it be sorrow or heaviness of Spirit, then that is shewed by the Body, in weeping, sighing, groaning, shaking of the Head, a lowring Countenance, stamping, smiting upon the Thigh or Breast, as here the Publican did.

We must not therefore look upon these outward Actions or Gestures of the Publican, to be empty insignificant things; but to be such, that in truth did express and shew the temper, frame, and complexion of his Soul. For Christ, the Wisdom of God, hath mentioned them to that very end, that in and by them, might be held forth, and that Men might see, as in a Glass, the very Emblem of a converted, and truly penitent Sinner. He smote upon his Breast.

Fifthly, Smiting upon his Breast, is sometimes to signify a mixture of distrust, joined with Hope. And indeed in young Converts, Hope and Distrust, or a Degree of Despair, do work and answer one another, as doth the Noise of the Balance of the Watch in the Pocket. Life and Death is always the Motion of the Mind then, and this Noise continues until Faith is stronger grown, and until the Soul is better acquainted with the Methods and Ways of God with a Sinner. Yea, was but a carnal Man in a Convert's Heart, and could see, he should discern these two, to wit, Hope and Fear, to have a continual Motion in the Soul: wrestling and opposing one another, as doth Light and Darkeness, in striving for the Victory.

And hence it is that you find such People so fickle and uncertain in their Spirits; Now on the Mount, then in the Valleys; now in the Sunshine, then in the Shade; now warm, then frozen; now bonny and blithe, then in a Moment pensive and sad; as thinking of a portion no where but in Hell. This will cause smiting on the Breast; nor can I imagine that the Publican was as yet farther than thus far in the Christian's Progress.

Sixthly, Smiting upon the Breast, seems to intimate, that the Party so doing is very apprehensive of some great Loss that he has sustained; either by Negligence, Carelessness, Foolishness, or the like. And this is the way in which Men do lose their Souls. Now to lose a thing, a great thing, the only choice thing that a Man has, negligently, carelessly, foolishly, or the like, why it puts Aggravations into the Thoughts of the Loss, that the Man has sustained, and Aggravations into the Thoughts of them go out of the Soul, and come in upon a sudden, even as the Bailiff, or the King's Serjeant at Arms, and at every Appearance of them makes the Soul start; and starting, it smites upon the Breast.

I might multiply Particulars; but to be brief, we have before us a sensible Soul, a sorrowful Soul, a penitent Soul; one that prays indeed, that prays sensibly, affectionately, effectually: One that sees his Loss, that fears and trembleth before God in consideration of it, and one that knows no way, but the right way, to secure himself from perishing, to wit, by having humble and hearty Recourse to the God of Heaven for Mercy.

I should now come to speak something by way of Use and Application; but before I do that, I will briefly draw up, and present you with a few Conclusions that in my Judgment do naturally flow from the Text, therefore in this Place I will read over the Text again.

Two Men went up into the Temple to pray, the one a Pharisee, the other a Publican. The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself; God, I thank thee, that I am not as other Men are, Extortioners, Unjust, Adulterers, or even as this Publican: I fast twice in the Week, I give Tithes of all that I possess. And the Publican standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his Eyes to Heaven, but smote upon his Breast, saying, God be merciful to me a Sinner.

From these Words I gather these several Conclusions, with these Inferences.

First, It doth not always follow, that they that pray do know God, or love him, or trust in him. This Conclusion is evident by the Pharisee in the Text; he prayed, but he knew not God, he loved not God, he trusted not in God; that is, he knew him him not in his Son, nor loved, nor trusted in him. He was, though a praying Man, far off from this. Whence it may be inferred, that those that pray not at all cannot be good, cannot know, love, or trust in God. For if the Star, though it shine, is not the Sun, then surely a clod of Dirt cannot be the Son. Why a praying Man doth as far out-strip a non-praying Man, as a Star out-strips a Clod of Earth. A non-praying Man lives like a Beast. The Ox knows his Owner, and the Ass his Master's Crib; but this Man doth not know, but this Man doth not consider, (Isai. 1. 3.) The prayer less Man is therefore of no Religion, except he be an Atheist, or an Epicurean. Therefore the non-praying Man is numbered among the Heathens, and among those that know not God, and is appointed and designed by the Sentence of the Word to the fearful Wrath of God, (Psal. 79. 6. Jer. 10. 25.)

Secondly, A second Conclusion is, That the Man that prays, if in his Prayer he pleads for Acceptance, either in whole or in part, for his own good Deeds, is in a miserable State. This also is gathered from the Pharisee here, he prayed, but in this Prayer he pleaded his own good Deeds for Acceptance; that is, of his Person, and therefore went down to his House unjustified. And he is in this Condition that doth thus. The Conclusion is true, forasmuch as the Pharisee mentioned in the Parable is not so spoken of, for the sake of that Sect of Men; but to caution, forewarn, and bid all Men take heed, that they by doing as he, procure not his Rejection of God, and be sent away from his Presence unjustified. I do therefore infer from hence, that if he that pleadeth his own good doing for personal Acceptance with God, be thus miserable, then he that teacheth Men so to do, is much more miserable. We always conclude, that a Ring-leader in an evil Way, is more blame-worthy, than those that are led of him. This falls hard upon the leading Socinians and others, who teach, that Men's Works make their Persons accepted of God.

True, they say, through Christ; but that is brought merely to delude the simple with, and is an horrible Lye; for we read not in all the Word of God, as to personal Justification in the Sight of God from the Curse, (and that is the Question under Consideration) that it must be by Man's Righteousness, as made prevalent by Christ's, but contrariwise by his, and his only, without the Deeds, Works, or Righteousness of the Law which is our Righteousness. Wherefore, I say, the Teachers and Leaders of this Doctrine, have the greater Sin.

Thirdly, A third Conclusion is, They that use high and flaunting Language in Prayer, their Simplicity and godly Sincerity is to be questioned, as to the doing of that Duty sincerely. This still flows from our Text, the Pharisee greatly used this; for higher and more flaunting Language can hardly be found, than in the Pharisee's Mouth; nor will ascribing to God by the same Mouth Laud and Praise, help the Business at all: For to be sure, where the Effect is base and rotten, the Cause cannot be good.

The Pharisee would hold himself that he was not as other Men, and then gives Thanks to God for this: But the Conclusion was most vilely false, and therefore the Praise for it could not but be foolish, vain, and frivolous. Whence I infer, that if to use such Language in Prayer is dangerous, then to affect the Use thereof is yet more dangerous: Prayer must be made with humble Hearts, and sensible Words, and of that we have treated before, wherefore high, flaunting, swelling Words of Vanity becomes not a Sinner's Mouth, no, not at any time, much less when he comes to, and presents himself before God in that solemn Duty of Prayer. But, I say, there are some that so affect the Pharisee's Mode, that they cannot be well if in some sort or other they be not in the Practice of it; not knowing what they say, nor whereof they affirm; but these are greatly addicted to Hypocrisy, and Desire of Vain-Glory, especially if the Sound of their Words be within the reach of other Men's Ears.

Fourthly, A fourth Conclusion is, that Reformations and Amendments, though good, and before Men, are nothing as to Justification with God. This is manifest by the Condition of our Pharisee; he was a reformed Man, a Man beyond others for personal Righteousness, yet he went out of the Temple from God unjustified, his Works, came to nothing with God. Hence I infer, that the Man that hath nothing to commend him to God of his own, yet stands as fair before God for Justification, and so Acceptance, as any other Man in the World.

Fifthly, A fifth Conclusion is, it is the sensible Sinner, the self-bemoaning Sinner, the self-judging Sinner, the self-abhorring Sinner, and the self-condemning Sinner, whose Prayers prevail with God for Mercy. Hence I infer, that one reason why Men make so many Prayers, and prevail no more with God, is because their Prayers are rather the Floatings of Pharisaical Fancies, than the Fruits of sound Sense of Sin, and sincere Desires of enjoying God in Mercy, and in the Fruits of the Holy Ghost.

O F

Mr. B A D M A N,

Presented to the World in a familiar DIALOGUE between Mr. Wiseman, and Mr. Attentive.

The AUTHOR to the READER.

Courteous Reader,

AS I was considering with my self, what I had written concerning the Progress of the Pilgrim from this World to Glory; and how it had been acceptable to many in this Nation: It came again into my Mind to write, as then, of him that was going to Heaven, so now, of the Life and Death of the Ungodly, and of their Travel from this World to Hell. The which in this I have done, and have put it, as thou seest, under the Name and Title of Mr. Badman, a Name very proper for such a Subject: I have also put it into the Form of a Dialogue, that I might with more ease to my self, and pleasure to the Reader, perform the Work.

And although, as I said, I have put it forth in this Method, yet have I as little as may be, gone out of the Road of mine own Observation of Things. Yea, I think I may truly say, that to the best of my Remembrance, all the Things that here I discourse of, I mean as to Matter of Fact, have been acted upon the Stage of this World, even many times before mine Eyes.

Here therefore, courteous Reader, I present thee with the Life and Death of Mr. Badman indeed: Yea, I do trace him in his Life, from his Childhood to his Death; that thou mayest, as in a Glass, behold with thine own Eyes, the Steps that take hold of Hell; and also discern, while thou art reading of Mr. Badman's Death, whether thou thy self art treading in his path thereto.

And let me entreat thee to forbear Quirking and Mocking, for that Mr. Badman is dead; but rather gravely enquire concerning thy self by the Word, whether thou art one of his Lineage or no: For Mr. Badman has left many of his Relations behind him; yea, the very World is overspread with his Kindred. True, some of his Relations, as he, are gone to their place, and long home, but thousands of thousands are left behind; as Brothers, Sisters, Cousins, Nephews, besides innumerable of his Friends and Associates.

I may say, and yet speak nothing but too much Truth in so saying, that there is scarce a Fellowship, a Community, or Fraternity of Men in the World, but some of Mr. Badman's Relations are there: Yea, rarely can we find a Family or Household in a Town, where he has not left behind him a Brother, Nephew or Friend.

The Butt therefore, that at this time I shoot at, is wide; and 'twill be as impossible for this Book to go into several Families, and not to arrest some, as for the King's Messenger to rush into an House full of Traitors, and find none but honest Men there.

I cannot but think that this shot will light upon many, since our Fields are so full of this Game; but how many it will kill to Mr. Badman's course, and make alive to the Pilgrims Progress, that is not in me to determine; this secret is with the Lord our God only, and he alone knows to whom he will bless it to so good and so blessed an End. However, I have put fire to the Pan, and doubt not but the report will quickly be heard.

I told you before, that Mr. Badman had left many of his Friends and Relations behind him, but if I survive them (as that's a great question to me) I may also write of their Lives: However, whether my Life be longer or shorter, this is my Prayer at present, that God will stir up Witnesses against them, that may either convert or confound them; for where-ever they live, and roll in their Wickedness, they are the Pest and Plague of that Country.

England shakes and totters already, by reason of the Burden that Mr. Badman and his Friends have wickedly laid upon it: Yea, our Earth reels and staggereth too and fro like a Drunkard, the Transgression thereof is heavy upon it.

Courteous Reader, I will treat thee now, even at the Door and Threshold of this House, but only with this Intelligence, that Mr. Badman lies dead within. Be pleased therefore (if thy leisure will serve thee) to enter in, and behold the State in which he is laid, betwixt his Death-bed and the Grave. He is not buried as yet, nor doth he stink, as is designed he shall, before he lies down in oblivion.

Now as others have had their Funerals solemnized, according to their Greatness and Grandeur in the World, so likewise Mr. Badman, (forasmuch as he deserveth not to go down to his Grave with silence) has his Funeral State according to his deserts.

Four Things are usual at great Men's Funerals, which we will take leave, and I hope without offence, to allude to, in the Funeral of Mr. Badman.

First, They are sometimes, when dead, presented to their Friends, by their compleatly wrought Images, as lively as by cunning Men's Hands they can be; that the remembrance of them may be renewed to their Survivors, the remembrance of them and their deeds: And this I have endeavoured to answer in my Discourse of Mr. Badman; and therefore I have drawn him forth in his Features and Actions from his Childhood to his Grey-hairs. Here therefore thou hast him lively set forth as in Cutts; both as to the Minority, Flower, and Seniority of his Age, together with those Actions of his Life, that he was most capable of doing, in, and under those present Circumstances of time, place, strength; and the Opportunities that did attend him in these.

Secondly, There is also usual at great Men's Funerals, those Badges and Scutcheons of their Honour, that they have received from their Ancestors, or have been thought worthy of for the Deeds and Exploits they have done in their Life: And here Mr. Badman has his, but such as vary from all Men of Worth, but so much the more agreeing with the Merit of his doings: They all have descended in State, he only as an abominable Branch. His deserts are the deserts of Sin, and therefore the Scutcheons of Honour that he has, are only that he died without Honour, and at his End became a Fool. Thou shalt not be joined with them in burial.-----The Seed of evil doers shall never be renowned.

The Funeral Pomp therefore of Mr. Badman, is to wear upon his Hearse the Badges of a dishonourable and wicked Life; since his Bones are full of the Sins of his Youth, which shall lie down, as Job says, in the Dust with him: Nor is it fit that any should be his Attendants, now at his Death, but such as with him conspired against their own Souls in their Life; Persons whose Transgressions have made them infamous to all that have or shall know what they have done.

Some notice therefore I have also here in this little Discourse given the Reader, of them who were his Confederates in his Life, and Attendants at his Death; with a hint, either of some high Villany committed by them, as also of those Judgments that have overtaken and fallen upon them from the just and revenging Hand of God. All which are things either fully known by me, as being Eye and Ear-Witness thereto, or that I have received from such Hands, whose Relation as to this, I am bound to believe. And that the Reader may know them from other Things and Passages herein contained, I have pointed at them in the Margent, as with a Finger thus:

Thirdly, The Funerals of Persons of Quality have been solemnized with some suitable Sermon at the time and place of their Burial; but that I am not come to as yet, having got no further than to Mr. Badman's Death: but for as much as he must be buried, after he hath stunk out his time before his Beholders, I doubt not but some such that we read are appointed to be at the Burial of Gog, will do this Work in my stead; such as shall leave him neither Skin nor Bone above Ground, but shall set a Sign by it till the buriers have buried it in the Valley of Hamon-gog, Ezek. 39.

Fourthly, At Funerals there does use to be Mourning and Lamentation, but here also Mr. Badman differs from others; his Familiars cannot lament his departure, for they have not sense of his damnable State; they rather ring him, and sing him to Hell in the Sleep of Death, in which he goes thither. Good Men count him no loss to the World, his Place can well be without him, his Loss is only his own, and 'tis too late for him to recover that Damage or Loss by a Sea of bloody Tears, could he shed them. Yea, God has said, he will laugh at his Destruction; who then shall lament for him, saying, Ah! my Brother. He was but a stinking Weed in his Life; nor was he better at all in his Death: Such may well be thrown over the Wall without Sorrow, when once God has plucked them up by the Roots in his Wrath.

Reader, If thou art of the race, lineage, stock or fraternity of Mr. Badman, I tell thee before thou readest this Book, thou wilt neither brook the Author nor it, because he hath writ of Mr. Badman as he has. For he that condemneth the wicked that die so, passeth also the Sentence upon the wicked that live. I therefore expect neither Credit of, nor Countenance from thee, for this Narration of thy Kinsman's Life.

For thy old love to thy Friend, his ways, doings, &c. will stir up in thee Enmity rather, in thy very Heart, against me. I shall therefore incline to think of thee, that thou wilt rent, burn, or throw it away in contempt: Yea, and wish also, that for writing so notorious a Truth, some Mischief may befall me. I look also to be loaded by thee with disdain, scorn and contempt; yea that thou shouldst railingly and vilifyingly say, I lie, and am a bespatterer of honest Men's Lives and Deaths. For Mr. Badman, when himself was alive, could not abide to be counted a Knave (though his Actions told all that went by, that indeed he was such an one :) How then should his Brethren that survive him, and that tread in his very steps, approve of the Sentence that by this Book is pronounced against him? Will they not rather imitate Corah, Dathan, and Abiram's Friends, even rail at me for condemning him, as they did at Moses for doing Execution?

I know 'tis ill puddling in the Cockatrices Den, and that they run hazards that hunt the Wild-Boar. The Man also that writeth Mr. Badman's Life, had need be fenced with a Coat of Mail, and with the Staff of a Spear, for that his surviving Friends will know what he doth: but I have adventured to do it, and to play, at this time, at the hole of these Asps; if they bite, they bite; if they sting, they sting. Christ sends his Lambs in the midst of Wolves, not to do like them, but to suffer by them for bearing plain Testimony against their bad deeds: But had one not need to walk with a Guard, and to have a Centinel stand at ones Door for this? Verily, the Flesh would be glad of such help; yea, a spiritual Man, could he tell how to get it, Acts 23. But I am stript naked of these, and yet am commanded to be faithful in my service for Christ. Well then, I have spoken what I have spoken, and now come on me what will, Job. 13. 13. True, the Text says, Rebuke a Scornor, and he will hate thee; and that, He that reproveth a wicked Man, getteth himself a Blot and Shame; but what then? Open rebuke is better than secret love; and he that receives it, shall find it so afterwards.

So then, whether Mr. Badman's Friends shall rage or laugh at what I have writ, I know that the better End of the Staff is mine. My endeavour is to stop an hellish Course of Life, and to save a Soul from Death, (Jam. 5.) and if for so doing, I meet with Envy from them, from whom in reason I should have thanks, I must remember the Man in the Dream, that cut his way through his armed Enemies, and so got into the beauteous Palace; I must, I say, remember him, and do my self likewise.

Yet four things I will propound to the Consideration of Mr. Badman's Friends, before I turn my back upon them.

1. Suppose that there be an Hell in very deed, not that I do question it, any more than I do whether there be a Sun to shine; but I suppose it for Argument sake, with Mr. Badman's Friends; I say, suppose there be an Hell, and that too, such an one as the Scripture speaks of, one at the remotest distance from God and Life eternal, one where the Worm of a guilty Conscience never dies, and where the Fire of the Wrath of God is not quenched.

Suppose, I say, that there is such an Hell, prepared of God (as there is indeed) for the Body and Soul of the ungodly World after this Life, to be tormented in: I say, do but with thy self suppose it, and then tell me, is it not prepared for thee, thou being a wicked Man? Let thy Conscience speak, I say, is it not prepared for thee, thou being an ungodly Man? And dost thou think, wast thou there now, that thou art able to wrestle with the Judgment of God? Why then do the fallen Angels tremble there? Thy Hands cannot be strong, nor can thy Heart endure, in that Day when God shall deal with thee, Ezek. 22. 14.

2. Suppose that some one that is now a Soul in Hell for Sin, was permitted to come hither again to dwell; and that they had a grant also, that upon Amendment of Life, next time they dye, to change that place for Heaven and Glory; what sayst thou, O wicked Man? Would such an one (thinkest thou) run again into the same Course of Life as before, and venture the Damnation that for Sin he had already been in? Would he choose again to lead that cursed Life that afresh would kindle the Flames of Hell upon him, and that would bind him up under the heavy Wrath of God? O! he would not, he would not; the sixteenth of Luke insinuates it: yea Reason it self, awake, would abhor it, and tremble at such a Thought.

3. Suppose again, that thou that livest and rollest in thy Sin, and that as yet hast known nothing but the Pleasure thereof, shouldst be by an Angel conveyed to some place where with convenience, from thence thou mightest have a view of Heaven and Hell; of the Joys of the one, and the Torments of the other; I say, suppose that from thence thou mightest have such a View thereof, as would convince thy Reason, that both Heaven and Hell, are such realities as by the Word they are declared to be; wouldest thou (thinkest thou) when brought to thy home again, chuse to thy self thy former Life, to wit, to return to thy Folly again? No; if belief of what thou sawest, remained with thee, thou wouldest eat Fire and Brimstone first.

4. I will propound again. Suppose that there was amongst us such a Law, (and such a Magistrate to inflict the Penalty,) That for every open Wickedness committed by thee, so much much of thy Flesh should with burning Pincers be plucked from thy Bones: Wouldest thou then go on in thy open way of Lying, Swearing, Drinking and Whoring, as thou with delight doest now? Surely, surely, No: The fear of the Punishment would make thee forbear; yea, would make thee tremble, even then when thy Lusts were powerful, to think what a Punishment thou wast sure to sustain, so soon as the Pleasure was over. But Oh! the folly, the madness, the desperate madness that is in the Hearts of Mr. Badman's Friends, who in despite of the threatnings of an holy and sin revenging God, and of the outcries and warnings of all good Men; yea, that will in despite of the Groans and Torments of those that are now in Hell for Sin, (Luk. 16. 24, 28.) go on in a sinful course of Life; yea, though every Sin is also a step of descent, down to that infernal Cave. O how true is that saying of Solomon, The Heart of the Sons of Men is full of evil, and madness is in their Heart while they live, and after that they go to the dead, Eccles. 9. 3. To the dead! that is, to the dead in Hell, to the damned dead; the place to which those that have died Bad Men are gone, and that those that live Bad Men are like to go to, when a little more Sin, like stolen Waters, hath been imbibed by their sinful Souls.

That which has made me publish this Book is,

1. For that Wickedness like a Flood is like to drown our English World: It begins already to be above the Tops of the Mountains; it has almost swallowed up all; our Youth, our middle Age, Old Age, and all, are almost carried away of this Flood. O Debauchery, Debauchery, what hast thou done in England! Thou hast corrupted our young Men, and hast made our old Men Beasts; thou hast deflowered our Virgins, and hast made Matrons Bawds. Thou hast made our Earth to reel to and fro like a Drunkard; 'tis in danger to be removed like a Cottage, yea, it is, because Transgression is so heavy upon it, like to fall and rise no more, Isa. 24. 20.

O! that I could mourn for England, and for the Sins that are committed therein, even while I see that without Repentance, the Men of God's Wrath are about to deal with us, each having his slaughtering Weapon in his Hand, (Ezek. 9. 1, 2.) Well, I have written, and by God's Assistance shall pray, that this Flood may abate in England; and could I but see the Tops of the Mountains above it, I should think that these Waters were abating.

2. It is the duty of those that can, to cry out against this deadly plague, yea, to lift up their Voice as with a Trumpet against it; that Men may be awakened about it, fly from it, as from that which is the greatest of Evils. Sin pulled Angels out of Heaven, pulls Men down to Hell, and overthroweth Kingdoms. Who, that sees an House on Fire, will not give the Alarm to them that dwell therein? Who that sees the Land invaded, will not set the Beacons on a Flame? Who, that sees the Devils, as roaring Lyons continually devouring Souls, will not make an Out-cry? But above all, when we see Sin, sinful Sin, a swallowing up a Nation, sinking of a Nation, and bringing its Inhabitants to temporal, spiritual, and eternal Ruin, shall we not cry out, and cry, They are drunk, but not with Wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink; they are intoxicated with the deadly poison of Sin, which will, if its malignity be not by wholesome means allayed, bring Soul and Body, and Estate, and Country, and all, to ruin and destruction?

3. In and by this my Out-cry, I shall deliver my self from the Ruins of them that perish: for a Man can do no more in this Matter, I mean as Man in my Capacity, than to detect and condemn the Wickedness, warn the evil doer of the Judgment, and fly therefrom my self. But O! that I might not only deliver my self! Oh that many would hear, and turn at this my Cry, from Sin! That they may be secured from the Death and Judgment that attend it.

Why I have handled the Matter in this method, is best known to my self: and why I have concealed most of the Names of the Persons whose Sins or Punishments I here and there in this Book make relation of, is,

1. For that neither the Sins nor Judgments were all alike open; the Sins of some, were committed, and the Judgments executed for them only in a Corner. Not to say that I could not learn some of their Names; for could I, I should not have made them publick, for this reason.

2. Because I would not provoke those of their Relations that survive them; I would not justly provoke them; and yet, as I think, I should, should I have intailed their Punishment to their Sins, and both to their Names, and so have turned them into the World.

3. Nor would I lay them under Disgrace and Contempt, which would, as I think, unavoidably have happened unto them had I withal inserted their Names.

As for those whose Names I mention, their Crimes or Judgments were manifest; publick almost as any thing of that Nature that happeneth to mortal Men. Such therefore have published their own Shame by their Sin, and God, his Anger, by taking of open Vengeance.

As Job says, God has struck them as wicked Men in the open sight of others, Job 34. 26. So that I cannot conceive, since their Sin and Judgment was so conspicuous, that my admonishing the World thereof, should turn to their detriment: For the publishing of these things, are, so far as Relation is concerned, intended for remembrances: That they may also be-think themselves, repent and turn to God, lest the Judgments for their Sins should prove hereditary. For the God of Heaven hath threatned to visit the Iniquity of the Fathers upon the Children, if they hate him, to the third and fourth Generation, Exod. 20. 5.

Nebuchad.

Nebuchadnezzar's punishment for his Pride being open, (for he was for his Sin, driven from his Kingly Dignity, and from among Men too, to eat Grass like an Ox, and to company with the Beasts,) Daniel did not stick to tell Belshazzar his Son to his Face thereof; nor to publish it that it might be read and remembred by the Generations to come. The same may be said of Judas and Ananias, &c. for their Sin and Punishment were known to all the dwellers at Jerusalem, Acts i. Chap. 5.

Nor is it a Sign but of desperate impenitence and hardness of Heart, when the Offspring or Relations of those who have fallen by open, fearful and prodigious Judgments, for their Sin, shall overlook, forget, pass by, or take no notice of such high outgoings of God against them and their House. Thus Daniel aggravates Belshazzar's Crime, for that he hardened his Heart in Pride, though he knew that for that very Sin and Transgression, his Father was brought down from his height, and made to be a Companion for Asses. And thou his Son, O Belshazzar, says he, hast not humbled thy Heart, though thou knewest all this, Dan. 5. A home reproof indeed, but home is most fit for an open and a continued in Transgression.

Let those then that are the Offspring or Relations of such, who by their own Sin, and the dreadful Judgments of God, are made to become a Sign, (Deut. 16. 9, 10.) having been swept, as Dung, from off the Face of the Earth, beware, lest when Judgment knocks at their Door, for their Sins, as it did before at the Door of their Progenitors, it falls also with as heavy a stroke as on them that went before them: Lest, I say, they in that Day, instead of finding Mercy, find for their high, daring, and Judgment affronting Sins, Judgment without Mercy.

To conclude, let those that would not die Mr. Badman's Death, take heed of Mr. Badman's Ways: For his Ways bring to his End; Wickedness will not deliver him that is given to it; though they should cloak all with a Profession of Religion.

If it was a Transgression of Old, for a Man to wear a Woman's Apparel, surely it is a Transgression now for a Sinner to wear a Christian Profession for a Cloak. Wolves in Sheep's Cloathing swarm in England this Day: Wolves both as to Doctrine, and as to Practice too. Some Men make a Profession, I doubt, on purpose that they may twist themselves into a Trade; and thence into an Estate; yea, and if need be, into an Estate Knavishly, by the ruins of their Neighbour: let such take heed, for those that do such things have the greater Damnation.

Christian, make thy Profession shine by a Conversation according to the Gospel: Or else thou wilt damnify Religion, bring scandal to thy Brethren, and give offence to the Enemies; and 'twould be better that a Millstone was hanged about thy Neck, and that thou, as so adorned, was cast into the bottom of the Sea, than so to do.

Christian, a Profession according to the Gospel, is, in these Days, a rare thing; seek then after it, put it on, and keep it without spot; and (as becomes thee) white, and clean, and thou shalt be a rare Christian.

The Prophecy of the last times is, that professing Men (for so I understand the Text) shall be, many of them, base; (2 Tim. 3.) but continue thou in the Things that thou hast learned, not of wanton Men, not of licentious Times, but of the Word and Doctrine of God, that is according to Godliness; and thou shalt walk with Christ in white.

Now God Almighty give his People Grace, not to hate or malign Sinners, nor yet to choose any of their ways, but to keep themselves pure from the Blood of all Men, by speaking and doing according to that Name and those Rules that they profess to know, and love; for Jesus Christ's sake.

John Bunyan.

O F
Mr. B A D M A N,

Presented to the World in a familiar DIALOGUE between Mr. Wiseman, and Mr. Attentive.

Wiseman.

GOOD morrow my good Neighbour, Mr. Attentive; whither are you walking so early this Morning? Methinks you look as if you were concerned about something more than ordinary. Have you lost any of your Cattle, or what is the Matter?

Attentive. Good Sir, Good Morrow to you, I have not as yet lost ought, but yet you give a right guess of me, for I am, as you say, concerned in my Heart, but 'tis because of the badness of the times. And Sir, you, as all our Neighbours know, are a very observing Man, pray therefore what do you think of them?

Wife. Why, I think, as you say, to wit, that they are bad times, and bad they will be, until Men are better: for they are bad Men, that make bad Times; if Men therefore would mend, so would the Times. 'Tis a folly to look for good Days, so long as Sin is so high, and those that study its nourishment so many. God bring it down, and those that nourish it, to Repentance, and then my good Neighbour, you will be concerned, not as you are now: Now you are concerned because times are so bad; but then you will be so, because times are so good: Now you are concerned so as to be perplexed, but then you will be concerned so as to lift up your Voice with shouting; for I dare say, could you see such Days they would make you shout.

Atten. Ay, so they would, such times I have prayed for, such times I have longed for: but I fear they will be worse before they be better.

Wife. Make no Conclusions, Man: for he that hath the Hearts of Men in his hand, can change them from worse to better, and so bad times into good. God give long Life to them that are good, and especially to those of them that are capable of doing him service in the World. The Ornament and Beauty of this lower World, next to God and his Wonders, are the Men that spangle and shine in Godliness.

Now as Mr. Wiseman said this, he gave a great sigh.

Atten. Amen, Amen, But why, good Sir, do you sigh so deeply? is it for ought else than that for the which as you have perceived, I my self am concerned?

Wife. I am concerned with you, for the Badness of the Times; but that was not the cause of that sigh, of the which, as I see, you take notice. I sighed at the remembrance of the Death of that Man for whom the Bell tolled at our Town yesterday.

Atten. Why, I trow, Mr. Goodman your Neighbour is not dead. Indeed I did hear that he had been sick.

Wife. No, no, it is not he. Had it been he, I could not but have been concerned, but yet not as I am concerned now. If he had died, I should only have been concerned for that the World had lost a Light: but the Man that I am concerned for now, was one that never was good, therefore such an one who is not dead only, but damned. He died that he might die, he went from Life to Death, and then from Death to Death, from death Natural to death-Eternal. And as he spake this, the Water stood in his Eyes.

Atten. Indeed, to go from a death-bed to Hell is a fearful Thing to think on. But good Neighbour Wiseman, he pleased to tell me who this Man was, and why you conclude him so miserable in his Death?

Wife. Well, if you can stay, I will tell you who he was, and why I conclude thus concerning him.

Atten. My leisure will admit me to stay, and I am willing to hear you out. And I pray God your discourse may take hold on my Heart, that I may be bettered thereby.

So they agreed to sit down under a Tree: Then Mr. Wifeman proceeded as followeth.

Wife. The Man that I mean, is one Mr. Badman; he has lived in our Town a great while, and now, as I said, he is dead. But the reason of my being so concerned at his death, is, not for that he was at all related to me, or for that any good Conditions died with him, for he was far from them, but for that, as I greatly fear, he hath, as was hinted before, died two deaths at once.

Atten. I perceive what you mean by two deaths at once; and to speak truth, 'tis a fearful Thing thus to have ground to think of any: for although the Death of the Ungodly and Sinners is laid to heart but of few, yet to die in such a state, is more dreadful and fearful than any Man can imagine. Indeed if a Man had no Soul, if his state was not truly Immortal, the Matter would not be so much; but for a Man to be so disposed of by his Maker, as to be appointed a sensible Being for ever, and for him too to fall into the Hands of revenging Justice, that will be always, to the utmost extremity that his Sin deserveth, punishing of him in the dismal dungeon of Hell, this must needs be unutterably sad, and lamentable.

Wife. There is no Man, I think, that is sensible of the worth of one Soul, but must, when he hears of the Death of unconverted Men, be stricken with sorrow and grief: because, as you said well, that Man's state is such, that he has a sensible Being for ever. For 'tis sense that makes punishment heavy. But yet sense is not all that the Damned have, they have sense and reason too; so then, as sense receiveth punishment with sorrow, because it feels, and bleeds under the same, so by reason, and the exercise thereof, in the midst of torment, all present Affliction is aggravated, and that three manner of ways:

1. Reason will consider thus with himself; For what am I thus tormented? and will easily find 'tis for nothing but that base and filthy thing, Sin; and now will Vexation be mixed with Punishment, and that will greatly heighten the Affliction.

2. Reason will consider thus with himself. How long must this be my state? And will soon return to himself this Answer: This must be my state for ever and ever. Now this will greatly increase the Torment.

3. Reason will consider thus with himself; What have I lost more than present ease and quiet by my Sins that I have committed? And will quickly return himself this Answer: I have lost Communion with God, Christ, Saints and Angels, and a share in Heaven and eternal Life: And this also must needs greaten the Misery of poor damned Souls. And this is the case of Mr. Badman.

Atten. I feel my heart even shake at the thoughts of coming into such a State. Hell! who knows that is yet alive, what the torments of Hell are? This word Hell gives a very dreadful sound.

Wife. Ay, so it does in the Ears of him that has a tender Conscience. But if, as you say, and that truly, the very Name of Hell, is so dreadful, what is the Place it self, and what are the Punishments that are there inflicted, and that without the least Intermision, upon the Souls of damned Men, for ever and ever.

Atten. Well, but passing this; my leisure will admit me to stay, and therefore pray tell me what it is that makes you think that Mr. Badman is gone to Hell.

Wife. I will tell you. But first do you know which of the Badmans I mean?

Atten. Why was there more of them than one?

Wife. O, yes, a great many, both Brothers and Sisters, and yet all of them the Children of a godly Parent, the more a great deal is the Pity.

Atten. Which of them therefore was it that died.

Wife. The eldest, old in Years, and old in Sin; but the sinner that dies an hundred years old shall be accursed.

Atten. Well, but what makes you think he is gone to Hell?

Wife. His wicked life, and fearful death, especially since the Manner of his death was so corresponding with his life.

Atten. Pray let me know the manner of his Death, if your self did perfectly know it.

Wife. I was there when he died: But I desire not to see another such Man (while I live) die in such sort as he did.

Atten. Pray therefore let me hear it.

Wife. You say you have leisure and can stay, and therefore, if you please, we will discourse even orderly of him. First, we will begin with his Life, and then proceed to his Death: Because a Relation of the first may the more affect you, when you shall hear of the second.

Atten. Did you then so well know his Life?

Wife. I knew him of a Child. I was a Man, when he was but a Boy, and I made special observation of him from first to last.

Atten. Pray then let me hear from you an account of his Life; but be as brief as you can, for I long to hear of the manner of his Death.

Wife. I will endeavour to answer your desires, and first, I will tell you, that from a Child he was very bad: his very beginning was ominous, and presaged that no good end, was, in likelihood, to follow thereupon.

thereupon. There were several sins that he was given to, when but a little one, that manifested him to be notoriously infected with original Corruption; for I dare say he learned none of them of his Father and Mother; nor was he admitted to go much abroad among other Children, that were vile, to learn to sin of them: Nay, contrariwise, if at any time he did get abroad amongst others, he would be as the Inventer of bad Words, and an example in bad Actions. To them all he used to be, as we say, the Ring-leader, and Master-finner from a Child.

Atten. This was a bad Beginning indeed, and did demonstrate that he was, as you say, polluted, very much polluted with Original Corruption. For to speak my mind freely, I do confess, that it is mine opinion, that Children come polluted with Sin into the World, and that oft-times the Sins of their Youth, especially while they are very young, are rather by virtue of indwelling Sin, than by Examples that are set before them by others. Not but that they learn to Sin by Example too, but Example is not the Root, but rather the Temptation unto Wickedness. The Root is Sin within; for from within, out of the Heart of Man proceedeth Sin.

Wife. I am glad to hear that you are of this Opinion, and to confirm what you have said by a few hints from the Word. Job 11. 12. Man in his Birth is compared to an Afs, (an unclean Beast) and to a wretched Infant in its blood: besides, all the first born of old that were offered unto the Lord, were to be redeemed at the Age of a Month, and that was before they were sinners by Imitation. The Scripture also affirmeth, that by the Sin of one, Judgment came upon all; and renders this Reason, for that all have sinned: nor is that Objection worth a Rush, That Christ by his Death hath taken away Original Sin. First, Because it is Scriptureless. Secondly, Because it makes them incapable of Salvation by Christ; for none but those that in their own Persons are Sinners, are to have Salvation by him. Many other things might be added, but between Persons so well agreed as you and I are, these may suffice at present: but when an Antagonist comes to deal with us about this matter, then we have for him often other strong Arguments, if he be an Antagonist worth the taking notice of.

Atten. But, as was hinted before, he used to be the Ring-leading Sinner, or the Master of mischief among other Children; yet these are but generals; pray therefore tell me in particular which were the Sins of his Childhood.

Wife. I will so. When he was but a Child, he was so addicted to * Lying, that his Parents scarce knew when to believe he spake true; yea, he would invent, tell, and stand to the Lyes that he invented and told, and that with such an audacious Face, that one might even read in his very countenance the symptoms of an hard and desperate heart this way.

Atten. This was an ill beginning indeed, and argueth that he began to harden himself in Sin betimes. For a Lie cannot be knowingly told and stood in, (and I perceive that this was his manner of way in lying) but he must as it were force his own heart unto it. Yea, he must make his heart hard, and bold to do it: Yea, he must be arrived to an exceeding pitch of Wickedness thus to do, since all this he did against that good Education, that before you seemed to hint, he had from his Father and Mother.

Wife. The want of good Education, as you have intimated, is many times a cause why Children do so easily, so soon, become bad; especially when there is not only a want of that, but bad Examples enough, as, the more is the Pity, there is in many Families; by virtue of which poor Children are trained up in Sin, and nursed therein for the Devil and Hell. But it was otherwise with Mr. Badman, for to my Knowledge, this his way of lying, was a great grief to his Parents, for their hearts were much dejected at this beginning of their Son; nor did there want Counsel and Correction from them to him, if that would have made him better. He wanted not to be told, in my hearing, and that over and over and over, That all Lyars should have their part in the Lake that burns with Fire and Brimstone; and that whosoever loveth and maketh a Lye, should not have any part in the new and heavenly Jerusalem: But all availed nothing with him; when a fit, or an occasion to lye, came upon him, he would invent, tell and stand to his Lie (as stedfastly as if it had been the biggest of Truths,) that he told, and that with that hardening of his heart and face, that it would be to those that stood by, a wonder. Nay, and this he would do when under the Rod of Correction which is appointed by God for Parents to use, that thereby they might keep their Children from Hell.

Atten. Truly it was, as I said, a bad beginning, he served the Devil betimes; yea he became Nurse to one of his Brats, for a spirit of Lying is the Devil's Brat, * for he is a Liar and the Father of it.

Wife. Right, he is the Father of it indeed. A lie is begot by the Devil as the Father, and is brought forth by the wicked Heart, as the Mother: wherefore another Scripture also saith, Why hath Satan filled thy heart to lye, &c. Yea, he calleth the heart that is big with a Lie, an heart that hath Conceived, that is by the Devil. Why hast thou conceived this thing in thy heart, thou hast not lied unto Men, but unto God.

* Badman addicted to Lying from a child.

True, his Lie was a Lie of the highest nature, but every Lie hath the same Father and Mother as had the lie last spoken of. For he is a liar, and the Father of it.

A lie then is the Brat of Hell, and it cannot be in the Heart before the Person has committed a kind of spiritual Adultery with the Devil. That Soul therefore that telleth a known Lie, has lien with, and conceived it by lying with the Devil, the only Father of lies. For a Lie has only one Father and Mother, the Devil and the Heart. No marvel therefore if the Hearts that hatch and bring forth Lies, be so much of Complexion with the Devil. Yea, no marvel though God and Christ have so bent their Word against Liars: a Liar is wedded to the Devil himself.

Atten. It seems a marvellous Thing in mine Eyes, that since a Lie is the Offspring of the Devil, and since a Lie brings the Soul to the very den of Devils, to wit, the dark Dungeon of Hell; that Men should be so desperately wicked as to accustom themselves to so horrible a Thing.

Wife. It seems also marvellous to me, specially when I observe for how little a matter some Men will study, contrive, make and tell a Lie. You shall have some that will Lie it over and over, and that for a Penny * profit. Yea, lie and stand in it, although they know that they lie: yea, you shall have some Men that will not stick to tell Lie after Lie, though themselves get nothing thereby; They will tell Lies in their ordinary discourse with their Neighbours, also their News, their Jest, and their Tales must needs be adorned with Lies; or else they seem to bear no good sound to the Ear, nor shew much to the Fancy of him to whom they are told. But alas, what will these Liars do, when, for their Lies they shall be tumbled down into Hell, to that Devil that did beget those Lies in their Heart, and so be tormented by Fire and Brimstone, with him, and that for ever and ever, for their Lies?

Atten. Can you not give one some example of God's Judgments upon Liars, that one may tell them to Liars when one hears them lie, if perhaps they may by the hearing thereof, be made afraid, and ashamed to lie.

Wife. Examples! why, † Ananias and his Wife are Examples enough to put a stop, one would think, to a Spirit addicted thereto, for they both were stricken down dead for telling a Lie, and that by God himself, in the midst of a company of People. But if God's threatening of liars with Hell-fire, and with the loss of the Kingdom of Heaven, will not prevail with them to leave off to lie and make lies, it cannot be imagined that a Relation of temporal Judgments that have swept liars out of the World heretofore, should do it.

Now, as I said, this Lying was one of the first sins that Mr. Badman was addicted to, and he could make them and tell them fearfully.

Atten. I am sorry to hear this of him, and so much the more, because, as I fear, this Sin did not reign in him alone; for usually one that is accustomed to Lying, is also accustomed to other evils besides; and if it were not so also with Mr. Badman, it would be indeed a wonder.

Wife. You say true, the Liar is a Captive Slave of more than the Spirit of Lying: and therefore this Mr. Badman, as he was a Liar from a Child, so he was also much given to * pilfer and steal, so that what he could, as we say, handsomely lay his hands on, that was counted his own, whether they were the Things of his fellow Children; or if he could lay hold of any thing at a Neighbour's house, he would take it away; you must understand me of Trifles; for being yet but a Child, he attempted no great matter, especially at first. But yet as he grew up in strength and ripeness of wit, so he attempted to pilfer and steal things still of more value than at first. He took at last great pleasure in robbing of Gardens and Orchards; and as he grew up, to steal Fullen from the Neighbourhood: Yea, what was his Father's, could not escape his Fingers, all was Fish that came to his Net, so hardened, at last, was he in this mischief also.

Atten. You make me wonder more and more. What, play the Thief too! What play the Thief so soon! He could not but know, though he was but a Child, that what he took from others, was none of his own. Besides, if his Father was a good Man, as you say, it could not be, but he must also hear from him, that to steal was to transgress the Law of God, and so to run the hazard of eternal Damnation.

Wife. His Father was not wanting to use the Means to reclaim him, often urging, as I have been told, that saying in the Law of Moses, Thou shalt not steal: And also that, That is the Curse that goeth forth over the Face of the whole Earth, for every one that stealeth shall be cut off, &c. The light of Nature also, though he was little, must needs shew him that what he took from others, was not his own, and that he would not willingly have been served so himself. But all was to no purpose, let Father and Conscience say what they would to him, he would go on, he was resolved to go on in his Wickedness.

Atten. But his Father would, as you intimate, sometimes rebuke him for his Wickedness; pray how would he carry it then?

Wife. How! why, like to a Thief that is found. He would stand * gloating, and hanging down his head in a fullen, pouching manner, (a body might read, as we use use to say the Picture of ill-luck in his Face,) and when his Father did demand his answer to such questions concerning his Villany, he would grumble and mutter at him, and that should be all he could get.

Atten. But you said that he would also rob his Father, methinks that was an unnatural Thing.

Wife. Natural or unnatural, all is one to a Thief. Besides, you must think that he had likewise Companions to whom he was, for the Wickedness that he saw in them, more || firmly knit, than either to Father or Mother. Yea, and what had he cared if Father and Mother had died for grief for him. Their death would have been, as he would have counted, great release and liberty to him: For the Truth is, they and their counsel was his Bondage; yea, and if I forget not, I have heard some say, that when he was, at times, among his Companions he would greatly * re-joyce to think that his Parents were old, and could not live long, and then, quoth he, I shall be mine own Man, to do what I list, without their controul.

Atten. Then it seems he counted that robbing of his Parents was no Crime.

Wife. None at all, and therefore he fell directly under that Sentence, Who so robbeth his Father or his Mother, and saith it is no Transgression, the same is the Companion of a Destroyer. And for that he set so light by them as to their Persons and Counsels, 'twas a sign that at present he was of a very abominable spirit, † and that some Judgment waited to take hold of him in time to come.

Atten. But can you imagine what it was, I mean, in his conceit (for I speak not now of the suggestions of Satan, by which doubtless he was put on to do these things,) I say what it should be in his conceit, that should make him think that this his manner of pilfering and stealing was no great matter.

Wife. It was, for that, the things that he stole, were small; to rob Orchards, and Gardens, and to steal Pullen, and the like, these he counted || Tricks of Youth, nor would he be beat out of it by all that his Friends could say. They would tell him that he must not covet, or desire, (and yet to desire, is less than to take) even any thing, the least thing that was his Neighbours, and that if he did, it would be a Transgression of the Law; but all was one to him: what through the wicked Talk of his Companions, and the Delusion of his own corrupt heart, he would go on in his pilfering course, and where he thought himself secure, would talk of, and laugh at it when he had done.

Atten. Well, I heard a Man once, when he was upon the Ladder with the Rope about his Neck, confess (when ready to be turned off by the Hangman) that that which had brought him to that end, was his accustoming of himself, when young, to pilfer and steal small things. To my best remembrance he told us, that he began the trade of a Thief by stealing of Pins and Points, and therefore did forewarn all the Youth, that then were gathered together to see him die, to take heed of beginning, though but with little sins, because by tampering at first with little ones, way is made for the Commission of bigger.

Wife. Since you are entred upon Stories, I also will tell you one, the which, though I heard it not with mine own Ears, yet my Author I dare believe: * It is concerning one old Tod, that was hanged about twenty years ago, or more, at Hartford, for being a Thief. The Story is this:

At a Summer Assizes holden at Hartford, while the Judge was sitting upon the Bench, comes this old Tod into the Court, cloathed in a green Suit, with his Leathern Girdle in his Hand, his Bosom open, and all on a dung sweat, as if he had run for his Life; and being come in, he spake aloud as follows: † My Lord, said he, Here is the veryest Rogue that breaths upon the Face of the Earth. I have been a Thief from a Child: When I was but a little one, I gave my self to rob Orchards, and to do other such like wicked Things, and I have continued a Thief ever since. My Lord, there has not been a Robbery committed thus many years, within so many miles of this place, but I have either been at it, or privy to it.

The Judge thought the Fellow was mad, but after some conference with some of the Justices, they agreed to indict him; and so they did of several felonious Actions; to all which he heartily confessed guilty, and so was hanged with his Wife at the same time.

Atten. This is a remarkable Story indeed, and you think it is a true one.

Wife. It is not only remarkable, but pat to our purpose. This Thief, like Mr. Badman, began his Trade betimes; he began too where Mr. Badman began, even at robbing of Orchards, and other such things, which brought him, as you may perceive, from sin to sin, till at last it brought him to the publick shame of sin, which is the Gallows.

As for the Truth of this Story, the Relator told me that he was at the same time himself in the Court, and stood within less than two Yards of old Tod, when he heard him aloud to utter the Words.

Atten. These two Sins of Lying and Stealing were a bad Sign of an evil End.

Wife. So they were, and yet Mr. Badman came not to his End like old Tod; tho' I fear to as bad, nay, worse than was that Death of the Gallows, tho' less discerned by Spectators; but more of that by and by.

But you talk of these two Sins as if these were all that Mr. Badman was addicted to in his Youth: Alas, alas, he swarmed with Sins, even as a Beggar does with Vermin, and that when he was but a Boy.

Atten. Why what other Sins was he addicted to, I mean while he was but a Child?

Wife. You need not ask, to what other Sins was he, but to what other Sins was he not addicted; that is, of such as suited with his Age: for a Man may safely say, that nothing that was vile came amiss to him; if he was but capable to do it. Indeed some Sins there be that Childhood knows not how to be tampering with; but I speak of Sins that he was capable of committing, of which I will nominate two or three more. And,

* Badman First, He could not endure the * Lord's Day, because of the Holiness that did attend it; the Beginning of that Day was to him as if he was going to Prison, (except he could get out from his Father and Mother, and lurk in by-holes among his Companions, until holy Duties were over.) Reading the Scriptures, hearing Sermons, godly Conference, repeating of Sermons and Prayer, were Things that he could not away with; and therefore if his Father on such days, (as often he did, tho' sometimes notwithstanding his Diligence, he would be sure to give him the Slip) did keep him strictly to the Observation of the Day, he would plainly shew by all Carriages that he was highly discontent therewith: He would sleep at Duties, would talk vainly with his Brothers, and as it were, think every godly Opportunity seven times as long as it was, grudging till it was over.

† Why Badman could not abide the Lord's-day.

Atten. This his abhorring of that day, was not, I think, for the Sake of the day itself: for as it is a day, it is nothing else but as other days of the Week: But I suppose that the † Reason of his loathing of it, was, for that God hath put Sanctity and Holiness upon it; also because it is the day above all the days of the week that ought to be spent in holy Devotion, in Remembrance of our Lord's Resurrection from the dead.

Wife. Yes, 'twas therefore, that he was such an Enemy to it, even because more Restraint was laid upon him on that day, from his own ways, than were possible should be laid upon him on all others.

Atten. Doth not God by instituting of a day unto holy Duties, make great proof how the Hearts and Inclinations of poor People do stand to Holiness of Heart, and a Conversation in holy Duties.

|| God proves the heart what it is, by instituting of the Lord's day, and setting it apart to his service.

Wife. || Yes doubtless; and a Man shall shew his Heart and his Life what they are, more by one Lord's-day, than by all the days of the week besides: And the reason is, because on the Lord's-day there is a special restraint laid upon Men as to Thoughts and Life, more than upon other days of the week besides. Also, Men are enjoined on that day to a stricter performance of holy Duties, and restraint of worldly Business, than upon other days they are; wherefore, if their hearts incline not naturally to good, now they will shew it, now they will appear what they are. The Lord's-day is a kind of an Emblem of the heavenly Sabbath above, and it makes manifest how the Heart stands to the perpetuity of Holiness, more than to be found in a transient Duty, does.

On other days a Man may be in and out of holy Duties, and all in a quarter of an hour; but now, the Lord's-day is, as it were, a day that enjoins to one perpetual Duty of Holiness: Remember that thou keep holy the Sabbath-day, (which by Christ is not abrogated, but changed, into the first of the week,) not as it was given in particular to the Jews, but as it was sanctified by him from the Beginning of the World; and therefore is a greater proof of the frame and temper of a Man's Heart, and does more make manifest to what he is inclined, than doth his other performance of Duties: Therefore God puts great difference between them that truly call (and walk in) this day as holy, and count it honourable, upon the account that now they have an opportunity to shew how they delight to honour him; in that they have, not only an Hour, but a whole Day to shew it in: I say, he puts great difference between these, and that other sort that say, When will the Sabbath be gone, that we may be at our worldly business. The first he calleth a blessed Man, but brandeth the other for an un sanctified worldling. And indeed, to delight our selves in God's service upon his Holy days, gives a better proof of a sanctified Nature, than to grudge at the coming, and to be weary of the holy duties of such days, as Mr. Badman did.

Atten. There may be something in what you say, for he that cannot abide to keep one Day holy to God, to be sure he hath given a sufficient Proof that he is an un sanctified Man; and as such, what should he do in Heaven? That being the place where a perpetual Sabbath is to be kept to God; I say, to be kept for ever and ever. And for ought I know, one Reason why one Day in seven, had been by our Lord set apart unto holy Duties for Men, may be to give them Conviction that there is Enmity in the Hearts of Sinners to the God of Heaven, for he that hateth Holiness, hateth God himself. They pretend to love God, and yet love not a holy Day, and yet love not to spend that Day in one continued act of Holiness to the Lord: They had as good say nothing, as to call him Lord, Lord, and yet not do the things that he says. And this Mr. Badman was such such an one: he could not abide this Day, nor any of the Duties of it. Indeed, when he could get from his Friends, and so * spend it in all manner of Idleness and Profaneness, then he would be pleased well enough: but what was this but a turning the Day into Night, or other than taking an Opportunity at God's forbidding, to follow our Callings, to solace and satisfy our Lusts and Delights of the Flesh. I take the liberty to speak thus of Mr. Badman, upon a Confidence of what you, Sir, have said of him, is true.

Wife. You needed not to have made that Apology for your censuring of Mr. Badman, for all that knew him, will confirm what you say of him to be true. He could not abide either that Day, or any thing else that had the Stamp or Image of God upon it. Sin, sin, and to do the thing that was naught, was that which he delighted in, and that from a little Child.

Atten. I must say again, I am sorry to hear it, and that for his own sake, and also for the sake of his Relations, who must needs be broken to pieces with such doings as these: For, for these things sake comes the Wrath of God upon the Children of Disobedience: and doubtless he must be gone to Hell, if he died without Repentance; and to beget a Child for Hell, is sad for Parents to think on.

Wife. Of his Dying, as I told you, I will give you a Relation anon, but now we are upon his Life, and upon the Manner of his Life in his Childhood, even of the Sins that attended him then, some of which I have mentioned already; and indeed I have mentioned but some, for yet there are more to follow, and those not at all inferior to what you have already heard.

Atten. Pray what were they?

Wife. Why he was greatly given, and that while a Lad, to grievous * Swearing and Cursing: yea, he then made no more of Swearing and Cursing, than I do of telling my Fingers. Yea, he would do it without Provocation thereto. He counted it a Glory to Swear and Curse, and it was as natural to him, as to eat and drink and sleep.

Atten. Oh! what a young Villain was this! here is, as the Apostle says, a yielding of Members as Instruments of Unrighteousness unto Sin, indeed! This is proceeding from Evil to Evil with a Witness; This argueth that he was a black-mouthed young Wretch indeed.

Wife. He was so; and yet, as I told you, he counted, above all, this kind of sinning, to be † a Badge of his Honour: He reckoned himself a Man's Fellow when he had learnt to Swear and Curse boldly.

|| Swearing and Cursing
a Badge
of Mr.
Badman's
Honour.

Atten. I am persuaded that many do think, as you have said, that to Swear, is a thing that does bravely become them, and that it is the best way for a Man, when he would put Authority, or Terror into his Words, to stuff them full of the Sin of Swearing.

Wife. You say right, else, as I am persuaded, Men would not so usually belch out their blasphemous Oaths, as they do: they take a pride in it; they think that to swear is Gentleman-like; and having once accustomed themselves unto it, they hardly leave it all the Days of their Lives.

Atten. Well, but now we are upon it, pray shew me || the difference between Swearing and Cursing; for there is a difference, is there not? || Difference between Swearing and Cursing.

Wife. Yes: There is a difference between Swearing and Cursing. Swearing, vain Swearing, such as young Badman accustomed himself unto. Now vain and sinful Swearing *, Is a light and wicked calling of God, &c. to witness to our vain and foolish attesting of things, and those things are of two sorts. * What Swearing is.

1. Things that we swear, are, or shall be done.

2. Things so sworn to, true or false.

1. Things that we swear, are, or shall be done. Thou swearest thou hast done such a thing, that such a thing is so, or shall be so; for it is no matter which of these it is that Men swear about, if it be done lightly and wickedly, and groundlessly, it is vain, because it is a Sin against the third Commandment, which says, Thou shalt not take the Name of the Lord thy God in vain. Exod. 20. 7. For this is a vain using of that Holy and Sacred Name, and so a Sin for which, without sound Repentance, there is not, nor can be rightly expected, Forgiveness.

Atten. Then it seems, though as to the Matter of Fact, a Man swears truly, yet if he sweareth lightly and groundlessly, his Oath is evil, and he by it, under Sin.

Wife. Yes, a Man may say, † The Lord liveth, and that is true, and yet in so saying, swear falsely; because he sweareth vainly, needlessly, and without a ground. To swear groundedly and necessarily, (which then a Man does, when he swears as being called thereto of God,) that is tolerated by the Word: But this was none of Mr. Badman's swearing, and therefore that which now we are not concerned about. † A Man may Sin in swearing to the Truth. Jer. 5. 2.

Atten. I perceive, by the Prophet, that a Man may Sin in swearing to the Truth: They therefore must needs most horribly sin, that swear to confirm their Jest and Lies; and as they think, the better to beautify their foolish talking.

Wife. They sin with an high Hand; for they presume to imagine, || that God is as wicked as themselves, to wit, that he is an Avoucher of Lies to be true. For, as I said before, to swear, is to call God to witness; and to swear to a Lie, is to call God to witness that that Lie is true. This therefore must needs offend; for it puts the highest

|| He that swears to a Lie, concludes that God is as wicked as himself.

Rom. 6. 13.

highest affront upon the Holiness and Righteousness of God, therefore his Wrath must sweep them away. This kind of swearing is put in with lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing Adultery; and therefore must not go unpunished: For if God will not hold him guiltless that taketh his Name in vain, which a Man may do when he swears to a Truth (as I have shewed before,) how can it be imagined, that he should hold such guiltless, who, by swearing, will appeal to God, if Lies be not true, or that swear out of their frantick and Bedlam madness. It would grieve and provoke a sober Man to Wrath, if one should swear to a notorious Lie, and avouch that that Man would attest it for a Truth; and yet thus do Men deal with the holy God: They tell their Jestings, Tales and Lies, and then swear by God that they are true. Now this kind of swearing was as common with young Badman, as it was to eat when he was an hungred; or to go to bed when it was night.

Atten. I have often mused in my Mind, what it should be that should make Men so common in the use of the Sin of swearing, since those that be wise, will believe them never the sooner for that.

Wise. It cannot be any thing that is good, you may be sure; because the thing it self is abominable: * 1. Therefore it must be from the promptings of the Spirit of the Devil within them. 2. Also it flows sometimes from hellish Rage, when the Tongue hath set on fire of Hell even the whole course of Nature. 3. But commonly Swearing flows from that daring Boldness that biddeth defiance to the Law that forbids it. 4. Swearers think also that by their belching of their blasphemous Oaths out of their black and polluted Mouths, they shew themselves the more valiant Men. 5. And imagine also, that by these outrageous kind of villainies, they shall conquer those that at such a time they have to do with, and make them believe their Lies to be true. 6. They also swear frequently to get Gain thereby, and when they meet with Fools they overcome them this way. But if I might give Advice in this matter, no Buyer should lay out one Farthing with him that is a common Swearer in his Calling; especially with such an Oath-master that endeavoureth to swear away his Commodity to another, and that would swear his Chapmans Money into his own Pocket.

Atten. All these causes of Swearing, so far as I can perceive, flow from the same Root as do the Oaths themselves, even from a hardened and desperate Heart. But pray shew me now how wicked cursing is to be distinguished from this kind of swearing.

+ How Cursing is distinguished from Swearing.

Wise. † Swearing, as I said, hath immediately to do with the Name of God, and it calls upon him to be witness of the Truth of what is said: That is, if they that swear, swear by him. Some indeed swear by Idols, as by the Mafs, by our Lady, by Saints, Beasts, Birds, and other Creatures; but the usual way of our profane ones in England, is to swear by God, Christ, Faith, and the like: But however, or by whatever they swear, Cursing is distinguished from Swearing thus.

† To Curse, to Curse profanely, it is to ^{Of Cursing what it is.} sentence another or our self, for, or to evil: or to wish that some evil might happen to the Person or Thing under the Curse, unjustly.

It is to sentence for, or to evil, (that is, without a Cause :) Thus Shimei cursed David: He sentenced him for and to evil unjustly, when he said to him, Come out, come out thou bloody Man, and thou Man of Belial. The Lord hath returned upon thee all the Blood of the House of Saul, in whose stead thou hast reigned, and the Lord hath delivered the Kingdom into the Hand of Absalom thy Son: and behold thou art taken in thy Mischief, because thou art a bloody Man. ^{2 Sam. 16. 5, 7, 8.}

This David calls a grievous Curse. And ^{1 King 2. 8.} behold, saith he to Solomon his Son, thou hast with thee Shimei a Benjamite, which cursed me with a grievous curse in the Day when I went to Mahanaim.

But what was this Curse? Why, First, It was a wrong Sentence past upon David; Shimei called him Bloody Man, Man of Belial, when he was not. Secondly, He sentenced him to the Evil that at present was upon him, for being a bloody Man, (that is, against the House of Saul,) when that present Evil overtook David, for quite another thing.

And we may thus apply it to the || profane ones of our times, who in their Rage and Envy, have little else in their Mouths but a Sentence against their Neighbour for, and to Evil unjustly. How common is it with many, when they are but a little offended with one, to cry, Hang him, Damn him, Rogue! This is both a sentencing of him for, and to Evil, and is in it self a grievous Curse. || How the profane ones of our times curse.

2. The other kind of Cursing, is to wish that some Evil might happen to, and overtake this or that Person or Thing: And this kind of Cursing, Job counted a grievous Sin. I have not suffered (says he) my Mouth to Sin, by wishing a Curse to his Soul; or consequently, to Body or Estate. This then is a wicked cursing, to wish that Evil might either befall another or ourselves: And this kind of cursing young Badman accustomed himself unto.

1. He would wish that Evil might befall others; he would wish their Necks broken, or that their Brains were out, or that the Pox, or the Plague was upon them, and the like: All which is a devilish kind of cursing, and is become one of the common Sins of our Age.

2. He would also as often wish a Curse

Badman's way of Cursing.

to himself, saying, Would I might be hanged, or burned, or that the Devil might fetch me, if it be not so, or the like. We count the Damme* Blades to be great Swearers, but when in their hellish Fury they say, God damn me, God perisb me, or the like, they rather curse than swear; yea, curse themselves, and that with a Wish that Damnation might light upon themselves; which Wish and Curse of theirs in a little time, they will see accomplished upon them, even in Hell-fire, if they repent them not of their Sins.

Atten. But did this young Badman accustom himself to such filthy kind of Language?

Wife. I think I may say, that nothing was more frequent in his Mouth, and that upon the least provocation. Yea he was so versed in such kind of Language, that neither Father, nor Mother, nor Brother, nor Sister, nor Servant, no nor the very Cattle that his Father had, could escape these Curses of his. I say, that even the brute Beasts when he drove them, or rid upon them, if they pleased not his Humour, they must be sure to partake of his Curse. † He would wish their Necks broke, their Legs broke, their Guts out, or that the Devil might fetch them, or the like: and no marvel, for he that is so hardy to wish Damnation, or other bad Curses to himself, or dearest Relations; will not stick to wish Evil to the silly Beast, in his Madness.

Atten. Well, I see still that this Badman was a desperate Villain. But pray, Sir, since you have gone thus far, now shew me whence this Evil of cursing ariseth, and also what dishonour it bringeth to God; for I easily discern that it doth bring Damnation to the Soul.

Wife. This evil of Cursing ariseth, in general, from the desperate Wickedness of the Heart, but particularly from, † 1. Envy, which is, as I apprehend, the leading Sin to Witchcraft. 2. It also ariseth from Pride, which was the Sin of the fallen Angels; 3. It ariseth too from Scorn and Contempt of others: 4. But for a Man to curse himself, must needs arise from desperate Madness.

The ‖ dishonour that it bringeth to God, is this. It taketh away from him his Authority, in whose Power it is only, to Bless and Curse; not to Curse wickedly, as Mr. Badman, but justly, and righteously, giving by his Curse, to those that are wicked, the due Reward of their deeds.

Besides, these wicked Men, in their wicked cursing of their Neighbour, &c. do even curse God himself in his handy work. Man is God's Image, and to curse wickedly the Image of God, is to curse God himself. Therefore as when Men wickedly swear, they rend, and tare God's Name, and make him, as much as in them lies, the avoucher and approver of all their Wickedness; so he that curseth and condemneth in this sort his Neighbour, or that wisheth him Evil, curseth, condemneth, and wisheth evil to the Image of God, and consequently judgeth and condemneth God himself.

Suppose that a Man should say with his Mouth, I wish that the King's Picture was burned; would not this Man's so saying, render him as an Enemy to the Person of the King? Even so it is with them that, by cursing, wish Evil to their Neighbour, or to themselves, they contemn the Image, even the Image of God himself.

Atten. But do you think that the Men that do thus, do think that they do so vilely, so abominably?

Wife. The question is not what Men do believe concerning their Sin, but what God's Word says of it: If God's Word says that Swearing and Cursing are Sins, though Men should count them for Vertues, their Reward will be a Reward for Sin, to wit, the Damnation of the Soul.

To * curse another, and to swear vainly * and falsely, are Sins against the Light of Nature.

1. To curse is so, because, whoso curseth another, knows, that at the same time he would not be so served himself.

2. To swear also, is a Sin against the same Law: for Nature will tell me, that I should not lie, and therefore much less swear to confirm it. Yea, the Heathens have looked upon Swearing to be a solemn Ordinance of God, and therefore not to be lightly or vainly used by Men, though to confirm a Matter of Truth.

Atten. But I wonder, since Cursing and Swearing are such Evils in the Eyes of God, that he doth not make some Examples to others, for their committing such Wickedness.

Wife. Alas! so he has, a thousand times twice told, as may be easily gathered by any observing People in every Age and Countrey. I could present you with several my self; but waving the Abundance that might be mentioned, I will here present you with † two: One was that dreadful Judgment of God upon one N. P. at Wimbleton in Surrey; who, after a horrible Fit of Swearing at, and Cursing of some Persons that did not please him, suddenly fell sick, and in little time died raving, cursing, and swearing.

But above all, take that dreadful Story of Dorothy Mately, an Inhabitant of Asb-over in the County of Derby.

This Dorothy Mately, saith the Relater, was noted by the People of the Town to be a great Swearer, and Curser, and Lyar, and Thief; (just like Mr. Badman.) And the Labour that she did usually follow, was to wash the Rubbish that came forth of the Lead Mines, and there to get Sparks of Lead-Ore; and her usual way of asserting of things, was with these kind of Imprecations: I would I might sink into the Earth if it be not so, or I would God would make the Earth open and swallow me up. Now upon the 23^d of March, 1660. this Dorothy was washing of Ore upon the Top of a steep Hill, about a quarter of a Mile from Asbover, and was there taxed by a Lad for taking of two single Pence out of his Pocket, (for he had laid his Breeches by, and was at work in his Drawers;) but she violently denied it; wishing, That the ground might swallow her up if she had them: She also used the same wicked Words on several other Occasions that Day.

Now one George Hodgkinson of Asbover, a Man of good Report there, came accidentally by where this Dorothy was, and stood still a while to talk with her, as she was washing her Ore; there stood also a little Child by her Tub side, and another a Distance from her, calling aloud to her to come away; wherefore the said George took the Girl by the Hand to lead her away to her that called her: But behold, they had not gone above ten Yards from Dorothy, but they heard her crying out for Help; so looking back, he saw the Woman, and her Tub, and Sieve, twirling round, and sinking into the Ground. Then said the Man, Pray to God to pardon thy Sin, for thou art never like to be seen alive any longer. So she and her Tub twirled round and round, till they sunk about three yards into the Earth, and then for a while staid. Then she called for Help again; thinking, as she said, that she should stay there. Now the Man, though greatly amazed, did begin to think which way to help her; but immediately a great Stone which appeared in the Earth, fell upon her Head, and brake her Skull, and then the Earth fell in upon her, and covered her. She was afterwards digged up, and found about four Yards within Ground, with the Boys two single Pence in her Pocket, but her Tub and Sieve could not be found.

Atten. You bring to my Mind a sad Story, the which I will relate unto you. The thing is this: About a Bow-shoot from where I once dwelt, there was a blind Ale-house, and the Man that kept it had a Son whose Name was Edward. This Edward was, at it were, an half-fool, both in his Words and manner of Behaviour. To this blind Ale-house certain jovial Companions would once or twice a Week come, and this Ned, (for so they called him) his Father would entertain his Guests withal; to wit, by calling for him to make them Sport by his foolish Words and Gestures. So when these boon Blades came to this Man's House, the Father would call for Ned: Ned therefore would come forth; and the Villain was devilishly addicted to Cursing, yea to Cursing his Father and Mother, and any one else that did cross him. And because (though he was an half-fool) he saw that his Practice was pleasing, he would do it with the more Audaciousness.

Well, when these brave Fellows did come at their Times to this Tippling-house (as they call it) to fuddle and make merry, then must Ned be called out; and because his Father was best acquainted with Ned, and best knew how to provoke him, therefore He would usually ask him such Questions, or command him such Business, as would be sure to provoke him indeed. Then would he (after his foolish manner) curse his Father most bitterly; at which the old Man would laugh, (and so would the rest of the Guests, as at that which pleased them best) still continuing to ask, that Ned still might be provoked to curse, that they might still be provoked to laugh. This was the Mirth with which the old Man did use to entertain his Guests.

The Curses wherewith this Ned did use to curse his Father, and at which the old Man would laugh, were these, and such like: The Devil take you; The Devil fetch you: He would also wish him Plagues and Destructions many. Well, so it came to pass, through the righteous Judgment of God, that Ned's Wishes and Curses were in a little Time fulfilled upon his Father; for not many Months passed between them after this manner, but the Devil did indeed take him, possess him, and also in few Days carried him out of this World by Death; I say, Satan did take him and possess him: I mean, so it was judged by those that knew him, and had to do with him in that his lamentable Condition. He could feel him like a live thing go up and down in his Body; but when tormenting Time was come (as he had often tormenting Fits) then he would lie like an hard Bump in the soft Place of his Chest, (I mean I saw it so) and so would rent and tare him, and make him roar till he died away.

I told you before, that I was an Ear and Eye-witness of what I here say; and so I was. I have heard Ned in his Roguery, cursing his Father, and his Father laughing thereat most heartily; still provoking Ned to curse, that his Mirth might be encreased. I saw his Father also, when he was possessed, I saw him in one of his Fits, and saw his Flesh, (as 'twas thought) by the Devil, gathered up on an heap, about the Bigness of half an Egg; to the unutterable Torture and Affliction of the old Man. There was also one Freeman, (who was more than an ordinary Doctor) sent for, to cast out this Devil; and I was there when he attempted to do it: The manner whereof was this. They had the possessed into an out-room, and laid him on his Belly upon a Form, with his head hanging over the Forms end; then they bound him down thereto: which done, they set a pan of Coals under his Mouth, and put something therein which made a great smoak; by this means (as 'twas said) to fetch out the Devil. There therefore they kept the Man till he was almost smothered in the smoak, but but no Devil came out of him; at which Freeman was somewhat abashed, the Man greatly afflicted, and I made to go away wondring and fearing. In a little time therefore that which possessed the Man, carried him out of the World, according to the curfed wishes of his Son. And this was the end of this hellish mirth.

Wife. These were all sad Judgments.

Atten. These were dreadful Judgments indeed.

Wife. Ay, and they look like the Threatning of that Text, (though chiefly it concerned Judas;) As he loved cursing, so let it come unto him; as he delighted not in blessing, so let it be far from him. As he cloathed himself with cursing as with a garment, so let it come into his bowels like water, and as oyl into his bones.

Atten. It is a fearful thing for Youth to be trained up in a way of Cursing and Swearing.

Wife. Trained up in them! that I cannot say Mr. Badman was, for his Father hath oft-times in my hearing, bewailed the Badness of his Children, and of this naughty Boy in particular. I believe that the Wickedness of his Children made him (in the Thoughts of it) go many a Night with heavy heart to bed, and with as heavy a one to rise in the Morning. But all was one to his graceless Son, neither wholesome counsel, nor fatherly sorrow, would make him mend his Manners.

* There are some indeed that do train up their Children to swear, curse, lye and steal, and great is the misery of such poor Children whose hard hap it is to be ushered into the World by, and to be under the Tuition too of such ungodly Parents. It had been better for such Parents, had they not begat them, and better for such Children had they not been born. O! methinks for a Father or a Mother to train up a Child in that very way that leadeth to Hell and Damnation, what thing so horrible! But Mr. Badman was not by his Parents so brought up.

Atten. But methinks, since this young Badman would not be ruled at home, his Father should have tried what good could have been done of him abroad, by putting him out to some Man of his acquaintance, that he knew to be able to command him, and to keep him pretty hard to some employ: So should he, at least have been prevented of time to do those Wickednesses that could not be done without time to do them in.

Wife. Alas his Father did so, † he put him out betimes to one of his own acquaintance, and entreated him of all love, that he would take care of his Son, and keep him from extravagant ways. His Trade also was honest and commodious; he had besides a full Employ therein, so that this young Badman had no vacant seasons, nor idle hours yielded him by his Calling, therein to take opportunities to do Badly: but all was one to him, as he had begun to be vile in his Father's house, even so he continued to be when he was in the house of his Master.

Atten. I have known some Children, who though they have been very bad at home, yet have altered much when they have been put out abroad; especially when they have fallen into a Family, where the Governours thereof have made conscience of maintaining of the Worship and Service of God therein; but perhaps that might be wanting in Mr. Badmans Masters house.

Wife. Indeed some Children do greatly mend, when put under other Mens roofs; but, as I said, this naughty Boy did not so; nor did his Badness continue, because he wanted a Master that both could and did correct it: For his || Master was a very || Young Badmans Master, and his qualifications. good Man, a very devout Person; one that frequented the best Soul-means, that set up the Worship of God in his Family, and also that walked himself thereafter. He was also a Man very meek and merciful, one that did never over drive young Badman in Business, nor that kept him at it at unseasonable hours.

Atten. Say you so! This is rare: I for my part can see but few that can parallel, in these things, with Mr. Badmans Master.

Wife. Nor I neither, (yet Mr. Badman had such an one;) for, for the most part, * Masters are now a days such as mind no- * A bad Master, a bad thing. thing but their worldly concerns, and if Apprentices do but answer their commands therein, Soul and Religion may go whether they will. Yea, I much fear, that there have been many towardly Lads put out by their parents to such Masters, that have quite undone them as to the next World.

Atten. The more is the pity. But pray, now you have touched upon this subject, shew me how many ways a Master may be the ruin of his poor Apprentice.

Wife. Nay, I cannot tell you of all the ways, yet some of them I will mention.

Suppose then that a towardly Lad be put to be an Apprentice with one that is reputed to be a godly Man, yet that Lad may be ruined many ways; that is, if his Master be not circumspect in all things that respect both God and Man, and that before his Apprentice.

1. † If he be not moderate in the use of † How many ways a Master may be the ruin of an Apprentice. his Apprentice; if he drives him beyond his strength; if he holds him to work at unseasonable hours; if he will not allow him convenient time to read the Word, to Pray, &c. This is the way to destroy him; that is, in those tender beginnings of good thoughts, and good beginnings about spiritual things.

2. If he suffers his house to be scattered with with profane and wicked Books, such as stir up to Lust, to Wantonness, such as teach idle, wanton, lascivious Discourse, and such as has a tendency to provoke to profane Drollery and Jestings; and lastly, such as tend to corrupt, and pervert the Doctrine of Faith and Holiness. All these things will eat as doth a Canker, and will quickly spoil, in Youth, &c. those good beginnings that may be putting forth themselves in them.

3. If there be a mixture of Servants, that is, if some very bad be in the same place, that's a way also to undo such tender Lads; for they that are bad and fordid Servants, will be often (and they have an opportunity too, to be) distilling and fomenting of their profane and wicked Words and Tricks before them, and these will easily stick in the Flesh and Minds of Youth, to the corrupting of them.

4. If the Master have one Guise for abroad, and another for home; that is, if his Religion hangs by in his House as his Cloak does, and he be seldom in it, except he be abroad; this, young beginners will take notice of, and stumble at. We say, Hedges have Eyes, and little Pitchers have Ears; and indeed, * Children make a greater Inspection into the Lives of Fathers, Masters, &c. than oft-times they are aware of: And therefore should Masters be careful, else they may soon destroy good beginnings in their Servants.

5. If the Master be unconscionable in his Dealing, and trades with lying Words; or if bad Commodities be avouched to be good, or if he seeks after unreasonable gain, or the like; his Servant sees it, and it is enough to undo him. Eli's Sons being bad before the Congregation, made Men despise the Sacrifices of the Lord.

But these things by the by, only they may serve for a hint to Masters to take heed that they take not Apprentices to destroy their Souls. But young Badman had none of these hinderances; † His Father took care, and provided well for him, as to this: He had a good Master, he wanted not good Books, nor good Instruction, nor good Sermons, nor good Examples, nor good fellow Servants neither: but all would not do.

Atten. 'Tis a wonder, that in such a Family, amidst so many spiritual helps, nothing should take hold of his Heart! What! not good Books, nor good Instructions, nor good Sermons, nor good Examples, nor good fellow Servants, nor nothing do him good!

Wife. You talk, he minded none of these things; nay, all these were || abominable to him.

1. For good Books, they might lie in his Master's House till they rotted for him, he would not regard to look into them; but contrariwise, would get all the bad and abominable Books that he could, as beastly Romances, and Books full of Ribbaldry, even such as immediately tended to set all fleshly Lusts on fire. True, he durst not be known to have any of these, to his Master; therefore would he never let them be seen by him, but would keep them in close places, and peruse them at such times, as yielded him fit Opportunities thereto.

2. For good Instruction, he liked that, much as he liked good Books; his care was to hear but little thereof, and to forget what he heard as soon as it was spoken. Yea, I have heard some that knew him then, say, that one might evidently discern by the shew of his countenance and gestures, that good counsel was to him like * little-ease, even a continual torment to him; nor did he ever count himself at liberty, but when farthest off of wholesome Words. He would hate them that rebuked him, and count them his deadly Enemies.

3. For good Example; which was frequently set him by his Master, both in Religious and Civil Matters; these young Badman would laugh at, and would also make a by word of them, when he came in place where he with safety could.

4. His Master indeed would make him go with him to Sermons, and that where he thought the best Preachers were, but this ungodly young Man, what shall I say, was (I think) a Master of Art in all mischief; he had these wicked ways to hinder himself of hearing, let the Preacher thunder never so loud.

1. * His way was, when come into the place of hearing, to sit down in some corner, and then to fall fast asleep.

2. Or else to fix his adulterous Eyes upon some beautiful Object that was in the place, and so all Sermon-while, therewith be feeding of his fleshly Lusts.

3. Or, if he could get near to some that he had observed would fit his Humour, he would be whispering, gigling, and playing with them, till such time as Sermon was done.

Atten. Why! he was grown to a prodigious height of Wickedness.

Wife. He was so, and that which aggravates all, was, this was his practice as soon as he was come to his Master, he was as ready at all these things, as if he had, before he came to his Master, served an Apprentiship to learn them.

Atten. There could not but be added (as you relate them) Rebellion to his Sin. Methinks it is as if he had said, I will not hear, I will not regard, I will not mind good, I will not mend, I will not turn, I will not be converted.

Wife. You say true, and I know not to whom more fitly to compare him, * than to that Man, who when I my self rebuked him for his Wickedness, in this great huff replied; replied; What would the Devil do for Company, if it was not for such as I.

Atten. Why did you ever hear any Man say so.

Wife. Yes, that I did; and this young Badman was as like him, as an Egg is like an Egg. Alas! the Scripture makes mention of many that by their Actions speak the same. They say unto God, Depart from us, for we desire not the Knowledge of thy ways: Again, They refuse to hearken, and pull away their Shoulder, and stop their Ears; yea, they make their Hearts hard as an Adamant-stone, lest they should hear the Law, and the Words that the Lord of Host hath sent. What are all these but such as Badman, and such as the young Man but now mentioned? That young Man was my Play-fellow when I was solacing myself in my Sins: I may make mention of him to my Shame; but he has a great many Fellows.

Atten. Young Badman was like him indeed, and he trod his Steps, as if his Wickedness had been his very Copy; I mean, as to his desperateness: for had he not been a desperate one, he would never have made you such a Reply, when you was rebuking of him for his Sin. But when did you give him such a Rebuke?

Wife. A while after God had parted him and I, by calling of me (as I hope) by his Grace, still leaving him in his Sins; and so far as I could ever gather, as he lived, so he died, even as Mr. Badman did: but we will leave him, and return again to our Discourse.

Atten. Ha, poor obstinate Sinners! Do they think that God cannot be even with them?

Wife. I do not know, what they think, but I know that God hath said, That as He cried, and they would not hear, so they shall cry, and I will not hear, saith the Lord. Doubtless there is a time a coming, when Mr. Badman will cry for this.

Atten. But I wonder that he should be so expert in Wickedness, so soon! alas, he was but a Stripling, I suppose he was, as yet, not Twenty.

Wife. No, nor Eighteen neither: but (as with Ishmael, and with the Children that mocked the Prophet) the Seeds of Sin did put forth themselves betimes in him.

Atten. Well, he was as wicked a young Man as commonly one shall hear of.

Wife. You will say so, when you know all.

Atten. All, I think here is a great All; but if there is more behind, pray let us hear it.

Wife. Why, then I will tell you, that he had not been with his Master much above a Year and a Half, but he came *acquainted with three young Villains (who here shall be nameless,) that taught him to add to his Sin, much of like kind; and he as aptly received their Instructions. One of them was chiefly given to Uncleaness, another to Drunkenness; and the third to Purloining, or stealing from his Master.

Atten. Alas poor Wretch, he was bad enough before, but these, I suppose, made him much worse.

Wife. That they made him worse you may be sure of, for they taught him to be an Arch, a chief one in all their ways.

Atten. It was an ill hap that he ever came acquainted with them.

Wife. You must rather word it thus.

† It was the Judgment of God that he did; that is, he came acquainted with them, through the Anger of God. He had a good Master, and before him a good Father: By these he had good counsel given him for Months and Years together; but his Heart was set upon mischief, he loved Wickedness more than to do good, even until his Iniquity came to be hateful; therefore, from the Anger of God it was, that these Companions of his, and he, did at last so acquaint together. Says Paul, They did not like to retain God in their knowledge; and what follows? wherefore, God gave them over, or up to their own hearts lusts. And again, As for such as turn aside to their own crooked ways, the Lord shall lead them forth with the workers of Iniquity. This therefore was God's Hand upon him, that he might be destroyed, be damned; because he received not the love of the Truth that he might be saved. He chose his Delusions and Deluders for him, even the company of base Men, of Fools, that he might be destroyed.

Atten. I cannot but think indeed, that it is a great Judgment of God for a Man to be given up to the company of vile Men; for what are such but the Devil's || Decoys, even those by whom he draws the simple into his Net? A Whoremaster, a Drunkard, a Thief, what are they but the Devil's baits, by which he catcheth others?

Wife. You say right; but this young Badman was no simple one, if by simple, you mean one uninstructed; for he had often good counsel given him: but if by simple, you mean, him that is a Fool as to the true Knowledge of, and Faith in Christ, then he was a simple one indeed: for he chose death, rather than life, and to live in continual opposition to God, rather than to be reconciled unto him; according to that saying of the wise Man; The Fools hated knowledge, and did not choose the Fear of the Lord: And what Judgment more dreadful can a Fool be given up to, than to be delivered into the Hands of such Men, that have skill to do nothing, but to ripen sin, and hasten its finishing unto Damnation? And therefore Men should be afraid of offending God, because he can in this Manner, punish them for their Sins. I knew a Man that once was, as I thought, hopefully awakened about his Condition; yea, I knew two that were so awakened; but in time they began to draw back, and to incline again to their lusts; wherefore, God gave them up to the Company of three or four Men, that in less than three years time brought them roundly to the Gallows, where they were hanged like Dogs, because they refused to live like honest Men.

Atten. But such Men do not believe, that thus to be given up of God, is in Judgment and Anger; they rather take it to be their liberty, and do count it their Happiness; they are glad that their Cord is loosed, and that the Reins are in their Neck; they are glad that they may sin without controul, and that they may chuse such Company as can make them more expert in an evil way.

Prov. 7.
12, 13.

Wise. Their Judgment is therefore so much the greater, because thereto is added Blindness of Mind, and Hardness of Heart in a wicked Way. They are turned up to the Way of Death, but must not see to what place they are going: They must go as the Ox to the Slaughter, and as the Fool to the Correction of the Stocks, till a Dart strike through their Liver, not knowing that it is for their Life. This, I say, makes their Judgment double, they are given up of God, for a while to sport themselves with that which will assuredly make them mourn at last, when their Flesh and their Body is consumed. These are those that Peter speaks of, that shall utterly perish in their own Corruptions; these, I say, who count it pleasure to riot in the day-time, and that sport themselves with their own deceivings, are, as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed.

Prov. 5.
11.

2 Pet. 2.
12, 13.

Atten. Well, but I pray now concerning these three Villains that were young Badman's Companions: Tell me more particularly how he carried it then.

Wise. How he carried it! why, he did as they. I intimated so much before, when I said, they made him an arch, a chief one in their Ways.

Badman
becomes a frequen-ter of Tavern.

First, He became a Frequenter of Taverns and Tippling-houses, and would stay there until he was even as drunk as a Beast. And if it was so, that he could not get out by day, he would, be sure, get out by night. Yea, he became so common a Drunkard, at last, that he was taken notice of to be a Drunkard even by all.

Atten. This was Swinish, for Drunkenness is so beastly a Sin, a Sin so much against Nature, that I wonder that any that have but the appearance of Men, can give up themselves to so beastly (yea, worse than beastly) a thing.

* A Story for a Drunkard.

Wise. It is a Swinish vanity indeed. * I will tell you another Story. There was a Gentleman that had a Drunkard to be his Groom, and coming home one night very much abused with Beer, his Master saw it. Well (quoth his Master within himself,) I will let thee alone to night, but to morrow morning I will convince thee that thou art worse than a Beast, by the behaviour of my Horse. So when morning was come, he bids his Man go and water his Horse, and so he did; but coming up to his Master, he commands him to water him again; so the fellow rid into the water the second time, but his Master's Horse would now drink no more, so the fellow came up and told his Master. Then said his Master, Thou drunken sot, thou art far worse than my Horse, he will drink but to satisfy Nature, but thou wilt drink to the abuse of Nature; he will drink but to refresh himself, but thou to thy hurt and damage; He will drink, that he may be more serviceable to his Master, but thou, till thou art incapable of serving either God or Man. O thou Beast, how much art thou worse than the horse that thou ridest on.

Atten. Truly I think that his Master served him right; for in doing as he did, he shewed him plainly, as he said, that he had not so much government of himself as his horse had of himself, and consequently that his Beast did live more according to the Law of his Nature by far, then did his Man. But pray go on with what you have further to say.

Wise. Why, I say, that there are [†] four things, which if they were well considered, would make drunkenness to be abhorred in the thoughts of the Children of Men.

† Four evils attend drunkenness.

1. It greatly tendeth to impoverish and beggar a Man. The drunkard, says Solomon, shall come to poverty. Many that have begun the World with Plenty, have gone out of it in Rags, through Drunkenness. Yea, many Children that have been born to good Estates, have yet been brought to a Flail and a Rake, through this beastly sin of their Parents.

Prov. 23.
20, 21.

2. This sin of Drunkenness, it bringeth upon the Body, many, great, and incurable Diseases, by which Men do in little time come to their end, and none can help them. So, because they are overmuch wicked, therefore they die before their time.

Ecclef. 7.
17.

3. Drunkenness, is a sin that is often times attended with abundance of other Evils, Who hath woe; Who hath sorrow? Who hath contention? Who hath babblings? Who hath wounds without cause? Who hath redness of the Eyes? They that tarry long at the Wine, they that go to seek mixt wine. That is, the Drunkard.

Pro. 23.
29, 30.

4. By Drunkenness, Men do oftentimes shorten their days; go out of the Ale-house drunk, and break their Necks before they come home. Instances not a few might be given of this, but this is so manifest, a Man need say nothing.

1 Cor. 6.
10.

Atten. || But that which is worse than all is

|| The fifth evil
the worst.

is, it also prepares Men for everlasting burnings.

Wife. Yea, and it so stupifies and besots the Soul, that a Man that is far gone in Drunkenness, is hardly ever recovered to God. Tell me, when did you see an old drunkard converted? No, no, such an one will sleep till he dies, though he sleeps on the top of a * Mast, let his dangers be
* Prov. 23. 34, 35. never so great, and Death and Damnation never so near, he will not be awaked out of his sleep. So that if a Man have any respect either to Credit, Health, Life or Salvation, he will not be a drunken Man. But the truth is, where this Sin gets the upper hand, Men are, as I said before, so intoxicated and bewitched with the seeming pleasures, and sweetness thereof; that they have neither heart nor mind to think of that which is better in it self; and would, if imbraced, do them good.

Atten. You said that Drunkenness tends to poverty, yet some make themselves rich by drunken bargains.

Wife. † I said so, because the Word says so. And as to some Mens getting thereby, that is indeed but rare and base: yea, and base will be the end of such gettings. The Word of God is against such ways, and the Curse of God will be the end of such doings. An Inheritance may sometimes, thus be hastily gotten at the beginning, but the end thereof shall not be blessed. Hark what the Prophet saith;
Habak. 2. Wo to him that coveteth an evil covetousness, that he may set his nest on high. Whether he makes Drunkenness, or ought else, the engine and decoy to get it; for that Man doth but consult the Shame of his own House, the spoiling of his Family, and the Damnation of his Soul; for that which he getteth by working of Iniquity, is but a getting by the devices of Hell; Therefore he can be no gainer neither for himself or family, that gains by an evil course. But this was one of the sins that Mr. Badman was addicted to after he came acquainted with these three fellows, nor could all that his Master could do break him of this Beastly sin.

Atten. But where, since he was but an Apprentice, could he get Money to follow this practice, for drunkenness, as you have intimated, is a very costly sin.

Wife. His Master || paid for all. For, (as I told you before) as he learned of these three Villains to be a beastly Drunkard; so he learned of them to pilfer and steal from his Master. Sometimes he would sell off his Master's goods, but keep the Money, that is when he could; also sometimes he would beguile his Master by taking out of his Cash-box: and when he could do neither of these, he would convey away of his Master's Wares, what he thought would be least missed, and send or carry them to such and such Houses, where he knew they would be laid up to his use, and then appoint set times there, to meet and make merry with these fellows.

Atten. This was as bad, nay, I think, worse than the former; for by thus doing, he did not only run himself under the Wrath of God, but has endangered the undoing of his Master and his Family.

Wife. Sins go not alone, but follow one the other as do the links of a chain; he that will be a Drunkard, must have Money either of his own, or of some other man's; either of his Father's, Mother's, Master's, or at the High-way, or some way.

Atten. I fear that many an honest man is undone by such kind of servants.

Wife. I am of the same mind with you, but † this should make the Dealer the more wary what kind of Servants he keeps, and what kind of Apprentices he takes. It should also teach him to look well to his Shop himself, also to take a strict Account of all things that are bought and sold by his Servant's. The Masters neglect herein may embolden his Servant to be bad, and may bring him too in short time to Rags and a Morfel of Bread.

Atten. I am afraid that there is much of this kind of pilfering among Servants in these bad days of ours.

Wife. Now, while it is in my mind, I will tell you a story. When I was in prison, there came a Woman to me that was under a great deal of trouble. So I asked her (she being a stranger to me) what she had to say to me. She said, she was afraid she should be damned. I asked her the cause of those fears. She told me, that she had sometime since lived with a Shopkeeper at Wellingborough, and had robbed his Box in the Shop several times of Money, to the Value of more than now I will say; and pray, says she, tell me what I shall do. I told her, I would have her go to her Master, and make him Satisfaction: She said, she was afraid; I asked her why? She said, she doubted he would hang her. I told her, that I would intercede for her life, and would make use of other friends too to do the like; but she told me, she durst not venture that. Well, said I, shall I send to your Master, while you abide out of sight, and make your Peace with him, before he sees you; and with that, I asked her her Master's Name. But all that she said in answer to this, was, Pray let it alone till I come to you again. So away she went, and neither told me her Master's Name nor her own: This is about ten or twelve years since, and I never saw her again. I tell you this Story for this cause; to confirm your fears, that such kind of Servants too many there be; and that God makes them sometimes like old Tod, of whom mention was made before (through the terrors that he lays upon them) to betray themselves.

I could tell you of another, that came to me me with a like relation concerning herself, and the robbing of her Mistress; but at this time let this suffice.

Atten. But what was that other Villain addicted to, I mean, young Badman's third companion.

* Badman's third companion addicted to Uncleanness.

Wife. *Uncleanness. I told you before, but it seems you forgot.

Atten. Right, it was Uncleanness. Uncleanness is also a filthy sin.

Wife. It is so; and yet it is one of the most reigning sins in our day.

Atten. So they say, and that too among those that one would think had more wit, even among the great ones.

† Sins of great Men dangerous.

Wife. The more is the pity: for usually Examples that are set by them that are great and chief, † spread sooner, and more universally, than do the sins of other men; yea, and when such men are at the head in transgressing, sin walks with a bold face through the Land. As Jeremiah saith of the Prophets, so may it be said of such, From them is Profaneness gone forth into all the land; that is, with bold and audacious face, Jer. 23. 15.

Atten. But pray let us return again to Mr. Badman and his companions. You say one of them was very vile in the commission of Uncleanness.

Wife. Yes, so I say; not but that he was a Drunkard and also Thievish, but he was most arch in this sin of uncleanness: This Roguery was his Master-piece, for he was a Ringleader to them all in the beastly sin of Whoredom. He was also best acquainted with such houses where they were, and so could readily lead the rest of his Gang unto them. The Strumpets also, because they knew this young Villain, would at first discover themselves in all their whorish pranks to those that he brought with him.

Atten. That is a deadly thing: I mean, it is a deadly thing to young men, when such beastly queans, shall, with words and carriages that are openly tempting, discover themselves unto them; it is hard for such to escape their snare.

Wife. That is true, therefore the Wise Man's counsel is the best: Come not near the door of her house; for they are (as you say) very tempting, as is seen by her in the Proverbs. I looked (says the Wise Man) through my casement, and beheld among the simple ones, I discerned a young man void of understanding, passing through the streets near her corner, and he went the way to her house:

In the twilight, in the evening, in the black and dark night. And behold, there met him a woman with the attire of an harlot, and subtil of heart; (* she is loud and stubborn, her feet abide not in her house. Now she is without, now she is in the street, and lieth in wait at every corner.) So she caught him, and kiss'd him, and with an impudent face said unto him: I have peace offerings with me; this day have I payed my vows. Therefore

* Signs of a Whore.

came I forth to meet thee, diligently to seek thy face, and I have found thee. I have decked my bed with coverings of tapestry, with carved works, with fine linnen of Egypt: I have perfumed my bed with myrrhe, aloes, and cinnamon; come let us take our fill of love until the morning, let us solace our selves with loves. Here was a bold Beast: And indeed, the very eyes, hands, words and ways of such, are all snares and bands to youthful lustful fellows: And with these was young Badman greatly snared.

Atten. This sin of Uncleanness is mightily cried out against both by Moses, the Prophets, Christ, and his Apostles; and yet, as we see, for all that, how men run head-long to it!

The Sin of Uncleanness cried out against.

Wife. You have said the truth, and I will add, that God, to hold men back from so filthy a sin, has set such a stamp of his indignation upon it, and commanded such evil effects to follow it, that were not they that use it bereft of all fear of God, and love to their own Health, they could not but stop and be afraid to commit it. For besides the eternal Damnation that doth attend such in the next world, (for these have no Inheritance in the Kingdom of Christ and of God, Ephes. 5.) the evil effects thereof in this world are dreadful.

Atten. Pray shew me some of them, that as occasion offereth itself, I may shew them to others for their good.

Wife. So I will. † 1. It bringeth a man (as was said of the Sin before) to want and poverty; for by means of a Whorish woman, a man is brought to a piece of bread. The reason is, for that an whore will not yield without hire; and men when the Devil and Lust is in them, and God and his fear far away from them, will not stick, so they may accomplish their desire, to lay their Signet, † What evils attend this Sin.

Prov. 6. 26.

their Bracelets, and their Stuff to pledge, rather than miss of the fulfilling of their lusts. 2. Again, by this Sin men diminish their strength, and bring upon themselves even upon the Body, a multitude of diseases. This King Lemuel's Mother warned him of. What my Son, said she, and what the Son of my Womb, and what the Son of my Vows: Give not thy Strength unto Women, nor thy ways to that which destroyeth Kings.

Gen. 38. 18.

This Sin is destructive to the Body. Give me leave to tell you another story. * I have heard of a great man that was a very unclean person, and he had lived so long in that Sin, that he had almost lost his Sight.

Prov. 31. 1, 2.

So his Physicians were sent for, to whom he told his Disease; but they told him, that they could do him no good, unless he would forbear his Women. Nay then, said he, farewell sweet Sight. Whence observe, that this Sin, as I said, is destructive to the Body; and also, that some men be so in love therewith, that they will have it, though it destroy their Body.

* A Story for unclean Persons to take notice of.

Atten. Paul says also, that he that sins this

this

this Sin, sins against his own Body. But what of that, he that will run the hazard of eternal Damnation of his Soul, but he will commit this Sin, will for it run the hazard of destroying his Body. If young Badman feared not the Damnation of his Soul, do you think that the consideration of impairing of his Body would have deterred him therefrom?

Wife. You say true. But yet, methinks, there are still such bad Effects follow, often, upon the Commission of it, that if Men would consider them, it would put, at least, a stop to their career therein.

Atten. What other evil effects attend this Sin.

Wife. Outward Shame and Disgrace, and that in these particulars:

More evils attend this Sin.

First, There often follows this foul Sin, the Foul Disease, now called by us the Pox. A Disease so nauseous and stinking, so infectious to the whole body (and so intailed to this Sin) that hardly are any common with unclean Women, but they have more or less a touch of it to their Shame.

Atten. That is a foul Disease indeed: I knew a Man once that rotted away with it; and another that had his Nose eaten off, and his Mouth almost quite sewed up thereby.

Wife. It is a Disease, that where it is, it commonly declares, that the cause thereof is Uncleaness. It declares to all that behold such a Man, that he is an odious, a beastly, unclean person. This is that strange Punishment that Job speaks of, that is appointed to seize on these Workers of Iniquity.

Job 31. 1.
2. 3.

Atten. Then it seems you think, that the strange Punishment that Job there speaks of, should be the foul disease.

Wife. I have thought so indeed, and that for this reason: We see that this Disease is entailed, as I may say, to this most beastly Sin, nor is there any Disease so intailed to any other Sin, as this to this. That this is the Sin to which the strange Punishment is entailed, you will easily perceive when you read the text. I made a Covenant with mine Eyes, said Job, why should I think upon a Maid? For what Portion is there (for that Sin) from above, and what Inheritance of the Almighty from on high? And then he answers himself; Is not Destruction to the Wicked, and a strange Punishment to the Workers of Iniquity? This strange Punishment is the Pox.

Also I think that this foul Disease is that which Solomon intends, when he saith (speaking of this unclean and beastly Creature) A Wound and Dishonour shall he get, and his Reproach shall not be turned away. A Punishment Job calls it, a Wound and Dishonour, Solomon calls it; and they both do set it as a Remark upon this Sin; Job calling it a strange Punishment, and Solomon a Reproach that shall not be turned away, from them that are common in it.

Atten. What other things follow upon the commission of this beastly Sin.

Wife. Why, often-times it is attended with Murder, with the Murder of the Babe begotten on the defiled Bed. How common it is for the Bastard-getter and Bastard-bearer, to consent together to murder their Children, will be better known at the Day of Judgment; yet something is manifest now.

I will tell you another Story. An ancient Man, one of mine acquaintance, a Man of good Credit in our Country, had a Mother that was a Midwife; who was mostly employed in laying great Persons. To this Woman's House, upon a time, comes a brave young Gallant on Horse-back, to fetch her to lay a young Lady. So she addresses herself to go with him; wherefore, he takes her up behind him, and away they ride in the Night. Now they had not rid far, but the Gentleman alighting from his Horse, took the old Midwife in his Arms from the Horse, turn'd round with her several times, and then set her up again; then he got up, and away they went till they came at a stately House, into which he had her, and so into a Chamber where the young Lady was in her Pains: He then bid the Midwife do her Office, and she demanded help, but he drew out his Sword and told her, if she did not make speed to do her Office without, she must look for nothing but death. Well, to be short, this old Midwife laid the young Lady, and a fine sweet Babe she had: Now there was made in a Room hard by, a very great Fire: So the Gentleman took up the Babe, went and drew the Coals from the Stock, cast the Child in, and covered it up, and there was an end of that. So when the Midwife had done her work, he paid her well for her pains, but shut her up in a dark Room all Day, and when Night came, took her behind him again, and carried her away, till she came almost at home; then he turned her round, and round, as he did before, and had her to her House, set her down, bid her farewell, and away he went: and she could never tell who it was.

This Story the Midwife's Son, who was a Minister, told me; and also protested that his Mother told it him for a truth.

Atten. Murder doth often follow indeed, as that which is the Fruit of this Sin: But sometimes God brings even these Adulterers, and Adulteresses to shameful ends. I heard of one, (I think, a Doctor of Physick) and his Whore, who had had three or four Bastards betwixt them, and had murdered them all, but at last themselves were hanged for it, in or near Colchester. It came out after this manner: The Whore was so afflicted in her Conscience about it, that she could not be quiet until she had made it known: Thus Thus God many times makes the Actors of Wickedness their own Accusers, and brings them by their own Tongues to condign Punishment for their own Sins.

Wife. There has been many such Instances, but we will let that pass. I was once in the Presence of a Woman, a married Woman, that lay sick of the Sickness whereof she died; and being smitten in her Conscience for the Sin of Uncleanness, which she had often committed with other Men, I heard her (as she lay upon her Bed) cry out thus: I am a Whore, and all my Children are Bastards: and I must go to Hell for my Sin; and look, there stands the Devil at my Beds Feet to receive my Soul when I die.

Atten. These are sad Stories, tell no more of them now, but if you please shew me yet some other of the evil effects of this beastly Sin.

Wife. This Sin is such a Snare to the Soul, that unless a Miracle of Grace prevents, it unavoidably perishes in the enchanting and bewitching Pleasures of it. This is manifest by these and such like Texts.

Prov. 6. 26. The Adulteress will hunt for the precious Life. Whoso committeth Adultery with a Woman, lacketh Understanding, and he that doth it destroys his own soul. An Whore is a deep Ditch, and a strange Woman is a narrow Pit.

Chap. 23. 27. Her House inclines to Death, and her Paths unto the Dead. None that go in unto her return again, neither take they hold of the Path of Life.

Prov. 2. 18, 19. She hath cast down many wounded; yea many strong Men have been slain by her, her House is the way to Hell, going down to the Chambers of Death.

Atten. These are dreadful Sayings, and do shew the dreadful state of those that are guilty of this Sin.

Wife. Verily so they do. But yet that which makes the whole more dreadful, is, That Men are given up to this Sin, because they are abhorred of God, and because abhorred, therefore they shall fall into the Commission of it; and shall live there.

Prov. 22. 14. The Mouth (that is, the flattering Lips) of a strange Woman is a deep Pit, the abhorred of the Lord shall fall therein. Therefore it saith again of such, that they have none Inheritance in the Kingdom of Christ and of God.

Atten. Put all together, and it is a dreadful thing to live and die in this transgression.

Wife. True. But suppose, that instead of all these Judgments, this Sin had attending of it all the Felicities of this life, and no Bitterness, Shame, or Disgrace mixed with it, yet one Hour in Hell will spoil all. O! this Hell, Hell-fire, Damnation in Hell, it is such an inconceivable Punishment, that were it but thoroughly believed, it would nip this Sin, with others, in the Head. But here is the Mischief, those that give up themselves to these things, do so harden themselves in Unbelief and Atheism about the things, the Punishments that God hath threatned to inflict upon the Committers of them, that at last they arrive to, almost, an absolute and firm belief that there is no Judgment to come hereafter: Else they would not, they could not, no not attempt to commit this Sin, by such abominable Language as some do.

I heard of one that should say to his Miss, when he tempted her to the committing of this sin, If thou wilt venture thy Body, I will venture my Soul. And I myself heard another say, when he was tempting of a Maid to commit uncleanness with him, (it was in Oliver's Days) That if she did prove with Child, he would tell her how she might escape punishment, (and that was then somewhat severe,) Say (saith he) when you come before the Judge, That you are with Child by the Holy Ghost. I heard him say thus, and it greatly afflicted me; I had a mind to have accused him for it before some Magistrate; but he was a great Man, and I was poor, and young: so I let it alone, but it troubled me very much.

Atten. 'Twas the most horrible thing that ever I heard in my life. But how far off are these Men from that Spirit and Grace that dwelt in Joseph.

Wife. Right; when Joseph's Mistress tempted him, yea tempted him daily; yea, she laid hold on him, and said with her Whore's forehead, Come lie with me, but he refused: He hearkned not to lie with her, or to be with her. Mr. Badman would have taken the Opportunity.

And a little to comment upon this of Joseph.

1. Here is a Miss, a great Miss, the Wife of the Captain of the Guard, some beautiful Dame, I'll warrant you.

2. Here is a Miss won, and in her whorish Affections come over to Joseph, without his speaking of a Word.

3. Here is her unclean Desire made known; Come lie with me, said she.

4. Here was a fit Opportunity. There was none of the Men of the House there within.

5. Joseph was a young Man full of strength, and therefore the more in danger to be taken.

6. This was to him, a Temptation, from her, that lasted Days.

7. And yet Joseph refused, 1. Her daily Temptation; 2. Her daily Solicitation; 3. Her daily Provocation, heartily, violently and constantly. For when she caught him by the Garment, saying, Lie with me, he left his Garment in her Hand, and gat him out. Ay, and although contempt, treachery, slander, accusation, imprisonment, and danger of death followed, (for an Whore careth not what mischief she does, when she cannot have her end) yet Joseph will not defile himself, sin against God, Desperate Words.

Gen. 39. Of chaste Joseph.

God, and hazard his own eternal Salvation.

Atten. Blessed Joseph! I would thou hadst more fellows!

Wife. Mr. Badman has more fellows than Joseph, else there would not be so many Whores as there are: For though I doubt not but that that Sex is bad enough this way, yet I verily believe that many of them are made Whores at first by the flatteries of Badman's fellows. Alas! there is many a Woman plunged into this Sin at first even by promises of Marriage. I say, by these promises they are flattered, yea, forced into a consenting to these Villanies, and so being in, and growing hardened in their Hearts, they at last give themselves up, even as wicked Men do, to act this kind of Wickedness with greediness. But Joseph you see, was of another mind, for the Fear of God was in him.

I will, before I leave this, tell you here two notable stories; and I wish Mr. Badman's Companions may hear of them. They are found in Clark's Looking-glass for Sinners; and are these.

Mr. Cleaver (says Mr. Clark) reports of one whom he knew, that had committed the act of Uncleanness, whereupon he fell into such horror of Conscience that he hanged himself; leaving it thus written in a Paper: Indeed, (saith he) I acknowledge it to be utterly unlawful for a Man to kill himself, but I am bound to act the Magistrate's part, because the punishment of this Sin is Death.

Clark doth also in the same Page make mention of two more, who as they were committing Adultery in London, were immediately struck dead with Fire from Heaven, in the very Act. Their Bodies were so found, half burnt up, and sending out a most loathsome savour.

Atten. These are notable stories indeed.

Wife. So they are, and I suppose they are as true as notable.

Atten. Well, but I wonder, if young Badman's Master knew him to be such a Wretch, that he would suffer him in his House.

Wife. They liked one another even as * Fire and Water do. Young Badman's ways were odious to his Master, and his Master's ways were such as young Badman could not endure. Thus in these two, was fulfilled that saying of the Holy Ghost: An unjust Man is an abomination to the Just, and he that is upright in the way is abomination to the Wicked.

The good Man's ways, Mr. Badman could not abide, nor could the good Man abide the bad ways of his base Apprentice. Yet would his Master, if he could, have kept him, and also have learnt him his Trade.

Atten. If he could! why he might, if he would, might he not?

Wife. Alas, Badman ran away from him once and twice, and would not at all be ruled. So the next time he did run away from him, he did let him go indeed. For he gave him no occasion to run away, except it was by holding of him as much as he could (and that he could do but little) to good and honest rules of Life. And had it been one's own Case, one should have let him go. For what should a Man do, that had either regard to his own Peace, his Childrens Good, or the preservation of the rest of his Servants from evil, but let him go? Had he staid, the House of Correction had been most fit for him, but thither his Master was loth to send him, because of the love that he bore to his Father. An House of Correction, I say, had been the fittest Place for him, but his Master let him go.

Atten. He ran away, you say, but whither did he run?

Wife. Why, to one of his own Trade, and also like himself. Thus the wicked joined Hand in Hand, and there he served out his time.

Atten. Then, sure, he had his heart's desire, when he was with one so like himself.

Wife. Yes. So he had, but God gave it him in his Anger.

Atten. How do you mean?

Wife. I mean as before, that for a wicked Man to be by the Providence of God, turned out of a good Man's Doors, into a wicked Man's House to dwell, is a sign of the Anger of God. For God by this, and such Judgments, says thus to such an one: Thou wicked one, thou lovest not me, my ways, nor my People; Thou castest my Law and good Counsel behind thy back: Come, I will dispose of thee in my Wrath; thou shalt be turned over to the ungodly, thou shalt be put to School to the Devil, I will leave thee to sink and swim in Sin, till I shall visit thee with Death and Judgment. This was therefore another Judgment that did come upon this young Badman.

Atten. You have said the truth, for God by such a Judgment as this, in effect says so indeed; for he takes them out of the Hand of the just, and binds them up in the Hand of the wicked, and whither they then shall be carried, a Man may easily imagine.

Wife. It is one of the saddest tokens of God's Anger that happens to such kind of Persons: And that for several Reasons.

1. Such an one, by this Judgment, is put out of the way, and from under the means which ordinarily are made use of to do good to the Soul. For a Family where Godliness is professed, and practised, is God's Ordinance, the place which he has appointed to teach young ones the way and fear of God. Now to be put out of such a Family into a bad, a wicked one, as Young Badman runs away from his Master.

He gets a new Master like himself.

A sign of God's anger upon young Badman.

Gen. 18. 18, 29.

Many are made Whores by promises of Marriage, &c.

Clark's Looking Glass for Sinners. Chap. 2. Pag. 12.

* Badman and his Master abhor one another.

Prov. 29. 27.

as Mr. Badman was, must needs be in Judgment, and a sign of the Anger of God. For in ungodly Families Men learn to forget God, to hate goodness, and to estrange themselves from the ways of those that are good.

2. In Bad Families, they have continually fresh Examples, and also incitements to evil, and fresh encouragements to it too. Yea moreover, in such Places evil is commended, praised, well-spoken of, and they that do it, are applauded; and this, to be sure, is a drowning Judgment.

3. Such Places are the very Haunts and Walks of the infernal Spirits, who are continually poisoning the Cogitations and Minds of one or other in such Families, that they may be able to poison others. Therefore observe it, usually in wicked Families, some one, or two, are more arch for Wickedness than are any other that are there. Now such are Satan's Conduit-pipes; for by them he conveys of the spawn of Hell, through their being crafty in wickedness, into the Ears and Souls of their Companions. Yea, and when they have once conceived Wickedness, they travel with it, as doth a Woman with Child, till they have brought it forth; Behold, he travelleth with iniquity, and hath conceived mischief, and brought forth Falshood. Some Men, as here is intimated in the Text, and as was hinted also before, have a kind of mystical, but hellish copulation with the Devil, who is the Father, and their Soul the Mother of Sin and Wickedness; and they, so soon as they have conceived by him, finish, by bringing forth Sin, both it, and their own damnation.

Atten. * How much then doth it concern those Parents that love their Children, to see, that if they go from them, they be put into such Families as be good, that they may learn there betimes to eschew evil, and to follow that which is good?

Wife. It doth concern them indeed; and it doth also concern them * that take Children into their Families, to take heed what Children they receive. For a Man may soon by a bad Boy, be damaged both in his Name, Estate, and Family, and also hindred in his Peace and peaceable Pursuit after God and Godliness; I say, by one such Vermin as a wicked and filthy Apprentice.

Atten. True, for one Sinner destroyeth much good, and a poor Man is better than a Liar. But many times a Man cannot help it; for such as at the beginning promise very fair, are by a little time proved to be very Rogues, like young Badman.

Wife. That is true also, but when a Man has done the best he can to help it, he may with the more confidence expect the Blessing of God to follow, or he shall have the more peace, if things go contrary to his desire.

Atten. Well, but did Mr. Badman and his Master agree so well? I mean his last Master, since they were Birds of a Feather,

I mean since they were so well met for Wickedness.

Wife. This second Master, was, as before I told you, bad enough; but yet he would often fall out with young Badman his Servant, and chide, yea and sometimes beat him too, for his naughty doings.

Atten. What! for all he was so bad himself! This is like the Proverb, The Devil corrects Vice.

Wife. I will assure you, 'tis as I say. For you must know, that Badman's ways suited not with his Master's gains. Could he have done as the Damsel that we read of Acts 16. did, to wit, fill his Master's Purse * with his badness, he had certainly been his White-boy, but it was not so with young Badman; and therefore, though his Master and he did suit well enough in the main, yet in this and that point they differed. † Young Badman was for neglecting of his Master's Business, for going to the Whore-house, for beguiling of his Master, for attempting to debauch his Daughters, and the like: No marvel then if they disagreed in these points. Not so much for that his Master had an antipathy against the fact itself, for he could do so when he was an Apprentice; but for that his Servant by his sin made spoil of his Commodities, &c. and so damnified his Master.

Had (as I said before) young Badman's Wickedness, only a tendency to his Master's advantage; as could he have sworn, lied, cozened, cheated, and defrauded customers for his Master, (and indeed sometimes he did so) but had that been all that he had done, he had not had, no not a wry word from his Master: But this was not always Mr. Badman's way.

Atten. That was well brought in, even the Maid that we read of in the Acts, and the Distinction was as clear betwixt the Wickedness, and Wickedness of servants.

Wife. Alas! Men that are wicked themselves, yet greatly hate it in others, not simply because it is Wickedness, but because it opposeth their interest. Do you think that that Maid's Master would have been troubled at the loss of her, if he had not lost, with her, his gain: No, I'll warrant you; she might have gone to the Devil for him: But when her Master saw that the hope of his gain was gone, then, Acts 16. then he fell to persecuting Paul. But Mr. Badman's Master did sometimes lose by Mr. Badman's sins, and then Badman and his Master were at odds.

Atten. Alas poor Badman! Then it seems thou couldest not at all times please thy like.

Wife. No, he could not, and the reason I have told you.

Atten. But do not bad Masters condemn themselves, in condemning the Badness of their servants.

Wife. Yes; in that they condemn that in another

Young Badman and his second Master cannot agree.

Reasons of their disagreeing.

another which they either have, or do allow in themselves. And the time will come, when that very sentence that hath gone out of their own Mouths against the Sins of others, themselves living and taking pleasure in the same, shall return with violence upon their own pates. The Lord pronounced Judgment against Baalsha, as for all his evils in general, so for this in special, because he was like the House of Jeroboam, and yet killed him. This is Mr. Badman's Masters case, he is like his Man, and yet he beats him. He is like his Man, and yet he rails at him for being bad.

Atten. But why did not young Badman run away from this Master, as he ran away from the other?

Why young Badman did not run away from this Master though he did beat him.

Wife. He did not. And if I be not mistaken, the reason why, was this. There was Godliness in the House of the first, and that young Badman could not endure. For fare, for lodging, for work, and time, he had better, and more by this Master's allowance, then ever he had by his last; but all this would not content, because Godliness was promoted there. He could not abide this praying, this reading of Scriptures, and hearing, and repeating of Sermons: he could not abide to be told of his Transgressions in a sober and godly manner.

Atten. There is a great deal in the manner of reproof, wicked Men both can, and cannot abide to hear their Transgressions spoken against.

Why Badman could bear his last Master's reproof better than he could the first.

Wife. There is a great deal of difference indeed. This last Master of Mr. Badman would tell Mr. Badman of his Sins in Mr. Badman's own dialect; he would swear, and curse, and damn, when he told him of his sins, and this he could bear better, than to be told of them after a godly sort. Besides, that last Master would, when his Passions and Rage was over, laugh at and make merry with the sins of his Servant Badman: And that would please young Badman well. Nothing offended Badman but blows, and those he had but few of now, because he was pretty well grown up. For the most part when his Master did rage and swear, he would give him Oath for Oath, and Curse for Curse, at least secretly, let him go on as long as he would.

Atten. This was hellish living.

By what means Badman came to be compleated in his wickedness.

Wife. 'Twas hellish living indeed: And a Man might say, that with this Master, young Badman compleated himself yet more and more in Wickedness, as well as in his trade: for by that he came out of his time, what with his own Inclination to sin, what with his acquaintance with his three Companions, and what with this last Master, and the Wickedness he saw in him; he became a Sinner in grain. I think he had a Bastard laid to his charge before he came out of his time.

Atten. Well, but it seems he did live to come out of his time, but what did he then?

Vol. II.

Badman out of his time.

Wife. Why, he went home to his Father; and he like a loving and tender-hearted Father received him into his House.

Atten. And how did he carry it there?

Wife. Why, thereason why he went home, was, for Money to set up for himself, he staid but a little at home, but that little while that he did stay, he refrained himself as well as he could, and did not so much discover himself to be base, for fear his Father should take distaste, and so should refuse, or for a while forbear to give him Money.

He goes home to his Father.

He refrains himself for Money.

Yet even then he would have his times, and companions, and the fill of his lusts with them, but he used to blind all with this, he was glad to see his old acquaintance, and they as glad to see him, and he could not in civility but accommodate them with a bottle or two of Wine, or a dozen or two of Drink.

Atten. And did the old Man give him Money to set up with?

Wife. Yes, above two hundred pounds.

Atten. Therein, I think, the old Man was out. Had I been his Father, I would have held him a little at staves-end, till I had had far better proof of his manners to be good; (for I perceive that his Father did know what a naughty boy he had been, both by what he used to do at home, and because he changed a good Master for a bad, &c.) He should not therefore have given him Money so soon. What if he had pinched a little, and gone to Journey work for a time, that he might have known what a penny was, by his earning of it? Then in all probability, he had known better how to have spent it: Yea, and by that time perhaps, have better considered with himself, how to have lived in the World. Ay, and who knows but he might have come to himself with the Prodigal, and have asked God and his Father Forgiveness for the Villanies that he had committed against them.

Severity, what it inclines to.

Wife. If his Father could also have blessed this manner of dealing to him, and have made it effectual for the ends that you have propounded; then I should have thought as you. But alas, alas, you talk as if you never knew, or had at this present forgot what the Bowels and Compassions of a Father are. Why, did you not serve your own Son so? But 'tis evident enough, that we are better at giving good counsel to others, than we are at taking good counsel our selves. But mine honest neighbour, suppose that Mr. Badman's Father had done as you say, and by so doing had driven his Son to ill courses, what had he bettered either himself or his son in so doing?

We are better at giving then taking good Counsel.

Atten. That's true, but it doth not follow, low, that if the Father had done as I said, the Son would have done as you suppose. But if he had done as you have supposed, what had he done worse than what he hath done already?

Wife. He had done bad enough, that's true. But suppose his Father had given him no Money, and suppose that young Badman had taken a pet thereat, and in an anger had gone beyond Sea, and his Father had neither seen him, nor heard of him more. Or suppose that of a mad and headstrong stomach he had gone to the High-way for Money, and so had brought himself to the Gallows, and his Father and Family to great contempt, or if by so doing he had not brought himself to that end, yet he had added to all his Wickedness, such and such evils besides: And what comfort could his Father have had in this?

Besides, when his Father had done for him what he could, with desire to make him an honest Man, he would then, whether his Son had proved honest or no, have laid down his Head with far more Peace, than if he had taken your Counsel.

Atten. Nay I think I should not have been forward to have given advice in the cause; but truly you have given me such an account of his Villanies, that the hearing thereof has made me angry with him.

Wife. In an angry mood we may soon out-shoot ourselves, but poor wretch, as he is, he is gone to his place. But, as I said, when a good Father hath done what he can for a bad Child, and that Child shall prove never the better, he will lie down with far more peace, than if through severity, he had driven him to inconveniencies.

* A good Woman and her bad Son.

I remember that I have heard of a good Woman, that had (as this old Man) a bad and ungodly * son, and she prayed for him, counselled him, and carried it Motherly to him for several Years together; but still he remained bad. At last, upon a time, after she had been at prayer, as she was wont, for his Conversion, she comes to him, and thus, or to this effect, begins again to admonish him. Son, said she, Thou hast been and art a wicked Child, thou hast cost me many a Prayer and Tear, and yet thou remainest wicked. Well, I have done my Duty, I have done what I can to save thee; now I am satisfied, that if I shall see thee damned at the day of Judgment, I shall be so far off from being grieved for thee, that I shall rejoyce to hear the sentence of thy Damnation at that Day: And it converted him.

I tell you, that if Parents carry it lovingly towards their Children, mixing their Mercies with loving Rebukes, and their loving Rebukes with Fatherly and Motherly Compassions, they are more likely to save their Children, than by being churlish and severe toward them: but if they do not save them, if their mercy doth them no good, yet it will greatly ease them at the Day of Death, to consider; I have done by love as much as I could, to save and deliver my Child from Hell.

Atten. Well I yield. But pray let us return again to Mr. Badman: You say, that his Father gave him a piece of Money that he might set up for himself.

Wife. Yes, his Father did give him a piece of Money, and he did set up, and almost as soon set down again: for he was not long set up, but by his ill managing of his Matters at Home, together with his extravagant expences Abroad, he was got so far into Debt, and had so little in his Shop to pay, that he was hard put to it to keep himself out of Prison. But when his Creditors understood that he was about to marry, and in a fair way to get a rich Wife, they said among themselves, We will not be hasty with him, if he gets a rich Wife he will pay us all.

Atten. But how could he so quickly run out, for I perceive 'twas in little time, by what you say?

Wife. 'Twas in little time indeed, I think he was not above two Years and an half in doing of it: but the reason is apparent; for he being a wild young Man, and now having the bridle loose before him, and being wholly subjected to his Lusts and Vices, he gave himself up to the way of his Heart, and to the sight of his Eye, forgetting that for all these things God will bring him to Judgment; and he that doth thus, you may be sure, shall not be able long to stand on his Legs. The reason of his running out. Eccl. 11.9.

Besides he had now an Addition of * new * Companions; Companions you must think, most like himself in Manners, and so such that cared not who sunk, if they themselves might swim. These would often be haunting of him, and of his Shop too when he was absent. They would commonly egg him to the Ale-house, but yet make him Jack-pay-for-all; they would also be borrowing Money of him, but take no care to pay again, except it was with more of their Company, which also he liked very well; and so his Poverty came like one that travelleth, and his want like an armed Man. * New Companions.

But all the while they studied his Temper; he loved to be flattered, praised and commended for Wit, Manhood and Personage; and this was like stroaking him over the Face. Thus they Collogued with him, and yet got more and more into him, and so (like Horse-leaches) they drew away that little that his Father had given him, and brought him quickly down, almost to dwell next door to the Beggar. Mr. Badman's Temper.

Atten. Then was the saying of the wise Man fulfilled, He that keepeth Company with Harlots, and a Companion of Fools, shall be destroyed. Pro. 29.3. Chap. 13. 20.

Wife.

Pro. 28.7. Wife. Ay, and that too, A Companion of riotous Persons shameth his Father; For he, poor Man, had both Grief and Shame, to see how his Son (now at his own Hand) behaved himself in the Enjoyment of those good things, in and under the lawful use of which he might have lived to God's glory, his own comfort, and credit among his Neighbours. But he that followeth vain Persons, shall have Poverty enough. The way that he took, led him directly into this Condition; for who can expect other things of one that follows such Courses? Besides, when he was in his Shop, he could not abide to be doing; he was naturally given to Idleness: He loved to live high, but his Hands refused to labour; and what else can the end of such an one be, but that which the wise Man saith? The Drunkard and the Glutton shall come to Poverty, and Drowsiness shall cloath a Man with Rags.

Atten. But now, methinks, when he was brought thus low, he should have considered the hand of God that was gone out against him, and should have smote upon the Breast, and have returned.

His Behaviour under his decays.

Wife. Consideration, good consideration was far from him, he was as stout and proud now, as ever in all his Life, and was as high too in the pursuit of his Sin, as when he was in the midst of his fulness; only he went now like a tyred Jade, the Devil had rid him almost off of his Legs.

Atten. Well, but what did he do when all was almost gone?

How he covered his decays.

Wife. Two things were now his play. 1. He bore all in hand by Swearing, and Cracking and Lying, that he was as well to pass, as he was the first Day he set up for himself, yea that he had rather got than lost; and he had at his beck some of his Companions that would swear to confirm it as fast as he.

Atten. This was double wickedness, 'twas a Sin to say it, and another to swear it.

Wife. That's true, but what evil is that that he will not do, that is left of God, as I believe Mr. Badman was?

Atten. And what was the other thing?

Badman is for a rich Wife.

Wife. Why that which I hinted before, he was for looking out for a rich Wife: and now I am come to some more of his invented, devised, designed, and abominable Roguery, such that will yet declare him to be a most desperate sinner.

The thing was this: A Wife he wanted, or rather Money; for as for a Woman, he could have Whores enow at his whistle. But, as I said, he wanted Money, and that must be got by a Wife or no way; nor Badman has a godly Maid in his Eye.

could he so easily get a Wife neither, except he became an Artist at the way of dissembling; nor would dissembling do among that People that could dissemble as well as he. But there dwelt a Maid not far from him, that was both godly, and one that had a good Portion, but how to get her, there lay all the craft. Well, he calls a Council of some of his most trusty and cunning Companions, and breaks his mind to them; to wit, that he had a mind to marry: and he also told them to whom: But, said he, how shall I accomplish my end, she is Religious, and I am not? Then one of them made Reply, saying, Since she is Religious, you must pretend to be so likewise, and that for some time before you go to her: Mark therefore whither she goes daily to hear, and do you go thither also; but there you must be sure to behave yourself soberly, and make as if you liked the Word wonderful well; stand also where she may see you, and when you come home, be sure that you walk the street very soberly, and go within sight of her: This done for a while, then go to her, and first talk of how sorry you are for your Sins, and shew great love to the Religion that she is off; still speaking well of her Preachers and of her godly Acquaintance, bewailing your hard hap, that it was not your Lot to be acquainted with her and her fellow Professors sooner; and this is the way to get her. Also you must write down Sermons, talk of Scriptures, and protest that you came a wooing to her, only because she is Godly, and because you should count it your greatest Happiness if you might but have such an one: As for her Money, flight it, it will be never the further off, that's the way to come soonest at it, for she will be jealous at first that you come for her Money; you know what she has, but make not a Word about it. Do this, and you shall see if you do not intangle the Lads.

He seeks to get her, why, and how.

Thus was the Snare laid for this poor honest Maid, and she was quickly caught in his Pit.

Atten. Why, did he take this Counsel?

Wife. Did he! yes, and after a while, he went as boldly to her, and that under a Vizard of Religion, as if he had been for Honesty and Godliness, one of the most sincere and upright-hearted in England. He observed all his Points, and followed the Advice of his Counsellors, and quickly obtained her too; for natural Parts he had, he was tall, and fair, and had plain, but very good Cloaths on his Back; and his Religion was the more easily attained; for he had seen something in the House of his Father, and first Master, and so could the more readily put himself into the Form and Shew thereof.

So he appointed his Day, and went to her, as that he might easily do, for she had neither Father nor Mother to oppose. Well, when he was come, and had given her a civil Complement, to let her understand why he was come, then he began and told her, That he had found in his Heart a great deal of Love to her Person; and that,

He calls his Companions together, and they advise him how to get her

of all the Damofels in the World he had pitched upon her, if she thought fit, to make her his beloved Wife. The Reasons, as he told her, why he had pitched upon her were, her Religious and personal Excellencies; and therefore intreated her to take his Condition into her tender and loving Consideration. As for the World, quoth he, I have a very good Trade, and can maintain my self and Family well, while my Wife fits still on her Seat; I have got thus and thus much already, and feel Money come in every Day, but that is not the thing that I aim at, 'tis an honest and godly Wife. Then he would present her with a good Book or two, pretending how much good he had got by them himself. He would also be often speaking well of godly Ministers, especially of those that he perceived she liked, and loved most. Besides he would be often telling of her, what a godly Father he had, and what a new Man he was also become himself; and thus did this treacherous Dealer, deal with this honest and good Girl, to her great Grief and Sorrow, as afterward you shall hear.

Atten. But had the Maid no Friend to look after her?

Wife. Her Father, and Mother were dead, and that he knew well enough, and so she was the more easily overcome by his naughty lying Tongue. But if she had never so many Friends, she might have been beguiled by him. It is too much the Custom of young People now, to think themselves wise enough to make their own Choice, and that they need not ask Counsel of those that are elder, and also wiser than they: but this is a great Fault in them, and many of them have paid dear for it. Well, to be short, in little time Mr. Badman obtains his desire, gets this honest Girl and her Money, is married to her, brings her home, makes a Feast, entertains her royally, but her portion must pay for all.

Atten. This was wonderful deceitful doings, a Man shall seldom hear of the like.

Wife. By this his doing, he shewed how little he feared God, and what little dread he had of his Judgments. For all this Carriage, and all these Words were by him premeditated evil, he knew he lyed, he knew he dissembled; yea, he knew that he made use of the Name of God, of Religion, good Men, and good Books, but as a Stalking-Horse, thereby the better to catch his Game. In all this his glorious Pretence of Religion, he was but a glorious painted Hypocrite, and Hypocrisy is the highest Sin that a poor carnal Wretch can attain unto; it is also a Sin that most dareth God, and that also bringeth the greater Damnation. Now was he a whited Wall, now was he a painted Sepulchre; now was he a Grave that appeared not: For this poor honest, godly Damofel, little thought that both her Peace and Comfort, and Estate, and Liberty, and Person, and all, were going to her Burial, when she was going to be married to Mr. Badman; and yet so it was, she enjoyed herself but little afterwards; she was as if she was dead and buried to what she enjoyed before.

Atten. Certainly some wonderful Judgment of God must attend and overtake such wicked Men as these.

Wife. You may be sure that they shall have Judgment to the full, for all these Things, when the Day of Judgment is come. But as for Judgment upon them in this Life, it doth not always come, no not upon those that are worthy thereof. They that tempt God are delivered, and they that work Wickedness are set up: But they are reserved to the Day of Wrath, and then for their Wickedness, God will repay them to their Faces. The Wicked is reserved to the Day of Destruction, they shall be brought forth to the Day of Wrath: Who shall declare his Way to his Face? and who shall repay him what he hath done? Yet shall he be brought to the Grave, and remain in the Tomb. That is, ordinarily they escape God's Hand in this Life, save only a few Examples are made, that others may be cautioned, and take warning thereby: But at the Day of Judgment they must be rebuked for their Evil with the Lashes of devouring Fire.

Atten. Can you give me no Examples of God's Wrath upon Men that have acted this tragical wicked Deed of Mr. Badman?

Wife. Yes; Hamor and Shechem, and all the Men of their City, for attempting to make God and Religion the Stalking-Horse to get Jacob's Daughters to Wife, were together slain with the edge of the Sword. A Judgment of God upon them, no doubt, for their dissembling in that matter. All manner of Lying and Dissembling is dreadful, but to make God and Religion a Disguise, therewith to blind thy Dissimulation from others Eyes, is highly provoking to the Divine Majesty.

I knew one that dwelt not far off from our Town, that got him a Wife as Mr. Badman got his; but he did not enjoy her long: for one Night as he was riding home (from his Companions, where he had been at a neighbouring Town) his Horse threw him to the Ground, where he was found dead at break of Day; frightfully and lamentably mangled with his Fall, and besmeared with his own Blood.

Atten. Well, but pray return again to Mr. Badman, how did he carry it to his Wife, after he was married to her?

Wife. Nay, let us take things along as we go. He had not been married but a little while, but his Creditors came upon him for their Money: He deferred them a little while, but at last things were come to that point, that pay he must, or must do worse; so he appointed them a time, and they they came for their Money, and he payed them down with her Money before her Eyes, for those Goods that he had profusely spent among his Whores long before (besides the Portion that his Father gave him) to the Value of two hundred Pounds.

Atten. This beginning was bad; but what shall I say? 'twas like Mr. Badman himself. Poor Woman, this was but a bad beginning for her, I fear it filled her with trouble enough, as I think such a beginning would have done, one, perhaps much stronger than she.

Wife. Trouble, ay, you may be sure of it, but now 'twas too late to repent, she should have looked better to herself, when being wary would have done her good; her Harms may be an Advantage to others, that will learn to take heed thereby; but for her self, she must take what follows, even such a Life now as Mr. Badman her Husband will lead her, and that will be bad enough.

Atten. This beginning was bad, and yet I fear it was but the beginning of bad.

Wife. You may be sure, that it was but the beginning of badness, for other Evils came on apace; as for Instance: It was but a little while after he was married, but he hangs his Religion upon the Hedge, or rather dealt with it as Men deal with their old Cloaths, who cast them off, or leave them to others to wear, for his part he would be Religious no longer.

NowBad-

Now therefore he had pulled off his Vizard, and began to shew himself in his old shape, a base, wicked debauched Fellow, (and now the poor Woman saw that she was betrayed indeed) now also his old Companions begin to flock about him, and to haunt his House and Shop as formerly: And who with them but Mr. Badman? and who with him again but they?

He drives
good Company from his Wife.

Now those good People that used to company with his Wife, began to be amazed and discouraged; also he would frown and glout upon them, as if he abhorred the Appearance of them: so that in little time he drove all good Company from her, and made her sit solitary by herself. He also began now to go out a Nights to those Drabs who were his Familiars before, with whom he would stay sometimes till Midnight, and sometimes till almost Morning, and then would come home as drunk as a Swine; and this was the course of Mr. Badman.

He rails at his Wife.

Now when he came home in this case, if his Wife did but speak a Word to him, about where he had been, and why he had abused himself, though her Words were spoken in never so much Meekness and Love, then she was Whore, and Bitch, and Jade! and it was well if she mis'd his Fingers and Heels. Sometimes also he would bring his Punks home to his House, and wo be to his Wife when they were gone, if she did not entertain them with all Varieties possible, and also carry it lovingly to them.

Thus this good Woman was made by Badman her Husband, to possess nothing but Disappointments, as to all that he had promised her, or that she hoped to have at his Hands.

But that that added pressing Weight to all her Sorrow, was, that, as he had cast away all Religion himself, so he attempted, if possible to make her do so too. He would not suffer her to go out to the Preaching of the Word of Christ, nor to the rest of his Appointments, for the Health and Salvation of her Soul: he would now taunt at and reflectingly speak of her Preachers; and would receive, yea raise Scandals of them, to her very great Grief and Affliction.

Now she scarce durst go to an honest Neighbour's House, or have a good Book in her Hand; especially when he had his Companions in his House, or had got a little Drink in his Head. He would also, when he perceived that she was dejected, speak tauntingly, and mockingly to her in the Presence of his Companions, calling of her his Religious Wife, his demure Dame, and the like; also he would make a Sport of her among his wanton ones abroad.

If she did ask him (as sometimes she would) to let her go out to a Sermon, he would in a currish manner reply, Keep at Home, keep at Home, and look to your Business, we cannot live by hearing of Sermons.

If she still urged that he would let her go, then he would say to her, Go if you dare. He would also charge her with giving of what he had to her Ministers, when, vile Wretch, he had spent it on his vain Companions before.

This was the Life that Mr. Badman's good Wife lived, within few Months after he had married her.

Atten. This was a Disappointment indeed.

Wife. A Disappointment indeed, as ever, I think, poor Woman had. One would think that the Knave might a little let her have had her will, since it was nothing but to be honest, and since she brought him so sweet, so lumping a Portion, for she brought Hundreds into his House: I say, one would think he should have let her had her own Will a little, since she desired it only in the Service and Worship of God: but could she win him to grant her that? no, not a bit if it would have saved her Life. True, sometimes she would steal out when he was from home, or on a Journey, or among his drunken Companions, but with all privacy imaginable; and, poor Woman, this Advantage she had, she carried it so to all her Neighbours, that, though many of them were but carnal, yet they would not betray her, or tell of her going out to the Word, if they saw it, but would rather endeayour to hide it from Mr. Badman himself.

Atten. This carriage of his to her, was enough to break her heart.

Her Repentance and Complaint.

Psal. 120.

Wife. It was enough to do it indeed, yea it did effectually do it. It killed her in time, yea it was all the time a killing of her. She would oftentimes when she sat by her self, thus mournfully bewail her condition: Wo is me that I sojourn in Meshech, and that I dwell in the Tents of Kedar; my soul hath long time dwelt with him that hateth peace. O what shall be given unto thee, thou deceitful Tongue? or what shall be done unto thee, thou false Tongue? I am a Woman grieved in Spirit, my Husband has bought me and sold me for his Lusts: 'Twas not me, but my Money that he wanted: O that he had had it, so I had had my Liberty!

This she said, not of contempt of his Person, but of his Conditions, and because she saw that by his hypocritical Tongue, he had brought her not only almost to beggary, but robbed her of the Word of God.

The evil of being unequally yoked together.

Atten. It is a deadly thing, I see, to be unequally yoked with Unbelievers. If this Woman had had a good Husband, how happily might they have lived together! Such an one would have prayed for her, taught her, and also would have encouraged her in the Faith, and Ways of God: But now, poor Creature, instead of this, there is nothing but the quite contrary.

2 Cor. 6. 13.

Wife. It is a deadly thing indeed, and therefore, by the Word of God his People are forbid to be joyned in marriage with them. Be not, saith it, unequally yoked together with Unbelievers; for what Fellowship hath Righteousness with Unrighteousness? and what Communion hath light with Darkness? And what Concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an Infidel? And what agreement hath the Temple of God with Idols?

Gen. 3. 15.

Deut. 2. 43.

There can be no agreement where such Matches are made, even God himself hath declared the contrary, from the beginning of the World. I (says he) will put enmity betwixt thee and the Woman, betwixt thy seed and her seed. Therefore he saith in another place, They can mix no better than Iron and Clay. I say, they cannot agree, they cannot be one, and therefore they should be aware at first, and not lightly receive such into their Affections. God has often made such Matches bitter, especially to his own. Such Matches are, as God said of Eli's Sons that were spared, to consume the Eyes, and to grieve the Heart. Oh the Wailing, and Lamentation that they have made that have been thus yoked, especially if they were such as would be so yoked, against their light, and good counsel to the contrary.

Atten. Alas! he deluded her with his Tongue, and feigned Reformation.

Wife. Well, well; she should have gone more warily to work: what if she had acquainted some of her best, most knowing, and godly Friends therewith? what if she had engaged a godly Minister or two to have talked with Mr. Badman? Also, what if she had laid wait round about him, to espy if he was not otherwise behind her Back than he was before her Face? And besides, I verily think (since in the multitude of Counsellors there is safety) that if she had acquainted the Congregation with it, and desired them to spend some time in prayer to God about it, and if she must have had him, to have received him as to his Godliness, upon the Judgment of others, rather than her own, (she knowing them to be godly and judicious, and unbiassed Men) she had had more peace all her Life after; than to trust to her own poor, raw, womanish Judgment, as she did. Love is blind, and will see nothing amiss, where others may see an hundred faults. Therefore I say, she should not have trusted to her own thoughts in the matter of his Goodness.

As to his Person, there she was fittest to judge, because she was to be the Person pleased, but as to his Godliness, there the Word was the fittest Judge, and they that could best understand it, because God was therein to be pleased. I wish * that all * A Caution to young Maidens. young Maidens will take heed of being beguiled with flattering words, with feigning and lying speeches, and take the best way to preserve themselves from being bought and sold by wicked Men, as she was; lest they repent with her, when (as to this) repentance will do them no good, but for their Unadvisedness go sorrowing to their graves.

Atten. Well, things are past with this poor Woman, and cannot be called back, let others † beware, by her misfortunes, lest they also fall into her distress. † Let Mr. Badman's Wife be your Example.

Wife. That is the Thing that I say, let them take heed, lest for their Unadvisedness they smart, as this poor Woman has done. And ah! methinks, that they that yet are single Persons, and that are tempted to marry to such as Mr. Badman; would, to inform, and warn themselves in this matter, before they intangle themselves, but go to some that already are in the Snare, and ask them how it is with them, as to the suitable, or unsuitableness of their marriage, and desire their advice. Surely they would ring such a peal in their Ears about the inequality, unsuitableness, disadvantages, and disquietments, and sins that attend such marriages, that would make them beware as long as they live. But the bird in the air, knows not the notes of the bird in the snare, until she comes thither herself: Besides, to make up such marriages, Satan

Satan, and carnal Reason, and Lust, or at least Inconsiderateness, has the chiefest hand; and where these things bear sway, designs, though never so destructive, will go headlong on: and therefore I fear, that but little warning will be taken by young Girls, at Mr. Badman's wives Affliction.

Atten. But are there no dissuasive arguments to lay before such, to prevent their future misery.

Wife. Yes: There is the Law of God, that forbiddeth marriage with unbelievers. These kind of marriages also are condemned even by irrational Creatures. 1. It is forbidden by the Law of God both in the Old Testament and in the New. 1. In the

Deut. 7.

Old. Thou shalt not make Marriages with them; Thy Daughter thou shalt not give unto his Son, nor his Daughter shalt thou take unto thy Son, Deut. 7. 4, 5. 2. In the unequally yoked together with unbelievers; Let them marry to whom they will, only in the Lord.

Rules for those that are to marry.

Here now is a Prohibition, plainly forbidding the Believer to marry with the Unbeliever, therefore they should not do it. Again, these unwarrantable Marriages, are, as I may so say, condemned by irrational Creatures, who will not couple but with their own sort: Will the Sheep couple with a Dog, the Patridge with a Crow, or the Pheasant with an Owl? No, they will strictly tie up themselves to those of their own sort only: Yea, it sets all the World a wondring, when they see or hear the contrary. Man only is most subject to wink at, and allow of these unlawful mixtures of Men and Women; Because Man only is a sinful Beast, a sinful Bird, therefore he, above all, will take upon him by rebellious Actions to answer, or rather to oppose and violate the Law of his God and Creator; nor shall these, or other Interrogatories, [What fellowship? what concord? what agreement? what communion can there be in such Marriages?] be counted of weight, or thought worth the answering by him.

If you love your Souls take heed.

But further. The dangers that such do commonly run themselves into, should be to others a dissuasive argument to stop them from doing the like: for besides the distresses of Mr. Badman's Wife, many that have had very hopeful beginnings for Heaven, have by virtue of the Mischiefs that have attended these unlawful marriages, miserably and fearfully miscarried. Soon after such marriages, Conviction (the first step toward Heaven) hath ceased; Prayer (the next step toward Heaven) hath ceased; Hungrings and Thirstings after Salvation (another step towards the Kingdom of Heaven) hath ceased. In a word, such marriages have estranged them from the Word, from their godly and faithful Friends, and have brought them again into carnal company, among carnal Friends, and also into carnal Delights, where, and with whom they have in Conclusion both sinfully abode, and miserably perished.

And this is one reason why God hath forbidden this kind of unequal marriages. For they, saith he, meaning the ungodly, will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other Gods, so will the anger of the Lord be kindled against you, and destroy you suddenly. Now mark, there were some in Israel, that would, notwithstanding this Prohibition, venture to marry to the Heathens and Unbelievers: But what followed? They served their Idols, they sacrificed their Sons and their Daughters unto Devils. Thus were they defiled with their own Works, and went a Whoring with their own Inventions: Therefore was the Wrath of the Lord kindled against his People, insomuch that he abhorred his own Inheritance.

Deut. 7.

Atten. But let's return again to Mr. Badman; had he any Children by his Wife?

Wife. Yes, seven.

Atten. I doubt they were but badly brought up.

Wife. One of them loved its Mother dearly, and would constantly hearken to her Voice. Now that Child she had the Opportunity to instruct in the Principles of the Christian Religion, and it became a very gracious Child. But that Child Mr. Badman could not abide, he would seldom afford it a pleasant Word, but would scold and frown upon it, speak churlishly and doggedly to it, and tho' as to Nature it was the most feeble of the seven, yet it ofteneft felt the weight of its Father's Fingers. Three of his Children did directly follow his steps, and began to be as vile as (in his youth) he was himself. The other that remained became a kind of mungrel Professors, not so bad as their Father, nor so good as their Mother, but were betwixt them both. They had their Mother's Notions, and their Father's Actions, and were much like those that you read of in the Book of Nehemiah; These Children spake half of Ashdod, and could not speak in the Jews language, but according to the language of each People.

Atten. What you say in this matter, is observable, and if I take not my mark amiss, it often happeneth after this manner, where such unlawful Marriages are contracted.

Wife. It sometimes doth so, and the reason, with respect to their Parents, is this: Where the one of the Parents is godly, and the other ungodly and vile, (though they can agree in begetting of Children, yet) they strive for their Children when they are born. The godly Parent strives for the Child, and by Prayers, Counsel and good Examples, labours to make it holy in Body and Soul, and so fit for the Kingdom of Heaven; but the ungodly would have it like himself, wicked and base and sinful; and so they both give instructions accordingly: Instructions did I say? yea, and Examples too, according to their minds. Thus the godly, as Hannah, is presenting her Samuel unto the Lord: but the ungodly, like them that went before them, are for offering their Children to Moloch, to an Idol, to Sin, to the Devil, and to Hell. Thus one hearkeneth to the Law of their Mother, and is preserved from Destruction, but as for the other, as their Fathers did, so do they. Thus did Mr. Badman and his Wife part some of their Children betwixt them; but as for the other three that were as 'twere Mungrels, betwixt both, they were like unto those that you read of in Kings, they heard

^{2 King. 17.} the Lord, but served their own Idols. They had, as I said, their Mother's Notions, and I will add, Profession too; but their Father's Lusts, and something of his Life. Now their Father did not like them, because they had their Mother's Tongue; and the Mother did not like them because they had still their Father's Heart and Life; nor were they indeed fit Company for good or bad. The good would not trust them because they were bad, the bad would not trust them because they were good, viz. The good would not trust them because they were bad in their Lives, and the bad would not trust them because they were good in their Words: So they were forced with Esau to joyn in affinity with Ismael; to wit, to look out a People that were Hypocrites, like themselves, and with them they matcht, and lived and died.

Atten. Poor Woman, she could not but have much perplexity.

Wife. Yea, and poor Children, that ever they were sent into the World as the Fruit of the Loyns, and under the Government of such a Father as Mr. Badman.

Atten. You say right, for such Children, lye almost under all manner of disadvantages: but we must say nothing, because this also is the soveraign Will of God.

Wife. We may not by any means object against God: yet we may talk of the advantages, and disadvantages that Children have, by having for their Parents such as are either Godly, or the contrary.

Atten. You say right, we may so, and pray now, since we are about it, speak something in brief unto it, that is, unto this; What advantage those Children have above others, that have for their Parents such as indeed are Godly.

Wife. So I will, only I must first premise these two or three things.

1. They have not the advantage of Election for their Fathers sakes.

2. They are born, as others, the Children of Wrath, though they come of Godly Parents.

3. Grace comes not unto them as an Inheritance, because they have Godly Parents. These things premised I shall now proceed.

1. The Children of godly Parents are the Children of many Prayers: they are prayed for before, and prayed for after they are born; and the Prayer of a godly Father and godly Mother doth much.

2. They have the Advantage of what Restraint is possible, from what Evils their Parents see them inclinable to, and that is a second Mercy.

3. They have the Advantage of godly Instruction, and of being told which be, and which be not the right ways of the Lord.

4. They have also those ways commend- ed unto them, and spoken well of in their hearing, that are good.

5. Such are also, what may be kept out of evil Company, from evil Books, and from being taught the way of Swearing, Lying, and the like, as Sabbath-breaking, and Mocking at good Men, and good Things, and this is a very great Mercy.

6. They have also the Benefit of a godly Life set before them doctrinally by their Parents, and that Doctrine back'd with a godly and holy Example: And all these are very great Advantages.

Now all these Advantages, the Children of ungodly Parents want; and so are more in Danger of being carried away with the Error of the Wicked. For ungodly Parents neither pray for their Children, nor do, nor can they heartily instruct them; they do not after a godly manner restrain them from Evil, nor do they keep them from evil Company. They are not grieved at, nor yet do they forewarn their children to beware of such evil Actions that are abomination to God, and to all good Men. They let their Children break the Sabbath, swear, lye, be wicked and vain. They commend not to their Children an holy Life, nor set a good Example before their Eyes. No, they do in all things contrary: Estranging of their Children what they can, from the love of God and all good Men, so soon as they are born. Therefore it is a very great Judgment of God upon Children, to be the Offspring of base and ungodly men. ^{Job 30. 8.}

Atten. Well, but before we leave Mr. Badman's Wife and Children, I have a mind if you please, to enquire a little more after one thing, the which I am sure you can satisfy me in.

Wife. What is that?

Atten. You said a while ago, that this Mr. Badman would not suffer his Wife to go out to hear such godly Ministers as she liked, but said if she did, she had as good never come home any more. Did he often carry it thus to her?

Wife. He did say so, he did often say so. This I told you then, and had also then told you more, but that other things put me out.

Atten. Well said, pray therefore now go on.

Wife. So I will. Upon a time, she was on a Lord's Day for going to hear a Sermon, and Mr. Badman was unwilling she should: but she at that time, as it seems, did put on more courage than she was wont: and therefore after she had spent upon him, a great many fair Words and Entreaties, if perhaps she might have prevailed by them, but all to no purpose at all: At last she said she would go, and rendred this reason for it; I have an Husband, but also a God; my God has commanded me, and that upon pain of Damnation to be a continual Worshipper of him, and that in the way of his own Appointments: I have an Husband, but also a Soul, and my Soul ought to be more unto me than all the World besides. This Soul of mine I will look after, care for, and (if I can) provide it an Heaven for its Habitation. You are commanded to love me, as you love your own Body, and so do I love you; but I tell you true, I prefer my Soul before all the World, and its Salvation I will seek.

At this, first he gave her an ugly With, and then fell into a fearful Rage, and swore moreover that if she did go, he would make both her and all her damnable Brotherhood (for so he was pleased to call them) to repent their coming thither.

Atten. But what should he mean by that?

Wife. You may easily guess what he meant: he meant he would turn Informer, and so either weary out those that she loved, from meeting together to worship God; or make them pay dearly for their so doing; the which if he did, he knew it would vex every Vein of her tender Heart.

Atten. But do you think Mr. Badman would have been so base?

Wife. Truly he had Malice, and Enmity enough in his Heart to do it, only he was a Tradesman; also he knew that he must live by his Neighbours, and so he had that little wit in his Anger, that he refrained himself, and did it not. But, as I said, he had Malice and Envy enough in his Heart to have made him to do it, only he thought it would worst him in his Trade: yet these three things he would be doing.

1. He would be putting of others on to molest and abuse her Friends.

2. He would be glad when he heard that any Mischief befel them.

3. And would laugh at her, when he saw her troubled for them. And now I have told you Mr. Badman's way as to this.

Atten. But was he not afraid of the Judgments of God, that did fly about at that time?

Wife. He regarded not the Judgment nor Mercy of God, for had he at all done that, he could not have done as he did. But what Judgments do you mean?

Atten. Such Judgments, that if Mr. Bad-
Vol. II.

man himself had taken but sober notice of, they might have made him hung down his Ears.

Wife. Why, have you heard of any such Persons that the Judgments of God have overtaken.

Atten. Yes, and so, I believe, have you too, though you make so strange about it.

Wife. I have so indeed to my Astonishment and Wonder.

Atten. Pray therefore, if you please, tell me what it is, as to this, that you know; and then, perhaps, I may also say something to you of the same.

Wife. In our town there was one W. S. a Mark: Man of a very wicked life; and he, when there seemed to be countenance given to it, would needs turn Informer. Well, so he did, and was as diligent in his Business as most of them could be; he would watch a Nights, climb Trees, and range the Woods a Days, if possible, to find out the Meeters, for then they were forced to meet in the Fields: yea he would curse them bitterly, and swear most fearfully what he would do to them when he found them. Well, after he had gone on like a Bedlam in his course a while, and had done some Mischiefs to the People, he was stricken by the Hand of God, and that in this manner.

1. Although he had his Tongue naturally at will, now he was taken with a faltering in his Speech, and could not for Weeks together speak otherwise, than just like a Man that was drunk.

2. Then he was taken with a drauling, or slabbering at his Mouth, which Slabber sometimes would hang at his Mouth well nigh half way down to the Ground.

3. Then he had such a weakness in the back Sinews of his Neck, that oft times he could not look up before him, unless he clapped his Hand hard upon his Forehead, and held up his Head that way, by strength of Hand.

4. After this his Speech went quite away, and he could speak no more than a Swine or a Bear. Therefore, like one of them, he would gruntle and make an ugly noise, according as he was offended, or pleased, or would have any thing done, &c.

In this posture he continued for the space of half a Year, or thereabouts, all the while otherwise well, and could go about his Business, save once that he had a fall from the Bell as it hangs in our Steeple, which 'twas a wonder it did not Kill him: But after that he also walked about, 'till God had made him a sufficient Spectacle of his Judgment for his Sin, and then on a sudden he was stricken, and died miserably: And so there was an end of him and his doings.

I will tell you of another. About four Miles from St. Neots, there was a Gentleman had a Man, and he would needs be an Informer, and a lusty young Man he was.

Well, an Informer he was, and did much distress some People, and had perfected his Informations so effectually against some, that there was nothing further to do, but for the Constables to make distress on the People, that he might have the Money or Goods; and as I heard, he hastened them much to do it. Now while he was in the heat of his Work, as he stood one Day by the Fire-side, he had (it should seem) a mind to a Sop in the Pan, (for the Spit was then at the Fire,) so he went to make him one; but behold, a Dog, (some say his own Dog) took distaste at something, and bit his Master by the Leg; the which Bite, notwithstanding all the means that was used to cure him, turned (as was said) to a Gangrene; however, that Wound was his Death, and that a dreadful one too: For my Relator said, that he lay in such a Condition by this Bite, (as the beginning) 'till his Flesh rotted from off him before he went out of the World. But what need I instance in particular Persons, when the judgment of God against this kind of People was made manifest, I think I may say, if not in all, yet in most of the Counties in England where such poor Creatures were. But I would, if it had been the Will of God, that neither I nor any body else, could tell you more of these Stories: True Stories, that are neither Lye, nor Romance.

Atten. Well, I also heard of both these my self, and of more too, as remarkable in their kind as these, if I had any list to tell them; but let us leave those that are behind to others, or to the coming of Christ, who then will justify or condemn them, as the merit of their Work shall require; or if they repented, and found Mercy, I shall be glad when I know it, for I wish not a curse to the Soul of mine Enemy.

Wife. There can be no Pleasure in the telling of such Stories, though to hear of them may do us a Pleasure: They may put us in mind that there is a God that judgeth in the Earth, and that doth not always forget nor defer to hear the Cry of the destitute; they also carry along with them both Caution and Counsel to those that are the survivors of such. Let us tremble at the Judgments of God, and be afraid of sinning against him, and it shall be our Protection. It shall go well with them that fear God, that fear before him.

Atten. Well Sir, as you have intimated, so I think we have in this Place spoken enough about these kind of Men; if you please, let us return again to Mr. Badman himself, if you have any more to say of him.

Wife. More! we have yet scarce thoroughly begun with any Thing that we have said. All the particulars are in themselves so full of badness, that we have rather only looked in them, than indeed said any thing to them: But we will pass them, and proceed. You have heard of the Sins of his Youth, of his Apprentiship, and how he set up, and married, and what a Life he hath led his Wife; and now I will tell you some more of his Pranks. He had the very knack of Knavery; had he, as I said before, been bound to serve an Apprentiship to all these Things, he could not have been more cunning, he could not have been more artificial at it.

Atten. Nor perhaps so artificially neither. For as none can teach Goodness like to God himself, so concerning Sin and Knavery, none can teach a Man it like the Devil, to whom, as I perceive, Mr. Badman went to School from his Childhood to the end of his Life. But pray, Sir, make a beginning.

Wife. Well so I will. You may remember that I told you what a Condition he was in for Money before he did Marry, and how he got a rich Wife, with whose Money he paid his Debts: Now when he had paid his Debts, he having some Money left, he sets up again as briskly as ever, keeps a great Shop, drives a great Trade, and runs again a great way into Debt; but now not into the Debt of one or two, but into the Debt of many, so that at last he came to owe some Thousands; and thus he went on a good while. And to pursue his ends the better, he began now to Study to please all Men, and to suit himself to any Company; he could now be as they, say as they, that is, if he listed; and then he would list, when he perceived that by so doing, he might either make them his Customers or Creditors for his Commodities. If he dealt with honest Men, (as with some honest Men he did) then he would be as they; talk as they, seem to be Sober as they, talk of Justice and Religion as they; and against Debauchery as they; yea, and would too seem to shew a dislike of them that said, did, or were otherwise than honest.

Again, when he did light among those that were bad, then he would be as they, but yet more close and cautiously, except he were sure of his company: Then he would carry it openly, be as they; say, damn them and sink them, as they. If they railed on good Men, so could he; if they railed on Religion, so could he: if they talked beastly, vainly, idly, so would he; if they were for drinking, swearing, whoring, or any the like Villanies, so was he. This was now the path he trod in, and could do all artificially, as any man alive. And now he thought himself a perfect Man, he thought he was always a Boy till now. What think you now of Mr. Badman?

Atten. Think! why, I think he was an Atheist: For no man but an Atheist can do this. I say, it cannot be, but that the man that is such as this Mr. Badman, must be a rank a rank and stinking Atheist; for he that believes that there is either God or Devil, Heaven or Hell, or Death, and Judgment after, cannot do as Mr. Badman did; I mean, if he could do these things without reluctance and check of Conscience; yea, if he had not sorrow and remorse for such abominable sins as these.

Wife. Nay, he was so far off from reluctances and remorse of Conscience for these things, that he counted them the excellency of his Attainments, the quintessence of his Wit, his rare and singular virtues, such as but few besides himself could be the Masters of. Therefore, as for those that made boggle and stop at things, and that could not in Conscience, and for fear of Death and Judgment, do such things as he; he would call them Fools and Noddies, and charge them for being frightened with the talk of unseen bugbears; and would encourage them, if they would be men indeed, to labour after the attainment of this his excellent art. He would oftentimes please himself with the Thoughts of what he could do in this matter, saying within himself; I can be religious, and irreligious, I can be any thing, or nothing; I can swear, and speak against swearing; I can lie, and speak against lying; I can drink, wench, be unclean, and defraud, and not be troubled for it: Now I enjoy myself, and am Master of mine own ways, and not they of me. This I have attained with much study, great care, and more pains. But this his talk should be only with himself, to his Wife, who he knew durst not divulge it; or among his intimates, to whom he knew he might say any thing.

Atten. Did I call him before an Atheist? I may call him now a Devil, or a Man possessed with one, if not with many. I think that there cannot be found in every corner such an one as this. True, it is said of 2 Chron. 28. 22. King Abaz, that he sinned more and more; 1 King 21. 25. and of Ahab, that he sold himself to work wickedness; and of the men of Sodom, that they were sinners exceedingly before the Lord. Gen. 13. 13.

Wife. An Atheist he was no doubt, if there be such a thing as an Atheist in the world, but for all his brags of perfection, and security in his wickedness, I believe that at times God did let down fire from Heaven into his Conscience. True, I believe he would quickly put it out again, and grow more desperate and wicked afterward, but this also turned to his destruction, as afterward you may hear.

But I am not of your mind, to think that there are but few such in the world; except you mean as to the Degree of wickedness unto which he had attained. For otherwise, no doubt, * there is abundance of such as he: men of the same mind, of the same principles, and of the same conscience too, to put them into practice. Yea, I believe that there are many that are endeavouring to attain to the same pitch of wickedness; and all them are such as he, in the Judgment of the Law; nor will their want of hellish wit to attain thereto, excuse them at the day of Judgment. You know that in all Science, some are more arch than some; and so it is in the art, as well as in the practice of wickedness: some are two-fold, and some seven-fold more the Children of Hell than others (and yet all the Children of Hell) else they would all be Masters, and none Scholars in the School of wickedness. But there must be Masters, and there must be Learners; Mr. Badman was a Master in this Art, and therefore it follows that he must be an arch and chief one in that Mystery.

Atten. You are in the right, for I perceive that some men, though they desire it, cannot be so arch in the Practice thereof as others, but are (as I suppose they call them) Fools and Dunces to the rest, their Heads and Capacities will not serve them to act and do so wickedly. But Mr. Badman wanted not a wicked Head to contrive, as well as a wicked Heart to do his wickedness.

Wife. True, but yet I say, such men shall at the Day of Judgment, be judged, not only for what they are, but also for what they would be. For if the thought of Foolishness is Sin, doubtless the Desire of Foolishness is more Sin: and if the desire be more, the endeavour after it must needs be more and more. * He then that is not an artificial Atheist and Transgressor, yet if he desires to be so, if he endeavour to be so, he shall be judged and condemned to Hell for such an one. For the Law judgeth men, as I said, according to what they would be. He that looketh upon a Woman to lust after her, hath committed Adultery with her already in his Heart. By the same rule, he that would steal, doth steal; he that would cheat, doth cheat; he that would swear, doth swear; and he that would commit Adultery, doth do so. For God judgeth Men according to the working of their Minds, and saith, As he thinketh, so is he. That is, so is he in his Heart, in his intentions, in his desires, in his endeavours; and God's Law, I say, lays hold of the desires, intentions, and endeavours, even as it lays hold of the act of wickedness itself. A man then that desires to be as bad as Mr. Badman (and Desires to be so wicked have many in their Hearts) though he never attains to that proficiency in wickedness as he, shall yet be judged for as bad a man as he, because it was in his desires to be such a wicked one.

Atten. But this height of Wickedness in Mr. Badman, will not yet out of my Mind. This hard, desperate, or what shall I call it, diabolical frame of heart, was in him

Mat. 7. 16, 17, 18.

Wife. The Heart, and the desperate Wickedness of it, is the Foundation and Ground-work of all. Atheism, professed and practical, spring both out of the Heart, yea and all manner of evils besides. For they be not bad deeds that make a bad Man, but he is already a bad Man that doth bad deeds. A Man must be wicked before he can do Wickedness. * Wickedness proceedeth from the Wicked. 'Tis an evil Tree that bears evil Fruit. Men gather no Grapes of Thorns; the Heart therefore must be evil, before the Man can do evil, and good before the Man doth good.

Atten. Now I see the reason why Mr. Badman was so base, as to get a Wife by Dissimulation, and to abuse her so like a Villain when he had got her, it was because he was before by a wicked Heart prepared to act Wickedness.

Mar. 7. 20 to 24.

Wife. You may be sure of it; for from within, out of the Heart of Man proceedeth evil Thoughts, Adulteries, Fornications, Murders, Thefts, Covetousness, Wickedness, Deceit, Lasciviousness, an evil Eye, Blasphemy, Pride, Foolishness. All these things come from within, and defile a Man. And a Man, as his naughty Mind inclines him, makes use of these, or any of these, to gratify his Lust, to promote his Designs, to revenge his Malice, to enrich, or to wallow himself in the foolish pleasures and pastimes of this Life: And all these did Mr. Badman do, even to the utmost, if either opportunity, or purse, or perfidiousness, would help him to the obtaining of his purpose.

Atten. Purse! Why he could not but have a Purse to do almost what he would, having married a Wife with so much Money.

Wife. Hold you there; some of Mr. Badman's sins were costly, as his drinking, and whoring, and keeping other bad company; though he was a Man that had ways too many to get Money, as well as ways too many to spend it.

Atten. Had he then such a good Trade, for all he was such a bad Man? or was his Calling so gainful to him, as always to keep his Purse belly full, though he was himself a great spender?

Wife. No: It was not his Trade that did it, though he had a pretty Trade too. He had another way to get Money, and that by hatfuls and pocketfuls at a time.

Atten. Why I trow he was no Highwayman, was he?

Wife. I will be sparing in my speech as to that, though some have muttered as if he could ride out now and then, about no body but himself knew what, over night, and come home all dirty and weary next morning. But that is not the thing I aim at.

Atten. Pray let me know it, if you think it convenient that I should.

Wife. I will tell you: It was this, he had an art to break, and get hatfuls of Money by breaking.

Atten. But what do you mean by Mr. Badman's breaking? you speak mystically, do you not?

Wife. No, no, I speak plainly. Or, if you will have it in plainer language, 'tis this: When Mr. Badman had swaggared and whored away most of his wife's Portion, he began to feel that he could not much longer stand upon his legs in this course of Life, and keep up his Trade and Repute (such as he had) in the World; but by the new Engine of Breaking. Wherefore, upon a time, he gives a great, and sudden † rush into several Mens debts, to the value of about four or five thousand pound, driving at the same time a very great Trade, by selling many things for less than they cost him, to get him custom, therewith to blind his Creditors eyes. His Creditors therefore seeing that he had a great employ, and dreaming that it must needs at length turn to a very good account to them, trusted him freely without mistrust, and so did others too, to the value of what was mentioned before. Well, when Mr. Badman had well feathered his Nest with other Mens Goods and Money, after a little time || he breaks. And by and by it is || He noised abroad that Mr. Badman had shut up Shop, was gone, and could trade no longer. Now, by that time his breaking was come to his Creditors ears, he had by Craft and Knavery made so sure of what he had, that his Creditors could not touch a penny. Well, when he had done, he sends his mournful sugared letters to his Creditors, to let them understand what had happened unto him, and desired them not to be severe with him; || for he bore towards all Men an honest mind, and would pay so far as he was able. Now he sends his letters by a Man † confederate with him, who could make both the worst, and best of Mr. Badman's case: The best for Mr. Badman, and the worst for his Creditors. So when he comes to them, he both bemoans them, and condoles Mr. Badman's Condition: Telling of them, that without a speedy bringing of things to a Conclusion, Mr. Badman would be able to make them no Satisfaction, but at present he both could, and would, and that to the utmost of his Power: and to that end, he desired that they would come over to him. Well, his Creditors appoint him a time, and come over; and he, mean while, authorizes another to treat with them, but will not be seen himself, unless it was on a Sunday, lest they should snap him with a Writ. So his deputed friend treats with them about their concern with Mr. Badman, first telling them of the great care that

Mr. Badman had an art to break, and to get Money that way.

† How he managed things in order to his breaking.

that Mr. Badman took to satisfy them and all Men for whatsoever he ought, as far as in him lay, and, how little he thought a while since to be in this low Condition. He pleaded also the greatness of his Charge, the greatness of Taxes, the badness of the Times, and the great Losses that he had by many of his customers, some of which died in his debt, others were run away, and for many that were alive, he never expected a farthing from them. Yet nevertheless he would shew himself an honest Man, and would pay as far as he was able; and if they were willing to come to terms, he would make a Composition with them, (for he was not able to pay them all.) The

What Mr. Badman propounds to his Creditors.

Creditors asked what he would give? 'Twas reply'd, Half a Crown in the Pound. At this they began to buff, and he to renew his complaint and entreaty; but the Creditors would not hear, and so for that time their meeting without success broke up. But after his Creditors were in cool blood, and admitting of second thoughts, and fearing lest delays should make them lose all, they admit of a second debate, come together again, and by many words, and great ado, they obtained five shillings i' th' Pound. So the Money was produced, Receipts and Discharges drawn, signed, and sealed, Books crossed, and all things confirmed; and then Mr. Badman can put his Head out a Doors again, and be a better Man than when he shut up Shop, by several thousands of pounds.

They at last agree, and Mr. Badman gains by breaking.

Atten. And did he do thus indeed?

Wife. Yes, once, and again. I think he brake twice or thrice.

Atten. And did he do it before he had need to do it?

There is no plea for his dishonesty.

Wife. Need! What do you mean by Need? there is no need at any time for a Man to play the Knave. He did it of a wicked mind, to defraud and beguile his Creditors: he had wherewithal of his Father, and also by his Wife, to have lived upon, with lawful labour, like an honest Man. He had also when he made this wicked Break (though he had been a profuse and prodigal spender) to have paid his Creditors their own to a Farthing. But had he done so, he had not done like himself, like Mr. Badman; had he, I say, dealt like an honest Man, he had then gone out of Mr. Badman's road. He did it therefore of a dishonest mind, and to a wicked End; to wit, that he might have wherewithal, howsoever unlawfully gotten, to follow his Cups and Queans, and to live in the full swinge of his Lusts, even as he did before.

Atten. Why this was a meer Cheat.

Wife. It was a Cheat indeed. This way of breaking, it is nothing else but a more neat way of Thieving, of picking of Pockets, of breaking open of Shops, and of taking from Men what one has nothing to do with. But though it seem easy, it is hard to learn, no Man that has conscience to God or Man, can ever be his Crafts Master in this hellish art.

No. XXXV. Vol. II.

Atten. Oh! Sirs! what a wicked Man was this!

Wife. A wicked Man indeed. By this art he could tell how to make Men send their goods to his Shop, and then be glad to take a penny for that for which he had promised before it came thither, to give them a Groat: I say, he could make them glad to take a Crown for a pounds worth, and a thousand for that for which he had promised before to give them four thousand pounds.

Atten. This argueth that Mr. Badman had but little Conscience.

Wife. This argued that Mr. Badman had no Conscience at all; for Conscience, the least spark of a good Conscience cannot endure this.

Atten. Before we go any further in Mr. Badman's matters, let me desire you, if you please, to give me an answer to these two questions.

1. What do you find in the Word of God against such a practice, as this of Mr. Badman's is? An answer to two questions.

2. What would you have a Man do that is in his Creditor's debt, and can neither pay him what he owes him, nor go on in a Trade any longer?

Wife. I will answer you as well as I can. And first to the first of your questions: To wit, What I find in the Word of God against such a Practice, as this of Mr. Badman's is. 1. Question.

Ans. The Word of God doth forbid this Wickedness; and to make it the more odious in our Eyes, it joyns it with Theft and Robbery: Thou shalt not, says God, defraud thy Neighbour, nor rob him. Thou shalt not defraud, that is, deceive or beguile. Now thus to break, is to defraud, deceive and beguile; which is, as you see, forbidden by the God of Heaven: Thou shalt not defraud thy Neighbour, nor rob him. It is a kind of theft and robbery, thus to defraud, and beguile. It is a wilfully robbing of his Shop, and picking of his Pocket: a Thing odious to Reason and Conscience, and contrary to the Law of Nature. It is a designed piece of Wickedness, and therefore a double Sin. A Man cannot do this great Wickedness on a sudden, and through a violent assault of Satan. He that will commit this Sin, must have time to deliberate, that by Invention he may make it formidable, and that with lies and high Dis-simulations. He that commits this Wickedness, must first hatch it upon his bed, beat his head about it, and lay his plot strong: So that to the compleating of such a Wickedness, there must be adjoined many sins, and they too must go hand in hand until it be compleated. But what saith the Scripture? Let no Man go beyond, and defraud his Brother in any matter, because the Lord is the avenger of all such. The hairnourness of this Sin.

But this kind 1 Thess. 4. 6. Fair warning.

of Breaking is a going beyond my Brother; This is a compassing of him about that I may catch him in my Net; and as I said, an Art to rob my Brother, and to pick his Pocket, and that with his Consent. Which doth not therefore mitigate, but so much the more greaten and make odious the Offence. For Men that are thus wilily abused cannot help themselves, they are taken in a deceitful net. But God will here concern himself, he will be the Avenger, he will be the Avenger of all such either here or in another World.

+ Fair warning
again.

And this, the Apostle testifies again, where he saith; But he that doth wrong, shall receive † for the wrong that he hath done, and there is no respect of Persons. That is, there is no Man, be he what he will, if he will be guilty of this Sin, of going beyond, of beguiling of, and doing wrong to his Brother, but God will call him to an Account for it, and will pay him with Vengeance for it too; for there is no respect of Persons.

He that designedly commits this Sin is like the Devil.

I might add, that this Sin of wronging, of going beyond, and defrauding of my Neighbour, it is like that first Prank that the Devil plaid with our first Parents (as the Altar that Uriah built for Abaz, was taken from the Fashion of that that stood at Damascus, to be the very Pattern of it.) The Serpent beguiled me, says Eve; Mr. Badman beguiles his Creditors. The Serpent beguiled Eve with lying Promises of Gain; and so did Mr. Badman beguile his Creditors. The Serpent said one thing and meant another, when he beguiled Eve; and so did Mr. Badman when he beguiled his Creditors.

That Man therefore that doth thus deceive and beguile his Neighbour, imitateth the Devil; he taketh his Examples from him, and not from God, the Word, or good Men: and this did Mr. Badman.

2. Question.

And now to your second question: To wit, What I would have a Man do that is in his Creditors Debt, and that can neither pay him, nor go on in a Trade any longer?

Ans. First of all: If this be his case, and he knows it, let him not run one Penny further in his Creditors Debt. For that cannot be done with good Conscience. He that knows he cannot pay, and yet will run into Debt; does knowingly wrong and defraud his Neighbour, and falls under that Sentence of the Word of God, The Wicked borroweth, and payeth not again. Yea worse, he borrows, though at the very same time he knows that he cannot pay again. He doth also craftily take away what is his Neighbours. That is therefore the first thing that I would propound to such: Let him not run any farther into his Creditors Debt.

How

their Con-sciences.

Good Advice.

Secondly, After this, let him consider, how, and by what means he was brought into such a Condition that he could not pay his just Debts. To wit, whether it as by his own Remissness in his Calling, by living too high in Diet or Apparel, by lending too lavishly that which was none of his own, to his Loss; or whether by the immediate Hand and Judgment of God.

If by searching, he finds, that this is come upon him through Remissness in his Calling, Extravagancies in his Family, or the like; let him labour for a Sense of his Sin and Wickedness, for he has sinned against the Lord: First, in his being slothful in Business, and in not providing, to wit, of his own, by the Sweat of his Brows, or other honest ways, for those of his own House. And Secondly, in being lavishing in Diet and Apparel in the Family, or in lending to others that which was none of his own. This cannot be done with good Conscience: It is both against Reason and Nature, and therefore must be a Sin against God. I say therefore, if thus this Debtor hath done, if ever he would live quietly in Conscience, and comfortably in his Condition for the future, let him humble himself before God, and repent of this his Wickedness. For he that is slothful in his work, is Brother to him that is a great waster. To be slothful and a waster too, is to be as it were a double Sinner.

But again, as this Man should enquire into these things, so he should also into this. How came I into this way of Dealing in which I have now miscarried? is it a way that my Parents brought me up in, put me Apprentice to, or that by Providence I was first thrust into? or is it a way into which I have twisted my self, as not being contented with my first lot, that by God and my Parents I was cast into? This ought duly to be considered. * And if upon Search, a Man shall find that he is out of the Place and Calling into which he was put by his Parents, or the Providence of God, and has miscarried in a new way, that through Pride and Dislike of his first State he has chose rather to embrace; his Miscarriage is his Sin, the Fruit of his Pride, and a Token of the Judgment of God upon him for his leaving of his first State. And for this he ought, as for the former, to be humble and penitent before the Lord.

* Good

again.

But if by search, he finds, that his Poverty came by none of these; if by honest Search, he finds it so, and can say with good Conscience, I went not out of my Place and State in which God by his Providence had put me; but have abode with God in the Calling wherein I was called, and have wrought hard, and fared meanly, been civilly apparelled, and have not directly, nor indirectly made away with my Creditors Goods:

age.

Then has his Fall come upon him by the immediate hand of God, whether by visible or invisible ways. For sometimes it comes by visible ways, to wit, by Fire, by Thieves, by Loss of Cattle, or the Wickedness of sinful Dealers, &c. And sometimes by means invisible, and then no Man knows how;

how; we only see Things are going, but cannot see by what way they go. Well, now suppose that a Man, by an immediate Hand of God, is brought to a Morsel of Bread, what must he do now?

Another Question.

I answer: His surest way is still to think, that this is the Fruit of some Sin, though possibly not Sin in the Management of his Calling, yet of some other Sin. God casteth away the Substance of the Wicked. Therefore let him still humble himself before his God, because his Hand is upon him, and say, What Sin is this, for which this Hand of God is upon me? and let him be diligent to find it out, for some Sin is the Cause of this Judgment; for God doth not willingly afflict nor grieve the Children of Men. Either the Heart is too much set upon the World, or Religion is too much neglected in thy Family, or some thing. There is a Snake in the Grass, a Worm in the Gourd; some Sin in thy Bosom, for the sake of which God doth thus deal with thee.

Lam. 3. 33.

Good Advice again.

Thirdly, This thus done, let that Man again consider thus with himself: Perhaps God is now changing of my Condition and State in the World; he has let me live in Fashion, in Fulness, and abundance of worldly Glory, and I did not to his Glory improve, as I should, that his good Dispensation to me. But when I lived in full and fat Pasture, I did there lift up the Heel: Therefore he will now turn me into hard Commons, that with Leanness, and Hunger, and Meanness, and Want, I may spend the rest of my Days. But let him do this without murmuring, and repining; let him do it in a godly manner, submitting himself to the Judgment of God.

Deut. 32. 15.

James 1. 9, 10.

Let the Rich rejoice in that he is made low.

This is Duty, and it may be Privilege to those that are under this Hand of God. And for thy Encouragement to this hard work, (for this is a hard work) consider of these four things.

Consider four things.

Job 1. 21. Chap. 2. 8.

1. This is right lying down under God's Hand, and the way to be exalted in God's Time: when God would have Job embrace the Dunghil, he embraces it, and says, The Lord giveth, and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the Name of the Lord.

2. Consider, That there are Blessings also that attend a low Condition, more than all the World are aware of. A poor Condition has preventing Mercy attending of it. The Poor, because they are poor, are not not capable of sinning against God as the rich Man does.

Psal. 49. 6.

3. The Poor can more clearly see himself preserved by the Providence of God than the Rich, for he trusteth in the Abundance of his Riches.

Jam. 2. 5.

4. It may be God has made thee poor, because he would make thee rich. Hearken my beloved Brethren, hath not God chosen the Poor of this World, Rich in Faith, and Heirs of a Kingdom which God hath promised to them that love him?

I am persuaded, if Men upon whom this Hand of God is, would thus quietly lye down and humble themselves under it, they would find more Peace, yea more Blessing of God attending them in it, than the most of Men are aware of. But this is an hard Chapter, and therefore I do not expect that many should either read it with Pleasure, or desire to take my Counsel.

Having thus spoken to the Broken Man, with reference to his own self, I will now speak to him as he stands related to his Creditors.

In the next place therefore, let him fall upon the most † honest way of dealing with his Creditors, and that I think must be this. First, Let him timely make them acquainted with his Condition, and also do to them these three things.

† Honest Dealing with Creditors.

1. Let him heartily and unfeignedly ask them Forgiveness for the Wrong that he has done them.

2. Let him proffer them all, and the whole all that ever he has in the World; let him hide nothing, let him strip himself to his Raiment for them; let him not keep a Ring, a Spoon, or any thing from them.

3. If none of these two will satisfy them, let him proffer them his Body, to be at their dispose, to wit, either to abide Imprisonment their Pleasure, or to be at their Service, till by Labour and Travel he hath made them such amends as they in Reason think fit, only reserving something for the Succour of his poor and distressed Family out of his Labour, which in Reason, and Conscience, and Nature, he is bound also to take care of. Thus shall he make them what amends he is able, for the Wrong that he hath done them in wasting and spending of their Estates.

By thus doing, he submits himself to God's Rod, commits himself to the dispose of his Providence: yea, by thus doing, he casteth the Lot of his present and future Condition into the Lap of his Creditors, and leaves the whole dispose thereof to the Lord, even as he shall order and incline their Hearts to do with him. And let that be either to forgive him; or to take that which he hath for Satisfaction; or to lay his Body under Affliction, this way or that, according to Law; can he, I say, thus leave the whole dispose to God, let the Issue be what it will, that Man shall have Peace in his Mind afterwards. And the Comforts of that State (which will be Comforts that attend Equity, Justice, and Duty) will be more unto him, because more according to Godliness, than can be the Comforts that are the Fruits of Injustice, Fraudulency, and Deceit. Besides, this is the way to engage God to favour him by the Sentence of his Creditors; (for he can intreat them to use him kindly) and he will do it when

Prov. 16. 33.

3. plea of Samuel: Behold here I am, says he, witness against me, before the Lord, and before his Anointed, whose Ox have I taken, or whose Ass have I taken, or whom have I defrauded, whom have I oppressed, &c? This was to do like a Man of good Conscience indeed. And in this his Appeal, he was so justified in the Consciences of the whole Congregation, that they could not but with one Voice, as with one Mouth, break out joyntly and say, Thou hast not defrauded us, nor oppressed us.

Ver. 4.

A Professor, and defraud, away with him! A Professor should not owe any Man any thing, but love. A Professor should provide things, not of other Mens, but of his own, of his own honest getting, and that only in the sight of God, but of all Men; that he may adorn the Doctrine of God our Saviour in all things.

* A Question.

Atten. * But suppose God should blow upon a Professor in his Estate, and Calling, and he should be run out before he is aware, must he be accounted to be like Mr. Badman, and lie under the same reproach as he?

† An answer.

Wife. † No: If he hath dutifully done what he could to avoid it. It is possible for a Ship to sink at Sea, notwithstanding the most faithful endeavour of the most skilful Pilot under Heaven. And thus, as I suppose, it was with the Prophet, that left his Wife in debt, to the hazarding the slavery of her Children by the Creditors. He was no profuse Man, nor one that was given to defraud, for the Text says, he feared God; yet, as I said, he was run out more than she could pay.

2 Kings 4.
1, 2.Hag. 1. 9.
God does sometimes blow upon his own people. How they should do at that time.

If God would blow upon a Man, who can help it? and he will do so sometimes, because he will change Dispensations with Men, and because he will try their Graces. Yea, also, because he will overthrow the Wicked with his Judgments; and all these things are seen in Job. But then the Consideration of this, should bid Men have a care that they be honest, lest this comes upon them for their sin: It should also bid them beware of launching further into the World, than in an honest way by ordinary means they can godlily make their retreat; for the further in, the greater fall. It should also teach them, to beg of God his blessing upon their endeavours, their honest and lawful endeavours. And it should put them upon a diligent looking to their steps, that if in their going they should hear the Ice crack, they may timely go back again.

These things considered, and duely put in practice, if God will blow upon a Man, then let him be content, and with Job embrace the Dunghil; let him give unto all their dues, and not fight against the Providence of God, (but humble himself rather under his mighty hand,) which comes to strip him naked and bare: for he that doth otherwise, fights against God; and declares that he is a stranger to that of Paul; I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound; every where, in all things, I am instructed both to be full, and to be hungry, both to abound, and to suffer need.

I Philip. 4.

Atten. But Mr. Badman would not, I believe, have put this difference 'twixt things feigned, and those that fall of necessity.

Wife. If he will not, God will, Conscience will; and that not thine own only, but the Consciences of all those that have seen the way, and that have known the Truth of the Condition of such an one.

Atten. Well: Let us at this time leave this matter, and return again to Mr. Badman.

Wife. With all my heart will I proceed to give you a Relation of what is yet behind of his Life, in order to our discourse of his Death.

Atten. But pray do it with as much brevity as you can.

Wife. Why? are you a weary of my relating of things?

Atten. No. But it pleases me to hear a great deal in few words.

Wife. I profess not my self an artist that way, but yet as briefly as I can, I will pass through what of his Life is behind; and again I shall begin with his fraudulent dealing (as before I have shewed with his Creditors, so now) with his Customers, and those that he had otherwise to deal withal.

He dealt by deceitful Weights and Measures. He kept weights to buy by, and weights to sell by; measures to buy by, and measures to sell by: those he bought by were too big, those he sold by were too little. Besides, he could use a thing called slight of hand, if he had to do with other Mens weights and measures, and by that means make them whether he did buy or sell, yea though his Customer or Chapman looked on, turn to his own advantage.

More of Mr. Badman's fraudulent dealing. He used deceitful weights and scales.

Moreover, he had the art to mis-reckon Men in their Accounts, whether by weight, or measure, or money, and would often do it to his worldly advantage, and their loss: What say you to Mr. Badman now?

And if a question was made of his faithful dealing, he had his servants ready, that to his purpose he had brought up, that would avouch and swear to his Book, or Word: this was Mr. Badman's practice; What think you of Mr. Badman now?

Atten. Think! Why I can think no other but that he was a Man left to himself, a naughty Man; for these, as his other, were naughty things; if the Tree, as indeed it may, ought to be judged, what it is by its fruits; then Mr. Badman must needs be a bad Tree. But pray, for my further Satisfaction, shew me now by the Word of God, the evil of this his practice:

9 K

and

and first of his using false Weights and Measures.

Wife. The Evil of that! why the Evil of that appears to every Eye: The Heathens, that live like Beasts and Brutes in many things, do abominate and abhor such Wickedness as this. Let a Man but look upon these things as he goes by, and he shall see enough in them from the Light of Nature to make him loath so base a Practice; although Mr. Badman loved it.

Atten. But shew me something out of the Word against it, will you?

Levit. 19.
35, 36.

Wife. I will willingly do it. And first look into the Old Testament: You shall, faith God there, do no Unrighteousness in Judgment, in Mete-yard, in Weights or in Measures, a just Ballance, a just Weight, a just Ephah, and a just Hin shall you have.

Of just

and Measures.
Ezek. 45.

This is the Law of God, and that which all Men according to the Law of the Land ought to obey. So again: Ye shall have just Ballances, and a just Ephah, &c.

Prov. 20.
23.
Chap. 11.
1.

The Evil
of deceitful Bal-lances, Weights
and Measures.

Now having shewed you the Law, I will also shew you how God takes swerving therefrom. A false Ballance is not good; a false Ballance is an Abomination to the Lord. Some have just Weights, but false Ballances; and by Vertue of those false Ballances, by their just Weights, they deceive the Country: Wherefore, God first of all commands that the Ballance be made Just: A just Ballance shalt thou have. Else they may be, yea are, Deceivers, notwithstanding their just Weights.

Now, having commanded that Men have a just Ballance, and testifying that a false one is an Abomination to the Lord, he proceedeth also unto Weight and Measure.

Thou shalt not have in thy Bag divers Weights, a great and a small; that is, one to buy by, and another to sell by, as Mr. Badman had. Thou shalt not have in thy House divers Measures, a great and a small (and these had Mr. Badman also) but thou shalt have a perfect and a just Weight; a perfect and a just Measure shalt thou have, that thy Days may be lengthened in the Land which the Lord thy God giveth thee. For all that do such Things (that is, that use false Weights and Measures) and all that do unrighteously are Abomination to the Lord. See now both how plentiful, and how punctual the Scripture is in this matter. But perhaps it may be objected, that all this is old Law, and therefore hath nothing to do with us under the New Testament. (Not that I think you, Neighbour, will object thus.) Well, to this foolish Objection, let us make an Answer. First, he that makes this Objection, if he doth it to overthrow the Authority of those Texts, discovereth that himself is first Cousin to Mr. Badman: For a just Man is willing to speak reverently of those Commands. That Man therefore hath, I doubt, but little Conscience, if any at all that is good, that thus objecteth against the Text: but let us look into the New Testament, and there we shall see how Christ confirmeth the same: Where he commandeth that Men make to others good Measure, including also that they make good Weight; telling such that do thus, or those that do it not, that they may be encouraged to do it: Good Measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over, shall Men give into your Bosom; for with the same Measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again: To wit, both from God and Man. For as God will shew his Indignation against the false Man, by taking away even that he hath, so he will deliver up the false Man to the Oppressor, and the Extortioner shall catch from him, as well as he hath caught from his Neighbour; therefore another Scripture faith, When thou shalt cease to deal treacherously, they shall deal treacherously with thee. That the New Testament also, hath an Inspection into Mens Trading, yea even with their Weights and Measures, is evident from these general Exhortations. Defraud not; lye not one to another; let no Man go beyond his Brother in any matter, for God is the Avenger of all such: Whatsoever you do, do it heartily, as unto the Lord, doing all in his Name, to his Glory; and the like. All these Injunctions and Commandments do respect our Life and Conversation among Men, with Reference to our Dealing, Trading, and so consequently they forbid false, deceitful, yea all Doings that are corrupt.

Having thus in a Word or two shewed you that these things are bad; I will next, for the Conviction of those that use them, shew you where they are to be found.

Where false Weights and Measures are to be found.

1. They are not to be found in the House of the good and godly man, for he, as his God, abhors them; but they are to be found in the House of evil Doers, such as Mr. Badman's is. Are there, faith the Prophet, yet the Treasures of Wickedness in the House of the Wicked, and the scant Measure that is Abomination? Are they there yet, notwithstanding God's forbidding, notwithstanding God's tokens of Anger against those that do such Things? O how loth is a wicked Man to let go a sweet, a gainful Sin, when he hath hold of it! They hold fast Deceit, they refuse to let it go.

1. With evil doers

Mic. 6. 10.

2. These deceitful Weights and Measures are not to be found in the House of the merciful, but in the House of the Cruel; in the House of them that love to oppress. The Ballances of Deceit are in his Hand, he loveth to oppress. He is given to Oppression and Cruelty, therefore he useth such wicked Things in his Calling. Yea, he is a very cheat, and, as was hinted before, concerning Mr. Badman's breaking, so I say now, concerning his using these deceitful Weights and Measures, it is as bad, as base, as to take a Purse, or pick a Pocket; for sors.

Hof. 12. 7.

for it is a plain Robbery, it takes away from a Man that which is his own, even the Price of his Money.

3. With such as would swallow up the Poor.

Amos 8. 4, 5, 6, 7.

3. The deceitful Weights and Measures are not to be found in the House of such as relieve the Belly, and that cover the Loyns of the Poor, but of such as indeed would swallow them up. Hear ye this, ye that swallow up the needy, and that make the Poor of the Land to fail, saying, When will the new Moon be gone that we may sell Corn, and the Sabbath that we may set forth Wheat, making the Ephah small and the Sheckle great, (making the Measure small, and the Price great) and falsifying the Ballances by Deceit, that ye may buy the Poor for Silver, and the needy for a pair of Shoes, and sell the refuse of the Wheat. The Lord hath sworn by the excellency of Jacob, surely I will not forget any of their Works. So detestable and vile a Thing is this in the Sight of God.

4. With impure ones.

Mic. 6. 11.

4. God abominates the Thoughts of calling of those that use false Weights and Measures, by any other Term, than that they be Impure Ones, or the like: Shall I count them pure, (saith he) with the Bag of deceitful Weights? no, by no means, they are impure ones, their Hands are defiled, deceitful Gain is in their Houses, they have gotten what they have by coveting an evil Covetousness, and therefore must and shall be counted among the impure, among the Wicked of the World.

Thus you see how full and plain the Word of God is, against this Sin, and them that use it. And therefore Mr. Badman, for that he used by these things thus to rook and cheat his Neighbours, is rightly rejected from having his Name in, and among the Catalogue of the godly.

Atten. But I am persuaded, that the using of these Things, and the doing by them thus deceitfully, is not counted so great an evil by some.

Wife. Whether it be counted an Evil or a Vertue, by Men, it mattereth not; you see by the Scriptures, the Judgment of God upon it. It was not counted an evil by Mr. Badman, nor is it by any that still are treading in his Steps. But, I say, 'tis no matter how Men esteem of things, let us adhere to the Judgment of God. And the rather, because when we ourselves have done weighing and measuring to others, then God will weigh and measure both us and our Actions. And when he doth so, as he will do shortly, then woe be to him to whom, and of whose Actions it shall be thus said by him: Tekel, thou art weigh'd in the Ballance, and art found wanting. God will then recompense their Evil of Deceiving upon their own Head, when he shall shut them out of his Presence, Favour, and Kingdom, for ever and ever.

Dan. 5. 27.

Atten. But 'tis a Wonder, that since Mr. Badman's common Practice was to do thus, that some one or more did not find him out, and blame him for this his Wickedness.

Wife. For the generality of People he went away clever with his Knavery. For what with his Ballance, his false Ballance, and good Weight, and what with his slight of hand to boot, he beguiled sometimes a little, and sometimes more, most that he had to deal with: Besides, those that use this naughty Trade, are either such as blind Men with a shew of Religion, or by hectoring the Buyer out by Words. I must confess Mr. Badman was not so arch at the first; that is, to do it by shew of Religion; for now he began to grow threadbare (though some of his Brethren are arch enough this way, yea and of his Sisters too, for I told you at first that there were a great many of them, and never a one of them good :) but for hectoring, for swearing, for lying, if these things would make Weight and Measure, they should not be wanting to Mr. Badman's Customers.

How Mr. Badman did cheat, and hide his cheating.

Atten. Then it seems he kept good Weights, and a bad Ballance; well that was better than that both should be bad.

Wife. Not at all. There lay the Depth of his Deceit: For if any at any time found fault, that he used them hardly, and that they wanted their weight of things; he would reply: why did you not see them weighed? will you not believe your own Eyes? If you question my Weights, pray carry them whither you will, I will maintain them to be good and just. The same he would say of his Scales. So he blinded all by his Ballance.

Good Weights and a bad Ballance a deep piece of Knavery.

Atten. This is cunning indeed: but as you say, there must be also something done or said, to blind therewith, and this I perceive Mr. Badman had.

Wife. Yes, he had many ways to blind, but he was never clever at it by making a shew of Religion, (though he cheated his Wife therewith :) for he was, especially by those that dwelt near him, too well known to do that, though he would bungle at it as well as he could. But there are some that are arch Villains this way; they shall to view live a whole Life religiously, and yet shall be guilty of these most horrible Sins: And yet Religion in itself is never the worse, nor yet the true Professors of it. But as Luther says, In the Name of God begins all Mischief. For Hypocrites have no other way to bring their Evils to Maturity, but by using and mixing the Name of God and Religion therewith. Thus they become whited Walls; for by this White, the white of Religion, the Dirt of their Actions is hid. Thus also they become Graves that appear not, and they that go over them, (that have to do with them) are not aware of them, but suffer themselves to be deluded by them. Yea, if there shall, as there will sometimes, rise a Doubt in the Heart of the Buyer about the Weight and Measure sure he should have, why, he suffereth his very Senses to be also deluded, by recalling of his Chapman's Religion to mind, and thinks verily that not his good Chapman but himself is out; for he dreams not that his Chapman can deceive. But if the buyer shall find it out, and shall make it apparent, that he is beguiled; then shall he be healed by having amends made, and perhaps fault shall be laid upon Servants, &c. and so Master Cheat shall stand for a right honest Man in the Eye of his Customer, though the next time he shall pick his pocket again.

* Some plead Custom for their Cheat, as if that could acquit them before the Tribunal of God: And others say, it came to them for so much, and therefore another must take it for so much, though there is wanting both as to weight and measure: but in all these things there are Juggles; or if not, such must know, † That that which is altogether just, they must do. Suppose that I be cheated my self with a Brass half Crown, must I therefore cheat another therewith? if this be bad in the whole, it is also bad in the Parts. Therefore however thou art dealt withal in thy buying, yet thou must deal justly in selling, or thou sinnest against thy Soul, and art become as Mr. Badman. And know, that a pretence to custom is nothing worth. 'Tis not custom, but good conscience that will help at God's Tribunal.

Atten. But I am perswaded, that that which is gotten by Men this way, doth them but little good.

Wise. I am of your mind for that, but this is not considered by those thus minded. For if they can get it, though they get, as we say, the Devil and all, by their getting, yet they are content, and count that their getting is much.

Little good! Why do you think they consider that? No: no more than they consider what they shall do in the Judgment, at the Day of God Almighty, for their wrong getting of what they get, and that is just nothing at all.

But to give you a more direct answer. This kind of getting, is so far off from doing them little good, that it doth them no good at all; because thereby they lose their own Souls; What shall it profit a Man if he shall gain the whole World, and lose his own Soul? He loseth then, he loseth greatly that getteth after this fashion. This is the Man that is penny-wise and pound-foolish; this is he that loseth his good Sheep for a halfpennyworth of tarr; that loseth a Soul for a little of the World. And then what doth he get thereby, but loss and damage? Thus he getteth, or rather loseth about the World to come: But what doth he get in this World, more than travel and sorrow, vexation of spirit, and disappointment? Men aim at Blessedness in getting, I mean, at temporal Blessedness; but the Man that thus getteth, shall not have that. For though an Inheritance after this manner may be hastily gotten at the beginning, yet the end thereof shall not be blessed. They gather it indeed, and think to keep it too, but what says Solomon? God casteth it away. The Lord will not suffer the Soul of the Righteous to famish, but he casteth away the substance of the Wicked.

The time, as I said, that they do enjoy it, it shall do them no good at all; but, long to be sure they must not have it. For God will either take it away in their life time, or else in the Generation following, according to that of Job: He, the Wicked, may prepare it, but the just shall put it on, and the Innocent shall divide the Silver. Job 27.17.

Consider that also that is written in Proverbs: A good Man leaveth an Inheritance to his Childrens Children, and the wealth of the Sinner is laid up for the Just. Prov. 13.22. What then doth he get thereby, that getteth by dishonest means? why he getteth Sin and Wrath, Hell and Damnation: and now tell me how much he doth get.

This, I say, is his getting; so that as David says, we may be bold to say too: I beheld the Wicked in great Prosperity, and presently I cursed his Habitation: for it cannot prosper with him. Fluster and huff, and make ado for a while he may, but God hath determined that both he and it, shall melt like grease, and any observing Man may see it so. Behold, the unrighteous Man in a way of injustice getteth much, and loadeth himself with thick Clay, but anon it withereth, it decayeth, and even he, or the Generation following decline, and return to beggary.

And this Mr. Badman, notwithstanding his cunning and crafty tricks to get Money, did dye, no body can tell whether worth a farthing or no.

Atten. He had all the bad tricks, I think, that it was possible for a Man to have, to get money; one would think that he should have been rich.

Wise. You reckon too fast, if you count these all his bad tricks to get Money: For he had more besides. More of Mr. Badman's bad tricks.

If his Customers were in his Books (as it should go hard but he would have them there; at least, if he thought he could make any advantage of them,) then, then would he be sure to impose upon them his worst, even very bad Commodity, yet set down for it the Price that the best was sold at: like those that sold the Refuge Wheat, or the worst of the Wheat; making the Sheckle great, yet hoisting up the Price: This was Mr. Badman's way. * Heart to cheat withal. Amos. 8. Another would sell goods that cost him not the best Price by far, for as much as he sold his best of all for. He had also a trick to mingle his his Commodity, that that which was bad might go off with the least mistrust.

Besides, if his Customers at any time paid him money, let them look to themselves, and to their Acquaintances, for he would usually attempt to call for that Payment again, especially if he thought that there was hopes of making a prize thereby, and then to be sure if they could not produce good and sufficient ground of the Payment, a hundred to one but they paid it again. Sometimes the honest Chapman would appeal to his Servants for proof of the Payment of Money, but they were trained up by him to say after his mind, right or wrong: so that, relief that way, he could get none.

Atten. It is a bad, yea an abominable thing for a Man to have such Servants. For by such means a poor Customer may be undone, and not know how to help himself. Alas! if the Master be so unconscionable, as I perceive Mr. Badman was, to call for his Money twice, and if his Servant will swear that it is a due debt, where is any help for such a Man? he must sink, there is no remedy.

Wife. This is very bad, but this has been a Practice, and that hundreds of years ago. But what faith the Word of God? I will punish all those that leap upon the threshold, which fill their Masters houses with violence and deceit.

Mr. Badman also had this Art; could he get a Man at advantage, that is, if his Chapman durst not go from him, or if the Commodity he wanted could not for the present be conveniently had elsewhere; Then let him look to himself, he would surely make his purse-strings crack; he would exact upon him without any Pity or Conscience.

Atten. That was Extortion, was it not? I pray let me hear your Judgment of Extortion, what it is, and when committed?

Wife. Extortion is a screwing from Men more than by the Law of God or Men is right; and it is committed sometimes by them in Office, about Fees, Rewards, and the like: but 'tis most commonly committed by Men of Trade, who without all conscience, when they have the advantage, will make a prey of their Neighbour. And thus was Mr. Badman an Extortioner; for although he did not exact, and force away, as Bailiffs and Clerks have used to do; yet he had his opportunities, and such cruelty to make use of them, that he would often, in his way, be extorting and forcing of Money out of his Neighbour's Pocket. For every Man that makes a prey of his advantage upon his Neighbour's necessities, to force from him more than in reason and conscience, according to the present prizes of things such Commodity is worth; may very well be called an Extortioner, and judged for one that hath No inheritance in the Kingdom of God.

Atten. Well, this Badman was a sad wretch.

Wife. Thus you have often said before: But now we are in discourse of this, give me leave a little to go on. We have a great many People in the Country too that live all their Days in the Practice, and so under the guilt of Extortion: People, alas! that think scorn to be so accounted.

As for Example: There is a poor Body that dwells, we will suppose, so many miles from the Market; and this Man wants a Bushel of Grist, a pound of Butter, or a Cheese for himself, his Wife and poor Children: But dwelling so far from the Market, if he goes thither, he shall lose his days work, which will be eight pence or ten pence damage to him, and that is something to a poor Man. So he goeth to one of his Masters or Dames for what he wanteth, and asks them to help him with such a thing: Yes, say they, you may have it; but withal they will give him a gripe, perhaps make him pay as much (or more) for it at home, as they can get when they have carried it five miles to a Market, yea and that too for the Refuse of their Commodity. But in this the Women are especially faulty, in the sale of their Butter and Cheese, &c. Now this is a kind of Extortion, it is a making a prey of the Necessity of the Poor, it is a grinding of their Faces, a buying and selling of them.

But above all, your Hucksters, that buy up the poor Man's Victuals by wholesale, and sell it to him again for unreasonable gains, by Retail, and as we call it, by peace-meal; they are got into a way, after a stinging rate, to play their game upon such by Extortion: I mean such who buy up Butter, Cheese, Eggs, Bacon, &c. by Wholesale, and sell it again (as they call it) by penny worths, two penny worths, a half penny worth, or the like, to the Poor, all the Week after the Market is past.

These, though I will not condemn them all, do, many of them, bite and pinch the Poor by this kind of evil dealing. These destroy the Poor because he is Poor, and that is a grievous Sin. He that oppresseth the Poor to increase his riches, and that giveth to the rich, shall surely come to want. Therefore he saith again, Rob not the poor because he is poor, neither oppress the afflicted in the gate; for the Lord will plead their cause, and spoil the Soul of them that spoil them.

Oh that he that gripeth and grindeth the Face of the Poor, would take notice of these two Scriptures! Here is threatned the Destruction of the Estate, yea and of the Soul too, of them that oppress the Poor. Their Soul we shall better see where, and in what condition that is in, when the day of Doom is come; but for the Estates of such, they usually quickly moult; and that sometimes all Men, and sometimes no Man knows how.

Deut. 23.

Besides, these are Usurers, yea they take usury for victuals, which thing the Lord has forbidden. And because they cannot so well do it on the Market-day, therefore they do it, as I said, when the Market is over; for then the Poor falls into their Mouths, and are necessitated to have, as they can, for their need, and they are resolved they shall pay soundly for it. Perhaps some will find fault for my meddling thus with other folks matters, and for my thus prying into the secrets of their iniquity. But to such I would say, since such actions are Evil, 'tis time they were hissed out of the World. For all that do such things, offend against God, wrong their Neighbour, and like Mr. Badman do provoke God to Judgment. God knows, there is abundance of deceit in the World!

Wife. Deceit! Ay, but I have not told you the thousandth part of it; nor is it my Business now to rake to the bottom of that Dunghil: what would you say, if I should anatomize some of those vile wretches called Pawn-Brokers, that lend Money and Goods to poor People, who are by necessity forced to such an inconvenience; and will make, by one trick or other, the Interest of what they so lend, amount to thirty, forty, yea sometimes fifty pound by the Year; notwithstanding the Principal is secured by a sufficient Pawn; which they will keep too at last, if they can find any shift to cheat the wretched borrower.

Atten. Say! Why such Miscreants are the Pest and Vermin of the common-wealth, not fit for the Society of Men; but methinks by some of those things you discoursed before, you seem to import that it is not lawful for a Man to make the best of his own.

Whether it be lawful for a man to make the best of his own.
Proved in negative by eight reasons.

Wife. If by making the best, you mean, to sell for as much as by hook or crook he can get for his Commodity; then I say, it is not lawful. And if I should say, the contrary, I should justify Mr. Badman and all the rest of that Gang: but that I never shall do, for the Word of God condemns them. But that it is not lawful for a Man at all times, to sell his Commodity for as much as he can, I prove by these reasons.

First, If it be lawful for me alway to sell my Commodity as dear, or for as much as I can, then 'tis lawful for me to lay aside in my dealing with others, good Conscience, to them, and to God: but it is not lawful for me, in my dealing with others, to lay aside good Conscience, &c. Therefore it is not lawful for me always to sell my Commodity as dear, or for as much as I can.

That it is not lawful to lay aside good conscience in our dealings, has already been proved in the former part of our Discourse: But that a Man must lay it aside that will sell his Commodity always as dear, or for as much as he can, is plainly manifest thus.

1. He that will (as is mentioned afore) sell his Commodity as dear as he can, must sometimes make a Prey of the Ignorance of his Chapman: But that he cannot do with a good Conscience (for that is to overreach, and to go beyond my Chapman, and is forbidden, 1 Thess. 4. 6.) Therefore he that will sell his Commodity, as afore, as dear, or for as much as he can, must of necessity lay aside a good Conscience.

We must not make a Prey of our Neighbour's Ignorance.

2. He that will sell his Commodity always as dear as he can, must needs, sometimes make a Prey of his Neighbour's Necessity; but that he cannot do with a good Conscience (for that is to go beyond and defraud his Neighbour, contrary to 1 Thess. 4. 6.) Therefore he that will sell his Commodity, as afore, as dear, or for as much as he can, must needs cast off and lay aside a good Conscience.

Nor of his
Neighbour's necessity.

3. He that will (as afore) sell his Commodity as dear, or for as much as he can, must, if need be, make a Prey of his Neighbour's Fondness; but that a Man cannot do with a good Conscience, (for that is still a going beyond him, contrary to 1 Thess. 4. 6.) Therefore, he that will sell his Commodity as dear, or for as much as he can, must needs cast off, and lay aside a good Conscience.

Nor of his Fondness of our Commodity.

The same also may be said for buying; no Man may always buy as cheap as he can, but must also use good Conscience in buying; the which he can by no means use and keep, if he buys always as cheap as he can, and that for the Reasons urged before. For such will make a Prey of the Ignorance, Necessity, and Fondness of their Chapman, the which they cannot do with a good Conscience.

We must use good Conscience in buying.

When Abraham would buy a Burying-place of the Sons of Heth, thus he said unto them. Intreat for me to Ephron the Son of Zohar, that he may give me the Cave of Machpelah, which he hath in the End of his Field. For as much as it is worth shall he give it me, Gen. 23. 8, 9. He would not have it under foot, he scorned it, he abhorred it: It stood not with his Religion, Credit, nor Conscience. So also when David, would buy a Field of Ornon the Jebusite: Thus he said unto him: Grant me the Place of the Threshing-floor, that I may build an Altar there unto the Lord. Thou shalt give it me for the full Price. He also, as Abraham, made Conscience of this kind of Dealing: He would not lie at catch to go beyond, no not the Jebusite, but will give him him his full Price for his Field. For he knew that there was Wickedness, as in selling too dear, so in buying too cheap, therefore he would not do it.

1 Chron.
22. 24.

There ought therefore to be good Conscience used, as in selling, so in buying; for 'tis also unlawful for a Man to go beyond or to defraud his Neighbour in buying; yea 'tis unlawful to do it in any matter, and God will plentifully avenge that Wrong: as I also before have warned and testified. See also the * Text in the Margent. But,

Charity must be used in our Dealings.

Secondly, if it be lawful for me always to sell my Commodity as dear, or for as much as I can, then it is lawful for me to deal with my Neighbour without the use of Charity: But it is not lawful for me to lay aside, or to deal with my Neighbour without the use of Charity, therefore it is not lawful for me always to sell my Commodity to my Neighbour for as much as I can. A Man in Dealing should as really design his Neighbour's Good, Profit, and Advantage, as his own: For this is to exercise Charity in his Dealing.

That I should thus use, or exercise Charity towards my Neighbour in my buying and selling, &c. with him, is evident from the general Command; Let all your things be done in Charity: But that a Man cannot live in the Exercise of Charity, that selleth, as afore, as dear, or that buyeth as cheap as he can, is evident by these Reasons.

1 Cor. 16.
14.

1. He that selleth his Commodity as dear, or for as much Money (always) as he can, seeks himself, and himself only; (But Charity seeketh not her own, nor her own only.) So then, he that seeks himself, and himself only, as he that sells (as afore) as dear as he can, does; maketh not use of, nor doth he exercise Charity, in his so dealing.

1 Cor. 13.

2. He that selleth his Commodity (always) for as much as he can get, hardeneth his Heart against all reasonable Entreaties of the Buyer. But he that doth so, cannot exercise Charity in his Dealing; therefore it is not lawful for a Man to sell his Commodity, as afore, as dear as he can.

Thirdly, If it be lawful for me to sell my Commodity, as afore, as dear as I can, then there can be no Sin in my Trading, how unreasonably soever I manage my Calling, whether by Lying, Swearing, Cursing, Cheating; for all this is but to sell my Commodity as dear as I can: But that there is Sin in these, is evident, therefore I may not sell my Commodity always as dear as I can.

Eph. 4. 25.

There may be and is Sin in trading.

Fourthly, He that sells, as afore, as dear as he can, offereth Violence to the Law of Nature: For that faith, Do unto all Men, even as ye would that they should do unto you. Now, was the Seller a Buyer, he would not that he of whom he buys, should sell him always as dear as he can; therefore he should not sell so himself, when it is lence to his lot to sell, and others to buy of him. Job 37. 7.

Fifthly, He that selleth, as afore, as dear as he can, makes use of that Instruction, that God hath not given to others, but seal-^{We must not abuse the Gift we have in the knowledge of earthly things.} ed up in his Hand, to abuse his Law, and to wrong his Neighbour withal; which indeed is contrary to God. God hath given thee more Skill, more Knowledge and Understanding in thy Commodity, than he hath given to him that would buy of thee. But what! canst thou think, that God has given thee this, that thou mightest thereby make a Prey of thy Neighbour? that thou mightest thereby go beyond and beguile thy Neighbour? No, verily; but he hath given thee it for his help; that thou mightest in this, be Eyes to the Blind, and save thy Neighbour from that Damage that his Ignorance, or Necessity, or Fondness would betray him into the Hands of.

Sixthly, In all that a Man does, he should have an Eye to the Glory of God, but that he cannot have, that sells his Commodity always for as much as he can, for the Reasons urged before.

1 Cor. 10.
13.

An Eye

Glory of God in all we should have.

Seventhly, All that a Man does, he should do in the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ; that is, as being commanded and authorized to do it by him: But he that selleth always as dear as he can, cannot so much as pretend to this, without horrid blaspheming of that Name because commanded by him to do otherwise.

Colof. 3.
17.

Eighthly, and lastly, In all that a Man does, he should have an Eye to the Day of Judgment, and to the Consideration of how his Actions will be esteemed of in that Day: Therefore there is not any Man can or ought to sell always as dear as he can: unless he will, yea he must say, in so doing, I will run the Hazard of the Tryal of that day.

Acts 24.
15, 16.

If thou sell ought unto thy Neighbour, or buyest ought of thy Neighbour, ye shall not oppress one another.

Levit. 25.
14.

Atten. But why do you put in those cautionary Words? They must not sell always as dear, nor buy always as cheap as they can: Do you not thereby intimate that a Man may sometimes do so?

Wise I do indeed intimate that sometimes the Seller may sell as dear, and the Buyer buy as cheap as he can; but this is allowable only in these Cases: When he that sells is a Knave, and lays aside all good Conscience in selling; or when the Buyer is a Knave, and lays aside all good Conscience in Buying. If the Buyer therefore lights of a Knave, or if the Seller lights of a Knave, then let them look to themselves: But yet so, as not to lay aside Conscience, because he that thou dealest with doth so: But how vile or base soever the Chapman is, do thou keep thy Commodity at a reasonable Price: Or if thou buyest, offer reasonable Gain for the thing thou wouldest have; and if this will not do with the Buyer or Seller, then seek thee thee a more honest Chapman. If thou objectest, But I have not Skill to know when a Penny-worth is before me: Get some that have more Skill than thy self in that Affair, and let them in that matter dispose of thy Money. But if there were no Knaves in the World, these Objections need not be made.

And thus, my very good Neighbour, have I given you a few of my Reasons, why a Man that hath it, should not always sell too dear, nor buy as cheap as he can: But should use good Conscience to God, and Charity to his Neighbour in both.

Atten. But were some Men here, to hear you, I believe they would laugh you to scorn.

Wife. I question not that at all, for so  Mr. Badman* used to do, when any Man told him of his Faults: he used to think himself wiser than any, and would count, as I have hinted before, that he was not arrived to a manly Spirit, that did stick or boggle at any Wickedness. But let Mr. Badman and his Fellows laugh, I will bear it, and still give them good Counsel. But I will remember also, for my further Relief and Comfort, that thus they that were covetous of old, served the Son of God himself. It is their time to laugh now, that they may mourn in time to come. And, I say again, when they have laughed out their laugh; He that useth not good Conscience to God, and Charity to his Neighbour, in buying and selling, dwells next Door to an Infidel, and is near of kin to Mr. Badman.

* Badman used to laugh at them that told him of his Faults.

Luke 16. 13, 14, 15. Chap. 6. 25.

A Question.

Atten. Well, but what will you say to this Question? You know that there is no settled Price set by God upon any Commodity that is bought or sold under the Sun; but all things that we buy and sell do ebb and flow, as to Price, like the Tide: How then, shall a Man of a tender Conscience do, neither to wrong the Seller, Buyer, nor himself, in buying and selling of Commodities?

An Answer.

Wife. This Question is thought to be frivolous by all that are of Mr. Badman's way; 'tis also difficult in itself: yet I will endeavour to shape you an Answer, and that first to the matter of the Question; to wit, How a Tradesman should, in Trading, keep a good Conscience; (a Buyer or Seller either.) Secondly, How he should prepare himself to this Work, and live in the Practice of it.

* Preparations to be good Dealer.

For the first: *He must observe what hath been said before, to wit, he must have Conscience to God, Charity to his Neighbour; and I will add, much Moderation in Dealing. Let him therefore keep within the bounds of the Affirmative of those eight Reasons, that before were urged to prove, that Men ought not in their Dealing, but to do justly and mercifully betwixt Man and

Man; and then there will be no great Fear of wronging the Seller, Buyer or himself.

But particularly to prepare, or instruct a Man to this Work:

1. Let the Tradesman or others consider, that there is not that in great Gettings, and in Abundance, which the most of Men do suppose: For all that a Man has over and above what serves for his present Necessity and Supply, serves only to feed the Lusts of the Eye. For what good is there to the owners thereof, save the beholding of them with their Eyes? Men also, many times, in getting of riches, get therewith a snare to their Soul: But few get good by getting of them. But this Consideration, Mr. Badman could not abide.

2. Consider, that the getting of wealth dishonestly (as he does, that getteth it without good Conscience and Charity to his Neighbour,) is a great Offender against God. Hence he says, I have smitten mine hands at thy dishonest gain, which thou hast made. It is a Manner of speech that shews anger in the very making of mention of the Crime. Therefore,

3. Consider, that a little honestly gotten, though it may yield thee but a dinner of herbs at a time, will yield more peace therewith, than will a stalled Ox, ill gotten. Better is a little with Righteousness, than great revenues without right.

4. Be thou confident, that God's Eyes are upon all thy ways, and that he pondereth all thy goings, and also that he marks them, writes them down, and seals them up in a Bag, against the Time to come.

5. Be thou sure that thou remembrest, that thou knowest not the Day of thy Death. Remember also, that when Death comes, God will give thy substance, for the which thou hast laboured, and for the which perhaps thou hast hazarded thy Soul, to one, thou knowest not who, nor whether he shall be a wise Man or a Fool. And then, what profit hath he that laboreth for the Wind?

Besides, thou shalt have nothing that thou mayest so much as carry away in thine Hand. Guilt shall go with thee, if thou hast got it dishonestly, and they also to whom thou shalt leave it, shall receive it to their hurt.

These things duly considered, and made use of by thee to the preparing of thy Heart to thy calling of buying or selling; I come in the next place to shew thee how thou shouldst live in the practick part of this art. Art thou to buy or sell?

1. If thou sellest, do not commend; if thou buyest, do not dispraise, any otherwise, but to give the Thing that thou hast to do with, its just value and worth; for thou canst not do otherwise knowingly, but of a covetous and wicked Mind. Wherefore else are commodities overvalued by the Seller, and also undervalued by the Buyer.

2. Art thou a Seller, and do things grow dear? set not thy hand to help, or hold them up higher; this cannot be done without Wickedness neither; for this is a making of the Sheckle great: Art thou a Buyer, and do things grow dear? use no cunning or deceitful language to pull them down: for that cannot be done but wickedly too. What then shall we do? will you say. Why I answer: Leave things to the Providence of God, and do thou with moderation submit to his Hand. But since, when they are growing dear, the Hand that upholds the Price, is, for the Time, more strong than that which would pull it down; That being the Hand of the Seller, who loveth to have it dear, especially if it shall rise in his Hand: therefore I say, do thou take heed, and have not a Hand in it. The which thou mayest have to thine own and thy Neighbour's hurt, these three Ways:

1. By crying out scarcity, scarcity, beyond the Truth and state of things: especially take heed of doing this by way of a prognostick for time to come. 'Twas for this for which he was trodden to death in the Gate of Samaria, that you read of in the Book of Kings. This Sin has a double Evil in it. 1. It beliethe the present blessing of God amongst us: and, 2. It undervalueth the Riches of his Goodness, which can make all good things to abound towards us.

2. This wicked Thing may be done by hoarding up, when the Hunger and Necessity of the Poor calls for it. Now that God may shew his dislike against this, he doth, as it were, license the People to curse such an hoarder up. He that withholdeth Corn, the People shall curse him, but blessing shall be upon the Head of him that selleth it.

3. But if things will rise, do thou be grieved; Be also moderate in all thy sellings, and be sure let the Poor have a Penny worth, and sell thy Corn to those in necessity: Which then thou wilt do, when thou shewest Mercy to the Poor in thy selling to him, and when thou for his sake, because he is poor, undersellest the Market. This is to buy and sell with good conscience: thy buyer thou wrongest not, thy conscience thou wrongest not, thy self thou wrongest not, for God will surely recompense thee.

I have spoken concerning Corn, but thy duty is, to let thy Moderation in all things be known unto all Men, the Lord is at Hand.

Philip. 4. 5. Vol II.

Atten. Well, Sir, now I have heard enough of Mr. Badman's Naughtiness, pray now proceed to his Death.

Wife. Why Sir, the Sun is not so low, we have yet three hours to Night.

Atten. Nay; I am not in any great haste, but I thought you had even now done with his Life.

Wife. Done! no, I have yet much more to say.

Atten. Then he has much more Wickedness than I thought he had.

Wife. That may be. But let us proceed: This Mr. Badman, added to all his Wickedness this, He was a very proud Man, a ^{Mr. Badman a very proud Man.} Very proud Man. He was exceeding proud and haughty in Mind: he looked, that what he said, ought not, must not be contradicted or opposed. He counted himself as wise as the wisest in the Country, as good as the best, and as beautiful as he that had most of it. He took great delight in praising of himself, and as much in the praises that others gave him. He could not abide that any should think themselves above him, or that their wit or personage should by others be set before his. He had scarce a fellowly carriage for his equals. But for those that were of an inferior rank, he would look over them in great contempt. And if at any time he had any remote occasion of having to do with them, he would shew great height, and a very domineering Spirit. So that in this it may be said, that Solomon gave a characteristical note of him, when he said: Proud and haughty scorner is his Name, who dealeth in proud Wrath. He never thought his Diet well enough dressed, his Cloaths fine enough made, or his Praise enough refined.

Atten. This Pride, is a Sin that sticks as close to nature I think, as most Sins. There is Uncleaness and Pride, I know not of any two gross sins that stick closer to Men than they. They have, as I may call it, an interest in Nature; it likes them because they most suit its lusts and fancies: and therefore no marvel though Mr. Badman was tainted with Pride, since he had so wickedly given up himself to work all iniquity with Greediness.

Wife. You say right; Pride, is a Sin that sticks close to Nature, and is one of the first follies wherein it shews it self to be polluted. For even in Childhood, even in little Children, Pride will first of all shew it self; it is a hasty, an early appearance of the Sin of the Soul. It, as I may say, is that Corruption that strives for predominancy in the Heart, and therefore usually comes out first. But though Children are so incident to it, yet methinks those of more years, should be ashamed thereof. I might at the first have begun with Mr. Badman's Pride, only I think it is not the Pride in Infancy, that begins to make a difference betwixt one and another, as did, and do those wherewith I began my Relation of his Life: therefore I passed it over, but now, since he had no more consideration of himself, and of his vile and sinful state, but to be proud when come to years; I have taken the occasion in this place to make mention of his pride.

Atten. But pray, if you can remember them, tell me of some places of Scripture that speak against Pride. I the rather desire this, because that pride is now a reigning Sin, and I happen sometimes to fall into the Company of them that in my Conscience are proud, very much, and I have a mind also to tell them of their Sin; now when I tell them of it, unless I bring God's Word too, I doubt they will laugh me to scorn.

Wife. Laugh you to scorn! the proud Man will laugh you to scorn, bring to him what text you can, except God shall smite him in his conscience by the Word: Mr. Badman did use to serve them so that did use to tell him of his: and besides, when you have said what you can, they will tell you they are not proud, and that you are rather the proud Man, else you would not judge, nor so malapertly meddle with other Mens matters as you do. Nevertheless, since you desire it, I will mention two or three Texts: They are these. Pride and arrogancy do I hate. A Man's pride shall bring him low. And he shall bring down their Pride. And all the proud, and all that do wickedly shall be as stubble, and the Day that comes shall burn them up. This last, is a dreadful Text; it is enough to make a proud Man shake: God, saith he, will make the proud ones as stubble; that is, as fuel for the Fire, and the Day that cometh shall be like a burning Oven, and that Day shall burn them up, saith the Lord. But Mr. Badman could never abide to hear Pride spoken against, nor that any should say of him, He is a proud Man.

Atten. What should be the reason of that?

Wife. He did not tell me the reason; but I suppose it to be that which is common to all vile Persons. They love this Vice, but care not to bear its name. The Drunkard loves the Sin, but loves not to be called a Drunkard. The Thief loveth to steal, but cannot abide to be called a Thief, the Whore loveth to commit Uncleaness, but loveth not to be called a Whore: And so Mr. Badman loved to be proud, but could not abide to be called a proud Man. The sweet of Sin, is desirable to polluted and corrupted Man, but the Name thereof, is a blot in his Scutcheon.

Atten. 'Tis true that you have said: but pray how many sorts of Pride are there?

Wife. There are two sorts of Pride; Pride of Spirit, and Pride of Body. The first of these is thus made mention of in the Scriptures. Every one that is proud in Heart is Abomination to the Lord. A high look, and a proud Heart, and the plowing of the Wicked is Sin. The Patient in Spirit is better than the proud in Spirit. Bodily Pride these Scriptures mention. In that day the Lord shall take away the bravery of their tinkling Ornaments about their Feet, and their Cauls, and their round Tires like the Moon, the Chains and the Bracelets, and the Mufflers, the Bonnets, and the Ornaments of the Legs, and the Head-Bands, and the Tablets, and the Ear-Rings, the Rings and the Nose Jewels: The changeable Suits of Apparel, and the Mantles, and the Wimples, and the Crisping Pins, the Glasses, and the fine Linnen, and the Hoods and the Vails. By these Expressions it is evident that there is a Pride of Body, as well as a Pride of Spirit, and that both are Sin, and so abominable to the Lord. But these Texts Mr. Badman could never abide to read, they were to him as Micaiah was to Ahab, they never spake good of him, but evil.

Atten. I suppose that it was not Mr. Badman's Case alone even to malign those Texts that speak against their Vices: For I believe, that most ungodly Men, where the Scriptures are, have a secret Antipathy against those Words of God that do most plainly and fully rebuke them for their Sins.

Wife. That is out of doubt, and by that Antipathy, they shew that Sin and Satan are more welcome to them, than are the wholesome Instructions of Life and Godliness.

Atten. Well, but not to go off from our Discourse of Mr. Badman. You say he was proud: but will you shew me now some Symptoms of one that is proud?

Wife. Yes, that I will: And first I will shew you some Symptoms of Pride of Heart. Pride of Heart, is seen by outward things, as Pride of Body in general, is a sign of Pride of Heart; for all proud Gestures of the Body flow from Pride of Heart: therefore Solomon saith; There is a Generation, O how lofty are their Eyes, and their Eye-lids are lifted up: And again, There is that exalteth their gate, their going. Now these lofty Eyes, and this exalting of the gate, is a sign of a proud Heart: for both these Actions come from the Heart: For out of the Heart comes Pride, in all the visible Appearances of it. But more particularly:

1. Heart Pride is discovered by a stretched out Neck, and by mincing as they go. For the Wicked, the Proud, have a proud Neck, a proud Foot, a proud Tongue, by which this their going is exalted. This is that which makes them look scornfully, speak ruggedly, and carry it huffingly among their Neighbours.

2. A proud Heart, is a persecuting one: The Wicked through his Pride doth persecute the Poor.

Chap. 43. 8. And he that calls the Proud happy, is, be sure, a proud Man. All these are proud in Heart, and this their Pride of Heart doth thus discover itself.

Of outward Pride. As to bodily Pride, it is discovered, that is something of it, by all the Particulars mentioned before; for though they are said to be Symptoms of Pride of Heart, yet they are Symptoms of that Pride, by their shewing of themselves in the Body. You know Diseases that are within, are seen oft-times by outward and visible Signs, yet by them very Signs even the outside is defiled also. So all those visible Signs of Heart Pride are Signs of Bodily Pride also. But to come to more outward Signs: The putting on of Gold, and Pearls, and costly Array; the pleating of the Hair, the following of Fashions, the seeking by Gestures to imitate the Proud, either by Speech, Looks, Dresses, Goings, or other Fools Baubles, of which at this time the World is full, all these, and many more, are Signs, as of a proud Heart, so of bodily Pride also.

Mr. Badman was not for having pride called pride. But Mr. Badman would not allow, by any means, that this should be called Pride, but rather Neatness, Handsomness, Comeliness, Cleanliness, &c. neither would he allow, that following of Fashions was any thing else, but because he would not be proud, singular, and esteemed fantastical by his Neighbours.

Atten. But I have been told, that when some have been rebuked for their Pride, they have turned it again upon the Brotherhood of those by whom they have been rebuked: Saying, Physician heal thy Friends, look at home, among your Brotherhood, even among the wisest of you, and see if you yourselves be clear, even you Professors: For who is prouder than you Professors? scarcely the Devil himself.

Professors guilty of the Sin of pride. Wife. My Heart akes at this Answer, because there is too much Cause for it. This very Answer would Mr. Badman give his Wife, when she (as she would sometimes) reproved him for his Pride; We shall have, says he, great Amendments in living now, for the Devil is turned a Corrector of Vice: For no Sin reigneth more in the World, quoth he, than Pride among Professors. And who can contradict him? let us give the Devil his due, the thing is too apparent for any Man to deny.

And I doubt not but the same Answer is ready in the Mouths of Mr. Badman's Friends; for they may and do see Pride display itself in the Apparel and Carriages of Professors; one may say, almost as much, as among any People in the Land, the more is the Pity. Ay, and I fear that even their Extravagancies in this, hath hardened the Heart of many a one, as I perceive it did somewhat the Heart of Mr. Badman himself.

For mine own part, I have seen many my self, and those Church-Members too, so deck'd and bedaubed with their Fangles and Toys, and that when they have been at the solemn Appointments of God, in the way of his Worship, that I have wondred with what Face such painted Persons could sit in the place where they were without frowning. But certainly the Holiness of God, and also the Pollution of themselves by Sin, must need be very far out of the Minds of such People, what Profession soever they make.

I have read of an Whore's Forehead, and I have read of Christian Shamefacedness; I have read of costly Array, and of that which becometh Women professing Godliness, with good Works; but if I might speak, I know what I know, and could say, and yet do no wrong, that which would make some Professors shrink in their places; but now I forbear.

Atten. Sir, you seem to be greatly concerned at this, but what if I shall say more? it is whispered, that some good Ministers have countenanced their People in their light and wanton Apparel, yea have pleaded for their Gold and Pearls, and costly Array, &c.

Wife. I know not what they have pleaded for, but 'tis easily seen that they tolerate, or at least wile, wink and connive at such things, both in their Wives and Children.

And so from the Prophets of Jerusalem is profaneness gone forth into all the Land. * And when the Hand of the Rulers are chief in a Trespas, who can keep their People from being drowned in that Trespas? * Ezra. 9.

Atten. This is a Lamentation, and must stand for a Lamentation.

Wife. So it is, and so it must. And I will add, it is a Shame, it is a Reproach, it is a Stumbling-block to the Blind; for though Men be as blind as Mr. Badman himself, yet they can see the foolish lightness that must needs be the bottom of all these apish and wanton Extravagancies. But many have their Excuses ready; to wit, their Parents, their Husbands, and their Breeding calls for it, and the like: yea, the Examples of good People prompt them to it: but all these will be but the Spider's Web, when the Thunder of the Word of the great God shall rattle from Heaven against them, as it will at Death or Judgment; but I wish it might do it before. But alas! these Excuses are but bare Pretences, these proud ones love to have it so. I once talked with a Maid, by way of Reproof, for her fond and gaudy Garment. But she told me, The Tailor would make it so: when alas, poor proud Girl, Girl, she gave order to the Taylor so to make it. Many make Parents, and Husbands, and Taylors, &c. the Blind to others, but their naughty Hearts, and their giving of way thereto, that is the original cause of all these evils.

Atten. Now you are speaking of the Cause of Pride, pray shew me yet further why Pride is now so much in request?

Wife. I will shew you what I think are the Reasons of it.

Why pride is in such request.

1 Reason.

Mar. 7.
22, 23.

Obad. 3.

1 Joh. 2.
16.

1 Pet. 3. 1,
2, 3, 4, 5.

1. The first is, Because such Persons are led by their own Hearts, rather than by the Word of God. I told you before, that the original Fountain of Pride is the Heart. For out of the Heart comes Pride; it is therefore because they are led by their Hearts, which naturally tends to lift them up in Pride. This Pride of Heart, tempts them; and by its Deceits overcometh them; yea it doth put a bewitching Virtue into their Peacocks Feathers, and then they are swallowed up with the Vanity of them.

2. Another Reason why Professors are so proud, (for those we are talking of now) is because they are more apt to take Example by those that are of the World, than they are to take Example of those that are Saints indeed. Pride is of the World. For all that is of the World, the Lusts of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life, are not of the Father but of the World. Of the World therefore Professors learn to be proud. But they should not take them for Example. It will be objected, No, nor your Saints neither, for you are as proud as others: Well, let them take Shame that are guilty. But when I say, Professors should take Example for their Life by those that are Saints indeed, I mean as Peter says: They should take Example of those that were in old time, the Saints; for Saints of old time were the best, therefore to these he directeth us for our Pattern.

Let the Wives Conversation be chaste, and also coupled with fear. Whose adorning, saith Peter, let it not be that outward adorning, of pleating the Hair, and of wearing of Gold, or of putting on of Apparel: but let it be the hidden Man of the Heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the Ornament of a meek and quiet Spirit, which is in the Sight of God of great Price. For after this manner, in the old time, the holy Women also who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection to their own Husbands.

3. Another Reason is, because they have forgotten the Pollution of their Nature. For the Remembrance of that must needs keep us humble, and being kept humble, we shall be at a Distance from Pride. The proud and the humble are set in opposition; (God resisteth the Proud, but giveth Grace to the Humble.) And can it be imagined, that a sensible Christian should be a proud one; Sense of Baseness tends to lay us low, not to lift us up with pride; not with pride of Heart, nor pride of Life: But when a Man begins to forget what he is, then he, if ever, begins to be proud.

Methinks it is one of the most senseless and ridiculous things in the World, that a Man should be proud of that which is given him on purpose to cover the Shame of his Nakedness with.

4. Persons that are proud, have gotten God and his Holiness out of their Sight. If God was before them, as he is behind their back; And if they saw him in his Holiness, as he sees them in their Sins and Shame, they would take but little Pleasure in their apish Knacks. The Holiness of God makes the Angels cover their Faces, crumbles Christians, when they behold it, into Dust and Ashes: And as his Majesty is, such is his Word; therefore they abuse it, that bring it to countenance pride.

Lastly, But what can be the end of those that are proud, in the decking of themselves after their antick manner? Why are they for going with their Bull's Fore-tops, with their naked Shoulders, and Paps hanging out like a Cow's Bag? Why are they for painting their Faces, for stretching out their Neck, and for putting of themselves into all the Formalities which proud Fancy leads them to? Is it because they would honour God? because they would adorn the Gospel? because they would beautify Religion, and make Sinners to fall in love with their own Salvation? No, no, it is rather to please their Lusts, to satisfy their wild and extravagant Fancies; and I wish none doth it to stir up Lust in others, to the end they may commit Uncleaness with them. I believe whatever is their end, this is one of the great Designs of the Devil: and I believe also, that Satan has drawn more into the Sin of Uncleaness, by the spangling Shew of fine Cloaths, than he could possibly have drawn unto it without them. I wonder what it was, that of old was called the Attire of an Harlot: certainly it could not be more bewitching and tempting, than are the Garments of many Professors this Day.

Atten. I like what you say very well, and I wish that all the proud Dames in England that profess, were within the reach and found of your Words.

Wife. What I have said, I believe is true; but as for the proud Dames in England that profess, they have Moses and the Prophets, and if they will not hear them, how then can we hope that they should receive good, by such a dull sounding Ram's-Horn as I am? however, I have said my Mind, and now if you will, we will proceed to some other of Mr. Badman's Doings.

Atten. No: pray before you shew me any thing else of Mr. Badman, shew me yet more particularly the evil Effects of this sin of Pride.

Wife.

The evil Effects of the Sin of pride.

Wife. With all my heart, I will answer your request.

1 Evil effect.

1. Then: 'Tis Pride that makes poor Man so like the Devil in Hell, that he cannot in it be known to be the Image and Similitude of God. The Angels when they became Devils, 'twas through their being lifted or puffed up with Pride. 'Tis Pride also that lifteth or puffeth up the Heart of the Sinner, and so makes him to bear the very image of the Devil.

2 Evil effect.

Psal. 138. 9.

2. Pride makes a Man so odious in the Sight of God, that he shall not, must not, come nigh his Majesty. Though the Lord be high, yet hath he respect to the lowly, but the proud he knows afar off. Pride sets God and the Soul at a distance; Pride will not let a Man come nigh God, nor God will not let a proud Man come nigh unto him: Now this is a dreadful Thing.

3 Evil effect.

3. As Pride sets, so it keeps God and the Soul at a distance. God resisteth the Proud; resists, that is, he opposes him, he thrusts him from him, he contemneth his Person and all his Performances. Come in to God's Ordinances, the proud Man may; but come into his Presence, have Communion with him, or Blessing from him, he shall not. For the high God doth resist him.

4 Evil effect. Prov. 16. 25.

4. The Word saith, that The Lord will destroy the House of the Proud. He will destroy his House; it may be understood, he will destroy him and his. So he destroyed proud Pharaoh, so he destroyed proud Corab, and many others.

5 Evil effect.

Pro. 11. 2.

Pro. 16. 8.

5. Pride, where it comes, and is entertained, is a certain forerunner of some Judgment that is not far behind. When Pride goes before, Shame and Destruction will follow after. When Pride cometh, then cometh Shame. Pride goeth before Destruction, and a haughty Spirit before a Fall.

6 Evil effect.

1 Tim. 3. 6.

6. Persisting in Pride makes the Condition of a Poor Man as remediless as is that of the Devils themselves.

And this I fear was Mr. Badman's Condition, and that was the Reason that he died so as he did; as I shall shew you anon.

A general character of Mr. Badman.

But what need I thus talk of the particular Actions, or rather the prodigious Sins of Mr. Badman, when his whole Life and all his Actions, went as it were to the making up one massy body of Sin? Instead of believing that there was a God, his Mouth, his Life and Actions declared, that he believed no such thing. His Transgression said within my Heart, that there was no fear of God before his Eyes. Instead of honouring of God, and of giving glory to him for any of his Mercies, or under any of his good Providences towards him (for God is good to all, and lets his Sun shine, and his Rain fall upon the unthankful and unholy,) he would ascribe the Glory to other causes. If they were Mercies, he would ascribe them (if the open Face of the Providence did not give him the Lye) to his own wit, labour, care, industry, cunning, or the like: if they were crosses, he would ascribe them, or count them the offspring of fortune, ill luck, chance, the ill management of matters, the ill will of Neighbours, or to his wife's being Religious, and spending, as he called it, too much time in Reading, Praying, or the like. It was not in his way to acknowledge God, (that is, graciously) or his hand in things.

But, as the Prophet saith; Let favour be shewed to the Wicked, yet will he not learn Isa. 26. 16.

would make him seek the Lord. Nay, as another Scripture says, He would not see the Works of God, nor regard the Operations of his Hands either in Mercies or in Judgments. Psal. 29. 5.

But further, when by Providence he has been cast under the best Means for his Soul, (for, as was shewed before, he having had a good Master, and before him a good Father, and after all a good Wife, and being sometimes upon a Journey, and cast under the hearing of a good Sermon, as he would sometimes for novelties sake go to hear a good Preacher;) he was always without heart to make use thereof: In this Land of Righteousness he would deal unjustly, and would not behold the Majesty of the Lord. Pro. 17. 6.

Instead of reverencing the Word, when Mr. Badman's judgment of the Scriptures.

he heard it preached, read, or discoursed of, he would sleep, talk of other Business, or else object against the Authority, Harmony, and Wisdom of the Scriptures. Saying, How do you know them to be the Word of God? how do you know that these sayings are true? the Scriptures, he would say, were as a Nose of Wax, and a Man may turn them whithersoever he lists: one Scripture says one thing, and another says the quite contrary; Besides, they make mention of a thousand impossibilities; they are the cause of all dissensions and discords that are in the Land: Therefore you may (would he say) still think what you will, but in my mind, they are best at ease that have least to do with them.

Instead of loving and honouring of them that did bear in their Foreheads the Name, and in their Lives the Image of Christ, Good men's song.

they should be his Song, the matter of his Jest, and the objects of his Slanders. He would either make a mock at their sober deportment, their gracious language, quiet behaviour, or else desperately swear that they did all in deceit and hypocrisy. He would endeavour to render godly Men as odious and contemptible as he could: any lies that were made by any, to their disgrace, those he would avouch for truth, and and would not endure to be controlled. He was much like those that the Prophet speaks of, that would sit and slander his Mother's Son; yea, he would speak reproachfully of his Wife, though his Conscience told him, and many would testify, that she was a very vertuous Woman. He would also raise slanders of his Wife's friends himself, affirming that their doctrine tended to lasciviousness, and that in their assemblies they acted and did unbeseeming Men and Women, that they committed Uncleaness, &c. He was much like those that affirmed the A-postle should say, Let us do evil that good may come: Or like those of whom it is thus written; Report, say they, and we will report it. And if he could get any thing by the end that had scandal in it, if it did but touch professors, how falsely soever reported; Oh! then he would glory, laugh, and be glad, and lay it upon the whole party: Saying, Hang them Rogues, there is not a barrel better Herring of all the holy Brotherhood of them: Like to like, quoth the Devil to the Collier, this is your precise Crew. And then he would send all home with a Curse.

Atten. If those that make profession of Religion be wise, Mr. Badman's watchings and words will make them the more wary and careful in all things.

Wife. You say true. For when we see Men do watch for our halting, and rejoice to see us stumble and fall, it should make us the more careful.

When the wicked watch, God's people should be wary.

I do think it was as delightful to Mr. Badman to hear, raise, and tell lies, and lying stories of them that fear the Lord, as it was for him to go to bed when a weary. But we will at this time let these things pass. For as he was in these things bad enough, so he added to these, many more the like.

He was an * angry, wrathful, envious Man, a Man that knew not what Meekness or Gentleness meant, nor did he desire to learn. His natural temper was to be surly, huffy, and rugged, and worse; and he so gave way to his temper, as to this, that it brought him to be furious and outrageous in all things, especially against Goodness it self, and against other things too, when he was displeased.

* Badman an angry, envious Man.

Atten. Solomon saith, He is a Fool that rageth.

Pro. 14.
16.

Wife. He doth so; and says moreover, That anger rests in the Bosom of Fools. And truly, if it be a sign of a Fool to have anger rest in his Bosom, then was Mr. Badman, notwithstanding the conceit that he had of his own abilities, a Fool of no small size.

Eccle. 7. 9.

Atten. Fools are mostly most wise in their own Eyes.

Wife. True. But I was a saying, that if it be a sign that a Man is a Fool, when Anger rests in his bosom; Then what is it a sign of, think you, when Malice and Envy rests there? For to my knowledge Mr. Badman was as malicious and as envious a Man as commonly you can hear of.

Atten. Certainly, malice and envy flow from pride and arrogancy, and they again from ignorance, and ignorance from the Devil: And I thought, that since you spake of the Pride of Mr. Badman before, we should have something of these before we had done.

Whence Envy flows.

Wife. Envy flows from Ignorance indeed. And this Mr. Badman was so Envious an one, where he set against, that he would swell with it, as a Toad, as we say, swells with poison. He whom he maligned, might at any time even read envy in his Face wherever he met with him, or in whatever he had to do with him.

His envy was so rank and strong, that if it at any time turned its head against a Man, it would hardly ever be pulled in again: He would watch over that Man to do him mischief, as the Cat watches over the Mouse to destroy it; yea, he would wait seven years, but he would have an opportunity to hurt him, and when he had it, he would make him feel the weight of his Envy.

Envy is a devilish thing, the Scripture intimates that none can stand before it.

A Stone is heavy, and the Sand weighty, but a Fool's wrath is heavier than them both. Wrath is cruel, and anger is outrageous, but who can stand before envy?

Prov. 27.
3, 4.

Envy the worst of the four.

This Envy, for the Foulness of it, is reckoned among the foulest Villanies that are, as Adultery, Murder, Drunkenness, Revellings, Witchcrafts, Heresies, Seditions, &c. Yea, it is so malignant a Corruption, that it rots the very Bones of him in whom it dwells. A sound Heart is life to the Flesh, but Envy the Rottenness of the Bones.

Gal. 5. 19, 20.

Prov. 14.
30.

Atten. This Envy is the very Father and Mother of a great many hideous and prodigious Wickednesses: I say, it is the very Father and Mother of them; it both begets them, and also nourishes them up, till they come to their cursed maturity in the Bosom of him that entertains them.

Envy is the Father and Mother of many wickednesses.

Wife. You have given it a very right Description, in calling of it the Father and Mother of a great many other prodigious Wickednesses: for it is so venomous and vile a thing, that it puts the whole course of Nature out of order, and makes it fit for nothing but Confusion, and a hold for every evil Thing. For where Envy and Strife is, there is Confusion, and every evil work. Wherefore, I say, you have rightly called it, The very Father and Mother of a great many other Sins. And now for our further Edification, I will reckon up some of the births of Envy.

Jam. 3. 14,
15.

(1. Envy,

1. Envy, as I told you before, it rotteth the very Bones of him that entertains it. And,

2. As you have also hinted, it is heavier than a Stone, than Sand; yea, and I will add, it falls like a Mill-stone upon the Head. Therefore,

3. It kills him that throws it, and him at whom it was thrown. Envy slayeth the silly one. That is, him in whom it resides, and him who is its Object.

4. 'Twas that also that slew Jesus Christ himself; for his Adversaries persecuted him thro' their Envy.

5. Envy was that, by Vertue of which Joseph was sold by his Brethren into Egypt.

6. 'Tis Envy that hath the Hand in making of Variance among God's Saints.

7. 'Tis Envy in the Hearts of Sinners, that stirs them up to thrust God's Ministers out of their Coasts.

8. What shall I say? 'Tis Envy that is the very Nursery of Whisperings, Debates, Backbitings, Slanders, Reproaches, Murders, &c.

'Tis not possible to repeat all the particular Fruits of this sinful Root. Therefore, it is no marvel that Mr. Badman was such an ill natured Man, for the great Roots of all manner of Wickedness were in him, unmortified, unmaimed, untouched.

Atten. But it is a rare Case, even this of Mr. Badman, that he should never in all his Life be touched with remorse for his ill-spent Life.

Wife. Remorse, I cannot say he ever had, if by Remorse you mean Repentance for his Evils. Yet twice I remember he was under some Trouble of Mind about his Condition: Once when he broke his Leg as he came home drunk from the Alehouse; and another time when he fell sick, and thought he should die: Besides these two times, I do not remember any more.

Atten. Did he break his Leg then?

Wife. Yes: Once, as he came home drunk from the Alehouse.

Atten. Pray how did he break it?

Wife. Why upon a time he was at an Alehouse, that wicked House about two or three Miles from Home, and having there drank hard the greatest part of the Day, when Night was come, he would stay no longer, but calls for his Horse, gets up, and like a Mad-man (as drunken persons usually ride) away he goes, as hard as Horse could lay Legs to the Ground. Thus he rid, 'till coming to a dirty place, where his Horse flouncing in, fell, threw his Master, and with his Fall broke his Leg: So there he lay. But you would not think how he swore at first. But after a while, he coming to himself, and feeling by his pain, and the usefulness of his Leg, what case he was in, and also fearing that this bout might be his Death; he began to cry out after the manner of such; Lord help me, Lord have Mercy upon me, good God deliver me, and the like. So there he lay, till some came by, who took him up, carried him home, where he lay for some time, before he could go abroad again.

Atten. And then you say he call'd upon God.

Wife. He cried out in his Pain, and would say, O God; and O Lord help me: But whether it was that his Sin might be pardoned, and his Soul saved, or whether to be rid of his pain, I will not positively determine; though I fear it was but for the last; because when his pain was gone, and he had got Hopes of mending, even before he could go abroad, he cast off Prayer, and began his old Game; to wit, to be as bad as he was before. He then would send for his old Companions; his Sluts also would come to his House to see him, and with them he would be, as well as he could for his lame Leg, as vicious as they could be for their Hearts.

Atten. 'Twas a Wonder he did not break his Neck.

Wife. His Neck had gone instead of his Leg, but that God was long suffering towards him; he had deserved it ten thousand times over. There have been many, as I have heard, and as I have hinted to you before, that have taken their Horses when drunk, as he; but they have gone from the Pot to the Grave; for they have broken their Necks 'twixt the Ale-house and Home. One hard by us also drunk himself dead; he drank, and died in his drink.

Atten. 'Tis a sad thing to die drunk.

Wife. So it is: But yet I wonder that no more do so. For considering the heinousness of that Sin, and with how many other Sins it is accompanied, as with Oaths, Blasphemies, Lyes, Revellings, Brawlings, &c. it is a wonder to me, that any that live in that Sin should escape such a Blow from Heaven, that should tumble them into their Graves. Besides, when I consider also how, when they are as drunk as Beasts, they, without all Fear of Danger, will ride like Bedlams and mad Men, even as if they did dare God to meddle with them if he durst, for their being drunk: I say, I wonder that he doth not withdraw his protecting Providences from them, and leave them to those Dangers and Destructions that by their Sin they have deserved, and that by their bedlam Madness they would rush themselves into: Only I consider again, that he hath appointed a Day wherein he will reckon with them, and doth also commonly make Examples of some, to shew that he takes notice of their Sin, abhors their way, and will count with them for it at the set time.

Atten. It is worthy of our Remark, to take take notice how God, to shew his Dislike of the Sins of Men, strikes some of them down with a Blow; as the breaking of Mr. Badman's Leg, for doubtless that was a Stroak from Heaven.

Wife. It is worth our Remark indeed. It was an open Stroak, it fell upon him while he was in the height of his Sin: And it looks much like to that in Job; Therefore he knoweth their Works, and overturneth them in the Night, so that they are destroyed. He striketh them as wicked Men in the open Sight of others: Or as the Margent reads it, in the Place of Beholders. He lays them with his Stroak in the Place of Beholders. There was Mr. Badman laid, his Stroak was taken notice of by every one: His broken Leg was at this time the Town-talk. Mr. Badman has broke his Leg, says one: How did he break it? says another: As he came home drunk from such an Ale-house, said a third: A Judgment of God upon him, said a fourth. This his Sin, his Shame, and Punishment, are all made conspicuous to all that are about him. I will here tell you another Story or two.

I have read in Mr. Clark's Looking-glass for Sinners; That upon a time, a certain drunken Fellow boasted in his Cups, that there was neither Heaven nor Hell; also he said, he believed, that Man had no Soul, and that for his own part, he would sell his Soul to any that would buy it. Then did one of his Companions buy it of him for a Cup of Wine; and presently the Devil in Man's Shape bought it of that Man again at the same Price; and so in the Presence of them all laid hold on this Soul-Seller, and carried him away through the Air, so that he was never more heard of.

In pag. 148. he tells us also: That there was one at Salisbury, in the midst of his health drinking and carousing in a Tavern; and he drank a health to the Devil, saying, That if the Devil would not come and pledge him, he would not believe that there was either God or Devil. Whereupon his Companions stricken with fear, hastened out of Room: And presently after, hearing a hideous Noise, and smelling a stinking Savour, the Vintner ran up into the Chamber; and coming in, he missed his Guest, and found the Window broken, the Iron Bar in it bowed, and all bloody: But the Man was never heard of afterwards.

Again, in pag. 149. he tells us of a Bailiff of Hedley: Who upon a Lord's Day being drunk at Melford, got upon his Horse, to ride through the Streets, saying, That his Horse would carry him to the Devil: And presently his Horse threw him, and broke his Neck. These things are worse than the breaking of Mr. Badman's Leg, and should be a Caution to all of his Friends that are living, lest they also fall by their Sin into these sad Judgments of God.

But, as I said, Mr. Badman quickly forgot all, his Conscience was choaked, before his Leg was healed. And therefore, before he was well of the Fruit of one Sin, he tempts God to send another Judgment to seize upon him: And so he did quickly after. For not many months after his Leg was well, he had a very dangerous fit of Sicknes, insomuch that now he began to think he must die in very deed.

Atten. Well, and what did he think and do then?

Wife. He thought he must go to Hell; this I know, for he could not forbear but say so. To my best remembrance, he lay crying out all one night for fear, and at times he would so tremble, that he would make the very bed shake under him. || But, Oh! how the thoughts of Death, of Hell-fire, and of eternal Judgment, did then wrack his Conscience. Fear might be seen in his Face, and in his tossings to and fro: It might also be heard in his words, and be understood by his heavy groans. He would often cry, I am undone, I am undone; my vile life has undone me.

Atten. Then his former atheistical Thoughts and Principles, were too weak now to support him from the fears of eternal Damnation.

Wife. Ay! they were too weak indeed. They may serve to stifle Conscience, when a Man is in the midst of his prosperity, and to harden the Heart against all good counsel, when a Man is left of God, and given up to his reprobate mind: * But alas, atheistical Thoughts, Notions and Opinions, must shrink and melt away, when God sends, yea, comes with Sicknes to visit the Soul of such a Sinner for his Sin. There was a Man dwelt about 12 miles off from us, that had so trained up himself in his atheistical Notions, that at last he attempted to write a Book against Jesus Christ, and against the Divine Authority of the Scriptures. (But I think it was not printed:) Well, after many Days God struck him with Sicknes, whereof he died. So, being sick, and musing upon his former doings, the Book that he had written came into his mind, and with it such a sense of his evil in writing of it, that it tore his Conscience as a Lion would tear a Kid. He lay therefore upon his death-bed in sad case, and much affliction of Conscience: some of my friends also went to see him; and as they were in his Chamber one Day, he hastily called for Pen, Ink and Paper, which when it was given him, he took it and writ to this Purpose. I, such an one, in such a Town, must go to Hell-fire, for writing a Book against Jesus Christ, and against the Holy Scriptures: And would also have leaped out of the Window of his house to have killed himself, but was by them prevented of that: so he died in his bed, such a Death as it was. 'Twill be well if others take warning by him.

Mr. Badman fallen sick.

His Conscience is wounded.

He cries out in his Sicknes.

* His Atheism will not help him now.

A dreadful example of God's Anger.

Atten.

Atten. This is a remarkable Story.

Wife. 'Tis as true as remarkable; I had it from them that I dare believe, who also themselves were eye and ear Witnesses; and also that catcht him in their Arms, and saved him when he would have leaped out of his Chamber-window, to have destroyed himself.

Atten. Well, you have told me what were Mr. Badman's thoughts (now, being sick) of his Condition; pray tell me also what he then did when he was sick?

Wife. Did! he did many things, which I am sure he never thought to have done, and which, to be sure, was not looked for of his Wife and Children.

In this fit of sickness, his Thoughts were quite altered about his Wife; I say his Thoughts, so far as could be judged by his words and carriages to her. For she was his good Wife, his godly Wife, his honest Wife, his duck, and dear, and all. Now he told her, that she had the best of it, she having a good Life to stand by her, while his debaucheries and ungodly Life did always stare him in the Face. Now he told her the Counsel that she often gave him was good; though he was so bad as not to take it.

What Mr. Badman did more when he was sick.

Now he would hear her talk to him, and he would lie sighing by her while she so did. Now he would bid her pray for him, that he might be delivered from Hell.

He would also now consent, that some of her good Ministers might come to him to comfort him; and he would seem to shew them Kindness when they came, for he would treat them kindly with words, and hearken diligently to what they said, only he did not care that they should talk much of his ill spent Life, because his Conscience was clogged with that already; he cared not now to see his old Companions, the Thoughts of them were a Torment to him: and now he would speak kindly to that Child of his that took after its mother's Steps, though he could not at all abide it before.

He also desired the Prayers of good People, that God of his Mercy would spare him a little longer, promising that if God would but let him recover this once, what a new, what a penitent Man he would be toward God, and what a loving Husband he would be to his Wife: what liberty he would give her, yea how he would go with her himself to hear her Ministers, and how they should go hand in hand in the Way to Heaven together.

Atten. Here was a fine shew of things; I'll warrant you, his Wife was glad for this.

Wife. His Wife! Ay, and a many good People besides: it was noised all over the Town, what a great change there was wrought upon Mr. Badman; how sorry he was for his Sins, how he began to love his Wife, how he desired good Men should pray to God to spare him; and what promises he now made to God in his Sickness, that if ever he should raise him from his sick bed to health again, what a new penitent Man he would be towards God, and what a loving husband to his good wife.

Vol. II.

Well, Ministers prayed, and good People rejoiced, thinking verily that they now had gotten a Man from the Devil; nay, some of the weaker sort did not stick to say that God had began a work of Grace in his Heart; and his Wife, poor Woman, you cannot think how apt she was to believe it so; she rejoiced, and she hoped as she would have it. But, alas! alas! in little time things all proved otherwise.

His wife is comforted.

After he had kept his Bed a while, his distemper began to abate, and he to feel himself better, so he in little time was so finely mended, that he could walk about the House, and also obtained a very fine stomach to his food: and now did his Wife and her good Friends stand gaping, to see Mr. Badman fulfil his promise of becoming new towards God, and loving to his Wife: but the contrary only shewed it self. For so soon as ever he had hopes of mending, and found that his strength began to renew, his trouble began to go off his Heart, and he grew as great a stranger to his frights and fears, as if he had never had them.

Mr. Badman recovers and returns to his old course.

But verily, I am apt to think, that one reason of his no more regarding, or remembering of his sick-bed fears, and of being no better for them, was, some words that the Doctor that supplied him with Physick said to him when he was mending. For as soon as Mr. Badman began to mend, the Doctor comes and sits him down by him in his house, and there fell into Discourse with him about the Nature of his Disease; and among other things they talked of Badman's Trouble, and how he would cry out, tremble, and express his Fears of going to Hell when his Sickness lay pretty hard upon him. To which the Doctor replied: That those Fears and Out-cries did arise from the height of his distemper, for that disease was often attended with lightness of the head, by reason the sick party could not sleep, and for that the vapours disturbed the Brain: But you see Sir, quoth he, that so soon as you got sleep and betook your self to rest, you quickly mended, and your head settled, and so those frenzies left you.

Ignorant Physicians kill souls while they cure bodies.

And was it so indeed, thought Mr. Badman; was my troubles, only the effects of my distemper, and because ill vapours got up into my Brain? Then surely, since my Physician was my Saviour, my Lust again shall be my God. So he never minded Religion more, but betook him again to the World, his Lusts and wicked Companions:

9 O

The Town-talk of Mr. Badman's change.

nions: And there was an end of Mr. Badman's Conversion.

Atten. I thought (as you told me of him) that this would be the Result of the whole; for I discerned by your relating of things, that the true Symptoms of Conversion were wanting in him, and that those that appeared to be any thing like them, were only such as the Reprobates may have.

Wife. You say right, for there wanted in him, when he was most sensible, a Sense of the Pollution of his Nature; he only had Guilt for his sinful Actions, the which Cain, and Pharaoh, and Saul, and Judas, those Reprobates, have had before him.

Besides, the great things that he desired, were, to be delivered from going to Hell (and who would willingly?) and that his Life might be lengthened in this World. We find not by all that he said or did, that Jesus Christ the Saviour was desired by him, from a Sense of his need of his Righteousness to cloath him, and of his Spirit to sanctify him.

His own Strength was whole in him, he saw nothing of the Treachery of his own Heart; for had he, he would never have been so free to make Promises to God of Amendment. He would rather have been afraid, that if he had mended, he should have turned with the Dog to the Vomit, and have begged Prayers of Saints, and Assistance from Heaven upon that Account, that he might have been kept from doing so. 'Tis true he did beg Prayers of good People, and so did Pharaoh of Moses and Aaron, and Simon Magus of Simon Peter.

His Mind also seemed to be turned to his Wife and Child; but alas! 'twas rather from Conviction that God had given him concerning their happy Estate over his, than for that he had any true love to the Work of God that was in them. True, some Shews of Kindness he seemed to have for them, and so had rich Dives when in Hell, to his five Brethren that were yet in the World; yea he had such love as to wish them in Heaven, that they might not come thither to be tormented.

Atten. Sick-Bed Repentance is seldom good for any thing.

Wife. You say true, it is very rarely good for any thing indeed. Death is unweelcome to Nature, and usually when Sickness and Death visit the Sinner; the first taking of him by the Shoulder, and the second standing at the Bed-chamber Door to receive him; then the Sinner begins to look about him, and to bethink with himself, These will have me away before God; and I know that my Life has not been as it should, how shall I do to appear before God! Or if it be more the Sense of the Punishment of Sinners, that also is starting to a defiled Conscience, now roused by Death's lumbring at the Door.

And hence usually is Sick-Bed Repentance, and the matter of it: To wit, to be saved from Hell, and from Death, and that God will restore them again to Health till they mend; concluding that it is in their Power to mend, as is evident by their large and lavishing Promises to do it.

I have known many, that, when they have been Sick, have had large measures of this kind of Repentance, and while it has lasted, the Noise and the Sound thereof, has made the Town to ring again: But alas! how long has it lasted? oft-times scarce so long as until the Party now Sick has been well. It has passed away like a Mist or a Vapour, it has been a thing of no Continuance. But this kind of Repentance is by God compared to the howling of a Dog. And they have not cried unto me with their Heart, when they howled upon their Bed.

Atten. Yet one may see, by this, the Desperateness of Man's Heart: For what is it but desperate Wickedness, to make Promise to God of Amendment, if he will but spare them; and yet so soon as they are recovered, or quickly after, fall to sin as they did before, and never to regard their Promise more.

Wife. It is a Sign of Desperateness indeed; yea of desperate Madness. For surely, they must needs think, that God took notice of their Promise, that he heard the Words that they spake, and that he hath laid them up against the time to come; and will then bring out, and testify to their Faces, that they flattered him with their Mouth, and lied unto him with their Tongue, when they lay sick, to their thinking, upon their Death-Bed, and promised him that if he would recover them they would repent and amend their Ways. But thus, as I have told you, Mr. Badman did. He made great Promises that he would be a New Man, that he would leave his Sins, and become a Convert, that he would love, &c. his godly Wife, &c. Yea many fine Words had Mr. Badman in his Sickness, but no good Actions when he was well.

Atten. And how did his good Wife take it, when she saw that he had no Amendment, but that he returned with the Dog to his Vomit, to his old Courses again?

Wife. Why it broke her Heart, it was a worse Disappointment to her than the Cheat that he gave her in Marriage: At least she laid it more to Heart, and could not so well grapple with it. You must think that she had put up many a Prayer to God for him before, even all the time that he had carried it so badly to her, and now when he was so affrighted in his Sickness, and so desired that he might live and mend, poor Woman, she thought that the time was come for God to answer her Prayers; nay, she did not let with Gladness, to whisper it out amongst her Friends, that it was was so: But when she saw herself disappointed by her Husband's turning Rebel again, she could not stand up under it, but falls into a languishing Distemper, and in a few Weeks gave up the Ghost.

Atten. Pray how did she dye?

Wife. Die! she died bravely; full of Comfort of the Faith of her Interest in Christ, and by him, of the World to come: She had many brave Expressions in her Sickness, and gave to those that came to visit her, many Signs of her Salvation; the Thoughts of the Grave, but especially of her Rising again, were sweet Thoughts to her. She would long for Death, because she knew it would be her Friend. She behaved herself like to some that were making of them ready to go meet their Bridegroom. Now, said she, I am going to rest from my Sorrows, my Sighs, my Tears, my Mournings and Complaints: I have heretofore longed to be among the Saints, but might by no means be suffered to go, but now I am going (and no Man can stop me) to the great Meeting, to the general Assembly, and Church of the First-born which are written in Heaven. There I shall have my Heart's Desire; there I shall worship without Temptation or other Impediment; there I shall see the Face of my Jesus, whom I have loved, whom I have served, and who now I know will save my Soul. I have prayed often for my Husband, that he might be converted, but there has been no Answer of God in that matter: Are my Prayers lost? are they forgotten? are they thrown over the Bar? No; they are hanged upon the Horns of the golden Altar, and I must have the Benefit of them myself, that Moment that I shall enter into the Gates, in at which the righteous Nation that keepeth Truth shall enter: I say, I shall have the Benefit of them. I can say as holy David; I say, I can say of my Husband, as he could of his Enemies. As for me, when they were sick, my cloathing was of Sack-cloth; I humbled my Soul with Fasting, and my Prayer returned into my Bosom. My Prayers are not lost, my Tears are yet in God's Bottle; I would have had a Crown, and Glory for my Husband, and for those of my Children that follow his Steps; but so far as I can see yet, I must rest in the Hope of having all my self.

Atten. Did she talk thus openly?

Wife. No; this she spake but to one or two of her most intimate Acquaintance, who were permitted to come and see her, when she lay languishing upon her Death-Bed.

Atten. Well, but pray go on in your Relation, this is good: I am glad to hear it, this is a Cordial to my Heart while we sit thus talking under this Tree.

Her talk to her Husband.

Wife. When she drew near her end, she called for her Husband, and when he was come to her, she told him, That now he and she must part, and said she, God knows, and thou shalt know, that I have been a loving, faithful Wife unto thee; my Prayers have been many for thee; and as for all the Abuses that I have received at thy Hand, those I freely and heartily forgive, and still shall pray for thy Conversion, even as long as I breathe in this World. But Husband, I am going thither, where no bad Man shall come, and if thou dost not convert, thou wilt never see me more with Comfort; let not my plain Words offend thee: I am thy dying Wife, and of my Faithfulness to thee, would leave this Exhortation with thee: Break off thy Sins, fly to God for Mercy while Mercy's Gate stands open; remember, that the Day is coming, when thou, though now lusty and well, must lye at the Gates of Death, as I do: And what wilt thou then do, if thou shalt be found with a naked Soul, to meet with the Cherubims with their flaming Swords? yea, what wilt thou then do, if Death and Hell shall come to visit thee, and thou in thy Sins, and under the Curse of the Law?

Atten. This was honest and plain: but what said Mr. Badman to her?

Wife. He did what he could to divert her talk, by throwing in other Things; he also shewed some kind of Pity to her now, and would ask her, what she would have? and with various kind of Words put her out of her Talk; for when she saw that she was not regarded, she fetcht a deep Sigh, and lay still. So he went down, and then she called for her Children, and began to talk to them. And first she spake to those that were rude, and told them the Danger of dying before they had Grace in their Hearts. She told them also, that Death might be nearer them than they were aware of; and bid them look when they went through the Church-yard again, if there was not little Graves there. And, ah Children, said she, will it not be dreadful to you if we only shall meet at the Day of Judgment, and then part again, and never see each other more? And with that she wept, the Children also wept; so she held on her Discourse: Children, said she, I am going from you, I am going to Jesus Christ, and with him there is neither Sorrow, nor Sighing, nor Pain, nor Tears, nor Death.

He diverts her Discourse.

Rev. 7. 16. Chap. 21. 3, 4.

Thither would I have you go also, but I can neither carry you, nor fetch you thither; but if you shall turn from your Sins to God, and shall beg Mercy at his Hands by Jesus Christ, you shall follow me, and shall, when you die, come to the Place where I am going, that blessed Place of Rest: and then we shall be forever together, beholding the Face of our Redeemer, to our mutual and eternal Joy. So she bid them remember the Words of a dying Mother when she was cold in her Grave, and themselves were hot in their Sins, if perhaps her

Then they all went down, but her Darling, to wit, the Child that she had most love for, because it followed her ways. So she addressed herself to that. Come to me, said she, my sweet Child, thou art the Child of my Joy: I have lived to see thee a Servant of God; thou shalt have eternal Life. I, my sweet Heart, shall go before, and thou shalt follow after; if thou shalt hold the Beginning of thy Confidence stedfast to the end. When I am gone, do thou still remember my Words, love thy Bible, follow my Ministers, deny Ungodliness still, and if troublous Times shall come, set an higher Price upon Christ, his Word and Ways, and the Testimony of a good Conscience, than upon all the World besides. Carry it kindly and dutifully to thy Father, but chuse none of his Ways. If thou mayest, go to Service, chuse that, rather than to stay at Home; but then be sure to chuse a Service where thou may'st be helped forwards in the way to Heaven; and that thou may'st have such a Service, speak to my Minister, he will help thee, if possible, to such a one.

I would have thee also, my dear Child, to love thy Brothers and Sisters, but learn none of their naughty Tricks. Have no Fellowship with the unfruitful Works of Darkness, but rather reprove them. Thou hast Grace, they have none: Do thou therefore beautify the way of Salvation before their Eyes, by a godly Life and conformable Conversation to the revealed Will of God, that thy Brothers and Sisters may see, and be the more pleased with the good ways of the Lord.

If thou shalt live to marry, take heed of being served as I was; that is, of being beguiled with fair Words, and the Flatteries of a lying Tongue. But first be sure of Godliness: Yea, as sure as it is possible for one to be in this World: Trust not thine own Eyes, nor thine own Judgment; I mean as to that Person's Godliness that thou art invited to marry. Ask Counsel of good Men, and do nothing therein, if he lives, without my Minister's Advice. I have also myself desired him to look after thee. Thus she talked to her Children, and gave them Counsel, and after she had talked to this a little longer, she kiss'd it, and bid it go down.

Well, in short, her time drew on, and the Day that she must die. So she died with a Soul full of Grace, an Heart full of Comfort, and by her Death ended a Life full of Trouble. Her Husband made a Funeral for her, perhaps because he was glad he was rid of her, but we will leave that to be manifest at Judgment.

Atten. This Woman died well: And now we are talking of the dying of Christians, I will tell you a Story of one that died sometime since in our Town. The Man was a godly old Puritan, for so the Godly were called in time past. This Man after a long and godly Life, fell Sick, of the Sicknels whereof he died. And as he lay drawing on, the Woman that looked to him, thought she heard Musick, and that the sweetest that she heard in her Life, which also continued until he gave up the Ghost: Now when his Soul departed from him, the Musick seemed to withdraw, and to go further and further off from the House, and so it went until the Sound was quite gone out of Hearing.

Wife. What do you think that might be?

Atten. For ought I know, the melodious Notes of Angels, that were sent of God to fetch him to Heaven.

Wife. I cannot say but that God goes out of his ordinary Road with us poor Mortals sometimes. I cannot say this of this Woman, but yet she had better Musick in her Heart, than sounded in this Woman's Ears.

Atten. I believe so; but pray tell me, did any of her other Children hearken to her words, so as to be bettered in their Souls thereby?

Wife. One of them did, and became a very hopeful young Man: But for the rest I can say nothing.

One of her

ing words.

Atten. And what did Mr. Badman do after his Wife was dead?

Wife. Why even as he did before, he scarce mourn'd a Fortnight for her, and his mourning then was, I doubt, more in Fashion than in Heart.

Atten. Would he not sometimes talk of his Wife, when she was dead?

Wife. Yes, when the fit took him, and could commend her too extremely; saying, she was a good, godly, vertuous Woman. But this is not a thing to be wondred at: It is common with wicked Men to hate God's Servants while alive, and to commend them when they are dead. So served the Pharisees the Prophets: Those of the Prophets that were dead they commended; and those that were alive they condemned.

Matt. 23.

Atten. But did not Mr. Badman marry again quickly?

Wife. No, not a good while after: and when he was asked the Reason, he would make this slight Answer, Who would keep a Cow of their own, that can have a Quart of Milk for a Penny? Meaning, who would be at the Charge to have a Wife, that can have a Whore when he listeth? So villainous, so abominable did he continue after the Death of his Wife. Yet at last there was one was too hard for him. For getting of him to her upon a time, and making of him sufficiently drunk, she was so cunning as to get a Promise of Marriage of him, and so held him to it, and forced him to marry her. And she, as the saying is, was

What she was, and how they lived. was as good as he, at all his vile and ranting Tricks: She had her Companions as well as he had his, and she would meet them too at the Tavern and Ale-house, more commonly than he was aware of: To be plain, she was a very Whore, and had as great resort came to her, where time and place was appointed, as any of them all. Aye, and he smelt it too, but could not tell how to help it. For if he began to talk, she could lay in his Dish the Whores that she knew he haunted, and she could fit him also with cursing and swearing, for she would give him Oath for Oath, and Curse for Curse.

Atten. What kind of Oaths would she have?

Wife. Why damn her, and sink her, and the like.

Atten. These are provoking things.

Wife. So they are: but God doth not altogether let such things go unpunished in this Life. Something of this I have shewed you already, and will here give you one or two Instances more.

There lived, saith one, in the Year 1551. in a City of Savoy, a Man who was a monstrous Curser, and Swearer, and though he was often admonished and blamed for it, yet would he by no means mend his Manners. At length a great Plague happening in the City, he withdrew himself into a Garden, where being again admonished to give over his Wickedness, he hardened his Heart more, Swearing, blaspheming God, and giving himself to the Devil: And immediately the Devil snatched him up suddenly, his Wife and Kinswoman looking on, and carried him quite away. The Magistrates advertised hereof, went to the Place and examined the Woman, who justified the Truth of it.

Also at Oster in the Dutchy of Magapole, saith Mr. Clark, a wicked Woman, used in her cursing to give herself Body and Soul to the Devil, and being reproved for it, still continued the same; till, being at a Wedding-Feast, the Devil came in Person, and carried her up into the Air, with most horrible Outcries and Roarings: And in that sort carried her round about the Town, that the Inhabitants were ready to dye for Fear: And by and by he tore her in four Pieces, leaving her four Quarters in four several High-ways; and then brought her Bowels to the Marriage-Feast, and threw them upon the Table before the Mayor of the Town, saying, Behold, these Dishes of Meat belong to thee, whom the like Destruction waiteth for, if thou dost not amend thy wicked Life.

Atten. Though God forbears to deal thus with all Men that thus read and tear his Name, and that immediate Judgments do not overtake them; yet he makes their Lives by other Judgments bitter to them, does he not?

Wife. Yes, Yes, and for proof, I need go no further than to this Badman and his Wife; for their Railing, and Cursing, and Swearing ended not in Words: They would fight and fly at each other, and that like Cats and Dogs. But it must be looked upon as the Hand and Judgment of God upon him for his Villany; he had an honest Woman before, but she would not serve his turn, and therefore God took her away, and gave him one as bad as himself. Thus that Measure that he meted to his Wife, this last did mete to him again. And this is a Punishment, wherewith sometimes God will punish wicked Men. So said Amos to Amaziah: Thy Wife shall be an Harlot in the City. With this last Wife Mr. Badman lived a pretty while; but as I told you before, in a most sad and hellish manner. And now he would bewail his first Wife's Death: not of Love that he had to her Godliness, for that he could never abide, but for that she used always to keep at home, whereas this would go abroad; his first Wife was also honest, and true to that Relation, but this last was a Whore of her Body: The first Woman loved to keep Things together, but this last would whirl them about as well as he: The first would be silent when he chid, and would take it patiently when he abused her, but this would give him Word for Word, Blow for Blow, Curse for Curse; so that now Mr. Badman had met with his Match: God had a Mind to make him see the Baseness of his own Life, in the Wickedness of his Wife's. But all would not do with Mr. Badman, he would be Mr. Badman still: This Judgment did not work any Reformation upon him, no, not to God nor Man.

Atten. I warrant you, that Mr. Badman thought when his Wife was dead, that next time he would match far better.

Wife. What he thought I cannot tell, but he could not hope for it in this Match. For here he knew himself to be caught, he knew that he was by this Woman intangled, and would therefore have gone back again, but could not. He knew her, I say, to be a Whore before, and therefore could not promise himself a happy Life with her. For he or she that will not be true to their own Soul, will neither be true to Husband nor Wife. And he knew that she was not true to her own Soul, and therefore could not expect she should be true to him: But Solomon says, An Whore is a deep Pit, and Mr. Badman found it true. For when she had caught him in her Pit, she would never leave him till she had got him to promise her Marriage; and when she had taken him so far, she forced him to marry indeed: And after that, they lived that Life that I have told you.

Atten. But did not the Neighbours take notice of this Alteration that Mr. Badman had made?

Wife. Yes; and many of his Neighbours, yea, many of those that were carnal said, 'Tis a right-

None did a righteous Judgment of God upon him, pity him for his abusive Carriage and Language to his other Wife: for they were all convinced that she was a vertuous Woman, and that he, vile Wretch, had killed her, I will not say with, but with the want of Kindness.

Atten. And how long I pray did they live thus together?

Badman and his last Wife part as poor as Howlets.

Wife. Some fourteen or sixteen Years, even until (though she also brought something with her) they had sinned all away, and parted as poor as Howlets. And, in reason, how could it be otherwise? he would have his way, and she would have hers; he among his Companions, and she among hers; he with his Whores, and she with her Rogues; and so they brought their Noble to Nine-pence.

Atten. Pray of what Disease did Mr. Badman die, for now I perceive we are come up to his Death?

Mr. Badman's Sickness and Diseases of which he died.

Wife. I cannot so properly say that he died of one Disease, for there were many that had consented, and laid their Heads together to bring him to his end. He was dropfical, he was consumptive, he was surfeited, was gouty, and, as some say, he had a tang of the Pox in his Bowels. Yet the Captain of all these Men of Death that came against him to take him away, was the Consumption, for it was that that brought him down to the Grave.

Atten. Although I will not say, but the best Men may die of a Consumption, a Dropsy, or a Surfeit; yea, that these may meet upon a Man to end him; yet I will say again, that many times these Diseases come through Man's inordinate use of things. Much drinking brings Dropsies, Consumptions, Surfeits, and many other Diseases; and I doubt, that Mr. Badman's Death did come by his Abuse of himself in the Use of lawful and unlawful Things. I ground this my Sentence upon that Report of his Life that you at large have given me.

Wife. I think verily that you need not call back your Sentence; for 'tis thought by his Cups and his Queans he brought himself to this his Destruction: He was not an old Man when he died, nor was he naturally very feeble, but strong and of a healthy Complexion: Yet, as I said, he moultered away, and went, when set a going, rotten to his Grave. And that which made him stink when he was dead, I mean, that made him stink in his Name and Fame, was, that he died with a spice of the foul Disease upon him: A Man whose life was full of Sin, and whose Death was without Repentance.

Atten. These were Blemishes sufficient to make him stink indeed.

Badman's Name stinks when he is dead.

Wife. They were so, and they did do it. No Man could speak well of him when he was gone. His Name rotted above Ground, as his Carcass rotted under. And this is according to the Saying of the wise Man: The Memory of the Just is blessed, but the Name of the Wicked shall rot. Prov. 10.

This Text, in both the parts of it, was fulfilled upon him and the Woman that he married first. For her Name still did flourish, though she had been dead almost seventeen Years; but his began to stink and rot, before he had been buried seventeen Days.

Atten. That Man that dieth with a Life full of Sin, and with an Heart void of Repentance, although he should die of the most Golden Disease (if there were any that might be so called) I will warrant him his Name shall stink, and that in Heaven and Earth.

Wife. You say true; and therefore doth the Name of Cain, Pharaoh, Saul, Judas, and the Pharisees, though dead thousands of Years ago, stink as fresh in the Nostrils of the World, as if they were but newly dead.

Atten. I do fully acquiesce with you in this. But, Sir, since you have charged him with dying impenitent, pray let me see how you will prove it: Not that I altogether doubt it, because you have affirmed it, but yet I love to have a Proof for what Men say in such weighty Matters.

Wife. When I said, he died without Repentance, I meant, so far as those that knew him could judge, when they compared his Life, the Word, and his Death together.

Atten. Well said, they went the right way to find out whether he had, that is, did manifest that he had Repentance or no. Now then shew me how they did prove he had none?

Wife. So I will: And first, this was urged to prove it. He had not in all the time of his Sickness, a Sight and Sense of his Sins, but was as secure, and as much at quiet, as if he had never sinned in all his Life.

Atten. I must needs confess that this is a Sign he had none. For how can a Man repent of that of which he hath neither Sight nor Sense? But 'tis strange that he had neither Sight nor Sense of Sin now, when he had such a Sight and Sense of his Evil before: I mean when he was Sick before.

Wife. He was, as I said, as secure now, as if he had been as sinless as an Angel; though all Men knew what a Sinner he was, for he carried his Sins in his Forehead. His debauched Life was read and known of all Men; but his Repentance was read and known of no Man; for, as I said, he had none. And for ought I know, the Reason why he had no Sense of his Sins now, was because he profited not by that Sense that he had of them before. He liked not to retain that Knowledge of God then, that caused his Sins to come to Remembrance: Therefore God gave him up now to a reprobate Mind, to Hardness and Stupidity of 1 Proof that he died impenitent.

of Spirit; and so was that Scripture fulfilled upon him, he hath blinded their Eyes. And that, Let their Eyes be darkened that they may not see. Oh! for a Man to live in Sin; and to go out of the World without Repentance for it, is the saddest Judgment that can overtake a Man.

Atten. But, Sir, although both you and I have consented that without a Sight and Sense of Sin there can be no Repentance, yet that is but our bare say-so; let us therefore now see if by the Scripture we can make it good.

Wife. That is easily done. The three Thousand that were converted, (Acts the second) repented not, 'till they had Sight and Sense of their Sins. Paul repented not till he had Sight and Sense of his Sins: The Jailor repented not till he had Sight and Sense of his Sins; nor could they. For of what should a Man repent? The Answer is, of Sin. What is it to Repent of Sin?

The Answer is, To be sorry for it, to turn from it. But how can a Man be sorry for it, that has neither Sight nor Sense of it? David did not only commit Sins, but abode impenitent for them, until Nathan the Prophet was sent from God to give him a Sight and Sense of them; and then, but not till then, he indeed repented of them. Job, in order to his Repentance, cries unto God, Shew me wherefore thou contendest with me. And again, That which I see not teach thou me, I have born Chastisement, I will not offend any more. That is, not in what I know, for I will repent of it; nor yet in what I know not, when thou shalt shew me it.

Also Ephraim's Repentance was after he was turned to the Sight and Sense of his Sins, and after he was instructed about the evil of them.

Atten. These are good Testimonies of this Truth, and do (if matter of Fact, with which Mr. Badman is charged, be true) prove indeed that he did not repent, but as he lived so he died in his Sin: For without Repentance a Man is sure to die in his Sin; for they will lie down in the Dust with him, rise at the Judgment with him, hang about his Neck like Cords and Chains when he standeth at the Bar of God's Tribunal, and go with him too, when he goes away from the Judgment-Seat, with a Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting Fire, prepared for the Devil and his Angels; and there shall fret and gnaw his Conscience, because they will be to him a never dying Worm.

Wife. You say well, and I will add a Word or two more to what I have said: Repentance, as it is not produced without a Sight and Sense of Sin, so every Sight and Sense of Sin cannot produce it: I mean every Sight and Sense of Sin cannot produce that Repentance, that is Repentance unto Salvation; Repentance never to be repented of. For it is yet fresh before us, that Mr. Badman had a Sight and Sense of Sin, in that Fit of Sicknes that he had before, but it died without procuring any such godly Fruit; as was manifest by his so soon returning with the Dog to his Vomit. Many People think also that Repentance stands in Confession of Sin only, but they are very much mistaken: For Repentance, as was said before, is a being sorry for, and returning from Transgression to God by Jesus Christ. Now, if this be true, that every Sight and Sense of Sin will not produce Repentance, then Repentance cannot be produced there where there is no Sight and Sense of Sin. That every Sight and Sense of Sin will not produce Repentance, to wit, the godly Repentance, that we are speaking of, is manifest in Cain, Pharaoh, Saul and Judas, who all of them had Sense, great Sense of Sin, but none of them Repentance unto Life.

Now I conclude, that Mr. Badman did die impenitent, and so a Death most miserable.

Atten. But pray now, before we conclude our Discourse of Mr. Badman, give me another Proof of his dying in his Sins.

Wife. Another Proof is this, He did not desire a Sight and Sense of his Sins, that he might have Repentance for them. Did I say he did not desire it, I will add, he greatly desired to remain in his Security: And that I shall prove by that which follows. First, He could not endure that any Man, now, should talk to him of his sinful Life, and yet that was the way to beget a Sight and Sense of Sin, and so of Repentance from it, in his Soul. But, I say, he could not endure such Discourse. Those Men that did offer to talk unto him of his ill-spent Life, they were as little welcome to him in the time of his last Sicknes, as was Elijah when he went to meet with Ahab, as he went down to take Possession of Naboth's Vineyard. Hast thou found me, said Ahab, O mine Enemy? So would Mr. Badman say in his Heart to and of those that thus did come to him, though indeed they came even of love, to convince him of his evil Life, that he might have repented thereof, and have obtained Mercy.

Atten. Did good Men then go to see him in his last Sicknes?

Wife. Yes: Those that were his first Wife's Acquaintance, they went to see him, and to talk with him, and to him, if perhaps he might now, at last, bethink himself, and cry to God for Mercy.

Atten. They did well to try now at last if they could save his Soul from Hell: But pray how can you tell that he did not care for the Company of such?

Wife. Because of the differing Carriage that he had towards them, from what he had when his old carnal Companions came to see him: When his old Companions came to see him, he would stir up himself as much much as he could both by Words and Looks, to signify they were welcome to him; he would also talk with them freely, and look pleasantly upon them, though the Talk of such could be none other but such as David said, carnal Men would offer to him, when they came to visit him in his Sickness:

Psal. 41.
6.

If he comes to see me, says he, he speaketh Vanity, his Heart gathereth Iniquity to itself. But these kind of Talks, I say, Mr. Badman better brooked, than he did the Company of better Men.

How Badman carried it to good Men when they came to visit him in his last Sickness.

But I will more particularly give you a Character of his Carriage to good Men (and good Talk) when they came to see him.

1. When they were come, he would seem to fail in his Spirits at the Sight of them.

2. He would not care to answer them to any of those Questions that they would at times put to him, to feel what Sense he had of Sin, Death, Hell, and Judgment: But would either say nothing, or answer them by way of Evasion, or else by telling of them he was so weak and spent that he could not speak much.

3. He would never shew Forwardness to speak to, or talk with them, but was glad when they held their Tongues. He would ask them no Question about his State and another World, or how he should escape that Damnation that he had deserved.

4. He had got a haunt at last to bid his Wife and Keeper, when these good People attempted to come to see him, to tell them that he was asleep or inclining to sleep, or so weak for want thereof, that he could not abide any Noise. And so they would serve them time after time, till at last they were discouraged from coming to see him any more.

5. He was so hardned, now, in this time of his Sickness, that he would talk, when his Companions came unto him, to the Disparagement of those good Men (and of their good Doctrine too) that of Love did come to see him, and that did labour to convert him.

6. When these good Men went away from him, he would never say, Pray when will you be pleased to come again, for I have a Desire to more of your Company, and to hear more of your good Instruction? No, not a Word of that, but when they were going would scarce bid them drink, or say, Thank you for your good Company, and good Instruction.

7. His Talk in his Sickness with his Companions, would be of the World, as Trades, Houses, Lands, great Men, great Titles, great Places, outward Prosperity, or outward Adversity, or some such carnal thing.

By all which I conclude, that he did not desire a Sense and Sight of his Sin, that he might repent and be saved.

Atten. It must needs be so as you say, if these things be true that you have asserted of him. And I do the rather believe them, because I think you dare not tell a Lye of the Dead.

Wife. I was one of them that went to him, and that beheld his Carriage and manner of way, and this is a true Relation of it that I have given you.

Atten. I am satisfied: But pray if you can, shew me now by the Word, what Sentence God doth pass upon such Men?

Wife. Why, the Man that is thus averse to Repentance, that desires not to hear of his Sins, that he might repent and be saved; is said to be a Man that saith unto God, Depart from me, for I desire not the Knowledge of thy ways. He is a Man that says in his Heart, and with his Actions, I have loved Strangers (Sins) and after them I will go. He is a Man that shuts his Eyes, stops his Ears, and that turneth his Spirit against God. Yea he is the Man that is at Enmity with God, and that abhors him with his Soul.

Atten. What other sign can you give me that Mr. Badman died without Repentance?

Wife. Why, he did never heartily cry to God for Mercy all the time of his Affliction. True, when sinking Fits, Stitches or Pains took hold upon him, then he would say as other carnal Men use to do, Lord help me, Lord strengthen me, Lord deliver me, and the like: But to cry to God for Mercy, that he did not, but lay, as I hinted before, as if he never had sinned.

Atten. That is another bad Sign indeed; for crying to God for Mercy, is one of the first Signs of Repentance. When Paul lay repenting of his Sin upon his Bed, the Holy Ghost said of him, Behold he prays. But he that hath not the first Signs of Repentance, 'tis a Sign he hath none of the other, and so indeed none at all. I do not say, but there may be crying, where there may be no sign of Repentance. They cried, says David, to the Lord, but he answered them not; but that he would have done, if their Cry had been the Fruit of Repentance. But, I say, if Men may cry, and yet have no Repentance, be sure, they have none that cry not at all. It is said in Job, they cry not when he bindeth them; that is, because they have no Repentance; no Repentance, no Cries; false Repentance, false Cries; true Repentance, true Cries.

Wife. I know that it is as possible for a Man to forbear crying that hath Repentance, as it is for a Man to forbear groaning that feelth deadly Pain. He that looketh into the Book of Psalms (where Repentance is most lively set forth even in its true and proper Effects) shall there find, that crying, strong crying, hearty crying, great crying, and incessant crying, hath been the Fruits of Repentance: But none of this had had this Mr. Badman, therefore he died in his Sins.

That Crying is an inseparable Effect of Repentance, is seen in these Scriptures.

Psal. 51. 1. Have Mercy upon me, O God, according to the Multitude of thy tender Mercies, blot out my Transgressions. O Lord, rebuke me not in thine Anger, neither chasten me in thy hot Displeasure. Have Mercy upon me, O Lord, for I am weak: O Lord, heal me for my Bones are vexed. My Soul is also vexed, but thou, O Lord, how long: Return, O Lord, deliver my Soul: O save me for thy Mercy's sake: O Lord, rebuke me not in thy Wrath, neither chasten me in thy hot Displeasure; for thine Arrows stick fast in me, and thy Hand presseth me sore. There is no soundness in my Flesh, because of thine Anger, neither is there any rest in my Bones, because of my Sin. For mine Iniquities are gone over mine Head, as an heavy burthen, they are too heavy for me. My Wounds stink and are corrupt; because of my Foolishness. I am troubled, I am bowed down greatly, I go mourning all the Day long. My Loins are filled with a loathsome Disease, and there is no soundness in my Flesh. I am feeble, and sore broken, I have roared by Reason of the Disquietness of my Heart.

I might give you a great Number more of the holy Sayings of good Men, whereby they express how they were, what they felt, and whether they cried or no, when Repentance was wrought in them. Alas, alas, it is as possible for a Man, when the Pangs of Guilt are upon him, to forbear Praying, as it is for a Woman when Pangs of Travel are upon her, to forbear Crying. If all the World should tell me that such a Man hath Repentance, yet if he is not a praying Man, I should not be persuaded to believe it.

Atten. I know no Reason why you should: for there is nothing can demonstrate that such a Man hath it. But pray Sir, what other Sign have you, by which you can prove that Mr. Badman died in his Sins, and so in a State of Damnation?

Wife. I have this to prove it. Those who were his old sinful Companions in the time of his Health, were those whose Company and carnal talk he most delighted in, in the time of his Sickness. I did occasionally hint this before, but now I make it an Argument of his want of Grace: For where there is indeed a Work of Grace in the Heart, that Work doth not only change the Heart, Thoughts and Desires, but the Conversation also; yea Conversation and Company too. When Paul had a Work of Grace in his Soul, he essayed to join himself to the Disciples. He was for his old Companions in their Abominations no longer: He was now a Disciple, and was for the Company of Disciples. And he was with them coming in and going out of Jerusalem.

Atten. I thought something when I heard you make mention of it before. Thought I, this is a shrewd Sign that he had not Grace in his Heart. Birds of a Feather, thought I, will flock together: If this Man was one of God's Children, he would herd with God's Children, his Delight would be with, and in the Company of God's Children. As David said, I am a Companion of all them that fear thee, and of them that keep thy Precepts.

Vol. II.

Wife. You say well, for what fellowship hath he that believeth with an Infidel? And although it be true, that all that join to the godly are not godly, yet they that shall inwardly chuse the Company of the ungodly and open prophane, rather than the Company of the godly, as Mr. Badman did; surely are not godly Men, but prophane: He was, as I told you, out of his Element, when good Men did come to visit him; but then he was where he would be, when he had his vain Companions about him. Alas! Grace, as I said, altereth all, Heart, Life, Company, and all; for by it the Heart and Man is made new: And a new Heart, a new Man, must have Objects of Delight that are new, and like himself: Old things are passed away: why? For all things are become new. Now if all things are become new, to wit, Heart, Mind, Thoughts, Desires, and Delights, it followeth by Consequence that the Company must be answerable: hence it is said, that they that believed were together; that they went to their own Company; that they were added to the Church; that they were of one Heart and of one Soul; and the like. Now if it be objected, that Mr. Badman was sick, and so could not go to the godly, yet he had a Tongue in his Head, and could, had he had an Heart, have spoken to some to call or send for the godly to come to him. Yea, he would have done so; yea the Company of all others, especially his fellow Sinners, would, even in every Appearance of them, before him, have been a Burden and a Grief unto him. His Heart and Affection standing bent to good, good Companions would have suited him best. But his Companions were his old Associates, his Delight was in them, therefore his Heart and Soul were yet ungodly.

Atten. Pray how was he when he drew near his end? for I perceive that what you say of him now, hath Reference to him and to his Actions, at the beginning of his Sickness? Then he could endure Company, and much talk; besides, perhaps then he thought he should recover and not die, as afterwards he had cause to think, when he quite wasted with pining Sickness, when he was at the Grave's Mouth. But how was he, I say, when he was, (as we say) at the Grave's Mouth, within a Step of Death? when he saw and knew, and could not but know, that shortly he must die, and appear before the Judgment of God?

9 Q

Wife.

How Mr.
Badman
was when near his End.

Wife. Why there was not any other Alteration in him, than what was made by his Disease upon his Body: Sicknefs, you know, will alter the Body, also Pains and Stitches will make Men groan; but for his Mind he had no Alteration there. His Mind was the same, his Heart was the same. He was the self-same Mr. Badman still: Not only in Name but Conditions, and that to the very Day of his death: yea, so far as could be gathered to the very Moment in which he died.

Atten. Pray how was he in his Death? Was Death strong upon him? or did he die with ease, quietly?

He died like a Lamb.

Wife. As quietly as a Lamb. There seemed not to be in it, to Standers by, so much as a strong Struggle of Nature: And as for his Mind, it seemed to be wholly at quiet. But pray why do you ask me this Question?

The Opinion of the Ignorant about his manner of dying.

Atten. Not for mine own sake, but for others. For there is such an Opinion as this among the Ignorant: That if a Man dies, as they call it like a Lamb, that is, quietly, and without that Consternation of Mind that others shew in their Death, they conclude, and that beyond all doubt, that such an one is gone to Heaven, and is certainly escaped the Wrath to come.

How we must judge whether Mendyc
well or no.

Wife. There is no Judgment to be made by a quiet Death, of the eternal State of him that so dieth. Suppose one Man should die quietly, another should die suddenly, and a third should die under great Consternation of Spirit; no Man can judge of their eternal Condition by the manner of any of these kinds of Deaths. He that dies quietly, suddenly, or under Consternation of Spirit, may go to Heaven, or may go to Hell; no Man can tell whither a Man goes, by any such manner of Death. The Judgment therefore that we make of the eternal Condition of a Man, must be gathered from another Consideration: To wit, Did the Man die in his Sins? did he die in unbelief? did he die before he was born again? then he is gone to the Devil and Hell, though he died never so quietly. Again, Was the Man a good Man? had he Faith and Holiness? was he a Lover and a Worshipper of God by Christ, according to his Word? Then he is gone to God and Heaven, how suddenly, or in what Consternation of Mind soever he died: But Mr. Badman was naught, his Life was evil, his ways were evil; evil to his end: he therefore went to Hell and to the Devil, how quietly soever he died.

When we may judge of a Man's eternal State by the Manner of his Death.

Indeed there is, in some cases, a Judgment to be made of a Man's eternal Condition by the Manner of the Death he dieth. As suppose now a Man should murder himself, or live a wicked Life, and after that die in utter Despair; these Men without doubt do both of them go to Hell. And here I will take an Occasion to speak of two of Mr.

Badman's Brethren (for you know I told you before that he had Brethren) and of the manner of their Death. One of them killed himself, and the other after a wicked Life died in utter Despair. Now I should not be afraid to conclude of both these, that they went by, and through their Death to Hell.

Atten. Pray tell me concerning the first, how he made away with himself?

Wife. Why, he took a Knife and cut his own Throat, and immediately gave up the Ghost and died. Now what can we judge of such a Man's Condition; since the Scripture saith, No Murderer hath eternal Life, &c. but that it must be concluded, that such an one is gone to Hell. He was a Murderer, a Self-murderer; and he is the worst Murderer, one that slays his own Body and Soul: Nor do we find mention made of any but cursed ones that do such kind of Deeds. I say, no mention made in holy Writ of any others, but such, that murder themselves.

And this is a fore Judgment of God upon Men, when God shall for the Sins of such give them up to be their own Executioners, or rather to execute his Judgment and Anger upon themselves. And let me earnestly give this Caution to Sinners. Take heed, Sirs, break off your Sins, lest God serves you as he served Mr. Badman's Brother: That is, lest he gives you up to be your own Murderers.

Atten. Now you talk of this; I did once know a Man, a Barber, that took his own Raifor, and cut his own Throat, and then put his Head out of his Chamber Window, to shew the Neighbours what he had done, and after a little while died.

Wife. I can tell you a more dreadful thing than this: I mean as to the manner of doing the Fact. There was about twelve Years since, a Man that lived at Brasfield by Northampton, named John Cox, that murdered himself; the manner of his doing of it was thus. He was a poor Man, and had for some time been sick (and the Time of his Sicknefs was about the beginning of Hay-time) and taking too many Thoughts how he should live afterwards, if he lost his present Season of Work, he fell into deep Despair about the World, and cried out to his Wife the Morning before he killed himself, saying, We are undone. But quickly after, he desired his Wife to depart the Room, Because, said he, I will see if I can get any rest; so she went out: but he instead of sleeping, quickly took his Raifor, and therewith cut up a great Hole in his Side, out of which he pulled, and cut off some of his Guts, and threw them, with the Blood, up and down the Chamber. But this not speeding of him so soon as he desired, he took the same Raifor and therewith cut his own Throat. His Wife then hearing of him sigh and fetch his Wind short, came again into the Room to him, him, and seeing what he had done, she ran out and call'd in some Neighbours, who came to him where he lay in a bloody manner, frightful to behold. Then said one of them to him, Ah! John, what have you done? are you not sorry for what you have done? He answered roughly, 'Tis too late to be sorry. Then said the same Person to him again, Ah! John, pray to God to forgive this bloody Act of thine. At the hearing of which Exhortation, he seemed much offended, and in angry manner said, Pray! and with that flung himself away to the Wall, and so after a few Gasps died desperately. When he had turned him of his Back, to the Wall, the Blood ran out of his Belly as out of a Bowl, and soaked quite thro' the Bed to the Boards, and through the Chinks of the Boards it ran pouring down to the Ground. Some said, that when the Neighbours came to see him, he lay groaping with his Hand in his Bowels, reaching upward, as was thought, that he might have pulled or cut out his Heart. 'Twas said also, that some of his Liver had been by him torn out and cast upon the Boards, and that many of his Guts hung out of the Bed on the Side thereof. But I cannot confirm all particulars; but the general of the Story, with these Circumstances above mentioned, is true; I had it from a sober and credible Person, who himself was one that saw him in this bloody State, and that talked with him, as was hinted before.

Many other such dreadful things might be told you, but these are enough, and too many too, if God in his Wisdom had thought necessary to prevent them.

Atten. This is a dreadful Story: And I would to God that it might be a Warning to others to instruct them to fear before God, and pray, lest he gives them up to do as John Cox hath done. For surely Self-Murderers cannot go to Heaven: And therefore, as you have said, he that dieth by his own Hands, is certainly gone to Hell. But speak a Word or two of the other Man you mentioned.

Wife. What? of a wicked Man dying in Despair?

Atten. Yes, of a wicked Man dying in Despair.

Wife. Well then: This Mr. Badman's other Brother was a very wicked Man, both in Heart and Life; I say in Heart, because he was so in Life, nor could any thing reclaim him; neither good Men, good Books, good Examples, nor God's Judgments. Well, after he had lived a great while in his Sins, God smote him with a Sickneſs of which he died. Now in his Sickneſs his Conſcience began to be awakened, and he began to roar out of his ill-spent Life, inſomuch that the Town began to ring of him. Now when it was noised about, many of the Neighbours came to see him, and to read by him, as is the common way with some; but all that they could do, could not abate his Terror, but he would lie in his Bed gnawing of his Teeth, and wringing of his Wrists, concluding upon the Damnation of his Soul, and in that Horror and Despair he died; not calling upon God, but distrusting in his Mercy, and blaspheming of his Name.

Atten. This brings to my Mind a Man that a Friend of mine told me of. He had been a wicked Liver; so when he came to die, he fell into Despair, and having concluded that God had no Mercy for him, he addressed himself to the Devil for Favour, saying, Good Devil be good unto me.

Wife. This is almost like Saul, who being forsaken of God, went to the Witch of Endor, and so to the Devil for help. But alas, should I set my self to collect these dreadful Stories, it would be easy in little time to present you with hundreds of them: But I will conclude as I began; they that are their own Murderers, or that die in Despair, after they have lived a Life of Wickedness, do surely go to Hell.

And here I would put in a Caution: Every one that dieth under Consternation of Spirit; that is, under Amazement and great Fear, do not therefore die in Despair: For a good Man may have this for his Bands in his Death, and yet go to Heaven and Glory. For, as I said before, He that is a good Man, a Man that hath Faith and Holiness, a Lover and Worshipper of God by Christ, according to his Word, may die in Consternation of Spirit: For Satan will not be wanting to assault good Men upon their Death-Bed, but they are secured by the Word and Power of God; yea, and are also helped, though with much Agony of Spirit, to exercise themselves in Faith and Prayer, the which he that dieth in Despair, can by no means do. But let us return to Mr. Badman, and enter further Discourse of the manner of his Death.

Atten. I think you and I are both of a Mind; for just now I was thinking to call you back to him also. And pray now, since it is your own Motion to return again to him, let us discourse a little more of his quiet and still Death.

Wife. With all my Heart. You know we were speaking before of the manner of Mr. Badman's death: How that he died still and quietly; upon which you made Observation, that the common People conclude, that if a Man dies quietly, and as they call it, like a Lamb, he is certainly gone to Heaven: when alas, if a wicked Man dies quietly, if a Man that has all his Days lived in notorious Sin, dieth quietly; his quiet dying is so far off from being a Sign of his being saved, that it is an uncontrollable Proof of his Damnation. This was Mr. Badman's Case, he lived wickedly even to the last, and then went quietly out of

of Mr.
Badman's
Death.

of the World; therefore Mr. Badman is gone to Hell.

Atten. Well, but since you are upon it, and also so confident in it, to wit, that a Man that lives a wicked Life till he dies, and then dies quietly, is gone to Hell; let me see what shew of Proof you have for this your Opinion.

He that after a sinful Life dies quietly, that is, without Repentance, goes to Hell.
1 Proof.

Wife. My first Argument is drawn from the Necessity of Repentance: No Man can be saved except he repents, nor can he repent that sees not, that knows not that he is a Sinner, and he that knows himself to be a Sinner, will I warrant him, be molested for the time by that Knowledge. This, as it is testified by all the Scriptures, so it is testified by Christian Experience. He that knows himself to be a Sinner, is molested, especially if that Knowledge comes not to him until he is cast upon his Death-bed; molested, I say, before he can die quietly. Yea, he is molested, dejected and cast down, he is also made to cry out, to hunger and thirst after Mercy by Christ, and if at all he shall indeed come to die quietly, I mean with that Quietness that is begotten by Faith and Hope in God's Mercy (to the which Mr. Badman and his Brethren were utter Strangers) his Quietness is distinguished by all judicious Observers, by what went before it, by what it flows from, and also by what is the Fruit thereof.

Sick-Bed Repentance seldom good for any thing.

I must confess I am no Admirer of Sick-bed Repentance, for I think verily it is seldom good for any thing: But I say, he that hath lived in Sin and Prophaneness all his Days, as Mr. Badman did, and yet shall die quietly, that is, without Repentance, steps in betwixt his Life and Death, he is assuredly gone to Hell, and is damned.

Atten. This does look like an Argument indeed; for Repentance must come, or else we must go to Hell-Fire: and if a lewd Liver shall (I mean that so continues till the Day of his Death) yet go out of the World quietly, 'tis a Sign that he died without Repentance, and so a Sign that he is damned.

Luke 13.
1, 2, 3, 4,
5, 6, 7.

Wife. I am satisfied in it, for my part, and that from the Necessity and Nature of Repentance. It is necessary, because God calls for it, and will not pardon Sin without it: Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish. This is that which God hath said, and he will prove but a fool-hardy Man that shall yet think to go to Heaven and Glory without it. Repent, for the Ax is laid to the Root of the Tree, every Tree therefore that bringeth not forth good Fruit (but no good Fruit can be where there is no sound Repentance) shall be hewn down, and cast into the Fire. This was Mr. Badman's Case, he had attending of him a sinful Life, and that to the very last, and yet died quietly, that is, without Repentance; he is gone to Hell and is damned. For the Nature of Repentance, I have touched upon that already, and shewed, that it never was where a quiet Death is the immediate Companion of a sinful Life; and therefore Mr. Badman is gone to Hell.

Secondly, My second Argument is drawn² Proof. from that blessed Word of Christ, While the strong Man armed keeps the House, his Goods are in Peace, till a stronger than he comes: But the strong Man armed kept Mr. Badman's House, that is, his Heart, and Soul, and Body, for he went from a sinful Life quietly out of this World: The stronger did not disturb by intercepting with sound Repentance, betwixt his sinful Life and his quiet Death: Therefore Mr. Badman is gone to Hell.

The strong Man armed is the Devil, and Quietness is his Security. The Devil never fears losing of the Sinner, if he can but keep him quiet: Can he but keep him quiet in a sinful Life, and quiet in his Death, he is his own. Therefore he saith, his Goods are in Peace; that is, out of Danger. There is no fear of the Devil's losing such a Soul, I say, because Christ, who is the best Judge in this Matter, saith, his Goods are at Peace, in quiet, and out of danger.

Atten. This is a good one too; for Peace in a doubtful, Peace and Quiet with Sin, is one of the greatest Signs of a damnable State. ^{Peace in a sinful state is a Sign of Damnation.}

Wife. So it is: Therefore, when God would shew the Greatness of his Anger against Sin and Sinners in one Word, he saith, They are joined to Idols, let them alone. ^{Hof. 4. 17.}

Let them alone, that is, disturb them not; let them go on without controul; let the Devil enjoy them peaceably, let him carry them out of the World unconverted quietly. This is one of the forest of Judgments, and bespeaketh the burning Anger of God against sinful Men. See also when you come home, the fourteenth Verse of the Chapter last mentioned in the Margent: I will not punish your Daughters when they commit Whoredom. I will let them alone, they shall live and dye in their Sins. But,

Thirdly, My third Argument is drawn³ Proof. from that Saying of Christ: He hath blinded their Eyes, and hardened their Hearts; ^{Joh. 12. 40.} that they should not see with their Eyes, nor understand with their Hearts, and be converted, and I should heal them.

There are three Things that I will take notice of from these Words.

1. The first is, that there can be no Conversion to God where the Eye is darkened, and the Heart hardened. The Eye must first be made to see, and the Heart to break and relent under and for Sin, or else there can be no Conversion. He hath blinded their Eyes, and hardened their Hearts lest they should see, and understand and (so) be converted. And this was clearly Mr. Badman's Case, he lived a wicked Life, and also died with his Eyes shut, and Heart hardened, as is manifest, in that a sinful Life was joined ed with a quiet Death; and all for that he should not be converted, but partake of the Fruit of his sinful Life in Hell-Fire.

2. The second thing that I take notice of from these Words is, That this is a Dispensation and Manifestation of God's Anger against a Man for his Sin. When God is angry with Men, I mean, when he is so angry with them, this among many is one of the Judgments that he giveth them up unto, to wit, to Blindness of Mind, and Hardness of Heart, which he also suffereth to accompany them till they enter in at the Gates of Death. And then, and there, and not short of then and there, their Eyes come to be opened. Hence it is said of the rich Man mentioned in Luke, He died, and in Hell he lift up his Eyes: Implying that he did not lift them up before: he neither saw what he had done, nor whither he was going; till he came to the place of Execution even into Hell. He died asleep in his Soul; he died besotted, stupified, and so consequently for Quietness like a Child or Lamb, even as Mr. Badman did: This was a Sign of God's Anger; he had a mind to damn him for his Sins, and therefore would not let him see nor have an Heart to repent for them, lest he should convert; and his Damnation, which God had appointed, should be frustrate: Lest they should be converted, and I should heal them.

3. The third thing I take notice of from hence, is, That a sinful Life and quiet Death annexed to it is the ready, the open, the beaten, the common Highway to Hell: There is no surer Sign of Damnation, than for a Man to die quietly after a sinful Life. I do not say that all wicked Men that are molested at their Death with a sense of Sin and Fears of Hell, do therefore go to Heaven [for some are also made to see, and are left to Despair (not converted by seeing) that they might go roaring out of this World to their Place:] But I say, there is no surer Sign of a Man's Damnation, than to die quietly after a sinful Life; than to sin, and die with his Eyes shut; than to sin and die with an Heart that cannot re-

Rom. 2.1, 2, 3, 4, 5. He hath blinded their Eyes and hardened their Heart, that they should not see with their Eyes, nor understand with their Heart; (no not so long as they are in this World) lest they should see with their Eyes, and understand with their Heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

2 Pet. 2. God has a Judgment for wicked Men; God will be even with wicked Men: God knows how to reserve the Ungodly to the Day of Judgment to be punished: And this is one of his ways by which he doth it. Thus it was with Mr. Badman.

4 Proof. Fourthly, it is said in the Book of Psalms, concerning the Wicked, There is no Bands in their Death, but their Strength is firm. By no Bands, he means no Troubles, no gracious Chastisements, no such

Vol. II.

Corrections for Sin as fall to be the Lot of God's People for theirs; yea, that many times falls to be theirs, at the time of their Death. Therefore he adds concerning the Wicked, They are not troubled (then) like other Men, neither are they plagued like other Men; but go as securely out of the World, as if they had never sinned against God, and put their own Souls into Danger of Damnation. There is no Band in their Death. They seem to go unbound, and set at Liberty out of this World, though they have lived notoriously wicked all their Days in it. The Prisoner that is to dye at the Gallows for his Wickedness, must first have his Irons knock'd off his Legs; so he seems to go most at Liberty, when indeed he is going to be executed for his Transgressions. Wicked Men also have no bands in their Death, they seem to be more at Liberty when they are even at the Wind-up of their sinful Life, than at any time besides.

Hence you shall have them boast of their Faith and Hope in God's Mercy, when they lie upon their Death-Bed; yea, you shall have them speak as confidently of their Salvation, as if they had served God all their Days: When the Truth is, the bottom of this their boasting is, because they have no bands in their Death.

Their Sin and base Life comes not into their mind to correct them, and bring them to Repentance; but presumptuous Thoughts, and an Hope and Faith of the Spider's (the Devil's) making, possesseth their Soul, to their own eternal undoing.

Hence wicked Mens Hope, is said to die, not before, but with them; they give up the Ghost together. And thus did Mr. Badman. His Sins and his Hope went with him to the Gate, but there his Hope left him, because it died there; but his Sins went in with him, to be a Worm to gnaw him in his Conscience for ever and ever.

The Opinion therefore of the common People concerning this kind of dying is frivolous and vain; for Mr. Badman died like a Lamb, or as they call it, like a Chrifom Child, quietly and without fear. I speak not this with Reference to the struggling of Nature with Death, but as to the struggling of the Conscience with the Judgment of God. I know that Nature will struggle with Death. I have seen a Dog and Sheep die hardly: And thus may a wicked Man do, because there is an Antipathy betwixt Nature and Death. But even while, even then, when Death and Nature are struggling for Mastery, the Soul, the Conscience, may be as besotted, as benumbed, as senseless and ignorant of its miserable State, as the Block or Bed on which the Sick lies: And thus they may die like a Chrifom Child in shew, but indeed like one who by the Judgment of God is bound over to eternal Damnation; and that also by the same Judgment is kept from seeing what they are, and whither they are going, till they plunge down among the Flames.

* When a wicked Man dies in his Sins quietly, it is a Judgment of God upon his wicked beholder.

And as it is a very great judgment of God on wicked Men that so die, (for it cuts them off from all Possibility of Repentance, and so of Salvation)* so it is as great a judgment upon those that are their Companions that survive them, for by the manner of their Death, they dying so quietly, so like unto Chrisom Children, as they call it, they are hardened, and take Courage to go on in their Course.

For comparing their Life with their Death, their sinful, cursed Lives with their Child-like, Lamb-like Death, they think that all is well, that no Damnation is happened to them; though they lived like Devils Incarnate, yet they died like harmless ones. There was no Whirl-wind, no Tempest, no Band nor Plague in their Death: They died as quietly as the most godly of them all, and had as great Faith and Hope of Salvation, and would talk as boldly of Salvation as if they had Assurance of it. But as was their Hope in Life, so was their Death: Their Hope was without Tryal, because it was none of God's working, and their Death was without Molestation, because so was the Judgment of God concerning them.

Ver. 6.

But I say, at this their Survivors take Heart to tread their Steps, and to continue to live in the Breach of the Law of God; yea they carry it stately in their Villanies; for so it follows in the Psalms. There is no Bands in their Death, but their strength is firm, &c. Therefore pride compasseth them (the Survivors) about as a chain, violence covereth them as a Garment. Therefore they take courage to do evil, therefore they pride themselves in their iniquity. Therefore, Wherefore? Why, because their fellows died, after they had lived long in a most profane and wicked Life, as quietly and as like to Lambs, as if they had been innocent.

Ver. 8, 9, 10, 11.

Yea, they are bold, by seeing this, to conclude, that God, either does not, or will not take notice of their Sins. They speak wickedly, they speak loftily. They speak wickedly of Sin, for that they make it better than by the Word it is pronounced to be. They speak wickedly concerning Oppression, that they commend, and count it a prudent Act. They also speak loftily: They set their mouth against the Heavens, &c. And they say, How doth God know, and is there knowledge in the most High? And all this, so far as I can see, ariseth in their Hearts from the beholding of the quiet and lamb-like Death of their Companions.

Behold these are the Ungodly that prosper in the World, (that is, by wicked ways) they increase in Riches.

This therefore is a great Judgment of God, both upon that Man that dyeth in his Sins, and also upon his Companion that beholdeth him so to die. He sinneth, he dyeth in his Sins, and yet dyeth quietly. What shall his Companion say to this? What Judgment shall he make how God will deal with him, by beholding the lamb-like Death of his Companion? Be sure, he cannot, as from such a sight say, Wo be to me, for Judgment is before him: He cannot gather, that Sin is a dreadful and a bitter thing, by the child-like death of Mr. Badman. But must rather, if he judgeth according to what he sees, or according to his corrupted Reason, conclude with the wicked ones of old, That every one that doth Evil, is good in the sight of the Lord, and he delighteth in them; or where is the God of Judgment? Mal. 2. 17.

Yea, this is enough to puzzle the wisest Man. David himself was put to a stand, by beholding the quiet death of ungodly Men. Verily, says he, I have cleansed my Heart in vain, and have washed my Hands in innocency, Psal. 73. 13. They, to appearance fare better by far than I: Their Eyes stand out with fatness, they have more than Heart can wish; But all the Day long have I been plagued, and chastened every Morning. This, I say, made David wonder, yea, and Job and Jeremiah too: But he goeth into the Sanctuary, and then he understands their end, nor could he understand it before, I went into the Sanctuary of God: What place was that? why there where he might enquire of God, and by him be resolved of this Matter: Then, says he, understood I their end. Then I saw, that thou hast set them in slippery places, and that thou castest them down to Destruction. Castest them down, that is, suddenly, or as the next Words say, As in a moment they are utterly consumed with Terrors: which Terrors did not cease them on their Sick-bed, for they had no bands in their Death. The Terrors therefore ceased them there, where also they are holden in them for ever. This he found out, I say, but not without great painfulness, grief and pricking in his Reins: So deep, so hard and so difficult did he find it, rightly to come to a determination in this Matter.

And indeed, this is a deep Judgment of God towards ungodly Sinners; it is enough to stagger a whole World, only the Godly that are in the World have a Sanctuary to go to, where the Oracle and Word of God is, by which his Judgments, and a Reason of many of them are made known to, and understood by them.

Atten. Indeed this is a staggering dispensation. It is full of the wisdom and anger of God. And I believe, as you have said, that it is full of Judgment to the World. Who would have imagined, that had not known Mr. Badman, and yet had seen him die, but that he had been a Man of an holy Life and Conversation, since since he died so stilly, so quietly, so like a Lamb or a Chrisom Child? Would they not, I say, have concluded, that he was a righteous Man? or that if they had known him and his Life, yet to see him die so quietly, would they not have concluded that he had made his peace with God? Nay farther, if some had known that he had died in his Sins, and yet that he died so like a Lamb, would they not have concluded, that either God doth not know our Sins, or that he likes them; or that he wants power, or will, or heart, or skill to punish them; since Mr. Badman himself went from a sinful life so quietly, so peaceable, and so like a Lamb as he did?

Wife. Without controversy, this is an heavy judgment of God upon wicked Men; one goes to Hell in peace, another goes to Hell in trouble; one goes to Hell being sent thither by the hand of his Companion; one goes thither with his Eyes shut, and another goes thither with his Eyes open; one goes thither roaring, and another goes thither boasting of Heaven and Happiness all the way he goes: One goes thither like Mr. Badman himself, and others go thither as did his Brethren. But above all, Mr. Badman's Death, as to the manner of dying, is the fullest of Snares and Traps to wicked Men; therefore they that die as he, are the greatest stumble to the World. They go, and go, they go on peaceably from Youth to old Age, and thence to the Grave, and so to Hell, without noise: They go, as an ox to the Slaughter, and as a Fool to the Correction of the Stocks; that is, both senselessly and securely. O! but being come at the Gates of Hell! O! but when they see those Gates set open for them: O! but when they see that that is their home, and that they must go in thither; then their Peace and Quietness flies away for ever: Then they roar like Lions, yell like Dragons, howl like Dogs and tremble at their Judgment, as do the Devils themselves. Oh! when they see they must shoot the Gulf and Throat of Hell! when they shall see that Hell hath shut her ghastly Jaws upon them, when they shall open their Eyes, and find themselves within the Belly and Bowels of Hell! Then they will mourn, and weep, and hack, and gnash their Teeth for Pain. But this must not be (or if it must, yet very rarely) till they are gone out of the Sight and Hearing of those Mortals, whom they do leave behind them alive in the World.

Atten. Well, my good Neighbour Wife, I perceive that the Sun grows low, and that you have come to a Conclusion with Mr. Badman's Life and Death; and therefore I will take my leave of you. Only first, let me tell you, I am glad that I have met with you to day, and that our hap was to fall in with Mr. Badman's State. I also thank you for your Freedom with me, in granting of me your Reply to all my Questions: I would only beg your Prayers that God will give me much Grace, that I may neither live nor die as did Mr. Badman.

Wife. My good Neighbour Attentive, I wish your Welfare in Soul and Body; and if ought that I have said of Mr. Badman's Life and Death may be of Benefit unto you, I shall be heartily glad; only I desire you to thank God for it, and to pray heartily for me, that I with you may be kept by the Power of God through Faith unto Salvation.

Atten. Amen. Farewel.

Wife. I wish you heartily farewell!

The Barren FIG-TREE:

OR, THE Doom and Downfall of the Fruitless Professor.

SHEWING

That the DAY of GRACE may be past with him long before his Life is ended.

The Signs also by which such miserable Mortals may be known.

To the READER.

Courteous Reader,

I Have written to thee now about the Barren Fig Tree, or how it will fare with the Fruitless Professor that standeth in the Vineyard of God.

Of what Complexion thou art, I cannot certainly divine, but the Parable tells thee, that the Cumber-ground must be cut down.

A Cumber-ground Professor, is not only a provocation to God, a stumbling-block to the World, and a blemish to Religion, but a snare to his own Soul also. Though his Excellency mount up to the Heavens, and his Head reach unto the Clouds, yet he shall perish for ever, like his own dung, they that have seen him, shall say, Where is he? Job. 20. 6.

Now they count it pleasure to riot in the day-time, 2 Pet. 2. 13, 14. but what will they do when the Ax is fetcht out?

The Tree whose Fruit withereth, is reckoned a Tree without Fruit, a Tree twice dead, one that must be plucked up by the Roots, Judges 12.

O thou Cumber-ground, God expects Fruit, God will come seeking Fruit shortly.

My Exhortation therefore is to Professors, that they look to it, that they take heed.

The Barren Fig Tree in the Vineyard, and the Bramble in the Wood, are both prepared for the Fire.

Profession is not a Covert to hide from the Eye of God; nor will it palliate the revengeful Threatning of his Justice, he will command to cut it down shortly.

The Church and a Profession, are the best of places for the Upright, but the worst in the World for the Cumber-ground: He must be cast, as profane, out of the Mount of God; Cast, I say, over the Wall of the Vineyard, there to wither; thence to be gathered and burned. It had been better for them that they had not known the Way of Righteousness, 2 Pet. 2. 21. And yet if they had not, they had been damned; but it is better to go to Hell without, than in, or from under a Profession: These shall receive greater Damnation, Luke 20. 47.

If thou be a Professor, read and tremble; If thou be Profane, do so likewise. For if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the Ungodly and Sinners appear? Cumberground, Take heed of the Ax; Barren Fig Tree, beware of the Fire.

But I will keep thee no longer out of the Book; Christ Jesus, the dresser of the Vineyard, take care of thee, dig about thee, and dung thee, that thou may'st bear Fruit: That when the Lord of the Vineyard cometh with his Ax to seek for Fruit, or pronounce the Sentence of Damnation on the Barren Fig Tree, thou mayest escape that judgment. The Cumberground must to the Wood-pile, and thence to the Fire.

Farewel.

Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus in Sincerity. Amen.

J. Bunyan.

The Barren FIG-TREE:

OF THE

Doom and Downfall of the Fruitless Professor.

LUKE XIII. 6, 7, 8, 9.

A certain Man had a Fig Tree planted in his Vineyard, and he came and sought Fruit thereon, and found none. Then said he to the Dresser of his Vineyard, Behold, these three Years I come seeking Fruit on this Fig Tree, and find none: Cut it down, why cumbereth it the Ground? And he answering, said, Lord, let it alone this Year also, until I shall dig about it, and dung it; and if it bear Fruit, well; and if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.

AT the beginning of this Chapter we read, how some of the Jews came to Jesus Christ, to tell him of the cruelty of Pontius Pilate, in mingling the Blood of the Galileans with their Sacrifices. An heathenish and prodigious Act: for therein he shewed, not only his Malice against the Jewish Nation, but also against their Worship, and consequently their God. An Action, I say, not only heathenish, but prodigious also; for the Lord Jesus paraphrasing upon this Fact of his, teacheth the Jews, that without Repentance, they should all likewise perish. Likewise, that is, by the Hand and Rage of the Roman Empire: Neither should they be more able to avoid the Stroke, than were those eighteen upon whom the Tower of Siloam fell, and slew them. Luke 19. 42, 43, 44. The fulfilling of which Prophecy, for their Hardness of Heart, and Impenitency, was in the Days of Titus Son of Vespasian, about forty Years after the Death of Christ. Then, I say, were these Jews and their City both, environed round on every side, wherein both they and it, to Amazement, were miserably overthrown. God gave them Sword, and Famine, Pestilence, and Blood, for their Outrage against the Son of his Love: So Wrath came on them to the uttermost, 1 Thess. 2. 16.

Now to prevent their old and foolish Salvo, which they always had in Readiness against such Prophecies and Denunciations of Judgment, the Lord Jesus presents them with this Parable, in which he emphatically shews them, that their cry of being the Temple of the Lord, and of their being the Children of Abraham, &c. and their being the Church of God, would not stand them in any stead. As who should say, It may be you think to help your selves against this my Prophecy, of your utter and unavoidable overthrow, by the Interest which you have in your outward Priviledges: But all these will fail you; for what think you, A certain Man had a Fig Tree planted in his Vineyard, and he came and sought Fruit thereon, and found none. This is your Case; The Jewish Land is God's Vineyard, I know it; and I know also, that you are the Fig Trees. But behold, there wanteth the main thing, Fruit; for the sake, and in expectation of which, he set this Vineyard with Trees. Now, seeing the Fruit is not found amongst you; the Fruit, I say, for the sake of which he did at first plant this Vineyard; what remains, but that in Justice he command to cut you down, as those that cumber the Ground, that he may plant himself another Vineyard. Then said he to the Dresser of his Vineyard, Behold, these three Years I come seeking Fruit on this Fig Tree, and find none; cut it down, why cumbereth it the Ground? This therefore must be your end, altho' you are planted in the Garden of God, for the Barrenness and Unfruitfulness of your Hearts and Lives, you must be cut off, yea, rooted up, and cast out of the Vineyard.

In Parables there are two Things to be taken notice of, and to be enquired into of them that read.

First, The Metaphors made use of.
Secondly, The Doctrine or Mysteries couched under such Metaphors.

The Metaphors in this Parable are;
 (1.) A certain Man. (2.) A Vineyard. (3.) A Fig Tree, barren or fruitless. (4.) A Dresser. (5.) Three Years. (6.) Digging and Dugging, &c.

The Doctrine, or Mystery, couched under these Words, is to shew us, What is like to become of a fruitless or formal Professor. For,

1. By the Man in the Parable (Luke 15. 11.) is meant God the Father.
2. By the Vineyard, (Isa 5. 7.) his Church.
3. By the Fig Tree, a Professor.
4. By the Dresser, the Lord Jesus.
5. By the Fig Tree's Barrenness, the Professor's Fruitlessness.
6. By the three Years, the Patience of God, that for a time he extendeth to barren Professors.
7. This calling to the Dresser of the Vineyard to cut it down, is to shew, the Outcries of Justice against fruitless Professors.
8. The Dresser's interceding, is to shew, how the Lord Jesus steps in, and takes hold of the Head of his Father's Ax, to stop or at least to defer present Execution, a barren Fig Tree.
9. The Dresser's Desire to try to make the Fig Tree fruitful, is to shew you, how unwilling he is that ever a barren Fig Tree, should yet be barren, and perish.
10. His digging about it, and dugging of it, is to shew his Willingness to apply Gospel-helps to this barren Professor, if happily he may be fruitful.
11. The Supposition that the Fig Tree may yet continue fruitless, is to shew, that when Christ Jesus hath done all, there are some Professors will abide barren and fruitless.
12. The Determination upon this Supposition, at last to cut it down, is a certain Prediction of such Professors unavoidable and eternal Damnation.

But to take this Parable into Pieces, and to discourse more particularly, tho' with all brevity, upon all the Parts thereof.

A certain Man had a Fig Tree planted in his Vineyard.

The Man, I told you, is to present us with God the Father, by which similitude He is often set out in the New Testament.

Observe then, That it is no new thing, if you find in God's Church, barren Fig Trees, fruitless Professors; even as here you see is a Tree, a fruitless Tree, a fruitless Fig Tree in the Vineyard. Fruit is not so easily brought forth, as a Profession is got into; 'tis easy for a Man to cloath himself with a fair Show in the Flesh, to word it, and say be thou warmed and filled with the best. 'Tis no hard thing to do these with other things; but to be fruitful, to bring forth fruit to God, this doth not every Tree, no not every Fig Tree, that stands in the Vineyard of God. Those Words also, John 15. 2. Every Branch in me that beareth not Fruit, he taketh away, assert the same thing. There are Branches in Christ, in Christ's Body mystical, (which is his Church, his Vineyard) that bear not Fruit, wherefore the Hand of God is to take them away. I looked for Grapes, and it brought forth wild Grapes, Isa. 5. 4. that is no Fruit at all that was acceptable with God. Again, Hos. 10. 1. Israel is an empty Vine, he bringeth forth Fruit unto himself, none to God; he is without Fruit to God. All these, with many more, shew us the Truth of the Observation, and that God's Church may be cumbered with fruitless Fig Trees, with barren Professors.

Had a [Fig Tree.]

Although there be in God's Church that be barren and fruitless; yet, as I said, to see to, they are like the rest of the Trees, even a Fig Tree: 'Twas not an Oak, nor a Willow, nor a Thorn, nor a Bramble, but a Fig Tree. Ezek. 33. 31. They come before thee as the People cometh. Isa. 58. 2, 3, 4. They delight to know my Ways, as a Nation that did Righteousness, and forsook not the Ordinances of their God: They ask of me the Ordinances of Justice, they take delight in approaching to God; and yet but barren, fruitless, and unprofitable Professors. Judas also was one of the Twelve, a Disciple, an Apostle, a Preacher, an Officer, yea, and such an one as none of the Eleven mistrusted, but preferred before themselves, each one crying out, Is it I? Is it I? Mar. 14. 19. none of them, as we read of (Joh. 6. 70.) mistrusting Judas, yet he in Christ's Eye was the barren Fig Tree, a Devil, a fruitless Professor. The foolish Virgins also went forth of the World with the other, had Lamps, and Light, and were awakened with the other; yea had boldness to go forth when the Midnight Cry was made, with the other; and thought that they could have looked Christ in the Face, when he sat upon the Throne of Judgment with the other; and yet but foolish, but barren Fig Trees, but fruitless Professors: Matth. 7. 22, 23. Many, saith Christ, will say unto me in that Day, this and that, and will also talk of many wonderful Works; yet, behold, he finds nothing in them, but the Fruits of Unrighteousness: They were altogether barren and fruitless Professors.

Had a Fig Tree [planted.]

This Word [planted] doth also reach far; it supposeth one taken out of its natural Soil

Soil, or removed from the Place it grew in once; one that seemed to be called, awakened; and not only so, but by strong hand carried from the World, to the Church; from Nature, to Grace; from Sin, to Godliness. Psal. 80. 8. Thou broughtest a Vine out of Egypt; thou didst cast out the Heathen and plant it. Of some of the Branches of this Vine, were there unfruitful Professors.

It must be concluded therefore, That this Professor, that remaineth notwithstanding fruitless, is, as to the View and Judgment of the Church, rightly brought in thither; to wit, by Confession of Faith, of Sin, and a Shew of Repentance and Regeneration; thus false Brethren creep in unawares. All these things this Word planted, intimateth; yea, further, that the Church is satisfied with them, consents they should abide in the Garden, and counteth them sound as the rest. But before God, in the Sight of God, they are graceless Professors, barren and fruitless Fig Trees.

Therefore it is one thing to be IN the Church, or in a Profession; and another to be OF the Church, and to belong to to that Kingdom, that is prepared for the Saint, that is so indeed. Otherwise, being planted, shall it prosper, shall it not utterly wither, when the East Wind toucheth it? It shall wither in the Furrows where it grew. Ezek. 17. 10.

Had a Fig Tree planted in [his] Vineyard.

In [his] Vineyard. Hypocrites, with rotten Hearts, are not afraid to come before God in Sion. These Words therefore suggest unto us, a prodigious kind of Boldness and hardened Fearlessness: for what Presumption higher, and what Attempt more desperate, than for a Man that wanteth Grace, and the true Knowledge of God, to croud himself (in that Condition) into the House, or Church of God; or to make Profession of, and desire that the Name of God should be called upon him?

For the Man that maketh a Profession of the Religion of Jesus Christ, that Man hath, as it were, put the Name of God upon himself, and is called and reckoned now (how fruitless soever before God, or Men) the Man that hath to do with God, the Man that God owneth, and will stand for. This Man, I say, by his Profession suggesteth this to all that know him to be such a Professor. Men meerly natural, I mean, Men that have not got the devilish Art of Hypocrisy, are afraid to think of doing thus. And of the rest durst no Man join himself to them, but the People magnified them. Acts 5. 13. And indeed it displeaseth God; They have brought, saith he, Men uncircumcised into my Sanctuary. And again, Isa. 1. 12. When you come to appear before me, who bath requir'd this at your Hand, to tread my Courts? saith God. They have therefore learnt this Boldness of none in the visible World, they only took it of the Devil; for he, and he only, with these his Disciples, attempt to present themselves in the Church before God. The Tares are the Children of the Wicked One; the Tares, that is, the Hypocrites that are Satan's Brood, the Generation of Vipers, that cannot escape the Damnation of Hell.

[Had] a Fig Tree planted in his Vineyard.

He doth not say, He planted a Fig Tree, but there Was a Fig Tree there, he Had, or Found a Fig Tree planted in his Vineyard.

The great God will not acknowledge the barren Fig Tree, or barren Professor to be His Workmanship, or a Tree of His bringing in; only the Text saith, He Had one there. This is much like that in Matthew, Chap. 15. 13. Every Plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up. Here again are Plants in his Vineyard, which God will not acknowledge to be of his planting: And he seems to suggest, that in his Vineyard are many such. ----- Every Plant, or all those Plants, or Professors that are got into the Assembly of the Saints, or into the Profession of their Religion, without God and his Grace, shall be rooted up.

And when the King came in to see the Guests, he saw there a Man that had not on a Wedding Garment; and he said unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither, not having on a Wedding Garment? Matth. 22. 11, 12. Here is one so cunning and crafty, that he beguiled all the Guests; he got and kept in the Church, even until the King himself came in to see the Guests. But his Subtlety got him nothing; it did not blind the Eyes of the King; it did not pervert the Judgment of the Righteous. Friend, how camest thou in hither? did overtake him at last, even a publick Rejection; the King discovered him in the Face of all there present. How camest thou in hither? my Father did not bring thee hither, I did not bring thee hither, my Spirit did not bring thee hither, thou art not of the heavenly Father's planting, How camest thou in hither?

John 10. 1. He that cometh not in by the Door, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a Thief and a Robber. This Text also is full and plain to our purpose; for this Man came not in by the Door, yet got into the Church, he got in by climbing; he broke in at the Windows, he got something of the Light and Glory of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ in his Head; and so (hardy Wretch that he was) he presumed to croud himself among the Children. But how is this resented? what saith the King of him? Why this is his Sign, the same is a Thief and a Robber. See ye here also, if all they be owned as the planting of God, that that get into his Church or Profession of his Name.

Had a Fig Tree, had one without a Wedding Garment, had a Thief in his Garden, at his Wedding, in his House. These climbed up some other way. There are many ways to get into the Church of God, and Profession of his Name, besides, and without an entring by the Door.

1. There is the way of Lying and Dissembling, and at this Gap the Gibeonites got in, Josh. 9. 3, 4, &c.

2. There is sometimes Falseness amongst some Pastors, either for the sake of carnal Relations, or the like; at this Hole, Tobiah the Enemy of God got in, Nehem. 13. 4, 5, 6.

3. There is sometimes Negligence, and too much Uncircumspectness in the whole Church; thus the Uncircumcised got in, Ezek. 44. 7, 9.

4. Sometimes again, let the Church be never so circumspect, yet these have so much help from the Devil, that they beguile them all, and so get in. These are of that sort of Thieves that Paul complains of; false Brethren that are brought in unawares, Gal. 2. 3, 4. Jude also cries out of these, Certain Men crept in unawares, Jude 4. Crept in! What were they so lowly! A voluntary Humility, (Col. 2. 22, 23.) a neglecting of the Body, not in any Humour. Oh, how seemingly self denying are some of these creeping things, that yet are to be held (as we shall know them) an Abomination to Israel, Lev. 11. 43. 44.

But in a great House, there are not only Vessels of Gold, and of Silver, but also of Wood, and of Earth; and some to Honour, and some to Dishonour, 2 Tim. 2. 20. By these Words the Apostle seems to take it for granted, that as there hath been, so there still will be, these kind of Fig Trees, these barren Professors in the House, when all Men have done what they can; even as in a great House there are always Vessels to Dishonour, as well as those to Honour and Glory; Vessels of Wood, and of Earth, as well as of Silver and Gold: So then there must be wooden Professors in the Garden of God, there must be earthy, earthen Professors in his Vineyard; but that methinks is the biting Word, and some to Dishonour. That to the Romans is dreadful, Rom. 9. 21, 22. but this seems to go beyond it; that speaks but of the Reprobate in general, but this of such and such in particular: That speaks of their hardening but in the common way; but this, that they must be suffered to creep into the Church, there to fit themselves for their Place, their own Place, Acts 1. 25. the Place prepared for them of this sort only. As the Lord Jesus said once of the Pharisees, These shall receive greater Damnation, Luke 20. 47.

Barren Fig Tree, fruitless Professor, hast thou heard all these things? Hast thou considered that this Fig Tree is not acknowledged of God to be his, but is denied to be of his planting, and of his bringing unto his Wedding? Dost not thou see that thou art called a Thief, and a Robber, that hast either climbed up to, or crept in at another Place than the Door? Dost thou not hear, that there will be in God's House, wooden and earthly Professors, and that no Place will serve to fit those for Hell, but the House, Church, the Vineyard of God! Barren Fig Tree! fruitless Christian! do not thine Ears tingle?

And [he] came and sought Fruit thereon.

When a Man hath got a Profession, and is crouded into the Church and House of God; the Question is not now, Hath he Life, hath he right Principles, but hath he Fruit, he came seeking Fruit thereon. It mattereth not who brought thee in hither, whether God or the Devil, or thine own vain glorious Heart; But hast thou Fruit? Dost thou bring forth Fruit unto God? And, let every one that nameth the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, depart from Iniquity, 2 Tim. 2. 9. He doth not say, and let every one that hath Grace, or let those that have the Spirit of God; but let every one that nameth the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, depart from Iniquity.

What do Men meddle with Religion for? Why do they call themselves by the Name of the Lord Jesus, if they have not the Grace of God, if they have not the Spirit of Christ? God therefore expecteth Fruit: What do they do in the Vineyard? let them work or get them out, the Vineyard must have Labourers in it: Son, go work to Day in my Vineyard, Matth. 21. 28. Wherefore, want of Grace, and want of Spirit, will not keep God from seeking Fruit; And he came and sought Fruit thereon, Luke 8. 8. He required that which he seemeth to have: Every Man in the Vineyard, and House of God, promiseth himself, professeth to others, and would have all Men take it for granted, that an heavenly Principle is in him; why then should not God seek Fruit?

As for them therefore that will retain the Name of Christians, fearing God, and yet make no Conscience of bringing forth Fruit to him; he saith to such, Away! As for you, go ye, serve every one his Idols, and hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me, &c. Ezek. 20. 39. Barren Fig Tree, dost thou hear? God expecteth Fruit, God calls for Fruit; yea, God will shortly come seeking Fruit on this barren Fig Tree. Barren Fig Tree! either bear Fruit, or go out of the Vineyard, (and yet then thy Case will be unspeakably damnable. Yea, let me add, If thou shalt neither bear Fruit, nor depart, God will take his Name out of thy Mouth, Jer. 44. 26. He will have Fruit. And I say say further, if thou wilt do neither, yet God in Justice and Righteousness will still come for Fruit. And it will be in vain for thee to count this Austerity; he will reap where he hath not sowed, and gather where he hath not strewed, Matth. 25. 24, 25, 26. Barren Fig Tree dost thou hear?

Q. What if a Man have no Grace?

A. Yes, seeing he hath a Profession.

And he came and sought Fruit [thereon.]

A Church then, and a Profession, are not places where the Workers of Iniquity may hide themselves, and Sins, from God. Some of old thought, that because they could cry, The Temple of the Lord, the Temple of the Lord, that therefore they were delivered, or had a Dispensation to do the Abominations which they committed; as some in our Days. For who (say they) have a right to the Creatures if not Christians, if not Professors, if not Church-Members? And from this Conclusion, let go the Reins of their inordinate Affections after Pride, Ambition, Gluttony, pampering themselves without Fear, Jude 12. daubing themselves with the Lust-provoking Fashions of the Times; to walk with stretched out Necks, naked Breasts, frizled Fore-tops, wanton Gestures, in gorgeous Apparel, mix'd with Gold and Pearl, and costly Array. I will not here make Inspection into their Lives, their Carriages at Home, in their Corners, and secret Holes; but certainly, Persons thus spirited, thus principled, and thus enclined, have but empty Boughs, Boughs that want the Fruit that God expects, and that God will come down to seek.

Barren Fig Tree, thou art not licensed by thy Profession, nor by the Lord of the Vineyard, to bear these Clusters of Gomorrah: Neither shall the Vineyard, nor thy being crowded among the Trees there, shelter thee from the Sight of the Eye of God. Many make Religion their Cloak, and Christ their Stalking-Horse, and by that means cover themselves, and hide their own Wickedness from Men: But God seeth their Hearts, hath his print upon the Heels of their Feet, and pondereth all their goings: And at last, when their Iniquity is found to be hateful, he will either smite them with Hardness of Heart, and so leave them, or awaken them to bring forth Fruit. Fruit he looks for, seeks and expects, barren Fig Tree!

But what! Come into the Presence of God to sin. What, Come into the Presence of God to hide thy Sin. Alas Man! The Church is God's Garden, and Christ Jesus is the great Apostle and High-Priest of our Profession. What! come into the House that is called by my Name! into the Place where mine Honour dwelleth! Psal. 26. 8. where mine Eyes and Heart are continually! 1 Kings 9. 3. What, come there to sin, to hide thy Sin, to cloak thy Sin! His Plants are an Orchard with pleasant Fruits, Song 4. 13, 14, 15. And every time he goeth into his Garden, it is to see the Fruits of the Valley; and to see if the Vines flourish, and if the Pomegranates bud.

N^o XXXVII. Vol. II.

Yea, saith he, he came seeking Fruit on This Fig Tree. The Church is the Place of God's Delight; where he ever desires to be, there he is Night and Day. He is there to seek for Fruit, to seek for Fruit of all, and every Tree in the Garden. Wherefore assure thy self, O fruitless one, that thy Ways must needs be open before the Eyes of the Lord. One black Sheep is soon espied, although in Company with many; that is taken with the first cast of the Eye; its different Colour still betrays it. I say, therefore, a Church and a Profession are not Places where the Workers of Iniquity may hide themselves from God, that seeks for Fruit; My Vineyard, saith God, which is mine, is before me, Song 8. 12.

And he came and sought Fruit thereon [and found none.]

Barren Fig Tree, hearken; the continual non-bearing of Fruit, is a dreadful Sign; that thou art to come to a dreadful End, as the winding up of this Parable concludeth:

And found none. None at all, or none to God's liking: For when he saith, He came seeking Fruit thereon, he means Fruit meet for God [Heb. 6.] pleasant Fruit, Fruit good and sweet.

Alas, it is not any Fruit will serve; bad Fruit is counted none. Every Tree that bringeth not forth good Fruit, is hewen down and cast into the Fire, Matth. 3. 10.

1. There is a Fruit among Professors that withers, and so never comes to be ripe, a Fruit that is smitten in the Growth, and comes not to Maturity, and this is reckoned no Fruit. This Fruit those Professors bear, that have many fair beginnings, or Blossoms: That make many fair Offers of Repentance and Amendment; that begin to pray, to resolve, and to break off their Sins by Righteousness; but stop at those beginnings, and bring no Fruit forth to Perfection. This Man's Fruit is withered, wrinkled, smitten Fruit, and is in effect no Fruit at all.

2. There is an hasty Fruit, such as is the Corn upon the House Top, Psal. 129. or that which springs up on the Dunghil, that runs up suddenly, violently, with great Stalks and big shew, and yet at last proves empty of Kernel. This Fruit is to be found in those Professors, that on a sudden are so awakened, so convinced, and so affected with their Condition, that they shake the whole Family, the End-SHIP, the whole Town. For a while they cry hastily, vehemently, dolefully, mournfully, and yet all is but a Pang, an Agony, a Fit, they bring not forth Fruit with Patience. These are called those hasty Fruits, that shall be as a fading Flower, Isa. 28. 4.

3. There is a Fruit that is vile, and ill-tasted, Jer. 24. how long soever it be in growing; the Root is dried, and cannot convey a Sufficiency of Sap to the Branches to ripen the Fruit. These are the Fruit of such Professors, whose Heart is estranged from Communion with the Holy Ghost, whose Fruit groweth from themselves, from their Parts, Gifts, Strength of Wit, natural or moral Principles. These, notwithstanding they bring forth Fruit, are called empty Vines; such as bring not forth Fruit to God.

Their Root is dried up, they shall bear no Fruit; yea, though they bring forth, yet will I slay even the beloved Fruit of their Womb, Hos. 9. 16.

4. There is a Fruit that is wild; I looked for Grapes, and it brought forth wild Grapes, Isa. 5. 4. I observe, that as there are Trees and Herbs that are wholly right, and noble, fit indeed for the Vineyard: So there are also their Semblance, but wild; not right, but ignoble. There is the Grape and the wild Grape; the Vine and the wild Vine; the Rose, and Canker-Rose; Flowers, and wild Flowers; the Apple, and the wild Apple, which we call the Crab. Now Fruit from these wild things, however they may please the Children to play with, yet the Prudent and Grave count them of little or no value. There are also in the World a Generation of Professors, that notwithstanding their Profession, are wild by Nature; yea, such as were never cut out, or off, from the wild Olive Tree, nor never yet planted into the good Olive Tree. Now these can bring nothing forth but wild Olive Berries, they cannot bring forth Fruit unto God. Such are all those that have lightly taken up a Profession, and crept into the Vineyard without a New-birth, and the blessing of Regeneration.

5. There is also untimely Fruit; Even as a Fig-tree casteth her untimely Figs, Rev. 6. 13. Fruit out of Season, and so no Fruit to God's liking.

There are two sorts of Professors subject to bring forth untimely Fruit.

First, They that bring forth [Fruit] too soon.

Secondly, They that bring forth [Fruit] too late.

First, They that bring forth too soon. They are such as at present receive the Word with Joy; and anon, before they have Root downwards, they thrust forth upwards; but having not root, when the Sun ariseth they are smitten, and miserably die without Fruit. These Professors are those light and inconsiderate Ones, that think nothing but Peace will attend the Gospel; and so anon rejoyce at the Tidings, without foreseeing the Evil: Wherefore when the Evil comes, being unarmed, and so not able to stand any longer, they die, and are withered, and bring forth no Fruit. He that received the Seed into stony places, the same is he that beareth the Word, and anon with joy receiveth it: Yet hath he not root in himself, but dureth for a while; for when Tribulation or Persecution ariseth because of the Word, by and by they are offended, Mat. 13. 20, 21. There is in Isa. 28. mention made of some, Whose glorious Beauty shall be a fading Flower, Isa. 28. 4. because it is Fruit before Summer. Both these are untimely Fruit.

Secondly, They also bring forth untimely Fruit, that stay till the Season is over. God will have his Fruit in His Season; I say, he will receive them of such Men as shall render them to him in Their Seasons, Mat. 21. 41. The missing of the season is dangerous; staying till the Door is shut is dangerous, Mat. 25. 10, 11. Many there be that come not till the Flood of God's Anger is raised, and too deep for them to wade through; Surely in the Floods of great Waters, they shall not come nigh unto him, Psal. 32. 6. Esau's [afterward] is fearful: For ye know how that afterward when he would have inherited the Blessing, he was rejected; for he found no place of Repentance, though he sought it carefully with Tears, Heb. 12. 16, 17.

So the Children of Israel, they brought to God the Fruits of Obedience too late; their Lo, we be here, (Numb. 14. 40, 41, 42.) came too late; Their, We will go up (verse 21, 22, 23.) came too late. The Lord had sworn, Mat. 25. 10. and 27. 3. before, that they should not possess the Land. All these are such as bring forth untimely Fruit, Heb. 12. 17. Luke 13. 25, 26, 27. It is the hard hap of the Reprobate to do all things too late; to be sensible of his want of Grace too late; to be sorry for Sin too late; to seek Repentance too late; to ask for Mercy, and to desire to go to Glory too late.

1. Thus you see that Fruit smitten in the growth, that withereth, and that comes not to maturity, is no Fruit.

2. That hasty Fruit, such as the Corn upon the House top, Psal. 129. 6. withereth also before it groweth up, and is no Fruit.

3. That the Fruit that is vile and ill-tasted, is no Fruit.

4. That wild Fruit, wild grapes, Rev. 6. are no Fruit.

5. That untimely Fruit, such as comes too soon, or that comes too late; such as come not in their Season, are no Fruit.

And he came and sought Fruit thereon, and found none.

Nothing will do but Fruit: Mat. 21. 34. He looked for Grapes; when the time of Fruit drew near, he sent his Servants to the Husband-

Husbandmen that they might receive the Fruit of it.

Quest. But what Fruit doth God expect?

A. Good Fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good Fruit, is hewn down, Mat. 7. 19. Now before the Fruit can be good, the Tree must be good; for good Fruit makes not a good Tree, but a good Tree bringeth forth good Fruit; Do Men gather Grapes of Thorns, or Figs of Thistles? A Man must be good, else he can bring forth no good Fruit; he must have Righteousness imputed; that he may stand good in God's Sight from the Curse of his Law. He must have a Principle of Righteousness in his Soul, else how should he bring forth good Fruits; and hence it is, that a Christian's fruits are called, Gal. 5. 22, 23. The Fruits of the Spirit, the Fruits of Righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ, Phil. 1. 11. The Fruits of the Spirit, therefore the Spirit must be there: the Fruits of Righteousness, therefore Righteousness must first be there; but to particularize in a few things briefly.

First, God expecteth Fruit that will answer, and be worthy of the Repentance, which thou feignest thyself to have. Every one in a Profession, and that hath crouded into the Vineyard, pretendeth to Repentance; now of every such Soul, God expecteth that the Fruits of Repentance be found to attend them. Mat. 3. 8. Bring forth Fruits therefore meet for Repentance, or answerable to thy profession of the Doctrine of Repentance. Barren Fig-tree, seeing thou art a Professor, and art got into the Vineyard: thou standest before the Lord of the Vineyard, as one of the Trees of the Garden: Wherefore He looketh for Fruit from thee, as from the rest of the Trees in the Vineyard; Fruits, I say, and such as may declare thee in Heart and Life, one that hath made sound Profession of Repentance. By thy Profession thou hast said, I am sensible of the Evil of Sin: Now then, live such a Life, as declares that thou art sensible of the Evil of Sin. By thy Profession thou hast said, I am sorry for my Sin: Why then, live such a life as may declare this Sorrow. By thy Profession thou hast said, I am ashamed of my Sin, Psal. 38. 18. yea, but live such a Life, that Men by that may see thy shame for Sin, Jer. 31. 19. By thy profession thou sayest, I have turned from, left off, and am become an enemy to every appearance of evil, 1 Thess. 5. 22. Ah! but doth thy Life and Conversation declare thee to be such an one? Take heed, barren Fig Tree, lest thy Life should give thy Profession the lie. I say again, Take heed, for God himself will come for Fruit; And he sought Fruit thereon.

You have some Professors, that are only Saints before Men, when they are abroad; but are Devils and Vipers at home; Saints by Profession, but Devils by Practice; Saints in Word, but Sinners in Heart and Life. These Men may have the Profession, but they want the Fruits that become Repentance.

Barren Fig-tree! Can it be imagined that those that paint themselves, did ever repent of their Pride? or that those that pursue this World, did ever repent of their Covetousness? or that those that walk with wanton eyes, did ever repent of their fleshly Lusts? Where, barren Fig-Tree, is the Fruit of these Peoples Repentance? Nay, do they not rather declare to the World, that they have repented of their Profession? Their fruits look as if they had. Their Pride saith, they have repented of their Humility: Their Covetousness declareth, that they are weary of depending upon God; and doth not thy wanton Actions declare, that thou abhorrest Chastity? Where is thy Fruit, Barren Fig-tree? Repentance is not only a sorrow, and a shame for, but a turning from Sin to God, Heb. 6. it is called Repentance from dead Works. Hast thou that Godly Sorrow that worketh Repentance to Salvation, never to be repented of? 2 Cor. 7. 10, 11. How dost thou shew thy Carefulness, and clearing of thy self; thy indignation against Sin; thy fear of offending; thy vehement desire to walk with God; thy Zeal for his Name and Glory in the World: And what Revenge hast thou in thy Heart against every thought of Disobedience?

But where is the Fruit of this Repentance? Where is thy Watching, thy Fasting, thy Praying against the remainders of Corruption? Where is thy Self-abhorrence; thy blushing before God, for the Sin that is yet behind? Where is thy Tenderness of the Name of God and his Ways? Where is thy Self-denial and Contentment? How dost thou shew before Men the truth of thy turning to God? Hast thou renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness? 2 Cor. 4. 2. Canst thou commend thy self to every Man's conscience in the sight of God?

And he sought Fruit thereon.

Secondly, God expecteth Fruits that shall answer that Faith which thou makest Profession of. The Professor that is got into the Vineyard of God, doth feign that he hath the Faith, the Faith most holy, the Faith of God's Elect. Ah! But where are thy Fruits, Barren Fig-tree? The Faith of the Romans was spoken of throughout the whole World, Rom. 1. 8. and the Thessalonians Faith grew exceedingly, 2 Thess. 1. 3.

Thou professest to believe thou hast a Share in another World; hast thou let go this, barren Fig Tree? thou professest thou believest in Christ; is he thy Joy and the Life of thy Soul? Yea, what Conformity unto unto him, to his Sorrows and Suffering? What Resemblance hath his Crying, and Groaning, and Bleeding and Dying wrought in thee? dost thou hear about in thy Body the dying of the Lord Jesus? and is also the Life of Jesus made manifest in thy mortal Body? 2 Cor. 4. 10, 11. Barren Fig Tree, shew me thy Faith by thy Works. Shew out of a good Conversation thy Works with Meekness of Wisdom, Jam. 2. 18. and 3. 13.

What Fruit, barren Fig Tree, what Degree of Heart-Holiness? for Faith purifies the Heart, Acts 15. 9. What Love to the Lord Jesus? for Faith worketh by Love, Gal. 5. 6.

Thirdly, God expecteth Fruits, according to the Seasons of Grace thou art under, according to the Rain that cometh upon thee. Perhaps thou art planted in a good Soil, by great Waters, that thou mightest bring forth Branches, and bear Fruit? that thou mightest be a goodly Vine or Fig Tree: Shall he not therefore seek for Fruit, for Fruit answerable to the Means? Barren Fig Tree, God expects it, and will find it too, if ever he bless thee. For the Earth which drinketh in the Rain that comes oft upon it, and bringeth forth Herbs meet for him by whom it is dressed, receives blessing from God; but that which beareth Thorns and Briars is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing, whose end is to be burned, Heb. 6. 7, 8.

Barren Soul! How many Showers of Grace, how many Dews from Heaven, how many times have the Silver Streams of the City of God, run gliding by thy Roots, to cause thee to bring forth Fruit! These Showers, and Streams, and the Drops that hang upon thy Boughs, will all be accounted for; and will they not testify against thee, that thou oughtest of right to be burned! Hear, and tremble, O thou barren Professor! Fruits that become thy Profession of the Gospel, the God of Heaven expecteth. The Gospel hath in it the Forgiveness of Sins, the Kingdom of Heaven, and Eternal Life: but what Fruit hath thy Profession of a Belief of these Things put forth in thy Heart and Life? Hast thou given thy self to the Lord; and is all that thou hast to be ventured for his Name in this World? Dost thou walk like one that is bought with a Price, even with the Price of precious Blood?

Fourthly, The Fruit that God expecteth is such, as is meet for himself, Fruit that may glorify God; God's Trees are Trees of Righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that he may be glorified; Fruit that tasteth of Heaven, Abundance of such Fruit: For herein, saith Christ, is my Father glorified, that ye bring forth much Fruit, John 15. 8. Fruits of all kinds, new and old; the Fruits of the Spirit is in all Goodness, and Righteousness, and Truth. Fruits before the World, Fruits before the Saints, Fruits before God, Fruits before Angels.

O my Brethren, what manner of Persons ought we to be, who have subscribed to the Lord, and have called ourselves by the Name of Israel? One shall say, I am the Lord's; and another shall call himself by the Name of Jacob; and another shall subscribe with his Hand unto the Lord, and surname himself by the Name of Israel; Isa. 44. 5. Barren Fig Tree, hast thou subscribed, hast thou called thy self by the Name of Jacob? and surnamed thy self by the Name of Israel? All this thou pretendest to, who art got into the Vineyard, who art placed among the Trees of the Garden of God: God doth therefore look for such Fruit as is worthy of his Name, as is meet for him; as the Apostle saith, we should walk worthy of God; that is, so as we may shew in every Place, that the Presence of God is with us, his Fear in us, and his Majesty and Authority upon our Actions. Fruits meet for him, such a Dependance upon him, such Trust in his Word, such Satisfaction in his Presence, such a Trusting of him with all my Concerns, and such Delight in the Enjoyment of him, that may demonstrate that his Fear is in my Heart, that my Soul is wrap'd up in his Things, and that my Body, and Soul, and Estate, and All, are in Truth, through his Grace, at his Dispose, Fruit meet for him. Hearty Thanks, and blessing God for Jesus Christ, for his good Word, for his Free Grace, for the Discovery of himself in Christ to the Soul, secret longing after another World, Fruit meet for him. Liberality to the poor Saints, to the poor World; a Life in Word and Deed exemplary; a patient and quiet enduring of all things, till I have done and suffered the whole Will of God, which he hath appointed for me. That on the good Ground are they, which in an honest and good Heart, having heard the Word, keep it, and bring forth Fruit with Patience, Luke 8. 15. This is bringing forth Fruit unto God; having our Fruit unto Holiness, and our End everlasting Life, Rom. 7. 4. and 6. 22. and 14. 8.

Fifthly, The Lord expects Fruit becoming the Vineyard of God. The Vineyard, saith he, Isa. 5. 1. is a very fruitful Hill; witness the Fruit brought forth in all Ages: The most barren Trees that ever grew in the Wood of this World, when planted in this Vineyard by the God of Heaven, what Fruit to Godward have they brought forth? Abel offered the more excellent Sacrifice, Heb. 11. 4. Enoch walked with God three hundred Years, ver. 5. Noah, by his Life of Faith, condemned the World, and became Heir of the Righteousness which is by Faith, ver. 7. Abraham left his Country, and went out after God, not knowing whither he went, ver. 8. Moses left a Kingdom, and run the Hazard of the Wrath of the King, for the Love he had to God and Christ. What shall I say of them who had Trials, not accepting Deliverance, that they might obtain a better Resurrection?

surrection? Heb. 11. 35, 36, 37. They were stoned, they were sawn asunder; were tempted, were slain with the sword: They wandered about in Sheep-Skins and Goat-Skins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented. Peter left his Father, Ship and Nets, Matt. 4. 18, 19. Paul turned off from the feet of Gamaliel. Men brought their Goods and Possessions (the Price of them) and cast it down at the Apostle's feet, Acts 19. 18, 19, 20. and others brought their Books together, and burnt them, curious Books, though they were worth fifty thousand Pieces of Silver. I could add, how many willingly offered themselves in all Ages, and their All, for the worthy Name of the Lord Jesus, to be rack'd, starved, hanged, burned, drowned, pulled in Pieces, and a thousand Calamities. Barren Fig-tree, the Vineyard of God hath been a fruitful Place, What dost thou there? What dost thou bear? God expects Fruit according to, or becoming the Soil of the Vineyard.

Sixthly, The Fruit which God expecteth, is such as becometh God's Husbandry and Labour. The Vineyard is God's Husbandry, or Tillage. I am the Vine, saith Christ, John 15. 1. and my Father is the Husbandman. And again, 1 Cor. 3. 9. Ye are God's Husbandry, ye are God's Building. The Vineyard, God fences it, God gathereth out the Stones, God builds the Tower, and the Wine-press in the midst thereof. Here is Labour, here is Protection, here is removing of Hindrances, here is convenient Purgation, and all, that there might be Fruit.

Barren Fig-tree, What Fruit hast thou? hast thou Fruit becoming the Care of God, the Protection of God, the Wisdom of God, the Patience and Husbandry of God? It is the Fruit of the Vineyard, that is either the Shame or the Praise of the Husbandman. I went by the field of the slothful, saith Solomon, and by the Vineyard of the Man void of Understanding; and lo, it was grown over with Thorns, and Nettles had covered the face thereof, Prov. 24. 30, 31, 32.

Barren Fig-tree, If Men should make a Judgment of the Care, and Pains, and Labour of God in his Church by the Fruit that thou bringest forth, what might they say, is he not slothful, is he not careless, is he not without Discretion! O thy Thorns, thy Nettles, thy barren Heart and barren Life, is a continual Provocation to the Eyes of his Glory, as likewise a Dishonour to the glory of his Grace.

Barren Fig-tree, hast thou heard all these things, I will add yet one more.

And he came and sought Fruit thereon.

The Question is not now, What thou thinkest of thy self, nor what all the People of God think of thee? but what thou shalt be found in that Day, when God shall search thy boughs for Fruit. When Sodom was to be searched for righteous Men, God would not, in that Matter, trust his faithful Servant Abraham, but still as Abraham interceded, God answered, If I find fifty, or forty and five there, I will not destroy the City, Gen. 18. 20, 21, 26, 27. Barren Fig-tree, what sayest thou? God will come down to see, God will make search for Fruit himself.

And he came and sought Fruit thereon, and found [none.] Then said he to the Dresser of the Vineyard, Behold, these three Years I come seeking Fruit on this Fig-tree, and find none; cut it down, why cumbereth it the Ground.

These Words are the Effect of God's search into the boughs of a barren Fig-tree; he sought Fruit, and found none, none to his liking, none pleasant and good. Therefore, first, he complains of the want thereof to the Dresser, calls him to come, and see, and take notice of the Tree; then signifieth his Pleasure, he will have it removed, taken away, cut down from cumbering the Ground.

Observe. The barren Fig-tree is the Object of God's Displeasure, God cannot bear with a fruitless Professor.

[Then] said he, &c.

Then, after this Provocation; then, after he had sought and found no Fruit, then. This Word [then] doth shew us a kind of an inward Disquietness: as he saith also in another Place, upon a like Provocation, Then the Anger of the Lord, and his jealousy, shall smoke against that Man, and all the Curses that are written in this Book shall lie upon him, and the Lord shall blot out his Name from under Heaven, Deut. 29. 18, 19, 20.

Then; It intimateth that he was now come to a Point, to a Resolution what to do with this Fig-tree. Then said he to the Dresser of this Vineyard, that is, to Jesus Christ, behold; as much as to say, come hither, here is a Fig-tree in my Vineyard, here is a Professor in my Church, that is barren, that beareth no Fruit.

Observe, However the barren Professor thinks of himself on Earth, the Lord cries out in Heaven against him, Isa. 5. 5. And now go to, I will tell you what I will do to my Vineyard; I will take away the Hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up; and I will break down the Wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down.

Behold, these three Years I come seeking Fruit, &c.

Observe. These three Years. God cries out that his Patience is abused, that his Forbearance is abused: Behold these three Years I have waited, forborn; these three Years I have deferred mine Anger; Therefore will I stretch out mine hand against thee, and destroy thee; I am weary with repenting, Jer. 15. 6.

These three years. Observe, God layeth up all the time; I say, a remembrance of all the time, that a barren Fig-tree, or a fruitless Professor mispendeth in this World. As he saith also of Israel of old, forty years long was I grieved with this generation, Psal. 95. 10.

These three years, &c.

These three Seasons; Observe God remembers how many Seasons thou hast mispent: For these three Tears signify so many Seasons. And when the time of Fruit drew nigh, that is, about the Season they begin to be ripe, or that according to the Season might so have been. Barren Fig-tree, thou hast had Time, Seasons, Sermons, Ministers, Afflictions, Judgments, Mercies, and what not? and yet hast not been fruitful: Thou hast had Awakenings, Reproofs, Thearnings, Comforts, and yet hast not been fruitful: Thou hast had Patterns, Examples, Citations, Provocations, and yet hast not been fruitful. Well, God hath laid up thy three Tears with himself. He remembers every Time, every Season, every Sermon, every Minister, Affliction, Judgment, Mercy, awakening Pattern, Example, Citation, Provocation, He remembers all: As he said of Israel of old, They have tempted me these ten times, and have not hearkened to my Voice, Numb. 14. 22. And again, I remember all their Wickedness, Hos. 7. 2.

These three Tears, &c.

He seeks for the Fruit of every Season: He will not that any of his Sermons, Ministers, Afflictions, Judgments, or Mercies should be lost, or stand for insignificant things; he will have according to the benefit bestowed, 2 Chron. 32. 24, 25. Ezek. 14. 23. He hath not done without a Cause all that he hath done, and therefore he looketh for Fruit; Look to it, barren Fig-tree.

I came [seeking] Fruit.

Observe. This word [seeking] signifies a narrow search: for when a Man seeks for fruit on a Tree, he goes round it, and round it, now looking into this Bough, and then into that, he peeks into the inmost Boughs, and the lowermost Boughs, if perhaps Fruit may be thereon.

Barren Fig-tree, God will look into all thy Boughs, he will be with thee in thy Bed-fruits, thy Midnight-fruits, thy Closet-fruits, thy Family-fruits, thy Conversation-fruits, to see if there be any among all these that are fit for, or worthy of the Name of the God of Heaven. He sees what the Children of Israel do in the dark, Ezek. 8. 12. All things are open unto the Eyes of him with whom we have to do, Heb. 4. 12, 13.

Seeking Fruit on [this] Fig-tree.

I told you before, that he keeps in remembrance the Times and Seasons that the barren Professor had wickedly mispent. Now, forasmuch as he also pointeth out the Fig-tree, This Fig-tree; it sheweth that the barren Professor, above all Professors, is a continual odium in the Eyes of God. This Fig-tree, This Man Coniah, Jer. 22. 28. This People draw nigh me with their Mouth, but have removed their Hearts far from me. God knows who they are among all the thousands of Israel, that are the barren and fruitless Professors, his Lot will fall upon the Head of Achan, though he be hid among six hundred thousand Men. And he brought his Household, Man by Man, and Achan, the Son of Carmi, the Son of Zabdi, the Son of Zerah, of the Tribe of Judah, was taken, Josh. 7. 17, 18. This is the Achan, this is the Fig-tree, this is the barren Professor.

There is a Man hath an hundred Trees in his Vineyard, and at the time of the Season, he walketh into his Vineyard to see how the Trees flourish; and as he goes, and views, and pries, and observes how they are hanged with Fruit; behold, he cometh to one where he findeth naught but Leaves. Now he makes a stand, looks upon it again and again, he looks also here and there, above and below; and if after all this seeking, he finds nothing but Leaves thereon; Then he begins to cast in his mind, how he may know this Tree next Year, what stands next it, or how far 'tis off the Hedge; but if there be nothing there that may be as a Mark to know it by; then he takes his Hook, and giveth it a private Mark, (And the Lord set a Mark upon Cain, Gen. 4.) saying, Go thy ways, fruitless Fig-tree, Thou hast spent this Season in vain.

Yet doth he not cut it down, I will try it another Year; may be this was not a hitting Season. Therefore he comes again next Year to see if now it have fruit; but as he found it before, so he finds it now, barren, barren, every Year barren; he looks again, but finds no Fruit. Now he begins to have second thoughts: How! neither hit last Year, nor this. Surely the Barrenness is not in the Season, sure the fault is in the Tree. However I will spare it this Year also, but will give it a second Mark: And it may be, he toucheth it with a hot Iron, because he begins to be angry.

Well, at the third Season he comes again for Fruit, but the third Year is like the first and second, no Fruit yet; it only cumbereth the Ground. What now must be done with this Fig-tree? Why, The Lord will lop its Boughs with terror; yea, the Thickets of those Professors with Iron. I have waited, faith faith God, these three Years, I have missed of fruit these three Years: It hath been a Cumber-ground these three Years, cut it down. Precept hath been upon Precept, and Line upon Line, one Year after another, for these three Years, but no fruit can be seen, I find none, fetch out the Ax; I am sure this is the Fig-tree, I know it from the first Year, Barrenness was its sign then, Barrenness is its sign now, make it fit for the Fire. Behold, the Ax is laid to the Root of the Trees; every Tree therefore that bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down, and cast into the Fire, Matth. 3. 10.

Observe, my Brethren, God's Heart cannot stand towards a barren Fig-tree. You know thus it is with your selves: If you have a Tree in your Orchard, or Vineyard, that doth only cumber the Ground, you cannot look upon that Tree with pleasure, with complacency and delight: No, if you do but go by it, if you do but cast your Eye upon it; yea, if you do but think of that Tree, you threaten it in your Heart, saying, I will hew thee down shortly; I will to the Fire with thee shortly. And it is in vain for any to think of perswading of you to shew favour to the barren Fig-tree; and if they should perswade, your Answer is irresistible, It yields me no profit, it takes up room, and doth no good, a better may grow in its room;

Cut it down.

Thus when the godly among the Jews (Jer. 14. 17.) made Prayers, that rebellious Israel might not be cast out of the Vineyard, what saith the Answer of God? Jer. 15. 1. Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet could not my mind be towards this People; wherefore cast them out of my presence, and let them go forth.

What a Resolution is here, Moses and Samuel could do almost any thing with God in Prayer. How many times did Moses by Prayer turn away God's Judgments from even Pharaoh himself! yea, how many times did he by Prayer preserve Israel, when in the Wilderness, (Psal. 106. 3.) from the Anger and Wrath of God? Samuel is reckoned excellent this way, yea so excellent, that when Israel had done that fearful thing, as to reject the Lord, and chuse them another King, (1 Sam. 12.) he prayed, and the Lord spared, and forgave them: But yet neither Moses nor Samuel can save a barren Fig-tree. No though Moses and Samuel stood before me, that is, pleading, arguing, interceding, supplicating, and beseeching, yet could they not incline mine heart to this People;

Cut it down.

Ay, but Lord it is a Fig-tree, a Fig-tree! if it was a Thorn, or a Bramble, or a Thistle, the matter would not be much; but it is a Fig-tree, or a Vine: Well, but mark the answer of God, Ezek. 15. 2, 3. Son of Man, what is the Vine-tree, more than any Tree, or than a Branch that is among the Trees of the Forest? Shall Wood be taken thereof to do any Work? or will Men take a Pin thereof, to hang any Vessel thereon? If Trees that are set, or planted for Fruit, bring not forth that Fruit, there is betwixt them and the Trees of the Forest, no betterment at all, unless the betterment lieth in the Trees of the Wood, for they are fit to build withal; but a Fig-tree, or a Vine, if they bring not forth Fruit, yea good Fruit, they are fit for nothing at all, but to be cut down, and prepared for the fire; and so the Prophet goes on, Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel: if it serve not for Fruit, it will serve for fuel, and so the fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the middle of it is burnt.

Ay but, these Fig-trees and Vines are Church-Members, Inhabiters of Jerusalem. So was the Fig-tree mentioned in the Text; but what answer hath God prepared for these Objections? Why, Ver. 6, 7. Thus saith the Lord God, As the Vine-tree among the Trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel; so will I give the Inhabitants of Jerusalem; and I will set my face against them, they shall go from one fire, and another fire shall devour them:

Cut it down.

The Woman that delighteth in her Garden, if she have a Slip there, suppose (if it was fruitful) she would not take five Pounds for it; Tet if it bear no Fruit, if it wither, and dwindle, and die, and turn cumber-ground only, it may not stand in her Garden. Gardens and Vineyards are places for Fruit, for Fruit according to the nature of the plant or flowers. Suppose such a Slip as I told you of before, should be in your Garden, and there die: Would you let it abide in your Garden? No! away with it, away with it. The Woman comes into her Garden towards the Spring, where first she gives it a slight cast with her Eye; then she sets to gathering out the Weeds, and Nettles, and Stones; takes a Beesom and sweeps the Walks: this done, she falls to prying into her Herbs and Slips, to see if they live, to see if they are likely to grow: Now, if she comes to one that is dead, that she is confident will not grow, up she pulls that, and makes to the heap of rubbish with it, where she despisingly casts it down, and valueth it no more than a Nettle, or a Weed, or than the Dust she hath swept out of her Walks. Yea, if any that see her should say, Why do you so? The answer is ready, 'Tis dead, 'tis dead at Root: If I had let it stand, 'twould but have cumbered the ground. The strange Slips (and also also the Dead ones) they must be a Heap in the Day of Grief, and of desperate Sorrow; Isa. 17. 10, 11.

Cut it down.

There are two manner of Cuttings down;
First, When a Man is cast out of the Vineyard.

Secondly, When a Man is cast out of the World.

First, When a Man is cast out of the Vineyard. And that is done two ways.

1. By an immediate Hand of God.

2. By the Churches due Execution of the Laws and Censures which Christ for that purpose hath left with his Church.

First, God cuts down the barren Fig-tree by an immediate Hand, smiting his Roots, blasting his Branches, and so takes him away from among his People. Every branch, saith Christ, that beareth not fruit in me, he (my Father) taketh away, Joh. 15. 2. He taketh him out of the Church, He taketh him away from the Godly. There are two things by which God taketh the barren Professor from among the Children of God.

First, Strong Delusions.

Secondly, Open Profaneness.

First, By strong Delusions, such as beguile the Soul with damnable Doctrines, that swerve from Faith and Godliness; Isa. 66. 3, 4. They have chose their own Ways, saith God, and their Soul delighteth in their Abominations; I also will chuse their Delusions, and will bring their fears upon them. I will smite them with Blindness, and Hardness of Heart, and failing of Eyes; and will also suffer the Tempter to tempt and effect his hellish Designs upon them, 2 Theff. 2. 10, 11, 12. God will send them strong Delusions, that they may believe a Lie; that they all may be damned who believe not the Truth, but had pleasure in Unrighteousness.

Secondly, Sometimes God takes away a barren Professor by open Profaneness. There is one hath taken up a Profession of that worthy Name, the Lord Jesus Christ; but this Profession is but a Cloak, he secretly practiseth Wickedness: He is a Glutton, a Drunkard, or Covetous, or Unclean. Well, saith God, I will loose the Reins of this Professor, I will give him up to his vile Affections, I will loose the Reins of his Lusts before him, he shall be entangled with his beastly Lusts, he shall be overcome of ungodly Company. Thus they that turn aside to their own crooked ways, Psal. 125. 5. The Lord shall lead them forth with the Workers of Iniquity. This is God's Hand immediately; God is now dealing with this Man himself. Barren Fig-tree, hearken, Thou art crouded into a Profession, art got among the Godly, and there art a scandal to the holy and glorious Gospel; but withal so cunning, that like the Sons of Zerviah, thou art too hard for the Church; she knows not how to deal with thee. Well, saith God, I will deal with that Man my self: Ezek. 14. 7, 8. I will answer that Man my self; he that sets up his Idols in his Heart, and puts the Stumbling-block of his Iniquity before his Face, and yet comes and appears before me; I will set my face against that Man, and will make him a Sign and a Proverb; and I will cut him off from the midst of my People; and ye shall know that I am the Lord.

But, Secondly, God doth sometimes cut down the barren Fig-tree by the Church, by the Churches due Execution of the Laws and Censures, which Christ for that purpose hath left with his Church. This is the Meaning of that in Mat. 18. 1 Cor. 5. and that in 1 Tim. 1. 20. upon which now I shall not enlarge. But which way soever God dealeth with thee, O thou barren Fig-tree, whether by himself immediately, or by his Church, it amounts to one and the same. For if timely Repentance prevent not, the End of that Soul is Damnation. They are blasted, and withered, and gathered by Men, God's Enemies; and at last being cast into the fire, burning must be their end. That which beareth briars and thorns, is nigh unto cursing, whose end is to be burned, Heb. 6. 8.

And again, sometimes by cut it down, God means, cast it out of the World: Thus he cut down Nadab and Abihu, when he burned them up with fire from Heaven, Numb. 16. 31, 32, 33. Thus he cut down Corah, Dathan and Abiram, when he made the Earth to swallow them up. Thus he cut down Saul, 1 Sam. 31. 4. when he gave him up to fall upon the Edge of his own Sword, and died. Thus he cut down Ananias with Saphira his Wife, when he struck them down dead in the midst of the Congregation, Acts 5. 5, 10. I might here also discourse of Absalom, Abitophel, and Judas, who were all three hanged: The first by God's revenging Hand, the other were given up of God to be their own Executioners. These were barren and unprofitable Fig-trees, such as God took no Pleasure in, therefore he commanded to cut them down. The Psalmist saith, Psal. 58. 9. He shall take them away as with a Whirl-wind, both living, and in his Wrath.

Barren Fig-tree, hearken; God calls for the Ax, his Sword, bring it hither, here is a barren Professor, Cut him down, why cumbereth he the Ground.

Why cumbereth it the Ground.

By these words the Lord suggesteth Reasons of his Displeasure against the Barren Fig-tree; It cumbereth the Ground. The Holy Ghost doth not only take an Argument ment from its Barrenness, but because it is a Cumber-ground, Therefore cut it down; wherefore it must needs be a Provocation.

1. Because, as much as in him lieth, he disappointeth the Design of God in planting his Vineyard; I looked that it should bring forth Fruit.

2. It hath also abused his Patience, his long-suffering, his three Years Patience.

3. It hath also abused his Labour, his Pains, his Care, and Providence of Protection and Preservation: for he hedges his Vineyard, and walls it about. Cumber-ground, all these things thou abusest. He waters his Vineyard, and looks to it night and day, but all these things thou hast abused.

Further, There are other Reasons of God's Displeasure; As,

First, A Cumber-ground is a very mock and reproach to Religion, a mock and reproach to the Ways of God, to the People of God, to the Word of God, and to the Name of Religion. It is expected of all Hands, that all the Trees in the Garden of God should be fruitful; God expects Fruit, the Church expects Fruit, the World, even the World concludes that Professors should be fruitful in good Works; I say, the very World expecteth that Professors should be better than themselves: But, barren Fig-tree, thou disappointest all: Nay, hast thou not learned the wicked Ones thy Ways? Hast thou not learn'd them to be more wicked by thy Example, (but that's by the by:) Barren Fig-tree, Thou hast disappointed others, and must be disappointed thy self. Cut it down, why cumberest it the Ground?

Secondly, The Barren Fig-tree takes up the room where a better might stand; I say, it takes up the room, it keeps, so long, as it stands where it doth, a fruitful Tree out of that place, and therefore it must be cut down. Barren Fig-tree, Dost thou hear? Because the Jews stood fruitless in the Vineyards; Therefore, said God, Mat. 21. 33---41. The Kingdom of Heaven shall be taken from you, and shall be given to a Nation that shall render him their fruits in their Season. The Jews for their Barrenness were cut down, and more fruitful People put in their room. As Samuel also said to barren Saul, 1 Sam. 15. 28. The Lord hath rent the Kingdom from thee, and hath given it to thy Neighbour that is better than thou; the unprofitable Servant must be cast out, must be cut down, Mat. 25. 27.

Cumber-ground! How many hopeful, inclinable, forward People, hast thou by thy fruitless and unprofitable Life, kept out of the Vineyard of God; for thy sake have the People stumbled at Religion; By thy Life have they been kept from the Love of their own Salvation. Thou hast been also a means of hardening others, and of quenching, and killing weak beginnings. Well,

Vol. II.

Barren Fig-tree! look to thy self, (thou wilt not go to Heaven thy self, and them that would, thou hindereſt;) Thou must not always cumber the Ground, nor always hinder the Salvation of others: Thou shalt be cut down, and another shall be planted in thy room.

Thirdly, The Cumber-ground is a Sucker, he draws away the Heart and Nourishment from the other Trees. Were the Cumber-ground cut down, the other would be more fruitful; he draws away that Fattness of the Ground to himself, that would make the other more hearty and fruitful. One Sinner destroyeth much good, Eccl. 9. 18.

The Cumber-ground is a very Droan in the Hive, that eats up the Honey that should feed the labouring Bee; he is a Thief in the Candle, that wasteth the Tallow, but giveth no Light; he is the unsavoury Salt, that is fit for nought but the Dunghil. Look to it Barren Fig-tree.

And he answering, said unto him, Lord, let it alone this Year also, until I shall dig about it, and dung it; and if it bear Fruit, well; and if not, then after that, thou shalt cut it down, verse 8. 9.

THESE are the words of the Dresser of the Vineyard, who, I told you, is Jesus Christ (for he made intercession for the Transgressors.) And they contain a Petition, presented to an offended Justice, praying that a little more Time and Patience might be exercised towards the barren, cumber-ground Fig-tree.

In this Petition there are Six things considerable;

First, That Justice might be deferred. O that Justice might be deferred. Lord let it alone, &c. a while longer.

Secondly, Here is time prefixed, as a space to try if more means will cure a barren Fig-tree. Lord let it alone this Year also.

Thirdly, The means to help it, are propounded, until I shall dig about it, and dung it.

Fourthly, Here is also an insinuation of a Supposition, that by thus doing, God's Expectation may be answered, And if it bear fruit, well.

Fifthly, Here is a Supposition that the barren Fig-tree may yet abide barren, when Christ hath done what he will unto it, and if it bear fruit, &c.

Sixthly, Here is at last a Resolution, that if thou continue barren, hewing Days will come upon thee. And if it bear Fruit, well, And if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.

But to proceed according to my former Method, by way of Exposition.

Lord, let it alone this Year also.

Here is astonishing Grace indeed! astonishing Grace, I say, that the Lord Jesus should concern himself with a barren Fig-tree; that He should step in to stop the blow from a barren Fig-tree. True, He stopt the blow but for a time; But why did he stop it at all; Why did not he fetch out the Ax? Why did he not do Execution? Why did not he cut it down? Barren Fig-tree! 'tis well for thee that there is a Jesus at God's right Hand, a Jesus of that largeness of bowels, As to have compassion for a barren Fig-tree, else Justice had never let thee alone to cumber the Ground as thou hast done. When Israel also had sinned against God, down they had gone, But that Moses stood in the Breach, Exod. 32. 10. Let me alone, said God to him, that I may consume them in a Moment, and I will make of thee a great Nation. Barren Fig-tree, dost thou hear? Thou knowest not how oft the hand of Divine Justice hath been up to strike, and how many Years since thou hadst been cut down, had not Jesus caught hold of his Father's Ax. Let me alone, let me fetch my blow, or cut it down, why cumbereth it the Ground? Wilt thou not hear yet, Barren Fig-tree? Wilt thou provoke still! Thou hast wearied Men, and provoked the Justice of God; And wilt thou weary my God also? Isa. 7. 13.

Lord, let it alone this Year.

Lord, a little longer, let's not lose a Soul for want of means; I will try, I will see if I can make it fruitful, I will not beg a long Life, nor that it might still be barren, and so provoke thee. I beg for the sake of the Soul, the immortal Soul, Lord spare it one Year only, one Year longer, this Year also; If I do any Good to it, it will be in little time. Thou shalt not be over wearied with waiting, one Year and then.

Barren Fig-tree, Dost thou hear what striving there is between the Vine-dresser and the Husband-Man for thy Life, Cut it down, says one; Lord, spare it, saith the other: 'Tis a cumber-ground, saith the Father: one Year longer prays the Son, Let it alone this Year also.

Until I shall dig about it, and dung it.

The Lord Jesus by these words supposeth two things, as Causes of the want of Fruit in a barren Fig-tree, and two things he supposeth as a Remedy.

The things that are a cause of want of Fruit, are,

1. 'Tis Earth-bound; Lord, the Fig-tree is Earth-bound.

2. A want of warmer Means, of fatter Means.

Wherefore accordingly he propoundeth;

First, To loosen the Earth, to dig about it.

Secondly, And then to supply it with Dung; to dig about it, and dung it. Lord, let it alone this Year also, until I shall dig about it. I doubt it is too much Ground-bound, The Love of this World and the Deceitfulness of Riches (Luke 14.) lie too close to the Roots of the Heart of this Professor. The Love of Riches, the Love of Honours, the Love of Pleasures, are the Thorns that choak the Word; 1 John 2. 15, 16. For all that is in the World, the Lusts of the Flesh, the Lusts of the Eye, and the Pride of Life, are not of the Father, but Enmity to God; how then (where these things bind up the Heart) can there be Fruit brought forth to God? Barren Fig-tree, see how the Lord Jesus, by these very Words suggesteth the cause of thy fruitfulness of Soul. The Things of this World lie too close to thy Heart; the Earth with its things have bound up thy Roots. Thou art an Earth-bound Soul, thou art wrapp'd up in thick Clay. If any Man love the World, the Love of the Father is not in him; how then can he be fruitful in the Vineyard? This kept Judas from the Fruit of Caring for the Poor, Job. 12. 6. This kept Demas from the Fruit of Self-denial, 2 Tim. 4. 10. And this kept Ananias and Sapphira his Wife, from the goodly Fruit of Sincerity and Truth, Acts 5. 5, 10. What shall I say, These are foolish and hurtful Lusts, which drown Men in Destruction and Perdition; for the Love of Money is the Root of all Evil, 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. How then can good Fruit grow from such a Root, the Root of all Evil; Which while some covet after, they have erred from the Faith, and pierced themselves thro' with many Sorrows. It is an evil Root, nay, it is the Root of all Evil: how then can the Professor that hath such a Root, or a Root wrap'd up in such earthly things, as the Lusts, and Pleasures, and Vanities of this World, bring forth Fruit to God!

Until I shall [dig] about it.

Lord, I will loose his Roots, I will dig up this Earth, I will lay his Roots bare; my Hand shall be upon him by Sicknes, by Disappointments, by cross Providences; I will dig about him until he stands shaking and tottering, until he be ready to fall; then, if ever, he will seek to take faster hold. Thus, I say, deals the Lord Jesus oft-times with the barren Professor; he diggeth about him, he smiteth one Blow at his Heart, another Blow at his Lusts, a third at his Pleasures, a fourth at his Comforts, another at his Self-conceitedness; thus he diggeth about him: This is the way to take bad Earth from his Roots, and to loosen his Roots from the Earth. Barren Fig-tree, see here the Care, the Love, the Labour and Way which the Lord Jesus, the the Dresser of the Vineyard, is fain to take with thee, if haply thou mayest be made fruitful.

Until I shall dig about it and [dung] it.

As the Earth, by binding the Roots too closely, may hinder the Tree's being fruitful; so the want of better Means may be also a Cause thereof. And this is more than intimated by the Dresser of the Vineyard, until I shall dig about it and dung it, I will supply it with a more fruitful Ministry with a warmer Word. I will give them Pastors after mine own Heart, I will dung them: You know Dung is a more warm, more fat, more hearty, and succouring Matter than is commonly the place in which Trees are planted.

I will dig about it, and dung it, I will bring it under an Heart-awakening Ministry, the Means of Grace shall be fat, and good. I will also visit it with Heart-awakening, Heart-warming, Heart-encouraging Considerations; I will apply warm Dung to his Roots, I will strive with him by my Spirit, and give him some Tastes of the heavenly Gift, and the Power of the World to come. I am loth to lose him for want of digging; Lord, let it alone this Year also, until I shall dig about it and dung it.

And if it bear Fruit, well.

And if the Fruit of all my Labour doth make this Fig-tree fruitful, I shall count my Time, my Labour and Means well bestowed upon it; And thou also, O my God, shalt be therewith much delighted: for thou art gracious, and merciful, and repentest thee of the Evil which thou threatnest to bring upon a People.

These Words therefore inform us, that if a barren Fig-tree, a barren Professor, shall now at last bring forth Fruit to God, it shall go well with that Professor, it shall go well with that poor Soul. His former Barrenness, his former tempting of God, his Abuse of God's Patience, and long Suffering, his mispending Year after Year, shall now be all forgiven him. Yea, God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ will now pass by and forget all, and say, Well done, at the last. When I say to the Wicked, O wicked Man, thou shalt surely die; if he then do that which is lawful and right, if he walk in the Statutes of Life, without committing Iniquity, he shall surely live, he shall not die, Ezek. 3. 3.

Barren Fig-tree, dost thou hear! the Ax is laid to thy Roots, the Lord Jesus prays God to spare thee: Hath he been digging about thee? Hath he been dunging of thee? O barren Fig-tree, now thou art come to the Point; if thou shalt now become good, if thou shalt after a gracious manner suck in the Gospel-dung, and if thou shalt bring forth Fruit unto God, well; but if not, the Fire is the last, Fruit, or the Fire; Fruit or the Fire, Barren Fig-tree. If it bear Fruit, well.

And if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.

And if not, &c. The Lord Jesus by this If, giveth us to understand that there is a Generation of Professors in the World, that are incurable, that will not, that cannot repent, nor be profited by the means of Grace: A Generation, I say, that will retain a Profession, but will not bring forth Fruit: A Generation that will wear out the Patience of God, Time and Tide, Threatnings and Intercessions, Judgments and Mercies, and after all will be unfruitful.

O the desperate wickedness that is in thy Heart! Barren Professor, Dost thou hear, the Lord Jesus stands yet in doubt about thee! There is an if stands yet in the way. I say, the Lord Jesus stands yet in doubt about thee, whether or no at last thou wilt be good; whether he may not labour in vain; whether his digging and dunging will come to more than lost Labour. I gave her Space to repent, and she repented not, Rev. 2. 21. I digged about it, I dunged it; I gained Time, and supplied it with Means; but I laboured herein in vain, and spent my Strength for nought and in vain. Dost thou hear, Barren Fig-tree! there is yet a Question, Whether 'twill be well with thy Soul at last?

And if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.

There is nothing more exasperating to the Mind of a Man, than to find all his kindness and favour flighted: Neither is the Lord Jesus so provoked with any thing, as when Sinners abuse his Means of Grace, if it be barren and fruitless under my Gospel; if it turn my Grace into Wantonness; if after digging, and dunging, and waiting, it yet remain unfruitful, I will let thee cut it down.

Gospel-means applied, is the last Remedy for a barren Professor; if the Gospel, if the Grace of the Gospel will not do, there can be nothing expected, but cut it down. Then after that thou shalt cut it down.

O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the Prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy Children together, as an Hen gathereth her Chickens under her Wings, and ye would not? Therefore your houses are left unto you desolate, Mat. 23. 37, 38. Yet it cannot be, but that this Lord Jesus, who at first did put a stop to the Execution of his Father's Justice, because he desired to try more Means with the Fig-tree: I say, it cannot be, but that an Heart so full of Compassion, as his is, should be touched, to behold

hold this Professor must now be cut down; Luke 19. 41, 42. And when he was come near, he beheld the City, and wept over it, saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day the things that belong to thy Peace, but now they are hid from thine Eyes.

After that, thou shalt cut it down.

When Christ giveth thee over, there is no Intercessor, no Mediator, no more Sacrifice for Sin: all is gone but Judgment, but the Ax, but a certain fearful looking for of Judgment, and fiery Indignation, which shall devour the Adversaries, Heb. 10. 26, 27, 28.

Barren Fig-tree, take heed that thou comest not to these last words, for these words are a give-up, a cast-up, a cast up of a cast away; after that thou shalt cut it down. They are as much as if Christ had said, Father, I begg'd for more time for this barren Professor; I begged until I should dig about it and dung it: But now, Father, the time is out, the Year is ended, the Summer is ended, and no good done. I have also tried with my Means, with the Gospel, I have digged about it; I have laid also the fat and hearty Dung of the Gospel to it; but all comes to nothing. Father, I deliver up this Professor to thee again, I have done, I have done all, I have done praying, and endeavouring, I will hold the Head of thine Ax No longer: Take him into the Hands of Justice, do Justice, do the Law, I will never beg for him more. After that thou shalt cut it down. Wo unto them when I depart from them, Hof. 9. 12. Now is this Professor left naked indeed, naked to God, naked to Satan, naked to Sin, naked to the Law, naked to Death, naked to Hell, naked to Judgment, and naked to the Gripes of a Guilty Conscience, and to the Torment of that Worm that never dies, and to that Fire that never shall be quenched. Heb. 12. 25. See that ye refuse not him that speaketh; for if they escaped not, who refused him that spake on Earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from Heaven. From this brief Pass through this Parable, you have these Two general Observations;

First, That even then when the Justice of God cries out, I cannot endure to wait on this barren Professor any longer: Then Jesus Christ intercedes for a little more Patience, and a little more striving with this Professor, if possible he may make him a fruitful Professor. Lord, let it alone this Year also, until I shall dig about it and dung it, and if it bear Fruit, well, &c.

Secondly, There are some Professors whose Day of Grace will end with, cut it down, with Judgment; when Christ, by his means, hath been used for their Salvation.

The First of these Observations I shall pass, and not meddle at all therewith;

But shall briefly speak to the Second, to wit,

That there are some Professors, whose day of Grace will end with, cut it down, with Judgment, when Christ by his means hath been used for their Salvation.

This the Apostle sheweth in that third Chapter of his Epistle to the Hebrews; where he tells us, that the People of the Jews, after a forty Years Patience, and endeavour to do them good by the means appointed for that purpose, their end was to be cut down, or excluded the Land of Promise, for their final incredulity, So we see they could not enter in, because of Unbelief. Wherefore saith he, I was grieved with that generation, and said, they do always err in their Hearts, and they have not known my ways: So I swear in my Wrath, they shall not enter into my Rest. As who should say, I would they should have entered in, and for that purpose I brought them out of Egypt, led them through the Sea, and taught them in the Wilderness, but they did not answer my Work nor Designs in that Matter; wherefore, they shall not, I swear they shall not; I swore in my Wrath they should not enter into my Rest: Here is cutting down with Judgment. So again, Chap. 4. he saith, As I have sworn in my Wrath, if they shall enter into my Rest, although the Works were finished from the foundation of the World, Heb. 4. 2, 3, 4. This word [if] is the same with [they shall not] in the Chapter before. And where he saith, Although the Works were finished from the foundation of the World. He giveth us to understand, that what preparations soever are made for the Salvation of Sinners, and of how long Continuance soever they are, yet the God-tempting, God-provoking, and fruitless Professor is like to go without a share therein; although the Works were finish'd from the foundation of the World, Jude 5, 6. I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that the Lord having saved the People out of the Land of Egypt, afterwards destroyed them that believed not. And the Angels that kept not their first Estate, but left their own Habitation, be hath reserved in everlasting Chains under Darkness, unto the Judgment of the great Day. Here is an Instance to purpose, an Instance of Men and Angels: Men saved out of the Land of Egypt, and in their Journey towards Canaan, the Type of Heaven [cut down] Angels created and placed in the Heavens in great Estate and Principality; yet both these, because unfruitful to God in their places, were cut down, the Men destroyed by God, (for so saith the Text) and the Angels reserved in everlasting Chains under Darkness, to the Judgment of the great Day.

Now, in my handling of this Point, I shall discourse of the cutting down, or the Judgment here denounced, as it respecteth the the doing of it by God's Hand immediately, and that too, with respect to his casting them out of the World; and not as it respecteth an Act of the Church, &c. And as to this cutting down, or Judgment, it must be concluded, that it cannot be before the Day of Grace be past with the Fig-tree. But according to the Observation, There are some Professors whose Day of Grace will end, with cut it down; and according to the words of the Text, Then [after that] thou shalt cut it down. After that, that is, after all my Attempts and Endeavours to make it fruitful, after I have left it, given it over, done with it, and have resolved to bestow no more Days of Grace, Opportunities of Grace, and Means of Grace upon it; then, after that, thou shalt cut it down.

Besides, the giving up of the Fig-tree, is before the Execution. Execution is not always presently upon the Sentence giving; for after that a convenient Time is thought on, and then is cutting down: And so it is here in the Text. The Decree, that he shall perish, is gathered from its continuing fruitless quite through the last Year, from its continuing fruitless at the end of all Endeavours: But cutting down is not yet, for that comes with an after-word; Then after that thou shalt cut it down.

So then, that I may orderly proceed with the Observation, I must lay down these two Propositions.

Prop. 1. That the Day of Grace ends with some Men before God takes them out of this World. And,

Prop. 2. The Death, or cutting down of such Men, will be dreadful. For this cut it down, when it is understood in the largest sense, (as here indeed it ought) it sheweth, not only the Wrath of God against a Man's Life in this World, but his Wrath against him Body and Soul. And is as much as to say, cut him off from all the Privileges and Benefits that come by Grace, both in this World, and that which is to come.

But to proceed, The Day of Grace ends with some Men, before God taketh them out of this World.

I shall give you some instances of this, and so go on to the last Proposition.

First, I shall instance, Cain; Cain was a Professor, (Gen. 4. 3.) a Sacrificer, a Worshipper of God; yea, the first Worshipper that we read of after the Fall; but his Grapes were wild Ones, Gen. 4. 5, 8. His Works are Evil, he did not do what he did, from true Gospel-motives; therefore God disallowed his Work: at this his Countenance falls: Wherefore he envies his Brother, disputes him, takes his Opportunity and kills him. Now in that day that he did this Act, were the Heavens closed up against him, and that himself did smartingly and fearfully feel, when God made inquisition for the Blood of Abel; And now cursed (said God) shalt thou be from the Earth, which hath opened her Mouth to receive thy Brother's Blood from thy Hand, &c. Gen. 4. 8, 11, 12, 13, 14. And Cain said, My Punishment is greater than I can bear. Mine Iniquity is greater than that it may be forgiven. Behold, thou hast driven me out this Day from the Face of the Earth, and from thy Face shall I be hid. Now thou art cursed, saith God. Thou hast driven me out this Day, saith Cain, and from thy Face shall I be hid; I shall never more have Hope in thee, Smile from thee, nor expect Mercy at thy Hand. Thus therefore, Cain's Day of Grace ended, and the Heavens, with God's own Heart, were shut up against him; yet after this, he lived long, Gen. 4. 10. Cutting down was not come yet; after this he lived to marry a Wife, verse 17. to beget a cursed Brood, to build a City, (and what else I know not) all which could not be quickly done: Wherefore Cain might live after the Day of Grace was past with him, several hundred of Years.

Vol. II.

Secondly, I shall instance Ishmael, Gen. 17. 25, 26. Ishmael was a Professor, was brought up in Abraham's Family, and was circumcised at thirteen Years of Age, Gen. 17. 12. But he was the Son of the Bond-woman, he brought not forth good Fruit, he was a wild Professor: For all his Religion, he would scoff at those that were better than himself. Well, upon a Day his Brother Isaac was weaned, at which time his Father made a Feast, and rejoiced before the Lord, for that he had given him the promised Son; at this Ishmael mocked them, their Son, and godly rejoicing. Then came the Spirit of God upon Sarah, and she cried, Cast him out, cast out this Bond-woman and her Son; for the Son of this Bond-woman shall not be Heir with my Son, with Isaac, Gen. 21. 9, 10, 11. Now Paul to the Galatians, (Chap. 4. 29, 30, 31.) makes this casting out to be, not only a casting out of Abraham's Family, but a casting out also from a Lot with the Saints in Heaven. Also Moses giveth us a notable proof thereof, in saying, that when he died, he was gathered to his People, Gen. 25. 17. his People by his Mother's side, for he was reckoned from her, the Son of Hagar, the Son of the Bond-woman. Now she came of the Egyptians, Gen. 21. 9. So that he was gathered when he died, notwithstanding his Profession, to the place that Pharaoh and his Host were gathered to, who were drowned in the Red Sea; these were his People, and he was of them, both by Nature and Disposition, by persecuting as they did. But now, When did the Day of Grace end with this Man? Observe, and I will shew you: Ishmael was thirteen years old when he was circumcised; and then was Abraham ninety years old and nine, Gen. 17. 24, 25, 26. the next Year Isaac was was born. So that Ishmael was now fourteen Years of Age. Now when Isaac was weaned (suppose he suck'd four Years) by that account, The Day of Grace must be ended with Ishmael, by that time he was eighteen Years old, Gen. 25, 12, &c. For that day he mocked, that day it was said, Cast him out; and of that casting out, the Apostle makes what I have said. Beware ye young barren Professors. Now Ishmael lived an hundred and nineteen Years after this, in great tranquillity and honour with Men: After this he also begat twelve Princes, even after his Day of Grace was past.

Thirdly, I shall instance Esau, Gen. 25, 27, &c. Esau also was a Professor, he was born unto Isaac, and circumcised according to the custom: But Esau was a game-some Professor, an Huntsman, a Man of the Field; also he was wedded to his Lusts, which he did also venture to keep, rather than the Birth-right. Well, upon a Day, when he came from hunting, and was faint, he sold his Birth-right to Jacob his Brother. Now the Birth-right, in those days, had the Promise and Blessing annexed to it. Yea, they were so entailed in this, that the one could not go without the other, wherefore the Apostle's Caution is here of weight; Heb. 12. 16, 17. Take heed, faith he, lest there be among you a Fornicator, or profane Person as Esau, who for one morsel of Meat sold his Birth-right, for ye know how that afterwards, when he would have inherited the Blessing, he was rejected; for he found no place of Repentance, though he sought it carefully with Tears. Now the ending of Esau's Day of Grace is to be reckoned from his selling of his Birthright: For there the Apostle points it, lest there be among you any, that like Esau, sells his Birthright: for then goes hence the Blessing also.

But Esau sold his Birthright long before his Death. Twenty Years after this, Jacob was with Laban, (Gen. 31. 41. & 32. 6.) and when he returned home, his Brother Esau met him. Further, after this when Jacob dwelt again some time with his Father, then Jacob and Esau buried him. I suppose, (Gen. 35. 28, 29.) He might live above forty, yea, for ought I know, above four-score years after he had sold his Birthright, and so consequently had put himself out of the Grace of God.

Three things I would further note upon these three Professors.

First, Cain an angry Professor, Ishmael a mocking one, Esau a lustful game-some one: Three Symptoms of a barren Professor. For he that can be angry, and that can mock, and that can indulge his Lusts, cannot bring forth fruit to God.

Secondly, The Day of Grace ended with these Professors at that time when they committed some grievous Sin; Cain's, when he killed his Brother; Ishmael's, when he mocked at Isaac, &c. and Esau, when out of love to his Lusts, he despised, and sold his Birth-right. Beware, barren Professor; Thou may'st do that in half a Quarter of an Hour, from the Evil of which thou may'st not be delivered for ever and ever.

Thirdly, Yet these three, after their Day of Grace was over, lived better Lives, as to outward Things, than ever they did before. Cain, after this, was Lord of a City, Gen. 4. 17. Ishmael was after this, Father of twelve Princes, Gen. 25. 16. and Esau after this, told his Brother, I have enough, my Brother, keep that thou hast to thy self, Chap. 33. 8, 9. Ease, and Peace, and a prosperous Life in outwards, is no Sign of the Favour of God to a barren and fruitless Professor; but rather of his Wrath, that thereby he may be capable to treasure up more Wrath, against the Day of Wrath, and Revelation of the righteous Judgment of God.

Let thus much serve for the Proof of the first Proposition, namely, That the Day of Grace ends with some Men, before God takes them out of this World.

Now then, to shew you, by some Signs, how you may know that the Day of Grace is ended, or near to ending with the barren Professor; And after that thou shalt cut it down.

First, He that hath stood it out against God, and that hath withstood all those means for Fruit, that God hath used for the making of him (if it might have been) a fruitful Tree in his Garden, he is in this Danger; and this indeed is the Sum of the Parable: The Fig-tree here mentioned, was blessed with the Application of means, had time allowed it to receive the Nourishment; but it out-stood, with-stood, over-stood All, All that the Husband-man did, All that the Vine-dresser did.

Signs of being past Grace.

But a little distinctly to particularize in four or five Particulars:

First Sign, The Day of Grace is like to be past, when a Professor hath withstood, abused, and worn out God's Patience, then he is in danger, this is a Provocation, then God cries, Cut it down. There are some Men that steal into a Profession, no body knows how; even as this Fig-tree was brought into the Vineyard, by other Hands than God's; and there they abide liveless, graceless, careless, and without any good Conscience to God at all. Perhaps they came in for the Loaves, for a Trade, for Credit, for a Blind; or it may be to stifle and choak the Checks, and grinding Pangs of an awakened and disquieted Conscience. Now having obtain'd their purpose, like the Sinners of Sion, they are at ease, and secure; saying, like Agag, 1 Sam. 15. 32. Surely the Bitterness of Death is past; I am well, shall be saved, and go to Heaven: Thus

Thus in these vain Conceits they spend a Year, two, or three; not remembering that at every Season of Grace, and at every Opportunity of the Gospel, the Lord comes seeking Fruit. Well, Sinner, well barren Fig-tree, this is but a course Beginning; God comes for Fruit. What have I here, saith God, what a Fig-tree is this, that hath stood this Year in my Vineyard, and brought me forth no Fruit! I will cry unto him, Professor! Barren Fig-tree, be fruitful! I look for Fruit, I expect Fruit, I must have Fruit, therefore bethink thy self. At these the Professor pauses; but these are Words, not Blows, therefore off goes this Consideration from the Heart: When God comes the next Year, he finds him still as he was, a barren, fruitless Cumber-ground. And now again he complains, here are two Years gone, and no Fruit appears; well, I will defer mine Anger for my Name sake, Isa. 48. 9. I will defer mine Anger for my Praise, I will refrain from thee, that I cut thee not off (as yet.) I will wait, I will yet wait to be Gracious. But this helps not, this hath not the least Influence upon the barren Fig-tree, Tush, saith he, here is no Threatning: God is merciful, he will defer his Anger, Isa. 30. 18. He waits to be gracious: I am not yet afraid. O how ungodly Men, that are at unawares crept into the Vineyard, how do they turn the Grace of our God into Lasciviousness! Well, he comes the third Year for Fruit, as he did before, but still he finds but a barren Fig-tree; No Fruit: Now he cries out again, O thou Dresser of my Vineyard, come hither, here's a Fig-tree hath stood these three Years in my Vineyard, and hath at every Season disappointed my Expectation, for I have looked for Fruit in vain; Cut it down, my Patience is worn out, I shall wait on this Fig-tree no longer.

2. And now he begins to shake the Fig-tree with his Threatnings; fetch out the Ax. Now the Ax is Death, Death therefore is called for; Death, come, smite me this Fig-tree. And withal the Lord shakes this Sinner, and whirls him upon a Sick-Bed, saying, Take him Death, he hath abused my Patience and Forbearance, not remembering that it should have led him to Repentance, and to the Fruits thereof. Death, fetch away this Fig-tree to the Fire, fetch this barren Professor to Hell. At this, Death comes with grim Looks into the Chamber, yea and Hell follows with him to the Bed-side, and both stare this Professor in the Face, yea, begin to lay Hands upon him; one smiting him with Pains in his Body, with Head-ach, Heart-ach, Back-ach, Shortness of Breath, Fainting Qualms, Trembling of Joints, Stopping at the Chest, and almost all the Symptoms of a Man past all Recovery. Now while Death is thus tormenting the Body, Hell is doing with the Mind and Conscience, striking them with its Pains, casting Sparks of Fire in thither, wounding with Sorrows and Fears of everlasting Damnation, the Spirit of this poor Creature: And now he begins to bethink himself, and to cry to God for Mercy; Lord, spare me, Lord, spare me. Nay, saith God, you have been a Provocation to me these three Years. How many times have you disappointed me? How many Seasons have you spent in vain? How many Sermons and other Mercies did I of my Patience afford you? but to no purpose at all, Take him Death. O good Lord, saith the Sinner, Spare me but this once; Raise me but this once. Indeed I have been a barren Professor, and have stood to no purpose at all in thy Vineyard: But spare! O spare this one time, I beseech thee, and I will be better. Away, Away, you will not. I have tried you these three Years already, you are nought; if I should recover you again, you would be as bad as you was before (and all this Talk is while Death stands by.) The Sinner cries again, Good Lord, try me this once, let me get up again this once, and see if I do not mend. But will you promise me to mend? Yes indeed, Lord, and vow it too; I will never be so bad again, I will be better. Well, saith God, Death, let this Professor alone for this time. I will try him a while longer, he hath promised, he hath vowed that he will amend his ways. It may be he will mind to keep his Promises. Vows are solemn Things, it may be he may fear to break his Vows: Arise from off thy Bed; and now God lays down his Ax. At this the poor Creature is very thankful, praises God, and fawns upon him, shews as if he did it heartily, and calls to others to thank him too. He therefore riseth as one would think, to be a New-creature indeed. But by that he hath put on his Clothes, is come down from his Bed, and ventured into the Yard, or Shop, and there sees how all things are gone to Sixes and Sevens, he begins to have second Thoughts: and says to his Folks, What have you all been doing? How are all things out of Order? I am I cannot tell what behind-hand; one may see if a Man be but a little a to-side, that you have neither Wisdom, nor Prudence to order things: And now, instead of seeking to spend the rest of his time to God, he doubleth his Diligence after this World. Alas, all must not be lost, we must have provident Care: And thus quite forgetting the Sorrows of Death, the Pains of Hell, the Promises and Vows which he made to God to be better: Because Judgment was not (now) speedily executed, therefore the Heart of this poor Creature is fully set in him to do Evil.

These Things proving ineffectual, God takes hold of his Ax again, sends Death to a Wife, to a Child, to his Cattel, (your young Men have I slain, and taken away your Horses, Amos 4. 9, 10.) I will blast him, cross him, disappoint him, and cast him him down, and will set my self against him, in all that he putteth his Hand unto. At this the poor barren Professor cries out again, Lord, I have sinned, spare me once more, I beseech thee. O take not away the Desire of mine Eyes, spare my Children, bless me in my Labours, and I will mend, and be better. No, saith God, you lyed to me last time, I will trust you in this no longer, and withal he tumbleth the Wife, the Child, the Estate, into a Grave.

And then returns to his Place, till this Professor more unfeignedly acknowledgeth his Offence, Hos. 5. 14, 15.

At this the poor Creature is afflicted and distressed, Rents his Cloaths, and begins to call the breaking of his Promise and Vows to mind, he mourns and prays, and like Abab, a while walks softly, at the Remembrance of the Justness of the Hand of God upon him. And now he renews his Promises; Lord, try me this one time more, take off thy Hand and see; They go far that never turn. Well, God spareth him again, sets down his Ax again; Many times he did deliver them, but they provoked him with their Counsels, and were brought low for their Iniquities, Psal. 106. 43. Now they seem to be thankful again, and are as if they were resolved to be godly indeed. Now they read, they pray, they go to Meetings, and seem to be serious a pretty while, but at last they forget. Their Lusts prick them, fuitable Temptations present themselves: Wherefore they turn to their own crooked ways again. Psal. 78, 34, 36. When he slew them, then they sought him, and returned early after God, nevertheless they did flatter him with their Mouth, and lyed unto him with their Tongue.

4. Yet again, The Lord will not leave this Professor, but will take up his Ax again, and will put him under a more Heart-searching Ministry, a Ministry that shall search him, and turn him over and over; a Ministry that shall meet with him, as Elijah met with Abab, in all his Acts of Wickedness (and now the Ax is laid to the Roots of the Trees.) Besides, this Ministry, doth not only search the Heart, but presenteth the Sinner with the Golden Rays of the glorious Gospel; Now is Christ Jesus set forth evidently, now, is Grace displayed sweetly; now, now are the Promises broken like Boxes of Ointment to the perfuming of the whole Room. But alas, there is yet no Fruit on this Fig-tree. While his Heart is searching, he wrangles; while the glorious Grace of the Gospel is unvailing, this Professor wags and is wanton, gathers up some Scraps thereof, Tastes the good Word of God, and the Powers of the World to come, Jude 4. Drinketh in the Rain that comes oft upon him, Heb. 6. 3---7, 8. But bringeth not forth Fruit meet for him, whose Gospel it is; takes no heed to walk in the Law of the Lord God of Israel with all his Heart, 2 Kings 10. 31. but counteth that the Glory of the Gospel consisteth in Talk and Shew, and that our Obedience thereto, is a matter of Speculation; that good Works lie in good Words, and if they can finely talk, they think they bravely please God. They think the Kingdom of God consisteth only in Word, not in Power: and thus proveth ineffectual this Fourth Means also.

5. Well, Now the Ax begins to be heaved higher, for now indeed God is ready to smite the Sinner, yet before he will strike the stroak, he will try one way more at last, and if that misseth, down goes the Fig-tree. Now this last way is to tug and strive with this Professor by his Spirit. Wherefore the Spirit of the Lord is now come to him: But not always to strive with Man, Gen. 6. 8. yet a while he will strive with him, he will awaken, he will convince, he will call to remembrance former Sins, former Judgments, the breach of former Vows and Promises, the mispending of former Days; he will also present perswasive Arguments, encouraging Promises, dreadful Judgments, the shortness of time to repent in; and that there is hope if he come. Further, he will shew him the certainty of Death, and of the Judgment to come; yea, He will pull and strive with this Sinner. But, behold, the mischief now lies here, here is tugging and striving on both Sides. The Spirit convinces, the Man turns a deaf Ear to God; the Spirit saith, Receive my Instruction and live; but the Man pulls away his Shoulder; the Spirit shews him whither he is going, but the Man closeth his Eyes against it; the Spirit offereth violence, the Man strives and resists, They have done despite unto the Spirit of Grace, Heb. 10. 29. The Spirit parlieth a second time, and urgeth Reasons of a new Nature; But the Sinner answereth, No, I have loved strangers, and after them I will go, Amos 4. 6, to 12. At this God's Fury comes up into his Face, now he comes out of his holy Place, and is terrible: now He swareth in his Wrath, they shall never enter into his Rest; Ezek. 24. 13. I exercised towards you my Patience, yet you have not turned unto me, saith the Lord. I smote you in your Person, in your Relations, in your Estate, yet you have not returned unto me, saith the Lord. In thy Filthiness is Lewdness, because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged; thou shalt not be purged from thy Filthiness any more, till I cause my Fury to rest upon thee. Cut it down, why doth it cumber the Ground?

The Second Sign, That such a Professor is almost (if not quite) past Grace, is, When God hath given him over, or lets him alone, and suffers him to do any thing, and that without controul, helpeth him not either in works of Holiness, or in Straits and Difficulties. Ephraim is joyned to Idols, let him him alone, Hof. 4. 17. Wo be to them when I depart from them. I will laugh at their Calamities, and will mock when their Fear cometh, Prov. 1. 24, to 29.

Barren Fig-tree, thou hast heretofore been digged about, and duned, God's Mattock hath heretofore been at thy Roots, Gospel dung hath heretofore been applied to thee; thou hast heretofore been strove with, convinced, awakened, made to taste and see, and cry, O the Blessedness! Thou hast heretofore been met with under the Word; thy Heart hath melted, thy Spirit hath fallen, thy Soul hath trembled, and thou hast felt something of the Power of the Gospel. But thou hast sinned, thou hast provoked the Eyes of his Glory; thy Iniquity is found to be hateful, and now perhaps God hath left thee, given thee up, and lets thee alone.

Heretofore thou wast tender, thy Conscience startled at the Temptation to Wick- edness, for thou wert taken off from the pollutions of the World, through the know- ledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, 2 Pet. 2. 20, 21, 22. but that very Vomit that once thou wert turned from, now thou lappedst up (with the Dog in the Proverb) again, and that very Mire that once thou seemest to be washed from, in that very Mire thou now art tumbling afresh. But to particularize, there are three Signs of a Man's being given over of God.

1. When he is let alone in sinning, when the reins of his Lusts are loosed, and he given up to them. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate Mind, to do those things which are not convenient; being filled with all unrighteousness, Rom. 1. 28, 29. Seest thou a Man that heretofore had the knowledge of God, and that had some awe of Majesty upon him; I say, seest thou such an one, sporting himself in his own deceivings, Rom. 1. 30, 31. turning the Grace of our God into Lasciviousness, and walking after his own ungodly Lusts; his Judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and his Damnation slumbereth not, 2 Pet. 2. 13. Dost thou hear, barren Professor? It is astonishing to see, how those that once seemed Sons of the Morning, and were making Preparations for eternal Life, now at last, for the Rottenness of their Hearts, by the just Judgment of God, to be permitted, being past feeling, to give themselves over unto Lasciviousness, to work all Uncleanness with Greediness, Eph. 4. 18, 19. A great number of such were in the first Gospel-days; against whom Peter, and Jude, and John pronounce the heavy Judgment of God. Peter and Jude couple them with the fallen Angels, 2 Pet. 2. 3, to 8. and John forbids that Prayer be made for them, because that is happened unto them, that hath happened to the fallen Ange's that fell, Jude 5, 6, 7, 8. Who for forsaking their first State, and for leaving their own Habitation, are reserved in Chains under everlasting Darkness, unto the Judgment of the great Day. Barren Fig-tree; dost thou hear?

First, These are beyond all Mercy.

Secondly, These are beyond all Promises.

Thirdly, These are beyond all hopes of Repentance.

Fourthly, These have no Intercessor, nor any more share in a Sacrifice for Sin.

Fifthly, For these there remains nothing but a fearful looking for of Judgment.

Sixthly, Wherefore these are the true Fugitives and Vagabonds, that being left of God, of Christ, of Grace, and of the Promise, and beyond all hope, wander and straggle to and fro, even as the Devil, their Associate, until their time shall come to die, or until they descend in Battel, and per- ish.

2. Wherefore they are let alone in hear- ing. If these at any time come under the Word, there is for them no God, no favour of the means of Grace, no stirrings of Heart, no pity for themselves, no love to their own Salvation. Let them look on this hand or that, there they see such effects of the Word in others, as produceth Signs of Repentance, and Love to God and his Christ, These Men only have their Backs bowed down alway, Rom. 11. 10. These Men only, have the Spirit of slumber, Eyes that they should not see, and Ears that they should not hear to this very Day, Eccl. 8. 10. Wherefore as they go to the place of the Holy; so they come from the place of the Holy, and soon are forgotten in the Places where they so did. Only they reap this Damage, They Treasure up Wrath against the Day of Wrath, and Revelation of the righteous Judgment of God, Rom. 2. 3, 4, 5. Look to it barren Professor.

3. If he be visited after the common way of Mankind, either with Sicknes, Distress, or any kind of Calamity, still no God ap- peareth, no sanctifying Hand of God, no special Mercy is mixed with the Affliction. But he falls sick, and grows well, like the Beast; or is under distress, as Saul, who when he was engaged by the Philistines, was forsaken and left of God. 1 Sam. 28. 4, 5, 6. And the Philistines gathered themselves toge- ther, and came and pitched in Shunem; and Saul gathered all Israel together, and they pitch- ed in Gilboa: And when Saul saw the Host of the Philistines, he was afraid, and his Heart greatly trembled. And when Saul enquired of the Lord, the Lord answered him no more, neither by Dreams, nor by Urim, nor by Prophets. The Lord answered him no more, he had done with him, cast him off, and rejected him, and left him to stand and fall with his Sins by himself. But of this more in the Conclusion, therefore I here forbear.

4. These Men may go whither they will, do what they will, they may range from Opinion to Opinion, from Notion to No- tion, tion, from Sect to Sect, but are stedfast no where, they are left to their own Uncertainties: They have not Grace to establish their Hearts, and though some of them have boasted themselves of this Liberty, yet Jude call them wandering Stars, to whom is reserved the Blackness of Darkness for ever, Jude 13. They are left, as I told you before, to be Fugitives and Vagabonds in the Earth, to wander every where, but to abide no where, until they shall descend to their own Place, (Acts 1. 5.) with Cain and Judas, Men of the same Fate with themselves.

A Third Sign that such a Professor is quite past Grace, is, When his Heart is grown so hard, so stony and impenetrable, that nothing will pierce it. Barren Fig-tree, dost thou consider? A hard and impenitent Heart is the Curse of God. A Heart that cannot repent, is instead of all Plagues at once; and hence it is that God said of Pharaoh, Exod. 9. 14. when he spake of delivering him up in the Greatness of his Anger, I will at this Time, saith he, send all my Plagues upon thy Heart.

To some Men that have grievously sinned under a Profession of the Gospel, God giveth this Token of his Displeasure, they are denied the Power of Repentance, their Heart is bound, they cannot repent: It is impossible that they should ever repent should they live a thousand Years. It is impossible for those Fall-aways to be renewed again unto Repentance, seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to open Shame, Heb. 6. 4, 5, 6. Now to have the Heart so hardened, so judicially hardened, this is as a Bar put in by the Lord God against the Salvation of this Sinner. This was the burden of Spira's Complaint, I cannot do it: O now I cannot do it.

This Man sees what he hath done, what should help him, and what will become of him, yet he cannot repent; he pulled away his Shoulder before, he shut up his Eyes before, and in that very Posture God left him, and so he stands to this very Day. I have had a fancy, that Lot's Wife, when she was turned into a Pillar of Salt, (Gen. 19. 26.) stood yet looking over her Shoulder, or else with her Face towards Sodom; as the Judgment caught her, so it bound her, and left her a Monument of God's Anger to after Generations.

We read of some that are seared with an hot Iron, and that are past feeling, for so seared Persons, in seared Parts are: Their Conscience is seared, 1 Tim. 4. 2. The Conscience is the thing that must be touched with feeling Fear and Remorse, if ever any good be done to those whose Conscience is worse than that, that is fast asleep in Sin, Eph. 4. 19. For that Conscience that is fast asleep, may yet be effectually awakened and saved; but that Conscience that is seared, dried, as it were, into a Cinder, can never have sense, feeling, or the least regret in this World. Barren Fig-tree, hearken, judicial hardening is dreadful. There is a Difference betwixt that Hardness of Heart that is incident to all Men, and that which comes upon some as a special Judgment of God: And although all kind of Hardness of Heart, in some sense, may be called a Judgment, yet to be hardened with this second kind, is a Judgment peculiar only to them that perish; an Hardness that is sent as a Punishment, for the Abuse of Light received, for a Reward of Apostacy.

This Judicial Hardness is discovered from that which is incident to all Men, in these Particulars:

1. It is an Hardness that comes after some great Light received; Because of some great Sin committed against that Light, and the Grace that gave it. Such Hardness as Pharaoh had, after the Lord had wrought wonderously before him: Such Hardness as the Gentiles had, a Hardness which darkened the Heart, a Hardness which made their Minds reprobate. This Hardness is also the same with that the Hebrews are cautioned to beware of (Heb. 3. 7, &c.) an Hardness that is caused by Unbelief, and a departing from the living God; an Hardness completed thro' the Deceitfulness of Sin: Such as that in the Provocation, of whom God sware, that they should not enter into his Rest. 'Twas this kind of Hardness also that both Cain, and Ishmael, and Esau were hardened with, after they had committed their great Transgressions.

2. It is the greatest kind of Hardness, and hence they are said to be harder than a Rock, Jer. 5. 3. or than an Adamant, Zec. 7. 13. that is, harder than Flint. So hard that nothing can enter.

3. It is an Hardness given in much Anger, and to bind the Soul up in an Impossibility of Repentance.

4. It is an Hardness therefore which is incurable, of which a Man must die and be damned. Barren Professor, hearken to this

A fourth Sign that such a Professor is quite past Grace, is, when he fortifies his hard Heart against the tenour of God's Word, Job 9. 4, &c. This is called hardening themselves against God, and turning of the Spirit against him. As thus, When after a Profession of Faith in the Lord Jesus, and of the Doctrine that is according to Godliness, they shall embolden themselves in courses of Sin, by promising themselves that they shall have Life and Salvation notwithstanding. Barren Professor, hearken to this. This Man is called, (Deut. 29. 18.) A Root that beareth Gall and Wormwood, or a poisonous Herb, such an one as is abominated of God; yea the abhorred of his Soul. For this Man saith, v. 19. I shall have Peace, though I walk in the Imagination or Stubbornness

Stubbornness of my Heart, to add Drunkenness to Thirst; an Opinion flat against the whole Word of God, yea against the very Nature of God himself. Wherefore he adds, Deut. 19. 20. Then the Anger of the Lord, and his Jealousy shall smite against that Man; and all the Curses that are written in God's Book shall lie upon him, and God shall blot out his Name from under Heaven.

Yea, that Man shall not fail to be effectually destroyed, saith the Text, ver. 21. The Lord shall separate that Man unto evil, out of all the Tribes of Israel, according to all the Curses of the Covenant.

He shall separate him unto Evil; He shall give him up, he shall leave him to his Heart; he shall separate him to that or those that will assuredly be too hard for him.

Now this Judgment is much effected, when God hath given a Man up unto Satan, and hath given Satan leave, without fail, to compleat his Destruction. I say, when God hath given Satan leave effectually to compleat his Destruction: For all that are delivered up unto Satan, have not, nor do not come to this End. But that is the Man, whom God shall separate to Evil, and shall leave in the hands of Satan, to compleat, without fail, his Destruction.

Thus he served Ahab, a Man, that sold himself to work Wickedness in the Sight of the Lord, 1 Kings 21. 25. And the Lord said, Who shall persuade Ahab, that he may go up, and fall at Ramoth-Gilead? And one said on this manner, and another said on that manner: And there came forth a Spirit, and stood before the Lord, and said, I will persuade him, 1 Kings 22. 20, 21, 22. And the Lord said unto him, Wherewith? And he said, I will go forth, and be a lying Spirit in the Mouth of all his Prophets. And he said, Thou shalt persuade him, and prevail also, go forth, and do so. Thou shalt persuade him and prevail, do thy Will, I leave him in thy hand, Go forth, and do so.

Wherefore in these Judgments, the Lord doth much concern himself for the Management thereof, because of the Provocation wherewith they have provoked him. This is the Man whose ruin he contriveth, and bringeth to pass by his own Contrivance. I will chuse their Delusions for them; I will bring their Fears upon them, Isa. 66. 4. I will chuse their Devices, or the Wickednesses that their Hearts are contriving of. I even I, will cause them to be accepted of, and delightful to them. But who are they that must thus be feared? Why, those among Professors, that have chosen their own Ways, those whose Soul delighteth in their Abominations.

Because they received not the Love of the Truth, that they might be saved; for this cause God shall send them strong Delusions, that they should believe a Lye, that they all might be damned, who believed not the Truth, but had pleasure in Unrighteousness.

God shall send them. It is a great word; Yea, God shall send them strong Delusions; Delusions that shall do, that shall make them believe a Lye. Why so? That they all might be damned, every one of them, who believe not the Truth, but had pleasure in Unrighteousness, 2 Thess. 5. 10, 11, 12.

There is nothing more provoking to the Lord, than for a Man to promise, when God threatneth; for a Man to be light of conceit, that he shall be safe; and yet to be more wicked than in former days: This Man's Soul abhorreth the Truth of God, no marvel therefore if God's Soul abhorreth him: he hath invented a way contrary to God, to bring about his own Salvation; no marvel, therefore, if God invent a way to bring about this Man's Damnation: And seeing that these Rebels are at this point, We shall have peace; God will see whose Word shall stand, His or theirs.

A Fifth Sign of a Man being past Grace, is, When he shall at this, scoff, and inwardly grin, and fret against the Lord, secretly purposing to continue his course, and put all to the venture, despising the Messengers of the Lord. He that despised Moses's Law, died without Mercy; of how much sorer Punishment suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, &c. Heb. 10. 28.

Wherefore, against these Despisers God hath set himself, and foretold, that they shall not believe, but perish. Behold ye Despisers, and wonder, and perish; for I work a Work in your Days, which ye shall in no wise believe, though a Man declare it unto you, Acts 13. 41.

After that thou shalt cut it down.

Thus far we have treated of the barren Fig-tree, or fruitless Professor, with some Signs to know him by; whereto is added also some Signs of one who neither will nor can, by any means, be fruitful, but they must miserably perish. Now being come to the time of Execution, I shall speak a word to that also, After that thou shalt cut it down. Christ at last turns the barren Fig-tree over to the Justice of God, shakes his hands of him, And gives him up to the Fire for his unprofitableness.

Thou shalt cut it down.

Two things are here to be considered.

1. The Executioner, Thou, the great, the dreadful, the eternal God. These words therefore, as I have already said, signify that Christ the Mediator, through whom alone Salvation comes, and by whom alone Execution hath been deferred, Now giveth up the Soul, forbears to speak one Syllable more for him, or to do the least Act of Grace further, to try for his Recovery; but delivereth him up to to that fearful Dispensation, To fall into the Hand of the living God, Heb. 10. 31.

2. The Second to be considered, is, The Instrument by which this Execution is done, and that is Death, compared here to an Ax; and forasmuch as the Tree is not felled at one Blow, therefore the strokes are here continued, till all the blows be struck at it that are requisite for its falling; For now cutting-time, and cutting-work is come, cutting must be his Portion, till he be cut down. After that thou shalt cut it down. Death, I say, is the Ax, which God often useth, therewith to take the barren Fig-tree out of the Vineyard, out of a Profession, and also out of the World at once. But this Ax is now new-ground, it cometh well-edged to the Roots of this barren Fig-tree. It hath been whetted by Sin, by the Law, and by a formal Profession, and therefore must, and will make deep gashes, not only in the natural Life, but in the Heart and Conscience also of this Professor. The wages of Sin is Death, the sting of Death is Sin, 1 Cor. 15. Wherefore Death comes not to this Man as he doth to Saints, muzzled, or without his Sting, but with open Mouth, in all his Strength; yea, he sends his First-born, which is Guilt, to devour his strength, and to bring him to the King of Terrors, Job 18. 13, 14.

But to give you, in a few Particulars, the Manner of this Man's dying.

1. Now he hath his fruitless Fruit be-leaguer him round his Bed, together with all the Bands and Legions of his other Wickedness. His own Iniquities shall take the wicked himself, and he shall be holden in the Cords of his Sins, Prov. 5. 22.

2. Now some terrible discovery of God is made out unto him, to the perplexing and terrifying of his guilty Conscience, God shall cast upon him, and not spare; and he shall be afraid of that which is high, Job 27. 22.

3. The dark Entry he is to go thro', will be a fore amazement to him; For fear shall be in the way, Eccl. 12. 5. yea Terrors will take hold on him, when he shall see the yawning Jaws of Death to gape upon him, and the Doors of the Shadow of Death open to give him passage out of the World. Now who will meet me in this dark Entry; how shall I pass through this dark Entry into another World!

4. For by reason of Guilt, and a shaking Conscience, His Life will hang in continual doubt before him, and he shall be afraid day and night, Deut. 28. 66, 67. and shall have no Assurance of his Life.

5. Now also Want will come up against him, it will come up like an armed Man. This is a terrible Army to him that is graceless in Heart, and fruitless in Life. This Want will continually cry in thine

Ears, here is a New Birth wanting, a new Heart, and a new Spirit wanting; here is Faith wanting; here is Love and Repentance wanting; here is the Fear of God wanting, and a good Conversation wanting; Thou art weighed in the Ballance, and art found wanting, Dan. 5. 27.

6. Together with these, standeth by, the Companions of Death, Death and Hell, Death and Devils, Death and endless Torment in the everlasting flames of devouring Fire. When God shall come up unto the People, he will invade them with his Troops, Hab. 3. 16.

But how will this Man die? Can his heart now endure, or can his hands be strong, Ezek. 22. 14.

1. God, and Christ, and Pity have left him: Sin against Light, against Mercy, and the Long-suffering of God, is come up against him; his Hope and Confidence now is a dying by him, and his Conscience totters and shakes continually within him.

2. Death is at work, Cutting of him down, hewing both Bark and Heart, both Body and Soul alunder; The Man groans, but Death hears him not: He looks ghastly, carefully, dejectedly; he sighs, he sweats, he trembles, Death matters nothing.

3. Fearful Cogitations haunt him, misgivings, direful Apprehensions of God terrify him. Now he hath time to think what the loss of Heaven will be, and what the torments of Hell will be; now he looks no way but he is frightened.

4. Now would he live, but may not; he would live, though it were but the Life of a Bed-ridden Man, but must not. He that cuts him down, sways him, as the Feller of Woods, sways the tottering Tree; now this way, then that, at last a Root breaks, an Heart-string, an Eye-string snaps asunder.

5. And now, could the Soul be annihilated or brought to nothing, how happy would it count it self; but it sees that may not be. Wherefore it is put to a wonderful strait: stay in the Body it may not, go out of the Body it dares not. Life is going, the Blood settles in the Flesh, and the Lungs being no more able to draw Breath through the Nostrils, at last out goes the weary trembling Soul, who is immediately seized by Devils, who lay lurking in every hole in the Chamber for that very purpose: His Friends take care of the Body, wrap it up in the Sheet or Coffin; but the Soul is out of their thought and reach, going down to the Chambers of Death.

I had thought to have enlarged, but I forbear: God, who teaches Man to profit, bless this brief and plain Discourse to thy Soul, who yet standest a Professor in the Land of the Living, among the Trees of his Garden. Amen.

A N

Exhortation to Peace and Unity.

EPHES. IV. 3.

Indeavouring to keep the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace.

Beloved, Religion is the great Bond of humane Society; and it were well if it self were kept within the Bond of Unity; and that it may so be, let us, according to the Text, use our utmost endeavours to keep the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace.

These words contain a Counsel and a Caution; the Counsel is, That we endeavour the Unity of the Spirit; the Caution is, That we do it in the Bond of Peace: as if I should say, I would have you live in Unity, but yet I would have you to be careful, that you do not purchase Unity with the breach of Charity.

Let us therefore be cautioned that we do not so press after Unity in Practice and Opinion, as to break the Bond of Peace and Affection.

In the handling of these words; I shall observe this method;

First, I shall open the Sense of the Text.

Secondly, I shall shew wherein this Unity and Peace consists.

Thirdly, I shall shew you the Fruits and Benefits of it, together with nine Inconveniencies and Mischiefs that attend those Churches where Unity and Peace is wanting.

Fourthly, and lastly, I shall give you twelve Directions and Motives for the obtaining of it.

First, As touching the Sense of the Text; when we are counselled to keep the Unity of the Spirit, we are not to understand the Spirit of God, as personally so considered; because the Spirit of God in that sense, is not capable of being divided; and so there would be no need for us to endeavour to keep the Unity of it.

By the Unity of the Spirit then, we are to understand, that Unity of Mind which the Spirit of God calls for, and requires Christians to endeavour after; hence it is that we are exhorted, by one Spirit, with one Mind, to strive together for the Faith of the Gospel, Phil. 1. 27.

But farther; the Apostle in these words alludes to the state and composition of a Natural Body, and doth thereby inform us, that the Mystical Body of Christ holds an Analogy with the Natural Body of Man: As first, In the natural Body there must be a Spirit to animate it, for the Body without the Spirit is dead, James 2. 26. So it is in the Mystical Body of Christ; the Apostle no sooner tells of that one Body, but he minds us of that one Spirit, Ephes. 4. 4

Vol. II.

Secondly, The Body hath Joints and Bands to unite all the parts; so hath the Mystical Body of Christ, Colossians 2. 19. This is that Bond of Peace mentioned in the Text, as also in the 16th Verse of the same Chapter, where the whole Body is said to be fitly joined together, and compacted, by that which every Joynt supplieth.

Thirdly, The Natural Body receives Counsel and Nourishment from the Head; so doth the Mystical Body of Christ, he is their Counsellor, and him they must hear; he is their Head, and him they must hold; hence it is that the Apostle complaineth, Col. 2. 19. of some that did not hold the Head from which the whole Body by Joints and Bands hath Nourishment.

Fourthly, The Natural Body cannot well subsist, if either the Spirit be wounded, or the Joints broken or dislocated; the Body cannot bear a wounded or broken Spirit; A broken Spirit dryeth the Bones, Prov. 17. 22. And a wounded Spirit who can bear, Prov. 18. 14. And on the other hand, how often have the disjointing of the Body, and the breakings thereof, occasioned the Expiration of the Spirit? In like manner it fares with the Mystical Body of Christ, how do divided Spirits break the Bonds of Peace, which are the Joints of this Body? And how doth the breakings of the Body and Church of Christ, wound the Spirit of Christians, and oftentimes occasion the Spirit and Life of Christianity to languish, if not to expire? How needful is it then that we endeavour the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace?

I now come to shew you wherein this Unity and Peace consists, and this I shall demonstrate in five particulars.

1. This Unity and Peace may consist in the ignorance of many Truths, and in the holding of some Errors; or else this Duty of Peace and Unity could not be practicable by any on this side Perfection; but we must now endeavour the Unity of the Spirit, till we come to the Unity of the Faith, and of the Knowledge of the Son of God, Ephes. 4. 13. Because now (as the Apostle saith) we know in part, and we prophesy in part, and now we see through a Glass darkly, 1 Cor. 13. 12. And as this is true in general, so we may find it true if we descend to particular Instances; the Disciples seem to be ignorant of that great Truth which they had often, and in much Plainness been taught by their Master once and again (viz.) That his Kingdom was not of this World, and that in the World they should suffer, and be persecuted; yet in the first of the Acts ver. 6. we read, That they asked of him if he would at this time restore the Kingdom to Israel? thereby discovering that Christ's Kingdom (as they thought) should consist in his Temporal Jurisdiction over Israel, which they expected should now commence and take place amongst them. Again, Our Lord tells them, that he had many things to say (and these were many important Truths) which they could not now bear, John 16. 12. And that these were important Truths, appears by the 10th and 11th Verses, where he is discoursing of Righteousness and Judgment, and then adds, that he had yet many things to say, which they could not bear; and thereupon promises the Comforter to lead them into ALL TRUTH; which implies, that they were yet ignorant of many Truths, and consequently held divers Errors; and yet for all this he prays for, and presses them to their great Duty of Peace and Unity, John 14. 27. and 17. 21. To this may be added that of Heb. 5. 11. where the Author saith, He had many things to say of the Priestly Office of Christ, which by reason of their Dulness, they were not capable to receive; as also that in the 10th of the Acts, where Peter seems to be ignorant of that Truth, viz. That the Gospel was to be preached to all Nations; and contrary hereunto, he erred in thinking it unlawful to Preach amongst the Gentiles. I shall add two Texts more, one is Acts 19. where we read, That those Disciples which had been discipled and baptized by John, were yet ignorant of the Holy Ghost, and knew not (as the Text tells us) whether there were any Holy Ghost or no; though John did teach constantly, That he that should come after him, should baptize with the Holy Ghost and Fire. From hence we may easily and plainly infer, that Christians may be ignorant of many Truths, by reason of weak and dull Capacities, and other such-like Impediments, even while those Truths are with much Plainness delivered to them. Again, We read, Heb. 5. 13. of some that were unskillful in the Word of Righteousness, who nevertheless are called Babes in Christ, and with whom Unity and Peace is to be inviolably kept and maintained.

of

2. As this Unity and Peace may consist in the ignorance of many Truths, and in the holding some Errors, so it must consist with (and it cannot consist without) the believing and practising those things which are necessary to Salvation and Church-Communion; and they are, First, Believing that Christ the Son of God died for the Sins of Men. Secondly, That whoever believeth, ought to be baptized: The third thing essential to this Communion, is a Holy and a Blameless Conversation.

First, That believing that the Son of God died for the Sins of Men, is necessary to Salvation, I prove by these Texts, which tell us, that he that doth not believe, shall be damned, Mark 16. 16. John 3. 36. Rom. 10. 19.

That it is also necessary to Church-Communion, appears from Mat. 16. 16, 17, 18. Peter having confest that Christ was the Son of the Living God, Christ thereupon assures Peter, that upon this Rock, viz. this Profession of Faith, or this Christ which Peter had confest, he would Build his Church, and the Gates of Hell should not prevail against it. And 1 Cor. 3. 11. The Apostle having told the Corinthians they were God's Building, presently adds, that they could not be built upon any Foundation but upon that which was laid, which was Jesus Christ. All which proves, that Christian Society is founded upon the Profession of Christ; and not only Scripture, but the Laws of Right-reason dictate this, that some Rules and Orders must be observed for the founding all Society, which must be consented to by all that will be of it. Hence it comes to pass, that to own Christ as the Lord and Head of Christians, is essential to the founding Christian Society.

Secondly, The Scriptures have declared, that this Faith gives the Professors of it a right to Baptism, as in the case of the Eunuch, Acts 8. when he demanded why he might not be baptized? Philip answereth, That if he believed with all his heart, he might; the Eunuch thereupon confessing Christ, was baptized.

Now that Baptism is essential to Church Communion, I prove from 1 Cor. 12. where we shall find the Apostle labouring to prevent an evil Use that might be made of Spiritual Gifts, as thereby to be put up; and to think that such as wanted them, were not of the Body, or to be esteemed Members; he thereupon resolves, that whoever did confess Christ, and own him for his Head, did it by the Spirit, ver. 3. though they might not have such a visible Manifestation of it as others had, and therefore they ought to be owned as Members, as appears, ver. 23. And not only because they have called him Lord

Lord by the Spirit, but because they have by the Guidance and Direction of the same Spirit been baptized, ver. 13. For by one Spirit we are all baptized into one Body, &c. I need not go about to confute that Notion that some of late have had of this Text, viz. That the Baptism here spoken of, is the Baptism of the Spirit, because you have not owned and declared that Notion as your Judgment, but on the contrary. All of you that I have ever conversed with, have declared it to be understood of Baptism with Water, by the Direction of the Spirit: If so, then it follows, that Men and Women are declared Members of Christ's Body by Baptism, and cannot be by Scripture reputed and esteemed so without it; which farther appears from Rom. 6. 5. where Men by Baptism are said to be planted into the likeness of his Death; and Col. 2. 12. we are said to be buried with him by Baptism; all which, together with the consent of all Christians, (some few in these latter times excepted) do prove that Baptism is necessary to the initiating Persons into the Church of Christ.

Thirdly, Holiness of Life is essential to Church-Communion, because it seems to be the Reason why Christ founded a Church in the World, viz. that Men might thereby be watched over, and kept from falling; and that if any be overtaken with a Fault, he that is Spiritual might restore him.

That by this means Men and Women might be preserved without blame to the coming of Christ, and the Grace of God teacheth us to deny Ungodliness and worldly Lusts, and to live soberly and uprightly in this present evil World, Tit. 2. 11, 12. And let every one that names the Name of the Lord, depart from Iniquity, Tim. 2. 19. And James tells us, (speaking of the Christian Religion) That pure Religion and undefiled before God, is to visit the Fatherless and Widows in their Affliction, and to keep our selves unspotted from the World, James 1. 27. From all which (together with many more Texts that might be produced) it appears, that an unholy and prophane Life, is inconsistent with Christian Religion and Society. And that Holiness is essential to Salvation and Church-Communion; so that these three Things, Faith, Baptism, and a Holy Life, as I said before, all Churches must agree and unite in, as those Things, which when wanting, will destroy their being: And let not any think, that when I say, believing the Son of God died for the Sins of Men, is essential to Salvation and Church-Communion, that I hereby would exclude all other Articles of the Christian Creed, as not necessary as the Belief of the Resurrection of the Dead, and eternal Judgment, &c. which for want of time, I omit to speak particularly to, and the rather, because I understand this great Article of believing the Son of God died for the Sins of Men, is comprehensive of all others, and is that from whence all other Articles may easily be inferred.

And here I would not be mistaken, as though I held there were nothing else for Christians to practise, when I say this is all that is requisite to Church Communion; for I very well know that Christ requires many other things of us, after we are Members of his Body, which if we knowingly or maliciously refuse, may be the Cause, not only of Excommunication, but Damnation: But yet these are such things as relate to the well-being, and not to the being of Churches; as laying on of Hands in the Primitive Times upon Believers, by which they did receive the Gifts of the Spirit; this, I say, was for the Increase and Edifying of the Body, and not that thereby they might become of the Body of Christ, for that they were before: And do not think that I believe laying on of Hands was no Apostolical Institution, because I say Men are not thereby made Members of Christ's Body, or because I say that it is not essential to Church-Communion: Why should I be thought to be against a Fire in the Chimney, because I say it must not be in the Thatch of the House? Consider then how pernicious a thing it is to make every Doctrine (though true) the Bound of Communion, this is that which destroys Unity, and by this Rule all Men must be perfect before they can be in Peace: For do we not see daily, that as soon as Men come to a clearer understanding of the Mind of God (to say the best of what they hold) that presently all Men are Excommunicable, if not Damnable, that do not agree with them; do not some believe and see, that to be Pride and Covetousness, which others do not, because (it may be) they have more narrowly and diligently searched into their Duty of these things than others have? what then? Must all Men that have not so large Acquaintance of their Duty herein be Excommunicated? Indeed it were to be wished that more Moderation in Apparel and Secular Concernments were found among Churches; but God forbid, that if they should come short herein, that we should say, as one lately said, that he could not communicate with such a People, because they were proud and superfluous in their Apparel.

Let me appeal to such, and demand of them, if there was not a time since they believed and were baptized, wherein they did not believe laying on of Hands a Duty? and did they not then believe, and do they not still believe, they were Members of the Body of Christ? And was not there a time when you did not so well understand the Nature and Extent of Pride and Covetousness as now you do? And did you not then believe, and do you not still believe, that you were true Members of Christ,

Christ, though less perfect? Why then should you not judge of those that differ from you herein, as you judged of yourselves when you were as they now are? How needful then is it for Christians to distinguish (if ever they would be at Peace and Unity) between those Truths which are essential to Church-Communion, and those that are not?

Thirdly: Unity and Peace consists in our making one Shoulder to practise and put in execution the Things we do know. Phil. 3. 16. Nevertheless wherein we have attained, let us walk by the same Rule, and mind the same things. How sad is it to see our Zeal consume us, and our precious Time, in Things doubtful and disputable, while we are not concerned, nor affected with the Practice of those indisputable Things we all agree in? We all know Charity to be the great Command, and yet how few agree to practise it? we all know they that labour in the Word and Doctrine, are worthy of double Honour; and that God hath ordained, that they which preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel; these Duties however others have cavil'd at them, I know you agree in them, and are persuaded of your Duty herein; but where's your Zeal to practise? O how well would it be with Churches, if they were but half as zealous for the great and plain, and indisputable Things, and the more chargeable and costly Things of Religion, as they are for Things doubtful or less necessary, or for Things that are no Charge to them, and cost them nothing but the Breath of Contention, though that may be too great a Price for the small Things they purchase with it.

But further; Do we not all agree, that Men that preach the Gospel, should do it like Workmen that need not be ashamed? and yet how little is this considered by many Preachers, who never consider before they speak of what they say, or whereof they affirm? How few give themselves to study that they may be approved? How few meditate and give themselves to these Things, that their profiting may appear to all?

For the Lord's sake let us unite to practise those Things we know; and if we would have more Talents, let us all agree to improve those we have.

See the Spirit that was among the Primitive Professors, that knowing and believing how much it concern'd them in the propagating of Christianity, to shew forth Love to one another (that so all might know them to be Christ's Disciples) rather than there should be any Complaining among them, they sold all they had: Oh how zealous were these to practise, and with one Shoulder to do that that was upon their Hearts for God! I might further add, how often have we agreed in our Judgment? and hath it not been upon our Hearts, that this and the other Thing is good to be done, to enlighten the dark World, and to repair the Breaches of Churches, and to raise up those Churches that now lie a gasping, and among whom the Soul of Religion is expiring? But what do we more than talk of them? Do not most decline these Things, when they either call for their Purse, or their Persons to help in this and such-like Works as these? Let us then, in what we know, unite, that we may put it in Practice, remembering, that if we know these things, we shall be happy if we do them.

Fourthly; This Unity and Peace consists in our joyning and agreeing to pray for, and to press after those Truths we do not know. The Disciples in the Primitive Times, were conscious of their Imperfections, and therefore they with one accord continued in Prayer and Supplications: If we were more in the Sense of our Ignorances and Imperfections, we should carry it better towards those that differ from us, then we should abound more in the Spirit of Meekness and Forbearance, that thereby we might bring others (or be brought by others) to the Knowledge of the Truth; this would make us go to God, and say with Elihu, Job 34. 32. That which we know not, teach thou us. Brethren, did we but all agree that we were erring in many Things, we should soon agree to go to God, and pray for more Wisdom and Revelation of his Mind and Will concerning us.

But here's our Misery, that we no sooner receive any Thing for Truth, but we presently ascend the Chair of Infallibility with it, as though in this we could not err: Hence it is we are impatient of Contradiction, and become uncharitable to those that are not of the same Mind; but now a Consciousness that we may mistake, or that if my Brother err in one thing, I may err in another, this will unite us in Affection, and engage us to press after Perfection, according to that of the Apostle, Phil. 3. 13, 14, 15. Brethren, I count not my self to have apprehended: But this one thing I do, forgetting those Things that are behind, and reaching forth to those Things which are before, I press towards the Mark, for the Prize of the high Calling of God in Christ Jesus. And if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you. O then that we could but unite and agree to go to God for one another, in Confidence that he will teach us; and that if any one of us want Wisdom (as who of us does not) we might agree to ask of God, who giveth to all Men liberally, and upbraideth no Man. Let us, like those People spoken of in the second of Isaiah, say one to another, Come, let us go to the Lord, for he will teach us of his Ways, and we will walk in his Paths.

Fifthly; This Unity and Peace mainly consists in Unity of Love and Affection; this is the great and indispensable Duty of all all Christians, by this they are declared Christ's Disciples: And hence it is that Love is called the Great Commandment, the Old Commandment, and the New Commandment; that which was commanded in the Beginning, and will remain to the End, yea and after the End, 1 Cor. 13. 8. Charity never fails; but whether there be Tongues, they shall cease; or whether there be Knowledge, it shall vanish away. And, ver. 13. And now abideth Faith, Hope and Charity; but the greatest of these is Charity. And, Col. 3. 14. Above all these things put on Charity, which is the Bond of Perfection. Because Charity is the End of the Commandment, 1 Tim. 1. 5. Charity is therefore called the Royal Law; and though it had a Superintendency over other Laws, and doubtless is a Law to which other Laws must give place, when they come in Competition with it; Above all things therefore have fervent Charity among your selves, for Charity covereth a Multitude of Sins, 1 Pet. 4. 8. Let us therefore live in Unity and Peace, and the God of Love and Peace will be with us.

That you may so do, let me remember you (in the Words of a learned Man) that the Unity of the Church, is a Unity of Love and Affection, and not a bare Uniformity of Practice and Opinion.

Having shewn you wherein this Unity consists, I now come to the third General Thing propounded; and that is, to shew you the Fruits and Benefit of Unity and Peace; together with the Mischiefs and Inconveniences that attend those Churches where Unity and Peace are wanting.

First, Unity and Peace is a Duty well-pleasing to God, who is stiled the Author of Peace, and not of Confusion in all the Churches, God's Spirit rejoiceth in the Unity of our Spirits; but on the other Hand, where Strife and Divisions are, there the Spirit of God is grieved. Hence it is that the Apostle no sooner calls upon the Ephesians, not to grieve the Spirit of God, but he presently subjoins us a Remedy against that evil, That they put away Bitterness and evil-speaking. And be kind one to another, and tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven them, Eph. 4. 30, 32.

Secondly, As Unity and Peace is pleasing to God, and rejoiceth his Spirit, so it rejoiceth the Hearts and Spirits of God's People; Unity and Peace brings Heaven down upon Earth among us: Hence it is that the Apostle tells us, Rom. 4. 17. That the Kingdom of God is not Meat and Drink, but Righteousness and Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghost. Where Unity and Peace is, there is Heaven upon Earth; by this we taste the first Fruits of that blessed Estate we shall one Day live in the Fruition of; when we shall come to the general Assembly and Church of the First-born, whose Names are written in Heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the Spirits of just Men made perfect, Heb. 12. 23.

N^o. XXXVIII. Vol. II.

This outward Peace of the Church (as a learned Man observes) distils into Peace of Conscience, and turns Writings and Readings of Controversy, into Treatises of Mortification and Devotion.

And the Psalmist tells us, that it is not only good, but pleasant for Brethren to dwell together in Unity, Psal. 133. 1. But where Unity and Peace is wanting, there are Storms and Troubles; where Envy and Strife is, there is Confusion, and every evil Work, Jam. 3. 16. It is the outward Peace of the Church that increaseth our inward Joy; and the Peace of God's House gives us occasion to eat our Meat with Gladness in our own Houses, Acts 2. 46.

Thirdly, The Unity and Peace of the Church makes Communion of Saints desirable. What is it that imbitters Church-Communion, and makes it burdensome, but Divisions? Have you not heard many complain that they are weary of Church-Communion, because of Church-Contention? but now where Unity and Peace is, there Christians long for Communion.

David saith, that he was glad when they said unto him, Let us go to the House of God, Psal. 122. 1. Why was this, but because (as the third Verse tells us) Jerusalem was a City compact together, where the Tribes went up, the Tribes of the Lord, to give Thanks to his Name. And David speaking of the Man that was once his Friend, doth thereby let us know the Benefit of Peace and Unity, Psal. 55. 14. We, (saith he) took sweet Counsel together, and walked to the House of God in Company. Where Unity is strongest, Communion is sweetest and most desirable. You see then that Peace and Union fills the People of God with Desires after Communion: But on the other Hand, hear how David complains, Psal. 120. Wo is me, I sojourn in Mesech, and that I dwell in the Tents of Kedar. The Psalmist here is thought to allude to a sort of Men that dwelt in the Deserts of Arabia, that got their Livings by Contention; and therefore he adds, ver. 6. That his Soul had long dwelt with them that hated Peace. This was that which made him long for the Courts of God, and esteem one Day in his House better than a thousand; this made his Soul even faint for the House of God, because of the Peace of it; Blessed are they (saith he) that dwell in thy House, they will be still praising thee. There is a certain Note of Concord, as appears, Acts 2. where we read of primitive Christians, meeting with one accord, praising God.

Fourthly, Where Unity and Peace is, there many Mischiefs and Inconveniences are prevented, which attends those People where where Peace and Unity are wanting: And of those many that might be mentioned, I shall briefly insist upon these nine.

First, Where Unity and Peace is wanting, there is much precious time spent to no purpose; how many Days are spent, and how many fruitless Journeys made to no Profit, where the People are not in Peace? How often have many redeemed time (even in Seed-time and Harvest) when they could scarce afford it, to go to Church, and, by reason of their Divisions, come home worse than they went, repenting they have spent so much precious time to so little Benefit? How sad is it to see Men spend their precious time, in which they should work out their Salvation, by labouring, as in the Fire, to prove an uncertain and doubtful Proposition; and to trifle away their Time, in which they should make their Calling and Election sure, to make sure of an Opinion, which when they have done all, they are not infallibly sure whether it be true or no, because all Things necessary to Salvation and Church-Communion are plainly laid down in Scripture, in which we may be infallibly sure of the Truth of them; but for other Things that we have no plain Texts for, but the Truth of them depends upon our Interpretations, Here we must be cautioned, that we do not spend much time in imposing those upon others, or venting those among others, unless we can assume Infallibility, otherwise we spend Time upon Uncertainty: And whoever casts their Eyes abroad, and doth open their Ears to Intelligence, shall both see, and to their Sorrow hear, that many Churches spend most of their time in jangling and contending about those Things, which are neither essential to Salvation or Church-Communion; and that which is worse, about such doubtful Questions which they are never able to give an infallible Solution of. But now where Unity and Peace is, there our time is spent in praising God; and in those great Questions, What we should do to be saved? and how we may be more holy and more humble towards God, and more charitable and more serviceable to one another?

Secondly, where Unity and Peace is wanting, there is evil surmizing, and evil speaking, to the Damage and Disgrace, if not to the ruining of one another; Gal. 5. 14, 15. The whole Law is fulfilled in one Word, Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thy self: But if you bite and devour one another, take heed you be not consumed one of another. No sooner the Bond of Charity is broken, which is as a Wall about Christians, but soon they begin to make Havock and Spoil of one another; then there is raising evil Reports, and taking up evil Reports against each other: Hence it is that Whispering and Backbiting proceeds, and going from House to House to blazon the Faults, and Infirmities of others: Hence it is that we watch for the Faults of one another, and do inwardly rejoice at the Miscarriages of others; saying, in our Hearts, Ah, ah, so we would have it: But now where Unity and Peace is, there is Charity; and where Charity is, there we are willing to hide the Faults, and cover the Nakedness of our Brethren; Charity thinketh no Evil, 1 Cor. 13. 5. and therefore it cannot surmise, neither will it speak evil.

Thirdly, Where Unity and Peace is wanting, there can be no great matters enterprized, we cannot do much for God, nor much for one another; when the Devil would hinder the bringing to pass of good in Nations and Churches, he divides their Councils, (and as one well observes) he divides their Heads, that he may divide their Hands; when Jacob had prophesied of the Cruelty of Simeon and Levi, who were Brethren, he threatens them with the consequent of it, Gen. 49. 7. I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel. The Devil is not to learn that Maxim he hath taught the Machavilians of the World, divide & impera, divide and rule, it is an united force that's formidable: Hence the Spouse in the Canticles is said to be but one, and the only one of her Mother, Cant. 6. 9. Hereupon it is said of her, ver. 10. That she is terrible as an Army with Banners. What can a divided Army do, or a disordered Army, that have lost their Banners, or for Fear or Shame thrown them away? In like manner, what can Christians do for Christ, and the enlarging his Dominions in the World, in bringing Men from Darkness to Light, while themselves are divided and disordered? Peace is to Christians, as great Rivers are to some Cities, which (besides other Benefits and Commodities) are natural Fortifications, by reason whereof those Places are made impregnable; but when, by the Subtlety of an Adversary, or the Folly of the Citizens, these Waters come to be divided into little petty Rivulets, How soon are they assailed and taken? Thus it fares with Churches, when once the Devil or their own Folly divides them, they will be so far from resisting of him, that they will be soon subjected by him.

Peace is to Churches as Walls to Cities; nay, Unity hath defended Cities that had no Walls; it was once demanded of Agessilaus, Why Lacedemon had no Walls; he answers (pointing back to the City) That the Concord of the Citizens was the Strength of the City. In like manner, Christians are strong when united, then they are more capable to resist Temptation, and to succour such as are tempted; when Unity and Peace is among the Churches, then are they like a Walled Town; and when Peace is the Church's Walls, Salvation will be her Bulwarks.

Plutarch tells us of one Silurus that had eighty Sons, whom he calls to him as he lay upon his Death-bed, and gave them a Sheaf of Arrows; thereby to signify, that if they lived in Unity, they might do much, but if they divided, they would come to nothing. If Christians were all of one Piece, if they were all but one Lump, or but one Sheaf or Bundle, how great are the things they might do for Christ and his People in the World, whereas otherwise they can do little but dishonour him, and offend his.

It is reported of the Leviathan, that his Strength is in his Scales, Job 41. 15, 16, 17. His Scales are his pride, shut up together, as with a close Seal; one is so near to another, that no Air can come between them; they join together, they stick together, they cannot be sundred. If the Church of God were united like the Scales of Leviathan, it would not be every brain-sick Notion, nor angry Speculation, that would cause their Separation.

Solomon saith, Two are better than one, because if one fail, the other may raise him; then surely twenty are better than two, and an hundred are better than twenty, for the same reason, because they are more capable to help one another. If ever Christians would do any thing to raise up the fall'n Tabernacles of Jacob, and to strengthen the weak, and comfort the feeble, and to fetch back those that have gone astray, it must be by Unity.

We read of the Men of Babel, Gen. 11. 6. The Lord said, Behold, the People are one, &c. And now nothing will be restrained from them that they have imagined to do.

We learn by reason what great things may be done in worldly Achievements where Unity is: And shall not Reason (assisted with the Motives of Religion) teach us, that Unity among Christians may enable them to enterprize greater Things for Christ? would not this make Satan fall from Heaven like Lightning? For as Unity built literal Babel, it's Unity that must pull down mystical Babel. And on the other hand, where Divisions are, there is Confusion; by this means a Babel hath been built in every Age. It hath been observed by a learned Man, and I wish I could not say truly observed, That there is most of Babel and Confusion among those that cry out most against it.

Would we have a hand to destroy Babylon, let's have a heart to unite one among another.

Our English Histories tells us, that after Austin the Monk had been some time in England, that he heard of some of the remains of the British Christians, which he conven'd to a place, which Cambden in his Britannia calls Austin's Oak; here they met to consult about Matters of Religion; but such was their Division, by reason of Au- stin's imposing Spirit, that our Stories tells us, That Synod was only famous for this, that they only met and did Nothing. This is the Mischief of Divisions, they hinder the doing of much good; and if Christians, that are divided, be ever famous for any thing, it will be, that they have often met together, and talked of this and the other thing, but they did nothing.

Fourthly, Where Unity and Peace is wanting, there the Weak are wounded, and the Wicked are hardened: Unity may may well be compared to precious Oil, Psal. 133. 2. It's the nature of Oil, to heal that which is wounded, and to soften that which is hard. Those Men that have hardened themselves against God and his People, when they shall behold Unity and Peace among them, will say, God is in them indeed. And on the other hand, are they not ready to say, when they see you divided, That the Devil's in you that you cannot agree?

Fifthly, Divisions, and want of Peace, keep those out of the Church that would come in; and cause many to go out that are in.

The Divisions of Christians (as a learned Man observes) are a Scandal to the Jews, an Opprobrium to the Gentiles, and an Inlet to Atheism and Infidelity. Inasmuch that our Controversies about Religion (especially as they have been of late managed) have made Religion itself become a Controversy. O then, how good and pleasant a thing is it for Brethren to dwell together in Unity! The Peace and Unity that was among the Primitive Christians, drew others to them: What hinders the Conversion of the Jews, but the Divisions of Christians? Must I be a Christian, says the Jew; what Christian must I be, of what Sect must I be of? The Jews (as one observes) glossing upon that Text in Isa. 11. 6. where it is prophesied, That the Lion and the Lamb shall lie down together, and that there shall be none left to hurt nor destroy in all God's Holy Mountain; they interpreting these Sayings, to signify the Concord and Peace that shall be among the People that shall own the Messiah, do from hence conclude, that the Messiah is not yet come, because of the Contentions and Divisions that are among those that profess him. And the Apostle saith, 1 Cor. 14. 23. That if an Unbeliever should see their Disorders, he would say they were mad; but where Unity and Peace is, there the Churches are multiplied; we read Acts 9. that when the Churches had Rest, they multiplied. And, Acts 2. 46, 47. when the Church was serving God with one Accord, the Lord added to them daily such as should be saved.

It is Unity brings Men into the Church, and Divisions keep them out. It is reported of an Indian passing by the House of a Christian, and hearing them contending, being being desired to turn in, he refused, saying, Habamach dwells there, meaning that the Devil dwelt there: but where Unity and Peace is, there God is; and he that dwells in Love, dwells in God. The Apostle tells the Corinthians, That if they walked orderly, even the Unbeliever would hereby be enforced to come and worship, and say, God was in them indeed. And we read, Zech. 8. 23. of a Time when ten Men shall take hold of a Jew, and say, We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you.

And hence it is that Christ prays, John 17. 21. That his Disciples might be one, as the Father and he were one, that the World might believe the Father sent him: As if he should say, you may preach me as long as you will, and to little purpose, if you are not at Peace and Unity among your selves. Such was the Unity of Christians in former days, that the intelligent Heathen would say, of them, That though they had many Bodies, yet they had but one Soul: And we read the same of them, Acts 4. 32. That the multitude of them that believed were of one Heart and one Soul.

And as the learned Stillfleet observes in his Irenicum; 'The Unity and Peace that was then among Christians, made Religion amiable in the Judgment of impartial Heathens: Christians were then known by the benignity and sweetness of their Dispositions, by the candour and ingenuity of their Spirits, by their mutual Love, Forbearance, and Condescension to one another: But either this is not the Practice of Christianity, (viz. a Duty that Christians are now bound to observe) or else it is not calculated for our Meridian, where the Spirits of Men are of too high an Elevation for it; for if Pride and Uncharitableness, if Divisions and Strifes, if Wrath and Envy, if Animosities and Contentions were but the Marks of true Christians, Diogenes need never light his Lamp at Noon to find out such among us; but if a Spirit of Meekness, Gentleness, and Condescension; if a stooping to the Weaknesses and Infirmities of one another, if pursuit after Peace, when it flies from us, be the indispensable Duties, and characteristical Notes of Christians, it may possibly prove a difficult Inquest to find out such, among the Crouds of those that shelter themselves under that glorious Name.

It is the Unity and Peace of Churches that brings others to them, and makes Christianity amiable. What is prophesied of the Church of the Jews, may in this case be applied to the Gentile Church, Isa. 66. 12. That when once God extends Peace to her like a River, the Gentiles shall come in like a flowing Stream; then (and not till then) the Glory of the Lord shall arise upon his Churches, and his Glory shall be seen among them; then shall their Hearts fear and be enlarged, because, the Abundance of the Nations shall be converted to them.

Sixthly, as want of Unity and Peace keeps those out of the Church that would come in, so it hinders the Growth of those that are in. Jars and Divisions, Wranglings and Prejudices, eat out the Growth, if not the Life of Religion. These are those Waters of Marah, that imbitter our Spirits, and quench the Spirit of God. Unity and Peace is said to be like the Dew of Hermon, and as a Dew that descended upon Sion, where the Lord commanded his Blessing, Psalm 133. 3.

Divisions run Religion into Briars and Thorns, Contentions and Parties. Divisions are to Churches like Wars in Countries: Where War is, the Ground lieth waste and untill'd, none takes Care of it. It is Love that edifieth, but Division pulleth down: Divisions are as the North-East Wind to the Fruits, which causeth them to dwindle away to nothing; but when the Storms are over, every thing begins to grow. When Men are divided, they seldom speak the Truth in Love; and then no marvel they grow not up to him in all Things, which is the Head.

It is a sad Presage of an approaching Famine, (as one well observes) not of Bread nor Water, but of hearing the Word of God, when the thin Ears of Corn, devour the plump full Ones; when the lean Kine devour the fat Ones; when our Controversies about doubtful Things, and Things of less Moment, eat up our Zeal, for the more indisputable and practical Things in Religion; which may give us cause to fear, that this will be the Character by which our Age will be known to Posterity, that it was the Age that talked of Religion most, and loved it least.

Look upon those Churches where Peace is, and there you shall find Prosperity: When the Churches had Rest, they were not only multiplied, but walking in the Fear of the Lord, and the Comforts of the Holy Ghost, they were edified; it is when the whole Body is knit together, as with Joints and Bands, that they increase with the Increase of God.

We are at a stand sometimes, why there is so little Growth among Churches, why Men have been so long in learning, and are yet so far from attaining the Knowledge of the Truth; some have given one Reason, and some another; some say Pride is the cause, and others say Covetousness is the cause; I wish I could say these were no causes: But I observe, that when God entered his Controversy with his People of old, he mainly insisted upon some one Sin, as Idolatry, and shedding Innocent Blood, &c. as comprehensive of the rest; not but that they were guilty of other Sins, but those those that were the most capital are particularly insisted on; in like manner, whoever would but take a Review of Churches that live in Contentions and Divisions, may easily find that Breach of Unity and Charity is their capital Sin, and the Occasion of all other Sins. No marvel then, that the Scripture saith, the whole Law is fulfilled in Love; and if so, then where Love is wanting, it must needs follow, the whole Law is broken. It is where Love grows cold, that Sin abounds; and therefore the Want of Unity and Peace is the Cause of that Leanness and Barrenness that is among us; it's true in Spirituals as well as Temporals, that Peace brings Plenty.

Seventhly; Where Unity and Peace is wanting, our Prayers are hindered: The Promise is, that what we shall agree to ask, shall be given us of our Heavenly Father: No marvel we pray and pray, and yet are not answered, it is because we are not agreed what to have.

It's reported that the People in Lacedæmonia, coming to make Supplications to their Idol God, some of them asked for Rain, and others of them asked for fair Weather: The Oracle returns them this Answer, That they should go first and agree among themselves: Would a Heathen God refuse to answer such Prayers, in which the Supplicants were not agreed; and shall we think the True God will answer them?

We see then that Divisions hinder our Prayers, and lay a Prohibition on our Sacrifice: If thou bring thy Gift to the Altar, saith Christ, and there remember that thy Brother hath ought against thee, leave thy Gift, and go, and first be reconciled to thy Brother, and then come and offer it: So that want of Unity and Charity hinders even our particular Prayers and Devotions.

This hindred the Prayers and Fastings of the People of old from finding Acceptance, Isa. 58. 3. the People ask the Reason wherefore they fasted, and God did not see nor take notice of them? He gives this Reason, because they fasted for Strife and Debate, and hid their Face from their own Flesh. Again, Isa. 59. the Lord saith, his Hand was not shortened, that he could not save; nor his Ear heavy that he could not hear: but their Sins had separated between their God and them. And among those many Sins they stood chargeable with, this was none of the least, (viz.) that the way of Peace they had not known. You see where Peace was wanting, Prayers were hindred, both under the Old and New Testament.

The Sacrifice of the People in the 65th of Isaiah, that said, Stand farther off, I am holier than thou, was as Smoke in the Nostrils of the Lord. On the other Hand we read how acceptable those Prayers were that were made with one accord, Acts 4. 24. compared with verse 31. They prayed with one accord, and they were all of one Heart, and of one Soul: And see the Benefit of it, they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and spoke the Word with all Boldness: Which was the very Thing they prayed for, as appears verse 29. And the Apostle exhorts the Husband to dwell with his Wife, that their Prayers might not be hindred, 1 Pet. 3. 7. We see then want of Unity and Peace, either in Families or Churches, is a Hindrance of Prayers.

Vol. II.

Eighthly; It is a Dishonour and Disparagement to Christ, that his Family should be divided. When an Army falls into Mutiny and Division, it reflects Disparagement on him that hath the Conduct of it: In like manner the Divisions of Families are a Dishonour to the Heads, and those that govern them. And if so, then how greatly do we dishonour our Lord and Governor, who gave his Body to be broken, to keep his Church from breaking, who prayed for their Peace and Unity, and left Peace at his departing from them for a Legacy, even a Peace which the World could not bestow upon them.

Ninthly; Where there is Peace and Unity, there is a Sympathy with each other; that which is the want of one, will be the want of all; Who is afflicted (saith the Apostle) and I burn not? we should then remember them that are in Bonds, as bound with them; and them which suffer Adversity, as being our selves also of the Body, Heb. 13. 3. But where the Body is broken, or Men are not reckoned or esteemed of the Body, no marvel we are so little affected with such as are afflicted: Where Divisions are, that which is the Joy of the one, is the Grief of another; but where Unity, and Peace, and Charity abounds, there we shall find Christians in Mourning with them that mourn, and rejoicing with them that rejoice; then they will not envy the Prosperity of others, nor secretly rejoice at the Miseries or Miscarriages of any.

Last of all; I now come to give you twelve Directions and Motives for the obtaining Peace and Unity.

First, If ever we would live in Peace and Unity, we must pray for it. We are required to seek Peace: Of whom then can we seek it with Expectation to find it, but of him who is a God of Peace, and hath promised to bless his People with Peace? It is God that hath promised to give his People one Heart, and one Way; yet for all these things, he will be sought unto: O then let us seek Peace, and pray for Peace, because God shall prosper them that love it.

The Peace of Churches is that which the Apostle prays for in all his Epistles; in which his Desire is, that Grace and Peace may be multiplied and increased among them.

Secondly; They that would endeavour the Peace of the Churches, must be careful who they commit the care and oversight of the Churches to; as, first, (over and befides

fides those Qualifications that should be in all Christians) they that rule the Church of God, should be Men of Counsel and Understanding; where there is an ignorant Ministry, there is commonly an ignorant People, according as it was of old, Like Priest, like People.

How sad is it to see the Church of God committed to the Care of such that pretend to be Teachers of others, that understand not what they say, or whereof they affirm: No marvel the Peace of Churches is broken, when their Watchmen want Skill to preserve their Unity, which of all other things is as the Church's Walls; when they are divided, no wonder they crumble to Atoms, if there is no skilful Physician to heal them. It's sad when there is no Balm in Gilead, and when there is no Physician there. Hence it is, that the Wounds of Churches become incurable, like the Wounds of God's People of old, either not healed at all, or else slightly healed, and to no purpose. May it not be said of many Churches at this Day, as God said of the Church of Israel, That he sought for a Man among them that should stand in the Gap, and make up the Breach, but he found none?

Remember what was said of old, Mal. 2. 7. The Priest's Lips should preserve Knowledge; and the People should seek the Law at his Mouth: But when this is wanting, the People will be stumbling and departing from God and one another; therefore God complains, Hos. 4. 6. That his People were destroyed for want of Knowledge; that is, for want of knowing Guides; for if the Light that is in them that teach, be Darkness, how great is that Darkness; and if the Blind lead the Blind, no marvel both fall into the Ditch.

How many are there that take upon them to teach others, that had need be taught in the Beginning of Religion; that instead of multiplying Knowledge, multiply Words without Knowledge; and instead of making known God's Counsel, darken Counsel by Words without Knowledge? The Apostle speaks of some that did more than darken Counsel, for they wrested the Counsel of God; 2 Pet. 3. 16. In Paul's Epistles (saith he) are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, to their own Destruction. Some things in the Scripture are hard to be known, and they are made harder by such unlearned Teachers, as utter their own Notions by Words without Knowledge.

None are more bold and adventurous to take upon them to expound the dark Mysteries and Sayings of the Prophets and Revelations, and the 9th of the Romans, which I believe contains some of those many Things which in Paul's Epistles, Peter saith, were hard to be understood. I say, none are more forward to dig in these Mines, than those that can hardly give a sound Reason for the first Principles of Religion; and such as are ignorant of many more weighty things that are easily to be seen in the Face and Superficies of the Scripture; nothing will serve these but swimming in the Deeps, when they have not yet learned to wade through the Shallows of the Scriptures: Like the Gnosticks of old, who thought they knew all Things, though they knew nothing as they ought to know. And as those Gnosticks did of old, so do such Teachers of late break the Unity and Peace of Churches. How needful then is it, that if we desire the Peace of Churches, that we chuse out Men of Knowledge, who may be able to keep them from being shattered and scattered with every Wind of Doctrine: And who may be able to convince and stop the Mouths of Gainfayers?

Secondly, You must not only chuse Men of Counsel; but if you would design the Unity and Peace of the Churches, you must chuse Men of Courage to govern them; for as there must be Wisdom to bear with some, so there must be Courage to correct others; as some must be instructed meekly, so others must be rebuked sharply, that they may be found in the Faith; there must be Wisdom to rebuke some with long-suffering, and there must be Courage to suppress and stop the Mouths of others. The Apostle tells Titus of some whose Mouths must be stopped, or else they would subvert whole Houses, Tit. 1. 11. Where this Courage hath been wanting, not only whole Houses, but whole Churches have been subverted. And Paul tells the Galatians, That when he saw some endeavour to bring the Churches into Bondage, that he did not give place to them, no not for an hour, &c. Gal. 2. 5. If this course had been taken by the Rulers of Churches, their Peace had not been so often invaded by unruly and vain Talkers.

Thirdly, In chusing Men to rule (if you would endeavour to keep the Unity of the Spirit, and the Bond of Peace thereby) be careful you chuse Men of peaceable Dispositions. That which hath much annoyed the Peace of Churches, hath been the forward and perverse Spirits of the Rulers thereof: Solomon therefore adviseth, That with a furious Man we should not go, lest we learn his Ways, and get a Snare to our Souls, Prov. 22. 24, 25. and with the Forward we learn Forwardness. How do some Mens words eat like a Canker; who instead of lifting up their Voice like a Trumpet, to sound a Parley for Peace, have rather founded an Alarum to War and Contention. If ever we would live in Peace, let's reverence the Feet of them that bring the glad Tidings of it.

O how have some Men made it their Business to preach Contentions, and upon their entertainment of every novel Opinion, to preach Separation! How hath God's Word been been stretched and torn, to furnish these Men with Arguments to tear Churches! Have not our Ears heard those Texts, that faith, Come out from among them, and be separate, &c. and, withdraw from every Brother that walks disorderly? I say, have we not heard these Texts, that were written to prevent Disorder, brought to countenance the greatest Disorder that ever was in the Church of God, even Schism and Division? whereas one of these Exhortations was written to the Church of Corinth, to separate themselves from the Idol's Temple, and the Idol's Table, in which many of them lived in the Participation of, notwithstanding their Profession of the true God; as appears 2 Cor. 6. 16, 17. compared with 1 Cor. 8. 7. and 1 Cor. 10. 14, 20, 22. recites. And not for some few or more Members, who shall make themselves both Judges and Parties, to make Separation, when and as often as they please, from the whole Congregation and Church of God where they stood related; for by the same Rule, and upon the same Ground, may others start some new Question among these new Separatists, and become their own Judges of the Communicableness of them, and thereupon make another Separation from these, till at last two be not left to walk together. And for that other Text mentioned 2 Thess. 3. 9. where Paul exhorts the Church of Thessalonica to withdraw themselves from every Brother that walks disorderly; I cannot but wonder that any should bring this to justify their Separation, or withdraw from the Communion of a true (though a disorderly) Church. For,

1. Consider, that this was not writ for a few Members to withdraw from the Church, but for the Church to withdraw from disorderly Members.

2. Consider, that if any offended Members, upon pretence of Error, either in Doctrine or Practice, should by this Text become Judges (as well as Parties) of the Grounds and Lawfulness of their Separation: Then it will follow, that half a score notorious Hereticks, or scandalous Livers (when they have walked so as they foresee the Church are ready to deal with them, and withdraw from them) shall anticipate the Church, and pretend somewhat against them, of which themselves must be Judges, and so withdraw from the Church, pretending either Heresy or Disorder; and so condemn the Church, to prevent the disgrace of being condemned by the Church. How needful then is it, that Men of peaceable Dispositions, and not of froward and factious, and dividing Spirits, be chose to rule the Church of God, for fear lest the whole Church be leavened and sower'd by them.

Fourthly, As there must be care used in chusing Men to rule the Church of God, so there must be a consideration had, that there are many things darkly laid down in Scripture, this will temper our Spirits, and make us live in Peace and Unity the more firmly in Things in which we agree; this will help us to bear one another's Burden, and so fulfil the Law of Christ, in as much as all things necessary to Salvation and Church-Communion are plainly laid down in Scripture. And where things are more darkly laid down, we should consider that God intended hereby to stir up our Diligence, that thereby we might increase our Knowledge, and not our Divisions, for it may be said of all Discoveries of Truth we have made in the Scriptures, as it's said of the Globe of the Earth, that though Men have made great Searches, and thereupon great Discoveries, yet there is still a Terra incognita, an unknown Land; so there is in the Scriptures, for after Men have travelled over them, one Age after another, yet still there is, as it were a Terra incognita, an unknown Tract to put us upon farther Search and Enquiry, and to keep us from censuring and falling out with those who have not yet made the same Discoveries; that so we may say with the Psalmist, when we reflect upon our short Apprehensions of the Mind of God, that we have seen an End of all Perfections, but God's Commands are exceeding broad; and as one observes, speaking of the Scriptures, that there is a Path in them leading to the Mind of God, which lieth a great Distance from the Thoughts and Apprehensions of Men. And on the other Hand, in many other Places, God sits, as it were, on the Superficies, and the Face of the Letter, where he that runs may discern him speaking plainly, and no Parable at all. How should the Consideration of this induce us to a peaceable Deportment towards those that differ.

Fifthly; If we would endeavour Peace and Unity, we must consider how God hath tempered the Body; that so the comely Parts should not separate from the uncomely, as having no need of them, 1 Cor. 12. 22, 23, 24, 25. There is in Christ's Body and House some Members and Vessels less honourable, 2 Tim. 2. 20. And therefore we should not, as some now a-Days do, pour the more abundant Disgrace, instead of putting the more abundant Honour upon them: Did we but consider this, we should be covering the Weakness, and hiding the Miscarriages of one another, because we are all Members one of another, and the most useless Member in his Place is useful.

Sixthly; If we would live in Peace, let us remember our Relations to God, as Children to a Father, and to each other as Brethren. Will not the Thoughts that we have one Father, quiet us; and the Thoughts that we are Brethren, unite us? It was this that made Abraham propose terms of Peace to Lot, Gen. 13. Let there be no Strife (saith he) between us, for we are Brethren. And we read of Moses, in Acts 7. 26. using this Argument, to reconcile those that strove together, and to set them at one again; Sirs, saith he, you are Brethren, why do ye wrong one another? A deep Sense of this Relation, that we are Brethren, would keep us from dividing.

Seventhly; If we would preserve Peace, let us mind the Gifts, and Graces, and Vertues that are in each other; let these be more in our Eye, than their Failings and Imperfections. When the Apostle exhorted the Philippians to Peace, as a Means hereunto, that so the Peace of God might rule in their Hearts, he tells them, Chap. 4. 8. that if there were any Virtue, or any Praise, they should think of these Things. While we are always talking and blazoning the Faults of one another, and spreading their Infirmities, no marvel we are so little in Peace, and Charity; for as Charity covereth a Multitude of Sins, so Malice covereth a Multitude of Vertues, and makes us deal by one another, as the Heathen Persecutors dealt with Christians, (viz.) put them in Bears Skins, that they might the more readily become a Prey to those Dogs that were designed to devour them.

Eighthly; If we would keep Unity and Peace, let us lay aside provoking and dividing Language, and forgive those that use them. Remember that old Saying, Evil Words corrupt good Manners. When Men think to carry all afore them, with speaking uncharitably and disgracefully of their Brethren, or their Opinions; may not such be answered as Job answered his unfriendly Visitants, Job 6. 25. How forcible are right Words? but what do your Arguings reprove? How healing are Words fitly spoken? A Word in Season, how good is it? If we would seek Peace, let us cloath all our Treaties for Peace with acceptable Words; and where one Word may better accommodate than another, let that be used to express Persons or Things by; and let us not, as some do, call the different Practices of our Brethren, Will-worship, and their different Opinions, Doctrines of Devils, and the Doctrine of Balaam, who taught Fornication, &c. unless we can plainly, and in Expressness of Terms prove it so; such Language as this hath strangely divided our Spirits, and hardened our Hearts one towards another.

Ninthly, If we would live in Peace, let us make the best constructions of one another's Words and Actions. Charity judgeth the best, and it thinks no evil; if Words and Actions may be construed to a good sense, let us never put a bad construction upon them: How much hath the Peace of Christians been broken by an uncharitable Interpretation of Words and Actions? as some lay to the charge of others, that which they never said; so by straining Mens Words, others lay to their charge, that they never thought.

Tenthly, Be willing to hear, and learn, and obey those that God by his Providence hath set over you; this is a great means to preserve the Unity and Peace of Churches: but when Men (yea, and sometimes Women) shall usurp Authority, and think themselves wiser than their Teachers, no wonder if these People run into Contentions and Parties, when any shall say they are not free to hear those whom the Church thinks fit to speak to them: This is the first step to Schism, and is usually attended, if not timely prevented, with a sinful Separation.

Elventhly, If you would keep the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace, be mindful, that the God, whom you serve, is a God of Peace, and your Saviour is a Prince of Peace, and that his Ways are Ways of Pleasantness, and all his Paths are Peace; and that Christ was sent into the World, to give Light to them that sit in Darkness, and in the Shadow of Death, and to guide our Feet in the Way of Peace.

Twelfthly, Consider the oneness of Spirit that is among the Enemies of Religion; though they differ about other things, yet to persecute Religion, and extirpate Religion out of the Earth, here they will agree; the Devils in the Air, and the Devils in the Earth, all the Devils in Hell, and in the World, make one at this turn. Shall the Devil's Kingdom be united, and shall Christ's be divided? Shall the Devils make one Shoulder to drive on the design of damning Men, and shall not Christians unite to carry on the great Design of saving of them? Shall the Papists agree and unite to carry on their Interest, notwithstanding the Multitudes of Orders, Degrees and Differences there are among them, and shall not those that call themselves Reformed Churches, unite, to carry on the common Interest of Christ in the World, notwithstanding some petty and disputable Differences that are among them? Quarrels about Religion (as one observes) were Sins not named among the Gentiles. What a Shame is it then, for Christians to abound in them, especially considering the nature of Christian Religion, and what large Provisions the Author of it hath made, to keep the Professors of it in Peace? Inasmuch (as one well observes) It is next to a miracle, that ever any (especially the Professors of it) should fall out about it.

Thirteenthly, Consider and remember, That the Judge stands at the Door; let this moderate our Spirits, that the Lord is at hand. What a sad account will they have to make when he comes, that shall be found to smite their fellow Servants, and to make the way to his Kingdom more narrow than ever he made it? Let me close all in the words of that great Apostle, 2 Cor. 13. 11. Finally, Brethren, farewell; be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace, and the God of love and peace shall be with you.

P O S T S C R I P T.

REader, I thought good to advertise thee, that I have delivered this to thy Hand, in the same Order and Method in which it was preached, and almost in the same Words, without any diminishings, or considerable enlargings, unless it be in the thirteen last particulars; upon some of which I have made some enlargements, which I could not then do for want of time; but the Substance of every one of them was then laid down in the same particular Order as here thou hast them; and now I have done, I make no other account (to use the words of a moderate Man upon the like Occasion) but it will fall out with me, as doth commonly with him that parts a Fray, both Parties may perhaps drive at me for wishing them no worse than Peace: My Ambition of the publick Tranquillity of the Church of God, I hope will carry me through these Hazards, let both beat me, so their Quarrels may cease, I shall rejoyce in those Elows and Scars I shall take for the Church's Safety.

VALE.

Mr. BUNYAN's last Sermon:

Preached July 1688.

JOHN I. 3.

Which were Born, not of Blood, nor of the Will of the Flesh, nor of the Will of Man, but of God.

THE Words have a Dependance on what goes before, and therefore I must direct you to them for the right understanding of it. You have it thus: He came to his own, but his own received him not; but as many as believed on him, to them gave he Power to become the Sons of God, even to them which believe on his Name: Which were Born, not of Blood, nor of the Will of the Flesh, but of God. In the Words before, you have two things.

First, Some of his own rejecting him when he offered himself to them.

Secondly, Others of his own receiving him, and making him welcome; those that reject him, he also passes by; but those that receive him, he gives them Power to become the Sons of God. Now, lest any one should look upon it as good Luck or Fortune, says he, They were Born, not of Blood, nor of the Will of the Flesh, nor of the Will of Man, but of God: They that did not receive him, they were only born of Flesh and Blood; but those that receive him, they have God to their Father, they receive the Doctrine of Christ with a vehement Desire.

First, I'll shew you what he means by Blood? They that believe are born to it, as an Heir is to an Inheritance; they are born of God, not of Flesh, nor of the Will of Man, but of God; not of Blood, that is, not by Generation, not born to the Kingdom of Heaven by the Flesh; not because I am the Son of a godly Man or Woman, that is meant by Blood, Acts 17. 26. He has made of one Blood all Nations: But when he says here, Not of Blood, he rejects all carnal privileges they did boast of. They boasted they were Abraham's Seed; No, no, says he, it is not of Blood: think not to say you have Abraham to your Father, you must be born of God, if you go to the Kingdom of Heaven.

Secondly, Nor of the Will of the Flesh, What must we understand by that?

First, It is taken for those vehement Inclinations that are in Man, to all manner of Looseness; fulfilling the Desires of the Flesh, that must not be understood here; Men are not made the Children of God by fulfilling their lustful Desires, it must be understood here in the best Sense; there is not only in carnal Men a Will to be vile, but there is in them a Will to be saved also, a Will to go to Heaven also: But this it will not do, it will not privilege a Man in the things of the Kingdom of God; natural Desires after the things of another World, they are not an Argument to prove a Man shall go to Heaven whenever he dies; I am not a Free Willer, I do abhor it, yet there is not the wickedest Man, but he desires some time or other to be saved; he will read some time or other, or it may be pray; but this will not do, It is not in him that wills, nor in him that runs, but in God that shews Mercy; there is Willing and Running, and yet to no purpose, Rom. 9. 16. Israel which followed after the Law of Righteousness have not obtained it; here I do not understand, as if the Apostle had denied a virtuous Course of Life to be the way to Heaven; but that a Man without Grace, tho' he have natural Gifts, yet he shall not obtain Privilege to go to Heaven, and be the Son of God: Though a Man without Grace may have a Will to be saved, yet he cannot have that Will God's Way; Nature, it cannot know any thing but the things of Nature; the things of God knows no Man, but by the Spirit of God; unless the Spirit of God be in you, it will leave you on this side the Gates of Heaven; Not of Blood, not of the Will of the Flesh, nor of the Will of Man, but of God. It may be some may have a Will, a Desire that Ismael may be saved, know this, it will not save thy Child. If it was our Will, I would have you all go to Heaven; how many is there in the World that pray for their Children, and cry for them, and ready to die, and this will not do? God's Will is the Rule of all, it is only through Jesus Christ, Which were born not of Flesh, not of the Will of Man, but of God. Now I come to the Doctrine.

Men that believe in Jesus Christ to the effectual receiving of Jesus Christ, they are born to it: He does not say they shall be born to it, but they are born to it; born of God unto God, and the Things of God, before he receives God to eternal Salvation: Except a Man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God. Now unless he be born of God he cannot see it: Suppose the Kingdom of God be what it will, he cannot see it before he be begotten of God; suppose it be the Gospel, he cannot see it before he be brought into a State of Regeneration; believing is the Consequence of the New Birth: Not of Blood, not of the will of Man but of God.

First, I will give you a clear Description of it under one Similitude or two; A Child before it be born into the World is in the dark Dungeon of its Mother's Womb; so a Child of God before he be born again is in the dark Dungeon of Sin, sees nothing of the Kingdom of God, therefore it is called a New Birth; the same Soul has Love one way in its carnal Condition, another way when it's born again.

Secondly, As it is compared to a Birth resembling a Child in his Mother's Womb; so it is compared to a Man being raised out of the Grave; and to be born again, is to be raised out of the Grave of Sin; awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the Dead, and Christ shall give thee Life. To be raised from the Grave of Sin, is to be begotten and born: Rev. 1. 5. there is a famous Instance of Christ, He is the first begotten from the Dead, he is the first born from the Dead, unto which our Regeneration alludeth, that is, if you be born again by seeking those things that are above, then there is a Similitude betwixt Christ's Resurrection and the New Birth, which was born, which was restored out of this dark World, and translated out of the Kingdom of this dark World into the Kingdom of his dear Son, and made us live a New Life; this is to be born again, and he that is delivered from the Mother's Womb, it is the help of the Mother; so he that is born of God, it is by the Spirit of God: I must give you a few Consequences of a new Birth.

First of all, A Child you know is incident to cry as soon as it comes into the World; for if there be no Noise, they say it is dead; you that are born of God, and Christians, if you be not Cryers, there is no spiritual Life in you; if you be born of God, you are crying ones; as soon as he has raised you out of the dark Dungeon of Sin, you cannot but cry to God, What must I do to be saved? As soon as ever God had touched the Jayler, he cries out, Men and Brethren what must I do to be saved? Oh! how many Prayerless Professors is there in London, that never pray? Coffee-houses will not let you pray, Trades will not let you pray, Looking-Glasses will not let you pray; but if you was born of God, you would.

Secondly, It is not only natural for a Child to cry, but it must crave the Breast, it cannot live without the Breast, therefore Peter makes it the true Tryal of a New-born Babe, the New-born Babe desires the sincere Milk of the Word, that he may grow thereby; if you be born of God, make it manifest by desiring the Breast of God: Do you long for the Milk of Promises? A Man lives one way when he is in the World, another way when he is brought unto Jesus Christ, Isaiah 66. They shall suck and be satisfied; if you be born again, there is no Satisfaction till you get the Milk of God's Word into your Souls, Isaiah 66. 11. To suck and be satisfied with the Breasts of Consolation: O what is a Promise to a carnal Man; a Whore-House it may be is more sweet to him; but if you be born again you cannot live without the Milk of God's Word; what is a Woman's Breast to a Horse? But what is it to a Child? there is its Comfort Night and Day, there is its Succour Night and Day: O how loth are they it should be taken from them; minding heavenly things, say a carnal Man, is but Vanity, but to a Child of God, there is his Comfort.

Thirdly, A Child that is newly born, if it have not other Comforts to keep it warm warm, than it had in its Mother's Womb, it dies; it must have something got for its Succour; so Christ had Swadling-Cloaths prepared for him; so those that are born again, they must have some Promise of Christ to keep them alive; those that are in a carnal State, they warm themselves with other things; but those that are born again, they cannot live without some Promise of Christ to keep them alive; as he did to the poor Infant in Ezekiel 17. I covered thee with embroidered Gold, and when Women are with Child, what fine things will they prepare for their Child? O but what fine things has Christ prepared to wrap all in that are born again? O what Wrappings of Gold has Christ prepared for all that are born again? Women will dress their Children, that every one may see them how fine they are, so he in Ezekiel 16. 11. I decked thee also with Ornaments, and I also put Bracelets upon thine Hand, and a Chain on thy Neck, and I put a Jewel on thy Forehead, and Ear-rings in thine Ears, and a beautiful Crown upon thine Head; and says he in the 13th Verse, Thou didst prosper to a Kingdom; this is to set out nothing in the World, but the Righteousness of Christ, and the Graces of the Spirit, without which a New-born Babe cannot live, unless they have the golden Righteousness of Christ.

Fourthly, A Child when it is in its Mother's Lap, the Mother takes great delight to have that which will be for its Comfort; so it is with God's Children, they shall be kept on his Knee, Isaiah 66. 11. They shall suck and be satisfied with the Breasts of her Consolation, Verse 13th. As one whom his Mother comforteth, so will I comfort you: There is a Similitude in these things that no body knows of, but those that are born again.

Fifthly, There is usually some Similitude betwixt the Father and the Child, it may be the Child looks like its Father; so those that are born again, they have a new Similitude, they have the Image of Jesus Christ; Gal. 4. Every one that is born of God, has something of the features of Heaven upon him; Men love those Children that are likest them most usually, so does God his Children; therefore they are called the Children of God; but others do not look like him; therefore they are called Sodomites. Christ describes Children of the Devil by their Features; the Children of the Devil, his Works they will do; all Works of Unrighteousness, they are the Devil's Works; if you are earthly, you have bore the Image of the earthly; if heavenly, you have bore the Image of the heavenly.

Sixthly, When a Man has a Child, he trains him up to his own liking, they have learned the Custom of their Father's House; so are those that are born of God, they have learned the Custom of the true Church of God, there they learn to cry, My Father and my God; they are brought up in God's House, they learn the Method, and Form of God's House, for regulating their Lives in this World.

Seventhly, Children, it is natural for them to depend upon their Father for what they want; if they want a Pair of Shoes, they go and tell him; if they want Bread, go and tell him; so should the Children of God do. Do you want Spiritual Bread? go tell God of it. Do you want Strength of Grace? ask it of God. Do you want Strength against Satan's Temptations? go and tell God of it. When the Devil tempts you, run home and tell your heavenly Father; go pour out your Complaints to God; this is natural to Children, if any wrong them, they go and tell their Father; so does those that are born of God, when they meet with Temptations, go and tell God of them.

The first Use is this, To make a strict Enquiry, whether you be born of God or not. Examine by those things I laid down before, of a Child of Nature, and a Child of Grace; Are you brought out of the dark Dungeon of this World into Christ? Have you learned to cry my Father? Jer. 3. 16. And I said, Thou shalt call me thy Father. All God's Children are Cryers; cannot you be quiet without you have a belly-full of the Milk of God's Word; cannot you be satisfied without you have Peace with God? Pray you consider it, and be serious with your selves; if you have not these Marks, you will fall short of the Kingdom of God, you shall never have an Interest there; there is no intruding: They will say, Lord, Lord, open to us, and he will say, I know you not: No Child of God, no heavenly Inheritance. We sometimes give something to those that are not our Children, but not our Lands. O do not flatter your selves with a Portion among the Sons, unless you live like Sons; when we see a King's Son play with a Beggar, this is unbecoming; so if you be the King's Children, live like the King's Children; if you be risen with Christ, set your Affections on things above, and not on things below; when you come together talk of what your Father promised you; you should all love your Father's Will, and be content, and pleased with the Exercises you met with in the World; if you are the Children of God, live together lovingly; if the World quarrel with you, it is no matter; but it is sad if you quarrel together; if this be amongst you, it's a Sign of ill breeding; it is not according to Rules you have in the Word of God. Dost thou see a Soul that has the Image of God in him? Love him, love him; say, This Man and I must go to Heaven one Day; serve one another, do Good for one another; and if any wrong you, pray pray to God to right you, and love the Brotherhood.

Lastly, If you be the Children of God, learn that Lesson, Gird up the Loins of your Mind as obedient Children, not fashioning your selves according to your former Conversation; but be ye holy in all manner of Conversation; consider that the holy God is your Father, and let this oblige you to live like the Children of God, that you may look your Father in the Face with Comfort another Day.

One Thing is Needful:

O R,

Serious Meditations upon the Four last Things,
Death, Judgment, Heaven, and Hell.

An Introduction to the ensuing Discourse.

- I. THese Lines I at this time present
To all that will them heed;
Wherein I shew to what intent
God saith, Convert with speed.
- II. For these four Things come on apace,
Which we should know full well,
Both Death and Judgment, and, in place,
Next to them Heav'n and Hell.
- III. For doubtless, Man was never born
For this Life and no more:
No, in the Resurrection Morn
They must have Weal or Woe.
- IV. Can any think, that God should take
That pains, to form a Man
So like himself, only to make Him here a Moment stand?
- V. Or that he should make such ado,
By Justice, and by Grace;
By Prophets and Apostles too,
That Men might see his Face.
- VI. O that the Promise he hath made,
Also the Threatnings great,
Should in a Moment end and fade;
O! No, this is a Cheat.
- VII. Besides, who is so mad (or worse)
To think that Christ should come
From Glory, to be made a Curse,
And that in Sinners room.
- VIII. If nothing should by us be had
When we are gone from hence,
But Vanities while here, O mad
And foolish Confidence.
- IX. Again, Shall God, who is the Truth,
Say, there is Heaven and Hell,
And shall Men play that Trick of Youth,
To say, but who can tell?
- X. Shall he that keeps his Promise sure
In things both low and small,

- Yet break it like a Man impure,
In matters great'st of all?
- XI. Oh, let all tremble at that thought,
That puts on God the lye,
That saith, Men shall turn into nought
When they be sick and dye.
 - XII. Alas, Death is but as the Door
Through which all Men do pass,
To that which they for evermore
Shall have by Wrath or Grace.
 - XII. Let all therefore that read my Lines
Apply them to the Heart;
Yea, let them read, and turn betimes,
And get the better part.
 - XV. Mind therefore what I treat on here,
Yea, mind and weigh it well;
'Tis Death and Judgment, and a clear
Discourse of Heaven and Hell.

Of Death.

- I. DEath, as a King rampant and stout
The World he dare engage;
He conquers all, yea, and doth rout
The great, strong, wise, and sage.
2. No King so great, nor Prince so strong,
But Death can make to yield,
Yea, bind and lay them all along,
And make them quit the Field.
3. Where are the Victors of the World,
With all their Men of might?
Those that together Kingdoms hurl'd,
By Death are put to flight.
4. How feeble is the strongest hand,
When Death begins to gripe?
The Giant now leaves off to stand,
Much less withstand and fight.

5. The

5. The Man that hath a Lion's Face
Must here give Place and bend,
Yea, tho' his Bones were Bars of Brass,
'Tis vain here to contend.
6. Submit he must to feeble ones,
To Worms who will enclose
His Skin and Flesh, Sinews and Bones,
And will thereof dispose,
7. Among themselves, as Merchants do
The Prizes they have got;
Or as the Soldiers give unto
Each Man the Share and Lot,
8. Which they by dint of Sword have won,
From their most daring Foe;
While he lies by as still as Stone,
Not knowing what they do.
9. Beauty Death turns to Rottenness,
And Youth to wrinkled Face;
The Witty he brings to Distress,
And Wantons to Disgrace.
10. The wild he tames, and spoils the
Of all that wanton are, [Mirth
He takes the Worldling from his Worth,
And poor Man from his Care.
11. Death favours none, he lays at all,
Of all Sorts and Degree;
Both old and young, both great and small,
Rich, poor, and bound, and free.
12. No fawning Words will flatter him,
Nor Threatnings make him start;
He favours none for Worth or Kin,
All must taste of his Dart.
13. What shall I say? the Graves declare
That Death shall conquer all;
There lie the Skulls, Dust, Bones, and there
The Mighty daily fall.
14. The very Looks of Death are grim
And ghastly to behold;
Yea, tho' but in a Dead-man's Skin,
When he is gone and cold.
15. How'raided are some of Dead-men's Beds,
And others of their Bones;
They neither care to see their Heads,
Nor yet to hear their Groans.
16. Now all these Things are but the Shade
And Badges of his Coat;
The Glass that runs, the Scythe and Spade,
Tho' Weapons more remote:
17. Yet such as make poor Mortals shrink
And fear, when they are told.
These Things are Signs that they must drink
With Death, O then how cold
18. It strikes them to the Heart! how do
They study it to shun!
Indeed who can bear up, and who Can from these Shakings run?
19. But how much more then when he
To grapple with thy Heart; [comes
To bind with Thread thy Toes and Thumbs,
And fetch thee in his Cart?
20. Then will he cut thy silver Cord,
And break thy golden Bowl;
Yea, break that Pitcher which the Lord
Made Cabin for thy Soul.
21. Thine Eyes, that now are quick of Sight,
Shall then no way espy
Vol. II.
- How to escape this doleful Plight,
For Death will make thee die.
22. Those Legs that now can nimbly run,
Shall then with Faintness fail
To take one Step Death's Dart to shun,
When he doth thee assail.
23. That Tongue that now can boast and Shall then by Death be ty'd [brag
So fast, as not to speak or wag,
Tho' Death lies by thy Side.
24. Thou that didst once incline thine Ear
Unto the Song and Tale,
Shall only now Death's Message hear,
While he with Face most pale,
25. Doth Reason with thee how thy Days
Hath hitherto been spent;
And what have been thy Deeds and Ways,
Since God thee Time hath lent.
26. Then will he so begin to tear
Thy Body from thy Soul
And both from Life, if now thy Care
Be not on Grace to roul.
27. Death puts on Things another Face
Than we in Health do see:
Sin, Satan, Hell, Death, Life and Grace
Now great and weighty be.
28. Yea, now the Sick Man's Eye is set Upon a World to come:
He also knows too without lett,
That there must be his Home.
29. Either in Joy, in Bliss and Light,
Or Sorrow, Woe and Grief;
Either with Christ and Saints in white,
Or Fiends, without relief.
30. But, oh! the sad Estate that then
They will be in that die
Both void of Grace and Life! poor Men!
How will they fear and cry.
31. Ha! live I may not, tho' I would
For Life give more than all;
And dye I dare not, tho' I should
The World gain by my Fall.
32. No, here he must no longer stay,
He feels his Life run out,
His Night is come, also the Day
That makes him fear and doubt.
33. He feels his very Vitals die,
All waxeth pale and wan;
Nay, worse, he fears to Misery
He shortly must be gone.
34. Death doth already strike his Heart
With his most fearful Sting
Of Guilt, which makes his Conscience start
And quake at every thing.
35. Yea, as his Body doth decay
By a contagious Grief,
So his poor Soul doth faint away
Without Hope or Relief.
36. Thus while the Man is in this Scare,
Death doth still at him lay;
Live, die, sink, swim, fall foul or fair,
Death still holds on his way.
37. Still pulling of him from his place,
Full sore against his Mind;
Death like a Sprite stares in his Face,
And doth with Links him bind.
38. And

38. And carries him into his Den,
In Darknes there to lie,
Among the Swarms of wicked Men
In Grief eternally.
- 39 For only he that God doth fear
Will now be counted wise:
Yea, he that feareth him while here,
He only wins the Prize.
40. 'Tis he that shall by Angels be Attended to that Bliss
That Angels have; for he, O he
Of Glory shall not miss.
41. Those Weapons and those Instruments
Of Death, that others fright;
Those dreadful Fears and Discontents
That brings on some that Night
42. That never more shall have a Day,
Brings this Man to that Rest
Which none can win but only they Whom God hath call'd and blest
43. With the first Fruits of Saving Grace,
With Faith, Hope, Love and Fear
Him to offend; this Man his Face
In Visions high and clear,
44. Shall in that Light which no Eye can Approach unto, behold
The Rays and Beams of Glory, and Find there his Name inrol'd,
45. Among those glittering Stars of Light
That Christ still holdeth fast
In his right Hand with all his might,
Until that Danger's past,
46. That shakes the World, and most hath
Into Grief and Distress, [dropt
O blessed then is he that's wrapt
In Christ his Righteousness.
47. This is the Man Death cannot kill,
For he hath put on Arms;
Him Sin nor Satan hath not Skill
To hurt with all their Charms.
48. An Helmet on his Head doth stand,
A Breast-plate on his Heart:
A Shield also is in his Hand,
That blunteth every Dart.
49. Truth girds him round the Reins, also His Sword is on his Thigh;
His Feet in Shoes of Peace do go
The ways of Purity.
50. His Heart it groaneth to the Lord,
Who hears him at his Call,
And doth him Help and Strength afford,
Wherewith he conquers all.
51. Thus fortified, he keeps the Field
While Death is gone and fled;
And then lies down upon his Shield
Till Christ doth raise the Dead.

Of Judgment.

1. AS 'tis appointed Men should die,
So Judgment is the next
That meets them most assuredly;
For so faith holy Text.
2. Wherefore of Judgment I shall now Inform you what I may,

- That you may see what 'tis, and how
'Twill be with Men that Day.
3. This World it hath a time to stand,
Which Time once ended, then
Will issue Judgment out of hand
Upon all sorts of Men.
4. The Judge we find, in God's Record,
The Son of Man, for he
By God's Appointment is made Lord
And Judge of all that be.
5. Wherefore this Son of Man shall come
At last to count with all,
And unto them shall give just Doom,
Whether they stand or fall.
6. Behold ye now the Majesty
And State that shall attend
This Lord, this Judge, and Justice high
When he doth now descend.
7. He comes with Head as white as Snow,
With Eyes like Flames of Fire;
In Justice clad from Top to Toe,
Most glorious in Attire.
8. His Face is fill'd with Gravity;
His Tongue is like a Sword;
His Presence awes both stout and high,
The World shakes at his Word.
9. He comes in flaming Fire, and
With Angels clear and bright,
Each with a Trumpet in his Hand,
Cloathed in shining white.
10. The Trump of God sounds in the Air,
The Dead do hear his Voice;
The Living too run here and there,
Who made not him their Choice.
11. Thus to his Place he doth repair,
(Appointed for his Throne)
Where he will sit to judge, and where He'll count with every one.
12. Angels attending on his Hand
By thousands on a Row;
Yea, thousand thousands by him stand,
And at his Beck do go.
13. Thus being fate, the Books do ope
In which all Crimes are writ,
All Virtues too, of Faith and Hope,
Of Love; and every whit,
14. Of all that Man hath done or said
Or did intend to do;
Whether they sinned, or were afraid
Evil to come into.
15. Before this Bar each Sinner now
In Person must appear;
Under his Judgment, there to bow
With trembling and with fear:
16. Within whole breast a witness then
Will certainly arise,
That to each Charge will say Amen,
While they seek and devise
17. To shun the Sentence which the Lord
Against them then will read,
Out of the Books of God's Record,
With Majesty and Dread.
18. But every heart shall opened be Before this Judge most high;
Yea, every thought to Judgment he
Will bring assuredly.
19. And

19. And every word and action too
He there will manifest;
Yea, all that ever thou didst do
Or keep within thy breast:
20. Shall then be seen and laid before
The world, that then will stand
To see thy Judge open every Sore,
And all thy Evils scann'd.
21. Weighing each sin and wickedness
With so much Equity,
Proportioning of thy distress
And woful misery.
22. With so much justice, doing right,
That thou thy self shalt say,
My sins have brought me to this plight,
I threw my self away.
23. Into that gulph my sins have brought Me justly to possess,
For which I blame not Christ, I wrought
It out by wickedness.
24. But oh! how willingly would these
That thus in Judgment be,
If that they might have help or ease,
Unto the Mountains flee.
25. They would rejoyce if that they might
But underneath them creep,
To hide them from revenging Right,
For fear of which they weep.
26. But all in vain, the Mountains then
Will all be fled and gone;
No shelter will be found for Men
That now are left alone.
27. For Succour they did not regard
When Christ by Grace did call
To them, therefore they are not heard,
No Mountains on them fall.
28. Before this Judge no one shall shroud
Himself, under pretence
Of Knowledge, which hath made him proud,
Nor seeming Penitence.
29. No high Profession here can stand,
Unless Sincerity
Hath been therewith commixed, and Brought forth Simplicity.
30. No Mask nor Vizer here can hide
The Heart that rotten is;
All Cloaks now must be laid aside,
No Sinner must have blifs.
31. Tho' most approve of thee, and count
Thee upright in thy Heart,
Yea, tho' prefer'd and made surmount
Most Men to act thy part,
32. In treading where the godly trod,
As to an outward shew;
Yet this hold still, the Grace of God
Takes hold on but a few.
33. So as to make them truly such
As then shall stand before
This Judge with gladness; this is much
Yet true for evermore.
34. The Tree of Life this Paradise
Doth always beautify,
'Cause of our Health it is the Rise
And Perpetuity.
35. Here stands the golden throne of Grace
From out of which do run
Those crytal streams that make this place
Far brighter than the Sun.
36. Here stands Mount Sion with her King,
Jerusalem above,
That holy and delightful Thing,
So beautified with Love.
37. That as a Mother succours those Which of her Body be,
So she far more, all such as close
In with her Lord; and she,
38. Her Grace, her everlasting Doors
Will open wide unto
Them all, with welcome, welcome, poor,
Rich, bond, free, high and low,
39. Unto the Kingdom which our Lord
Appointed hath for all
That hath his name and word ador'd,
Because he did them call,
40. Unto that work, which also they
Sincerely did fulfil,
Not shunning always to obey
His gracious holy will.
41. Besides, this much doth beautify
This goodly Paradise,
That from all quarters constantly,
Whole thousands, as the price,
42. Of precious Blood, do here arrive,
As safe escaping all
Sin, Hell and Satan did contrive
To bring them into thrall.
43. Each telling his deliverance
I' th' open face of Heaven;
Still calling to remembrance
How fiercely they were driven
44. By deadly Foe, who did pursue
As swift as Eagles fly;
Which if thou have not, down thou must
With those that then shall die
- The second Death, and be accurst
Of God. For certainly.
45. The truth of Grace shall only here
Without a blush be bold
To stand, whilst others quake and fear,
And dare not once behold.
46. That heart that here was right for God
Shall there be comforted;
But those that evil ways have trod,
Shall then hang down their head.
47. As sore confounded with the Guilt
That now upon them lies,
Because they did delight in Filth
And beastly Vanities.
48. Or else because they did deceive
With hypocritical
Disguises their own Souls, and leave
Or shun that best of all
49. Approved word of Righteousness,
They were invited to Embrace, therefore they no access
Now to him have, but woe.
50. For every one must now receive
According to their ways,
They that unto the Lord did cleave
The everlasting Joys.
51. Those that did die in Wickedness,
To execution sent,
There still to grapple with Distress,
Which nothing can prevent.
52. Of

52. Of which two States I next shall write,
Wherefore I pray give ear,
And to them bend with all your might
Your Heart with filial Fear.

Of Heaven.

1. H Heaven is a Place, also a State,
It doth all things excell.
No Man can fully it relate,
Nor of its Glory tell.
2. God made it for his Residence,
To sit on as a Throne,
Which shews to us the Excellence
Whereby it may be known.
3. Doubtless the Fabrick that was built
For this so great a King,
Must needs surprize thee, if thou wilt
But duly mind the thing.
4. If all that build do build to suit
The Glory of their State,
What Orator (tho' most acute)
Can fully Heaven relate?
5. If Palaces that Princes build
(Which yet are made of Clay)
Do so amaze when much beheld,
Of Heav'n what shall we say?
6. It is the high and holy Place,
No Moth can there annoy,
Nor make to fade that goodly Grace
That Saints shall there enjoy.
7. Mansions for Glory and for Rest
Do there prepared stand,
Buildings eternal for the blest
Are there provided, and
8. The Glory and the Comeliness
By deepest Thought none may
With Heart or Mouth fully express,
Nor can before that Day.
9. These Heav'ns, we see, be as a Scrole,
Or Garment folded up,
Before they do together roll,
And we call'd in to sup,
10. There with the King, the Bridegroom,
By him are led into [and
His Palace-Chambers, there to stand
With his Prospect to view.
11. And taste, and smell, and be inflam'd,
And ravished to see
The Buildings he hath for us fram'd,
How full of Heaven they be.
12. It's State also is marvellous,
For Beauty to behold;
All Goodness there is plenteous,
And better far than Gold.
13. Adorn'd with Grace and Righteousness,
While fragrant Scents of Love
O'erflow with everlasting Bliss
All that do dwell above.
14. The heav'nly Majesty, whose Face
Doth far exceed the Sun,
Will there cast forth its Rays of Grace
After this World is done.
15. Which Rays and Beams will so possess
All things that there shall dwell,

- With so much Glory, Light, and Bliss,
That none can think or tell.
16. That Wisdom which doth order all
Shall there be fully shown;
That Strength that bears the World there
By every one be known. [shall
 17. That Holiness and Sanctity
Which doth all Thought surpass,
Shall there in present Purity
Outshine the crystal Glass.
 18. The Beauty and the Comeliness
Of this Almighty shall Make amiable with lasting Bliss
Those he thereto shall call.
 19. The Presence of this God will be Eternal Life in all,
And Health and Gladness, while we see Thy Face, O Immortal!
 20. Here will the Lord make clear and plain
How sweetly did agree,
His Attributes, when Christ was slain
Our Saviour to be.
 21. How Wisdom did find out the way,
How Strength did make him stand,
How Holiness did bear the Sway,
And answer just demand.
 22. How all these Attributes did bend
Themselves to work our Life,
Thorough the Christ whom God did send
To save us by his Might.
 23. All this will sparkle in our Eye
Within the holy Place,
And greatly raise our Melody,
And flow our Hearts with Grace.
 24. The largest Thought that can arise
Within the widest Heart
Shall then be filled with Surprize,
And pleas'd in every part.
 25. All Mysteries shall here be seen,
And every Knot unty'd;
Electing Love, that hid hath been,
Shall shine on every Side.
 26. The God of Glory here will be
The Life of every one,
Whose goodly Attributes shall we Possess them as our own.
 27. By Wisdom we all things shall know,
By Light all things shall see,
By Strength (too) all things we shall do,
When we in Glory be.
 28. The holy Lamb of God also,
Who for our sakes did die,
The holy ones of God shall know,
And that most perfectly.
 29. Those small and short Discoveries
That we have of him here,
Will there be seen with open Eyes,
In Visions full and clear.
 30. Those many thousand Acts of Grace,
That here we feel and find,
Shall there be read with open Face
Upon his Heart most kind;
 31. There he will shew us how he was
Our Prophet, Priest, and King,
And how he did maintain our Cause,
And us to Glory bring.
 32. There

32. There we shall see how he was touch'd
With all our Grief and Pain,
(As in his Word he hath avouch'd)
When we with him shall reign;
33. He'll shew us also how he did
Maintain our Faith and Love,
And why his Face sometimes he hid
From us, who are his Dove;
34. These tempting times that here we have
We there shall see were good,
Also that hidden Strength he gave,
The Purchase of his Blood.
35. That he should stand for us before
His Father, thus we read,
But then shall see, and shall adore
Him for his gracious Deed.
36. Tho' we are vile, he without Shame
Before the Angels all,
Lays out his Strength, his Worth, and Name,
For us, who are in thrall,
37. This is he who was mock'd and beat,
Spit on, and crown'd with Thorns;
Who for us had a bloody Sweat,
Whose Heart was broke with Scorns.
38. 'Tis he who stands so much our Friend,
As shortly we shall see,
With open Face, World without End,
And in his Presence be.
39. That Head that once was crown'd with Shall now with Glory shine, [Thorns,
That Heart that broken was with Scorns,
Shall flow with Life divine.
40. That Man that here met with Disgrace,
We there shall see so bright,
That Angels can't behold his Face
For its exceeding Light.
41. What Gladness will possess our Heart
When we shall see these things!
What Light and Life in every part
Will rise like lasting Springs!
42. O blessed Face, and holy Grace,
When shall we see this Day?
Lord, fetch us to this goodly place
We humbly do thee pray.
43. Next to this Lamb we shall behold
All Saints, both more and less,
With whited Robes in Glory rould,
'Cause him they did confess.
44. Each walking in his Righteousness
With shining Crowns of Gold,
Triumphing still in heav'nly Bliss,
Amazing to behold.
45. Each Person for his Majesty
Doth represent a King;
Yea, Angel like for Dignity,
And Seraphims that sing.
46. Each Motion of their Mind, and so
Each twinkling of their Eye;
Each Word they speak and Step they go,
It is in Purity.
47. Immortal are they every one,
Wrapt up in Health and Light,
Mortality from them is gone,
Weakness is turn'd to Might.
48. The Stars are not so clear as they,
They equalize the Sun;
Vol. II.

Their Glory shines to perfect Day,
Which Day will ne'er be done.
49. No Sorrow can them now annoy,
Nor Weakness, Grief or Pain,
No Faintness can abate their Joy,
They now in Life do reign.
50. They shall not there, as here, be vext
With Satan, Men, or Sin,
Nor with their wicked Hearts perplext,
The Heavens have cop'd them in.
51. Thus as they shine in their Estate,
So too in their Degree;
Which is most goodly to relate,
And ravishing to see.
52. The Majesty whom they adore,
Doth them in Wisdom place
Upon the Thrones, and that before
The Angels, to their Grace.
53. The Saints of the Old Testament,
Full right to their Degree:
Likewise the New, in excellent Magnificency be.
54. Each one his Badge of Glory wears,
According to his Place,
According as was his Affairs
Here, in the time of Grace.
55. Some on the right hand of the Lamb,
Likewise some on the left,
With Robes and golden Chains do stand
Most grave, most sage, and dest.
56. The Martyr here is known from him
Who peaceably did die,
Both by the Place he sitteth in,
And by his Dignity.
57. Each Father, Saint, and Prophet shall,
According to his Worth,
Enjoy the Honour of his Call,
And plainly hold it forth.
58. Those Bodies which sometimes were
And Bones that broken were [torn,
For God's word, he doth now adorn
With Health and Glory fair.
59. Thus when in heav'nly harmony
These blessed Saints appear,
Adorn'd with Grace and Majesty,
What Gladness will be there?
60. The Light, and Grace, and Counte-
The least of these shall have, [nance;
Will so much Terror them advance,
And make their Face so grave,
61. That at them all the World will shake,
When they lift up their Head;
Princes and Kings will at them quake,
And fall before them dead.
62. This shall we see, thus shall we be,
O would the Day were come,
Lord Jesus take us up to thee,
To this desired home.
63. Angels also we shall behold,
When we on high ascend,
Each shining like to Men of Gold,
And on the Lord attend.
64. These goodly Creatures, full of Grace,
Shall stand about the Throne,
Each one with Lightning in his Face,
And shall to us be known.
65. These

65. These Cherubims with one accord
Shall cry continually,
Ah! holy, holy, holy Lord,
And heavenly Majesty.
66. These will us in their Arms embrace,
And welcome us to rest,
And joy to see us clad with Grace,
And of the Heavens possess.
67. This we shall hear, this we shall see,
While Raptures take us up,
When we with blessed Jesus be,
And at his Table sup.
68. Oh shining Angels! what must we
With you lift up our Voice?
We must, and with you ever be,
And with you must rejoice.
69. Our Friends that lived godly here,
Shall there be found again,
The Wife, the Child, and Father dear,
With others of our Train.
70. Each one down to the Foot in white,
Fill'd to the Brim with Grace,
Walking among the Saints in Light,
With glad and joyful Face.
71. Those God did use us to convert,
We there with Joy shall meet,
And jointly shall with all our Heart
In Life each other greet.
72. A Crown to them we then shall be,
A Glory and a Joy;
And that before the Lord, when he
The World comes to destroy.
73. This is the place, this is the state,
Of all that fear the Lord;
Which Men nor Angels may relate
With tongue, or pen, or word.
74. No Night is here, for to eclipse
Its spangling Rays so bright,
Nor doubt, nor fear to shut the Lips,
Of those within this light.
75. The strings of Musick here are tun'd
For heavenly harmony,
And every Spirit here perfum'd
With perfect Sanctity.
76. Here runs the Crystal streams of Life,
Quite thorow all our Veins,
And here by Love we do unite
With Glory's golden Chains.
77. Now that which sweetneth all will be
The lasting of this state;
This heightens all we hear or see
To a transcendent rate.
78. For should the Saints enjoy all this
But for a certain time,
Oh, how would they their mark then miss,
And at this thing repine?
79. Yea, 'tis not possible that they
Who then shall dwell on high,
Should be content, unless they may
Dwell there eternally.
80. A thought of parting with this place
Would bitter all their Sweet,
And darkness put upon the Face
Of all they there do meet.
81. But far from this the Saints shall be,
Their Portion is the Lord,

Whose Face for ever they shall see,
As saith the Holy Word.

82. And that with everlasting Peace,
Joy, and Felicity;
From this time forth they shall encrease
Unto Eternity.

Of Hell, and the Estate of those that perish.

1. THus having shew'd you what I see
Of Heaven, I now will tell You also, after Search, what be
The damned wights of Hell.
2. And oh, that they that read my Lines
Would ponder soberly,
And lay to heart such things betimes
As touch Eternity.
3. The sleepy Sinner little thinks
What sorrows will abound
Within him, when upon the brinks
Of Tophet he is found.
4. Hell is beyond all thought a state
So doubtful and forlorn,
So fearful, that none can relate
The pangs that there are born.
5. God will exclude them utterly
From his most blessed Face,
And them involve in misery,
In shame, and in disgrace.
6. God is the Fountain of all bliss,
Of Life, of Light and Peace;
They then must needs be comfortless
Who are depriv'd of these.
7. Instead of Life, a living Death
Will there in all be found,
Dyings will be in every breath,
Thus sorrow will abound.
8. No light, but darkness here doth dwell,
No peace but horror strange:
The fearful damning wights of Hell
In all will make this change.
9. To many things the damned's woe
Is likened in the Word,
And that because no one can show
The Vengeance of the Lord.
10. Unto a dreadful burning Lake,
All on a fiery flame.
Hell is compared, for to make
All understand the same.
11. A burning Lake, a Furnace hot,
A burning Oven too
Must be the Portion, Share, and Lot
Of those which evil sow.
12. This plainly shews the burning heat
With which it will oppress
All hearts, and will like burnings eat
Their Souls with sore distress.
13. This burning Lake it is God's wrath
Incensed by the Sin,
Of those who do reject his Path,
And wicked ways walk in.
14. Which wrath will so perplex all parts
Of Body and of Soul,
As if up to the very hearts
In burnings they did roul.
15. Again,

15. Again, to shew the stinking state of this so sad a case,
Like burning Brimstone God doth make
The hidings of his Face.
16. And truly as the steam and smoak
And flames of Brimstone smell,
To blind the Eyes, and Stomach choak,
So are the pangs of Hell.
17. To see a Sea of Brimstone burn,
Who would it not affright?
But they whom God to Hell doth turn
Are in most woful plight.
18. This burning cannot quenched be,
No, not with tears of Blood,
No mournful groans in misery
Will here do any good.
19. O damned Men! this is your Fate,
The Day of Grace is done,
Repentance now doth come too late,
Mercy is fled and gone.
20. Your groans and cries they sooner should Have sounded in mine Ears,
If Grace you would have had, or would Have me regard your tears.
21. Me you offended with your Sin,
Instructions you did slight,
Your Sins against my Law hath been Justice shall have his right.
22. I gave my Son to do you good,
I gave you space and time
With him to close, which you withstood,
And did with Hell combine.
23. Justice against you now is set,
Which you cannot appease;
Eternal Justice doth you let
From either life or ease.
24. Thus he that to this place doth come
May groan, and sigh, and weep;
But Sin hath made that place his home
And there it will him keep.
25. Wherefore Hell in another place
Is call'd a Prison too,
And all to shew the evil case
Of all Sin doth undo.
26. Which Prison, with its locks and bars
Of God's lasting decree,
Will hold them fast; O how this mars
All thought of being free!
27. Out at these brazen bars they may
The Saints in Glory see;
But this will not their grief allay,
But to them torment be.
28. Thus they in this infernal Cave
Will now be holden fast
From heavenly freedom, though they crave
Of it they may not taste.
29. The Chains that darkness on them hangs
Still rattling in their Ears,
Creates within them heavy pangs,
And still augments their fears.
30. Thus hopeless of all remedy,
They dyingly do sink
Into the Jaws of Misery,
And Seas of Sorrow drink.
31. For being cop'd on every side
With helplessness and grief,
Headlong into despair they slide
Bereft of all relief.
32. Therefore this Hell is call'd a Pit,
Prepar'd for those that dye.
The second Death, a term most fit
To shew their misery.
33. A Pit that's bottomless is this,
A Gulph of grief and woe,
A Dungeon which they cannot miss,
That will themselves undo.
34. Thus without stay they always sink,
Thus fainting still they fail,
Despair they up like water drink,
These Prisoners have no Bail. [gnaws,
35. Here meets them now that Worm that
And plucks their bowels out,
The Pit too on them shuts her Jaws;
This dreadful is, no doubt.
36. This ghastly Worm is guilt for Sin,
That on the Conscience feeds,
With Vipers Teeth, both sharp and keen,
Whereat it sorely bleeds.
37. This worm is fed by memory,
Which strictly brings to mind,
All things done in prosperity,
As we in Scripture find.
38. No word, nor thought, nor act they did,
But now is set in fight,
Not one of them can now be hid,
Memory gives them light.
39. On which the understanding still
Will judge, and sentence pass,
This kills the mind, and wounds the will,
Alas, alas, alas!
40. Oh, Conscience is the Slaughter shop,
There hangs the Ax and Knife,
'Tis there the Worm makes all things hot,
And wearies out the Life.
41. Here then is Execution done
On Body and on Soul,
For Conscience will be brib'd of none,
But gives to all their doul.
42. This Worm, 'tis said, shall never die,
But in the Belly be
Of all that in the flames shall lye,
O dreadful sight to see!
43. This Worm now needs must in them live,
For sin will still be there,
And guilt, for God will not forgive,
Nor Christ their burden bear.
44. But take from them all help and stay,
And leave them to despair,
Which feeds upon them night and day,
This is the damned's share.
45. Now will confusion so possess
These Monuments of Ire,
And so confound them with distress,
And trouble their desire,
46. That what to think, or what to do,
Or where to lay their head,
They know not; 'tis the damned's woe
To live, and yet be dead.
47. These Cast away would fain have life,
But know, they never shall,
They would forget their deadful plight,
But that sticks fast 'st of all.
48. God, Christ, and Heaven, they know
Yet dare not on them think, [are best,
The Saints they know in Joys do rest,
Whilst they their tears do drink. 48.

49. They cry alas, but all in vain,
They stick fast in the mire,
They would be rid of present pain,
Yet set themselves on fire.
50. Darkness is their perplexity,
Yet do they hate the light,
They always see their misery,
Yet are themselves all night.
51. They are all dead, yet live they do,
Yet neither live nor die,
They die to weal, and live to woe,
This is their misery.
52. Amidst all this so great a scare
That here I do relate,
Another falleth to their share
In this their sad estate.
53. The Legions of infernal Fiends
Then with them needs must be,
A just reward for all their pains,
This they shall feel and see. [cries,
54. With yellings, howlings, shrieks and
And other doleful noise,
With trembling hearts and failing eyes,
These are their hellish Joys.
55. These Angels black they would obey,
And serve with greedy mind,
And take delight to go astray,
That pleasure they might find.
56. Which pleasure now like poison turns
Their Joy to heaviness,
Yea, like the gall of Asps it burns
And doth them sore oppress.
57. Now is the Joy they lived in
All turn'd to brinish tears,
And resolute attempts to sin
Turn'd into hellish fears.
58. The floods run trickling down their face,
Their hearts do prick and ake,
While they lament their woful case,
Their loins totter and shake.
59. O wetted cheeks, with bleared eyes,
How fully do you show
The pangs that in their bosom lies,
And grief they undergo!
60. Their dolour in their bitterness
So greatly they bemoan,
That Hell it self this to express
Doth eccho with their groan.
61. Thus broiling on the burning grates,
They now to wailing go,
And say of those unhappy fates
That did them thus undo.
62. Alas my grief! hard hap had I
Those dolours here to find,
A living Death, in Hell I lye,
Involv'd with grief of mind.
63. I once was fair for light and grace,
My days were long and good;
I lived in a blessed place
Where was most Heav'nly food.
64. But wretch I am, I slighted Life,
And chose in Death to live;
Oh, for these days now if I might
Ten thousand worlds would give.
65. What time had I to pray and read
What time to hear the word!
What means to help me at my need
Did God to me afford!
66. Examples too of Piety
I every day did see,
But they abuse and slight did I,
Oh, woe be unto me.
67. I now remember how my Friend
Reproved me of Vice,
And bid me mind my latter end,
Both once, and twice, and thrice,
68. But oh, deluded Man, I did
My Back upon him turn;
Eternal life I did not heed,
For which I now do mourn.
69. Ah, golden time I did thee spend
In Sin and Idleness,
Ah health and wealth, I did you lend
To bring me to distress.
70. My Feet to evil I let run,
And tongue of folly talk;
My eyes to vanity hath gone,
Thus did I plainly walk.
71. I did as greatly toil and strain
My self with Sin to please,
As if that everlasting gain
Could have been found in these.
72. But nothing, nothing have I found
But weeping, and alas,
And sorrow, which doth now surround
Me, and augment my cross.
73. Ah, bleeding Conscience, how did I Thee check when thou didst tell Me of my faults for which I lye
Dead while I live in Hell.
74. I took thee for some peevish foe,
When thou didst me accuse,
Therefore I did thee buffet so,
And Counsel did refuse.
75. Thou often didst me tidings bring,
How God did me dislike,
Because I took delight in Sin;
But I thy News did slight.
76. Ah Mind, why didst thou do those things
That now do work my woe?
Ah, Will, why wast thou thus inclin'd
Me ever to undo?
77. My Senses, how were you beguil'd
When you said Sin was good?
It hath in all parts me defil'd,
And drown'd me like a flood.
78. Ah, that I now a Being have,
In sorrow and in pain;
Mother, would you had been my Grave,
But this I wish in vain.
79. Had I been made a Cockatrice,
A Toad, or such like thing;
Yea had I been made Snow or Ice,
Then had I had no Sin.
80. A Block, a Stock, a Stone, or Clot
Is happier than I;
For they know neither cold nor hot,
To live nor yet to die.
81. I envy now the happiness
Of those that are in light,
I hate the very name of bliss,
'Cause I have there no right.
82. I grieve to see that others are
In glory, life, and well,
Without all fear, or dread, or care,
While I am wreck'd in Hell.
- 83.

83. Thus will these Souls with watry Eyes,
And hacking of their Teeth,
With wringing Hands, and fearful Cries,
Expostulate their Grief.

84. O fet their Teeth they will, and gnash,
And gnaw for very Pain,
While as with Scorpions God doth lash
Them for their life so vain.

85. Again, still as they in this muse,
Are feeding on the fire,
To mind there comes yet other news,
To screw their torments higher.

86. Which is the length of this estate,
Where they at present lie.
Which in a word I thus relate,
'Tis to Eternity.

87. This thought now is so firmly fixt
In all that comes to mind,
And also is so strongly mixt
With wrath of every kind.

88. So that whatever they do know,
Or see, or think, or feel,
For ever still doth strike them thro'
As with a Bar of Steel.

89. For ever shineth in the Fire,
Ever is on the Chains;
'Tis also in the Pit of Ire
And taste in all their Pains.

90. For ever separate from God,
From Peace, and Life, and Rest;

For ever underneath the Rod
That Vengeance liketh best.

91. O ever, ever, this will drown'd
Them quite and make them cry,
We never shall get o'er thy bound,
Oh, great Eternity!

92. They sooner now the Stars may count
Than loose these dismal bands;
Or see to what the moats amount,
Or number up the sands,

93. Than see an end of this their woe,
Which now for Sin they have;
O wantons, take heed what you do,
Sin will you never save.

94. They sooner may drink up the Sea,
Than shake off these their fears;
Or make another in one day
As big with brinish tears,

95. Than put an end to misery,
In which they now do roar,
Or help themselves; no, they must cry
Alas for evermore.

96. When years by thousands on a heap
Are pass'd o'er their head;
Yet still the fruits of Sin they reap
Among the ghostly Dead.

97. Yea, when they have time out of mind
Been in this Case so ill,
For ever, ever is behind
Yet for them to fulfill.

EBAL and GERIZZIM;

O R,

The Blessing and the Curse.

B E I N G

A short Exhortation to Sinners, by the Mercy and Severity of God.

From Mount GERIZZIM.

BESIDES what I said of the Four last
Things,
And of the weal and woe that from them springs.

An after-word still runneth in my mind,
Which I shall here expose unto that wind,
That may it blow into that very hand
That needs it. Also that it may be scann'd
With greatest soberness, shall be my Pray'r,
As well as diligence, and godly care;

Vol. II.

So to present it unto publick view,
That only truth and peace may thence ensue,

My Talk shall be of that amazing Love
Of God we read of; which that it may prove
By its engaging Arguments to save Thee, I shall lay out that poor help I have,
Thee to entice; that thou wouldst dearly fall

In love with thy Salvation, and with all

10 G

That

That doth thereto concur, that thou may'st
As blessed as the Blessed can make thee, [be
Not only here, but in the World to come,
In Bliss, which I pray God may be thy home.

But first I would advise thee to bethink
Thy self, how Sin hath laid thee at the Brink
Of Hell, where thou art lulled fast asleep
In Satan's Arms, who also will thee keep
As senseless and secure as e'er he may,
Lest thou shouldst wake, and see't, and run away

Unto that Jesus, whom the Father sent Into the World, for this Cause and Intent,
That such as thou from such a thrall as this Might'st be released, and made Heir of Bliss.
Now that thou may'st awake, the Danger fly,
And so escape the Death that others die;
Come, let me set my Trumpet to thine Ear,
Be willing all my Message for to hear:

'Tis for thy Life, O do it not refuse;
Woe unto them good Counsel do abuse;
Thou art at present in that very Case,
Which argues thou art destitute of Grace:
For he that lies where Sin hath laid him, lies
Under the Curse, graceless, and so he dies
In Body and in Soul, within that range,
If God his Heart in Mercy doth not change,
Before he goes the way of all the Earth,
Before he lose his Spirit and his Breath,
Repentance there is none within the Grave,
Nor Christ, nor Grace, nor Mercies for to save

Thee from the Vengeance due unto thy Sin,
If now thou dost not truly close with him.

Thou art like him that sleepeth in the Sea
On broken Boards, which without Guide or Stay

Are driven whither Winds and Water will,
While greedy Beasts do wait to have their fill

By feeding on his Carcass, when he shall Turn over board, and without Mercy fall
Into the Jaws of such as make a Prey
Of those whom Justice drowneth in the Sea.

Thou art like him that snoring still doth
Upon the Bed of vain Security, [lie
Whilst all about him into burning Flame
By Fire is turned, yea, and while the Frame
And Building where he lies consuming is,
And while himself these Burnings cannot miss.

Thou art like one that hangeth by a Thread

Over the Mouth of Hell, as one half dead;
And oh, how soon this Thread may broken
be,

Or cut by Death, is yet unknown to thee!
But sure it is, if all the weight of Sin,
And all that Satan too hath doing been,
Or yet can do, can break this crazy Thread,
'Twill not be long before among the Dead
Thou tumble do, as linked fast in Chains,
With them to wait in fear for future Pains.

What shall I say? wilt thou not yet awake?

Nor yet of thy poor Soul some pity take?

Among the Lyons it hood-winked lies;
Oh, that the Lord would open once thine
Eyes

That thou might'st see it, then I dare say
thou,

As half bereft of Wits, would'st cry out how Shall I escape? Lord help, oh! help with speed,

Reach down thy Hand from Heav'n, for help
I need,

To save me from the Lyons, for I fear
This Soul of mine they will in Pieces tear.

Come then, and let us both expostulate
The case betwixt us, till we animate
And kindle in our Hearts that burning Love
To Christ, to Grace, to Life, that we may move

Swifter than Eagles to this blessed Prey,
Then shall it well be with us in that Day.
The Trump shall sound, the Dead made rise,
and stand,

Then to receive, for Breach of God's Command,

Such Thunder-Claps as these, Depart from me

Into Hell Fire, you that the Wicked be, Prepared for the Devil, and for those
That with him and his Angels rather chose
To live in filthy Sin and Wickedness,
Whose Fruit is everlasting Bitterness.

We both are yet on this side of the Grave,
We also Gospel-Privileges have, [Hearts
The Word, and Time to pray, God give us
That like the wise Man we may act our Parts,

To get the Pearl of Price, then we shall be Like godly Mary, Peter, Paul, and we Like Jacob too, the Blessing shall obtain,
While Esau rides a hunting for the Gain
Of worldly Pelf, which will him not avail
When Death or Judgment shall him sore af-

Now, to encourage us for to begin, [sail.
Let us believe the Kingdom we may win,
And be possessors thereof, if we the way
Shall hit into, and then let nothing stay
Or hinder us; the Crown is at the end,
Let's run and strive, and fly, and let's contend

With greatest Courage it for to obtain,
'Tis Life and Peace, and everlasting Gain.
The Gate of Life, the new and living way,
The Promise holdeth open all the Day,
Which thou by Jacob's Ladder must ascend,
Where Angels always wait, and do attend
As Ministers, to minister for those [close.
That do with God, and Christ, and Glory

If Guilt of Sin still lieth at our Door,
Us to discourage, let us set before
Our Eyes a bleeding Jesus, who did die
The Death, and let's believe the Reason why
He did it, was, that we might ever be
From Death and Sin, and Hell and Wrath set free.

Yea, let's remember for that very end
It was his blessed Father did him send,
That he the Law of God might here fulfil,
That so the Mystery of his blessed Will Might

Might be revealed in the Blessedness
Of those that fly to Christ for Righteousness.

Now let us argue with ourselves then thus,
That Jesus Christ our Lord came to save us,
By bearing of our Sins upon his Back,
By hanging on the Cross as on a Rack,
While Justice cut him off on every Side,
While Smiles divine themselves from him
did hide,

While Earth did quake, and Rocks in Pieces rent,

And while the Sun as veiled, did lament,
To see the Innocent and Harmless die
So sore a Death, so full of Misery.

Yea, let us turn again and say, All this
He did and suffered for Love of his.
He brought in everlasting Righteousness,
That he might cover all our Nakedness:
He wept and wash'd his Face with brinish
Tears,

That we might saved be from hellish Fears:
Blood was his Sweat too in his Agony,
That we might live in joyful Extasy:
He apprehended was, and led away,
That Grace to us-ward never might decay:
With Swords and Bills, and Outrage in the Night,

That to the Peace of Heav'n we might have right.

Condemn'd he was between two Thieves to
That we might ever in his Bosom lie: [die, Scourged with Whips his precious Body were,

That we Lashes of Conscience might not fear:

His Head was crown'd with Thorns, that we might be

Crowned with Glory and Felicity.

He hanged was upon a cursed Tree,

That we delivered from Death might be:

His Father from him hides his Smiles and Face,

That we might have them in the heav'nly
Place.

He cry'd, My God, why hast forsaken me?

That we forsaken of him might not be:

Into his Side was thrust a bloody Spear,

That we the Sting of Death might never

He went into the Grave after all this, [fear:

That we might up to Heav'n go, and have Bliss:

Yea, rise again he did out of the Earth,
And shook off from him all the Chains of Death.

Then at his Chariot Wheels he captive led
His Foes, and trod upon the Serpent's Head;
Riding in Triumph to his Father's Throne,
There to possess the Kingdom as his own,
What say'st thou? wilt not yet unto him
come?

His Arms are open, in his Heart is room
To lay thee; be not then discouraged,
Although thy Sins be many, great and red;
Unto thee Righteousness he will impute,
And with the Kisses of his Mouth salute
Thy drooping Soul, and will it so uphold,
As that thy shaking Conscience shall be bold

To come to Mercy's Seat with great access,
There to expostulate with that Justice
That burns like fiery Flames, against all those
That do not with this blessed Jesus close;
Which unto thee will do no harm, but good,
Because thou hast Reliance on that Blood
That Justice saith hath given him content,
For all that do unfeignedly repent
Their ill-spent Life, and roul upon free Grace, That they within that Bosom might have
place,

That open is to such, where they shall lie
In Ease, and Gladness, and Felicity,
World without end, according to that State
I have, nay, better than I can relate.

If thou shalt still object, thou yet art vile,
And hast an Heart that will not reconcile
Unto the holy Law, but will rebel,
Hark yet to what I shall thee farther tell.
Two things are yet behind that help thee
will,

If God should put into thy Mind that Skill,
So to improve them as becometh those
That would with Mercy and Forgiveness close.

First then, let this sink down into thy
Heart,

That Christ is not a Saviour in part,
But every way so fully he is made
That All of those that underneath his Shade
And Wing would sit, and shroud their weary
That even Moses dare it not controul, [Soul
But justify it, approve of't, and conclude
No Man nor Angel must himself intrude With such Doctrine that may oppose the same,

On Pain of blaspheming that holy Name,
Which God himself hath given unto Men,
To stay, to trust, to lean themselves on when They feel themselves assaulted, and made fear

Their Sin will not let them in Life appear.

For, as God made him perfect Righteousness,

That he his Love might to the Height express,

And us present compleat before the Throne;
Sanctification too, of his own

He hath prepared, in which we do stand

Compleat in Holiness, at his right Hand.

Now this Sanctification is not

That Holiness which is in us, but that

Which in the Person of this Jesus is,

And can inherently be only his,

But is imputed to us for our good,

As is his active Righteousness and Blood,

Which is the cause, tho' we infirm are found,

That Mercy and Forgiveness doth abound

To us-ward, and that why we are not shent

And empty, and away rebuked sent,

Because that all we do imperfect is.

Bless God then for this Holiness of his,

And learn to look by Faith on that alone,

When thou seest thou hast nothing of thy
own;

Yea, when thy Heart most willing is to do
What God by his good Word doth call thee to;

And

And when thou find'st most Holiness within,
And greatest Power over every Sin,
Yet then to Jesus look, and thou shalt see
In him Sanctification for thee, [find
Far more compleat than all that thou canst
In the most upright Heart and willing Mind,
That ever Man or Angels did possess,
When most fill'd with inherent Righteousness.

Besides, if thou forgettest here to live,
And Satan get thee once into his Sieve.
He will so hide thy Wheat, and shew thy Brun,

That thou wilt quickly cry, I am undone.

Alas, thy goodliest attainments here,
Tho' like the fairest blossoms they appear,
How quickly will they lour and decay,
And be as if they all were fled away,
When once the East Wind of Temptations beat

Upon thee with their dry and blasting heat?
Rich Men will not account their treasure lies

In crackt Groats and Four-pence-half-pennies,

But in those Bags they have within their chests,

In staple Goods, which shall within their breasts

Have place accordingly, because they see
Their substance lieth here: But if that be But shaken, then they quickly fear and cry,

Alas! 'tis not this small and odd Money
We carry in our pockets for to spend
Will make us rich, or much will stand our friend;

If famine, or if want do us assail,
How quickly will these little pieces fail?

If thou be wise consider what I say,
And look for all in Christ, where no decay
Is like to be; then though thy present fame
Be much in up and down, yet he the same
Abideth, yea, and still at God's right hand,
As thy most perfect Holiness will stand.

It is, I say, not like to that in thee,
Now high, then low, now out, then in,
but he

Most perfect is when thou art at the worst,
The same, the very same, I said at first.
This helpeth much when thou art buffeted,
And when thy Graces lie in thee as dead,
Then to believe they are all perfect still
In Christ thy Head, who hath that blessed
Skill,

Yet to present thee by what is in him
Unto his Father, one that hath no sin.
Yea, this will fill thy mouth with Argument

Against the Tempter, when he shall present
Before thee all thy weakness, and shall hide
From thee thy Graces, that thou maist abide
Under the fretting Fumes of unbelief,
Which never yielded Christian Man relief.
Nor help thy self thou maist against him thus:

O Satan, though my heart indeed be worse

Than 'twas a while ago, yet I perceive
Thou shalt me not of Happiness bereave,
Nor yet of Holiness, for by the Word
I find, that Jesus Christ our blessed Lord
Is made Sanctification for me
In his own Person, where all Graces be,
As water in the Fountain, and that I
By means of that have yet a Sanctity,
Both personal and perfect every way,
And that is Christ himself, as Paul doth say.

Now tho' my crazy Pitcher oft doth leak,
By means of which my Graces are so weak,
And so much spent, that one I cannot find
Able to stay or help my feeble mind.

Yet then I look to Jesus, and see all
In him that wanting is in me, and shall Again take Courage, and believe he will Present me upright in his Person, till
He humble me for all my Foolishness,
And then again fill me with Holiness.
Now if thou lovest inward Sanctity,
As all the Saints do most unfeignedly,
Then add to what I have already said,
Faith in the Promise, and be not afraid
To urge it often at the Throne of Grace,
And to expect it in its Time and Place:
Then he that true is, and that cannot lye,
Will give it unto thee, that thou thereby Maist serve with faith, with fear, in truth and love,

That God that did at first thy Spirit move
To ask it to his Praise, that he might be Thy God, and that he might delight in thee.

If I should here particulars relate,
Methinks it could not but much animate
Thy Heart, though very listless to inquire
How thou maist that enjoy, which all desire
That love themselves and future happiness;
But oh, I cannot fully it express:
The Promise is so open and so free
In all respects to those that humble be,
That want they cannot what for them is
good,

But there 'tis, and confirmed is with Blood;
A certain sign, all those enjoy it may,
That see they want it, and sincerely pray
To God the Father, in that Jesus Name
Who bled on purpose to confirm the same:
Now wouldst thou have a heart that tender is,

A heart that forward is to close with bliss,
A heart that will impressions freely take
Of the New Covenant, and that will make
The best improvement of the word of Grace,
And that to wickedness will not give place,
All this is in the Promise, and it may
Obtained be of them that humbly pray.
Wouldst thou enjoy that Spirit that is free,
And looseth those that in their Spirits be Opprest with guilt, or filth, or unbelief,
That Spirit that will where it dwells be chief,

Which breaketh Sampson's Cord as rotten thread

And raiseth up the Spirit that is dead,
That

That sets the Will at liberty to chuse
Those things that God hath promis'd to infuse

Into the humble heart? All this, I say,
The Promise holdeth out to them that pray.
Wouldst thou have that good, that blessed mind

That is so much to heavenly Things inclin'd,
That it aloft will soar, and always be Contemplating on blest Eternity.

That Mind that never thinks it self at Rest,
But when it knows it is for ever blest.

That Mind that can be here no more content,

Than he that in the Prison doth lament;
That blessed Mind that counts it self then free

When it can at the Throne with Jesus be,
There to behold the Mansions he prepares
For such as be with him and his co-heirs.

This Mind is in the Covenant of Grace,
And shall be theirs that truly seek his face.

Is godly Fear delightful unto thee,
That Fear that God himself delights to see Bear sway in them that love him? then he will

Thy godly Mind in this request fulfil.
By giving thee a Fear that tremble shall
At every trip thou takest, lest thou fall,
And him offend, or hurt thy self by Sin,
Or cause poor Souls that always blind have been,

To stumble at thy falls, and harder be Against their own Salvation and thee.

That Fear that of it self would rather chuse

The rod, than to offend or to abuse
In any thing that blessed worthy Name,
That hath thee saved from that Death and Shame

That Sin would soon have brought thee to,
if he

Had not imputed Righteousness to thee.

*I will love them, saith God, and not depart From them, but put my fear within their
heart,*

*That I to them may always lovely be,
And that they never may depart from me.*

Wouldst thou be very upright and sincere?

Wouldst thou be that within thou dost appear, Or seem to be in outward exercise [pear,
Before the most devout, godly and wise?

Yea, art thou thus when no Eye doth thee
But that which is invisible? and be [see
The Words of God in Truth thy Prop and Stay?

And do they in their Conscience bear more sway

To govern thee in Faith and Holiness, Than thou can with thy Heart and Mouth express?

And do the things that truly are divine,
Before thee more than Gold or Rubies shine?

And if, as unto Solomon, God should Propound to thee, What wouldst thou have?
how would

Nº. XXXIX. Vol. II.

Thy Heart and Pulse beat after heav'nly
things,

After the upper and the nether Springs?

Could'st with unfeigned Heart and upright Lip

Cry, Hold me fast, Lord, never let me slip,
Nor step aside from Faith and Holiness,

Nor from the blessed Hope of future Bliss?

Lord, rather cross me any where than here,

Lord, fill me always with thy holy Fear

And godly Jealousy of mine own Heart,

Lest I, Lord, should at any time depart

From thy most blessed Covenant of Grace,
Where Jesus rules as King, and where thy

Face

Is only to be seen with Comfort, and Where Sinners justified before thee stand.

If these thy Groanings be sincere and true,
If God doth count thee one that dost pursue

The things thou cryest after, with thy
Heart,

No Doubt but in them thou shalt have a Part.

The next Word that I would unto thee
say,

Is how thou may'st attain without Delay

Those blessed Graces, and that Holiness,

Thou dost with so much godly Zeal express

Thy love to, and thy longing to enjoy,
That Sins and Weakness might thee less annoy.

Know then, as I have hinted heretofore,

And shall now speak unto a little more;

All Graces in the Person of the Son

Are by the Father hid, and therefore none
Can them obtain but they who with him

close;

All others graceless are, but only those;

For of his Fulness 'tis that we receive,

And Grace for Grace; let no Man then deceive

Himself or others with a feigned Shew

Of Holiness, if Jesus they eschew.

When he ascended to his Father, then

It was that he received Gifts for Men;

Faith, Hope, and Love, true Zeal, an upright Heart,

Right Humbleness of Mind, and every Part
Of what the Word of God counts Holiness,

God then laid up in him, that we Redress

And Help might have, who do unto him
For Righteousness and Gospel Sanctity. [fly

Now if thou would'st inherit Righteousness And so Sanctification possess, [ness

In Body, Soul and Spirit, then thou must

To Jesus fly, as one ungodly, first;

And so by him crave Pardon for thy Sin

Which thou hast loved, and hast lived in;

For this cannot at all forgiven be,

For any Righteousness that is in thee,

Because the best thou hast is filthy Rags,

Prophane, presumptuous, and most beastly
Braggs

Of Flesh and Blood, which always cross doth
To God, to Grace, and thy Felicity [lie

10 H

Then

Then Righteousness imputed thou must have

Thee from that Guilt and Punishment to Thou lyest under, as a sinful Man, [save Throughout polluted, and that never can By any other Means acquitted be, Or ever have true Holiness in thee.

The Reason is, because all Graces are Only in Christ, and be infused where, Or into those whom he doth justify, By what himself hath done, that he thereby Might be the whole of all that Happiness The Sinner shall enjoy here, and in Bliss. Besides, if Holiness should first be found In those who God doth pardon, then the Ground

Why we forgiven are, would seem to be, He first found Holiness in thee and me; But this the holy Scriptures will refute, And prove that Righteousness he doth impute

Without respect to Goodness first in Man; For to speak Truth indeed, no Goodness can Be found in those that underneath the Law Doth stand; for if God Goodness in them saw,

Why doth he once and twice say, There is That righteous be, no, not so much as one; [none None understandeth, none seek after God, His Ways they have not known, but have In Wickedness, unprofitable they [abode Must needs appear to be then every way Their Throats an open Sepulchre, also

Their Mouths are full of filthy Curfings too, And Bitterness, yea, underneath their Lips The Asp hath Poyson. O how many Slips And Falls in Sin must such poor People have! Now where's the Holiness that should 'em Or as a Preparation, go before, [save? To move God to do for them less or more.

No, Grace must on thee Righteousness be- Or else Sin will for ever thee undo. [trow, Sweet Paul this Doctrine also doth express, Where he saith, Some may have Righteous- ness, Tho' Works they have not; and it thus may stand,

Grace by the Promise gives what the Com- Requireth us to do, and so are we [mand Quitted from doing, and by Grace made free.

Now then if Holiness thou would'st obtain,

And would'st a tender Christian Man remain, Keep Faith in Action, let that Righteousness That Christ fulfilled, always have express And clear Distinction in thy Heart, from all That Men by Scripture, or besides it, call Inherent Gospel Holiness, or what Terms else they please to give it, for 'tis that, And that alone, by which all Graces come Into the Heart; for else there is no room For ought but Pride, Presumption, or De- spair,

No Love or other Graces can be there.

Received you the Spirit, saith St. Paul, [shall By Hearing, Faith, or Works? not Works and

No ways retain the same, except you do [to. Hear Faith, embrace the same, and stick there-

The Word of Faith unto me Pardon brings, Shews me the Ground and Reason whence it springs:

To wit, Free Grace, which moved God to give

His Son to die and bleed, that I might live. This Word doth also loudly preach to me, Though I a miserable Sinner be, Yet in this Son of God I stand compleat, Whose Righteousness is without all deceit; 'Tis that which God himself delighteth in, And that by which all his have saved been.

When I do this begin to apprehend, My Heart, my Soul, and Mind begins to bend

To God-ward, and sincerely for to love His Son, his Ways, his People, and to move With Brokenness of Spirit after him Who broken was, and killed for my Sin. Now is mine Heart grown holy, now it cleaves

To Jesus Christ my Lord, and now it leaves Those Ways that wicked be, it mourns be- cause

It can conform no more unto the Laws Of God, who loved me when I was vile, And of sweet Jesus, who did reconcile Me unto Justice by his precious Blood, When no way else was left to do me good.

If you would know how this can operate Thus on the Soul, I shall to you relate A little farther, what my Soul hath seen Since I have with the Lord acquainted been.

The Word of Grace, when it doth rightly The Spirit of a Man, and so at ease [seize Doth set the Soul, the Spirit of the Lord Doth then with Might accompany the Word,

In which it sets forth Christ as crucified, And by that means the Father pacified With such a Wretch as thou, and by this Fight,

Thy Guilt is in the first Place put to flight. For thus the Spirit doth expostulate; Behold how God doth now communicate (By changing of the Person) Grace to thee A Sinner, but to Christ great Misery, Tho' he the Just one was, and so could not Deserve this Punishment: behold then what The Love of God is! how 'tis manifest, And where the Reason lies that thou art blest.

This Doctrine being spoken to the Heart, Which also is made yield to every part Thereof, it doth the same with Sweetness And so doth Sins and Wickednesses kill; [fill, For when the Love of God is thus reveal'd, And thy poor drooping Spirit thereby seal'd, And when thy Heart, as dry Ground, drinks this in

Unto the Roots thereof, which nourish Sin, It smites them, as the Worm did Jonab's Gourd,

And makes them dwindle of their own ac- cord,

And

And die away, instead of which there springs

Up Life and Love, and other holy things.
Besides, the holy Spirit now is come,
And takes possession of thee as its home;
By which a War maintained always is Against the old Man and the Deeds of his.

When God at first upon Mount Sinai spake,
He made his very Servant Moses quake;
But when he heard the Law the second time,
His Heart was comforted, his Face did shine.

What was the Reason of this Difference,
Seeing no Change was in the Ordinance?
Altho' a Change was in the Manner, when
The second time he gave it unto Men.

At first 'twas given in Severity,
In Thunder, Blackness, Darkness, Tempest
In fiery Flames it was delivered, [high;
This struck both Moses and the Host as dead;
But Moses, when he went into the Mount
The second time, upon the same Account,
No Fear, nor Dread, nor shaking of his Mind,

Do we in all the holy Scripture find,
But rather in his Spirit he had rest,
And look'd upon himself as greatly blest.
He was put in the Rock, he heard the Name,
Which on the Mount the Lord did thus proclaim:

*The Lord, merciful, gracious, and more,
Long-suffering, and keeping up in store
Mercy for Thousands, pardoning these things,
Iniquity, Transgressions, and Sins,
And holding guilty none but such as still Refuse Forgiveness, of rebellious Will.*

This Proclamation better pleased him
Than all the Thunder and the Lightning Which shook the Mount, this rid him of his Fear,
This made him bend, make haste, and worship there.

Jehosaphat, when he was sore oppress'd
By Ammon and by Moab, and the rest
Of them that sought his Life, no Rest he found,

Until a Word of Faith became a Ground
To stay himself upon; O, then they fell,
His very Song became their Passing-bell.
Then Holiness of Heart a Consequence Of Faith in Christ is, for it flows from thence;

The Love of Christ in truth constraineth us,
Of Love sincerely to make Judgment thus:
He for us died that for ever we [be.
Might die to Sin, and Christ's own Servants
O! nothing's like to the Remembrance
Of what it is to have Deliverance
From Death and Hell, which is of due our right,

Nothing's (I say) like this to work Delight
In holy things; this like live-Honey runs,
And needs no pressing out of Honey-combs.
Then understand my Meaning by my Words,

How Sense of Mercy unto Faith affords

Both Grace to sanctify, and holy make
That Soul that of Forgiveness doth partake.

Thus having briefly shewed you what is
The way of Life, of Sanctity, of Bliss,
I would not in Conclusion have you think,
By what I say, that Christian Men should drink

In these Words with Lightness, or that they Are not exempted from what every Day
Their Duty is; No, God doth still expect, Yea, doth command, that they do not neglect

To pray, to read, to hear, and not dissent
From being sober, grave and diligent
In Watching, Self-denial, and with Fear
To serve him all the time thou livest here.
Indeed I have endeavoured to lay
Before your Eyes the right and only way
Pardon to get, and also Holiness. [blest
Without which never think that God will Thee with the Kingdom he will give to those

That Christ embrace, and holy Lives do
chuse

To live while here all others go astray,
And shall in time to come be cast away.

From Mount EBAL.

Thus having heard from Gerizzim, I shall

Next come to Ebal, and you thither call,
Not there to curse you, but to let you hear How God doth curse that Soul that shall appear

An unbelieving Man, a graceless Wretch,
Because he doth continue in the Breach
Of Moses' Law, and also doth neglect
To close with Jesus; him will God reject
And cast behind him, for of right his due
Is that from whence all Miseries ensue.

Cursed, saith he, *are they that do transgress
The least of my Commandments more or less.*

Nothing that written is must broken be,
But always must be kept unto by thee,
And must fulfilled be; for here no Man
Can look God in the Face, or ever stand
Before the Judgment-seat, for if he be Convict, condemned too assuredly.

Now keep this Law no mortal Creature
For they already do as guilty stand [can,
Before the God that gave it, so that they Obnoxious to the Curse lie every Day,
Which also they must feel for certainty,
If unto Jesus Christ they do not fly.

Hence then as they for ever shall be blest,
That do by Faith upon the Promise rest,
So Peace unto the Wicked there is none,
'Tis Wrath and Death that they must feed upon.

That what I say may some Impression make

On carnal Hearts, that they in time may take That course that best will prove when time is done,

These lines I add to what I have begun.

First

First thou must know that God, as he is Love

So he is Justice, therefore cannot move,
Or in the least be brought to favour those
His Holiness and Justice doth oppose.

For tho' thou maist imagine in thy heart
That God is this or that, yet if thou art
At all besides the truth of what he is,
And so dost build thy hope for life amiss,
Still he the same abideth, and will be
The same, the same for ever unto thee.

As God is true unto his Promise, so
Unto his Threatning he is faithful too, Cease to be God he must, if he should break

One tittle that his blessed Mouth did speak.

Now then none can be saved but the Men

With whom the Godhead is contented when

It them beholds with the severest Eye
Of Justice, Holiness, and yet can 'spy
No fault nor blemish in them; these be they

That must be saved, as the Scripture say.

If this be true, as 'tis assuredly,
Woe be to them that wicked live and die;
Those that as far from Holiness have been
All their Life long as if no Eye had seen
Their doings here, or as if God did not
At all regard, or in the least mind what,
Wherein, or how they did his Law trans-
gress,

Either by this or other Wickedness;
But how deceived these poor Creatures are,
They then shall know when they their burthen bear.

Alas, our God is a consuming Fire,
So is his Law, by which he doth require
That thou submit to him, and if thou be Not in that Justice found that can save thee

From all and every Sentence which he spake

Upon Mount Sinai, then as one that brake
It, thou the Flames thereof shalt quickly find

As Scourges thee to lash, while Sins do bind

Thee Hand and Foot, for ever to endure
The Strokes of Vengeance for thy life impure.

What I have said will yet evinced be,
And manifest abundantly to thee,
If what I have already spoken to
Be joyned with these Lines that do ensue.

Justice discovers its Antipathy
Against Prophaneness and Malignity,
Not only by the Law it gave to Men,
And Threatnings thereunto annexed then,
But inasmuch as long before that day
He did prepare for such as go astray
That dreadful, that so much amazing place, Hell, with its Torments, for those Men that

Grace
And Holiness of Life slight and disdain,
There to bemoan themselves with hellish pain.

This place also the Pains so dismal be Both as to Name and Nature, that in me
It is not to express the damning wights,
The hellish torture, and the fearful plights Thereof; for as intolerable they Must needs be found by those that disobey
The Lord, so can no Word or Thought express

Unto the full the Height of that Distress,
Such miserable Caitiffs, that shall there Rebukes of Vengeance for Transgressions bear.

Indeed the holy Scriptures do make use
Of many Metaphors that do conduce
Much to the symbolizing of the place
Unto our Apprehension; but the case,
The sad, the woful case of those that lye
As wracked there in endless Misery,
By all Similitudes no Mortals may Set forth in its own Nature; for I say
Similitudes are but a Shade and Shew
Of those or that they signify to you.
The Fire that doth within thine Oven burn,
The Prison where poor People sit and mourn.

Chains, Racks and Darknes, and such others be

As Painting on the Wall, to let thee see
By Word and Figures the Extremity
Of such as shall within these burnings lye.

But certainly, if Wickedness and Sin
Had only foolish toys and trifles been,
And if God had not greatly hated it,
Yea, could he any ways thereof admit,
And let it pass, he would not thus have done,

He doth not use to punish any one
With any place or punishment that is Above or sharper than the Sin of his Hath merited, and Justice seeth due;
Read Sin then by the Death that doth
ensue.

Most Men do judge of Sin, not by the fruits

It bears and bringeth forth, but as it suits
Their carnal and deluded Hearts, that be
With sensual pleasures eaten up; but he
That now so judgeth shortly shall perceive,
That God will judge thereof himself and leave

Such Men no longer to their carnal Lusts,
To judge of Wickedness, and of the just
And righteous Punishment that doth of right

Belong thereto, and will too in despite
Of all their carnal reason, justify Himself in their eternal Misery.

Then Hell will be no fancy, neither will Mens Sins be pleasant to them, but so ill
And bitter, yea, so bitter that none can Fully express the same, or over stand
Under the Burden it will on them lay,
When they from Life and Bliss are sent away.

When I have thought how often God doth speak
Of their Destruction who this Law do break;
And

And when the Nature of the Punishment
I find so dreadful, and that God's Intent,
Yea, Resolution is, it to inflict
On every Sinner that shall stand convict,
I have amazed been, yet to behold
And see poor Sinners yet with Sin so bold,
That like the Horse that to the Battle runs
Without all fear, and that no danger shuns,
Till down he falls. O resolute Attempts!
O sad, amazing, damnable Events!
The End of such Proceedings needs must be,
From which, O Lord, save and deliver me.
But if thou think that God thy noble Race
Will more respect, than into such a Place
To put thee; hold, tho' thou his Offspring
be,

And art so lovely, yet Sin hath made thee
Another kind of Creature than when thou Didst from his Fingers drop, and therefore now

Thy first Creation stands thee in no stead,
Thou hast transgressed, and in very deed
Set God against thee, who is infinite,
And that for certain never will forget
Thy Sins, nor favour thee if thou shalt die
A graceless Man; this is thy Misery,
When Angels sinned, tho' of higher race
Than thou, and also put in higher place,
Yet them he spared not, but cast them
down

From Heaven to Hell, where also they lie bound

In everlasting Chains, and no Release
Shall ever have, but Wrath, that shall en-crease

Upon them, to their everlasting woe.
As for the state they were exalted to,
That will by no means mitigate their fear,
But aggravate their hellish torment here:
For he that highest stands, if he shall fall,
His danger needs must be the great'st of all.
Now if God noble Angels did not spare
Because they did transgress, will he forbear

Poor Dust and Ashes? will he suffer them
To break his Law, and Sin, and not condemn

Them for so doing? let not Man deceive
Himself or others; they that do bereave Themselves by Sin of Happiness, shall be Cut off by Justice, and have Misery.

Witness his great Severity upon
The World that first was planted, wherein none

But only eight the Deluge did escape,
All others of that Vengeance did partake;
The reason was, that World ungodly stood
Before him, therefore he did send the Flood,
Which swept them all away, a just Reward

For their most wicked ways against the Lord,

Who could no longer bear them and their ways,

Therefore into their bosom Vengeance pays.
We read of Sodom and Gomorrhah too

What Judgments they for Sin did undergo,
How God from Heaven did Fire upon them
rain,

Because they would not wicked ways refrain,

Condemning of them with an overthrow,
And turned them to Ashes: who can know
The Miseries that these poor People felt While they did underneath those burnings melt.

Now these and many more that I could name,

That have been made Partakers of the Flame,

And Sword of Justice, God did then cut off,

And make Examples unto all that scoff
At Holiness, or do the Gospel flight;
And long it will not be before the Night
And Judgment, painted out by what he
To Sodom and Gomorrhah, fulfilled [did
Upon such Sinners be, that they may know That God doth hate the Sin and Persons too,

Of such as still rebellious shall abide,
Although they now at Judgment may deride.

PRISON MEDITATIONS,

Directed to the Hearts of Suffering SAINTS and Reigning SINNERS.

By JOHN BUNYAN, in Prison, 1665.

1. Friend, I salute thee in the Lord
And with thou may'st abound
In Faith, and have a good Regard
To keep on holy Ground.
2. Thou dost encourage me to hold
My Head above the Flood,
Thy Counsel better is than Gold,
In need thereof I stood.
3. Good Counsel's good at any time,
The Wise will it receive,
Tho' Fools count he commits a Crime
Who doth good Counsel give.
4. I take it kindly at thy Hand
Thou didst unto me write,
My Feet upon Mount Sion stand,
In that take thou delight.
5. I am (indeed) in Prison (now)
In Body, but my Mind
Is free to study Christ, and how Unto me he is kind.
6. For tho' Men keep my outward Man
Within their Locks and Bars,
Yet by the Faith of Christ I can
Mount higher than the Stars.
7. Their Fetters cannot Spirits tame,
Nor tye up God from me;
My Faith and Hope they cannot lame,
Above them I shall be.
8. I here am very much refresh'd
To think when I was out,
I preached Life, and Peace, and Rest
To Sinners round about.
9. My Business then was Souls to save,
By preaching Grace and Faith,
Of which the Comfort now I have,
And have it shall till Death.
10. They were no Fables that I taught,
Devis'd by cunning Men,
But God's own Word, by which were
Some Sinners now and then. [caught]
11. Whose Souls by it were made to see
The Evil of their Sin;
And need of Christ to make them free
From Death, which they were in.
12. And now those very Hearts that then
Were Foes unto the Lord,
Embrace his Christ and Truth, like Men
Conquered by his Word.
13. I hear them sigh and groan, and cry
For Grace to God above;

- They loath their Sin, and to it die,
'Tis Holiness they love.
14. This was the Work I was about
When Hands on me they laid,
'Twas this from which they pluck'd me out,
And vilely to me said,
 15. You Heretick Deceiver, come,
To Prison you must go;
You preach abroad, and keep not home,
You are the Churches Foe.
 16. But having Peace within my Soul,
And Truth on every side,
I could with Comfort them controul,
And at their Charge deride.
 17. Wherefore to Prison they me sent,
Where to this Day I lye,
And can with very much Content
For my Profession die.
 18. The Prison very sweet to me
Hath been, since I came here,
And so would also hanging be,
If God will there appear.
 19. Here dwells good Conscience, also Peace;
Here be my Garments white;
Here, tho' in Bonds, I have Release
From Guilt, which else would bite.
 20. When they do talk of Banishment,
Of Death, or such like things,
Then to me God sends Heart's Content,
That like a Fountain springs.
 21. Alas, they little think what Peace
They help me to, for by Their Rage my Comforts do increase;
Bless God therefore do I.
 22. If they do give me Gall to drink,
Then God doth Sweetning cast,
So much thereto, that they can't think
How bravely it doth taste.
 23. For as the Devil sets before Me Heaviness and Grief.
So God sets Christ and Grace much more,
Whereby I take Relief.
 24. Though they say then that we are Fools
Because we here do lye,
I answer, Goals are Christ his Schools,
In them we learn to die.
 25. 'Tis not the Baseness of this State
Doth hide us from God's Face,
He frequently, both soon and late
Doth visit us with Grace.
 26. Here

26. Here comes the Angels, here comes
Here comes the Spirit of God, [Saints,
To comfort us in our Restraints
Under the Wicked's Rod.
27. God sometimes visits Prisons more Than lordly Palaces,
He often knocketh at our Door,
When he our Houses miss.
28. The Truth and Life of heavenly things
Lifts up our Hearts on high,
And carries us on Eagles Wings,
Beyond Carnality.
29. It takes away those Clogs that hold
The Hearts of other Men,
And makes us lively, strong and bold
Thus to oppose their Sin.
30. By which Means God doth frustrate
That which our Foes expect;
Namely, our turning th' Apostate,
Like those of Judas Sect.
31. Here comes to our Remembrance
The Troubles good Men had
Of old, and for our furtherance.
Their Joys when they were sad.
32. To them that here for Evil lye,
The Place is comfortless,
But not to me, because that I
Lye here for Righteousness.
33. The Truth and I were both here cast
Together, and we do
Lye Arm in Arm, and so hold fast
Each other; this is true.
34. This Goal to us is as a Hill,
From whence we plainly see
Beyond this World, and take our fill
Of things that lasting be.
35. From hence we see the Emptiness
Of all this World contains;
And here we feel the Blessedness
That for us yet remains.
36. Here we can see how all Men play
Their Parts, as on a Stage,
How good Men suffer for God's way,
And bad Men at them rage.
37. Here we can see who holds that Ground
Which they in Scripture find;
Here we see also who turns round
Like Weathercocks with' Wind.
38. We can also from hence behold
How seeming Friends appear
But Hypocrites, as we are told
In Scripture every where.
39. When we did walk at Liberty,
We were deceiv'd by them,
Who we from hence do clearly see
Are vile deceitful Men.
40. These Politicians that profess
For base and worldly ends,
Do now appear to us at best
But Machiavilian Friends.
41. Tho' Men do say, we do disgrace
Our selves by lying here
Among the Rogues, yet Christ our Face
From all such Filth will clear.
42. We know there's neither Flout nor
That we now for him bear, [Frown
- But will add to our heavenly Crown,
When he comes in the Air.
43. When he our Righteousness forth brings Bright shining as the Day,
And wipeth off those stann'd things
That Scorners on us lay.
44. We sell our earthly Happiness
For heavenly House and Home;
We leave this World because 'tis less,
And worse than that to come.
45. We change our drossy Dust for Gold,
From Death to Life we fly:
We let go Shadows, and take hold Of Immortality.
46. We trade for that which lasting is,
And nothing for it give,
But that which is already his
By whom we breathe and live.
47. That Liberty we lose for him,
Sickness might take away:
Our Goods might also for our Sin
By Fire or Thieves decay.
48. Again, we see what Glory 'tis Freely to bear our Cross
For him, who for us took up his,
When he our Servant was.
49. I am most free that Men should see
A hole cut thro' mine Ear;
If others will ascertain me,
They'll hang a Jewel there.
50. Just thus it is we suffer here
For him a little Pain,
Who, when he doth again appear,
Will with him let us reign.
51. If all must either die for Sin
A Death that's natural;
Or else for Christ, 'tis best with him
Who for the last doth fall.
52. Who now dare say, we throw away
Our Goods or Liberty.
When God's most holy Word doth say
We gain thus much thereby?
53. Hark yet again, you carnal Men,
And hear what I shall say
In your own Dialect, and then
I'll you no longer stay.
54. You talk sometimes of Valour much,
And count such bravely mann'd,
That will not stick to have a touch
With any in the Land.
55. If these be worth commending then,
That vainly shew their might,
How dare you blame those holy Men
That in God's Quarrel fight?
56. Tho' you dare crack a Coward's Crown,
Or quarrel for a Pin,
You dare not on the Wicked frown,
Nor speak against their Sin.
57. For all your Spirits are so stout,
For Matters that are vain;
Yet Sin besets you round about,
You are in Satan's Chain.
58. You dare not for the Truth engage,
You quake at Prisonment;
You dare not make the Tree your Stage
For Christ, that King potent.

Know

59. Know then, true Valour there doth
Where Men engage for God, [dwell
Against the Devil, Death and Hell,
And bear the Wicked's Rod.
60. These be the Men that God doth count
Of high and noble Mind;
These be the Men that do surmount
What you in Nature find.
61. First they do conquer their own Hearts,
All worldly Fears, and then
Also the Devil's fiery Darts,
And persecuting Men.
62. They conquer when they thus do fall,
They kill when they do die:
They overcome then most of all,
And get the Victory.
63. The Worldling understands not this,
'Tis clear out of his Sight;
Therefore he counts this World his Bliss,
And doth our Glory slight.
64. The Lubber knows not how to spring
The nimble Footman's Stage;
Neither can Owls or Jackdaws sing
If they were in the Cage.
65. The Swine doth not the Pearls regard,
But them doth slight for Grains,
Tho' the wise Merchant labours hard
For them with greatest Pains.
66. Consider Man what I have said,
And judge of things aright;
When all Men's Cards are fully plaid,
Whose will abide the Light?
67. Will those, who have us hither cast?
Or they who do us scorn?
Or those who do our Houses waste?
Or us, who this have born?
68. And let us count those things the best
That best will prove at last;
And count such Men the only blest,
That do such things hold fast.
69. And what tho' they us dear do cost,
Yet let us buy them so;
We shall not count our Labour lost
When we see others Woe.
70. And let Saints be no longer blam'd
By carnal Policy;
But let the Wicked be asham'd
Of their Malignity.
